Whereas, many recent EPP graduates were unable to complete clinical internships, pedagogy assessments, and other components of their programs prior to entering the workforce; and

Whereas, teacher effectiveness is the most important factor in delivering positive student outcomes; and

Whereas, on-the-job learning and comprehensive induction into the teaching profession between their first and second years of teaching is where the most gains in teacher effectiveness are realized; and

Whereas, half of North Carolina's teachers leave the profession after five years, and the personnel costs associated with teacher attrition are $12,500 per teacher; and

Whereas, as of March 8, 2021, NC NTSP has sustained induction support, recording over 25,400 supportive contacts with teachers, delivered distanced professional development to partners, and continues to innovate novel ways to support teachers during school closures; and

Whereas, teachers participating in NC NTSP were significantly more likely to return (i) to North Carolina public schools overall, (ii) to the same local school administrative unit, and (iii) to the same school in the following year than other beginning teachers working in similar schools; Now, therefore,
