VARIABLE INTEREST RATE. The interest rate on this Note is subject to change from time to time based on changes in an independent index which is the Prime Rate as published in the "Money Rates" section of The Wall Street Journal (the "Index"). The Index is not necessarily the lowest rate charged by Lender on its loans. If the index becomes unavailable during the term of this loan, Lender may designate a substitute index after notice to Borrower. Lender will tell Borrower the current index rate upon Borrower's request. The interest rate change will not occur more often than each day after any change in the index. Borrower understands that Lender may make loans based on other rates as well. The index currently is 4.750% per annum. The interest rate to be applied to the unpaid principal balance of this Note will be at a rate of 1.500 percentage points over the Index, rounded up to the nearest 0.125 percent, resulting in an initial rate of 6.250% per annum. NOTICE: Under no circumstances will the interest rate on this Note be more than the maximum rate allowed by applicable law.

PREPAYMENT. Borrower agrees that all loan fees and other prepaid finance charges are earned fully as of the date of the loan and will not be subject to refund upon early payment (whether voluntary or as a result of default), except as otherwise required by law. Except for the foregoing, Borrower may pay without penalty all or a portion of the amount owed earlier than it is due. Early payments will not, unless agreed to by Lender in writing, relieve Borrower of Borrower's obligation to continue to make payments under the payment schedule. Rather, early payments will reduce the principal balance due. Borrower agrees not to send Lender payments marked "paid in full", "without recourse", or similar language. If Borrower sends such a payment, Lender may accept it without losing any of Lender's rights under this Note, and Borrower will remain obligated to pay any further amount owed to Lender. All written communications concerning disputed amounts, including any check or other payment instrument that indicates that the payment constitutes "payment in full" of the amount owed or that is tendered with other conditions or limitations or as full satisfaction of a disputed amount must be mailed or delivered to: Coastal Federal Bank, 2810 Oak Street Myrtle Beach, SC 29577.

LATE CHARGE. If a payment is 15 days or more late, Borrower will be charged 4.000% of the unpaid portion of the regularly scheduled payment. This late charge shall be paid to Lender by Borrower to compensate Lender for Lender's extra costs and expenses caused by the late payment.

INTEREST AFTER DEFAULT. Upon default, including failure to pay upon final maturity, at Lender's option and if permitted by applicable law, Lender may add any unpaid accrued interest to principal and such sum will bear interest therefrom until paid at the rate provided in this Note (including any increased rate). Upon default, Lender, at its option, may, if permitted under applicable law, increase the variable interest rate on this Note to 8.500 percentage points over the Index. The interest rate will not exceed the maximum rate permitted by applicable law.

DEFAULT. Each of the following shall constitute an event of default ("Event of Default") under this Note:

Payment Default. Borrower fails to make any payment when due under this Note.

Other Defaults. Borrower fails to comply with or to perform any other term, obligation, covenant or condition contained in this Note or in any of the related documents or to comply with or to perform any term, obligation, covenant or condition contained in any other agreement between Lender and Borrower.

Default in Favor of Third Parties. Borrower or any Grantor defaults under any loan, extension of credit, security agreement, purchase or sales agreement, or any other agreement, in favor of any other creditor or person that may materially affect any of Borrower's property or Borrower's ability to repay this Note or perform Borrower's obligations under this Note or any of the related documents.

False Statements. Any warranty, representation or statement made or furnished to Lender by Borrower or on Borrower's behalf under this Note or the related documents is false or misleading in any material respect, either now or at the time made or furnished or becomes false or misleading at any time thereafter.

Insolvency. The dissolution or termination of Borrower's existence as a going business, the insolvency of Borrower, the appointment of a receiver for any part of Borrower's property, any assignment for the benefit of creditors, any type of creditor workout, or the commencement of any proceeding under any bankruptcy or insolvency laws by or against Borrower.

Creditor or Forfeiture Proceedings. Commencement of foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings, whether by judicial proceeding, self-help, repossession or any other method, by any creditor of Borrower or by any governmental agency against any collateral securing the loan. This includes a garnishment of any of Borrower's accounts, including deposit accounts, with Lender. However, this Event of Default shall not apply if there is a good faith dispute by Borrower as to the validity or reasonableness of the claim which is the basis of the creditor or forfeiture proceeding and if Borrower gives Lender written notice of the creditor or forfeiture proceeding and deposits with Lender monies or a surety bond for the creditor or forfeiture proceeding, in an amount determined by Lender, in its sole discretion, as being an adequate reserve or bond for the dispute.

Events Affecting Guarantor. Any of the preceding events occurs with respect to any guarantor, endorser, surety, or accommodation party of any of the Indebtedness or any guarantor, endorser, surety, or accommodation party dies or becomes incompetent, or revokes or disputes the validity of, or liability under, any guaranty of the Indebtedness evidenced by this Note.

Change in Ownership. Any change in ownership of twenty-five percent (25%) or more of the common stock of Borrower.

Adverse Change. A material adverse change occurs in Borrower's financial condition, or Lender believes the prospect of payment or performance of this Note is impaired.

Insecurity. Lender in good faith believes itself insecure.

LENDER'S RIGHTS. Upon default, Lender may declare the entire unpaid principal balance on this Note and all accrued unpaid interest immediately due, and then Borrower will pay that amount.

ATTORNEYS' FEES; EXPENSES. Lender may hire or pay someone else to help collect this Note if Borrower does not pay. Borrower will pay Lender that amount. This includes, subject to any limits under applicable law, Lender's attorneys' fees and Lender's legal expenses, whether or not there is a lawsuit, including attorneys' fees, expenses for bankruptcy proceedings (including efforts to modify or vacate any automatic stay or injunction), and appeals. If not prohibited by applicable law, Borrower also will pay any court costs, in addition to all other sums provided by law.

JURY WAIVER. Lender and Borrower hereby waive the right to any jury trial in any action, proceeding, or counterclaim brought by either Lender or Borrower against the other.

GOVERNING LAW. This Note will be governed by, construed and enforced in accordance with federal law and the laws of the State of North Carolina. This Note has been accepted by Lender in the State of North Carolina.

RIGHT OF SETOFF. To the extent permitted by applicable law, Lender reserves a right of setoff in all Borrower's accounts with Lender (whether checking, savings, or some other account). This includes all accounts Borrower may open in the future. However, this does not include any IRA or Keogh accounts, or any trust accounts for which setoff would be prohibited by law. Borrower authorizes Lender, to the extent permitted by applicable law, to charge or setoff all sums owing on the Indebtedness against any and all such accounts, and, at Lender's option, to administratively freeze all such accounts to allow Lender to protect Lender's charge and setoff rights provided in this paragraph.

COLLATERAL. Borrower acknowledges this Note is secured by the following collateral described in the security instruments listed herein, all the terms and conditions of which are hereby incorporated and made a part of this Note.

(A) a Deed of Trust dated April 5, 2002, to a trustee in favor of Lender on real property located in NEW HANOVER County, State of North Carolina.

Loan No [redacted]

(B) an Assignment of All Rents to Lender on real property located in NEW HANOVER County, State of North Carolina.

SUCCESSOR INTERESTS. The terms of this Note shall be binding upon Borrower, and upon Borrower's heirs, personal representatives, successors and assigns, and shall inure to the benefit of Lender and its successors and assigns.

NOTIFY US OF INACCURATE INFORMATION WE REPORT TO CONSUMER REPORTING AGENCIES. Please notify us if we report any inaccurate information about your account(s) to a consumer reporting agency. Your written notice describing the specific inaccuracy(ies) should be sent to us at the following address: Coastal Federal Bank 2019 Oak Street Myrtle Beach, SC 29577

GENERAL PROVISIONS. Lender may delay or forgo enforcing any of its rights or remedies under this Note without losing them. Borrower and any other person who signs, guarantees or endorses this Note, to the extent allowed by law, waives presentment, demand for payment, and notice of dishonor. Upon any change in the terms of this Note, and unless otherwise expressly stated in writing, no party who signs this Note, whether as maker, guarantor, accommodation maker or endorser, shall be released from liability. All such parties agree that Lender may renew or extend (repeatedly and for any length of time) this loan or release any party or guarantor or collateral; or impair, fail to realize upon or perfect Lender's security interest in the collateral; and take any other action deemed necessary by Lender without the consent of or notice to anyone. All such parties also agree that Lender may modify this loan without the consent of or notice to anyone other than the party with whom the modification is made. The obligations under this Note are joint and several.

PRIOR TO SIGNING THIS NOTE, BORROWER READ AND UNDERSTOOD ALL THE PROVISIONS OF THIS NOTE, INCLUDING THE VARIABLE INTEREST RATE PROVISIONS. BORROWER AGREES TO THE TERMS OF THE NOTE.

BORROWER ACKNOWLEDGES RECEIPT OF A COMPLETED COPY OF THIS PROMISSORY NOTE.

DEED OF TRUST SECURING FUTURE ADVANCES

THIS DEED OF TRUST is dated April 5, 2002, among THE COMMUNITY HEALTH FOUNDATION INC, whose address is 322 S. 17TH STREET, WILMINGTON, NC 28401 ("Grantor"); Coastal Federal Bank, whose address is Wilmington Central Business District, 109 Market Street, Wilmington, NC 28401 (referred to below sometimes as "Lender" and sometimes as "Beneficiary"); and Michael C. Gerald, whose address is 2619 Oak Street, Myrtle Beach, SC 29577 (referred to below as "Trustee").

CONVEYANCE AND GRANT. NOW, THEREFORE, as security for the Indebtedness, advancements and other sums expended by the Beneficiary pursuant to this Deed of Trust and costs of collection (including attorneys' fees as provided in the Note) and other valuable consideration, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, Grantor has bargained, sold, given, granted and conveyed and does by these presents bargain, sell, give, grant and convey to Trustee, and Trustee's heirs or successors and assigns, for the benefit of Lender as Beneficiary, all of Grantor's right, title, and interest in and to the following described real property, together with all existing or subsequently erected or affixed buildings, improvements and fixtures; all easements, rights of way, and appurtenances; all water, water rights and ditch rights (including stock in utilities with ditch or irrigation rights); and all other rights, royalties, and profits relating to the real property, including without limitation all minerals, oil, gas, geothermal and similar matters, (the "Real Property") located in NEW HANOVER County, State of North Carolina:

grantor awards all of its rights to the property to trustee as security for indebtedness on the property.

See "EXHIBIT A", which is attached to this Deed of Trust and made a part of this Deed of Trust as if fully set forth herein.

The Real Property or its address is commonly known as 926 N. 4TH STREET, WILMINGTON, NC 28401.

To have and to hold said Real Property with all privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging, to the Trustee, his heirs, successors and assigns forever, upon the trusts, terms and conditions and for the uses hereinafter set forth.

Grantor presently assigns to Lender (also known as Beneficiary in this Deed of Trust) all of Grantor's right, title, and interest in and to all present and future leases of the Property and all Rents from the Property. In addition, Grantor grants to Lender a Uniform Commercial Code security interest in the Personal Property and Rents.

grantor gives bank present + future leases/rents + UCC security interest

THIS DEED OF TRUST, INCLUDING THE ASSIGNMENT OF RENTS AND THE SECURITY INTEREST IN THE RENTS AND PERSONAL PROPERTY, IS GIVEN TO SECURE (A) PAYMENT OF THE INDEBTEDNESS AND (B) PERFORMANCE OF ANY AND ALL OBLIGATIONS UNDER THIS DEED OF TRUST. THIS DEED OF TRUST IS GIVEN AND ACCEPTED ON THE FOLLOWING TERMS:

FUTURE ADVANCES. The Indebtedness secured by this Deed of Trust is for present and future obligations and this Deed of Trust is given to secure all present and future obligations of Grantor to Beneficiary. The period in which future obligations may be incurred and secured by this Deed of Trust is the period between the date hereof and that date which is fifteen (15) years from the date hereof. The amount of present obligations secured by this Deed of Trust is One Hundred Fifty Thousand & 00/100 Dollars ($150,000.00) and the maximum principal amount, including present and future obligations, which may be secured by this Deed of Trust at any one time is One Hundred Fifty Thousand & 00/100 Dollars ($150,000.00.) Any additional amounts advanced by Beneficiary pursuant to the provisions of this Deed of Trust shall be deemed necessary expenditures for the protection of the security. Each future advance need not be evidenced by a written instrument or notation signed by Grantor or any other person evidencing or stipulating that such advance is secured by this Deed of Trust. All future obligations shall be considered to be made pursuant to the requirements of North Carolina General Statutes Sections 45-67, et. seq., or any amendments thereto.

PAYMENT AND PERFORMANCE. Except as otherwise provided in this Deed of Trust, Grantor shall pay to Lender all amounts secured by this Deed of Trust as they become due, and shall strictly and in a timely manner perform all of Grantor's obligations under the Note, this Deed of Trust, and the Related Documents.

POSSESSION AND MAINTENANCE OF THE PROPERTY. Grantor agrees that Grantor's possession and use of the Property shall be governed by the following provisions:

Possession and Use. Until the occurrence of an Event of Default, Grantor may (1) remain in possession and control of the Property; (2) use, operate or manage the Property; and (3) collect the Rents from the Property.

Duty to Maintain. Grantor shall maintain the Property in tenantable condition and promptly perform all repairs, replacements, and maintenance necessary to preserve its value.

Hazardous Substances. Grantor represents and warrants that the Property never has been, and never will be so long as this Deed of Trust remains a lien on the Property, used for the generation, manufacture, storage, treatment, disposal, release or threatened release of any Hazardous Substance in violation of any Environmental Laws. Grantor authorizes Lender and its agents to enter upon the Property to make such inspections and tests as Lender may deem appropriate to determine compliance of the Property with this section of the Deed of Trust. Grantor hereby (1) releases and waives any future claims against Lender for indemnity or contribution in the event Grantor becomes liable for cleanup or other costs under any such laws, and (2) agrees to indemnify and hold harmless Lender against any and all claims and losses resulting from a breach of this paragraph of the Deed of Trust. This obligation to indemnify shall survive the payment of the Indebtedness and the satisfaction of this Deed of Trust.

DUE ON SALE - CONSENT BY LENDER. Lender may, at Lender's option, declare immediately due and payable all sums secured by this Deed of Trust upon the sale or transfer, without Lender's prior written consent, of all or any part of the Real Property, or any interest in the Real Property. A "sale or transfer" means the conveyance of Real Property or any right, title or interest in the Real Property; whether legal, beneficial or equitable; whether voluntary or involuntary; whether by outright sale, deed, installment sale contract, land contract, contract for deed, leasehold interest with a term greater than three (3) years, lease-option contract, or by sale, assignment, or transfer of any beneficial interest in or to any land trust holding title to the Real Property, or by any other method of conveyance of an interest in the Real Property. If any Grantor is a corporation, partnership or limited liability company, transfer also includes any change in ownership of more than twenty-five percent (25%) of the voting stock, partnership interests or limited liability company interests, as the case may be, of such Grantor. However, this option shall not be exercised by Lender if such exercise is prohibited by federal law or by North Carolina law.

TAXES AND LIENS. The following provisions relating to the taxes and liens on the Property are part of this Deed of Trust:

Payment. Grantor shall pay when due (and in all events prior to delinquency) all taxes, special taxes, assessments, charges (including water and sewer), fines and impositions levied against or on account of the Property, and shall pay when due all claims for work done on or for services rendered or material furnished to the Property. Grantor shall maintain the Property free of all liens having priority over or equal to the interest of Lender under this Deed of Trust, except for the lien of taxes and assessments not due and except as otherwise provided in this Deed of Trust.

PROPERTY DAMAGE INSURANCE. The following provisions relating to insuring the Property are a part of this Deed of Trust.

Maintenance of Insurance. Grantor shall procure and maintain policies of fire insurance with standard extended coverage endorsements on a replacement basis for the full insurable value covering all Improvements on the Real Property in an amount sufficient to avoid application of any coinsurance clause, and with a standard mortgagee clause in favor of Lender. Grantor shall also procure and maintain comprehensive general liability insurance in such coverage amounts as Lender may request with Trustee and Lender being named as additional insureds in such liability insurance policies. Additionally, Grantor shall maintain such other insurance, including but not limited to hazard, business interruption, and boiler insurance, as Lender may reasonably require. Policies shall be written in form, amounts, coverages and basis reasonably acceptable to Lender and issued by a company or companies reasonably acceptable to Lender. Grantor, upon request of Lender, will deliver to Lender from time to time the policies or certificates of insurance in form satisfactory to Lender, including stipulations that coverages will not be cancelled or diminished without at least ten (10) days prior written notice to Lender. Each insurance policy also shall include an endorsement providing that coverage in favor of Lender will not be impaired in any way by any act, omission or default of Grantor or any other person. Should the Real Property be located in an area designated by the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency as a special flood hazard area, Grantor agrees to obtain and maintain Federal Flood Insurance, if available, within 45 days after notice is given by Lender that the Property is located in a special flood hazard area, for the full unpaid principal balance of the loan and any prior liens on the property securing the loan, up to the maximum policy limits set under the National Flood Insurance Program, or as otherwise required by Lender, and to maintain such insurance for the term of the loan.

LENDER'S EXPENDITURES. If any action or proceeding is commenced that would materially affect Lender's interest in the Property or if Grantor fails to comply with any provision of this Deed of Trust or any Related Documents, including but not limited to Grantor's failure to discharge or pay when due any amounts Grantor is required to discharge or pay under this Deed of Trust or any Related Documents, Lender on Grantor's behalf may (but shall not be obligated to) take any action that Lender deems appropriate on the Property and paying all costs for insuring, maintaining and preserving the Property. All such expenditures incurred or paid by Lender for such purposes will then bear interest at the rate charged under the Note from the date incurred or paid by Lender to the date of repayment by Grantor. All such expenses will become a part of the Indebtedness and, at Lender's option, will (A) be payable on demand; (B) be added to the balance of the Note and be apportioned among and be payable with any installment payments to become due during either (1) the term of any applicable insurance policy; or (2) the remaining term of the Note; or (C) be treated as a balloon payment which will be due and payable at the Note's maturity.

WARRANTY; DEFENSE OF TITLE. The following provisions relating to ownership of the Property are a part of this Deed of Trust:

Title. Grantor warrants that: (a) Grantor holds good and marketable title of record to the Property in fee simple, free and clear of all liens and encumbrances other than those set forth in the Real Property description or in any title insurance policy, title report, or final title opinion issued in favor of, and accepted by, Lender in connection with this Deed of Trust, and (b) Grantor has the full right, power, and authority to execute and deliver this Deed of Trust to Lender.

Defense of Title. Subject to the exception in the paragraph above, Grantor warrants and will forever defend the title to the Property against the lawful claims of all persons.

DEFAULT. Each of the following, at Lender's option, shall constitute an Event of Default under this Deed of Trust:

Payment Default. Grantor fails to make any payment when due under the Indebtedness.

Default on Other Payments. Failure of Grantor within the time required by this Deed of Trust to make any payment for taxes or insurance, or any other payment necessary to prevent filing of or to effect discharge of any lien.

Other Default. Grantor fails to comply with any other term, obligation, covenant or condition contained in this Deed of Trust, the Note or in any of the Related Documents.

Compliance Default. Failure to comply with any other term, obligation, covenant or condition contained in this Deed of Trust, the Note or in any of the Related Documents.

Default in Favor of Third Parties. Should Grantor default under any loan, extension of credit, security agreement, purchase or sales agreement, or any other agreement, in favor of any other creditor or person that may materially affect any of Grantor's property or Grantor's ability to repay the Indebtedness or perform Grantor's obligations under this Deed of Trust or any related document.

Insolvency. The dissolution or termination of Grantor's existence as a going business, the insolvency of Grantor, the appointment of a receiver for any part of Grantor's property, any assignment for the benefit of creditors, any type of creditor workout, or the commencement of any proceeding under any bankruptcy or insolvency laws by or against Grantor.

Events Affecting Guarantor. Any of the preceding events occurs with respect to any guarantor, endorser, surety, or accommodation party of any of the Indebtedness or any guarantor, endorser, surety, or accommodation party dies or becomes incompetent, or revokes or disputes the validity of, or liability under, any Guaranty of the Indebtedness.

Adverse Change. A material adverse change occurs in Grantor's financial condition, or Lender believes the prospect of payment or performance of the Indebtedness is impaired.

Insecurity. Lender in good faith believes itself insecure.

RIGHTS AND REMEDIES ON DEFAULT. Upon the occurrence of any Event of Default under any Indebtedness, or should Grantor fail to comply with any of Grantor's obligations under this Deed of Trust, Trustee or Lender may exercise any one or more of the following rights and remedies:

Election of Remedies. Election by Lender to pursue any remedy shall not exclude pursuit of any other remedy, and an election to make expenditures or to take action to perform an obligation of Grantor under this Deed of Trust, after Grantor's failure to perform, shall not affect Lender's right to declare a default and exercise its remedies.

Accelerate Indebtedness. Lender shall have the right at its option without notice to Grantor to declare the entire Indebtedness immediately due and payable, including any prepayment penalty which Grantor would be required to pay.

Express Power of Sale Provision. Upon the application or request of Lender, it shall be lawful for and the duty of the Trustee, and the Trustee is hereby authorized and empowered, to expose to sale and to sell the Property at public auction for cash, after having first complied with all applicable requirements of North Carolina law with respect to the exercise of powers of sale contained in deeds of trust or such other sales appropriate under the circumstances; and upon any such sale, the Trustee shall convey title to the purchaser in fee simple. In the event of any sale under this Deed of Trust by virtue of the exercise of the powers granted in this Deed of Trust, or pursuant to any order and any judicial proceeding or otherwise, the Property may be sold as an entirety or in separate parcels and in such manner or order as Lender in its sole discretion may elect. Trustee shall be authorized to hold a sale pursuant to North Carolina General Statute Chapter 45. If Trustee so elects, Trustee may sell the Property covered by this Deed of Trust at one or more separate sales in any manner permitted by applicable North Carolina law, and any exercise of the powers granted in this Deed of Trust shall not extinguish or exhaust such powers, until the entire Property is sold or the Indebtedness is paid in full. If such Indebtedness is now or hereafter further secured by any chattel mortgages, pledges, contracts of guaranty, assignments of lease or other security instruments, Lender may at its option exercise the remedies granted under any of the security agreements either concurrently or independently and in such order as Lender may determine.

Foreclosure. With respect to all or any part of the Real Property, the Trustee shall have the right to foreclose by notice and sale, and Lender shall have the right to foreclose by judicial foreclosure, in either case in accordance with and to the full extent provided by applicable law.

Other Remedies. Trustee or Lender shall have any other right or remedy provided in this Deed of Trust or the Note or by law.

Sale of the Property. To the extent permitted by applicable law, Grantor hereby waives any and all rights to have the Property marshalled. In exercising its rights and remedies, the Trustee or Lender shall be free to sell all or any part of the Property together or separately, in one sale or by separate sales. Lender shall be entitled to bid at any public sale on all or any portion of the Property.

Attorneys' Fees; Expenses. If Lender institutes any suit or action to enforce any of the terms of this Deed of Trust, Lender shall be entitled to recover such sum as the court may adjudge reasonable as attorneys' fees at trial and upon any appeal. Whether or not any court action is involved, and to the extent not prohibited by law, all reasonable expenses Lender incurs that in Lender's opinion are necessary at any time for the protection of its interest or the enforcement of its rights shall become a part of the Indebtedness payable on demand and shall bear interest at the Note rate from the date of the expenditure until repaid. Expenses covered by this paragraph include, without limitation, however subject to any limits under applicable law, Lender's attorneys' fees and Lender's legal expenses, whether or not there is a lawsuit, including attorneys' fees and expenses for bankruptcy proceedings (including efforts to modify or vacate any automatic stay or injunction), appeals, and any anticipated post-judgment collection services, the cost of searching records, obtaining title reports (including foreclosure reports), surveyors' reports, and appraisal fees, title insurance, and fees for the Trustee, to the extent permitted by applicable law. Grantor also will pay any court costs, in addition to all other sums provided by law.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS. The following miscellaneous provisions are a part of this Deed of Trust:

NORTH CAROLINA DEED OF TRUST

THIS DEED of TRUST made this 5th day of April, 2002, by and between:

GRANTOR	TRUSTEE	BENEFICIARY
THE COMMUNITY HEALTH FOUNDATION, INC. 322 S. 17TH STREET WILMINGTON, NC 28401	ALAN M. SOLANA 210 PRINCESS STREET WILMINGTON, NC 28401	HELEN ROGERS LOFTON 117 AVANT DRIVE WILMINGTON, NC 28405

Enter in appropriate block for each party: name, address, and, if appropriate, character of entity, e.g. corporation or partnership.

The designation Grantor, Trustee, and Beneficiary as used herein shall include said parties, their heirs, successors, and assigns, and shall include singular, plural, masculine, feminine or neuter as required by context.

WITNESSETH, That whereas the Grantor is indebted to the Beneficiary in the principal sum of One Hundred Fifty Thousand and 00/100-- Dollars ($ 150,000.00), as evidenced by a Promissory Note of even date herewith, the terms of which are incorporated herein by reference. The final due date for payment of said Promissory Note, if not sooner paid, is October 5, 2002

NOW, THEREFORE, as security for said indebtedness, advancements and other sums expended by Beneficiary pursuant to this Deed of Trust and costs of collection (including attorneys fees as provided in the Promissory Note) and other valuable consideration, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, the Grantor has bargained, sold, given, granted and conveyed and does by these presents bargain, sell, give, grant and convey to said Trustee, his heirs, or successors, and assigns, the parcel(s) of land situated in the City of WILMINGTON, _____ Township, NEW HANOVER County, North Carolina, (the "Premises") and more particularly described as follows:

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD said Premises with all privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging to said Trustee, his heirs, successors, and assigns forever, upon the trusts, terms and conditions, and for the uses hereinafter set forth.

If the Grantor shall pay the Note secured hereby in accordance with its terms, together with interest thereon, and any extensions or extensions thereof in whole or in part, all other sums secured hereby and shall comply with all of the covenants, terms and conditions of this Deed of Trust, then this conveyance shall be null and void and may be cancelled of record at the request and the expense of the Grantor if, however, there shall be any default (a) in the payment of any sums due under the Note, this Deed of Trust or any other instrument securing the Note and such default is not cured within fifteen (15) days after written notice, then and in any of such events, without further notice, it shall be lawful for and the duty of the Trustee, upon the request of the Beneficiary, to sell the land hereby conveyed at public auction for cash, after having first given such notice of hearing as to commencement of foreclosure proceedings and obtained such findings or leave of court as may then be required by law and giving such notice and advertising the time and place of such sale in such manner as may then be provided by law, and upon such and any further and upon compliance with the law then relating to foreclosure proceedings under power of sale to convey title to the purchaser in as full and ample manner as the Trustee is empowered. The Trustee shall be authorized to retain an attorney to represent him in such proceedings.

The proceeds of the sale shall after the Trustee retains his commission, together with reasonable attorneys fees incurred by the Trustee in such proceeding, be applied to the costs of sale, including, but not limited to, costs of collection, taxes, assessments, costs of recording, service fees and incidental expenditures, the amount due on the Note hereby secured and advancements and other sums expended by the Beneficiary according to the provisions herein and otherwise as required by the then existing law relating to foreclosures. The Trustee's commission shall be five percent (5%) of the gross proceeds of the sale or the minimum sum of $ _____, whichever is greater, for a completed foreclosure. In the event foreclosure is commenced, but not completed, the Grantor shall pay all expenses incurred by Trustee, including reasonable attorneys fees, and a partial commission computed on five per cent (5%) of the outstanding indebtedness or the above stated minimum sum, whichever is greater, in accordance with the following schedule, to-wit: one-fourth (¼) thereof before the Trustee issues a notice of hearing on the right to foreclosure; one-half (½) thereof after issuance of said notice; three-fourths (¾) thereof after such hearings and the greater of the full commission or minimum sum after the initial sale.

And the said Grantor does hereby covenant and agree with the Trustee as follows:

1. INSURANCE. Grantor shall keep all improvements on said land, now or hereafter erected, constantly insured for the benefit of the Beneficiary against loss by fire, windstorm and such other casualties and contingencies, in such manner and in such companies and for such amounts, not less than that amount necessary to pay the sum secured by this Deed of Trust, and as may be satisfactory to the Beneficiary. Grantor shall purchase such insurance, pay all premiums therefor, and shall deliver to Beneficiary such policies along with evidence of payment of premiums thereon, then Beneficiary, at his option, may purchase such insurance. Such amounts paid by Beneficiary shall be added to the principal of the Note secured by this Deed of Trust, and shall be due and payable upon demand of Beneficiary. All proceeds from any insurance so maintained shall at the option of Beneficiary be applied to the debt secured hereby and if payable in installments, applied in the inverse order of maturity of such installments or to the repair or construction of any improvements located upon the Property.

2. TAXES, ASSESSMENTS, CHARGES. Grantor shall pay all taxes, assessments and charges as may be lawfully levied against said Premises within thirty (30) days after the same shall become due. In the event that Grantor fails to so pay all taxes, assessments and charges as herein required, then Beneficiary, at his option, may pay the same and the amounts so paid shall be added to the principal of the Note secured by this Deed of Trust, and shall be due and payable upon demand of Beneficiary.

3. ASSIGNMENTS OF RENTS AND PROFITS. Grantor assigns to Beneficiary, in the event of default, all rents and profits from the land and any improvements thereon, and authorizes Beneficiary to enter upon and take possession of such land and improvements, to rent same, at any reasonable rate of rent determined by Beneficiary, and after deducting from any such rents the cost of collecting and collection, to apply the remainder to the debt secured hereby.

4. PARTIAL RELEASE. Grantor shall not be entitled to the partial release of any of the above described property unless a specific provision providing therefor is included in this Deed of Trust. In the event a partial release provision is included in this Deed of Trust, Grantor must strictly comply with the terms thereof. Unless otherwise expressly provided, Grantor shall not be entitled to any release of property unless Grantor is not in default and is in full compliance with all of the terms and provisions of the Note, this Deed of Trust, and any other instrument that may be securing said Note.

5. WASTE. The Grantor covenants that he will keep the Premises herein conveyed in as good order, repair and condition as they are now, reasonable wear and tear excepted, and will comply with all governmental requirements respecting the Premises or their use, and that he will not commit or permit any waste.

6. CONDEMNATION. In the event that any or all of the Premises shall be condemned and taken under the power of eminent domain, Grantor shall give immediate written notice to Beneficiary and Beneficiary shall have the right to receive and collect all damages awarded by reason of such taking, and the right to such damages hereby is assigned to Beneficiary who shall have the discretion to apply the amount so received, or any part thereof, to the indebtedness due hereunder and if payable in installments, applied in the inverse order of maturity of such installments, or to any alteration, repair or restoration of the Premises by Grantor.

7. WARRANTIES. Grantor covenants with Trustee and Beneficiary that he is seized of the premises in fee simple, has the right to convey the same in fee simple, that title is marketable and free and clear of all encumbrances, and that he will warrant and defend the title against the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, except for the exceptions hereinafter stated. Title to the property hereinabove described is subject to the following exceptions:

Easements and Restrictions of record.

8. SUBSTITUTION OF TRUSTEE. Grantor and Trustee covenant and agree to and with Beneficiary that in case the said Trustee, or any successor trustee, shall die, become incapable of acting, renounce his trust, or for any reason the holder of the Note desires to replace said Trustee, then the holder may appoint, in writing, a trustee to take the place of the Trustee; and upon the probate and registration of the same, the trustee thus appointed shall succeed to all rights, powers and duties of the Trustee.

[X] THE FOLLOWING PARAGRAPH, 9. SALE OF PREMISES, SHALL NOT APPLY UNLESS THE BLOCK TO THE LEFT MARGIN OF THIS SENTENCE IS MARKED AND/OR INITIALED.

9. SALE OF PREMISES. Grantor agrees that if the Premises or any part thereof or interest therein is sold, assigned, transferred, conveyed or otherwise alienated by Grantor, whether voluntarily or involuntarily or by operation of law (other than: (a) the creation of a lien or other encumbrance subordinate to this Deed of Trust which does not relate to a transfer of rights of occupancy in the Premises; (b) the creation of a purchase money security interest for household appliances; (c) a transfer by devise, descent, or operation of law on the death of a joint tenant or tenant by the entirety; (d) the grant of a leasehold interest of three (3) years or less not containing an option to purchase; (e) a transfer to a relative resulting from the death of a Grantor; (f) a transfer where the spouse or children of the Grantor become the owner of the Premises; (g) a transfer resulting from a decree of a dissolution of marriage, legal separation agreement, or from an incidental property settlement agreement, by which the spouse of the Grantor becomes the owner of the Premises; (h) a transfer into an inter vivos trust in which the Grantor is and remains a beneficiary and which does not relate to a transfer of rights of occupancy in the Premises; (i) any transfer or exchange of the Premises by the beneficial ownership of the Premises, including the sale, conveyance or dissolution of a majority interest in the Grantor) a corporation or partnership, whether or not of record and whether or not for consideration, shall be deemed to be the transfer of an interest in the Premises. Note secured hereby and all other obligations hereunder to be forthwith due and payable. Any change in the legal or equitable title of the Premises or in the beneficial ownership of the Premises, including the sale, which the Grantor is not a party to such instrument given as additional security for the Note secured hereby, the Beneficiary may, but without obligation, make advances to perform such covenants or obligations, and all such sums so advanced shall be added to the principal sum, shall bear interest at the rate provided in the Note secured hereby for sums due after default and shall be due from Grantor on demand of the Beneficiary. No advancement or anything contained in this paragraph shall constitute a waiver by Beneficiary or prevent such failure to perform from constituting an event of default.

10. ADVANCEMENTS. If Grantor shall fail to perform any of the covenants or obligations contained herein or in any other instrument given as additional security for the Note secured hereby, the Beneficiary may, but without obligation, make advances to perform such covenants or obligations, and all such sums so advanced shall be added to the principal sum, shall bear interest at the rate provided in the Note secured hereby for sums due after default and shall be due from Grantor on demand of the Beneficiary. No advancement or anything contained in this paragraph shall constitute a waiver by Beneficiary or prevent such failure to perform from constituting an event of default.

11. INDEMNITY. If any suit or proceeding be brought against the Trustee or Beneficiary or if any suit or proceeding be brought which may affect the value or title of the Premises, Grantor shall defend, indemnify and hold harmless and on demand reimburse Trustee or Beneficiary from any loss, cost, damage or expense and any sums expended by Trustee or Beneficiary shall bear interest as provided in the Note secured hereby for sums due after default and shall be due and payable on demand.

12. WAIVERS. Grantor waives all rights to require marshalling of assets by the Trustee or Beneficiary. No delay or omission of the Trustee or Beneficiary in the exercise of any right, power or remedy arising under the Note or this Deed of Trust shall be deemed a waiver of any default or acquiescence therein or shall impair or make the exercise of such right, power or remedy by Trustee or Beneficiary at any other time.

13. CIVIL ACTION. In the event that the Trustee is named as a party to any civil action as Trustee in this Deed of Trust, the Trustee shall be entitled to employ an attorney at law, including himself if he is a licensed attorney, to represent him in said action and the reasonable attorney's fee of the Trustee in such action shall be paid by the Beneficiary and added to the principal of the note secured by this Deed of Trust and bear interest at the rate provided in the Note for sums due after default.

14. PRIOR LIENS. Default under the terms of any instrument secured by a lien to which this Deed of Trust is subordinate shall constitute default hereunder.

15. OTHER TERMS.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Grantor has hereunto set his hand and seal, or if corporate, has caused this instrument to be signed in its corporate name by its duly authorized officers and its seal to be hereunto affixed by authority of its Board of Directors, the day and year first above written.

Thomas E. Wright, Chairman
Community's Health Foundation
322 South 17th Street
Wilmington, NC 28401

Dear Mr. Wright:

On behalf of the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development, I am writing to enthusiastically endorse the Community's Health Foundation's effort to convert the building located on the 900 block of 4th Street into Foundation offices, New Hanover Community Health Center offices and into a History Museum.

With this endorsement, the Office is committing $150,000 in funding toward the completion of this conversion project. The funding will be awarded by June 30, 2002.

We wish you all the best as you embark on this important project.

Sincerely,

Torlen L. Wade

Dear Mr. McKinney,

The Community's Health Foundation, Inc is requesting your support in the acquisition and development of a building in Wilmington, North Carolina that will serve as a historical relic and museum about the 1898 Race Riot that occurred in Wilmington, North Carolina. The museum will exhibit historical events that took place and recapture these moments for future generations to explore, examine, and uncover the truth about such a horrific time in American History. This is a very important endeavor for the community of Wilmington, the state of North Carolina and our nation.

We are requesting your support to aid this foundation's efforts. Please make the check payable to The Community's Health Foundation, Inc., in care of Thomas E. Wright. Contributions are tax deductible under the 501 (c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Our Tax Id# is 56-2252434.

If you need to contact me or need additional information, please do not hesitate to give me a call. Again, thanks for your support.

Sincerely,

Thomas E. Wright

Speaker Hackney.

As you will see from Mark Schreiner's article below, Rep. Wright failed to report more than $13,000 of the CRNA money that he received shortly before killing legislation that the CRNA lobby opposed. I think this is supportive of my argument that Rep. Wright (and perhaps others) killed the bill in a pay-to-play scheme. I am not going to embarrass your office by resubmitting my request for an investigation of this issue but it deserves examination by the legislature or the state ethics commission.

More allegations against Wright brought to light

By Mark Schreiner

Raleigh | According to the N.C. State Board of Elections, Rep. Thomas Wright failed to report more than $13,000 in contributions from nurse anesthetists in 2005.

That new detail was included in a five-page "findings summary" that the board sent Monday to prosecutors in Raleigh and Wilmington seeking an investigation of the Port City Democrat.

In an interview Tuesday, Wright said he might have made mistakes on his reports but did not purposely fail to report those contributions.

It is a crime to purposely fail to disclose contributions, and it is perjury to knowingly file a false campaign finance report. Last week, the elections board alleged that Wright failed to disclose $220,000 in contributions and $234,000 in expenses. The board charged that he knowingly filed false reports, and its members voted unanimously to refer Wright's case to the Wake County prosecutor.

An earlier Star-News analysis of disclosure reports revealed that Wright has not reported receiving 273 donations totaling $119,607 that political committees have said they sent to him.

While the nurse group's effort to give contributions to Wright was mentioned at the elections board's

May 15 meeting, and nurses were available in the room to testify, the contributions got little more than a mention during the five-hour hearing.

After the May 15 hearing, investigator Kim Strach said, the board had Wright's banking records as well as information provided by the nurse contributors.

"They have been very helpful," she said.

The contributions were given legally, she said.

Strach refused a request to provide the list of nurse contributions, saying that information was part of the closed file of information the board would hand over to prosecutors.

Through its attorney, the nurses' trade association also refused a request for the list. The lawyer, Michael Crowell, said that was the best course of action because the information was part of a file of information that may become part of a criminal investigation.

In the board's summary, investigators said Wright received $18,075 from nurse anesthetists at a fundraiser held at the Seaside Club in Wrightsville Beach on Nov. 12, 2005, and that Wright failed to disclose $13,375 collected at that event.

What Wright did disclose receiving from nurses is spread across three quarterly reports.

He reported receiving a $2,000 donation from the N.C. Association of Nurse Anesthetists political committee on Nov. 16, 2005.

In his first 2006 campaign disclosure, Wright reported receiving $5,950 from individuals with occupations listed as CRNA, the industry acronym for a nurse anesthetist. The report doesn't indicate which contributions were given at the fundraiser and which might have been given before or after.

Making it harder to pinpoint when they were given is the fact that all of the contributions are listed as being received in February 2006. Other than those contributions, Wright reported one other contribution from a CNRA in 2006 - a $125 donation disclosed in his second quarter 2006 report.

"I recall submitting everything coming from" the nurses, he said. But if the list is not complete, he said, then "that is a mistake."

Joe Sinsheimer, who filed the original complaint against Wright to the elections board, charged that contributions were reported late to avoid controversy.

In summer 2005, Wright's health committee approved House Bill 503, a bill opposed by nurse anesthetists. Wright failed to bring the bill to the floor of the House, a move which effectively killed the bill.

Wright has said he did so because he felt the bill would hurt rural hospitals.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Dan Clodfelter
Representative Rick Glazier
Cochairs, Legislative Ethics Committee

FROM: O. Walker Reagan, Brad Krehely, Heather Fennell - Committee Co-Counsels, and Erika Churchill, Staff Attorney

RE: Preliminary Staff Analysis of the Allegations of Ethics Violations by Rep. Thomas Wright, May 21, 2007

This memorandum is a preliminary analysis of the allegations of ethics violations arising from action taken by the State Board of Elections (SBOE) at its May 15, 2007 meeting, and its order of May 21, 2007, against Representative Thomas Wright. This matter was referred to the Legislative Ethics Committee (LEC) on May 21, 2007 by Speaker Joe Hackney. The Speaker asked the LEC to review the order of the SBOE and the information it gathered during its investigation, and investigate the alleged violations of the Legislative Ethics Act, the criminal law, or both.

This analysis will examine whether this matter is properly before the LEC, and if so, whether the complaint alleges conduct that, if true, would be within the jurisdiction of the LEC.

STATEMENT OF ALLEGATIONS.

This information was taken from the following available sources: the order and attachments from the State Board of Elections (SBOE), newspaper reports, and other public records. The majority of this information cannot be confirmed using alternative sources. All information below is taken from the order or attachments of the SBOE, unless otherwise noted.

A. Alleged Election Law Violations.

1. Willfully delaying reporting of campaign contributions.
   - In total, over $68,000 in campaign contributions were reported in a reporting period other than when the contribution was deposited.

- Employees of Sims Hugo Neu, a company seeking to place a landfill in the Town of Navassa, made contributions to Rep. Wright before the primary election held in May of 2006. According to the General Assembly's redistricting data base, the Town of Navassa is not currently in Rep. Wright's district, but had been up until the 2004 election. Rep. Wright reported the contributions seven days before the general election, held in November 2006. In October 2006, Rep. Wright allegedly told talk show host Curtis Wright that he had not received campaign contributions from employees of Sims Hugo Neu. According to the Wilmington Star News, Rep. Wright received $3,900 from eight Sims Hugo Neu employees and $450 from a lobbyist for the company.

2. Commingling of Accounts.
   - Personal and campaign funds in several bank accounts in Rep. Wright's name were commingled during the period of 2000-2006 resulting in confusion as to what were personal funds and what were campaign funds.
3. Failure to Disclose.
   - Failure to disclose more than $211,000 in campaign contributions since 2000.
   - Failure to disclose more than $122,000 in campaign expenditures since 2000.
4. Prohibited Contributions.
   - Received more than $14,000 of "prohibited contributions" from corporations.

B. Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists.

1. According to the legislative history, House Bill 503 of the 2005 General Assembly would have allowed the licensure of anesthesiologists' assistants. The bill was referred to the Committee on Health, chaired by Rep. Wright, on March 7, 2005. The bill received a favorable report from the Committee on July 26, 2005. Rep. Wright, as chair of the Committee on Health, did not report the bill out of committee.
2. On November 12, 2005, certified registered nurse anesthetists (CRNAs) held a campaign fundraiser for Rep. Wright at the Seaside Club in Wrightsville Beach. It is not clear from the SBOE order or news reports how the CRNAs were organized in this effort. At least a portion of the donations were remitted by individuals identified as CRNAs. Of the $18,075.00 in campaign contributions received by Rep. Wright at this event, $13,375.00 was not disclosed on his campaign reports.

C. The Community's Health Foundation.

1. According to the records of the Secretary of State, on April 18, 2001, Rep. Wright filed Articles of Incorporation for The Community's Health Foundation, Inc. The corporation was formed as a nonprofit corporation. Thomas Wright, Daniel Gottovi, James Lofton, and Bessie Funderburg are listed as incorporators on the Articles of Incorporation.

2. On March 15, 2002, Torlen Wade, Acting Director of the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Developments, in the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS), wrote a letter to Thomas Wright, President of the Community Health Foundation, which stated DHHS was providing the Foundation with $150,000 in grant funding to convert a building in Wilmington into offices for the Foundation and a history museum. According the SBOE order, Torlen Wade allegedly provided the letter even though Mr. Wade knew DHHS was not going to provide funding for the museum because the agency did not have the funds, nor could any agency funds be used for this purpose.
3. According to the New Hanover County Register of Deeds records, on April 5, 2002, Helyn Rogers Lofton and her husband, James S. Lofton, deeded Lot 1, Block 293 in Wilmington to The Community Health Foundation, Inc. The purchase price for the property would appear to be $325,000 from the excise taxes paid on the transfer. On that same date, The Community Health Foundation, Inc. signed a deed of trust to Coastal Federal Bank for $150,000 due on October 5, 2002. The Foundation also signed a deed of trust to Helyn Lofton for $150,000, due on October 5, 2002. According to the News & Observer, Helyn Lofton helped Rep. Wright start the Foundation in 2001 and James Lofton was a member of the Wilmington Race Riot Commission. James Lofton was also one of the incorporators of the Foundation.
    - Payments made on the Costal Federal Bank note:
        i. From Thomas Wright: $4,900 on October 31, 2002.
        ii. From Daniel Gottovi (secretary/treasurer of the Foundation): $3,324.18 between March 13-18, 2003.
4. Rep. Wright solicited a donation for the Foundation from Anheuser-Busch on February 6, 2004. The letter stated donations were tax deductible and gave a tax identification number. The SBOE found no evidence that the Foundation obtained tax exempt or tax deductibility status. According to an attachment to the SBOE's order, the letter soliciting the donation has a notation from a fax machine identifying that the fax was sent from "Representative Thomas Wright."
5. Funds deposited by Rep. Wright into personal or campaign accounts that were allegedly solicited for use by the Foundation:
    - March 5, 2004 - Anheuser-Busch -$5,000.
    - July 26, 2004 - AT&T - $1,500 (check dated 4/1/2004).
    - August 11, 2004 - Astra Zeneka - $2,400. (check dated 12/15/2003).
6. A final Notice of Foreclosure by Coastal Federal Bank for the property was filed on June 22, 2004, with the property having been deeded to another party on May 18, 2004. According to the Wilmington Star, Helyn Lofton did not pursue action on the debt owed by the Foundation to her.
7. The bank account for the Foundation was closed on June 28, 2004.

D. Filing Statement of Economic Interest.

1. According to records on file in the Legislative Library, in 2006 Rep. Wright filed his required Statement on Economic Interest with the New Hanover Board of Elections on the 2004 Statement of Economic Interest form, not the 2006 Statement of Economic Interest form.
2. According to records on file in the Legislative Library, as required on the 2006 Statement of Economic Interest form, Rep. Wright did not disclose any nonprofits with which he was associated or any nonprofit with which he was associated that received State funds.

VALIDITY OF THE COMPLAINT

No complaint has been filed with the LEC but the matter has been referred to the Committee by the Speaker. G.S. 120-103 and G.S. 120-103.1 permit the LEC to conduct an investigation into the conduct of a legislator either upon its own motion or upon receipt of a formal complaint.

RESPONDENT

LEC JURISDICTION

The law defining the jurisdiction and investigative procedures of the Legislative Ethics Committee changed effective January 1, 2007. S.L. 2006-201, which changed the law in this area, provided that the new law would apply to offenses committed on or after January 1, 2007 and that prosecutions for offenses or ethics violations committed before January 1, 2007 were not abated or affected by the new law, and the statutes that were in effect prior to the effective date of the new law would remain applicable to prosecutions of actions arising on or before January 1, 2007.

It appears that most, if not all, of the allegations against Rep. Wright arise from conduct occurring prior to January 1, 2007. If so, it seems clear that the substantive law in effect prior to January 1, 2007 would apply in this situation. It may be less clear if the procedural provisions of the new law or the old law, and the rules adopted by the LEC thereunder, apply to this matter.

G.S. 120-103(a) directs the LEC, on its own motion or in response to a signed and sworn complaint filed by an individual, to inquire into any of the following:

1. Any alleged violation of the provisions of the Legislative Ethics Act (primarily the legislative bribery statute (G.S. 120-86), the use of legislative position to affect personnel actions (G.S. 120-86.1), the disclosure of confidential information statute (G.S. 120-87), the conflict on interest statute (G.S. 120-88), or the Statement of Economic Interest law (Part 2 of Article 14 of Chapter 120)).

2. The rules of ethics adopted by the House and Senate (of which there are none).
3. Alleged violations of the criminal law by a legislator while acting in the legislator's official capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process.

Before determining whether the LEC should investigate the allegations of unethical conduct, the LEC should determine whether, assuming that the allegations are true, the LEC has jurisdiction over the alleged conduct. If the LEC determines it has jurisdiction, the LEC may decide whether to investigate the matter further. After completing its investigation, the LEC may dismiss the complaint, issue a private or public admonishment to the legislator, refer evidence of criminal conduct to the Attorney General for possible prosecution, or refer the matter to the House for appropriate action.

If the LEC determines that it does not have jurisdiction, but believes the alleged conduct to be unethical, the LEC may refer the matter to the House of Representatives for appropriate action.

BASIS FOR LEC JURISDICTION

Election Law Violations:

While much of the information from the SBOE investigation involves alleged violations of the election and campaign laws, it does not appear that violations of the campaign laws would be within the jurisdiction of the LEC since these actions would not constitute a violation of the Code of Legislative Ethics or the alleged violation of the criminal laws by a legislator while acting in the legislator's official capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process.

Other Alleged Violations:

1. Potential Felony Violations Generally.

Some of the alleged violations arising from the SBOE's investigation could constitute felonies, outside the Legislative Ethics Act, including perjury arising from signing false campaign reports, obtaining property under false pretenses (outside of the legislative context), and various violations of federal law. Under the NC Constitution, in order to qualify to be a member of the General Assembly, a person has to be a qualified voter of the State. It would appear that if Rep. Wright were to be convicted of any felony, he would automatically be disqualified to vote, and therefore would no longer be qualified to be elected as a member of the General Assembly.

2. Criminal Violations.

Although not alleged specifically in the information from the SBOE, the information does raise issues regarding whether any criminal statutes were violated over which the LEC has jurisdiction, including:

- Legislative bribery (G.S. 120-86).
- Obtaining property under false pretenses (G.S. 14-100).

- Violations of federal laws while acting in official capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process.

3. Non-criminal Ethics Violations.

Additionally, there may also be issues of whether Rep. Wright used the threat of legislative action affecting State personnel or complied with disclosure requirements in his Statement of Economic Interest. These questions also fall within the jurisdiction of the LEC to investigate under the Legislative Ethics Act.

COUNT 1 – Potential Violations of the Legislative Ethics Act.

A. Legislative Bribery. - Under G.S. 120-86(a), "[n]o person shall offer or give to a legislator or a member of a legislator's immediate family, or to a business with which the legislator is associated, and no legislator shall solicit or receive, anything of monetary value, including a gift, favor or service or a promise of future employment, based on any understanding that the legislator's vote, official actions or judgment would be influenced thereby, or where it could reasonably be inferred that the thing of value would influence the legislator in the discharge of the legislator's duties." Federal law, including the Hobbs Act, prohibits State officials from accepting anything of value in exchange for a specific requested exercise of official power. Since bribery is in Article 14 of Chapter 120 of the General Statutes, the issue could be within the jurisdiction of the Legislative Ethics Committee.

1. Contributions from Employees of Sims Hugo Neu

According to information from the State Board of Elections, Sims Hugo Neu was attempting to place a landfill in the Town of Navassa, as evidenced by HB 734 of the 2005 General Assembly. A number of Sims Hugo Neu employees made contributions to Representative Wright.

For purposes of the legislative bribery analysis, the issue is whether Rep. Wright solicited or received the contributions from employees of Sims Hugo Neu in exchange for taking legislative action to benefit Sims Hugo Neu. Proving bribery would require additional facts, including evidence of an "understanding" or a "reasonable inference" that the contributions influenced Rep. Wright in the discharge of his legislative duties. It would also require further investigation to determine if there was a violation of G.S. 120-86(a) or other federal laws.

2. House Bill 503 - Authorize Licensure/Anesthesiologist Assistants.

House Bill 503 was filed on March 3, 2005. The bill would have required nurse anesthetists to be supervised by a physician. Nurse anesthetists were opposed to the bill. After multiple meetings, on July 26, 2005, the committee substitute received a favorable report in the Committee on Health and was to be referred to the Committee on Finance. Rep. Wright, chair of the Committee on Health, did not report the bill out of committee. Later on November 12, 2005, the nurse anesthetists held a fundraiser in Rep. Wright's honor.

Legislative bribery would require a showing that Rep. Wright solicited or received contributions from the nurse anesthetists in exchange for taking or not taking legislative action, which could include the use of his prerogative as a committee chair to not reporting House Bill 503 out of committee. The information from the State Board of Elections indicates that Rep. Wright received campaign contributions several months after he failed to report House Bill 503 out of committee. Proving bribery would require additional facts, including evidence of an "understanding" or a "reasonable inference", that the contributions influenced Rep. Wright in the discharge of his legislative duties. It would also require further investigation and additional legal research to determine if there was a violation of G.S. 120-86 or other federal laws.

3. Jurisdiction.

Based on the information the Committee currently has, there probably are not sufficient facts alleging bribery. However, if the Committee or other federal, State, or local agencies uncovered additional facts tending to show that bribery occurred, the Committee would have jurisdiction.

B. Other Violations of the Code of Legislative Ethics. - The Legislative Ethics Act contains other provisions which may be applicable. It is unethical for a legislator to take, promise, or threaten legislative action for the purpose of influencing or in retaliation for any action regarding State employee hirings, promotions, grievances, or disciplinary actions. (G.S. 120-86.1). A legislator may not use or disclose confidential information gained in the course of the legislator's official activities or by reason of the legislator's official position that could result in financial gain. (G.S. 120-87). Currently, the LEC does not have evidence indicating that any of these violations occurred. Additional investigation would be necessary to determine if there was a violation of any of these provisions. If such a violation occurred, the LEC would have jurisdiction.

C. Disclosure of Economic Interest. - Prior to January 1, 2007, G.S. 120-89 through 120-98 governed the Statements of Economic Interest that candidates for the General Assembly were required to file with their county board of elections. Based on changes in the law enacted in 2004, effective for the filing of Statements of Economic Interest in the 2006 election cycle, candidates for the General Assembly were required to disclose nonprofits with which the candidate (or a member of the candidate's immediate household) was associated (i.e. was a director, officer, governing board member, employee, or independent contractor). Rep. Wright did not disclose his association with The Community's Health Foundation, Inc. on his Statement of Economic Interest filed in 2006, if he was still associated with that nonprofit. Additionally in 2006, Representative

Wright failed to file the proper Statement of Economic Interest form, using the form for 2003 (2004 election cycle) instead of the form for 2005 (2006 election cycle), which included the questions concerning nonprofits with which associated.

The sufficiency or accuracy of the State of Economic Interest filed by a member falls within Article 14 of Chapter 120 and therefore is within the jurisdiction of the LEC should it decide to investigate this issue.

COUNT 2 – Alleged Violations of the Criminal Law While Acting in the Legislator's Official Capacity as a Participant in the Lawmaking Process.

A. Obtaining Property under False Pretenses. - G.S. 14-100 makes it a felony for a person to obtain property from another through any false pretenses with the intent to defraud. The SBOE information indicated that Rep. Wright obtained a letter from a State government official indicating that the nonprofit organization that Rep. Wright served as the president for was going to be awarded a grant of $150,000. The facts stated in the letter were apparently not true and allegedly Rep. Wright knew the letter not to be true. Allegedly, the letter was used by Rep. Wright to obtain a $150,000 loan from a commercial bank, and possibly to convince the seller of a piece of property to take back a purchase money note and deed of trust for an additional $150,000 of the purchase price. Use of this false information to obtain this property or these loans could constitute a crime under this law.

B. Obtaining a Loan under False Pretenses as a Violation of Federal Law. - If the commercial bank from which Rep. Wright obtained the loan was federally insured, obtaining a loan from such a bank under false pretenses would be a violation of federal law.

C. Jurisdiction. - At a minimum, it would take additional research and investigation to determine if Rep. Wright obtained the letter from DHHS knowing that it was false, and represented it to be true, or failed to indicate it was false, to the commercial bank and the seller of the property, in order to obtain the loans necessary for the nonprofit to obtain the property. It would also require additional investigation to determine if Rep. Wright used his official legislative capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process to obtain this false letter. If Rep. Wright obtained the letter in his official legislative capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process and used it to obtain loans and acquire property under false pretenses with the intent to defraud the commercial bank and the seller of the property, Rep. Wright could be guilty of the crime of obtaining property under false pretenses under both State and federal law. If Rep. Wright committed these crimes while acting in his official capacity as a legislator as a participant in the lawmaking process, the LEC would have jurisdiction to investigate this conduct and recommend disciplinary action to the House of Representatives.

D. Campaign Fundraising During Session. - If Rep. Wright solicited campaign contributions during a regular legislative session from a lobbyist or lobbyist principal, or a political action committee associated with a lobbyist principal, in violation of G.S. 163-278.13B, including contributions from a PAC associated with Sims Hugo Neu or the Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists, Rep. Wright could have committed a Class 2 misdemeanor. The LEC could consider whether such a violation of the criminal law was done by Rep. Wright acting in his official capacity in the lawmaking process, and if so, the LEC would have jurisdiction to consider this matter.

SUMMARY

Based on our preliminary review of the transmittal from the Speaker, it appears that there is no formal complaint before the Committee. But the Committee could elect to proceed with an investigation into the matters referred by the Speaker on its own motion.

If convicted of any felony, Rep. Wright would no longer be qualified to be elected to serve as a legislator.

Investigations into most alleged violations of the election and campaign laws would not appear to be within the jurisdiction of the LEC. Illegally soliciting campaign contributions from a lobbyist or lobbyist principal, or a PAC associate with a lobbyist principal, during a regular legislative session could be within the jurisdiction of the LEC.

As to Count 1, assuming the facts alleged in the SBOE materials are true, in order to give rise to jurisdiction for the LEC, additional facts would have to be found to support an allegation that Rep. Wright violated the legislative bribery statute in connection with his legislative actions taken either on behalf of the location of a landfill in Navassa and campaign contributions from employees of Sims Hugo Neu, or his legislative actions taken with regards to HB 503 and nurse anesthetists and campaign contributions from nurse anesthetists. Additional investigation would be required to determine whether or not Rep. Wright violated the Statement of Economic Interest filing requirements.

As to Count 2, assuming the facts alleged in the SBOE materials are true, in order to give rise to jurisdiction for the LEC, additional facts may need to be found to support an allegation that Rep. Wright violated criminal laws by obtaining and using a statement from DHHS that was false to obtain property fraudulently while acting in his official capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process. A more thorough review of the facts of this situation and the criminal law should be given serious consideration to determine whether any laws have been violated in Rep. Wright's official legislative capacity.

Additional investigation and a determination of additional facts are needed to conclusively determine what actions by Rep. Wright the LEC may have jurisdiction over.

Please let us know how you would like to proceed.

INDICTMENT-
OBTAINING PROPERTY BY FALSE PRETENSES – CLASS C

The jurors for the State upon their oath present that on or between March 13, 2002 and June 22, 2004 in Wake County the defendant named above unlawfully willfully and feloniously did knowingly and designedly with the intent to cheat and defraud obtain and attempt to obtain a loan of $150,000.00 (one hundred and fifty thousand dollars) from Coastal Federal Bank, a financial institution, to the Community Health Foundation, Inc. by means of a false pretense which was calculated to deceive and did deceive in violation of N.C.G.S. § 14-100 and against the peace and dignity of the State.

The false pretense consisted of the following: The defendant requested and induced Torlen L. Wade, Acting Director of the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development of the North Carolina Department of Health and Human Services (The Office of Rural Health) to write a letter to the defendant in his capacity as the Chairman of the Community Health Foundation, Inc. (The Foundation) stating that the Office of Rural Health, would commit to funding a grant of $150,000.00 to The Foundation to assist The Foundation in converting the building at 926 North 4th Street in Wilmington, North Carolina into offices for The Foundation and a history museum. At the time of the writing of said letter the defendant and Torlen L. Wade knew that The Office of Rural Health would not make such a grant, and that the defendant would use the letter in seeking to obtain funding for The Foundation from other sources, such as financial institutions and other organizations that make grants, which would believe the representations contained in Torlen L. Wade's letter. The Coastal Federal Bank did receive a copy of the aforementioned letter, believed the representations in the letter, and in reliance on the letter made a loan of $150,000.00 to The Foundation.

INDICTMENT-
OBTAINING PROPERTY BY FALSE PRETENSES

The jurors for the State upon their oath present that on or between November 14, 2003 and August 11, 2004 in Wake County the defendant named above unlawfully willfully and feloniously did knowingly and designedly with the intent to cheat and defraud obtain and attempt to obtain $2,400.00 (two thousand four hundred dollars) from AstraZeneca Pharmaceuticals LP by means of a false pretense which was calculated to deceive and did deceive in violation of N.C.G.S. § 14-100 and against the peace and dignity of the State.

The false pretense consisted of the following: The defendant, while holding himself out as the President of the Community's Health Foundation, Inc. (The Foundation), solicited and received a charitable contribution from AstraZeneca Pharmaceuticals, LP in the amount of $2,400.00 for the use and benefit of The Foundation. The defendant represented that the contribution would be used for various health related purposes, including but not limited to educational initiatives, a needs assessment, identification of trends and bridging the gap of minority health care for underserved population in New Hanover County. The defendant further represented that The Foundation was a qualified charitable entity that would entitle the donor to receive a tax deduction for giving to The Foundation. In fact, The Foundation was not a qualified charity for which the donor could receive a tax deduction for making a contribution, and the $2,400.00 contribution made by AstraZeneca Pharmaceuticals, LP was not turned over to The Foundation to be used for the purposes stated in the solicitation, but was converted to the use and benefit of the defendant.

OBTAINING PROPERTY BY FALSE PRETENSES

The jurors for the State upon their oath present that on or before February 6, 2004 and continuing through August 11, 2004 in Wake County the defendant named above unlawfully willfully and feloniously did knowingly and designedly with the intent to cheat and defraud obtain and attempt to obtain $5,000.00 (five thousand dollars) from Anheuser-Busch Cos., Inc. by means of a false pretense which was calculated to deceive and did deceive in violation of N.C.G.S. § 14-100 and against the peace and dignity of the State.

The false pretense consisted of the following: The defendant, while holding himself out as the President of the Community's Health Foundation, Inc. (The Foundation), solicited a charitable contribution from Anheuser-Busch Cos., Inc. and received a $5,000.00 (five thousand dollars) contribution for the use and benefit of The Foundation. The defendant represented that the contribution would be used for the acquisition and development of a building in Wilmington, North Carolina that would serve as a museum. The defendant further represented that The Foundation was a qualified charitable entity that would entitle the donor to receive a tax deduction for making a contribution. In fact, the Foundation was not a qualified charity for which the donor could receive a tax deduction for making a contribution, and the $5,000 contribution made by Anheuser-Busch Cos., Inc., was not turned over to The Foundation to be used for the purposes stated in the solicitation, but was converted to the use and benefit of the defendant.

The jurors for the State upon their oath present that on or between October 28, 2001 and November 21, 2001 in Wake County the defendant named above unlawfully willfully and feloniously did knowingly and designedly with the intent to cheat and defraud obtain and attempt to obtain $9,980.27 (nine thousand nine hundred eighty dollars and twenty-seven cents) from South East Community Credit Union, a financial institution, by means of a false pretense which was calculated to deceive and did deceive in violation of N.C.G.S. § 14-100 and against the peace and dignity of the State.

The false pretense consisted of the following: The defendant applied for a business loan for The Community Health Foundation, Inc., (The Foundation) from South East Community Credit Union (Credit Union), a financial institution. The loan was made by the Credit Union to The Foundation as a business line of credit that would allow The Foundation to make one or more withdrawals of up to a total of $10,000 to be used by The Foundation for business purposes. The defendant made withdrawals from the business line of credit of The Foundation totaling $9,980.27, failed to turn over those funds to The Foundation, and converted these funds to his own use and benefit. The application for the loan, the withdrawal of funds, and their subsequent use was without the approval or knowledge of the Board of Directors of The Foundation.

The jurors for the State upon their oath present that on or between January 1, 2000, and January 31, 2007, in Wake County, the defendant named above unlawfully, willfully and feloniously did, in secret and with malice, and with deceit and intent to defraud, obstruct public justice in his role as a candidate for the North Carolina House of Representatives by the way in which he concealed and failed to account for campaign contributions and expenditures. The defendant collected a substantial number and amount of campaign contributions, approximately $185,000 worth, and failed to report those campaign contributions as required by law to the North Carolina Board of Elections (The Board), and to the Campaign treasurer for the Thomas Wright Campaign Committee, also know as the Committee to Elect Thomas E. Wright, (collectively known as The Committee). The defendant converted those campaign contributions to his own use and benefit, and also failed to report the expenditures of those contributions as required by law to The Board and to the treasurer of The Committee. By failing to report the contributions and expenditures, as required by law, the defendant filed and caused to be filed a campaign disclosure report with The Board that were not complete, true, and correct, in that the reports did not disclose campaign contributions and expenditures of The Committee. By concealing the financial activities of the defendant's political committee(s) and by filing and causing to be filed campaign disclosures reports that the defendant knew were not complete, true, and correct, the defendant obstructed public access to information that the defendant was required to disclose and concealed his illegal campaign activity. This act was in violation of the Common Law and against the peace and dignity of the State.

RULES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ETHICS COMMITTEE

Adopted May 15, 1996
Amended August 21, 1996

All proceedings of the Legislative Ethics Committee shall be governed by Article 5A, Committee Activity; and Article 14, Legislative Ethics Act, of General Statutes Chapter 120; or other applicable law. The Legislative Ethics Committee, by majority vote taken in open session, may close any meeting except as specifically provided otherwise in these rules. All other matters, not otherwise governed above, shall be subject to the following procedures.

A. OUTLINE OF PROCEDURE FOR RENDERING ADVISORY OPINIONS

1. Request for an advisory opinion. -- A legislator may request an advisory opinion from the Legislative Ethics Committee. (G.S. 120-88 and G.S. 120-104)

2. Requests to be written. -- All requests for advisory opinions shall be in writing, signed by the legislator requesting it and addressed to the Committee's cochairs. The request shall recite, with particularity, the ethical situation which presents itself to the legislator and the legislator's question.

3. Requests to be delivered to the Committee cochairs. -- All requests for advisory opinions shall be delivered to the cochairs of the Committee.

4. Creation of Advisory Opinion Subcommittee. – An Advisory Opinion Subcommittee is created. Each Committee cochair shall appoint to the Advisory Opinion Subcommittee two Committee members from that Committee's cochair's respective chamber. Each cochair shall appoint at least one member of the minority party of his or her respective chamber to membership on the Advisory Opinion Subcommittee. Each Committee cochair shall designate one of the Subcommittee members as a cochair of the Subcommittee. The term of an appointment of a member to the Subcommittee, except for resignation from the Subcommittee, shall be the same as the legislator's membership on the Committee.

5. Initial review by Advisory Opinion Subcommittee. -- The Committee cochairs shall refer all requests for advisory opinions to the Committee's Advisory Opinion Subcommittee, unless the Committee cochairs determine that the request should be considered by the Committee and schedule a meeting of the Committee to consider the request.

6. Subcommittee's advisory opinion. -- The Subcommittee may issue an advisory opinion with or without a meeting. The Subcommittee's advisory opinion shall be in writing, signed by all members of the Subcommittee, and addressed to the legislator requesting it. The Subcommittee advisory opinion shall be effective on the calendar day following its issuance by the Subcommittee. The Subcommittee cochairs shall transmit a duplicate original of its advisory opinion to the Committee cochairs. The Committee cochairs shall forward a copy of the advisory opinion to each Committee member.

7. Reference of ethics inquiry to Committee. -- If the Subcommittee finds that the issue upon which the advisory opinion requested is of such importance that the issue should be addressed by the Committee, as a whole, or if the Subcommittee is unable to render a unanimous opinion, the Subcommittee cochairs shall so notify in writing the Committee cochairs.

8. Review of Subcommittee's advisory opinion. -- When the presiding Committee cochair is notified that the Subcommittee:

   (a) Has issued an advisory opinion;

   (b) Has found that the issue presented in the request for an advisory opinion should be addressed by the Committee as a whole, or

   (c) Is unable to render an unanimous advisory opinion on the matter presented, the presiding Committee cochair, after consultation with the other Committee cochair, shall schedule the consideration of the matter or matters at the next meeting of the Committee following that notification. The Committee shall consider the request for the advisory opinion and the Subcommittee's unanimous advisory opinion, if issued, and may, by majority vote, adopt the Subcommittee's advisory opinion, or disapprove it or modify it. The Subcommittee advisory opinion, once effective, shall be deemed that of the Committee until the Committee either formally modifies or disapproves the Subcommittee's advisory opinion.

9. Committee Advisory Opinion. – The Committee may, by majority vote, adopt an advisory opinion for a request referred initially to the Committee under Rule A 5 of these procedures.

10. Legislator's reliance on advisory opinion. -- No legislator's action or inaction based on the legislator's good faith reliance on an advisory opinion rendered by the Subcommittee or Committee requested by that legislator may be the basis of any ethics complaint filed under G.S. 120-103. A legislator's action or inaction in reliance on an effective advisory opinion is protected under this rule only as long as and to the extent that the opinion is not modified or rejected.

11. Confidentiality. -- The request for an advisory opinion and all materials submitted to or obtained in connection with the request for an advisory opinion are confidential and shall not be released by the Committee or Subcommittee, their members, or staff. All correspondence relating to and meetings of Committee or Subcommittee on an advisory opinion are confidential and shall not be released by the Committee or Subcommittee or their members or staff. All meetings of the Subcommittee and the Committee deliberating and voting on advisory opinions shall be held in closed session.

12. Publication of edited opinions. -- Not less often than biennially, the Committee shall publish selected adopted advisory opinions edited to remove information identifying the requesting legislator in order that ethical issues be presented to members of the General Assembly so that they might act in accordance with legislative ethics as they evolve.

B. OUTLINE OF PROCEDURE FOR INVESTIGATIONS OF COMPLAINTS ALLEGING UNETHICAL ACTIVITY

1. Complaint. -- (a) Upon the Committee's own motion, or in response to a signed and sworn complaint of any individual filed with the Committee's cochairs, the Legislative Ethics Committee shall inquire into any alleged violation of:

   (1) Any provision of Article 14, the Legislative Ethics Act, of Chapter 120 of the General Statutes;

   (2) The rules of legislative ethics and conduct, adopted by the House of Representatives and the Senate under G.S. 120-102(7); or

   (3) The criminal law by a legislator while acting in his official capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process (G.S. 120-103(a)).

   (b) The complaint shall state the nature of the violation, the date the alleged violation occurred, and either:

   (1) That the contents of the complaint are within the knowledge of the individual verifying the complaint, or

   (2) The basis upon which the individual verifying the complaint believes the allegations to be true (G.S. 120-103(a1).

2. Preliminary meeting on complaint. -- (a) After a signed and sworn complaint has been filed pursuant to G.S. 120-103, the Legislative Ethics Committee cochairs, shall call a meeting of the Committee as soon as practicable and send a copy of the verified complaint to the accused legislator. Notice of that meeting shall be given openly at a session of the Senate and of the House or posted on the press room door of the Legislative Building in Raleigh and delivered to the Legislative Services Office.

   (b) In a meeting open to the public, the presiding Committee cochair, after consultation with the other cochair, or the Committee, by majority vote, may order in closed session the Committee meeting at which the complaint of unethical conduct is to be discussed. (G.S. 143-318.18(4a) and G.S. 120-103(b)).

3. Investigation Authorization.--After receipt of a signed and sworn complaint, the cochairs of the Committee shall call a meeting of the Committee to review the complaint and to receive from the complainant any additional information in support of the request for an investigation. After reviewing the complaint and the basis for the request, the Committee shall decide, by majority vote, whether or not to proceed with a preliminary investigation of the matter.

4. Investigation.--(a) Once the Committee has decided to consider a matter, the cochairs shall be responsible for the preliminary investigation of alleged unethical conduct.

(b) The cochairs may:

(1) Ask the Attorney General to direct the State Bureau of Investigation to conduct the preliminary investigation, or

(2) Request that the Legislative Services Officer facilitate the hiring of a private investigator to conduct the preliminary investigation. The Legislative Services Officer shall forward the request to employ a private investigator to the cochairs of the Legislative Services Commission for approval of the request and the allocation of funds for that purpose. If requested, the Legislative Services Officer shall furnish the cochairs with a list of at least three qualified private investigators from whom the cochairs may select an investigator or investigators. The Legislative Services Officer shall employ as private investigator the person or persons whom the Committee cochairs select.

(c) The person or persons, directed to conduct the investigation shall:

(1) Present to the Committee, at the direction of the cochairs, all information relevant to the Committee's investigation.

(2) Research, as directed by the cochairs, allegations relevant to the alleged unethical conduct.

(3) Interview potential witnesses having information relevant to the inquiry.

(4) Obtain sworn statements from persons willing to give them.

(5) Prepare the presentation of information and the investigative findings to the Committee.

(6) Present to the Committee a list of recommended witnesses to be called.

(7) Carry out other duties as directed by the cochairs.

5. Presentment of Preliminary Investigation Findings.--The cochairs shall present the findings of the preliminary investigation to the Committee together with recommendations of specific charges of alleged unethical conduct, if warranted.

6. Retaining Outside Counsel.--The cochairs shall request that the Legislative Services Officer facilitate in the hiring of outside counsel at such time as the cochairs determine the assistance of outside counsel is necessary, including for the preparation of proposed charges of alleged unethical conduct and for presentment of evidence at hearings. The Legislative Services Officer shall forward the request to employ outside counsel to the cochairs of the Legislative Services Commission for approval of the request and of the allocation of funds for that purpose. The Legislative Services Officer shall be requested to give the cochairs a list of at least three qualified attorneys willing to serve as outside counsel from whom the cochairs may select outside counsel. The Legislative Services Officer shall employ as the Committee's outside counsel the individual whom the cochairs select.

7. Determination of Charges.--If the Committee, by majority vote, finds that there is substantial evidence which provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that unethical conduct by the member has occurred, it shall proceed further with an inquiry into the conduct of the member. The Committee, by majority vote, shall specify the charges as to conduct to be considered against the accused member.

8. Notification of Charges and Scheduling of Hearings.--The cochairs shall notify the accused member of the inquiry and the charges against the member, and schedule one or more hearings on the matter as soon as reasonable.

9. Rights of Accused Member.--In accordance with these procedures, the member against whom the charges are brought has the right to be present, present evidence, cross-examine witnesses, and shall be permitted to be represented by private legal counsel at any hearing.

10. Subpoenas.--The forms for subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum approved on November 2, 1973 by the Legislative Services Commission shall be the forms utilized by the Committee. The Committee may issue subpoenas to compel the attendance of witnesses or the production of documents, books or other records, as permitted by Article 5A of Chapter 120 of the General Statutes and G.S. 120-103(c). The accused member may request that the Committee issue subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum.

11. Witnesses to Take Oath and All Written Statements to be Sworn.–The cochairs shall notify the accused member of all witnesses who may appear at a hearing inquiring into alleged unethical activity at least fifteen days prior to the hearing, unless waived by the Committee. A copy of any affidavit of a witness setting forth matters on which the witness may testify shall be made available to the accused member at that time. If no affidavit of the witness exists, the Committee shall make available to the accused member a summary of the matters on which the witness may testify. Any information which would tend to clear or lessen from blame or fault the charges against the accused member shall be made available to the accused member or the member's private legal counsel as soon as is reasonable. The accused member shall notify the cochairs of the witnesses the accused member desires to have appear at a hearing inquiring into alleged unethical activity at least five days prior to the hearing, unless waived by the Committee. A copy of any affidavit of a witness setting forth matters on which the witness may testify shall be made available to the Committee at that time. If no affidavit of the witness exists, the accused member shall make available to the Committee a summary of the matters on which the witness may testify. The Committee shall determine by majority vote which witnesses shall be heard. All witnesses shall be sworn before testifying. All written statements to the Committee shall be by sworn affidavit before the Committee will consider them.

12. Counsel for Witnesses Permitted.--Any witness testifying before the Committee may have private legal counsel present. Participation by witness's counsel at a hearing and while the witness is testifying is limited to advising the witness of the witness's legal rights. Counsel's failure to abide by these procedures is grounds for counsel's exclusion from the hearing.

13. Propounding of Questions.--(a) Committee members and staff, if requested by the cochair or Committee, may question any witness. The presiding cochair shall recognize Committee members who wish to question a witness for a series of questions. The Committee member may ask the witness all questions without interruption so long as permitted by the presiding cochair. Upon completion of a series of questions by a Committee member, the presiding cochair may recognize another Committee member for questions in the order recognized.

After all Committee members desiring to ask questions have been given an opportunity to ask a series of questions, the presiding cochair may give members additional opportunities to ask a series of questions in the same order.

(b) All questions to be asked of any witness shall be directed to the witness after receiving permission from the presiding cochair, but the presiding cochair may permit a series of questions to be asked without requiring specific consent for each individual question.

(c) The presiding cochair may disallow any question on his or her own motion.

(d) Objections to any questions shall be made by a member of the Committee, the accused member, or the member's private legal counsel, to the presiding cochair before the question is answered. If an objection is raised, the presiding cochair shall determine whether the question is relevant and has probative value as to a substantive issue, and is not a waste of time or redundant, and whether the witness will be allowed to answer. The ruling of the presiding cochair, without objection from a member of the Committee, shall stand.

(e) If the presiding cochair's ruling is objected to by a member of the Committee, the motion shall be, "That the ruling of the cochair be overruled." The motion shall be adopted by majority vote of the Committee.

14. Hearings and Meetings of Committee Open.--(a) The Committee's meetings and hearings shall be open to the public, unless:

(1) The Committee, by majority vote, closes to the public the meetings and hearings related to complaint, or;

(2) The individual against whom the complaint is made requests in writing prior to the meetings and hearings that they be closed (G.S. 120-103(b)).

(b) All proceedings of a closed session shall be transcribed and shall constitute a portion of the minutes of the closed session.

(c) The accused member and the member's private legal counsel shall be permitted to attend any closed session held for the purpose of taking testimony from a witness testifying as to matters related to allegations against the accused member, and the member or the member's private legal counsel shall have the right to propound questions to the witness and cross-examine the witness in accordance with Rule B.9 and B.13 of these procedures.

(d) Private legal counsel of any witness shall be permitted in a closed session during the period of the witness's testimony. The parents or legal guardian of a minor witness shall be permitted in a closed session during the period of the minor witness's testimony.

15. Transcripts.--The cochairs shall insure that all hearings be transcribed and be made part of the minutes of the meeting.

16. Committee Votes.--All votes, except those on the motions to adjourn and to approve minutes, shall be by roll call and included in the minutes.

17. Division of Issues.--After hearing evidence on the substantive issues of the alleged unethical conduct of the accused member, the Committee shall address the following issues:

(a) Whether one or more of the charges against the accused member is true.

(b) If so, what action will be taken by the Committee.

18. Disposition of Cases. -- (a) When the Committee has concluded its inquiries into alleged violations, the Committee shall:

(1) Dismiss the complaint,

(2) Issue a public or private admonishment to the legislator,

(3) If the Committee finds substantial evidence of a violation of the criminal statute, refer the matter to the Attorney General for possible prosecution through the appropriate channels, and to the relevant legislative chamber for appropriate action; or

(4) If the Committee finds substantial evidence of unethical activities, refer the matter to the appropriate legislative chamber for appropriate action, which shall include censure and expulsion.

(b) If the Committee issues an admonishment as provided for in this rule, the legislator so affected may, upon written request to the Committee, have the matter referred to the appropriate house for its own review (G.S. 120-103(d1)).

19. Confidentiality. – (a) Complaints alleging violations of the Legislative Ethics Act, transcriptions of hearings and all other records relating to the complaint are confidential and shall not be disclosed until the Committee has issued a public admonishment to the legislator, referred the matter to the Attorney General for possible prosecution, or referred the matter to the appropriate legislative chamber for appropriate action.

(b) In the case of a dismissal or a private admonishment under Rule B.18. (a), the Committee shall retain its records or findings in confidence, unless the individual under inquiry requests in writing that the records or findings be made public. If the Committee later finds that a legislator's subsequent unethical activities were similar to and the subject of an earlier private admonishment, then the Committee may make public the earlier admonishment and the records and findings related to it. (G.S. 120-103(d1)).

(c) Unsworn allegations and all records relating to them are confidential and shall not be disclosed, unless the Committee proceeds with an inquiry into the conduct of the member under Rule B.7 above, and except as permitted under this Rule.

20. Role of Committee Members and Staff.--(a) The duties of staff assigned to the Committee shall be directed by the cochairs.

(b) Legislative staff may be authorized to do the following:

(1) Research any legal issues arising from the investigation.

(2) Help Committee members prepare for meetings.

(3) Consult with the Attorney General's staff on matters arising from the investigation as necessary.

(4) Carry out other duties as directed by the cochairs.

(c) Other staff:

(1) All investigations, at the cochairs' discretion, shall be performed by the State Bureau of Investigation or a private investigator hired in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rule B 4 of these procedures.

(2) Outside counsel hired in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rule B 6 of these procedures shall be authorized to oversee the investigation in preparation for hearings and shall prepare and present evidence to the Committee, including the initial laying out of the evidence through the questioning of witnesses.

(3) The person or persons, employed or authorized to investigate, present or tender evidence, and cross examine witnesses for the Committee shall be authorized to do the following:

a. Present to the Committee, at the direction of the cochairs, all information relevant to the Committee's investigation.

b. Research as directed by the cochairs, allegations relevant to the alleged unethical conduct.

c. Interview potential witnesses having information relevant to the inquiry.

d. Obtain sworn statements from persons willing to give them.

e. Prepare the presentation of information and the investigative findings to the Committee.

f. Present to the Committee a list of recommended witnesses to be called.

g. Make available, as authorized by the cochairs, to the accused member or the member's private legal counsel, affidavits to be presented to the Committee and any information which would tend to clear or lessen from blame or fault the charges against the accused member.

h. Carry out other duties as directed by the cochair.

MEMORANDUM

To: Representative Julia Howard

From: R. Daniel Boyce

Re: Status of Representative Ken Miller

This investigation was initiated by the North Carolina House Ethics Committee in accordance with the authorization of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Honorable Harold Brubaker. The Ethics Committee initiated this investigation after a complaint was filed by Representative Billy Creech. Pursuant to procedures adopted September 27, 1995, Representative Howard, as Chair of the House Ethics Committee authorized R. Daniel Boyce and his investigators to investigate any and all allegations of sexual misconduct by Representative Ken Miller alleged to have been committed since the convening of the 1995 Session of the General Assembly.

Approximately fifty (50) interviews were attempted. Approximately 43 persons agreed to be interviewed and made statements. Approximately, seven (7) persons refused to make any comment. Approximately fourteen (14) signed affidavits have been obtained. During the interview process, the individuals were not provided with the names of any potential victims or witnesses. Instead, each person being interviewed was asked if she or he had any information relevant to the investigation of Representative Ken Miller.

Representative Miller was given the opportunity to make a statement or consent to an interview. He also was given the opportunity to provide any documentation or evidence regarding his position and, per his earlier offer, the opportunity to take a polygraph. Through his attorney, Rep. Miller refused to participate in the investigation because he believes the investigation is illegal. Because Rep. Miller is represented by counsel, no attempt was made to contact him directly.

This report contains a synopsis of the interviews conducted. It does not contain a list of possible contradictions in statements or evidence which may possibly be construed as exculpatory. This report is not meant to be a full and complete statement of the results of the investigation but instead is a report of the preliminary findings to the Ethics Committee. If the Committee decides to proceed on any charges, it is recommended that the affidavits and reports of interviews be provided in their entirety to Representative Miller or his attorney so that they can determine what information should be presented in rebuttal to any charges brought.

I. Complaint Relating to Page of House of Representatives

Page #1, age 16, furnished a statement regarding unsolicited statements and physical contact made by Rep. Ken Miller. Page #1 was a page during the week of July 9 through July 15, 1995. In essence, Page #1 claims that the following incidents occurred during that week:

1. During the week of July 9, 1995, Page # 1 was leaving the Page's Office to go on the House Floor. As she was leaving the Page's Office, Rep. Miller asked her to hold on or wait as he closed the door to the page office to within three inches of full closure. Once the door was closed, he said to her, "I just want you to know that my attraction for you is strictly physical." She walked away because she did not know whether he was kidding or was serious.

2. During the week of July 9, 1995, Page #1 was sitting in the back of the House on the left side when Rep. Miller came to her, sat down and asked for her telephone number. Page #1 initially refused and Rep. Miller asked her why. Page #1 asked why Rep. Miller wanted her telephone number and he replied, "I'd like to call you sometime."

3. During the week of July 9, 1995, Page #1 was assigned phone duty at Rep. Miller's office. Rep. Miller came into the office. Page #1 was seated at the secretary's desk. He came behind her and was standing looking over her shoulder. Rep. Miller said, "I like that dress. Did you wear it for me?" Page #1 denied wearing the dress for Rep. Miller. Rep. Miller started rubbing her back, and as he did, he was looking over her shoulder toward the front of her dress. Page #1 decided to leave, and as he shook her hand, he took her hand, put it up to his lips and with his tongue and lips gave her a "French type kiss" on her hand. Page #1 stated that her hand was wet from the kiss. She indicated she was offended by this conduct. Page #1 indicated that she in no way was interested in Rep. Miller and did not flirt with him or anyone else.

Page #1 had reported this incident to a number of individuals including staff members of the Page's Office, Sergeant at Arms Office, Speaker's Office and her sponsor during the same week of the incidents. Those three individuals confirmed that Page #1 told them of two or more of the incidents: that she was kissed in Rep. Miller's office on the hand in a French kiss style which she was not pleased with; Rep. Miller had requested her telephone number on the House floor; and Rep. Miller had isolated the young lady in the page's office and by her account had stated he was physically attracted to her. Page #1 had earlier revealed some portions of the above allegations to two other Pages. Those Pages confirmed Page #1 made similar statements to them. Some of the witnesses who may have been present were unable to recall hearing certain statements that were alleged to have been made.

Rep. Miller was confronted about the allegations by representatives of the Speaker's Office and by another Representative. When confronted with these statements, Rep. Miller initially denied any improper conduct. Rep. Miller was directly asked did you kiss the page's hand? Rep. Miller confirmed that he had kissed her hand. Rep. Miller was asked if he asked the page for her telephone number. Rep. Miller also said yes. At least one of those three individuals also stated that Rep. Miller explained this happened because he is friendly and courtly in his manner. Rep. Miller advised that it was a no-win situation and that he would be more than willing to apologize to the page and her family. In subsequent statements to the press, Rep. Miller denied any inappropriate conduct.

II. Complaint relating to House Staff Member

House Staff Member #1, is a secretary for a House Member. House Staff Member #1 stated that during March 1995, she was working in the office of Rep. #1 when Rep. Miller came into her office inquiring as to the whereabouts of Rep. #1. Later on, when Rep. #1 had returned to the office, he asked Rep. Miller what he wanted and proceeded on into his office. Rep. Miller looked at House Staff Member #1 and stated, "I want one night with your secretary." As he was walking into Rep. #1's office, Rep. Miller turned and winked at House Staff Member #1.

House Staff Member #1 advised that after Rep. Miller had talked to Rep. #1 and was leaving the office, Rep. Miller leaned across House Staff Member #1's desk and said, "Make that two nights." House Staff Member #1 stated she was upset by Rep. Miller's comments and asked him, "Aren't you married?" House Staff Member #1 advised Rep. Miller responded by saying, "I'm just kidding."

Approximately one week later, Rep. Miller came by to Rep. #1's office when House Staff Member #1 was alone, stepped into the door way and said, "Have you thought about my offer?" House Staff Member #1 stated she responded to Rep. Miller's comment by saying, "Excuse me!" Rep. Miller then replied, "The one I made you last week." House Staff Member #1 further advised she told Rep. Miller she had a boyfriend to let Rep. Miller know she was not interested in his comments. At that point in time, House Staff Member #1 indicated Rep. Miller made some comment about knowing the difference between lust and love. House Staff Member #1 was quite upset about this incident and reported it to Rep. #1. Rep. #1 advised Rep. Miller never to come into the office again.

Two legislative staff employees indicated that House Staff Member #1 had told them about the incident soon after the incidents occurred. Rep. #1 confirmed that he partly heard what Rep. Miller had said and that he did not hear the entire statement but remembered something about a night.

III. Complaints Relating to Female Lobbyists

During the course of the investigation, information was provided that three lobbyists with the North Carolina General Assembly might also have had information about inappropriate comments or conduct by Rep. Miller. The investigators were told that certain individuals may be willing to provide information regarding offensive comments or conduct by Rep. Miller to female Lobbyists.

Lobbyist #1 was interviewed. She indicated that she had had dinner with Rep. Miller to discuss pending legislation. This was part of standard operating procedure, and there was nothing unusual about having dinner with a representative. She indicated that the dinner was very professional, and there was no inappropriate conduct during dinner. However, on the way back from the restaurant, she stated that Rep. Miller indicated he and his wife, "had an understanding" or words to that effect. She indicated she felt uncomfortable about that comment. After arriving in the parking lot, Rep. Miller's car had been left, Rep. Miller made a statement to the effect that he wished she would have worn a "shorter skirt". She indicated she felt more uncomfortable after this statement. Lobbyist #1 indicated Rep. Miller then stated that if she would like to discuss the legislation further, he was staying at room _____(blank--she does not remember the room number that was given) at the Holiday Inn. She indicated her impression was that he was extending an invitation to her to come to his hotel room. She told him their's was a business relationship, and she would prefer to keep it that way. The Lobbyist provided no other additional information.

Lobbyist #2, stated that she heard rumors concerning the matter but other than what had appeared in the local newspaper, she was aware of nothing and has no further comments to make concerning the matter.

Lobbyist #3, was interviewed. She advised she had never had any contact with Rep. Miller. She further advised that due to Rep. Miller's reputation as a "lecherous dirty old man," most of the female lobbyists avoided him. Lobbyist #3 further stated that she did not wish to comment further and did not want to be involved in Rep. Miller's investigation.

IV. Complaints Relating to Female Sergeants at Arms

During the course of the investigation, information was received that two Assistant Sergeant at Arms of the North Carolina General Assembly had information related to this investigation. The information provided was that during a conversation on Thursday (July 13) both Assistant Sergeant at Arms #1 and Assistant Sergeant at Arms #2 had said Rep. Miller had made flirtatious type statements on more than one occasion and some of his statements had occurred in the House Chamber.

Assistant Sergeant at Arms #1, was contacted and an interview was requested. Assistant Sergeant at Arms #1 stated that she had no comment on the matter and could furnish no information concerning this investigation. She stated she had no desire to be recontacted regarding the matter.

Assistant Sergeant at Arms #2 stated she personally has had no contact with Representative Miller which could be construed as a come on by him to her. Although she made statements about Representative Miller's reputation, her comments were made based on "general knowledge" or hearsay statements of others.

Dear Representative Miller:

This letter is to formally notify you that the House Ethics Committee, pursuant to authorization by the Honorable Harold J. Brubaker, Speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives, is conducting an inquiry and investigation in the matter of any acts of sexual misconduct that may have been committed by you within the course and scope of your role as a member of the House of Representatives since the convening of the 1995 General Assembly. After considering the findings of the preliminary investigation, the Committee has voted to consider specific charges against you. The notice of charges is enclosed with this letter.

In accordance with the procedures adopted by the Committee, I will proceed to schedule a hearing before the Committee during which sworn testimony of witnesses will be heard as it relates to the charges. The hearings, and matters relating to the hearings, will be conducted in accordance with the Outline of Procedures for Investigations of Unethical Activity as adopted by the Committee on September 27, 1995, including specifically the provisions of paragraphs 7 through 16. I have directed Dan Boyce, Investigative Counsel to the Committee, to comply with the provisions of the Procedures related to information to be furnished to you.

Also enclosed is a copy of the Procedures that have been adopted by the Committee which will be applicable to the hearing and a copy of the investigation report which Mr. Boyce presented to the Committee on November 15, 1995.

At this time it appears that the hearing will be scheduled to begin in the afternoon of December 7, 1995, to continue on December 11 and 12, 1995, as may be necessary to hear all the testimony. You will be sent a separate notice of the hearing dates when the dates are finalized.

Mr. Boyce has been and will continue to be responsible for the duties of other staff as set forth in Paragraph 20(c) of the Procedures. Mr. Walker Reagan and Mr. Terry Sullivan are advising the Committee as legislative staff on procedural and administrative matters under the Procedures. You should feel free to contact any of these persons or me for any questions you might have as we prepare for the hearing.

Sincerely,

NOTICE OF CHARGES OF UNETHICAL CONDUCT BY REPRESENTATIVE KEN MILLER

The House Ethics Committee, having convened for hearing on the report of preliminary investigation findings as to charges of alleged unethical conduct, hereby finds there is substantial evidence which provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that Representative Ken Miller, a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, has engaged in unethical conduct by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, or abuse of office held by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives. The Committee, by unanimous vote, hereby charges that the following conduct should be considered against Representative Ken Miller:

In or about March, 1995, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, Representative Ken Miller made unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature to a female employee of the General Assembly, and said unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature constitute unethical conduct by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, or abuse of office held by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives.

COUNT 2

In or about April, 1995, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, Representative Ken Miller made certain unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature to a female person registered and acting as a lobbyist before the North Carolina General Assembly, and such unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature constitute unethical conduct by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, or abuse of office held by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives.

During the week of July 9 through 15, 1995, Representative Ken Miller, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, made certain unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature to a 16-year old female House page. The unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments to the 16-year old female House page constitute unethical conduct by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, or abuse of office held by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives.

During the week of July 9 through 15, 1995, Representative Ken Miller, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, made certain unsolicited and inappropriate physical contact with a female House page. Such conduct constitutes unethical conduct by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives; conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, or abuse of office held by a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives.

Adopted November 15, 1995.

Dear Representative Howard:

Your Committee has labored long and hard as a result of actions and statements on my part which I deeply regret. These actions have embarrassed the North Carolina House of Representatives as well as certain individuals including a former page of the North Carolina House of Representatives, a clerk for a fellow Representative and a Lobbyist to the North Carolina General Assembly. I apologize to those individuals for the inappropriate and unsolicited actions and statements I made in their presence. I request that this letter be provided to those individuals as my direct apology to them and as an expression of my deep regret. I realize these statements and actions constitute conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives. I apologize to the members of the House.

It was never my intention to create feelings of ill will. I am often very aggressive in my nature and during my service in the legislature, I often approached matters with that same aggressiveness. In doing so, I may have misspoken, but my intentions were never malicious.

I willingly accept whatever action the House Ethics Committee may recommend to the House and whatever action the House decides is appropriate. I waive any presentation of evidence before the North Carolina House Ethics Committee. I seek to normalize the matter as quickly as possible. It is my sincere hope that in the best interest of all parties involved, we can now move forward and put this matter behind us.

Sincerely,

Representative Ken James Miller

HOUSE RESOLUTION 96-RUZ-002(ETHICS)
THIS IS A DRAFT 7-DEC-95 17:21:20

Sponsors: House Ethics Committee

Referred to:

A HOUSE RESOLUTION CENSURING REPRESENTATIVE KEN MILLER FOR STATEMENTS AND ACTIONS THAT CONSTITUTE CONDUCT UNBECOMING AND UNFITTING FOR A MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives:

Section 1. Whereas, as authorized by the Speaker, the House Ethics Committee conducted an investigation into the conduct of Representative Ken J. Miller since the convening of the 1995 General Assembly, said investigation having been initiated by a complaint made by Representative Billy Creech to the Committee; and

Whereas, the Committee undertook to have the conduct of Representative Ken J. Miller investigated; and

Whereas, the results of the investigation were presented to the Committee; and

Whereas, as of result of the investigation report, the Committee charged Representative Ken J. Miller with four counts of unethical conduct by a member of the House of Representatives, conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the House of Representatives, or abuse of office held by a member of the House of Representatives, which the Committee determined should be considered against Representative Ken J. Miller; and

Whereas, following the presentment of charges to him, Representative Ken J. Miller acknowledged by letter that his statements and actions were inappropriate and constituted conduct unbecoming or unfitting for a member of the House of Representatives, and waived the presentment of evidence on the charges; and

Whereas, the Committee found that in or about March, 1995, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, Representative Ken Miller made unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature to a female employee of the General Assembly; and

Whereas, the Committee found that in or about April, 1995, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, Representative Ken Miller made certain unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature to a female person registered and acting as a lobbyist before the North Carolina General Assembly; and

Whereas, the Committee found that during the week of July 9 through 15, 1995, Representative Ken Miller, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, made certain unsolicited and inappropriate remarks and comments of a sexual nature to a 16-year old female House page; and

Whereas, the Committee found that during the week of July 9 through 15, 1995, Representative Ken Miller, while serving as a Representative of the North Carolina House of Representatives, made certain unsolicited and inappropriate physical contact with a female House page; and

Whereas, the Committee found that the conduct of Representative Ken J. Miller constituted conduct unbecoming and unfitting for a member of the House of Representatives; and

Whereas, the Committee found that the appropriate sanction against Representative Ken J. Miller for his conduct is censure by the House,

Therefore, Representative Ken J. Miller is hereby censured for conduct unbecoming and unfitting for a member of the House of Representatives as found by the House Ethics Committee.

Further, Representative Ken J. Miller shall forthwith be called to the Well of the House to receive this censure, at which time this Resolution of Censure shall be read to Representative Ken J. Miller.

Sec. 2. This Resolution is effective upon adoption.

Dear Secretary Benton:

After concluding a recent personnel investigation of a Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) employee, various administrative control issues pertinent to that investigation came to our attention requiring management's consideration. These issues are addressed individually in this report.

Introduction

Scope. The scope of this investigation included an independent review of (1) the facts regarding a commitment letter for State funds written by the Director of the Office of Rural Health and Community Care (formerly known as the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development) as a result of his relationship with Representative Thomas E. Wright; (2) payments made by DHHS to Representative Thomas E. Wright in his capacity as a member of the Minority Health Advisory Council, or any other legislative mandated council or committee and any organizations that Representative Wright was affiliated with from July 1, 2000 through May 31, 2007; and (3) contractual payments made to Representative Wright and any organizations that Representative Wright was affiliated with from July 1, 2000 through May 31, 2007 by the North Carolina Foundation for Advanced Health Programs, Inc. (a DHHS-related foundation).

Results of the Investigation

Commitment Letter. Our investigation confirmed the existence of the March 15, 2002 commitment letter referred to by Ms. Kim Strach (State Board of Elections Investigator) during a North Carolina Board of Elections hearing on May 15, 2007. The commitment letter was written by Torlen L. Wade, Acting Director of the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development and addressed to Thomas E. Wright, Chairman of the Community's Health Foundation. The letter stated that the Community's Health Foundation was trying to convert a building located in Wilmington, North Carolina into a History Museum and offices for the Community's Health Foundation and the New Hanover Community Health Center. The letter states that Mr. Wade, Acting Director of the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development endorsed the project and committed $150,000 in support of the project.

Our investigation disclosed the following:

- We were able to verify that the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development did not have funds available to support this commitment at the time the letter was written by Mr. Wade in his capacity as Acting Director.
- We located a copy of the signed commitment letter along with a printed copy of an e-mail from Representative Wright's legislative assistant (Vanda Wilson-Wormack) that directed Mr. Wade to include specific language in the commitment letter and instructions on where to send the letter.
- We did not identify any additional areas of possible inappropriate activities concerning Mr. Wade's interactions as an employee of DHHS with Representative Wright or any of his affiliated organizations.

DHHS payments made to Representative Wright. Our investigation confirmed the existence of payments made to Representative Wright reimbursing him for mileage and/or subsistence (meals and lodging) for attending Minority Health Advisory Council meetings, Public Health Task Force meetings and the African-American Health Summit. Of the 19 payments (Exhibit 1) made to Representative Wright during the period July 1, 2000 through May 31, 2007, we noted the following:

- Eight instances where Representative Wright received subsistence and/or mileage reimbursement from DHHS as well as from the General Assembly for the same time period.
- Two instances where Representative Wright received subsistence ($104/day) reimbursement from DHHS although the Office of Minority Health and Health Disparities paid for his lodging directly.
- Two instances where Representative Wright appears to have claimed excessive mileage (380 miles) reimbursement for attending Minority Health Advisory Council meetings in Raleigh. Using freely available mileage charts, the mileage from Representative Wright's home to Raleigh meeting sites is approximately 260 miles. The General Assembly pays Representative Wright for one round trip (280 miles) per week for attending General Assembly functions.
- Representative Wright received excess reimbursement when he submitted two different mileage reimbursement requests for attending the same Public Health Task Force meeting.

The State Bureau of Investigation (SBI) and appropriate law enforcement agencies should determine whether the questionable mileage and subsistence reimbursements totaling $1,404.71 that Representative Wright received violated any general statutes and/or Office of State Budget and Management (OSBM) travel policies/regulations. In addition, the Office of the Attorney General should review the questionable payments ($1,404.71) made to Representative Wright to determine which agency is ultimately responsible for approval and payments made to members of the General Assembly who are legislative appointed members of the Minority Health Advisory Council (MHAC) and other councils/committees.

Use of signature stamp. During our review of travel and subsistence reimbursements paid to Representative Wright for attending various Minority Health Advisory Council meetings, we noted that a signature stamp of Representative Wright had been used to sign several of the reimbursement forms. Representative Wright is the current Chairman of the Minority Health Advisory Council and the administrative support for the council's activities is provided by the Office of Minority Health and Health Disparities. We contacted Mrs. Barbara Pullen-Smith, Executive Director of the Office of Minority Health and Health Disparities, and questioned the existence, location and authorization for use of the signature stamp. She stated that her administrative staff did have the signature stamp in their possession. She further stated that Representative Wright authorized the use of the signature stamp. While the use of a signature stamp for authorized correspondence would be acceptable, the use of a signature stamp on travel reimbursement forms represents an internal control weakness. In addition, original signatures of the person requesting the travel reimbursement and of the person approving the reimbursement request are required on all DHHS travel reimbursement forms.

We identified eight reimbursement requests where the signature stamp was used to claim reimbursement. We reviewed the meeting minutes for committee meetings when the stamp was used to verify that Representative Wright attended the function. We were able to verify his attendance at those meetings.

North Carolina Foundation for Advanced Health Programs, Inc. payments to Representative Wright. During our review of the DHHS-related Foundation's records for any inappropriate relationships/activities with DHHS employees and/or Representative Wright, we discovered six instances of billing for services provided to the Foundation by Representative Wright while acting as a private consultant to that organization. Four of those billings were submitted from Representative Wright's legislative ~~assistant's legislative e-mail ac~~count.

We requested that the Foundation furnish a copy of the contractual agreement between itself and Representative Wright, however, ~~the Foundation was unable to locate the contract~~. The Foundation stated that Representative Wright's 2002/2003 contract was for assistance in developing "Access III of Lower Cape Fear", a collaborative network of primary care physicians, hospitals, health departments and departments of social services in the Wilmington area, which now consists of six counties. The Foundation provided supporting documentation detailing payments to Representative Wright of $19,000 in 2002 and $16,000 in 2003. However, we were unable to verify the accuracy of the payments with the terms of the missing contract.

Our review also disclosed that Representative Wright was:

- a director for the New Hanover Community Health Center's Board of Directors for the fiscal year July 1, 2001 through June 30, 2002,
- and the Chairperson of the New Hanover Community Health Center's Board of Directors for the two-year period from July 1, 2002 through June 30, 2004.

Recommendations

- For the period July 1, 2000 through May 31, 2007, Representative Wright appears to have been over reimbursed $1,404.71 (Exhibit 1) by the Department for travel and subsistence. The State Bureau of Investigation (SBI) and appropriate law enforcement agencies should determine whether the questionable mileage and subsistence reimbursements totaling $1,404.71 that Representative Wright received violated any general statutes and/or Office of State Budget and Management (OSBM) travel policies/regulations.
- We recommend that DHHS management request a review by the Office of the Attorney General of the questionable payments ($1,404.71) made to Representative Wright. The purpose of the review will be to determine which agency is ultimately responsible for approval and payments made to members of the General Assembly who are legislative appointed members of the Minority Health Advisory Council (MHAC) and other councils/ committees.
- We recommend that the Office of Minority Health and Health Disparities should immediately stop using the "signature stamp" of Representative Wright, and any other person for any reimbursement requests made. Original signatures of the person requesting the travel reimbursement and of the person approving the reimbursement request are required on all DHHS travel reimbursement forms.
- We recommend that the North Carolina Foundation for Advanced Health Programs, Inc. (a DHHS-related foundation) maintain a permanent file of all contracts that it enters into. All consultant contracts with members of the General Assembly and/or DHHS employees should be reviewed for potential conflicts of interest and compliance with ethics legislation, general statutes and North Carolina travel policies.
- Until the determinations are rendered by the Office of the Attorney General, SBI and appropriate law enforcement agencies regarding the subsistence and mileage payments made to Representative Wright, we recommend that DHHS management consider implementing the following additional control procedure:

  DHHS reimbursements paid to members of the General Assembly that serve on supported commissions, councils and committees should be submitted on a periodic basis to the Financial Services section within the Administrative Division of the General Assembly's Legislative Services Office for their review to minimize the potential for inappropriate/duplicate payments.

If you have further questions, please advise the DHHS Office of the Internal Auditor.

Torlen,

Per our conversation, the letter of endorsement should be addressed to Chairman Thomas E. Wright, Community's Health Foundation, Inc. 322 South 17th Street Wilmington, NC 28401.

The language should include $150,000 in funding to be received no later than July or August.

The building will be located on the 900 block of 4th Street and will be used as office space for the Community's Health Foundation, Inc. Upon completion of the expansion project of the New Hanover Community Health Center, an effort would be made to convert the building into a History Museum.

Please fax the letter of endorsement to (910) 343-3339 and mail the hard copy to Community's Health Foundation
322 South 17th Street
Wilmington, NC 28401.

If you have any further questions or comments, please call the office at (919) 733-5754 or (910) 232-1007.

Thanks

Wilmington, NC 28401

Dear Mr. Wright:

On behalf of the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development, I am writing to enthusiastically endorse the Community's Health Foundation's effort to convert the building located on the 900 block of 4th Street into Foundation offices, New Hanover Community Health Center offices and into a History Museum.

With this endorsement, the Office is committing $150,000 in funding toward the completion of this conversion project. The funding will be awarded by June 30, 2002.

We wish you all the best as you embark on this important project.

Sincerely,

Torlen L. Wade
Acting Director

N.C. Const. art. II, § 20 (2007)

Sec. 20. Powers of the General Assembly

Each house shall be judge of the qualifications and elections of its own members, shall sit upon its own adjournment from day to day, and shall prepare bills to be enacted into laws. The two houses may jointly adjourn to any future day or other place. Either house may, of its own motion, adjourn for a period not in excess of three days.

NOTES:
HISTORY. --The provisions of the first two sentences of this section are similar to those of Art. II, § 22, Const. 1868.

CASE NOTES

EFFECT OF SECTION. --This section withdraws from the consideration of the courts the question of title involved in a contest for a seat in the General Assembly. State ex rel. Alexander v. Pharr, 179 N.C. 699, 103 S.E. 8 (1920); State ex rel. Bouldin v. Davis, 197 N.C. 731, 150 S.E. 507 (1929), decided under Art. II, § 22, Const. 1868.

BUDGET PROCESS. --The Constitution mandates a three-step process with respect to the State's budget: (1) N.C. Const., Art. III, § 5(3), directs that the "Governor shall prepare and recommend to the General Assembly a comprehensive budget . . . for the ensuing fiscal period"; (2) this Article vests in the General Assembly the power to enact a budget (one recommended by the Governor or one of its own making); and (3) after the General Assembly enacts a budget, N.C. Const., Art. III, § 5(3), then provides that the Governor shall administer the budget "as enacted by the General Assembly." In re Powers, 295 S.E.2d 589 (N.C. 1982).

Subj. Definition of Probable Cause

The rules state that the Committee must determine by a majority vote of Committee members present and voting whether there is probable cause to believe that Representative Wright has committed unethical or unlawful conduct. This document explains how probable cause is defined generally and in North Carolina.

I. Black's Law Dictionary

The criminal law definition of probable cause is: "A reasonable ground to suspect that a person has committed or is committing a crime or that a place contains specific items connected with a crime." The probable cause requirement is more than a bare suspicion, but less evidence than would justify a conviction in a criminal case. Black's Law Dictionary, 8th Ed. at 1239.

The civil law definition of probable cause is: "A reasonable belief in the existence of facts on which a claim is based and in the legal validity of the claim itself." Black's Law Dictionary, 8th Ed. at 1239.

II. Attorney Discipline- The North Carolina Administrative Code

In the area of attorney discipline, the Grievance Committee of the North Carolina State Bar determines whether there is probable cause to believe that an attorney is guilty of misconduct justifying disciplinary action. 27 NCAC 1B.0113(a).

The State Bar has defined probable cause in the North Carolina Administrative Code as "a finding . . . that there is reasonable cause to believe that a member of the NCAC 1B.0103(37).

III. The North Carolina Pattern Jury Instructions- Criminal

"A reasonable ground of suspicion supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious person in the belief that the person accused is guilty of the offense charged." N.C.P.I. 100.10—Crim.--Grand Jury Charge at 4.

Two-part test for probable cause:

1. Was unlawful or unethical conduct committed?

AND

2. Did the accused legislator probably commit the unlawful or unethical conduct?

IV. Staff's Recommended Standard for Determining Probable Cause

A reasonable cause to believe that Representative Wright committed unlawful or unethical conduct justifying disciplinary action by the House.

Is it reasonable to believe that (1) unlawful or unethical conduct was probably committed and (2) Representative Wright probably committed the unlawful or unethical conduct?

Probable Cause- Draft Presentation (1-8-08 revised)

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Members of the Committee. Good afternoon. My name is Brad Krehely. I am a staff attorney with the Research Division and co-counsel to this Committee. I am here to talk about what probable cause is.

Before explaining what probable cause is, it is important to understand where we are under the rules. We are under Rule C. 5. of the Rules—Presentment of preliminary investigation findings. Today, you will hear the findings of the preliminary investigation and if warranted, adopt specific charges of unethical or unlawful conduct.

The rules state that the Committee must determine by a majority vote of Committee members present and voting whether there is probable cause to believe that Representative Wright has committed unethical or unlawful conduct.

So, what is probable cause?

1. We can start by pointing out what probable cause is not.

Probable cause is not "proof beyond a reasonable doubt." That's the standard you would need to convict someone of a crime. That standard is too high for this stage of the proceedings. It would be even higher than the standard required by the rules to recommend action to the full House. (See Rule C.15(1)-(2)).

Probable cause is also not rumor, innuendo, or mere suspicion. That standard would be too low. Probable cause falls somewhere in the middle.

Black's Law Dictionary notes that the probable cause requirement is more than a bare suspicion, but less evidence than would justify a conviction in a criminal case.

I can tell you a few other things about probable cause.

2. Probable Cause is not defined in the Committee's rules or in the North Carolina General Statutes. It is mentioned, but not defined, in the statute governing ethics investigations by the Legislative Ethics Committee. (G.S. 120-103.1(h)). And, it is mentioned, but not defined, in many other places in the North Carolina General Statutes. (See appendix).

Having said that, we can get an idea of what probable cause is by looking to other sources.

4. We can look very generally to Black's Law Dictionary. It gives a definition of probable cause in both the criminal and the civil contexts, and both definitions focus on "reasonableness."

The criminal law definition of probable cause is this: "A reasonable ground to suspect that a person has committed or is committing a crime or that a place contains specific items connected with a crime." Black's Law Dictionary, 8th Ed. at 1239 (emphasis added).

The civil law definition of probable cause is: "A reasonable belief in the existence of facts on which a claim is based and in the legal validity of the claim itself."

Once again, there is some emphasis on "reasonableness." The common words in both definitions are (1) "a reasonable ground to suspect" [that a crime has been committed] and (2) "a reasonable belief in the existence of facts" [on which a claim is based].

5. General definitions are helpful, but what may be even more significant is how "probable cause" is used in a context similar to these proceedings.

In the area of attorney discipline, the Grievance Committee of the North Carolina State Bar determines whether there is probable cause to believe that an attorney is guilty of misconduct justifying disciplinary action. 27 NCAC 1B.0113(a).

The State Bar has defined probable cause in the North Carolina Administrative Code as "a finding . . . that there is reasonable cause to believe that a member of the North Carolina State Bar is guilty of misconduct justifying disciplinary action." 27 NCAC 1B.0103(37).

This definition equates "probable cause" with "reasonable cause to believe."

6. Perhaps the most straightforward definition of probable cause appears in the North Carolina Pattern Jury Instructions.

The North Carolina Pattern Jury Instructions are samples of instructions that judges read to juries in both civil and criminal cases. A committee of 10 Superior Court judges (The Pattern Jury Instruction Committee) writes and updates these instructions each year. The instructions are designed to give guidance to juries.

The term "probable case" is defined in the pattern jury instructions. The pattern jury instructions give a "legalese" definition, but then mention a simple two part test.

The legalese definition of probable cause is "a reasonable ground of suspicion supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious person in the belief that the person accused is guilty of the offense charged." N.C.P.I. 100.10—Grand Jury Charge.

a. The Pattern Jury Instructions also give a simple two-part test for determining probable cause. If you applied the two part test to these proceedings, you would ask:

1. Was unlawful or unethical conduct committed?

AND

2. Did the accused legislator probably commit the unlawful or unethical conduct?

I think that if you can answer "yes" to those two questions that you would find probable cause. If the answer to one or both of those questions is "no", then you would not.

Conclusion- So, what is the test for finding probable cause?

1. We know that probable cause is not "proof beyond a reasonable doubt" because that standard would be too high. And, we know that probable cause is not "rumor or innuendo" because that standard would be too low.

2. We know that several definitions of probable cause focus on "reasonableness." Some examples are:

"A reasonable ground to suspect" [that a crime has been committed][criminal].

"A reasonable belief in the existence of facts" [on which a claim is based][civil].

"Reasonable cause to believe [that a member of the North Carolina State Bar is guilty of misconduct justifying disciplinary action]."

3. Based on the circumstances where probable cause is used in North Carolina, the staff recommends that you adopt as your probable cause standard the following:

"A reasonable cause to believe that Representative Wright committed unlawful or unethical conduct justifying disciplinary action by the House."

We recommend that you apply this standard by answering two questions: Is it reasonable to believe that

1. unlawful or unethical conduct was committed
   AND
2. Representative Wright probably committed the unlawful or unethical conduct?

I think that if you can answer "yes" to those two questions that you would find probable cause. If the answer to one or both of those questions is "no", then you would not. I appreciate your attention and would be happy to answer any questions you might have.

Appendix
List of Places Where Probable Cause is Used

Criminal Law-

1. Grand Juries- No person put on trial for a felony w/out the person's consent unless a grand jury indicts. To establish probable cause, a grand jury must find that a crime has been committed and defendant probably committed the crime. N.C.P.I. –Crim. 100.10 at 1, 4.

2. 4th Amendment Search and Seizure Law-

a. Probable cause to search-

(1) The 4th Amendment allows probable cause to search if a person of ordinary caution would be justified in believing that what is sought will be found in the place to be searched. State v. Rogers, 588 S.E.2d 481 (N.C. Ct. App. 2003).

b. Using an informant's tip- Probable cause is determined by using a totality of the circumstances analysis. State v. Martinez, 150 N.C. App. 364.

3. Standard to Make an Arrest-

Arrest for DWI- A reasonable and prudent person, acting in good faith, could have a reasonable ground to believe that the defendant committed the misdemeanor offense of driving while impaired or there was a fair probability that defendant committed the offense. State v. Crawford, 125 N.C. App. 279, 480 S.E.2d 422 (1997).

Criminal Contempt- When charged with criminal contempt, a person can be arrested if there is probable cause to believe that a person ordered to appear will not appear. G.S. 5A-16(a).

Juveniles Tried as Adults- Juveniles can be tried as adults if they commit an offense that would be felony if committed by an adult. The transfer to superior court occurs after notice, hearing, and a finding of probable cause. G.S. 7B-2200.

Civil Law

1. Disciplining of Lawyers-

The Grievance Committee of the State Bar will determine whether there is probable cause to believe that an attorney is guilty of misconduct justifying disciplinary action. NC. Admin Code Tit. 27, ch.1, subch. 1B, Rule.0113(a).

"Probable Cause"- a finding by the Grievance Committee that there is reasonable cause to believe that a member of the North Carolina State Bar is guilty of misconduct justifying disciplinary action.

See also G.S. 84-28.1(b)-(b1)

2. Disciplining of Real Estate Brokers- If it finds probable cause that a licensee has violated G.S. 93A-6, the Real Estate Commission may hold a hearing on allegations of misconduct. G.S. 93A-6.

3. Challenging a person's right to vote- The county board of elections must schedule a preliminary hearing. They take testimony under oath and receive evidence from the challenger. If the county board of elections finds probable cause that the person is not qualified to vote, the board must schedule a hearing. G.S. 163-85(b). [No cases on point defining probable cause and not in the statute].

4. Malicious Prosecution- (appears to be less on point because this is not probable cause to move to an evidentiary hearing). This is where you bring a civil claim because someone unnecessarily brought a criminal prosecution against you OR where someone brought a civil proceedings which involve arrest of a person, seizure of property, or the loss of a legally protected right. Carver v. Lykes, 262 N.C. 345, 137 S.E.2d 139 (1964).

The elements of the offense are:

1. The institution or procurement of the institution of a proceeding against plaintiff.

2. Malice.

3. Want of probable cause.

4. Termination of the prosecution or proceeding in plaintiff's favor.

Best v. Duke University, 337 N.C. 742, 448 S.E.2d 506 (1994).

"Probable cause" in malicious prosecution cases- The existence of certain facts and circumstances, known at the time as would induce a reasonable man to commence the earlier proceeding. Hill v. Hill, 142 N.C. App. 524, 545 S.E.2d 442, rev'd on other grounds, 354 N.C. 348, 553 S.E.2d 679 (2001). The test is whether a man of ordinary prudence and intelligence under the circumstances have known that the charge had no reasonable foundation. Koury v. John Meyer of Norwich, 44 N.C. App. 392, 261 S.E. 2d 271 (1980).

Representative Thomas Wright

Dear Mr. Reagan:

I would be grateful if you would make sure that his Motion comes to the attention of Chairman Rick Glazier and the Legislative Ethics Committee. I am informed by the District Attorney that this matter will be coming to trial in the early summer in Wake County Criminal Superior Court so I do not feel that there is an urgency for the Committee to step into this Constitutional quagmire. Thank you.

Respectfully submitted,

NORTH CAROLINA GENERAL ASSEMBLY,

v.

REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS WRIGHT

MOTION TO CONTINUE AND MOTION TO HOLD IN ABEYANCE

COMES NOW the Respondent, Representative Thomas Wright, and hereby moves the Legislative Ethics Committee to continue this matter and to hold the matter in abeyance pending the resolution of the criminal charges. In support of said Motion, Respondent shows the following:

1. The ethics charge being considered by The Committee against Representative Thomas Wright is substantially the same as one of the charges pending against him in Wake County Superior Court. That charge has a Constitutionally-guaranteed right of jury trial and will be determined by a jury later this year.

2. If the Legislative proceeding goes forward, the proceeding can and will do great harm to the criminal process and will raise substantial Constitutional issues.

3. If the Committee goes forward, the proceeding also risks a Constitutionally unacceptable dilemma in which the Legislature might vote to remove Thomas Wright for violations and then a jury may find him not guilty of precisely the same charges. This would raise due process issues under both the North Carolina and the United States Constitutions and could do grave damage to the democratic process.

WHEREFORE, the Respondent moves the Legislative Ethics Committee to continue this matter and to hold in abeyance any hearing or attempted resolution of any of its charges against the Respondent until after the criminal charges pending in Wake County Superior Court are heard by a jury.

This the 8th day of January, 2008.

Respondent.	)

The Respondent in the above captioned matter, Representative Thomas Wright, hereby responds to the ethics allegations contained in a complaint issued by the North Carolina Joint Legislative Ethics Committee on December 11, 2007 and served upon him, by certified mail, on December 26, 2007 by showing the following:

1. Respondent specifically denies that any contacts and interactions with Torlen Wade on either March 13, 2002 or March 15, 2002 occurred while Respondent was acting or serving in his capacity as a member of the North Carolina General Assembly and/or that his contacts and interactions with Torlen Wade were improper, illegal or unethical.

2. The conduct alleged in the Ethics complaint does not constitute ethical and/or criminal conduct over which the Legislative Ethics Committee has jurisdiction to consider.

3. Merely soliciting and/or obtaining a letter from a State employee which contains untrue information does not constitute a criminal and/or ethical violation.

4. Respondent did not use nor intend to use a letter which was obtained from a State Employee to obtain a loan, grant or other funding for the Community Health Foundation.

5. The allegations contained in the complaint does not constitute conduct committed by a Legislator who was acting within his official capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process.

6. The Legislative Ethics Committee is barred from considering the allegations contained in the complaint due to the expiration of the Statute of Limitations and/or laches in that the Committee has failed to allege and consider this matter in a timely manner.

7. The allegations contained in the complaint involves conduct which did not constitute a criminal and/or ethical violation at the time that it was allegedly committed and the Legislative Ethics Committee consideration of this complaint at this time violates the State and Federal Constitutions..

8. The conduct alleged in the complaint involves conduct which was allegedly committed

8. The conduct alleged in the complaint involves conduct which was allegedly committed during a past and closed session of the North Carolina General Assembly and said conduct did not violate any ethics rules and constitute criminal conduct at that time. Neither the Legislative Ethics Committee nor the House Select Committee can constitutionally be empowered to investigate conduct committed during past legislative sessions of the North Carolina General Assembly.

9. The creation of the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee and actions which it has taken in this matter by initiating misconduct allegations against the Respondent, prosecuting those allegations and determining their validity violate State and federal Constitutional Rights of Due Process and Equal Protection.

10. The creation of the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee and actions which it has taken in this matter by initiating misconduct allegations against the Respondent, prosecuting those allegations and determining their validity violates Article II, Section 20 of the North Carolina Constitution in that members of the North Carolina Senate are unlawfully involved in the investigation and prosecution of this complaint.

11. The actions of the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee violate Article VI, Section 8 by seeking to disqualify Respondent from a legislative office in the North Carolina House of representatives to which he was duly elected where he has not been convicted or adjudged guilty, by any competent authority, of treason, a felony, corruption or malpractice in office nor has he been removed from office by impeachment.

WHEREFORE, the Respondent, after responding to the complaint issued by the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee, respectfully moves to dismiss this matter, or, in the alternative, suspend any further proceedings or actions regarding this matter until criminal charges which have been lodged against the Respondent in the Wake County Superior Court have been resolved.

Dear Ms. Weeks:

Pursuant to the authority granted to me in NCGS § 120-37(d) and House Rule 45(c), I authorize you to serve as the repository for filings arising out of the House Select Committee to Investigate Alleged Misconduct and Other Matters Included in Indictments Against Representative Thomas E. Wright. Upon receipt of any filings, please time date them and submit a copy to the Committee staff, as designated by Representative Glazier, Chair of the Committee. Until the Committee concludes its business, you will serve as the custodian of the originals for the purpose of the Public Records Act (Chapter 132 of the General Statutes). Upon the conclusion of the Committee's business, deliver the originals to the Committee Clerk for inclusion in the official record of the Committee. At that time, your responsibilities as custodian of the records will terminate.

I recognize these are additional responsibilities, and I appreciate your willingness to serve in this capacity.

Very truly yours,

Joe Hackney

Expulsion, Censure, Reprimand, and Fine: Legislative Discipline in the House of Representatives

Summary

The House of Representatives is expressly authorized within the United States Constitution (Article I, Section 5, clause 2) to discipline or "punish" its own Members. This authority of the institution of the House to discipline a Member for "disorderly Behaviour" is in addition to any criminal or civil liability that a Member of the House may incur for particular misconduct, and is a device or procedure designed not so much as merely a punishment of the individual Member, but rather ultimately as a measure to protect the institutional integrity of the House of Representatives, its proceedings and its reputation.

Congressional discipline of a Member by the House of Representatives is done by the House itself, without the necessity of Senate concurrence, and may take several forms. The most common forms of discipline in the House are now "expulsion," "censure," or "reprimand," although the House may also discipline its Members in others ways, including fine or monetary restitution, loss of seniority, and suspension or loss of certain privileges. In addition to such sanctions imposed by the full House of Representatives, the standing committee in the House dealing with ethics and official conduct matters, the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, is authorized by House Rules to issue a formal Committee reproach in the form of a "Letter of Reproval" for misconduct which does not rise to the level of consideration or sanction by the entire House of Representatives. Additionally, such Committee has also expressed its disapproval of conduct in informal letters and communications to Members.

The House may generally discipline its Members for violations of statutory law, including crimes; for violations of internal congressional rules; or for any conduct which the House of Representatives finds has reflected discredit upon the institution. Thus, each House of Congress has disciplined its own Members for conduct which has not necessarily violated any specific rule or law, but which was found to breach its privileges, demonstrate contempt for the institution, or which was found to discredit the House or Senate. When the most severe sanction of expulsion has been employed in the House, however, the conduct has historically involved either disloyalty to the United States Government, or the violation of ac riminal law involving the abuse of one's official position, such as bribery.

Expulsion, Censure, Reprimand, and Fine: Legislative Discipline in the House of Representatives

Background

Each House of the United States Congress is expressly authorized within the Constitution to "punish" its own Members for misconduct. In imposing legislative discipline against its Members, the House operates through its rule making powers,[1] and the express provision for legislative discipline is set out along with Congress' rule-making authority in Article I, Section 5, clause 2, of the Constitution:

> Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

Concerning legislative discipline, it should be emphasized that the underlying justification for this action has traditionally been to protect the integrity and dignity of the legislative institution and its proceedings, rather than merely to punish an individual,[2] and that such internal legislative process is additional to any potential criminal or civil liability that a Member might incur for any particular misconduct.[3] Members of Congress, like any other persons in the United States, are subject generally to outside law enforcement and criminal prosecution if their misconduct constitutes a violation of federal, State, or local criminal law. Unlike members of the legislatures or parliaments of many foreign nations, there is no general immunity from all criminal prosecution for Members of the United States Congress during their Internal disciplinary action is "rooted in the judgment of the House as to what was necessary or appropriate for it to do to assure the integrity of its legislative performance and its institutional acceptability to the people at large as a serious and responsible instrument of government." Deschler's Precedents, supra at 174, citing *Powell v. Erskine May, Law, Privileges, Proceedings and Usage of Parliament, at 105 (London 1964).

[3] House ethics action does not foreclose a criminal prosecution on the same matter. United States v. Rose, 28 F.3d 181, 189-190 (D.C.Cir. 1994); 2 Ops. Atty. Gen. 655 (1834).

tenure in office. Rather, Members of Congress have a fairly limited immunity from outside prosecution for "Speech or Debate" in either House of Congress.[4]

Members of the House of Representatives are subject to internal, congressional discipline for any conduct which the institution of the House believes warrants such discipline. The express constitutional authority drafted by the Framers of the Constitution was drawn from the British parliamentary practice, as well as from our own colonial legislative experience, and reflects the principle and understanding that although the qualifications of Members of Congress were intentionally kept to a minimum to allow the voters the broadest discretion in sending whomever they please to represent them in Congress,[5] the institution of the House has the right to discipline those who breach its privileges or decorum, or who damage its integrity or reputation, even to the extent of expelling from Congress a duly-elected Member.[6]

Internal, congressional discipline of a Member may take several forms. The most common forms of discipline in the House of Representatives are now "expulsion," "censure," or "reprimand," although the House may also discipline its Members in others ways, including fine or monetary assessment, loss of seniority, or loss of certain privileges.[7] An "expulsion" is a removal of a Member from the House of Representatives by a two-thirds vote of the House. A "censure" or a "reprimand" is a legislative procedure where the full House, by majority vote on a simple resolution, expresses a formal disapproval of the conduct of a Member. In addition to these punishments or disciplines by the entire House of Representatives, the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct is authorized to issue, on its own accord, a "Letter of Reproval" to a Member when the Committee disapproves of conduct but makes no recommendation for legislative sanctions to the full House of Representatives.

[4]Under the "Speech or Debate" clause of the Constitution (Article I, Section 6, cl. 1), Members of Congress may not be questioned outside of Congress "for any Speech or Debate in either House," that is, they are immune from criminal or civil proceedings only for their official conduct or activities which are "an integral part of the deliberative and communicative processes by which Members participate in committee and House proceedings." Gravel v. United States, 408 U.S. 606, 625 (1972). The constitutional bar to the "Arrest" of Members during their attendance of, or "going to and returning from" a session of Congress for other than a felony or "Breach of the Peace" (Article I, Section 6, cl. 1), is an "obsolete" provision which applies only to arrests in civil suits, common in the 18th century, but does not apply to criminal arrests. Williamson v. United States, 207 U.S. 425, 446 (1908); Long v. Ansell, 293 U.S. 76 (1934); Gravel, supra at 614; Deschler's Precedents, supra at Ch. 12, § 3.1; see discussion in The Constitution of the United States, Analysis and Interpretation, S. Doc. 103-6, 103rd Cong., 1st Sess., at 127 (1996). Contrary to popular myth and misunderstanding, Members of Congress are not constitutionally immune from arrest for traffic violations under this clause.

There is no precise listing or description in the Rules of the House of Representatives of the specific types of misconduct or ethical improprieties which might subject a Member to the various potential disciplines. The Rules adopted by the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct provide simply that:

> With respect to the sanctions that the Committee may recommend, reprimand is appropriate for serious violations, censure is appropriate for more serious violations, and expulsion of a Member or dismissal of an officer or employee is appropriate for the most serious violations. A recommendation of a fine is appropriate in a case in which it is likely that the violation was committed to secure a personal financial benefit; and a recommendation of a denial or limitation of a right, power, privilege, or immunity of a Member is appropriate when the violation bears upon the exercise or holding of such right, power, privilege, or immunity.[8]

The House may discipline its Members for violations of statutory law, including crimes; for violations of internal congressional rules; or for any conduct which the House of Representatives finds has reflected discredit upon the institution.[9] Each House of Congress has disciplined its own Members for conduct which has not necessarily violated any specific rule or law, but which was found to breach its privileges, demonstrate contempt for the institution, or which was found to discredit the House or Senate;[10] when the most severe sanction of expulsion has been employed or recommended in the House, however, the conduct has historically involved either disloyalty to the United States Government, or the violation of ac riminal law involving the abuse of one's official position, such as bribery.

Expulsion

Expulsion is the form of action by which the House of Representatives, after a Member has taken the oath of office, removes that Representative from membership in the body by a vote of two-thirds of the Members present and voting.[11] An expulsion is considered a disciplinary matter and a matter of self-protection of the integrity of the institution and its proceedings, and as such is substantively and procedurally different from an "exclusion," which denies a Member-elect his or her seat by a simple majority vote of the body, prior to the Member-elect being seated (or after being seated "without prejudice" pending investigation and resolution of the matter), because of failure of the Member-elect to meet the constitutional qualifications for office (i.e., age, citizenship and inhabitancy in the State from which elected), or because of a failure to have been "duly elected"; "exclusion" is now understood not to be a disciplinary procedure.[12] A Member is "expelled" by a two-thirds vote, however, precisely for issues of misconduct, and expulsion is generally taken against a Member after the Member has been sworn into office.

Members of the United States Congress are not removed by way of an "impeachment" procedure in the legislature, as are executive and judicial officers, but are subject to the more simplified legislative process of expulsion.[13] A removal through an impeachment, it should be noted, requires the action of both Houses of Congress — impeachment in the House and trial and conviction in the Senate. An expulsion, however, is accomplished merely by the House or Senate acting alone concerning one of its own Members, without the consent or action of the other body, and without the constitutional requirement of trial and conviction.[14]

Grounds for Expulsion.

There is no limitation apparent on the face of the Constitution, nor in the deliberations of the Framers, on the authority to expel a Member of Congress, other than the two-thirds vote requirement. One study of the expulsion clause summarized the Framers' intent as follows:

> [From] the history of Article I, Section 5, clause 2, and in particular its course in the Committee of Detail, it is clear that the Framers ... did not intend to impose any limitation on Congressional power to determine what conduct warranted expulsion .... Nor do the debates in the Convention suggest any desire to impose any other substantive restrictions on the expulsion power.[15]

Justice Joseph Story similarly concluded that it would be "difficult to draw a clear line of distinction between the right to inflict the punishment of expulsion, and any other punishment upon a member, founded on the time, place, or nature or the offense," and that "expulsion may be for any misdemeanor, which, though not punishable by any statute, is inconsistent with the trust and duty of" a Member.[16]

The Supreme Court of the United States, citing Justice Story's historic treatise on the Constitution, found an expansive authority and discretion within each House of Congress concerning the grounds for expulsion. In In re Chapman, the Supreme Court noted the Senate expulsion case of Senator William Blount[17] as supporting the constitutional authority of either House of Congress to punish a Member for conduct which in the judgment of the body "is inconsistent with the trust and duty of a member" even if such conduct was "not a statutable offense nor was it committed in his official character, nor was it committed during the session of Congress, nor at the seat of government."[18] While each House of Congress has broad authority as to the grounds for an expulsion, this disciplinary action is generally understood to be reserved only for the "most serious violations."[19] As noted above, expulsions in practice in the House and Senate have traditionally involved conduct which implicated disloyalty to the Union, or the commission of a crime involving the abuse of one's office or authority.

Precedents and Practice.

The House of Representatives has actually expelled only four Members (three Members and one Member-elect) in its history, three of whom were expelled during the Civil War period in 1861 for disloyalty to the Union.[20] The fourth Member of the House to be expelled was Representative Michael J. (Ozzie) Myers, of Pennsylvania, on October 2, 1980, after his bribery conviction for receiving a payment in return for promising to use official influence on immigration bills in the so-called ABSCAM "sting operation" run by the FBI.[21]

The numbers of actual expulsions from the House may be small because some Members of the House who have been found to have engaged in serious misconduct have chosen to resign their seats in Congress (or have lost an election) before any formal action could be taken against them by the House. Thus, the House committees investigating allegations of misconduct have from time-to-time expressly recommended the expulsion of a Member, who then resigned from Congress before the expulsion vote could be taken by the full body.[22] Additionally, several other

Members of the House who might have been subject to expulsion or other legislative discipline because of misconduct either resigned from Congress before any committee recommendation was made,[23] or, soon after their misconduct became known, lost their next election (either the primary or the general election) before congressional action was completed.[24] The defeat at the polls of Members who had engaged in misconduct was precisely the principal "ethics" oversight planned by the Framers of the Constitution, who looked to the necessity of re-election to be the most efficient method of regulating Representatives' conduct. James Madison explained in the Federalist Papers that despite all the precautions taken by structural separation of powers in the Government, or by the institution of the Congress or the law, the best control of Members' conduct would be their "habitual recollection of their dependence on the people" through the "necessity of frequent elections."[25]

Although the authority and power of each House of Congress to expel appears to be within the broad discretion of the institution, policy considerations, as opposed to questions of power, have generally restrained the House in exercising the authority to expel a Member when the conduct complained of occurred prior to the time the individual was elected to be a Member of the House,[26] or when the conduct complained of occurred in a prior Congress when the electorate knew of the conduct but still re-elected the Member to the current Congress. On occasion, this restraint has been characterized, such as in dicta by the Supreme Court, as the House's "distrusting" its own "power" to expel for past misconduct.[27] While there has, in fact, in the past been some division of opinion on the subject of the House's constitutional "authority" or "right" to do so,[28] in modern congressional practice it would appear to be more accurate to say that such restraint has arisen from a questioning of the wisdom of such a policy, rather than a formal recognition of an absence of constitutional power to expel for past misconduct.

The reticence of the House to expel a Member for past misconduct after the Member has been re-elected by his or her constituents, with knowledge of the Member's conduct, appears to reflect the deference traditionally paid in our heritage to the popular will and election choice of the people.[29] Justice Story, while noting the necessity of expulsion of one who "disgrace[d] the house by the grossness of his conduct," noted that such power of the institution of the House to expel a duly-elected representative of the people is "at the same time so subversive of the rights of the people," as to require that it be used sparingly and to be "wisely guarded" by a Committee on Standards of Official Conduct recommended against expulsion of a Member, since the Member's conviction "while reflecting on his moral turpitude, does not relate to his official conduct while a Member of Congress."

[27]The Court in Powell v. McCormack, supra, in distinguishing the exclusion of Powell from an expulsion, noted that the House has "distrusted" its right to expel Members for prior conduct after they have been reelected (395 U.S. at 508), and that congressional precedents have shown that "the House will not expel a member for misconduct committed during an earlier Congress." 395 U.S. at 509, noting expulsion case of John W. Langley, H.R. Rpt. No. 30, 69th Cong., 1st Sess., 1-2 (1925). The Court noted specifically, however, that it was not ruling on Congress' authority to expel for past misconduct (395 U.S. at 507, n. 27; 510, n.30), and, in fact, Justice Douglas, in his concurrence noted specifically that "if this were an expulsion case I would think that no justiciable controversy were presented" (395 U.S. at 553), since Douglas agreed with Senator Murdock of Utah in a 1940 exclusion case that each House may "expel anyone it designates by a two-thirds vote." 395 U.S. at 558-559.

two-thirds requirement.[30] Similarly, Cushing noted that the power to expel "should be governed by the strictest justice," since in expelling a duly-elected Member without just cause "a power of control would thus be assumed by the representative body over the constituent, wholly inconsistent with the freedom of election."[31]

The distinction between the "power" of the House to expel, and the judicious use of that power as a "policy" of the House, was cogently explained in a House Judiciary Committee report in 1914:

> In the judgment of your committee, the power of the House to expel or punish by censure a Member for misconduct occurring before his election or in a preceding or former Congress is sustained by the practice of the House, sanctioned by reason and sound policy and in extreme cases is absolutely essential to enable the House to exclude from its deliberations and councils notoriously ~~corrupt men~~, who have unexpectedly and suddenly dishonored themselves and ~~betrayed~~ the public by acts and conduct rendering them unworthy of the high position of honor and trust reposed in them. ...
> But in considering this question and in arriving at the conclusions we have reached, we would not have you unmindful of the fact that we have been dealing with the question merely as one of power, and it should not be confused with the question of policy also involved. As a matter of sound policy, this extraordinary prerogative of the House, in our judgment, should be exercised only in extreme cases and always with great caution and after due circumspection, and should be invoked with greatest caution where the acts of misconduct complained of had become public previous to and were generally known at the time of the Member's election. To exercise such power in that instance the House might abuse its high prerogative, and in our opinion might exceed the just limitations of its constitutional authority by seeking to substitute its standards and ideals for the standards and ideals of the constituency of the member who had deliberately chosen him to be their Representative. The effect of such a policy would tend not to preserve but to undermine and destroy representative government.[32]

The power to expel is thus used cautiously when the institution of Congress might be seen as usurping or supplanting its own institutional judgment for the judgment of the electorate as to the character or fitness for office of an individual whom the people have chosen to represent them in Congress.[33] As noted, the principal manner of dealing with ethical improprieties or misconduct of a Representative was intended by the Framers to be, and has historically been, reliance upon the voters to keep their Members "virtuous" through the "restraint of frequent elections."[34]

Consequences of Expulsion.

Expulsion from the House of Representatives carries with it no further "automatic" penalties or disabilities beyond removal from Congress. Although the constitutions of some states provide that members expelled from their State legislatures are ineligible to be re-elected to that legislature, no such disability was included in the United States Constitution for Members of Congress. An individual who has been expelled from Congress is not ineligible to run again for that seat, or for another position in Congress. The three qualifications for congressional office — age, citizenship, and inhabitancy in the State — are established and fixed in the United States Constitution; are the exclusive qualifications to congressional office; and may not be added to or altered by the Congress via a statute or internal congressional rule, or by a state unilaterally.[35] A Member who has been expelled from Congress and subsequently re-elected may, therefore, not be "excluded" from being seated in Congress based merely on the past misconduct and subsequent congressional discipline.[36] Although in theory, a previously expelled Member re-elected to Congress could, after having been seated, be expelled by a two-thirds vote for misconduct, even past misconduct, both the House and the Senate have not, as discussed above, as a practice expelled a Member for past misconduct when the electorate knew of the conduct and still elected or re-elected the Member.

A Member who has been expelled from the House does not lose his or her Federal Government pension automatically by virtue of the expulsion. Rather, Federal Government pensions earned, vested or accumulated by officers and employees, including Members of Congress, are forfeited only upon the conviction of certain federal offenses that relate to espionage, treason, or other specific national security offenses expressly designated in the so-called "Hiss Act."[37]

Procedure.

The Supreme Court has also recognized a very broad discretion and authority in each House of Congress to discipline its Members under its own chosen procedural standards, generally without established right to judicial review. The act of disciplining Members is carried out through the rule-making authority of the House, and the Supreme Court in describing the congressional disciplinary process in United States v. Brewster, has noted in dicta:

> The process of disciplining a Member in the Congress ... is not surrounded with the panoply of protective shields that are present in a criminal case. An accused Member is judged by no specifically articulated standards, and is at the mercy of an almost unbridled discretion of the charging body ... from whose decision there is no established right of review.[38]

Currently in the House of Representatives, a resolution to expel a Member would be referred to the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the standing Committee in the House with jurisdiction over congressional conduct and "ethics," although such a resolution is considered to raise a question of the "privileges" of the House, and could be called up as a privileged resolution with notice by its sponsor according to House Rules.[39] The House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct is also authorized to receive "complaints" concerning a Member's conduct from any other Member of the House (or from outside of the House when certified by a Member), or may initiate on its own accord an investigation of a Member.[40] Furthermore, the House of Representatives may also, and from time-to-time has, instructed the Committee by resolution to investigate a particular matter or Member.

While it had been a common practice in the past to wait until all appeals were exhausted in a criminal conviction of a Member before the House would proceed on a matter concerning that Member,[41] the more modern practice has been for the House to take cognizance of the underlying factual findings regarding the conduct that was the basis for the Member's conviction, regardless of the potential legal or procedural issues which might be resolved on appeal.[42] The rules of the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct specifically provide, in fact, for automatic jurisdiction of the Committee when a Member has been convicted in a Federal, State, or local court of a felony.[43] Moreover, in one instance, a committee disciplinary proceeding concerning a Member indicted for bribery was begun after the Member's trial, even though it ended in a hung jury, and before a second trial was to commence.[44]

The current Rules of the House of Representatives provide that the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct is authorized to investigate allegations of violations of "any law, rule, regulation, or other standard of conduct applicable to the conduct of such Member ... in the performance of his duties or the discharge of his responsibilities," and after such investigation the Committee is to "report to the House its finding of fact and recommendations, if any ...."[45] The Standards Committee has promulgated detailed procedural rules to implement fairness in the disciplinary process, specifically providing the requirements of notice, the specification of charges, and by providing opportunities for the charged Member to be heard and to examine witnesses and evidence. After an investigation by an investigatory subcommittee, the taking of evidence and an adjudicatory hearing, if the Member is found by the majority of the Committee members to have committed the specific offenses charged, the full Committee will then consider the appropriate discipline.[46] If the Committee finds that expulsion is warranted, a recommendation for such discipline is made in a report to the full House of Representatives, which may be, after debate, accepted, modified or rejected by the House.

Censure

The term "censure," unlike the term "expel," does not appear in the Constitution, although the authority is derived from the same clause – Article I, Section 5, clause 2, concerning the authority of each House of Congress to "punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour." Censure, reprimand, or admonition are traditional ways in which parliamentary bodies have disciplined their members and maintained order and dignity in their proceedings.[47] In the House of Representatives, a "censure" is a formal vote by the majority of Members present and voting on a resolution disapproving a Member's conduct, with generally the additional requirement that the [46]Investigations subcommittees are 4 Members of the House, and may be made up of Committee Members, as well as Members of the House not on the Committee who are appointed at the beginning of the Congress as a reserve "pool" available to be on investigations subcommittees if needed. Adjudications are held before a panel of the Committee who did not serve on the investigations subcommittee, and if any charges drafted by the investigations subcommittee are proven before the adjudications panel, a "sanctions" hearing to determine the sanctions to be recommended to the House is conducted before the full membership of the Standards Committee. House Rule X, cl. 5(a)(3) and (4), XI, cl. 3(b)(1)(B)(i), Rules of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, supra.

[47]May, The Law, Privileges, Proceedings and Usage of Parliament, supra at 103; Black's Law Dictionary, at 224, 6th Edition (1990), defines "censure" as: "The formal resolution of a legislative, administrative, or other body reprimanding a person, normally one of its own members, for specified conduct."

Member stand at the "well" of the House chamber to receive a verbal rebuke and reading of the censure resolution by the Speaker of the House.

Grounds.

The Constitution, in providing that either House of Congress may "expel" a Member by a two-thirds majority, does not specify the reasons for such expulsion, but does in that same provision state that either House of Congress may punish its Members for "disorderly Behaviour." Some early commentators thus felt that the authority to "punish" a Member by way of censure or some other condemnation was thus expressly limited, unlike expulsion, to cases concerning "disorderly" or unruly behavior or conduct in Congress, that is, conduct which disrupts the institution.[48] The authority to discipline by way of censure, reprimand or other such rebuke, however, has come to be recognized and accepted in congressional practice as extending to cases of "misconduct," even outside of Congress, which the House finds to be reprehensible, and/or to reflect discredit on the institution, and which is, therefore, worthy of condemnation or rebuke.

The House of Representatives has taken abro ad view of its authority to discipline its Members. In the 63rd Congress, for example, the House Judiciary Committee described the power of the House to punish for disorderly behavior as a power which is "full and plenary and may be enforced by summary proceedings. It is discretionary in character ... restricted by no limitation except in case of expulsion the requirement of the concurrence of a two-thirds vote."[49] Similarly, in its report on a Member, a House Select Committee in 1967 stated:

> Censure of a Member has been deemed appropriate in cases of a breach of the privileges of the House. There are two classes of privilege, the one, affecting the rights of the House collectively, its safety, dignity, and the integrity of its proceedings; and the other, affecting the rights, reputation, and conduct of Members, individually.
> Most cases of censure have involved the use of unparliamentary language, assaults upon a Member or insults to the House by introductions of offensive resolutions, but in five cases in the House and one in the Senate [as of 1967] censure was based on corrupt acts by a Member, and in another Senate case censure was based upon noncooperation with and abuse of Senate committees.
> This discretionary power to punish for disorderly behavior is vested by the Constitution in the House of Representatives and its exercise is appropriate where a Member has been guilty of misconduct relating to his official duties, noncooperation with committees of this House, or nonofficial acts of a kind likely to bring this House into disrepute.[50]

While the House has stated and demonstrated in precedents its reticence to expel a Member for past misconduct, that is, misconduct in a previous Congress which was known to the electorate, the House has had no similar compunction nor exercised similar restraint in expressing a formal "censure" of such past misconduct. Thus, a House Select Committee in the 90th Congress noted that "the right to censure a Member for such prior acts is supported by clear precedent in both Houses of Congress ...."[51] In more recent years the House has adopted in its Rules a "statute of limitations" on actions, restricting the Standards Committee from investigating alleged violations of conduct standards when such violations go back more than the last three Congresses, "unless the Committee determines that the alleged violation is directly related to an alleged violation that occurred in a more recent Congress."[52]

Precedents.

In the House of Representatives there have been 22 "censures" of Members (21 Members and 1 Delegate), including two censures of former Members who, in 1870, had resigned just prior to the House's consideration of expulsion motions against those Members for selling military academy appointments.[53] While the majority of the censures in the House occurred in the 19th century and concerned issues of decorum, that is, the use of unparliamentary or insulting language on the floor of the House or acts of violence towards other Members, in more recent years instances of financial misconduct have appeared to have been a major issue. House Members have been censured for various conduct, including insulting or other unparliamentary language on the floor, assaulting another Member, supporting recognition of the Confederacy, the selling of military academy appointments, bribery, payroll fraud where inflated staff salaries were used to pay a Member's personal expenses, receipt of improper gifts and improper use of campaign funds, and sexual misconduct with House pages.[54]

The Select Committee recommended to the full House in the 90th Congress to seat Mr. Powell, and then to censure him. The House rejected that recommendation, however, and voted to "exclude" Powell, which was ultimately found unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in Powell v. McCormack, supra, because the House's action went beyond judging the three constitutional "qualifications" or the "election" of the Member-elect. Representative Powell was re-elected to and then seated in the 91st Congress, but was fined and had his seniority reduced by the House (H.Res. 2, 115 Congr. Rec. 29, 34 (January 3, 1969)).

Consequence of Censures.

There is no specific disqualification or express consequence provided in the House Rules after a Member has been "censured." The political ignominy of being formally and publically admonished and deprecated by one's colleagues, however, has lead some Members of Congress who face a potential censure or other formal House discipline for certain misconduct to resign before any official recommendation or other action is taken.[55]

While there are no House Rules regarding the consequences of a "censure," the two political parties in the House themselves have adopted their own internal party rules which in recent years have generally barred from the chairmanship of committees and subcommittees those Members who have been censured during that Congress.[56] Political party rules of the parties in the House may be changed by the particular party caucus or conference itself according to its own rules.

Reprimand

Prior to the 1970's in the House of Representatives, although there were some inconsistencies,[57] the terms "reprimand" and "censure" were often considered synonymous and used together in a resolution. In 1921, for example, a resolution adopted by the House instructed the Speaker to summon Representative Blanton of Texas to the bar of the House "and deliver to him its reprimand and censure."[58]

The more formalized distinction in the House whereby it is considered that a "reprimand" expressly involves a lesser level of disapproval of the conduct of a Member than that of a "censure," and is thus a less severe rebuke by the institution,[59] is of relatively recent origin. The term "reprimand" was used to explicitly indicate a less severe rebuke by the House in 1976 in the reprimand of a Member for his failure to disclose certain personal interests in official matters, and for the apparent use of his office to further his own personal financial interests.[60] Procedurally in the House, a "censure" resolution will generally involve a verbal admonition, such as a reading of the resolution, to be administered by the Speaker of the House to the Member at the bar of the House. In the case of a "reprimand," however, the resolution is merely adopted by a vote of the House with the Member "standing in his place," or is merely implemented by the adoption of the committee's report.[61]

Eight House Members have been "reprimanded" by the full House for a variety of misconduct, including failure to disclose certain personal interests in official matters and using one's office to further personal financial interests; misrepresentations to investigating committees; failure to report campaign contributions; conversion of campaign contributions to personal use and false statements before the investigating committee; false statements on financial disclosure forms; ghost voting and maintaining persons on the official payroll not performing official duties commensurate with pay; the misuse of one's political influence in administrative matters to help a personal associate; and the failure to insure that a Member-affiliated tax-exempt organization was not improperly involved in partisan politics, and for providing inaccurate, incomplete and unreliable information to the investigating committee.[62]

Upon making a report recommending to the House a "censure" or a "reprimand," the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct may also include in that report a recommendation for an additional action such as a fine, a restitution or payment of funds, or recommendations for the loss of seniority or privileges, when such actions are deemed appropriate.

Fines; Monetary Assessments

In addition to more traditional disciplines of censure, reprimand or expulsion, the House of Representatives as an institution has the authority to levy a fine against a Member of the House concerning a disciplinary matter. This authority appears to be incidental to the express constitutional grant of power to the House to determine the rules of its proceedings and to punish its Members for misconduct. Deschler's Precedents states expressly that under the constitutional authority of the House at Article I, Section 5, clause 2: "A fine may be levied by the House against a Member pursuant to its constitutional authority to punish its Members."[63] The House Committee on Standards notes expressly in its Committee Rules that sanctions that it may recommend to the House concerning a Member may include expulsion, censure, reprimand, denial or limitation of any right, privilege or immunity of the Member, or a "fine."[64] The authority for each House of Congress to fine one of its own Members was recognized by the Supreme Court in dicta in Kilbourn v. Thompson,[65] where the Court noted that "either House" of Congress has "the power of punishment ... by fine or imprisonment," relating to areas where Congress has been expressly granted authority, such as where the "Constitution expressly empowers each House to punish its own Members for disorderly behavior."[66]

Fines for disciplinary purposes in the House, as well as in the Senate,[67] have been relatively infrequent occurrences.[68] The precedents in the House have demonstrated that the House fined a Member in 1969 in the sum of $25,000 to be repaid by automatically withdrawing a certain amount regularly from his pay, for various conduct offenses, including the misuse of official committee appropriations, payroll, and expenses.[69] A Member of the House who was censured in 1979 was required to "make restitution of substantial amounts by which he was unjustly enriched," that is, the Member was expressly ordered within the resolution of censure to pay to the House a specific amount by executing an interest-bearing demand promissory note for $40,031.66, made payable to the Treasury of the United States.[70]

At other times the House pursuant to disciplinary actions required certain monetary assessments of Members of Congress which were not expressly or necessarily characterized as "fines." A Member of Congress, pursuant to a formal "reprimand" was required to make restitution to the District of Columbia of certain monies and fines, concerning which he had improperly used his influence to have "fixed" or reduced.[71] In 1997, a monetary assessment or penalty, which was not characterized by the Committee as a "fine," was imposed upon the Speaker of the [67]In the Senate, in a 1990 disciplinary matter in which a Senator was "denounced" by the full Senate, for example, the Senator was ordered to "reimburse" the Senate a specified amount in connection with questionable expense reimbursements received from the Senate, and "to pay to charities with which he has no affiliation" an amount equal to that which was considered as "excess honoraria" over and above that which the Senator was permitted to accept. House to pay "for some of the costs" of an ethics investigation which resulted in the reprimand of the Speaker.[72]

The "fines" and/or monetary assessments ordered in the disciplinary cases appear to involve the repayment or restitution of funds misused or wrongfully received, as opposed to fines merely or strictly for "punishment" purposes and not necessarily connected to the wrongful conduct. This is consistent with the current guidance in the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct Rules concerning the recommendation of a "fine," which the Committee notes, "is appropriate in a case in which it is likely that the violation was committed to secure a personal financial benefit."[73] There does not appear to be, however, a constitutional or institutional requirement for such fines to be so connected with unjust enrichments or misuse of funds, and the Committee on Standards has noted in its Rules that the guidance concerning fines and other sanctions recommended to the House "sets forth general guidelines and does not limit the authority of the Committee to recommend other sanctions."[74]

Suspension

Although a temporary "suspension" is traditionally listed as one of the possible disciplinary actions that a legislative body may take against one of its members,[75] the House of Representatives has in recent years questioned its authority to disqualify or mandatorily suspend a Member by a simple majority vote.[76] Such a "suspension" would most likely involve a prohibition on a Member of the House from voting on or working on legislative or representational matters for a particular time. Although not addressing a "suspension" specifically, the House has generally considered a decision of a Member not to vote on a matter as within the discretionary purview of the Member individually, even when a legislative matter may involve possible conflicting personal interests, under House Rule III(1). As noted in the House Rules, the authority of the House to require a Member to disqualify himself or herself from voting has traditionally been questioned, and such "recusal" has therefore been traditionally left to the discretion of the Member. Jefferson's Manual and Rules of the House of Representatives, at §658, states:

> [T]he weight of authority also favors the idea that there is no authority in the House to deprive a Member of the right to vote (V, 5937, 5952, 5959, 5966, 5967; VIII, 3072).[77] In one or two early instances the Speaker has decided that because > of a personal interest, a Member should not vote (V, 5955, 5958); but on all other occasions and in the later practice the Speaker has held that the Member himself and not the Chair should determine this question (V, 5950, 5951; VIII, 3071; Speaker Albert, Dec. 2, 1975, p. 38135; Speaker O'Neill, Mar. 1, 1979, p. 3748), and the Speaker has denied his own power to deprive a Member of the constitutional right to vote (V, 5956; Speaker Albert, Dec. 2, 1975, p. 38135; Speaker O'Neill, Mar. 1, 1979, p. 3748).

As to refraining from voting and committee work specifically, the House of Representatives in the 94th Congress adopted a rule which stated a sense of the House that Members who have been convicted of a crime for which a sentence of two or more years may be imposed "should refrain from participation in the business of each committee of which he is then a member and should refrain from voting on any question at a meeting of the House, or of the Committee of the Whole House ..." until there has been a judicial or administrative reinstatement of his or her presumption of innocence, or until the Member is re-elected.[78] The supporters of the provision noted that the rule was worded in the discretionary way it was because, they believed, that if the provision were mandatory, then "it would have been unconstitutional [because] [i]t would have deprived the district, which the Member was elected to represent, of representation...."[79]

Although the Rule on refraining from voting is couched in what can be considered advisory terms of guidance to Members, the Rules of the House also provide, in the Code of Official Conduct, that Members of the House "shall adhere to the spirit and the letter of the Rules of the House."[80] Members are thus expected to conform to and abide by the abstention provision.[81]

Letters of Reproval and Other Committee Actions

In the House of Representatives a "Letter of Reproval" is an administrative action of the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, authorized under the Rules of the House of Representatives "to establish or enforce standards of official of Representatives, and to the relevant sections.

[81]The Committee in 1993 noted in its report that although there is no "specific enforcement capability" expressed in the proposed rule, "any Member subject to its provisions at the time of the resolution's adoption, or thereafter, who violates the clear principles it expresses, will do so at the risk of subjecting himself to the introduction of a privileged resolution relating to his conduct ...." conduct for members, officers, and employees of the House."[82] The issuance of a Letter of Reproval by the Committee is made public, as it is issued as part of a public report from the Committee to the House on an investigation that the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct has undertaken.[83]

A Letter of Reproval may be sent by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct on its own accord by majority vote of the Committee, without any approval or action by the full House of Representatives.[84] As such, a Letter of Reproval is clearly distinguishable from legislative "discipline," "punishment" or "sanctions" that the full House may invoke against a Member, such as censure, reprimand, fine, or expulsion.[85] It appears that a Letter of Reproval is intended to be an action by the Committee which is an alternative to the recommendation of sanctions to the House, and is an action which is used for infractions of Rules or standards which, because of the nature of the infractions or because of mitigating circumstances, do not rise to the level of requiring action by the full House of Representatives. The Committee on Standards of Official Conduct Rules provide, after setting out procedures when "a majority of the Committee does not vote in favor of the recommendation that the House of Representatives take action," that: "The Committee may also, by majority vote, adopt a motion to issue a Letter of Reproval or take other appropriate Committee action."[86] The Committee may issue such Letter "[i]f the Committee determines a Letter of Reproval constitutes sufficient action ...."[87]

A Letter of Reproval was characterized by the House Committee on Standards as a "rebuke of a Member's conduct issued by a body of that Member's peers acting, as the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, on behalf of the House of Representatives."[88] The Committee on Standards of Official Conduct has issued several Letters of Reproval to Members of the House, including Letters of Reproval for the improper use of campaign accounts for personal loans;[89] for a Member's borrowing of campaign funds for personal use, and as ubsequent "inadequate" disclosure of such transaction;[90] and concerning allegations of sexual harassment of a female employee, and the use of one's office for political campaign activity.[91] In October of 2000, after a lengthy investigation of a Member, the Committee issued a Letter of Reproval for actions for which the Member was found to have "brought discredit to the House of Representatives," including a relationship with a former chief of staff which gave the appearance that official decisions might have been improperly affected, violations of the House gift rule, misuse of official congressional resources, misuse of official congressional staff for campaign purposes, and the appearance that certain expenditures of the Member's campaign committee were not for bona fide campaign or political purposes.[92] In June of 2001 the Committee issued a Letter of Reproval to a Member for the improper expenditure of campaign funds to benefit businesses in which the Member and his family had a personal stake, and for the improper conversion of campaign funds to personal uses.[93]

In addition to the formal, public reprovals, the Committee has addressed ethical issues before it concerning allegations of misconduct by Members by way of "other appropriate Committee action," upon agreement of a majority of the Committee, when the recommendation of sanctions to the full House is not made.[94] Such actions by the Committee have included writing a letter to a Member concerning "necessary corrective action" that should be taken by the Member.[95] The Committee has also noted violations of House Rules or standards, has "so notified" the Member, and found that no further action by the Committee will be taken.[96] In 1990 the Committee made a public report concerning a Member's conduct, noting that the "Committee clearly disapproves" of the Member's conduct.[97] There is no indication, however, that a formal and public Letter of Reproval, or any other action was initiated by the Committee in that instance. The House Committee on Standards has characterized such actions generally by stating that the Committee "has noted infractions not meriting sanctions ...."[98] Such informal notifications, public reports, or letters for corrective action, thus appear to be distinguished from when the Committee "formally and publicly reproved" a Member.[99]

IN RE CHAPMAN
U.S. 1897

Supreme Court of the United States
In re CHAPMAN.
No. 11.

April 19, 1897.

This is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, filed on leave, and a rule thereon entered, to which return was duly made.

677 The petition alleges as follows: That petitioner is a citizen of the United States, and a resident of the city of New York, in the state of New York, and that he is now restrained of his liberty by the marshal of the United States for the District of Columbia. That on the 1st of October, 1894, in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, holding a criminal term, the grand jury impaneled in said court at said term thereof found an indictment against petitioner, based on section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, to which petitioner filed a demurrer, alleging, among other objections, the unconstitutionality of the acts of congress on which the indictment was based; that the demurrer was overruled, and petitioner ordered to plead thereto; that the court of appeals for the District of Columbia allowed an appeal from the order overruling the demurrer, and subsequently affirmed it (Chapman v. U. S., 5 D. C. App. 122), whereupon petitioner applied to this court for leave to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which application was denied.678In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 15 Sup. Ct. 331. That thereafter petitioner filed a petition in the court of appeals for a writ of prohibition to prevent the trial court from unlawfully assuming jurisdiction to try petitioner on said indictment, which petition was denied; and thereupon petitioner duly prosecuted an appeal and writ of error to this court from such order denying said petition, which are still pending, this court having refused to advance the cause, and having also declined to stay the proceedings below. That thereupon the trial of petitioner under the indictment was proceeded with, and verdict of guilty returned. Motions in arrest of judgment and for new trial were made and overruled; and on February 1, 1896, the trial court entered its judgment and sentence on said verdict, that petitioner be imprisoned in the jail of the District of Columbia for the period of one month from date of arrival, and to pay a fine of $100, from which judgment and sentence petitioner prosecuted an appeal to the court of appeals. peals. That court affirmed the judgment and sentence of the trial court (Chapman v. U. S., 24 Wash. Law Rep. 251), but allowed a writ of error to remove the cause to this court for review (24 Wash. Law Rep. 297), which was dismissed for want of jurisdiction (Chapman v. U. S., 164 U. S. 436, 17 Sup. Ct. 76).

That petitioner was then surrendered in open court by his bondsmen, and committed into the custody of the United States marshal for the District, who now holds and confines him, and deprives him of his liberty.

The petition further alleged that the act of congress under which petitioner was prosecuted was unconstitutional, and the imprisonment of petitioner unlawful, on various grounds set forth at length.

Petitioner attached duly-certified copies of the record and proceedings, judgment, and sentence, under the aforesaid indictment against him, and prayed that the same be considered in connection with the petition, and also referred to the record in the matter of the application of petitioner for a writ of prohibition.

The indictment averred that the house of representatives had passed a certain tariff bill, which was pending in the senate, with a very large number of proposed amendments thereto, during the months thereafter mentioned, and, among them, certain amendments providing for duties on sugar different from the provisions of the bill as it had been sent to the senate, the adoption or rejection of which by the senate would materially affact the market value of the stock of the American Sugar-Refining Company; that the scnate adopted a preamble and resolutions raising a special committee, and clothing it with full power of investigation into certain charges made in designated newspapers that members of the senate were yielding to corrupt influences in the consideration of said legislation; that the investigation was commenced, and, in the course of it, petitioner, being a member of a firm of stockbrokers in the city of New York, dealing in the stock of the American Sugar-Refining Company, appeared as a witness, and was asked whether the firm of which the witness was a member had brought or sold what were known as 'sugar stocks' during the month of February, 1894, and after the 1st day of that month, for or in the interest, directly or indirectly, of any United States senator; had the firm, during the month of March, 1894, bought or sold any stocks or securities known as 'sugar stocks' for or in the interest, directly or indirectly, or any United States senator; had the said firm during the month of April done so; had the said firm during the month of May done so; was the said firm at that time carrying any sugar stock for the benefit of or in the interest, directly or indirectly, of any United States senator. But petitioner then and there willfully refused to answer each of the questions so propounded, all of which were pertinent to the inquiry then and there being made by the said committee under the resolutions aforesaid.

Upon an investigation by the senate of charges in the public press as to alleged dealings of senators in the stock of a corporation whose business was affected by a pending tariff bill, it is no invasion of the constitutional protection against unreasonable searches and seizures to require a member of a stock brokerage firm to state whether or not any senator had bought or sold such stocks through his firm.

Rev.St. § 102, 2 U.S.C.A. § 192, making it a misdemeanor punishable by indictment to refuse to give testimony upon "any matter under inquiry" before either house of congress or any committee thereof, is not so connected with section 103, which declares that witnesses are not privileged to refuse to give testimony on the ground that it may tend to disgrace or render them infamous, that, if the latter section be held unconstitutional, the former must fall with it.

*664 George F. Edmunds and A. J. Dittenhoefer, for petitioner.
Sol. Gen. Conrad, for respondent.
Mr. Chief Justice FULLER, after stating the facts in the foregoing language, delivered the opinion of the court.
It is insisted that the supreme court of the District of Columbia, sitting as a criminal court, had no jurisdiction; that the questions were not authorized under the constitution; and that the act of congress under which petitioner was indicted and tried is unconstitutional.

Sections 102, 103, and 104 and section 859 of the Revised Statutes are as follows:

'Sec. 102. Every person who having been summoned as a witness by the authority of either house of congress, to give testimony or to produce papers upon any matter under inquiry before either house, or any committee of either house of congress, wilfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the question under inquiry, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars nor less than one hundred dollars, and imprisonment in a common jail for not less than one month nor more than twelve months.

© 2008 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

'Sec. 103. No witness is privileged to refuse to testify to any fact, or to produce any paper, respecting which he shall be examined by either house of congress, or by any committee of either house, upon the ground that his testimony to such fact or his production of such paper may tend to disgrace him or otherwise render him infamous.

'Sec. 104. Whenever a witness summoned as mentioned in section one hundred and two fails to testify, and the facts are reported to 679 either house, the president of the senate or the speaker of the house, as the case may be, shall certify the fact under the seal of the senate or house to the district attorney for the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to bring the matter before the grand jury for their action.'

*665 'Sec. 859. No testimony given by a witness before either house, or before any committee of either house of congress, shall be used as evidence in any criminal proceeding against him in any court, except in a prosecution for perjury committed in giving such testimony. But an official paper or record produced by him is not within the said privilege.'

These sections were derived from an act of January 24, 1857, entitled 'An act more effectually to enforce the attendance of witnesses on the summons of either house of congress, and to compel them to discover testimony' (11 Stat 155, c. 19),[FN1] as amended by an act entitled 'An act amending the provisions*666 of the second section of the act of January twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, enforcing the attendance of witnesses before committees of either house of congress,' approved January 24, 1862 (12 Stat. 333, c. 11),[FN2] both of which are given in the margin.

From the record of the proceedings on the trial, accompanying and made part of the petition, it appears that petitioner, in declining to answer the questions propounded, expressly stated that he did not do so on the ground that to answer might expose him, or tend to expose him, to criminal prosecution; nor did he object that his answers might tend to disgrace him. Section 103 had in fact no bearing on the controversy in regard to this witness, and it is difficult to see how he can properly raise the question as to its constitutionality, notwithstanding section 859. And we cannot concur in the view that sections 102 and 103 are so inseparably connected that it can be reasonably concluded that, if section 103 were not sustainable, section 102 would therefore be invalid. In other words, we do not think that there is ground for the belief that congress would not have enacted section 102 if it had been supposed that a particular class of witnesses, to which petitioner did not belong, if they refused to answer by reason of constitutional privilege, could not be deprived of that privilege by section 103.

*667 Laying section 103 out of view, we are of opinion that sections 102 and 104 were intended, in the language of the title of the original act of January 24, 1857, 'more effectually to enforce the attendance of witnesses on the summons of either house of congress, and to sompel them to discover testimony.'To secure this result, it was provided that when a person summoned as a witness by either house to give testimony or produce papers, upon any matter under inquiry before either house, or any committee of either house, willfully fails to appear, or, appearing, refuses to answer 'any question pertinent to the question under inquiry,' he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished accordingly. And it was also provided that when, under such circumstances, the facts are reported to either house, the president of the senate or the speaker of the house, as the case may be, shall certify the fact under the seal of the 680 senate or house to the district attorney for the District of Columbia, that the matter may be brought before the grand jury for their action.

It is true that the reference is to 'any' matter under inquiry, and so on, and it is suggested that this is fatally defective, because too broad and unlimited in its extent; but nothing is better settled than that statutes should receive a sensible construction, such as will effectuate the legislative intention, and, if possible, so as to avoid an unjust or an absurd conclusion (Lau Ow Bew v. U. S., 144 U. S. 47, 59, 12 Sup. Ct.517); and we think that the word 'any,' as used in these sections, refers to matters within the jurisdiction of the two houses of congress, before them for consideration and proper for their action, to questions pertinent thereto, and to facts or papers bearing thereon. When the facts are reported to the particular house, the question or questions may undoubtedly be withdrawn or modified, or the presiding officer directed not to certify; but if such a contingency occurs, or if no report is made or certificate issued, that would be matter of defense, and the facts of report and certificate need not be set out in an indictment under the statute. In this case we must assume that there was such report and certificate, and indeed we do not understand this to be controverted, as it could not well be in view 668 of the senate proceedings as disclosed by its journal and otherwise. Senate Journal, 53d Cong., 2d Sess., p. 238; Senate Rep. No. 477, Id.;Cong. Rec., Id. p. 6143.

Under the constitution, the senate of the United States has the power to try impeachments; to judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members; to determine the rules of its proceedings; punish its members for disorderly behavior; and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member; and it necessarily possesses the inherent power of self-protection.

According to the preamble and resolutions, the integrity and purity of members of the senate had been questioned in a manner calculated to destroy public confidence in the body, and in such respects as might subject members to censure or expulsion. The senate, by the action taken, signifying its judgment that it was called upon to vindicate itself from aspersion, and to deal with such of its members as might have been guilty of misbehavior, and brought reproach upon it, obviously had jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the inquiry it directed, and power to compel the attendance of witnesses, and to require them to answer any question pertinent thereto. And the pursuit of such inquiry by the questions propounded in this instance was not, in our judgment, in violation of the security against unreasonable searches and seizures protected by the fourth amendment.

In Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 188, among other important rulings, it was held that there existed no general power in congress, or in either house, to make inquiry into the private affairs of a citizen; that neither house could, on the allegation that an insolvent debtor of the United States was interested in a private business partnership, investigate the affairs of that partnership, as a mere matter of private concern; and that consequently there was no authority in either house to compel a witness to testify on the subject. The case at bar is wholly different. Specific charges publicly made against senators had been brought to the attention of the senate, and the senate had determined that investigation was necessary. The subject-matter as affecting the senate 669 was within the jurisdiction of the senate. The questions were not intrusions into the affairs of the citizen. They did not seek to ascertain any facts as to the conduct, methods, extent, or details of the business of the firm in question, but only whether that firm, confessedly engaged in buying and selling stocks, and the particular stock named, was employed by any senator to buy or sell for him any of that stock, whose market price might be affected by the senate's action. We cannot regard these questions as amounting to an unreasonable search into the private affairs of the witness simply because he may have been in some degree connected with the alleged transactions, and, as investigations of this sort are within the power of either of the two houses, they cannot be defeated on purely sentimental grounds.

The questions were undoubtedly pertinent to the subject-matter of the inquiry. The resolutions directed the committee to inquire 'whether any senator had been, or is, speculating in what are known as 'sugar stocks' during the consideration of the tariff bill now before the senate.'What the senate might or might not do upon the facts when ascertained, we cannot say; nor are we called upon to inquire whether such ventures might be defensible, as contended in argument; but it is plain that negative answers would have cleared that body of what the senate regarded as offensive imputations, while affirmative answers might have led to further action on the part of the senate within its constitutional powers.

Nor will it do to hold that the senate had no jurisdiction to pursue the particular inquiry because the preamble and resolutions did not specify that the proceedings were taken for the purpose of censure or expulsion, if certain facts were disclosed by the investigation. The matter was within the range of the constitutional powers of the senate. The resolutions adequately indicated that the transactions referred to were deemed by the senate reprehensible, and deserving of condemnation and punishment. The right to expel extends to all cases where the offense is such as in the judgment of the senate is inconsitent with the trust and duty of a member.*670 1 Story, Const. § 838. Reference is there made to the case of William Blount, who was expelled from the senate in July, 1797, for 'a high misdemeanor entirely 681 inconsistent with his public trust and duty as a senator.'The offense charged against him, said Mr. Justice Story, was an attempt to seduce an American agent among the Indians from his duty, and to alienate the affections and confidence of the Indians from the public authorities of the United States, and a negotiation for services in behalf of the British government among the Indians. It was not a statutable offense, nor was it committed in his official character, nor was it committed during the session of congress, nor at the seat of government.

Commenting on this case, Mr. Sergeant says, in his work on Constitutional Law (2d Ed., p. 302): 'In the resolution, the senate declared him guilty of a high misdemeanor, though no presentment or indictment had been found against him, and no prosecution at law was ever commenced upon the case; and it seems no law existed to authorize such prosecution.'

The two houses of congress have several times acted upon this rule of law, and the cases may be found, together with debates on the general subject, in both houses, of great value, in Smith's Digest of Decisions and Precedents (Senate Doc. No. 278, 53d Cong., 2d Sess.). The reasons for maintaining the right inviolate are eloquently presented in the report of the committee in the case of John Smith, accused in 1807 of participating in the imputed treason of Aaron Burr. 1 Hall, Law J. 459; Smith, Dig. p. 23.

We cannot assume on this record that the action of the senate was without a legitimate object, and so encroach upon the province of that body. Indeed, we think it affirmatively appears that the senate was acting within its right, and it was certainly not necessary that the resolutions should declare in advance what the senate meditated doing when the investigation was concluded.

Doubtless, certain general principles announced in Runkle v. U. S., 122 U. S. 555, 7 Sup. Ct. 1141, cited by petitioner's counsel as conclusive, were correctly set forth; but that case has not been approved in subsequent quent decisions on the same *671 subject, and the presumptions in favor of official action have been held to preclude collateral attack on the sentences of courts-martial, though courts of special and limited jurisdiction.U. S. v. Fletcher, 148 U. S. 84, 13 Sup. Ct. 552;Swain v. U. S., 165 U. S. 553, 17 Sup. Ct. 448.

Counsel contend with great ability that the law under consideration is necessarily subject to being impaled on one or the other of two horns of a dilemma, either inflicting a fatal wound. The one alternative is that the law delegates to the District of Columbia criminal court the exclusive jurisdiction and power to punish as contempt the acts denounced, and thus deprives the houses of congress of their constitutional functions in the particular class of cases. The other alternative is that if the law should be interpreted as leaving in the houses the power to punish such acts, and vesting, in addition, jurisdiction in the district criminal court to punish the same acts as misdemeanors, then the law is invalid, because subjecting recalcitrant witnesses to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense contrary to the fifth amendment.

The refusal to answer pertinent questions in a matter of inquiry within the jurisdiction of the senate, of course, constitutes a contempt of that body, and by the statute this is also made an offense against the United States.

The history of congressional investigations demonstrates the difficulties under which the two houses have labored, respectively. in compelling unwilling witnesses to disclose facts deemed essential to taking definitive action; and we quite agree with Chief Justice Alvey, delivering the opinion of the court of appeals, 'that congress possessed the constitutional power to enact a statute to enforce the attendance of witnesses, and to compel them to make disclosure of evidence to enable the respective bodies to discharge their legitimate functions,' and that it was to effect this that the act of 1857 was passed. It was an act necessary and propr for carrying into execution the powers vested in congress and in each house thereof. We grant that congress could not devest itself, or either of its houses, of the *672 essential and inherent power to punish for contempt, in cases to which the power of either house properly extended; but because congress, by the act of 1857, sought to aid each of the houses in the discharge of its constitutional functions, it does not follow that any delegation of the power in each to punish for contempt was involved, and the statute is not open to objection on that account.

Nevertheless, although the power to punish for contempt still remains in each house, we must decline to decide that this law is invalid because it provides that contumacy in a witness called to testify in a matter properly under consideration by either house, and deliberately refusing to answer questions pertinent thereto, shall be a misdemeanor against the United States, who are interested that the authority of neither of their departments, nor of any branch thereof, shall be defied and set at naught. It is improbable that in any case cummulative penalties would be imposed, whether by way of punishment merely, or of eliciting the answers desired; but it is quite clear that the contumacious witness is not subjected to jeopardy twice for the same offense, since the same act may be an offense against one jurisdiction and also an offense against another; and indictable statutory offenses may be punished as such, while the offenders may likewise be subjected to punishment for the same acts as contempts, the two being diverso intuitu, and capable of standing together. General Houston's Case (Atty. 682 Gen. Butler) 2 Ops. Attys. Gen. U. S. 655; Rex v. Lord Ossulston, 2 Strange, 1107; Cross v. North Carolina, 132 U. S. 131, 10 Sup. Ct. 47;In re Debs, 158 U. In our opinion, the law is not open to constitutional objection, and the record does not exhibit a case in which, on any ground, it can be held that the supreme court of the District, sitting as a criminal court, had no jurisdiction to render judgment.

Powell v. McCormack,
U.S.Dist.Col. 1969.

Supreme Court of the United States
Adam Clayton POWELL, Jr., et al., Petitioners,
v.
John W. McCORMACK et al.
No. 138.

Argued April 21, 1969.
Decided June 16, 1969.

Action for declaratory and other relief based on claimed unconstitutionality of resolution excluding member-elect from seat in House of Representatives. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia, 266 F.Supp. 354, dismissed the complaint, and plaintiffs appealed. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia Circuit, 129 U.S.App.D.C. 354, 395 F.2d 577, affirmed, and plaintiffs obtained certiorari. The Supreme Court, Mr. Chief Justice Warren, held that the case was not rendered moot by plaintiff's being seated in the subsequent session of Congress, that the federal courts had subject matter jurisdiction and that the action did not present a nonjusticiable political question, although defendant members of Congress were protected by Speech or Debate Clause, and that House of Representatives was without power to exclude plaintiff who had been duly elected by voters of his district and who was not ineligible to serve under any provision of the Constitution.

Judgment affirmed in part and reversed in part and remanded with instructions.

Mr. Justice Stewart dissented.

*489 Mr. Chief Justice WARREN delivered the opinion of the Court.
In November 1966, petitioner Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., was duly elected from the 18th Congressional District of New York to serve in the United States House of Representatives for the 90th Congress. However, pursuant to a House resolution, he was not permitted to take his seat. Powell (and some of the voters of his district) then filed suit in Federal District Court, claiming that the House could exclude him only if it found he failed to meet the standing requirements of age, citizenship, and residence contained in Art. I, s 2, of the Constitution-requirements the House specifically found Powell met-and thus had excluded him unconstitutionally. The District Court dismissed petitioners' complaint 'for want of jurisdiction of the subject matter.'A panel of the Court of Appeals affirmed the dismissal, although on somewhat different grounds, each judge filing a separate opinion. We have determined that it was error to dismiss the complaint and that petitioner Powell is entitled to a declaratory judgment that he was unlawfully excluded from the 90th Congress.

FACTS.

During the 89th Congress, a Special Subcommittee on Contracts of the Committee on House Administration conducted an investigation into the expenditures of the Committee on Education and Labor, of which petitioner *490 Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., was chairman. The Special Subcommittee issued a report concluding that Powell and certain staff employees had deceived the House authorities as to travel expenses. The report also indicated there was strong evidence that certain illegal salary payments had been made to Powell's wife at his direction. See H.R. Rep. No. 2349, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., 6-7 (1966). No formal action was taken during the 89th Congress. However, prior to the organization of the 90th Congress, the Democratic members-elect met in caucus and voted to remove Powell as chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor. See H.R. Rep. No. 2790th Cong., 1st Sess., 1-2 (1967).

When the 90th Congress met to organize in January 1967, Powell was asked to step aside while the oath was administered to the other members-elect. Following the administration of the oath to the remaining members, the House discussed the procedure to be followed in 1948 determining whether Powell was eligible to take his seat. After some debate, by a vote of 363 to 65 the House adopted House Resolution No. 1, which provided that the Speaker appoint a Select Committee to determine Powell's eligibility. 113 Cong. Rec. 26-27. Although the resolution prohibited Powell from taking his seat until the House acted on the Select Committee's report, it did provide that he should receive all the pay and allowances due a member during the period.

The Select Committee, composed of nine lawyer-members, issued an invitation to Powell to testify before the Committee. The invitation letter stated that the scope of the testimony and investigation would include Powell's qualifications as to age, citizenship, and residency; his involvement in a civil suit (in which he had been held in contempt); and '(m)atters of * * * alleged official misconduct since January 3, 1961.'See Hearings on *491 H.R. Res. No. 1 before Select Committee Pursuant to H.R. Res. No. 1, 90th Cong., 1st Sess., 5 (1967) (hereinafter Hearings). Powell appeared at the Committee hearing held on February 8, 1967. After the Committee denied in part Powell's request that certain adversary-type procedures be followed,[FN1] Powell testified. He would, however, give information relating only to his age, citizenship, and residency; upon the advice of counsel, he refused to answer other questions.

FN1. Powell requested that he be given (1) notice of the charges pending against him, including a bill of particulars as to any accuser; (2) the opportunity to confront any accuser, to attend all committee sessions where evidence was given, and the right to cross-examine all witnesses;

(3) public hearings; (4) the right to have the Select Committee issue its process to summon witnesses for his defense; (5) and a transcript of every haring. Hearings on H.R.Res. No. 1 before Select Committee Pursuant to H.R.Res. No. 1 90th Cong., 1st Sess., 54 (1967).

The Select Committee noted that it had given Powell notice of the matters it would inquire into, that Powell had the right to attend all hearings (which would be public) with his counsel, and that the Committee would call witnesses upon Powell's written request and supply a transcript of the hearings. Id., at 59.

On February 10, 1967, the Select Committee issued another invitation to Powell. In the letter, the Select Committee informed Powell that its responsibility under the House Resolution extended to determining not only whether he met the standing qualifications of Art. I, s 2, but also to 'inquir(ing) into the question of whether you should be punished or expelled pursuant to the powers granted * * * the House under Article I, Section 5, * * * of the Constitution. In other words, the Select Committee is of the opinion that at the conclusion of the present inquiry, it has authority to report back to the House recommendations with respect to * * * seating, expulsion or other punishment.'See Hearings 110. Powell did *492 not appear at the next hearing, held February 14, 1967. However, his attorneys were present, and they informed the Committee that Powell would not testify about matters other than his eligibility under the standing qualifications of Art. I, s 2. Powell's attorneys reasserted Powell's contention that the standing qualifications were the exclusive requirements for membership, and they further urged that punishment or expulsion was not possible until a member had been seated. See Hearings 111-113.

The Committee held one further hearing at which neither Powell nor his attorneys were present. Then, on February 23, 1967, the Committee issued its report, finding that Powell met the standing qualifications of Art. I, s 2.H.R.Rep. No. 27, 90th Cong., 1st Sess., 31 (1967). However, the Committee further reported that Powell had asserted an unwarranted privilege and immunity from the processes of the courts of New York; that he had wrongfully diverted House funds for the use of others 1949 and himself; and that he had made false reports on expenditures of foreign currency to the Committee on House Administration. Id., at 31-32. The Committee recommended that Powell be sworn and seated as a member of the 90th Congress but that he be censured by the House, fined $40,000 and be deprived of his seniority. Id., at 33.

The report was presented to the House on March 1, 1967, and the House debated the Select Committee's proposed resolution. At the conclusion of the debate, by a vote of 222 of 202 the House rejected a motion to bring the resolution to a vote. An amendment to the resolution was then offered; it called for the exclusion of Powell and a declaration that his seat was vacant. The Speaker ruled that a majority vote of the House would be sufficient to pass the resolution if it were so *493 amended 113 Cong.Rec. 5020. After further debate, the amendment was adopted by a vote of 248 to 176. Then the House adopted by a vote of 307 to 116 House Resolution No. 278 in its amended form, thereby excluding Powell and directing that the Speaker notify the Governor of New York that the seat was vacant.

Powell and 13 voters of the 18th Congressional District of New York subsequently instituted this suit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Five members of the House of Representatives were named as defendants individually and 'as representatives of a class of citizens who are presently serving * * * as members of the House of Representatives.'John W. McCormack was named in his official capacity as Speaker, and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, the Sergeant at Arms and the Doorkeeper were named individually and in their official capacities. The complaint alleged that House Resolution No. 278 violated the Constitution, specifically Art. I, s 2, cl. 1, because the resolution was inconsistent with the mandate that the members of the House shall be elected by the people of each State, and Art. I, s 2, cl. 2, which, petitioners alleged, sets forth the exclusive qualifications for membership.[FN2] The complaint further alleged that the Clerk of the House threatened to refuse to perform the service for Powell to which a duly elected Congressman is entitled, that the Sergeant at Arms refused to pay Powell his salary, and that the Doorkeeper threatened to deny Powell admission to the House chamber.

FN2. The complaint also attacked the House Resolution as a bill of attainder, an ex post facto low, and as cruel and unusual punishment. Further, petitioners charged that the hearing procedures adopted by the Select Committee violated the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment.

*494 Petitioners asked that ta three-judge court be convened.[FN3] Further, they requested that the District Court grant a permanent injunction restraining respondents from executing the House Resolution, and enjoining the Speaker from refusing to administer the oath, the Clerk from refusing to perform the duties due a Representative, the Sergeant at Arms from refusing to pay Powell his salary, and the Doorkeeper from refusing to admit Powell to the Chamber.[FN4] The complaint also requested a declaratory judgment that Powell's exclusion was unconstitutional.

FN3. The District Court refused to convene a three-judge court and the Court of Appeals affirmed. Petitioners did not press this issue in their petition for writ of certiorari, apparently recognizing the validity of the Court of Appeals' ruling. See Stamler v. Willis, 393 U.S. 217, 89 S.Ct. 395, 21 L.Ed.2d 356 (1968).

FN4. Petitioners also requested that a writ of mandamus issue ordering that the named officials perform the same acts.

The District Court granted respondents' motion to dismiss the complaint 'for want of jurisdiction of the subject matter.' 1950 Powell v. McCormack, 266 F. Supp. 354 (D.C.D.C.1967).[FN5] The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit affirmed on somewhat different grounds, with each judge of the panel filing a separate opinion. Powell v. McCormack, 129 U.S.App.D.C. 354, 395 F.2d 577 (1968). We granted certiorari. 393 U.S. 949, 89 S.Ct. 371, 21 L.Ed.2d 361 (1968). While the case was pending on our docket, the 90th Congress officially terminated and the 91st Congress was seated. In November 1968, Powell was again elected as the representative of the 18th Congressional District of New York, and he was seated by the 91st Congress. The resolution seating Powell also *495 fined him $25,000. See H.R.Res. No. 2, 91st Cong., 1st Sess., 15 Cong.Rec. H21 (daily ed., January 3, 1969). Respondents then filed a suggestion of mootness. We postponed further consideration of this suggestion to a hearing on the merits. 393 U.S. 1060, 89 S.Ct. 713, 21 L.Ed.2d 704 (1969).

FN5. The District Court entered its order April 7, 1967, and a notice of appeal was filed the same day. On April 11, 1967, Powell was re-elected to the House of Representatives in a special election called to fill his seat. The formal certification of election was received by the House on May 1, 1967, but Powell did not again present himself to the House or ask to be given the oath of office.

Respondents press upon us a variety of arguments to support the court below; they will be considered in the following order. (1) Events occurring subsequent to the grant of certiorari have rendered this litigation moot. (2) The Speech or Debate Clause of the Constitution, Art. I, s 6, insulates respondents' action from judicial review. (3) The decision to exclude petitioner Powell is supported by the power granted to the House of Representatives to expel a member. (4) This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over petitioners' action. (5) Even if subject matter jurisdiction is present, this litigation is not justiciable eitehr under the general criteria established by this Court or because a political question is involved.

MOOTNESS.

[1][2] After certiorari was granted, respondents filed a memorandum suggesting that two events which occurred subsequent to our grant of certiorari require that the case be dismissed as moot. On January 3, 1969 the House of Representatives of the 90th Congress officially terminated, and petitioner Powell was seated as a member of the 91st Congress. 115 Cong.Rec. H22 (daily ed., January 3, 1969). Respondents insist that the gravamen of petitioners' complaint was the failure of the 90th Congress to seat Petitioner Powell and that, since the House of Representatives is not a continuing body[FN6]*496 and Powell has now been seated, his claims are moot. Petitioners counter that three issues remain unresolved and thus this litigation presents a 'case or controversy' within the meaning of Art. III: [FN7] (1) whether Powell was unconstitutionally deprived of his seniority by his exclusion from the 90th Congress; (2) whether the resolution of the 91st Congress imposing as ' punishment'1951 a $25,000 fine is a continuation of respondents' allegedly unconstitutional exclusion, see H.R.Res. No. 2, 91st Cong., 1st Sess., 115 Cong.Rec. H21 (daily ed., January 3, 1969); and (3) whether Powell is entitled to salary withheld after his exclusion from the 90th Congress. We conclude that Powell's claim for back salary remains viable even though he has been seated in the 91st Congress and thus find it unnecessary to determine whether the other issues have become moot.[FN8]

FN6. Respondents' authority for this assertion is a footnote contained in Gojack v. United States, 384 U.S. 702, 707, 86 S.Ct. 1689, 1693, 16 L.Ed.2d 870, n. 4. (1966): 'Neither the House of Representatives nor its committees are continuing bodies.'

FN7. The rule that this Court lacks jurisdiction to consider the merits of a moot case is a branch of the constitutional command that the judicial power extends only to cases or controversies. See Sibron v. New York, 392 U.S. 40, 57,88 S.Ct. 1889, 1899, 20 L.Ed.2d 917 (1968); R. Robertson & F. Kirkham, Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States ss 270-271 (R. Wolfson & P. Kurland ed. 1951); Diamond, Federal Jurisdiction To Decide Moot Cases, 94 U.Pa.L.Rev. 125 (1946); Note, Cases Moot on Appeal: A Limit on the Judicial Power, 103 U.Pa.L.Rev. 772 (1955).

FN8. Petitioners do not press their claim that respondent McCormack should be required to administer the oath to Powell, apparently conceding that the seating of Powell has rendered this specific claim moot. Where several forms of relief are requested and one of these requests subsequently becomes moot, the Court has still considered the remaining requests. See Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co., 258 U.S. 346, 353, 42 S.Ct. 360, 361, 66 L.Ed. 653 (1922). Respondents also argue that the seating of petitioner Powell has mooted the claims of Powell's constituents. Since this case will be remanded, that issue as well as petitioners' other claims can be disposed of by the court below.

[3][4] Simply stated, a case is moot when the issues presented are no longer 'live' or the parties lack a legally cognizable interest in the outcome. See E. Borchard, Declaratory*497 Judgments 35-37 (2d ed. 1941). Where one of the several issues presented becomes moot, the remaining live issues supply the constitutional requirement of a case or controversy. See United Public Workers of America v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 86-94, 67 S.Ct. 556, 562, 566, 91 L.Ed. 754 (1947); 6A J. Moore, Federal Practice 57.13 (2d ed. 1966). Despite Powell's obvious and continuing interest in his withheld salary, respondents insist that Alejandrino v. Quezon, 271 U.S. 528, 46 S.Ct. 600, 70 L.Ed. 1071 (1926), leaves us no choice but to dismiss this litigation as moot. Alejandrino, a duly appointed Senator of the Philippine Islands, was suspended for one year by a resolution of the Philippine Senate and deprived of all 'prerogatives, privileges and emoluments' for the period of his suspension. The Supreme Court of the Philippines refused to enjoin the suspension. By the time the case reached this Court, the suspension had expired and the Court dismissed as moot Alejandrino's request that the suspension be enjoined. Then, sua sponte,[FN9] the Court considered whether the possibility that Alejandrino was entitled to back salary required it ' to retain the case for the purpose of determining whether he (Alejandrino) may not have a mandamus for this purpose.'Id., at 533, 46 S.Ct. 601. Characerizing the issue of Alejandrino's salary as a ' mere incident' to his claim that the suspension was improper, the Court noted that he had not briefed the salary issue and that his request for mandamus did not set out with sufficient clarity the official or set of officials against whom the mandamus should issue. Id., at 533-534, 46 S.Ct. at 601-602. The Court therefore refused to treat the salary claim and dismissed the entire action as moot.

FN9. Alejandrino's brief did not consider either the possibility that his request for injunctive relief had become moot or whether his salary claim required that the Court treat the propriety of his suspension. No brief was filed on behalf of respondents.

*498 Respondents believe that Powell's salary claim is also a 'mere incident' to his insistence that he was unconstitutionally excluded so that we should likewise dismiss this entire action as moot. This argument fails to grasp that the reason for the dismissal in Alejandrino was not that Alejandrino's deprivation of salary was insufficiently substantial to prevent the case from becoming moot, but rather that his failure to plead sufficient facts to establish his mandamus claim made it impossible for any court to resolve the mandamus request.[FN10] By 1952 contrast, petitioners' complaint names the official responsible for the payment of congressional salaries and asks for both mandamus and an injunction against that official.[FN11]

FN10. After discussing the insufficiency of Alejandrino's averments as to the officer responsible for his salary, the Court stated: 'Were that set out, the remedy of the Senator would seem to be by mandamus to compel such official in the discharge of his miniterial duty to pay him the salary due * * *.'271 U.S. at 534, 46 S.Ct., at 602. That the insufficiency of Alejandrino's averments was the reason for dismissal is further substantiated by a later passage: ' As we are not able to derive from the petition sufficient information upon which properly to afford such a remedy (mandamus), we must treat the whole cause as moot and act accordingly.'Id., at 535, 46 S.Ct., at 602.

FN11. Paragraph 18b of petitioners' complaint avers that 'Leake W. Johnson, as Sergeant-at-Arms of the House' is responsible for and refuses to pay Powell's salary and prays for an injunction restraining the Sergeant at Arms from implementing the House resolution depriving Powell of his salary as well as mandamus to order that the salary be paid.

[5][6][7] Furthermore, even if respondents are correct that petitioners' averments as to injunctive relief are not sufficiently definite, it does not follow that this litigation must be dismissed as moot. Petitioner Powell has not been paid his salary by virtue of an allegedly unconstitutional House resolution. That claim is still unresolved and hotly contested by clearly adverse parties. Declaratory relief has been requested, a form of relief not available *499 when Alejandrino was decided.[FN12] A court may grant declaratory relief even though it chooses not to issue an injunction or mandamus. See United Public Workers of America v. Mitchell, supra, at 93, 67 S.Ct. 556, 566; cf. United States v. California, 332 U.S. 19, 25-26, 67 S.Ct. 1658, 1661-1662, 91 L.Ed. 1889 (1947). A declaratory judgment can then be used as a predicate to further relief, including an injunction. 28 U.S.C. s 2202; see Vermont Structural Slate Co. v. Tatko Brothers Slate Co., 253 F.2d 29 (C.A.2d Cir. 1958); United States Lines Co. v. Shaughnessy, 195 F.2d 385 (C.A.2d Cir. 1952). Alejandrino stands only for the proposition that, where one claim has become moot and the pleadings are insufficient to determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to another remedy, the action should be dismissed as moot.[FN13] There is no suggestion that petitioners' averments as to declaratory relief are insufficient and Powell's allegedly unconstitutional deprivation of salary remains unresolved.

FN12. Federal courts were first empowered to grant declaratory judgments in 1934, see 48 Stat. 955, 10 years after Alejandrino filed his complaint.

FN13. It was expressly stated in Alejandrino that a properly pleaded mandamus action could be brought, 271 U.S., at 535, 46 S.Ct. at 602, impliedly holding that Alejandrino's salary claim had not been mooted by the expiration of his suspension.

Respondents further argue that Powell's 'wholly incidental and subordinate' demand for salary is insufficient to prevent this litigation from becoming moot. They suggest that the 'primary and principal relief' sought was the seating of petitioner Powell in the 90th Congress rendering his presumably secondary claims not worthy of judicial consideration.Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S.Ct. 339, 17 L.Ed.2d 235 (1966), rejects respondents' theory that the mootness of a 'primary' claim requires a conclusion that all 'secondary' claims are moot. At the Bond oral argument it was suggested that the expiration of the session of the Georgia Legislature which excluded Bond had rendered *500 the case moot. We replied: 'The State has not pressed this argument, and it could not do so, because the State has stipulated that if Bond succeeds on this appeal he will receive back salary for the term from which he was excluded.'385 U.S., at 128, 87 S.Ct., at 345, n. 4. Bond is not controlling, argue respondents, because the legislative term from which Bond was excluded did not end until December 31, 1953 1966,[FN14] and our decision was rendered December 5; further, when Bond was decided, Bond had not as yet been seated while in this case Powell has been.[FN15] Respondents do not tell us, however, why these factual distinctions create a legally significant difference between Bond and this case. We relied in Bond on the outstanding salary claim, not the facts respondents stress, to hold that the case was not moot.

FN14. Respondents do not supply any substantiation for their assertion that the term of the Georgia Legislature did not expire until December 31. Presumably, they base their statement upon Ga.Code Ann. ss 2-1601, 2-1603 (Supp.1968).

FN15. Respondents also suggest that Bond is not applicable because the parties in Bond had stipulated that Bond would be entitled to back salary if his constitutional challenges were accepted, while there is no stipulation in this case. However, if the claim in Bond was moot, a stipulation by the parties could not confer jurisdiction. See, e.g., California v. San Pablo & Tulare R. Co., 149 U.S. 308, 314, 13 S.Ct. 876, 878, 37 L.Ed. 747 (1893).

Finally, respondents seem to argue that Powell's proper action to recover salary is a suit in the Court of Claims, so that, having brought the wrong action, a dismissal for mootness is appropriate. The short answer to this argument is that it confuses mootness with whether Powell has established a right to recover against the Sergeant at Arms, a question which it is inappropriate to treat at this stage of the litigation.[FN16]

FN16. Since the court below disposed of this case on grounds of justiciability, it did not pass upon whether Powell had brought an appropriate action to recover his salary. Where a court of appeals has misconceived the applicable law and therefore failed to pass upon a question, our general practice has been to remand the case to that court for consideration of the remaining issues. See, e.g., Utah Pie Co. v. Continental Baking Co., 386 U.S. 685, 704, 87 S.Ct. 1326, 1337, 18 L.Ed.2d 406 (1967); Bank of America National Trust & Savings

Assn. v. Parnell, 352 U.S. 29, 34, 77 S.Ct. 119, 121, 1 L.Ed.2d 93 (1956). We believe that such action is appropriate for resolution of whether Powell in this litigation is entitled to mandamus against the Sergeant at Arms for salary withheld pursuant to the House resolution.

501 III.

SPEECH OR DEBATE CLAUSE.

Respondents assert that the Speech or Debate Clause of the Constitution, Art. I, s 6,[FN17] is an absolute bar to petitioners' action. This Court has on four prior occasions-Dombrowski v. Eastland, 387 U.S. 82, 87 S.Ct. 1425, 18 L.Ed.2d 577 (1967); United States v. Johnson, 383 U.S. 169, 86 S.Ct. 749, 15 L.Ed.2d 681 (1966); Tenney v. Brandhove, 341 U.S. 367, 71 S.Ct. 783, 95 L.Ed. 1019 (1951); and Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U.S. 168, 26 L.Ed. 377 (1881)-been called upon to determine if allegedly unconstitutional action taken by legislators or legislative employees is insulated from judicial review by the Speech or Debate Clause. Both parties insist that their respective positions find support in these cases and tender for decision three distinct issues: (1) whether respondents in participating in the exclusion of petitioner Powell were 'acting in the sphere of legitimate legislative activity,'Tenney v. Brandhove, supra, at 376, 71 S.Ct. at 788; (2) assuming that respondents were so acting, whether the fact that petitioners seek neither damages from any of the respondents nor a criminal prosecution lifts the bar of the clause;[FN18] and (3) even if this 502 action may not be maintained against a *1954 Congressman, whether those respondents who are merely employees of the House may plead the bar of the clause. We find it necessary to treat only the last of these issues.

FN17.Article I, s 6, provides: 'for any Speech or Debate in either House, they (Senators and Representatives) shall not be questioned in any other Place.'

FN18. Petitioners ask the Court to draw a distinction between declaratory relief sought against members of Congress and either an action for damages or a criminal prosecution, emphasizing that our four previous cases concerned 'criminal or civil sanctions of a deterrent nature.'Brief for Petitioners 171.

[8][9] The Speech or Debate Clause, adopted by the Constitutional Convention without debate or opposition,[FN19] finds its roots in the conflict between Parliament and the Crown culminating in the Glorious Revolution of 1688 and the English Bill of Rights of 1689.[FN20] Drawing upon this history, we concluded in United States v. Johnson, supra, at 181, 86 S.Ct. at 755, that the purpose of this clause was 'to prevent intimidation (of legislators) by the executive and accountability before a possibly hostile judiciary.'Although the clause sprang from a fear of seditious libel actions instituted by the Crown to punish unfavorable speeches made in Parliament, [FN21] we have held that it would be a 'narrow view' to confine the protection of the Speech or Debate Clause to words spoken in debate. Committee reports, resolutions, and the act of voting are equally covered, as are ' things generally done in a session of the House by one of its members in relation to the business before it.'Kilbourn v. Thompson, supra, at 204. Furthermore, the clause not only provides a 503 defense on the merits but also protects a legislator from the burden of defending himself.Dombrowski v. Eastland, supra, at 85, 87 S.Ct. at 1427; see Tenney v. Brandhove, supra, at 377, 71 S.Ct. at 788.

FN19. See 5 Debates on the Federal Constitution 406 (J. Elliot ed. 1876); 2 Records of the Federal Convention of 1787, p. 246 (M. Farrand rev. ed. 1966) (hereinafter cited as Farrand).

FN20. The English Bill of Rights contained a provision substantially identical to Art. I, s 6: 'That the Freedom of Speech, and Debates or Proceedings in Parliament, ought not to be impeached or questioned in any Court or Place out of

© 2008 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Parliament.' 1 W. & M., Sess. 2, c. 2. The English and American colonial history is traced in some detail in Cella, The Doctrine of Legislative Privilege of Freedom of Speech and Debate: Its Past, Present and Future as a Bar to Criminal Prosecutions in the Courts, 2 Suffolk U.L.R.ev. 1, 3-16 (1968), and Yankwich, The Immunity of Congressional Speech-Its Origin, Meaning and Scope, 99 U.Pa.L.Rev. 960, 961-966 (1951).

FN21.United States v. Johnson, 383 U.S. 169, 182-183, 86 S.Ct. 749, 756-757 (1966).

Our cases make it clear that the legislative immunity created by the Speech or Debate Clause performs an important function in representative government. It insures that legislators are free to represent the interests of their constituents without fear that they will be later called to task in the courts for that representation. Thus, in Tenney v. Brandhove, supra, at 373, 71 S.Ct. at 786, the Court quoted the writings of James Wilson as illuminating the reason for legislative immunity: 'In order to enable and encourage a representative of the publick to discharge his publick trust with firmness and success, it is indispensably necessary, that he should enjoy the fullest liberty of speech, and that he should be protected from the resentment of every one, however powerful, to whom the exercise of that liberty may occasion offense.'[FN22]

FN22. 1 The Works of James Wilson 421 (R. McCloskey ed. 1967).

[10] Legislative immunity does not, of course, bar all judicial review of legislative acts. That issue was settled by implication as early as 1803, see Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (5 U.S.) 137, 2 L.Ed. 60, and expressly in Kilbourn v. Thompson, the first of this Court's cases interpreting the reach of the Speech or Debate Clause. Challenged in Kilbourn was the constitutionality of a House Resolution ordering the arrest and imprisonment of a recalcitrant witness who had refused to respond to a subpoena issued by a House investigating committee. While holding that the Speech or Debate Clause barred Kilbourn's action for false imprisonment brought against several 1955 members of the House, the Court nevertheless reached the merits of Kilbourn's attack and decided that, since the House had no power to punish for contempt, Kilbourn's imprisonment *504 pursuant to the resolution was unconstitutional. It therefore allowed Kilbourn to bring his false imprisonment action against Thompson, the House's Sergeant at Arms, who had executed the warrant for Kilbourn's arrest.

The Court first articulated in Kilbourn and followed in Dombrowski v. Eastland,[FN23] the doctrine that, although an action against a Congressman may be barred by the Speech or Debate Clause, legislative employees who participated in the unconstitutional activity are responsible for their acts. Despite the fact that petitioners brought this suit against several House employees-the Sergeant at Arms, the Doorkeeper and the Clerk-as well as several Congressmen, respondents argue that Kilbourn and Dombrowski are distinguishable. Conceding that in Kilbourn the presence of the Sergeant at Arms and in Dombrowski the presence of a congressional subcommittee counsel as defendants in the litigation allowed judicial review of the challenged congressional action, respondents urge that both cases concerned an affirmative act performed by the employee outside the House having a direct effect upon a private citizen. Here, they continue, the relief sought relates to actions taken by House agents solely within the House. Alternatively, respondents insist that Kilbourn and Dombrowski prayed for damages while petitioner Powell asks that the Sergeant at Arms disburse funds, an assertedly greater interference with the legislative process. We reject the proffered distinctions.

FN23. In Dombrowski $500,000 in damages was sought against a Senator and the chief counsel of a Senate Subcommittee chaired by that Senator. Record in No. 118, O.T.1966, pp. 10-11. We affirmed the grant of summary judgment as to the Senator but reversed as to subcommittee counsel.

[11][12][13][14][15] That House employees are acting pursuant to express orders of the House does not bar judicial review of the constitutionality of the underlying legislative decision *505 Kilbourn decisively settles this question, since the Sergeant at Arms was held liable for false imprisonment even though he did nothing more than execute the House Resolution that Kilbourn be arrested and imprisoned.[FN24] Respondents' suggestions thus ask us to distinguish between affirmative acts of House employees and situations in which the House orders its employees not to act or between actions for damages and claims for salary. We can find no basis in either the history of the Speech or Debate Clause or our cases for either distinction. The purpose of the protection afforded legislators is not to forestall judicial review of legislative action but to insure that legislators are not distracted from or hindered in the performance of their legislative tasks by being called into court to defend their actions A legislator is no more or no less hindered or distracted by litigation against a legislative employee calling into question the employee's affirmative action than he would be by a lawsuit questioning the employee's failure to act. Nor is the distraction or hindrance increased because the claim is for salary rather than damages, or because the litigation questions action taken by the employee within 1956 rather than without the House. Freedom of legislative activity and the purposes of the Speech or Debate Clause are fully protected if legislators are relieved of the burden of defending themselves.[FN25] In Kilbourn and Dombrowski *506 we thus dismissed the action against members of Congress but did not regard the Speech or Debate Clause as a bar to reviewing the merits of the challenged congressional action since congressional employees were also sued. Similarly, though this action may be dismissed against the Congressmen petitioners are entitled to maintain their action against House employees and to judicial review of the propriety of the decision to exclude petitioner Powell.[FN26] As was said in Kilbourn, in language which time has not dimmed:

'Especially is it competent and proper for this court to consider whether its (the legislature's) proceedings are in conformity with the Constitution and laws, because, living under a written constitution, no branch or department of the government is supreme; and it is the province and duty of the judicial department to determine in cases regularly brought before them, whether the powers of any branch of the government, and even those of the legislature in the enactment of laws, have been exercised in conformity to the Constitution; and if they have not, to treat their acts as null and void.'103 U.S., at 199.

FN24. The Court in Kilbourn quoted extensively from Stockdale v. Hansard, 9 Ad. & E. 1, 114, 112 Eng.Rep. 1112, 1156 (Q.B.1839), to refute the assertion that House agents were immune because they were executing orders of the House: '(I)f the Speaker, by authority of the House, order an illegal Act, though that authority shall exempt him from question, his order shall no more justify the person who executed it than King Charles's warrant for levying ship-money could justify his revenue officer.'Kilbourn eventually recovered $20,000 against Thompson. See Kilbourn v. Thompson, MacArth. & M. 401, 432 (Sup.Ct.D.C.1883).

FN25. A Congressman is not by virtue of the Speech or Debate Clause absolved of the responsibility of filing a motion to dismiss and the trial court must still determine the applicability of the clause to plaintiff's action. See Tenney v. Brandhove, 341 U.S. 367, 377, 71 S.Ct. 783, 788 (1951).

FN26. Given our disposition of this issue, we need not decide whether under the Speech or Debate Clause petitioners would be entitled to maintain this action solely against members of Congress where no agents participated in the challenged action and no other remedy was available. Cf. Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U.S. 168, 204-205 (1881). and no other remedy was available.

IV.

EXCLUSION OR EXPULSION.

[16] The resolution excluding petitioner Powell was adopted by a vote in excess of two-thirds of the 434 Members of *507 Congress-307 to 116. 113 Cong.Rec. 5037-5038,Article I, s 5, grants the House authority to expel a member 'with the Concurrence of two thirds.'[FN27] Respondents assert that the House may expel a member for any reason whatsoever and that, since a two-thirds vote was obtained, the procedure by which Powell was denied his seat in the 90th Congress should be regarded as an expulsion, not an exclusion. Cautioning us not to exalt form over substance, respondents quote from the concurring opinion of Judge McGowan in the court below:

> FN27. Powell was 'excluded' from the 90th Congress, i.e., he was not administered the oath of office and was prevented from taking his seat. If he had been allowed to take the oath and subsequently had been required to surrender his seat, the House's action would have constituted an 'explusion'. Since we conclude that Powell was excluded from the 90th Congress, we express no view on what limitations may exist on Congress' power to expel or otherwise punish a member once he has been seated.

'Appellant Powell's cause of action for a judicially compelled seating thus boils down, in my view, to the narrow issue of whether a member found by his colleagues * * * to have engaged in official misconduct must, because of the accidents of timing, be formally admitted before he can be either investigated or expelled. The sponsor of the motion to exclude stated on the floor that he was proceeding on the theory that the power to expel included the power to exclude, provided a 2/3 vote was forthcoming. It was. Therefore, success for Mr. Powell on the 1957 merits would mean that the District Court must admonish the House that it is form, not substance, that should govern in great affairs, and accordingly command the House members to act out a charade.'129 U.S.App.D.C., at 383-384, 395 F.2d, at 606-607.

*508 Although respondents repeatedly urge this Court not to speculate as to the reasons for Powell's exclusion, their attempt to equate exclusion with expulsion would require a similar speculation that the House would have voted to expel Powell had it been faced with that question. Powell had not been seated at the time House Resolution No. 278 was debated and passed. After a motion to bring the Select Committee's proposed resolution to an immediate vote had been defeated, an amendment was offered which mandated Powell's exclusion.[FN28] Mr. Celler, chairman of the Select Committee, then posed a parliamentary inquiry to determine whether a two-thirds vote was necessary to pass the resolution if so amended 'in the sense that it might amount to an expulsion.'113 Cong.Rec. 5020. The Speaker replied that 'action by a majority vote would be in accordance with the rules.'Ibid. Had the amendment been regarded as an attempt to expel Powell, a two-thirds vote would have been constitutionally required. The Speaker ruled that the House was voting to exclude Powell, and we will not speculate what the result might have been if Powell had been seated and expulsion proceedings subsequently instituted.

> FN28. House Resolution No. 278, as amended and adopted, provided: 'That said Adam Clayton Powell * * * be and the same hereby is excluded from membership in the 90th Congress * * *.'113 Cong.Rec. 5020. (Emphasis added.)

Nor is the distinction between exclusion and expulsion merely one of form. The misconduct for which Powell was charged occurred prior to the convening of the 90th Congress. On several occasions the House has debated whether a member can be expelled for actions taken during a prior Congress and the House's own manual of procedure applicable in the 90th Congress states that 'both Houses have distrusted their power to punish in such cases.'Rules of the House of Representatives,

H.R.Doc. No. 529, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., 25 (1967); *509 see G. Galloway, History of the House of Representatives 32 (1961). The House rules manual reflects positions taken by prior Congresses. For example, the report of the Select Committee appointed to consider the expulsion of John W. Langley states unequivocally that the House will not expel a member for misconduct committed during an earlier Congress:

'(I)t must be said that with practical uniformity the precedents in such cases are to the effect that the House will not expel a Member for reprehensible action prior to his election as a Member, not even for conviction for an offense. On May 23, 1884, Speaker Carlisle decided that the House had no right to punish a Member for any offense alleged to have been committed previous to the time when he was elected a Member, and added, 'That has been so frequently decided in the House that it is no longer a matter of dispute. ""'H.R.Rep. No. 30, 69th Cong., 1st Sess., 1-2 (1925).[FN29]

FN29. Other Congresses have expressed an identical view. The Report of the Judiciary Committee concerning the proposed expulsion of William S. King and John G. Schumaker informed the House:

'Your committee are of opinion that the House of Representatives has no authority to take jurisdiction of violations of law or offenses committed against a previous Congress. This is purely a legislative body, and entirely unsuited for the trial of crimes. The fifth section of the first article of the Constitution authorizes 'each house to determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.'This power is evidently given to enable each house to exercise its constitutional function of legislation unobstructed. It cannot vest in Congress a jurisdiction to try a member for an offense committed before his election; for such offense a member, like any other citizen, is amenable to the courts alone.'H.R.Rep.No.815, 44th Cong., 1st Sess., 2 (1876).

See also 15 Cong.Rec. 4434 (1884) (ruling of the Speaker); H.R.Rep.No.81, 42d Cong., 3d Sess., 8 (1873) (expulsion of James Brooks and Oakes Ames); H.R.Rep.No.179, 35th Cong., 1st Sess., 4-5 (1858) (expulsion of Orsamus B. Matteson).

1958 *510 Members of the House having expressed a belief that such strictures apply to its own power to expel, we will not assume that two-thirds of its members would have expelled Powell for his prior conduct had the Speaker announced that House Resolution No. 278 was for expulsion rather than exclusion.[FN30]

FN30. We express no view as to whether such a ruling would have been proper. A further distinction between expulsion and exclusion inheres in the fact that a member whose expulsion is contemplated may as a matter of right address the House and participate fully in debate while a member-elect apparently does not have a similar right. In prior cases the member whose expulsion was under debate has been allowed to make a long and often impassioned defense. See Cong. Globe, 42d Cong., 3d Sess., 1723 (1873) (expulsion of Oakes Ames); Cong. Globe, 41st Cong., 2d Sess., 1524-1525, 1544 (1870) (expulsion of B. F. Whittermore); Cong. Globe, 34th Cong., 3d Sess., 925-926 (1857) (expulsion of William A. Gilbert); Cong. Globe, 34th Cong., 3d Sess., 947-951 (1857) (expulsion of William W. Welch); 9 Annals of Cong. 2966 (1799) (expulsion of Matthew Lyon). On at least one occasion the member has been allowed to cross-examine other members during the expulsion debate. 2 A. Hinds, Precedents of the House of Representatives s 1643 (1907).

[17] Finally, the proceedings which culminated in Powell's exclusion cast considerable doubt upon respondents' assumption that the two-thirds vote necessary to expel would have been mustered. These proceedings have been succinctly described by Congressman Eckhardt:

'The House voted 202 votes for the previous

question[FN31] leading toward the adoption of the (Select) Committee report. It voted 222 votes against the previous question, opening the floor for the Curtis Amendment which ultimately excluded Powell.

FN31. A motion for the previous question is a debate-limiting device which, when carried, has the effect of terminating debate and of forcing a vote on the subject at hand. See Rules of the House of Representatives, H.R.Doc.No.529, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., ss 804-809 (1967); Cannon's Procedure in the House of Representatives, H.R.Doc.No.610, 87th Cong., 2d Sess., 277-281 (1963).

*511 'Upon adoption of the Curtis Amendment, the vote again fell short of two-thirds, being 248 yeas to 176 nays. Only on the final vote, adopting the Resolution as amended, was more than a two-thirds vote obtained, the vote being 307 yeas to 116 nays. On this last vote, as a practical matter, members who would not have denied Powell a seat if they were given the choice to punish him had to cast an aye vote or else record themselves as opposed to the only punishment that was likely to come before the House. Had the matter come up through the processes of expulsion, it appears that the two-thirds vote would have failed, and then members would have been able to apply a lesser penalty.'[FN32]

FN32. Eckhardt, The Adam Clayton Powell Case, 45 Texas L.Rev. 1205, 1209 (1967). The views of Congressman Eckhardt were echoed during the exclusion proceedings. Congressman Cleveland stated that, although he voted in favor of and supported the Select Committee's recommendation, if the exclusion amendment received a favorable vote on the motion for the previous question, then he would support the amendment 'on final passage.' 113 Cong.Rec. 5031. Congressman Gubser was even more explicit:
'I shall vote against the previous question on the Curtis amendment simply because I believe future and perfecting amendments should be allowed. But if the previous question is ordered, then I will be placed on the horns of an impossible dilemma.
'Mr. Speaker, I want to expel Adam Clayton Powell, by seating him first, but that will not be my choice when the Curtis amendment is before us. I will be forced to vote for exclusion, about which I have great constitutional doubts, or to vote for no punishment at all. Given this raw and isolated issue, the only alternative I can follow is to vote for the Curtis amendment. I shall do so, Mr. Speaker, with great reservation.'Ibid.

1959 We need express no opinion as to the accuracy of Congressman Eckhardt's prediction that expulsion proceedings would have produced a different result. However, the House's own views of the extent of its power to expel *512 combined with the Congressman's analysis counsel that exclusion and expulsion are not fungible proceedings. The Speaker ruled that House Resolution No. 278 contemplated an exclusion proceeding. We must reject respondents' suggestion that we overrule the Speaker and hold that, although the House manifested an intent to exclude Powell, its action should be tested by whatever standards may govern an expulsion.

V.

SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION.

[18][19] As we pointed out in Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 198, 82 S.Ct. 691, 699, 7 L.Ed.2d 663 (1962), there is a significant difference between determining whether a federal court has ' jurisdiction of the subject matter' and determining whether a cause over which a court has subject matter jurisdiction is 'justiciable.' The District Court determined that 'to decide this case on the merits * * * would constitute a clear violation of the doctrine of separation of powers' and then dismissed the complaint 'for want of jurisdiction of the subject matter.'Powell v. McCormack, 266 F.Supp.

© 2008 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

354, 359, 360 (D.C.D.C.1967). However, as the Court of Appeals correctly recognized, the doctrine of separation of powers is more properly considered in determining whether the case is 'justiciable.' We agree with the unanimous conclusion of the Court of Appeals that the District Court had jurisdiction over the subject matter of this case. [FN33] However, for reasons set forth in Part VI, infra, we disagree with the Court of Appeals' conclusion that this case is not justiciable.

FN33. Although each judge of the panel wrote a separate opinion, all were clear in stating that the District Court possessed subject matter jurisdiction.Powell v. McCormack, 129 U.S.App.D.C. 354, 368, 384, 385, 395 F.2d 577, 591, 607, 608 (1968).

[20][21] In Baker v. Carr, supra, we noted that a federal district court lacks jurisdiction over the subject matter (1) if the *513 cause does not 'arise under' the Federal Constitution, laws, or treaties (or fall within one of the other enumerated categories of Art. III); or (2) if it is not a 'case or controversy' within the meaning of that phrase in Art. III; or (3) if the cause is not one described by any jurisdictional statute. And, as in Baker v. Carr, supra, our determination (see Part VI, B(1) infra) that this cause presents no non-justiciable 'political question' disposes of respondents' contentions[FN34] that this cause is not a 'case or controversy.'[FN35]

FN34. We have determined that the case is not moot. See Part II, supra.

FN35. Indeed, the thrust of respondents' argument on this jurisdictional issue is similar to their contentions that this case presents a nonjusticiable 'political question.' They urge that it would have been 'unthinkable' to the Framers of the Constitution for courts to review the decision of a legislature to exclude a member. However, we have previously determined that a claim alleging that a legislature has abridged an individual's constitutional rights by refusing to seat an elected representative constitutes a 'case or controversy' over which federal courts have jurisdiction. See Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 131, 87 S.Ct. 339, 347, 17 L.Ed.2d 235 (1966). To the extent the expectations of the Framers are discernible and relevant to this case, they must therefore relate to the special problem of review by federal courts of actions of the federal legislature. This is of course a problem of separation of powers and is to be considered in determining justiciability. See Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 210, 82 S.Ct. 691, 706 (1962).

1960 Respondents first contend that this is not a case 'arising under' the Constitution within the meaning of Art. III. They emphasize that Art. I, s 5, assigns to each House of Congress the power to judge the elections and qualifications of its own members and to punish its members for disorderly behavior. Respondents also note that under Art. I, s 3, the Senate has the 'sole power' to try all impeachments. Respondents argue that these delegations (to 'judge,' to 'punish,' and to 'try') to the Legislative Branch are explicit grants of ' judicial power' to the Congress and constitute specific exceptions *514 to the general mandate of Art. III that the 'judicial power' shall be vested in the federal courts. Thus, respondents maintain, the ' power conferred on the courts by article III does not authorize this Court to do anything more than declare its lack of jurisdiction to proceed.'[FN36]

FN36. Brief for Respondents 39.

[22] We reject this contention.Article III, s 1, provides that the 'judicial Power * * * shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may * * * establish.'Further, s 2 mandates that the 'judicial Power shall extend to all Cases * * * arising under this Constitution * * *.' It has long been held that a suit 'arises under' the Constitution if a petitioner's claim 'will be sustained if the Constitution * * * (is) given one construction and will be defeated if (it is) given another.'[FN37]Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 685, 66

S.Ct. 773, 777, 90 L.Ed. 939 (1946). See King County v. Seattle School District No. 1, 263 U.S. 361, 363-364, 44 S.Ct. 127, 127-128, 68 L.Ed. 339 (1923). Cf. Osborn v. Bank of the United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L.Ed. 204 (1824). See generally C. Wright, Federal Courts 48-52 (1963). Thus, this case clearly is one 'arising under' the Constitution as the Court has interpreted that phrase. Any bar to federal courts reviewing the judgments made by the House or Senate in excluding a member arises from the allocation of powers between the two branches of the Federal Government (a question of justiciability), and not from the petitioners' failure to state a claim based on federal law.

FN37. Petitioners' complaint is predicated, inter alia, on several sections of Article I, Article III, and several amendments to the Constitution. Respondents do not challenge the substantiality of these claims.

Respondents next contend that the Court of Appeals erred in ruling that petitioners' suit is authorized by a jurisdictional statute, i.e., 28 U.S.C. s 1331(a)*515 Section 1331(a) provides that district courts shall have jurisdiction in 'all civil actions wherein the matter in controversy * * * arises under the Constitution * * *.' Respondents urge that even though a case may 'arise under the Constitution' for purposes of Art. III, it does not necessarily ' arise under the Constitution' for purposes of s 1331(a). Although they recognize there is little legislative history concerning the enactment of s 1331(a), respondents argue that the history of the period when the section was first enacted indicates that the drafters did not intend to include suits questioning the exclusion of Congressmen in this grant of 'federal question' jurisdiction.

Respondents claim that the passage of the Force Act FN38 in 1870 lends support to their interpretation of the intended 1961 scope of s 1331. The Force Act gives the district courts jurisdiction over 'any civil action to recover possession of any office * * * wherein it appears that the sole question * * * arises out of denial of the right to vote * * * on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.' However, the Act specifically excludes suits concerning the office of Congressman. Respondents maintain that this exclusion demonstrates Congress' intention to prohibit federal courts from entertaining suits regarding the seating of Congressmen.

FN38. Act of May 31, 1870, s 23, 16 Stat. 146. The statute is now 28 U.S.C. s 1344.

[23] We have noted that the grant of jurisdiction in s 1331(a), while made in the language used in Art. III, is not in all respects co-extensive with the potential for federal jurisdiction found in Art. III. See Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 246, 88 S.Ct. 391, 394, 19 L.Ed.2d 444, n. 8 (1967). Nevertheless, it has generally been recognized that the intent of the drafters was to provide a broad jurisdictional grant to the federal courts. See, e.g., Mishkin, The Federal 'Question' in the District Courts, 53 Col.L.Rev.*516 157, 160 (1953); Chadbourn & Levin, Original Jurisdiction of Federal Questions, 90 U.Pa.L.Rev. 639, 644-645 (1942). And, as noted above, the resolution of this case depends directly on construction of the Constitution. The Court has consistently held such suits are authorized by the statute.Bell v. Hood, supra;King County v. Seattle School District No. 1, supra.See, e.g., Gully v. First Nat. Bank in Meridian, 299 U.S. 109, 112, 57 S.Ct. 96, 97, 81 L.Ed. 70 (1936); The Fair v. Kohler Die & Specialty Co., 228 U.S. 22, 25, 33 S.Ct. 410, 411, 57 L.Ed. 716 (1913).

[24] As respondents recognize, there is nothing in the wording or legislative history of s 1331 or in the decisions of this Court which would indicate that there is any basis for the interpretation they would give that section. Nor do we think the passage of the Force Act indicates that s 1331 does not confer jurisdiction in this case. The Force Act is limited to election challenges where a denial of the right to vote in violation of the Fifteenth Amendment is alleged. See 28 U.S.C. s 1344. Further, the Act was passed five years before the original version of s 1331 was enacted. While it might be inferred that Congress intended to give each House the exclusive power to decide congressional election challenges, FN39 there is absolutely no indication that the passage of this Act evidences an intention to impose other restrictions on the broad grant of jurisdiction in s 1331.

FN39. See Cong.Globe, 41st Cong., 2d Sess., 3872 (1870).

JUSTICIABILITY.

Having concluded that the Court of Appeals correctly ruled that the District Court had jurisdiction over the subject matter, we turn to the question whether the case is justiciable. Two determinations must be made in this regard. First, we must decide whether the claim *517 presented and the relief sought are of the type which admit of judicial resolution. Second, we must determine whether the structure of the Federal Government renders the issue presented a 'political question' -that is, a question which is not justiciable in federal court because of the separation of powers provided by the Constitution.

A. General Considerations.

[25] In deciding generally whether a claim is justiciable, a court must determine whether 'the duty asserted can be judicially identified and its breach judicially determined, and whether protection for the right asserted can be judicially molded.'1962Baker v. Carr, supra, at 198, 82 S.Ct. at 700. Respondents do not seriously contend that the duty asserted and its alleged breach cannot be judicially determined. If petitioners are correct, the House had a duty to seat Powell once it determined he met the standing requirements set forth in the Constitution. It is undisputed that he met those requirements and that he was nevertheless excluded.

Respondents do maintain, however, that this case is not justiciable because, they assert, it is impossible for a federal court to 'mold effective relief for resolving this case.'Respondents emphasize that petitioners asked for coercive relief against the officers of the House, and, they contend, federal courts cannot issue mandamus or injunctions compelling officers or employees of the House to perform specific official acts. Respondents rely primarily on the Speech or Debate Clause to support this contention.

[26][27][28] We need express no opinion about the appropriateness of coercive relief in this case, for petitioners sought a declaratory judgment, a form of relief the District Court could have issued. The Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. s 2201, provides that a district court may 'declare the rights * * * of any interested party * * * whether or not further relief is or could be sought.'The *518 availability of declaratory relief depends on whether there is a live dispute between the parties, Golden v. Zwickler, 394 U.S. 103, 89 S.Ct. 956, 22 L.Ed.2d 113 (1969), and a request for declaratory relief may be considered independently of whether other forms of relief are appropriate. See United Public Workers of America v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 93, 67 S.Ct. 556, 566, 91 L.Ed. 754 (1947); 6A J. Moore, Federal Practice 57.08(3) (2d ed. 1966); cf. United States v. California, 332 U.S. 19, 25-26, 67 S.Ct. 1658, 1661-1662, 91 L.Ed. 1889 (1947). We thus conclude that in terms of the general criteria of justiciability, this case is justiciable.

B. Political Question Doctrine.

1. Textually Demonstrable Constitutional Commitment.

[29] Respondents maintain that even if this case is otherwise justiciable, it presents only a political question. It is well established that the federal courts will not adjudicate political questions. See, e.g., Coleman v. Miller, 307 U.S. 433, 59 S.Ct. 972, 83 L.Ed. 1385 (1939); Oetjen v. Central Leather Co., 246 U.S. 297, 38 S.Ct. 309, 62 L.Ed. 726 (1918). In Baker v. Carr, supra, we noted that political questions are not justiciable primarily because of the separation of powers within the Federal Government. After reviewing our decisions in this area, we concluded that on the surface of any case held to involve a political question was at least one of the following formulations:

'a textually demonstrable constitutional commitment of the issue to a co-ordinate political department; or a lack of judicially discoverable and manageable standards for resolving it; or the impossibility of deciding without an initial policy determination of a kind clearly for nonjudicial discretion; or the impossibility of a court's undertaking independent resolution without expressing lack of the respect due co-ordinate branches of government; or an unusual need for unquestioning adherence to a political decision already made; or the potentiality 519 of embarrassment from multifarious pronouncements by various departments on one question.'369 U.S., at 217, 82 S.Ct., at 710.

[30] Respondents' first contention is that this case presents a political question because under Art. I, s 5, there has been a 'textually demonstrable constitutional commitment' to the House of the ' adjudicatory power' to determine Powell's qualifications. Thus it is argued that the House, and the House *1963 alone, has power to determine who is qualified to be a member.[FN40]

FN40. Respondents rely on Barry v. United States ex rel. Cunningham, 279 U.S. 597, 49 S.Ct. 452, 73 L.Ed. 867 (1929). Barry involved the power of the Senate to issue an arrest warrant to summon a witness to give testimony concerning a senatorial election. The Court ruled that issuance of the warrant was constitutional, relying on the power of the Senate under Art. I, s 5, to be the judge of the elections of its members. Respondents particularly rely on language the Court used in discussing the power conferred by Art. I, s 5. The Court noted that under s 5 the Senate could 'render a judgment which is beyond the authority of any other tribunal to review.'Id., at 613, 49 S.Ct. at 455.

Barry provides no support for respondents' argument that this case is not justiciable, however.First, in Barry the Court reached the merits of the controversy, thus indicating that actions allegedly taken pursuant to Art. I, s 5, are not automatically immune from judicial review. Second, the quoted statement is dictum; and, later in the same opinion, the Court noted that the Senate may exercise its power subject 'to the restraints imposed by or found in the implications of the Constitution.'Id., at 614, 49 S.Ct. at 455. Third, of course, the statement in Barry leaves open the particular question that must first be resolved in this case: the existence and scope of the textual commitment to the House to judge the qualifications of members.

In order to determine whether there has been a textual commitment to a coordinate department of the Government, we must interpret the Constitution. In other words, we must first determine what power the Constitution confers upon the House through Art. I, s 5, before we can determine to what extent, if any, the exercise of that power is subject to judicial review. Respondents520 maintain that the House has broad power under s 5, and, they argue, the House may determine which are the qualifications necessary for membership. On the other hand, petitioners allege that the Constitution provides that an elected representative may be denied his seat only if the House finds he does not meet one of the standing qualifications expressly prescribed by the Constitution.

If examination of s 5 disclosed that the Constitution gives the House judicially unreviewable power to set qualifications for membership and to judge whether prospective members meet those qualifications, further review of the House determination might well be barred by the political question doctrine. On the other hand, if the Constitution gives the House power to judge only whether elected members possess the three standing qualifications set forth in the Constitution,[FN41] further consideration would be necessary to determine whether any of the other formulations of the political question doctrine are 521 ' inextricable from the case at bar.'[FN42]Baker v. Carr, supra, at 217, 82 S.Ct. at 710.

FN41. In addition to the three qualifications set forth in Art. I, s 2, Art. I, s 3, cl. 7, authorizes the disqualification of any person convicted in an impeachment proceeding from 'any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States'; Art. I, s 6, cl. 2, provides that 'no Person holding any Office under the United States, shall be a Member of either House during his Continuance in Office'; and s 3 of the 14th Amendment disqualifies any person 'who, having previously taken an oath * * * to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof.'It has been argued that each of these provisions, as well as the Guarantee Clause of Article IV and the oath requirement of Art. VI, cl. 3, is no less a ' qualification' within the meaning of Art. I, s 5, than those set forth in Art. I, s 2. Dionisopoulos, A Commentary on the Constitutional Issues in the Powell and Related Cases, 17 J.Pub.L. 103, 111-115 (1968). We need not reach this question, however, since both sides agree that Powell was not ineligible under any of these provisions.

FN42. Consistent with this interpretation, federal courts might still be barred by the political question doctrine from reviewing the House's factual determination that a member did not meet one of the standing qualifications. This is an issue not presented in this case and we express no view as to its resolution.

1964 In other words, whether there is a 'textually demonstrable constitutional commitment of the issue to a coordinate political department' of government and what is the scope of such commitment are questions we must resolve for the first time in this case.[FN43] For, as we pointed out in Baker v. Carr, supra,'(d)eciding whether a matter has in any measure been committed by the Constitution to another branch of government, or whether the action of that branch exceeds whatever authority has been committed, is itself a delicate exercise in constitutional interpretation, and is a responsibility of this Court as ultimate interpreter of the Constitution.'Id., at 211, 82 S.Ct. at 706.

FN43. Indeed, the force of respondents' other arguments that this case presents a political question depends in great measure on the resolution of the textual commitment question. See Part VI, B(2), infra.

[31] In order to determine the scope of any 'textual commitment' under Art. I, s 5, we necessarily must determine the meaning of the phrase to 'be the Judge of the Qualifications of its own Members.' Petitioners argue that the records of the debates during the Constitutional Convention; available commentary from the post-Convention, pre-ratification period; and early congressional applications of Art. I, s 5, support their construction of the section. Respondents insist, however, that a careful examination of the pre-Convention practices of the English Parliament and American colonial assemblies demonstrates that by 1787, a legislature's power to judge the qualifications of its members was generally understood*522 to encompass exclusion or expulsion on the ground that an individual's character or past conduct rendered him unfit to serve. When the Constitution and the debates over its adoption are thus viewed in historical perspective, argue respondents, it becomes clear that the 'qualifications' expressly set forth in the Constitution were not meant to limit the long-recognized legislative power to exclude or expel at will, but merely to establish 'standing incapacities,' which could be altered only by a constitutional amendment. Our examination of the relevant historical materials leads us to the conclusion that petitioners are correct and that the Constitution leaves the House[FN44] without authority to exclude any person, duly elected by his constituents, who meets all the requirements for membership expressly prescribed in the Constitution.

FN44. Since Art. I, s 5, cl. 1, applies to both Houses of Congress, the scope of the Senate's power to judge the qualifications of its members necessarily is identical to the scope of the House's power, with the exception, of course, that Art. I, s 3, cl. 3, establishes different age and citizenship requirements for membership in the Senate.

a. The Pre-Convention Precedents.

Since our rejection of respondents' interpretation of s 5 results in significant measure from a disagreement with their historical analysis, we must consider the relevant historical antecedents in considerable detail. As do respondents, we begin with the English and colonial precedents.

The earliest English exclusion precedent appears to be a declaration by the House of Commons in 1553 'that Alex. Nowell, being Prebendary (i.e., a clergyman) in Westminster, and thereby having voice in the Convocation House, cannot be a member of this House * * *.' J. Tanner, Tudor Constitutional Documents: A.D. 1485-1603, p. 596 (2d ed. 1930). This decision, however, was *523 consistent with a long-established tradition that clergy who participated in their own representative assemblies or convocations were ineligible for membership in the House of Commons.[FN45] See 1 E. Porritt, 1965 The Unreformed House of Commons 125 (1963); T. Taswell-Langmead's English Constitutional History 142-143 (11th ed. T. Plucknett 1960). The traditional ineligibility of clergymen was recognized as a standing incapacity.[FN46] See 1 W. Blackstone's Commentaries *175. Nowell's exclusion, therefore, is irrelevant to the present case, for petitioners concede-and we agree-that if Powell had not met one of the standing qualifications set forth in the Constitution, he could have been excluded under Art. I, s 5. The earliest colonial exclusions also fail to support respondents' theory.[FN47]

FN45. Since the reign of Henry IV (1399-1413), no clergyman had sat in the House of Commons. 1 E. Porritt, The Unreformed House of Commons 125 (1963).

FN46. Because the British do not have a written constitution, standing incapacities or disqualifications for membership in Parliament are derived from 'the custom and law of parliament.' 1 W. Blackstone's Commentaries *162; see id., at *175. The groups thus disqualified as of 1770 included aliens; minors; judges who sat in the House of Lords; clergy who were represented in their own convocation; persons 'attainted of treason or felony'; sheriffs, mayors, and bailiffs as representatives for their own jurisdictions; and certain taxing officials and officers of the Crown. Id., at *175-176. Not until the exclusion of John Wilkes, discussed infra, did Blackstone subscribe to the theory that, in addition, the Commons could declare ineligible an individual 'in particular (unspecified) circumstances * * * for that parliament' if it deemed him unfit to serve on grounds not encompassed by the recognized standing incapacities. As we explain, infra, this position was subsequently repudiated by the House in 1782. A Clerk of the House of Commons later referred to cases in which this theory was relied upon 'as examples of an excess of * * * jurisdiction by the Commons; for one house of Parliament cannot create a disability unknown to the law.'T. May's Parliamentary Practice 67 (13th ed. T. Webster 1924).

FN47. In 1619, the Virginia House of Burgesses challenged the eligibility of certain delegates on the ground that they did not hold their plantations under proper patents from the Virginia Company in England. See generally 7 The Federal and State Constitutions, Colonia Charters, and Other Organic Laws 3783-3810 (F. Thorpe ed. 1909) (hereinafter cited as Thorpe). One of them, a Captain Warde, was admitted on condition that he obtain the necessary patent. The others, representatives from Martin's Brandon plantation, were excluded on the ground that the owner of the plantation had claimed that his patent exempted him from the colony's laws. See Journals of the House of Burgesses of Virginia: 1619-1658/59, pp. 4-5 (1915); M. Clarke, Parliamentary Privilege in the American Colonies 133-134 (1943). The questions presented by these two cases, therefore, seem to be jurisdictional in nature; that is, an attempt was made to gain representation for plantations over which the assembly may have had no power to act. Thus viewed these cases are analogous to the exclusions for failure to comply with standing qualifications. They certainly are not precedents which support the view that a legislative body could exclude members for mere character defects or prior misconduct disapproved by the assembly. See generally Clarke, supra, at 132-204; J. Greene, The Quest for Power: The Lower Houses of Assembly in the Southern Royal Colonies: 1689-1776, pp. 171-204 (1963).

FN48. For example, in 1585 the Commons expelled a Doctor Parry for unspecified misbehavior. A Compleat Journal of the Votes, Speeches and Debates of the House of Lords and House of Commons Throughout the Whole Reign of Queen Elizabeth, of Glorious Memory 352 (S. D'Ewes ed. 1708); and in 1628 Sir Edmund Sawyer was expelled because he had sought to induce a witness to suppress evidence against Sir Edmund in testimony before the House. 1 H.C.Jour. 917.

FN49. In expelling Sir Edmund Sawyer in 1628, the Commons declared 'him to be unworthy ever to serve as a Member of this House.'Ibid. Almost identical language was used in the expulsion of H. Benson in 1941.2 id., at 301. But by 1642, the formula had been changed to 'disabled to serve any longer in this Parliament as a Member of this House. * * *'Id., at 703. (Emphasis added.) By the 18th century it was apparently well established that an expulsion by the House of Commons could last no longer than the duration of the Parliament from which the member was expelled. See 1 W. Blackstone's Commentaries *176.

FN50. For example, in 1652, the Virginia House of Burgesses expelled two members for prior conduct disapproved by the assembly, Journals of the House of Burgesses, supra, at 85; and in 1683, Rhode Island expelled a member 'from acting in this present Assembly' for refusing to answer a court summons. 1 S. Arnold, History of the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations 289 (1859). See generally Clarke, supra, at 173-204.

Apparently the re-election of an expelled member first occurred in 1712. The House of Commons had expelled Robert Walpole for receiving kickbacks for contracts relating to 'foraging the Troops,' 17 H.C.Jur. 28, and committed him to the Tower. Nevertheless, two months later he was re-elected. The House thereupon resolved '(t)hat Robert Walpole, Esquire, having been, this Session of Parliament, committed a Prisoner to the Tower of London, and expelled (from) this House, * * * is, incapable of being elected a Member to serve in this present Parliament * * *.'Id., at 128.(Second emphasis added.) A new election was ordered, and Walpole was not re-elected. At least two similar exclusions after an initial expulsion were effected in the American colonies during the first half of the 18th century.[FN51]

FN51. In 1726, the Massachusetts House of Representatives excluded Gershom Woodle, who had been expelled on three previous occasions as 'unworthy to be a Member.' 7 Journals of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts 1726-1727, pp. 4-5, 15, 68-69 (1926). In 1758, North Carolina expelled Francis Brown for perjury. He was re-elected twice in 1760 and excluded on both occasions; however, when he was elected at the 1761 general elections, he was allowed to take his seat. 5 Colonial Records of North Carolina 1057-1058 (1887); 6 id., at 374, 474, 662-663, 672-673 (1888). There may have been similar exclusions of two men elected in 1710 to the New Jersey Assembly. See Clarke, supra, at 197-198.

*526 Respondents urge that the Walpole case provides strong support for their conclusion that the pre-Convention English and colonial practice was that members-elect could be excluded for their prior misdeeds at the sole discretion of the legislative body to which they had been elected. However, this conclusion overlooks an important limiting characteristic of the Walpole case and of both the colonial exclusion cases on which respondents rely: the excluded member had been previously expelled. Moreover, Walpole was excluded only for the remainder of the Parliament from which he had been expelled.'The theory seems to have been that expulsion lasted as long as the parliament * * *.' Taswell-Langmead, supra, at 584, n. 99. Accord, 1 W. Blackstone's Commentaries *176. Thus, Walpole's exclusion justifies only the proposition that an expulsion lasted for the remainder of the particular Parliament, and the expelled member was therefore subject to subsequent exclusion if reelected prior to the next general election. The two colonial cases arguably support a somewhat broader principle, i.e., that the assembly could permanently expel. Apparently the colonies did not consistently adhere to the theory that an expulsion lasted only until the election of 1967 a new assembly. M. Clarke, Parliamentary Privilege in the American Colonies 196-202 (1943).[FN52] Clearly, however, none of these cases supports respondents' contention that by the 18th century the English Parliament *527 and colonial assemblies had assumed absolute discretion to exclude any member-elect they deemed unfit to serve. Rather, they seem to demonstrate that a member could be excluded only if he had first been expelled.

FN52. Significantly, the occasional assumption of this broader expulsion power did not go unchallenged, Clarke, supra, at 196-202; and it was not supported by the only parliamentary precedent, the Walpole case.

Even if these cases could be construed to support respondents' contention, their precedential value was nullified prior to the Constitutional Convention. By 1782, after a long struggle, the arbitrary exercise of the power to exclude was unequivocally repudiated by a House of Commons resolution which ended the most notorious English election dispute of the 18th century-the John Wilkes case. While serving as a member of Parliament in 1763, Wilkes published an attack on a recent peace treaty with France, calling it a product of bribery and condemning the Crown's ministers as "the tools of despotism and corruption."R. Postgate, That Devil Wilkes 53 (1929). Wilkes and others who were involved with the publication in which the attack appeared were arrested.[FN53] Prior to Wilkes' trial, the House of Commons expelled him for publishing 'a false, scandalous, and seditious libel.' 15 Parl.Hist.Eng. 1393 (1764). Wilkes then fled to France and was subsequently sentenced to exile. 9 L. Gipson, The British Empire Before the American Revolution 37 (1956).

FN53. Pursuant to a general warrant, Wilkes was arrested, his home ransacked, and his private papers seized. In his later election campaigns, Wilkes denounced the use of general warrants, asserting that he was fighting for liberty itself. See 11 L. Gipson, the British Empire Before the American Revolution 213-214 (1965).

Wilkes returned to England in 1768, the same year in which the Parliament from which he had been expelled was dissolved. He was elected to the next Parliament, and he then surrendered himself to the Court of King's Bench. Wilkes was convicted of seditious libel and sentenced to 22 months' imprisonment. The new Parliament*528 declared him ineligible for membership and ordered that he be 'expelled this House.' 16 Parl.Hist.Eng. 545 (1769). Although Wilkes was re-elected to fill the vacant seat three times, each time the same Parliament declared him ineligible and refused to seat him. See 1 Gipson, supra, at 207-215.[FN54]

FN54. The issue before the Commons was clear: Could the Commons 'put in any disqualification, that is not put in by the law of the land.' 1 H. Cavendish's Debates 384 (J. Wright ed. 1841). The affirmative answer was somewhat less than resounding. After Wilkes' third re-election, the motion to seat his opponent carried 197 to 143.

Wilkes was released from prison in 1770 and was again elected to Parliament in 1774. For the next several years, he unsuccessfully campaigned to have the resolutions expelling him and declaring him incapable of re-election expunged from the record. Finally, in 1782, the House of Commons voted to expunge them, resolving that the prior House actions were 'subversive of the rights of the whole body of electors of this kingdom.' 22 Parl.Hist.Eng. 1411 (1782).

With the successful resolution of Wilkes' long and bitter struggle for the right of the British electorate to be represented by men of their own choice, it is evident that, on the eve of the Constitutional Convention, English precedent stood for the proposition that 'the law of the land had regulated the qualifications 1968 of members to serve in parliament' and those qualifications were 'not occasional but fixed.' 16 Parl.Hist.Eng. 589, 590 (1769). Certainly English practice did not support, nor had it ever supported, respondents' assertion that the power to judge qualifications was generally understood to encompass the right to exclude members-elect for general misconduct not within standing qualifications. With the repudiation in 1782 of the only two precedents *529 for excluding a member-elect who had been previously expelled, [FN55] it appears that the House of Commons also repudiated any 'control over the eligibility of candidates, except in the administration of the laws which define their (standing) qualifications.'T. May's Parliamentary Practice 66 (13th ed. T. Webster 1924). See Taswell-Langmead, supra, at 585.[FN56]

FN55. The validity of the House's action against Wilkes rested to a large extent on the validity of the Walpole precedent. Taswell-Langmead's, supra, at 585. Thus, the House of Commons resolution expunging, as subversive to the rights of the whole electorate, the action taken against Wilkes was also a tacit repudiation of the similar action taken against Walpole in 1712.

FN56. English law is apparently the same today. See T. May's Parliamentary Practice 105-108 (17th ed. B. Cocks 1964).

The resolution of the Wilkes case similarly undermined the precedential value of the earlier colonial exclusions, for the principles upon which they had been based were repudiated by the very body the colonial assemblies sought to imitate and whose precedents they generally followed. See Clarke, supra, at 54, 59-60, 196. Thus, in 1784 the Council of Censors of the Pennsylvania Assembly [FN57] denounced the prior expulsion of an unnamed assemblyman, ruling that his expulsion had not been effected in conformity with the recently enacted Pennsylvania Constitution.[FN58] In the course 1969 of its report, the *530 Council denounced by name the Parliamentary exclusions of both Walpole and Wilkes, stating that they 'reflected dishonor on none but the authors of these violences. 'Pennsylvania Convention Proceedings: 1776 and 1790, p. 89 (1825).

FN57. The Council of Censors was established by the 1776 Pennsylvania Constitution. It was an elected body that was specifically charged with the duty 'to enquire whether the constitution has been preserved inviolate in every part; and whether the legislative and executive branches of government have performed their duty as guardians of the people, or assumed to themselves, or exercised other or greater powers than they are intitled to by the constitution.'Pa.Const. of 1776, s 47, 5 Thorpe 3091. See Pennsylvania Convention Proceedings: 1776 and 1790, Introduction, iv (1825).

FN58. In discussing the case, respondents characterize the earlier action as an exclusion. The Council of Censors, however, stated that the general assembly had resolved that the member 'is expelled from his seat.' Pennsylvania Convention Procedings, supra, at 89. The account of the dissenting committee members suggests that the term expulsion was properly used. They note that in February 1783 the assembly received a letter from the Comptroller General charging the assemblyman with fraud. Not until September 9, 1783, did the assembly vote to expel him. Presumably, he held his seat until that time. But, even if he had been excluded, arguably he was excluded for not meeting a standing incapacity, since the Pennsylvania Constitution of 1776 required assemblymen to be 'most noted for wisdom and virtue.'Pa.Const. of 1776, s 7, 5 Thorpe 3084. (Emphasis added.) In fact, the dissenting members of the Committee argued that the expelled member was ineligible under this very provision. Pennsylvania Convention Proceedings, supra, at 89.

Respondents cite one other exclusion during the period between the Declaration of Independence and the Constitutional Convention 11 years later. In 1780 the Virginia Assembly excluded John Breckenridge because he was a minor. Minority, of course, was a traditional standing incapacity, and Charles been correct in concluding that this exclusion been correct in concluding that this exlcusion was probably based upon an interpretation of the state constitutional requirement that members must be duly qualified according to law.Va.Const., 7 Thorpe 3816. See C. Warren, The Making of the Constitution 423, n. 1 (1928). Respondents, based upon their misinterpretation of the Pennsylvania case just discussed, criticize Charles Warren for concluding that there had been only one exclusion during this period. Our research, however, has disclosed no other cases.

Wilkes' struggle and his ultimate victory had a significant impact in the American colonies. His advocacy of libertarian causes[FN59] and his pursuit of the right to be 531 seated in Parliament became a cause ce lebre for the colonists.'(T)he cry of ' Wilkes and Liberty' echoed loudly across the Atlantic Ocean as wide publicity was given to every step of Wolkes's public career in the colonial press * * *. The reaction in America took on significant proportions. Colonials tended to identify their cause with that of Wilkes. They saw him as a popular hero and a martyr to the struggle for liberty. * * * They named towns, counties, and even children in his honour.' 11 Gipson, supra, at 222.[FN60] It is within this historical context that we must examine the Convention debates in 1787, just five years after Wilkes' final victory.

FN59. Wilkes had established a reputation both in England and the Colonies as a champion of free elections, freedom from arbitrary arrest and seizure, and freedom of the press. See 11 Gipson, supra, at 191-222.

FN60. See R. Postgate, That Devil Wilkes 171-172, 173-174 (1929). During the House of Commons debates in 1781, a member remarked that expelling Wilkes had been 'one of the great causes which had separated * * * (England) from America.' 22 Parl.Hist.Eng. 100-101 (1781).

The writings of the pamphleteer 'Junius'

The writings of the pamphleteer 'Junius' were widely reprinted in colonial newspapers and lent considerable support to the revolutionary cause. See 3 Dictionary of American History 190 (1940). Letter XVIII of the 'Letters of Junius' bitterly attacked the exclusion of Wilkes. This letter, addressed to Blackstone, asserted:

'You cannot but know, sir, that what was Mr. Wilkes's case yesterday may be yours or mine to-morrow, and that, consequently the common right of every subject of the realm is invaded by it. * * * If the expulsion of a member, not under any legal disability, of itself creates in him an incapacity to be elected, I see a ready way marked out, by which the majority may, at any time, remove the honestest and ablest men who happen to be in opposition to them. To say that they will not make this extravagant use of their power would be a language unfit for a man so learned in the laws as you are. By your doctrine, sir, they have the power: and laws, you know, are intended to guard against what men may do, not to trust to what they will do.' 1 Letters of Junius, Letter XVIII, p. 118 (1821).

*532 b. Convention Debates.

Relying heavily on Charles Warren's analysis[FN61] of the Convention debates, petitioners argue that the proceedings manifest the Framers' unequivocal intention to deny either branch of Congress the authority to add to or otherwise vary the membership qualifications expressly set forth in the Constitution. We do not completely agree, for the debates are subject to other interpretations. However, we have concluded that the records of the debates, viewed in the context of the bitter struggle for the right to freely choose representatives which had recently concluded in England and in light of the distinction the Framers made between the power to expel and the power to exclude, indicate that petitioners' ultimate conclusion is correct.

FN61. See Warren, supra, at 399-426.

The Convention opened in late May 1787. By the end of July, the delegates adopted, with a minimum of debate, age requirements for membership in both the Senate and the House. The Convention then appointed a Committee of Detail to draft a constitution incorporating these and other resolutions adopted during the preceding months. Two days after the 1970 Committee was appointed, George Mason, of Virginia, moved that the Committee consider a clause "requiring certain qualifications of landed property & citizenship" and disqualifying from membership in Congress persons who had unsettled accounts or who were indebted to the United States. 2 Farrand 121. A vigorous debate ensued. Charles Pinckney and General Charles C. Pinckney, both of South Carolina, moved to extend these incapacities to both the judicial and executive branches of the new government. But John Dickinson, of Delaware, opposed the inclusion of any statement of qualifications in the Constitution. He argued that it would be 'impossible*533 to make a compleat one, and a partial one would by implication tie up the hands of the Legislature from supplying the omissions.'Id., at 123.[FN62] Dickinson's argument was rejected; and, after eliminating the disqualification of debtors and the limitation to ' landed' property, the Convention adopted Mason's proposal to instruct the Committee of Detail to draft a property qualification. Id., at 116-117.

FN62. Dickinson also said that a built-in veneration for wealth would be inconsistent with the republican ideal that merit alone should determine who holds the public trust. 2 Farrand 123.

The Committee reported in early August, proposing no change in the age requirement; however, it did recommend adding citizenship and residency requirements for membership. After first debating what the precise requirements should be, on August 8, 1787, the delegates unanimously adopted the three qualifications embodied in Art. I, s 2. Id., at 213.[FN63]

FN63. On August 10, a delegate moved to reconsider the citizenship qualification. The delegate proposed to substitute a three-year requirement for the seven-year requirement already agreed upon. The motion passed. Id., at 251. However, when this proposal was considered on August 13, it was rejected. Id., at 265-266. infra.

On August 10, the Convention considered the Committee of Detail's proposal that the 'Legislature of the United States shall have authority to establish such uniform qualifications of the members of each House, with regard to property, as to the said Legislature shall seem expedient.'Id., at 179. The debate on this proposal discloses much about the views of the Framers on the issue of qualifications. For example, James Madison urged its rejection, stating that the proposal would vest
'an improper & dangerous power in the Legislature. The qualifications of electors and elected were fundamental articles in a Republican Govt. and ought to be fixed by the Constitution. If the Legislature *534 could regulate those of either, it can by degrees subvert the Constitution. A Republic may be converted into an aristocracy or oligarchy as well by limiting the number capable of being elected, as the number authorised to elect. * * * It was a power also, which might be made subservient to the views of one faction agst. another. Qualifications founded on artificial distinctions may be devised, by the stronger in order to keep out partizans of (a weaker) faction.'Id., at 249-250.[FN64]

FN64. Charles Pinckney proposed that the President, judges, and legislators of the United States be required to swear that they possessed a specified amount of unincumbered property. Benjamin Franklin expressed his strong opposition, observing that '(s)ome of the greatest rogues he was ever acquainted with, were the richest rogues.'Id., at 249. He voiced the fear that a property requirement would 'discourage the common people from removing to this Country.'Ibid. Thereafter, 'the Motion of Mr. Pinkney (sic) was rejected Motion of Mr. Pinkney (sic) was rejected by so general a no, that the States were not called.'Ibid. (Emphasis in original.)

1971 Significantly, Madison's argument was not aimed at the imposition of a property qualification as such, but rather at the delegation to the Congress of the discretionary power to establish any qualifications. The parallel between Madison's arguments and those made in Wilkes' behalf is striking.[FN65]

FN65.'That the right of the electors to be represented by men of their own choice, was so essential for the preservation of all their other rights, that it ought to be considered as one of the most sacred parts of our constitution. * * * That the law of the land had regulated the qualifications of members to serve in parliament, and that the freeholders * * * had an indisputable right to return whom they thought proper, provided he was not disqualified by any of those known laws. * * * They are not occasional but fixed: to rule and govern the question as it shall arise; not to start up on a sudden, and shift from side to side, as the caprice of the day or the fluctuation of party shall direct.' 16 Parl.Hist.Eng. 589-590 (1769).

*535 In view of what followed Madison's speech, it appears that on this critical day the Framers were facing and then rejecting the possibility that the legislature would have power to usurp the ' indisputable right (of the people) to return whom they thought proper'[FN66] to the legislature. Oliver Ellsworth, of Connecticut, noted that a legislative power to establish property qualifications was exceptional and 'dangerous because it would be much more liable to abuse.'Id., at 250. Gouverneur Morris then moved to strike 'with regard to property ' from the Committee's proposal. His intention was 'to leave the Legislature entirely at large.'Ibid. Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina, expressed concern that if a majority of the legislature should happen to be 'composed of any particular description of men, of lawyers for example, * * * the future elections might be secured to their own body.'Ibid.[FN67] Madison then referred to the British Parliament's assumption of the power to regulate the qualifications of both electors and the elected and noted that 'the abuse they had made of it was a lesson worthy of our attention. They had made the changes in both cases subservient to their own views, or to the views of political or Religious parties.'Ibid.[FN68] Shortly thereafter, *536 the Convention rejected both Gouverneur Morris' motion and the Committee's proposal. Later the same day, the Convention adopted without debate the provision authorizing each House to be 'the judge of the * * * qualifications of its own members. 'Id., at 254.

FN67. Wilkes had made essentially the same argument in one of his early attempts to have the resolutions denying him a seat expunged:
'This usurpation, if acquiesced under, would be attended with the most alarming consequences. If you can reject those disagreeable to a majority, and expel whom you please, the House of Commons will be self-created and self-existing. You may expel til you approve, and thus in effect you nominate. The original idea of this House being the representative of the Commons of the realm will be lost.' 18 Parl.Hist.Eng. 367 (1775).

FN68. Charles Warren concluded that ' Madison's reference was undoubtedly to the famous election case of John Wilkes * * *.' Warren, supra, at 420, n. 1. It is also possible, however, that he was referring to the Parliamentary Test Act, 30 Car. 2, Stat. 2, c. 1 (1678), which had excluded Catholics as a group from serving in Parliament.

One other decision made the same day is very important to determining the meaning of Art. I, s 5. When the delegates reached the Committee of Detail's proposal to empower each House to expel its members, Madison 'observed that the right of expulsion * * * was too important to be exercised by a bare majority of a quorum: and in emergencies (one) faction might be dangerously abused.'Id., at 254. He therefore moved that 'with the concurrence of two-thirds' be inserted. With the exception of one State, whose delegation was divided,1972 the motion was unanimously approved without debate, although Gouverneur Morris noted his opposition. The importance of this decision cannot be over-emphasized. None of the parties to this suit disputes that prior to 1787 the legislative powers to judge qualifications and to expel were exercised by a majority vote. Indeed, without exception, the English and colonial antecedents to Art. I, s 5, cls. 1 and 2, support this conclusion. Thus, the Convention's decision to increase the vote required to expel, because that power was 'too important to be exercised by a bare majority,' while at the same time not similarly restricting the power to judge qualifications, is compelling evidence that they considered the latter already limited by the standing qualifications previously adopted.[FN69]

FN69. Charles Warren, upon whose interpretation of these events petitioners rely, concluded that the Convention's decision to reject Gouverneur Morris' proposal and the more limited proposal of the Committee of Detail was an implicit adoption of Madison's position that the qualifications of the elected 'were fundamental articles in a Republican Govt. and ought to be fixed by the Constitution.' 2 Farrand 249-250. See Warren, supra, at 420-421. Certainly, Warren argued, ' (s)uch action would seem to make it clear that the Convention did not intend to grant to a single branch of Congress * * * the right to establish any qualifications for its members, other than those qualifications established by the Constitution itself * * *. For certainly it did not intend that a single branch of Congress should possess a power which the Convention had expressly refused to vest in the whole Congress.'Id., at 421. See 1 J. Story, Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States s 625, at 445 (1873). Although Professor Chafee argued that congressional precedents do not support this construction, he nevertheless stated that forbidding any additions to the qualifications expressed in the Constitution was 'the soundest policy.' Z. Chafee, Free Speech in the United States 256 (1941).

*537 Respondents urge, however, that these events must be considered in light of what they regard as a very significant change made in Art. I, s 2, cl. 2, by the Committee of Style. When the Committee of Detail reported the provision to the Convention, it read:
'Every member of the House of Representatives shall be of the age of twenty five years at least; shall have been a citizen of (in) the United States for at least three years before his election; and shall be, at the time of his election, a resident of the State in which he shall be chosen.'Id., at 178.

However, as finally drafted by the Committee of Style, these qualifications were stated in their present negative form. Respondents note that there are no records of the 'deliberations' of the Committee of Style. Nevertheless, they speculate that this particular change was designed to make the provision correspond to the form used by Blackstone in listing the 'standing incapacities' for membership in the House of Commons. See 1 W. Blackstone's Commentaries 175-176. Blackstone, who was an apologist for the anti-Wilkes forces in Parliament,*538 [FN70]had added to his Commentaries after Wilkes' exclusion the assertion that individuals who were not ineligible for the Commons W. Blackstone's Commentaries *175-176. be denied their seat if the Commons deemed them unfit for other reasons. [FN71] Since Blackstone's Commentaries was widely circulated in the Colonies, respondents further speculate that the 1973 Committee of Style rephrased the qualifications provision in the negative to clarify the delegates' intention 'only to prescribe the standing incapacities without imposing any other limit on the historic power of each house to judge qualifications on a case by case basis.'[FN72]

FN70. See 10 W. Holdsworth, A History of English Law 540-542 (1938).

FN71. Holdsworth notes that in the first edition of Blackstone's Commentaries Blackstone enumerated various incapacities and then concluded that ' subject to these standing restrictions and disqualifications, every subject of the realm is eligible (for membership in the House of Commons) of common right.' 1 W. Blackstone's Commentaries *176. Blackstone was called upon in Commons to defend Wilkes' exclusion and the passage was quoted against him. Blackstone retaliated by writing a pamphlet and making two additions to later editions of his Commentaries in an effort to justify the decision of Parliament. Holdsworth, supra, at 540-541.

FN72. Appendix D to Brief for Respondents 52.

Respondents' argument is inherently weak, however, because it assumes that legislative bodies historically possessed the power to judge qualifications on a case-by-case basis. As noted above, the basis for that conclusion was the Walpole and Wilkes cases, which, by the time of the Convention, had been denounced by the House of Commons and repudiated by at least one State government. Moreover, respondents' argument misrepresents the function of the Committee of Style. It was appointed only 'to revise the stile of and arrange the articles which had been agreed to * * *.' 2 Farrand 553.*539 '(T)he Committee * * * had no authority from the Convention to make alterations of substance in the Constitution as voted by the Convention, nor did it purport to do so; and certainly the Convention had no belief * * * that any important change was, in fact, made in the provisions as to qualifications adopted by it on August 10.'[FN73]

FN73. Warren, supra, at 422, n. 1. Charles Warren buttressed his conclusion by noting that the Massachusetts Constitution of 1780 'contained affirmative qualifications for Representatives and exactly similar negative qualifications for Senators.'Ibid. Apparently, these provisions were not > considered substantively different, for each house was empowered in identical language to 'judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of their own members, as pointed out in the constitution.' Mass.Const., pt. 2, c. I, s 2, Art. IV, 3 Thorpe 1897, and s 3, Art. X, 3 Thorpe 1899. (Emphasis added.) See Warren, supra, at 422-423, n. 1.

Petitioners also argue that the post-Convention debates over the Constitution's ratification support their interpretation of s 5. For example, they emphasize Hamilton's reply to the antifed-eralist charge that the new Constitution favored the wealthy and well-born:

'The truth is that there is no method of securing to the rich the preference apprehended but by prescribing qualifications of property either for those who may elect or be elected. But this forms on part of the power to be conferred upon the national government. Its authority would be expressly restricted to the regulation of the times, the places, the manner of elections. The qualifications of the persons who may choose or be chosen, as has been remarked upon other occasions, are defined and fixed in the Constitution, and are unalterable by the legislature.'

The Federalist Papers 371 (Mentor ed. 1961). (Emphasis in last sentence added.)

> FN74. In No. 52 of The Federalist, Madison stated:
> 'The qualifications of the elected, being less carefully and properly defined by the State constitutions, and being at the same time more susceptible of uniformity, have been very properly considered and regulated by the convention. (He then enumerated the qualifications for both representatives and Senators.) * * * Under these reasonable limitations, the door of this part of the federal government is open to merit of every description, whether native or adoptive, whether young or old, and without regard to poverty or wealth, or to any particular profession or religious faith.'The Federalist Papers 326 (Mentor ed. 1961).

Respondents counter that Hamilton was actually addressing himself to criticism of Art. I, s 4, which authorizes Congress to regulate the times, places, and manner of electing members of Congress. They note that prominent antifederalists had argued that this power 1974 could be used to 'confer on the rich and well-born, all honours.'Brutus No. IV, N.Y. Journal, Nov. 29, 1787, p. 7. (Emphasis in original.) Respondents' contention, however, ignores Hamilton's express reliance on the immutability of the qualifications set forth in the Constitution.[FN75]

> FN75. Respondents dismiss Madison's assertion that the 'qualifications of the elected, * * * being at the same time more susceptible of uniformity, have been very properly considered and regulated by the convention,' as nothing more than a refutation of the charge that the new national legislature would be free to establish additional 'standing incapacities.'
> However, this conclusion cannot be reconciled with the pre-Convention history on this question, the Convention debates themselves, and, in particular, the delegates' decision to require a two-thirds vote for expulsion.

The debates at the state conventions also demonstrate the Framers' understanding that the qualifications for members of Congress had been fixed in the Constitution. Before the New York convention, for example, Hamilton emphasized: ' (T)he true principle of a republic is, that *541 the people should choose whom they please to govern them. Representation is imperfect in proportion as the current of popular favor is checked. This great source of free government, popular election, should be perfectly pure, and the most unbounded liberty allowed.' 2 Debates on the Federal Constitution 257 (J. Elliot ed. 1876) (hereinafter cited as Elliot's Debates).[FN76] In Virginia, where the Federalists faced powerful opposition by advocates of popular democracy, Wilson Carey Nicholas, a future member of both the House and Senate and later Governor of the State, met the arguments that the new Constitution violated democratic principles with the following interpretation of Art. I, s 2, cl. 2, as it respects the qualifications of the elected: 'It has ever been considered a great security to liberty, that very few should be excluded from the right of being chosen to the legislature. This Constitution has amply attended to this idea. We find no qualifications required except those of age and residence, which create a certainty of their judgment being matured, and of being attached to their state.' 3 Elliot's Debates 8.

> FN76. At the same convention, Robert Livingston, one of the new Constitution's most ardent supporters and one of the State's most substantial landowners, endorsed this same fundamental principle: 'The people are the best judges who ought to represent them. To dictate and control them, to tell them whom they shall not elect, is to abridge their natural rights.' 2 Elliot's Debates 292-293.

c. Post-Ratification.

As clear as these statements appear, respondents dismiss them as 'general statements * * * directed to other issues.'[FN77] They suggest that far more relevant is Congress' own understanding of its power to judge qualifications as manifested in post-ratification exclusion cases. Unquestionably, both the House and the Senate have excluded memberselect for reasons other than their *542 failure to meet the Constitution's standing qualifications. For almost the first 100 years of its existence, however, Congress strictly limited its power to judge the qualifications of its members to those enumerated in the Constitution.

> FN77. Appendix D to Brief for Respondents 62.

Congress was first confronted with the issue in 1807, FN78 when the eligibility of 1975 William McCreery was challenged because he did not meet additional residency requirements imposed by the State of Maryland. In recommending that he be seated, the House Committee of Elections reasoned:

> FN78. In 1797, during the 5th Congress, 1st Session, the House considered expelling Matthew Lyon, a Republican, for sedition. The vote to expel, however, was 49 to 45, and broke down largely along partisan lines. Although Lyon's opponents, the Federalists, retained a majority in the 6th Congress, to which Lyon was reelected, and although there were political advantages to be gained from trying to prevent him from taking his seat, there was no effort made to exclude him. See Dionisopoulos, A Commentary on the Constitutional Issues in the Powell and Related Cases, 17 J.Pub.L. 103, 123-127 (1968).

'The committee proceeded to examine the Constitution, with relation to the case submitted to them, and find that qualifications of members are therein determined, without reserving any authority to the State Legislatures to change, add to, or diminish those qualifications; and that, by that instrument, Congress is constituted the sole judge of the qualifications prescribed by it, and are obliged to decide agreeably to the Constitutional rules * * *. ' 17 annals of Cong. 871 (1807).

Lest there be any misunderstanding of the basis for the committee's recommendation, during the ensuing debate the chairman explained the principles by which the committee was governed:

'The Committee of Elections considered the qualifications of members to have been unalterably determined*543 by the Federal Convention, unless changed by an authority equal to that which framed the Constitution at first; that neither the State nor the Federal Legislatures are vested with authority to add to those qualifications, so as to change them. * * * Congress, by the Federal Constitution, are not authorized to prescribe the qualifications of their own members, but they are authorized to judge of their qualifications; in doing so, however, they must be governed by the rules prescribed by the Federal Constitution, and by them only. These are the principles on which the Election Committee have made up their report, and upon which their resolution is founded.'Id., at 872.

The chairman emphasized that the committee's narrow construction of the power of the House to judge qualifications was compelled by the ' fundamental principle in a free government,'id., at 873, that restrictions upon the people to choose their own representatives must be limited to those ' absolutely necessary for the safety of the society.' Id., at 874. At the conclusion of a lengthy debate, which tended to center on the more narrow issue of the power of the States to add to the standing qualifications set forth in the Constitution, the House agreed by a vote of 89 to 18 to seat Congressman McCreery. Id., at 1237. See 1 A. Hinds, Precedents of the House of Representatives of the United States s 414 (1907) (hereinafter cited as Hinds).

There was no significant challenge to these principles for the next several decades.[FN79] They came under heavy *544 attack, however, 'during the stress of civil war (but initially) the House of Representatives declined to exercise the power (to exclude), even under circumstances of great provocation.'[FN80]Rules of the 1976 House of Representatives, H.R.Doc. No. 529, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., s 12, p. 7 (1967). The abandonment of such restraint, however, was among the casualties of the general upheaval produced in war's wake. In 1868, the House voted for the first time in its history to exclude a member-elect. It refused to seat two duly elected representatives for giving aid and comfort to the Confederacy. See 1 Hinds ss 449-451.[FN81] This change was produced by the North's bitter enmity toward those who failed to support the Union cause during the war, and was effected by the Radical Republican domination of Congress. It was a shift brought about by the naked urgency of power and was given little doctrinal support.'Comment, Legislative Exclusion: Julian Bond and Adam Clayton Powell, 35 U.Chi.L.Rev. 151, 157 (1967). [FN82] From that time until *545 the present, congressional practice has been erratic;[FN83] and on the few occasions when a member-elect was excluded although he met all the qualifications set forth in the *546 Constitution, there were frequently vigorous dissents.[FN84] Even the 1977 annotations to the official manual of procedure for the 90th Congress manifest doubt as to the House's power to exclude a member-elect who has met the constitutionally prescribed qualifications. See Rules of the House of Representatives, H.R.Doc. No. 529, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., s 12, pp. 7-8 (1967).

