Authorized Inventory of Distance Learning and Off-Campus Degree Programs

September 30, 2000
A Quarterly Publication

<http://www.NorthCarolina.edu/aa/>

The University of North Carolina General Administration

Dear Prospective Students and UNC Friends:

The University of North Carolina has an historical commitment to providing access to academic programs for students who, for various reasons, are not able to take advantage of on-campus instruction. As such, we are pleased to present this current edition of the "Authorized Inventory of Distance Learning and Off-Campus Degree Programs." This inventory is published quarterly.

The inventory has two parts: Part One is organized as a directory of UNC institutions and it lists the programs that are offered off-campus by each campus. Part Two is organized by academic disciplines and it can be used to find undergraduate and graduate programs in areas such as business administration, education, nursing, etc. Information in both parts includes the site of the instruction and whether a program is offered at one of the North Carolina Community Colleges (CC). We have also enclosed a directory of distance education or continuing education offices at each UNC campus. Individuals in these offices can provide important preliminary information about off-campus programs and direct you to appropriate administrators and faculty for additional information. The University of North Carolina has a website with direct links to each camp www.NorthCarolina.edu/aa/.

Academic Programs that are offered away from the campus have been called "extension programs" in the past and are now called "distance learning" programs. The terms distance education and distance learning are often used if instruction includes some form of electronic delivery such as interactive televised classes that are offered via the North Carolina Information Highway (NCIH) or instruction via the Internet. Many of our programs include electronic instruction as well as traditional "face-to-face" instruction with faculty members and students at the same site. We generally define an "extension or distance learning program" as a course of study in which more than one-half of the total course requirements are available away from a UNC campus. Sometimes these are called "degree-completion" programs. This inventory includes 180 distance learning/off-campus offerings with a wide variety of both undergraduate and graduate programs. During the 1999-2000 academic year, 9,763 students were enrolled in at least one UNC distance learning course.

We will publish another inventory in December 2000 that will include additional offerings. As classes or cohorts of students graduate, we start a new cohort if there is sufficient enrollment or we move the program to another site. Please let us know if you have any comments or suggestions.

Sincerely,
Dr. Donna J. Benson

Cc: Dr. Gretchen M. Bataille, Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs
