Dear Senator Harrington,

I am a Pastoral Counselor – in today's terms a Spiritually Integrated Psychotherapist – certified by the State of North Carolina, practicing mostly in Nash/Edgecombe and Wake Counties. Most of my clients come to me because I am trained in counseling and biblical spirituality and ministry. They feel that their issues are intertwined with their religious/spiritual dimension. Their problems are beyond the time and training of their local minister or other spiritual provider.

Pastoral Counselors need a certification/license for this work for two main reasons. (1) Insurance companies require a certification or license in order to pay for services rendered. (2) It is necessary for the protection of the population of North Carolina.

I lived, traveled and/or worked in 80 countries on every continent for approximately 35 years. Eight of those years (1975-83) were in the Soviet Union, the other Iron Curtain countries, and China. I saw government overreach. Certifying pastoral counselors in North Carolina is nothing close to such overreach.

Please feel free to contact me. Thank you for your consideration,

William H. Searcy, D.Min., NCBFBPPC