FN79. Another Maryland representative was unsuccessfully challenged in 1808 on grounds almost identical to those asserted in the challenge of McCreery. See 18 Annals of Cong. 1848-1849 (1808). In 1844, the Senate declined to exclude John M. Niles, who was accused of being mentally incompetent, after a special committee reported him competent. Cong. Globe, 28th Cong., 1st Sess., 564-565, 602 (1844). In 1856, the House rejected an attempt to exclude Samuel Marshall for violating an Illinois law prohibiting state judges from running for other offices. 1 Hinds s 415. That same year, the Senate refused to exclude Lyman Trum-bull for violating the same Illinois law. Ibid.

FN80. Between 1862 and 1867, both the House and Senate resisted several attempts to exclude members-elect who were accused of being disloyal to the Union during the Civil War. See, id., ss 448, 455, 458; Senate Election, Expulsion and Censure Cases, S.Doc.No.71, 87th Cong., 2d Sess., 21 (1962) (hereinafter cited as Senate Cases).

FN81. That same year the Senate also excluded a supporter of the Confederacy. Senate Cases 40. The House excluded two others shortly thereafter, one for the same offense, and another for selling appointments to the Military and Naval Academies. See 1 Hinds ss 459, 464; 2 Hinds s 1273.

FN82. This departure from previous House construction of its power to exclude was emphasized by Congressman William P. Fessenden: '(T)he power which we have under the Constitution to judge of the qualifications of members of the body is not a mere arbitrary power, to be exerted according to the will of the individuals who may vote upon the subject. It ought to be a power subject to certain rules and founded upon certain principles. So it was up to a very late period, until the rebellion. The rule simply was, if a man came here and presented proper credentials from his State, to allow him to take the ordinary oath, which we all took, to support the Constitution, and be admitted, and if there was any objection to him to try that question afterward.'Cong. Globe, 40th Cong., 2d Sess., 685 (1868).

FN83. For example, in 1870, the House refused to exclude a Texas Congressman accused of a variety of criminal acts, 1 Hinds s 465; but in 1882 and again in 1900 the House excluded a member-elect for practicing polygamy. 1 Hinds ss 473, 477-480. Thereafter, it apparently did not consider excluding anyone until shortly after World War I, when it twice excluded Victor L. Berger, an avowed Socialist, for giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Significantly, the House committee investigating Berger concluded that he was ineligible under the express provision of s 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment. 6 C. Cannon, Precedents of the House of Representatives of the United States ss 56-59 (1935) (hereinafter cited as Cannon). Berger, the last person to be excluded from the House prior to Powell, was later re-elected and finally admitted after his criminal conviction was reversed. 65 Cong.Rec. 7 (1923).

The House next considered the problem in 1925 when it contemplated excluding John W. Langley for his alleged misconduct. Langley resigned after losing a criminal appeal, and the House therefore never voted upon the question. 6 Cannon s 238. The most recent exclusion attempt prior to Powell's occurred in 1933, when the House refused to exclude a Representative from Minnesota who had been convicted of sending defamatory matter through the mail. See 77 Cong.Rec. 73-74, 131-139 (1933).

The Senate has not excluded anyone since 1929; in that year it refused to seat a member-elect because of improper campaign expenditures. 6 Cannon s 180. In 1947, a concerted effort was made to exclude Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi for allegedly accepting gifts from war contractors and illegally intimidating Negroes in Democratic primaries. See 93 Cong.Rec. 3-28 (1947). He died, however, before a decision was reached.

FN84. During the debates over H.R.Res.No. 278, Congressman Celler, chairman of both the Select Committee and the Judiciary Committee, forcefully insisted that the Constitution 'unalterably fixes and defines' the qualifications for membership in the House and that any other construction of Art. I, s 5, would be ' improper and dangerous.' 113 Cong.Rec. 4998. See H.R.Rep.No. 484, 43d Cong., 1st Sess., 11-15 (1874) (views of minority); H.R.Rep.No. 85, 56th Cong., 1st Sess., 56-77 (1900) (views of minority). In the latter report, the dissenters argued: 'A small partisan majority might render the desire to arbitrarily exclude, by a majority vote, in order to more securely intrench itself in power, irresistible. Hence its exercise is controlled by legal rules. In case of expulsion, when the requisite two-thirds can be had, the motive for the exercise of arbitrary power no longer exists, as a two-thirds partisan majority is sufficient for every purpose. * * * The power of exclusion is a matter of law, to be exercised by a majority vote, in accordance with legal principles, and exists only where a member-elect lacks some of the qualifications required by the Constitution.'Id., at 76-77.

[32] Had these congressional exclusion precedents been more consistent, their precedential value still would be quite limited. See Note, The Power of a House of Congress to Judge the Qualifications of its Members, 81 Harv.L.Rev. 673, 679 (1968).[FN85] That an unconstitutional*547 action has been taken before surely does not render that same action any less unconstitutional at a later date. Particularly in view of the Congress' own doubts in those few cases where it did exclude members-elect, we are not inclined to give its precedents controlling weight. The relevancy of prior exclusion cases is limited largely to the insight they afford in correctly ascertaining the draftsmen's intent. Obviously, therefore, the precedential value of these cases tends to increase in proportion to their proximity to the Convention in 1787. See Myers v. United States, 272 U.S. 52, 175, 47 S.Ct. 21, 45, 71 L.Ed. 160 (1926). And, what evidence we have of Congress' early understanding confirms our conclusion that the House is without power to exclude any member-elect who meets the Constitution's requirements for membership.

FN85. 'Determining the basis for a congressional action is itself difficult; since a congressional action, unlike a reported judicial decision, contains no statement of the reasons for the disposition, one must fall back on the debates and the committee reports. If more than one issue is raised in the debates, one can never be sure on what basis the action was predicated. Unlike a court, which is presumed to be disinterested, in an exclusion case the concerned house is in effect a party to the controversy that it must adjudicate. Consequently, some members may be inclined to vote for exclusion though they strongly doubt its constitutionality.' 81 Harv.L.Rev., at 679.

d. Conclusion.

[33] Had the intent of the Framers emerged from these materials with less clarity, we would nevertheless have been compelled to resolve any ambiguity in favor of a narrow constuction of the scope of Congress' power to exclude members-elect. A fundamental principle of our representative democracy is, in Hamilton's words, 'that the people should choose whom they please to govern them.' 2 Elliot's Debates 257. As Madison pointed out at the Convention, this principle is undermined as much by limiting whom the people can select as by limiting the franchise itself. In apparent agreement with this basic philosophy, the Convention adopted his suggestion limiting the power to expel. To allow essentially that same power to be exercised under the guise of judging qualifications, would be to ignore Madison's warning, borne out in the Wilkes case and 1978 some of Congress'*548 own post-Civil War exclusion cases, against 'vesting an improper & dangerous power in the Legislature.' 2 Farrand 249. Moreover, it would effectively nullify the Convention's decision to require a two-thirds vote for expulsion. Unquestionably, Congress has an interest in preserving its institutional integrity, but in most cases that interest can be sufficiently safeguarded by the exercise of its power to punish its members for disorderly behavior and, in extreme cases, to expel a member with the concurrence of two-thirds. In short, both the intention of the Framers, to the extent it can be determined, and an examination of the basic principles of our democratic system persuade us that the Constitution does not vest in the Congress a discretionary power to deny membership by a majority vote.

[34] For these reasons, we have concluded that Art. I, s 5, is at most a 'textually demonstrable commitment' to Congress to judge only the qualifications expressly set forth in the Constitution. Therefore, the 'textual commitment' formulation of the political question doctrine does not bar federal courts from adjudicating petitioners' claims.

2. Other Considerations.

[35][36] Respondents' alternate contention is that the case presents a political question because judicial resolution of petitioners' claim would produce a 'potentially embarrassing confrontation between coordinate branches' of the Federal Government. But, as our interpretation of Art. I, s 5, discloses, a determination of petitioner Powell's right to sit would require no more than an interpretation of the Constitution. Such a determination falls within the traditional role accorded courts to interpret the law, and does not involve a 'lack of the respect due (a) coordinate (branch) of government,' nor does it involve an ' initial policy determination of a kind clearly for nonjudicial*549 discretion.'Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, at 217, 82 S.Ct. 691, at 710. Our system of government requires that federal courts on occasion interpret the Constitution in a manner at variance with the construction given the document by another branch. The alleged conflict that such an adjudication may cause cannot justify the courts' avoiding their constitutional responsibility.[FN86] See United States v. Brown, 381 U.S. 437, 462, 85 S.Ct. 1707, 1722, 14 L.Ed.2d 484 (1965); Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 613-614, 72 S.Ct. 863, 898, 96 L.Ed. 1153 (1952) (Frankfurter, J., concurring); Myers v. United States, 272 U.S. 52, 293, 47 S.Ct. 21, 84 (1926) (Brandeis, J., dissenting).

FN86. In fact, the Court has noted that it is an 'inadmissible suggestion' that action might be taken in disregard of a judicial determination.McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U.S. 1, 24, 13 S.Ct. 3, 6,36 L.Ed.2d 869 (1892).

[37] Nor are any of the other formulations of a political question 'inextricable from the case at bar.' Baker v. Carr, supra, at 217, 82 S.Ct. at 710. Petitioners seek a determination that the House was without power to exclude Powell from the 90th Congress, which, we have seen, requires an interpretation of the Constitution-a determination for which clearly there are 'judicially * * * manageable standards.'Finally, a judicial resolution of petitioners' claim will not result in 'multifarious pronouncements by various departments on one question.'For, as we noted in Baker v. Carr, supra, at 211, 82 S.Ct., at 706 it is the responsibility of this Court to act as the ultimate interpreter of the Constitution.Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (5 U.S.) 137, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803). Thus, we conclude that petitioners' claim is not barred by the political question doctrine, and, having determined that the claim is otherwise generally justiciable, we hold that the case is justiciable.

CONCLUSION.

To summarize, we have determined the following: (1) This case has not been mooted by Powell's seating in *550 the 91st Congress. (2) Although this action should be dismissed against respondent Congressmen, it may be sustained against their agents. (3) The 90th Congress' denial of membership to Powell cannot be treated as an expulsion. (4) We have jurisdiction over the subject matter of this controversy. (5) The case is justiciable.

[38] Further, analysis of the 'textual commitment' under Art. I, s 5 (see Part VI, B (1)), has demonstrated that in judging the qualifications of its members Congress is limited to the standing qualifications prescribed in the Constitution. Respondents concede that Powell met these. Thus, there is no need to remand this case to determine whether he was entitled to be seated in the 90th Congress. Therefore, we hold that, since Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., was duly elected by the voters of the 18th Congressional District of New York and was not ineligible to serve under any provision of the Constitution, the House was without power to exclude him from its membership.

Petitioners seek additional forms of equitable relief, including mandamus for the release of petitioner Powell's back pay. The propriety of such remedies, however, is more appropriately considered in the first instance by the courts below. Therefore, as to respondents McCormack, Albert, Ford, Celler, and Moore, the judgment of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit is affirmed. As to respondents Jennings, Johnson, and Miller, the judgment of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit is reversed and the case is remanded to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia with instructions to enter a declaratory judgment and for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

*551 Mr. Justice DOUGLAS.

While I join the opinion of the Court, I add a few words. As the Court says, the important constitutional question is whether the Congress has the power to deviate from or alter the qualifications for membership as a Representative contained in Art. I, s 2, cl. 2, of the Constitution.[FN1] Up to now the understanding has been quite clear to the effect that such authority does not exist.[FN2] To be 1980 sure, Art. I, s 5, provides that: 'Each *552 House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members * * *.' Contests may arise over whether an elected official meets the 'qualifications' of the Constitution, in which event the House is the sole judge.[FN3] But the House is not the sole judge when 'qualifications' are added which are not specified in the Constitution.[FN4]

FN1.U.S.Const., Art. I, s 2, cl. 2:
'No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.'

FN2. The Constitutional Convention had the occasion to consider several proposals for giving Congress discretion to shape its own qualifications for office and explicitly rejected them. James Madison led the opposition by arguing that such discretion would be
'an improper & dangerous power in the Legislature. The qualifications of electors and elected were fundamental articles in a Republican Govt. and ought to be fixed by the Constitution. If the Legislature could regulate those of either, it can by degrees subvert the Constitution.' 2 M. Farrand, Records of the Federal Convention of 1787, pp. 249-250 (1911). Alexander Hamilton echoed that same conclusion:
'The qualifications of the persons who may choose or be chosen, as has been remarked upon other occasions, are defined and fixed in the Constitution, and are unalterable by the legislature.'The Federalist Papers, No. 60, p. 371 (Mentor ed. 1961).
And so, too, the early Congress of 1807 decided to seat Representative-elect William McCreery on the ground that its power to 'judge' was limited by the enumerated qualifications.
'The Committee of Elections considered the qualifications of members to have been unalterably determined by the Federal Convention, unless changed by an authority equal to that which framed the Constitution at first * * *. Congress, by the Federal Constitution, are not authorized to prescribe the qualifications of their own members, but they are authorized to judge of their qualifications; in doing so, however, they must be governed by the rules prescribed by the Federal Constitution, and by them only.' 17 Annals of Cong. 872 (1807) (remarks of Rep. Findley, Chairman of House Committee of Elections).
Constitutional scholars of two centuries have reaffirmed the principle that congressional power to 'judge' the qualifications of its members is limited to those enumerated in the Constitution. 1 J. Story, Commentaries on the Constitution 462 (5th ed. 1891); C. Warren, The Making of the Constitution 420-426 (1928). See also remarks by Emmanuel Celler, Chairman of the House Select Committee which inquired into the qualifications of Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., and which recommended seating him: 'The Constitution lays down three qualifications for one to enter Congress-age, inhabitancy, citizenship. Mr. Powell satisfies all three. The House cannot add to these qualifications. '113 Cong.Rec. 4998.

FN4. The question whether Congress has authority under the Constitution to add to enumerated qualifications for office is itself a federal question within the particular expertise of this Court.Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 211, 82 S.Ct. 691, 706.
Where that authority has been exceeded, redress may be properly sought here.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (5 U.S.) 137, 2 L.Ed. 60. Congress itself suspected no less in deciding to exclude Rep. Powell: '(C)ases may readily be postulated where the action of a House in excluding or expelling a Member may directly impinge upon rights under other provisions of the Constitution. In such cases, the unavailability of judicial review may be less certain. Suppose, for example, that a Member was excluded or expelled because of his religion or race, contrary to the equal protection clause, or for making an unpopular speech protected by the first amendment * * *. (E) xclusion of the member-elect on grounds other than age, citizenship, or inhabitancy could raise an equally serious constitutional issue.' H.R.Rep.No.27, 90th Cong., 1st Sess., 30 (1967). Others may reflect religious or ideological clashes. [FN8]

FN8. 1 A. Hinds, Precedents of the House of Representatives of the United States s 481 (1907).

At the root of all these cases, however, is the basic integrity of the electoral process. Today we proclaim the constitutional principle of 'one man, one vote.' When that principle is followed and the electors choose a person who is repulsive to the Establishment in Congress, by what constitutional authority can that group of electors be disenfranchised?

1981 By Art. I, s 5, the House may 'expel a Member' by a vote of two-thirds. And if this were an expulsion case I would think that no justiciable controversy would be presented, the vote of the House being two-thirds or more. But it is not an expulsion case. Whether it could have been won as an expulsion case, no one knows. Expulsion for ' misconduct' may well raise different questions, different considerations. Policing the conduct of members, a recurring problem in the Senate and House as well, is quite different from the initial decision whether an elected official should be seated. It well might be easier to bar admission than to expel one already seated.

The House excluded Representative-elect Powell from the 90th Congress allegedly for misappropriating public funds and for incurring the contempt of New York *554 courts.[FN9] Twenty-six years earlier, members of the upper chamber attempted to exclude Senator-elect William Langer of North Dakota for like reasons. [FN10] Langer first became State's Attorney for Morton County, North Dakota, from 1914 to 1916, and then served as State Attorney General from 1916 to 1920. He became Governor of the State in 1932 and took office in January 1933. In 1934 he was indicted for conspiring to interfere with the enforcement of federal law by illegally soliciting political contributions from federal employees, and suit was filed in the State Supreme Court to remove him from office.[FN11] While that suit was pending, he called the State Legislature into special session. [FN12] When it became clear that the court would order his ouster, he signed a Declaration of Independence, invoked martial law, and called out the National Guard.[FN13] Nonetheless, when his own officers refused to recognize him as the legal head of state, he left office in July 1934. As with Adam Clayton Powell, however, the people of the State still wanted him. In 1937 they re-elected him Governor and, in 1940, they sent him to the United States Senate.

During the swearing-in ceremonies, Senator Barkley drew attention to certain complaints filed against Langer by citizens of North Dakota, yet asked that he be allowed to take the oath of office 'without prejudice, which is a two-sided proposition-without prejudice to the Senator and without *555 prejudice to the Senate in the exercise of its right (to exclude him).'[FN14]

FN14.87 Cong.Rec. 3-4 (1941).

The matter of Langer's qualifications to serve in the Senate was referred to committee which held confidential hearings on January 9 and 16, 1941, and open hearings on November 3 and 18, 1941. By a vote of 14 to 2, the committee reported that a majority of the Senate had jurisdiction under Art. I, s 5, cl. 1, of the Constitution to exclude Langer; and, by a vote of 13 to 3, it reported its recommendation that Langer not be seated.[FN15]

FN15.S.Rep.No.1010, 77th Cong., 2d Sess. (1942).

The charges against Langer were various. As with Powell, they included claims that he had misappropriated public funds[FN16] and that he had interfered 1982 with the judicial process in a way that beclouded the dignity of Congress.[FN17] Reference was also made to his professional ethics as a lawyer.[FN18]

FN16. It was alleged that he had conspired as Governor to have municipal and county bonds sold to a friend of his who made a profit of $300,000 on the purchase, and purportedly rebated as much as $56,000 to Langer himself. Hearings 822-823.

FN17. At the retrial of his conviction for conspiring to interfere with the enforcement of federal law, he was said to have paid money to have a friend of his, Judge Wyman, be given control of the litigation, and to have 'meddled' w ith the jury. Hearings 20-42, 120-130.

FN18. He was charged as a lawyer with having accepted $2,000 from the mother of a boy in prison on the promise that he would obtain his pardon, when he knew, in fact, that a pardon was out of the question. He was also said to have counseled a defendant-client of his to marry the prosecution's chief witness in order to prevent her from testifying against him. And finally, it was suggested that he once bought an insurance policy during trial from one of the jurors sitting in judgment of his client. Hearings 820-830.

Langer enjoyed the powerful advocacy of Senator Murdock from Utah. The Senate debate itself raged *556 for over a year.[FN19] Much of it related to purely factual allegations of 'moral turpitude.' Some of it, however, was addressed to the power of the Senate under Art. I, s 5, cl. 1, to exclude a member-elect for lacking qualifications not enumerated in Art. I, s 3.

'Mr. MURDOCK. * * * (U)nder the Senator's theory that the Senate has the right to add qualifications which are not specified in the Constitution, does the Senator believe the Senate could adopt a rule specifying intellectual and moral qualifications?[FN20]

FN20.88 Cong.Rec. 2401.

'Mr. LUCAS. The Senate can do anything it wants to do * * *. Yes; the Senate can deny a person his seat simply because it does not like the cut of his jaw, if it wishes to.'[FN21]

FN21.Ibid.

Senator Murdock argued that the only qualifications for service in the Senate were those enumerated in the Constitution; that Congress had the power to review those enumerated qualifications; but that it could not-while purporting to 'judge' those qualifications-in reality add to them.
'Mr. LUCAS. The Senator referred to article I, section 5. What does he think the framers of the Constitution meant when they gave to each House the power to determine or to judge the qualifications, and so forth, of its own Members? [FN22]

'Mr. MURDOCK. I construe the term 'judge' to mean what it is held to mean in its common, ordinary usage. My understanding of the definition of the *557 word 'judge' as a verb is this: When we judge of a thing it is supposed that the rules are laid out; the law is there for us to look at and to apply to the facts.

'But whoever heard the word 'judge' used as meaning the power to add to what already is the law?'[FN23]

FN23.Ibid.

It was also suggested from the floor that the enumerated qualifications in s 3 were only a minimum which the Senate could supplement; and that the Founding Fathers so intended by using words of the negative. To which Senator Murdock replied-
'Mr. President, I think it is the very distinguished and able Senator from Georgia who makes the contention that the constitutional provisions relating to qualifications, because they are stated in the negative-that is, 'no person shall be a Senator'-are merely restrictions or prohibitions on 1983 the State; but-and I shall read it later on-when we read what Madison said, when we read what Hamilton said, when we read what the other framers of the Constitution said on that question, there cannot be a doubt as to what they intended and what they meant. [FN24]

FN24.Ibid.

'Madison knew that the qualifications should be contained in the Constitution and not left to the whim and caprice of the legislature.[FN25]

FN25.88 Cong.Rec. 2483.

'Bear that in mind, that the positive or affirmative phraseology was not changed to the negative by debate or by amendment in the convention, but it *558 was changed by the committee of which Madison was a member, the committee on style.' [FN26]

FN26.88 Cong.Rec. 2484.

The Senate was nonetheless troubled by the suggestion that the Constitution compelled it to accept anyone whom the people might elect, no matter how egregious and even criminal his behavior. No need to worry, said Murdock. It is true that the Senate cannot invoke its majority power to 'judge' under Art. I, s 5, cl. 1, as a device for excluding men elected by the people who possess the qualifications enumerated by the Constitution. But it does have the power under Art. I, s 5, cl. 2, to expel anyone it designates by a two-thirds vote. None-theless, he urged the Senate not to bypass the two-thirds requirement for expulsion by wrongfully invoking its power to exclude.[FN27]

FN27. Although the House excluded Adam Clayton Powell by over two-thirds vote, it was operating on the assumption that only a majority was needed. For the suggestion that the House could never have rallied the votes to exclude Powell on the basis of a two-thirds ground rule, see Note, 14 How.L.J. 162 (1968); Note, 42 N.Y.U.L.Rev. 716 (1967).

'Mr. LUCAS. * * * The position the Senator from Utah takes is that it does not make any difference what a Senator does in the way of crime, that whenever he is elected by the people of his State, comes here with bona fide credentials, and there is no fraud in the election, the Senate cannot refuse to give him the oath. That is the position the Senator takes?
'Mr. MURDOCK. That is my position; yes.[FN28]

FN28.88 Cong.Rec. 2488.

'My position is that we do not have the right to exclude anyone who comes here clothed with the proper credentials and possessing the constitutional qualifications. My position is that we do not have *559 the right under the provision of the Constitution to which the Senator from Florida referred, to add to the qualifications. My position is that the State is the sole judge of the intellectual and the moral qualifications of the representatives it sends to Congress.'[FN29]

FN29.88 Cong.Rec. 2490.

'MR. MURDOCK (quoting Senator Philander Knox).'I know of no defect in the plain rule of the Constitution for which I am contending. * * * I cannot see that any danger to the Senate lies in the fact that an improper character cannot be excluded without a two-thirds vote. It requires the unanimous vote of a jury to convict a man accused of crime; it should require, and I believe that it does require, a two-thirds vote to eject a Senator from his position of honor and power, to which he has been elected by a sovereign State. ''''[FN30]

FN30.88 Cong.Rec. 2488. Senator Knox of Pennsylvania had defended Senator-elect Reed Smoot of Utah in 1903 against charges that he ought to be excluded because of his affiliation with a group (Mormons) that countenanced polygamy. S.Doc.No.71, 87th Cong., 2d Sess., 97.

1984 Thus, after a year of debate, on March 27, 1942, the Senate overruled the recommendation of its committee and voted 52 to 30 to seat Langer.

I believe that Senator Murdock stated the correct constitutional principle governing the present case.

Mr. Justice STEWART, dissenting.
I believe that events which have taken place since certiorari was granted in this case on November 18, 1968, have rendered it moot, and that the Court should therefore refrain from deciding the novel, difficult, and delicate constitutional questions which the case presented at its inception.

*560 I.

The essential purpose of this lawsuit by Congressman Powell and members of his constituency was to regain the seat from which he was barred by the 90th Congress. That purpose, however, became impossible of attainment on January 3, 1969, when the 90th Congress passed into history and the 91st Congress came into being. On that date, the petitioners' prayer for a judicial decree restraining enforcement of House Resolution No. 278 and commanding the respondents to admit Congressman Powell to membership in the 90th Congress became incontestably moot.

The petitioners assert that actions of the House of Representatives of the 91st Congress have prolonged the controversy raised by Powell's exclusion and preserved the need for a judicial declaration in this case. I believe, to the contrary, that the conduct of the present House of Representatives confirms the mootness of the petitioners' suit against the 90th Congress. Had Powell been excluded from the 91st Congress, he might argue that there was a 'continuing controversy ' concerning the exclusion attacked in this case.[FN1] And such an argument might be sound even though the present House of Representatives is a distinct legislative body rather than a continuation of its predecessor, [FN2] and though any grievance *561 caused by conduct of the 91st Congress is not redressable in this action. But on January 3, 1969, the House of Representatives of the 91st Congress admitted Congressman Powell to membership, and he now sits as the Representative of the 18th Congressional District of New York. With the 90th Congress terminated and Powell now a member of the 91st, it cannot seriously be contended that there remains a judicial controversy between these parties over the power of the House of Representatives to exclude Powell and the power of a court to order him reseated. Understandably, neither the Court nor the petitioners advance the wholly untenable proposition that the continuation of this case can be founded on the infinitely remote possibility that Congressman Powell, or any other Representative, may someday be excluded for the same reasons or in the same manner. And because no foreseeable possibility of 1985 such future conduct exists, the respondents have met their heavy burden of showing that 'subsequent events made it absolutely clear that the allegedly wrongful behavior could not reasonably be expected to recur.'United States v. Concentrated Phosphate Export Assn., 393 U.S. 199, 203, 89 S.Ct. 361, 364.[FN3]

FN2. See Gojack v. United States, 384 U.S. 702, 707, 86 S.Ct. 1689, 1693, 16 L.Ed.2d 870, n. 4 ('Neither the House of Representatives nor its committees are continuing bodies'); McGrain v. Daugherty, 273 U.S. 135, 181, 47 S.Ct. 319, 331, 71 L.Ed. 580. Forty-one of the present members of the House were not members of the 90th Congress; and two of the named defendants in this action, Messrs. Moore and Curtis, are no longer members of the House of Representatives. Moreover, the officer-employees of the House, such as the Sergeant at Arms, are re-elected by each new Congress. See n. 15, infra.

FN3. See also United States v. W. T. Grant Co., 345 U.S. 629, 633, 73 S.Ct. 894, 897, 97 L.Ed. 1303;United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F.2d 416, 448. The Court has only recently concluded that there was no 'controversy' in Golden v. Zwickler, 394 U.S. 103, 89 S.Ct. 956, 22 L.Ed.2d 113, because of 'the fact that it was most unlikely that the Congressman would again be a candidate for Congress.' Id., at 109, 89 S.Ct., at 960. It can hardly be maintained that the likelihood of the House of Representatives' again excluding Powell is any greater.

The petitioners further argue that this case cannot be deemed moot because of the principle that 'the voluntary abandonment of a practice does not relieve a court of adjudicating its legality * * *.' *562Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 376, 83 S.Ct. 801, 806, 9 L.Ed.2d 821.[FN4] I think it manifest, however, that this principle and the cases enunciating it have no application to the present case. In the first place, this case does not involve ' the voluntary abandonment of a practice.'Rather it became moot because of an event over which the respondents had no control-the expiration of the 90th Congress. Moreover, unlike the cases relied on by the petitioners, there has here been no ongoing course of conduct of indefinite duration against which a permanent injunction is necessary. Thus, it cannot be said of the respondents' actions in this case, as it was of the conduct sought to be enjoined in Gray, for example, that 'the practice is deeply rooted and long standing,'ibid., or that, without judicial relief, the respondents would be ' free to return to (their) old ways.'United States v. W. T. Grant Co., 345 U.S. 629, 632, 73 S.Ct. 894, 897.[FN5] Finally, and *563 most important, the ' voluntary abandonment' rule does not dispense with the requirement of a continuing controversy, nor could it under the definition of the judicial power in Article III of the Constitution. Voluntary cessation of unlawful conduct does make a case moot 'if the defendant can demonstrate that 'there is no reasonable 1986 expectation that the wrong will be repeated.''Id., at 633, 73 S.Ct., at 897.[FN6] Since that is the situation here, the case would be moot even if it could be said that it became so by the House's 'voluntary abandonment' of its ' practice' of excluding Congressman Powell.

FN4. See also United States v. W. T. Grant Co., 345 U.S. 629, 632-633, 73 S.Ct. 894, 897;Local 74, United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners v. FN5. With the exception of Gray, the ' continuing controversy' cases relied on by the petitioners were actions by the Government or its agencies to halt illegal conduct of the defendants, and, by example, of others engaged in similar conduct. See cases cited, supra, nn. 1, 3, 4. The principle that voluntary abandonment of an illegal practice will not make an action moot is especially, if not exclusively, applicable to such public law enforcement suits.

'Private parties may settle their controversies at any time, and rights which a plaintiff may have had at the time of the commencement of the action may terminate before judgment is obtained or while the case is on appeal, and in any such case the court, being informed of the facts, will proceed no further in the action. Here, however, there has been no extinguishment of the rights * * * of the public, the enforcement of which the government has endeavored to procure by a judgment of a court * * *. The defendants cannot foreclose those rights nor prevent the assertion thereof by the government as a substantial trustee for the public under the act of congress, by (voluntary cessation of the challenged conduct).'United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn., 166 U.S., at 309, 17 S.Ct., at 546.

The considerations of public enforcement of a statutory or regulatory scheme which inhere in those cases are not present in this litigation.

FN6. Certainly in every decision relied on by the petitioners the Court did not reject the mootness argument solely on the ground that the illegal practice had been voluntarily terminated. In each it proceeded to determine that there was in fact a continuing controversy.

The petitioners' proposition that conduct of the 91st Congress has perpetuated the controversy is based on the fact that House Resolution No. 2-the same resolution by which the House voted to seat Powell-fined him $25,000 and provided that his seniority was to commence as of the date he became a member of the 91st Congress.[FN7] That punishment, it is said, 'arises out of the *564 prior actions of the House which originally impelled this action.'It is indisputable, however, that punishment of a House member involves constitutional issues entirely distinct from those raised by exclusion, [FN8] and that a punishment in one Congress is in no legal sense a 'continuation' of an exclusion from the previous Congress. A judicial determination that the exclusion was improper would have no bearing on the constitutionality of the punishment, nor any conceivable practical impact on Powell's status in the 91st Congress. It is thus clear that the only connection between the exclusion by the 90th Congress and the punishment by the 91st is that they were evidently based on the same asserted derelictions of Congressman Powell. But this action was not brought to exonerate Powell or to expunge the legislative findings of his wrongdoing; its only purpose was to restrain the action taken in consequence of those findings-Powell's exclusion.

FN7. House Resolution No. 2 provided in pertinent part:
'(2) That as punishment Adam Clayton Powell be and he hereby is fined the sum of $25,000, said sum to be paid to the Clerk to be disposed of by him according to law. The Sergeant at Arms of the House is directed to deduct $1,150 per month from the salary otherwise due the said Adam Clayton Powell, and pay the same to said Clerk until said $25,000 fine is fully paid.
'(3) That as further punishment the seniority of the said Adam Clayton Powell in the House of Representatives commence as of the date he takes the oath as a Member of the 91st Congress.'

The petitioners' argument that the case is kept alive by Powell's loss of seniority, see ante, at 1950, is founded on the mistaken assumption that the loss of seniority is attributable to the exclusion from the 90th Congress and that seniority would automatically be restored if that exclusion were declared unconstitutional. But the fact is that Powell was stripped of seniority by the action of the 91st Congress, action which is not involved in this case and which would not be affected by judicial review of the exclusion from the 90th Congress. Moreover, even if the conduct of the 91st Congress were challenged in this case, the Court would clearly have no power whatsoever to pass upon the propriety of such internal affairs of the House of Representatives.

FN8.Article I, s 5, of the Constitution specifically empowers each House to ' punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour.'

Equally without substance is the petitioners' contention that this case is saved from mootness by application of the asserted 'principle' that a case challenging allegedly unconstitutional conduct cannot be rendered moot *565 by further unconstitutional conduct of the defendants. Under this hypothesis, it is said that the 'Court can not determine that the conduct of the House of January 3, 1969, has mooted this controversy without inferentially, at least, holding that the action of the House of that day was legal and constitutionally permissible.'If there is in our jurisprudence any doctrine remotely resembling the petitioners' theory-which they offer without reference to any authority-it has no conceivable relevance to this case. For the events of January 3, 1969, that made this case moot were 1987 the termination of the 90th Congress and Powell's seating in the 91st, not the punishment which the petitioners allege to have been unconstitutional. That punishment is wholly irrelevant to the question of mootness and is in no wise before the Court in this case.

II.

The passage of time and intervening events have, therefore, made it impossible to afford the petitioners the principal relief they sought in this case. If any aspect of the case remains alive, it is only Congressman Powell's individual claim for the salary of which he was deprived by his absence from the 90th Congress.[FN9] But even if that claim can be said to prevent this controversy from being moot, which I doubt, there is no need to reach the fundamental constitutional issues that the Court today undertakes to decide.

FN9. The salary claim is personal to Congressman Powell, and the other petitioners therefore clearly have no further interest in this lawsuit.

This Court has not in the past found that an incidental claim for back pay preserves the controversy between a legislator and the legislative body which evicted him, once the term of his eviction has expired.Alejandrino v. Quezon, 271

U.S. 528, 46 S.Ct. 600, 70 L.Ed. 1071, was a case nearly identical to *566 that before the Court today. The petitioner was a member of the Senate of the Philippines who had been suspended for one year for assaulting a colleague. He brought an action in the Supreme Court of the Philippines against the elected members of the Senate[FN10] and its officers and employees (the President, Secretary, Sergeant at Arms, and Paymaster), seeking a writ of mandamus and an injunction restoring him to his seat and to all the privileges and emoluments of office. The Supreme Court of the Philippines dismissed the action for want of jurisdiction and Alejandrino brought the case here,[FN11] arguing that the suspension was not authorized by the Philippine Autonomy Act, a statute which incorporated most of the provisions of Article I of the United States Constitution.[FN12]

FN10. The Philippines Senate was composed of 24 Senators, 22 of whom were elected, and two of whom were appointed by the Governor General. Alejandrino was one of the two appointees. See 271 U.S., at 531-532, 46 S.Ct., at 601.

FN11. Under the Philippine Autonomy Act, 39 Stat. 545, this Court had jurisdiction to examine by writ of error the final judgments and decrees of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands in cases under the Constitution or statutes of the United States. A subsequent statute substituted the writ of certiorari. 39 Stat. 726.

FN12.'Section 18 (of the Autonomy Act) provides that the Senate and House respectively shall be the sole judges of the elections, returns and qualifications of their elective members, and each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds expel an elective member. The Senators and Representatives shall receive an annual compensation for their services to be ascertained by law and paid out of the treasury of the Philippine Islands. Senators and Representatives shall in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.'271 U.S., at 532, 46 S.Ct., at 601.

*567 Because the period of the suspension had expired while the case was pending on certiorari, a unanimous Court, in an opinion by Chief Justice Taft, vacated the judgment and remanded the case with directions to dismiss it as moot. To Alejandrino's claim that his right to back pay kept the case alive, the Court gave the following answer, which, because of its particular pertinency to this case, I quote at length:

'It may be suggested, as an objection to our vacating the action of the 1988 court below, and directing the dismissal of the petition as having become a moot case, that, while the lapse of time has made unnecessary and futile a writ of mandamus to restore Senator Alejandrino to the Island Senate, there still remains a right on his part to the recovery of his emoluments, which were withheld during his suspension, and that we ought to retain the case for the purpose of determining whether he may not have a mandamus for this purpose. * * * It is difficult for the Court to deal with this feature of the case, which is really only a mere incident to the main question made in the petition and considered in the able and extended brief of counsel for the petitioner and the only brief before us. That brief is not in any part of it directed to the subject of emoluments, nor does it refer us to any statute or to the rules of the Senate by which the method of paying Senators' salaries is provided, or in a definite way describe the duties of the officer or officers or committee charged with the ministerial function of paying them.

'* * * the remedy of the Senator would seem to be by mandamus to compel such official in the discharge of his ministerial duty to pay him the salary due, and the presence of the Senate as a party would be *568 unnecessary. Should that official rely upon the resolution of the Senate as a reason for refusing to comply with his duty to pay Senators, the validity of such a defense and the validity of the resolution might become a judicial question affecting the personal right of the complaining Senator, properly to be disposed of in such action but not requiring the presence of the Senate as a party for its adjudication. The right of the petitioner to his salary does not therefore involve the very serious issue raised in this petition as to the power of the Philippine Supreme Court to compel by mandamus one of the two legislative bodies constituting the legislative branch of the government to rescind a resolution adopted by it in asserted lawful discipline of one of its members, for disorder and breach of privilege. We think, now that the main question as to the validity of the suspension has become moot, the incidental issue as to the remedy which the suspended Senator may have in recovery of his emoluments if illegally withheld, should properly be tried in a separate proceeding against an executive officer or officers as described. As we are not able to derive from the petition sufficient information upon which properly to afford such a remedy, we must treat the whole cause as moot and act accordingly. This action on our part of course is without prejudice to a suit by Senator Alejandrino against the proper executive officer or committee by way of mandamus or otherwise to obtain payment of the salary which may have been unlawfully withheld from him.'271 U.S., at 533, 534-535, 46 S.Ct., at 601.[FN13]

FN13. The petitioners rely on the following passage from Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 128, 87 S.Ct. 339, 345, 17 L.Ed.2d 235, n. 4, as dispositive of their contention that the salary claim prevents this case from being moot:

'A question was raised in oral argument as to whether this case might not be moot since the session of the House which excluded Bond was no longer in existence. The State has not pressed this argument, and it could not do so, because the State has stipulated that if Bond succeeds on this appeal he will receive back salary for the term from which he was excluded.'

I do not believe that this offhand dictum in Bond is determinative of the issue of mootness in this case. In the first place, as the Court in Bond noted, it was not there contended by any party that the case was moot. Moreover, contrary to the implication of the statement, the legislative term from which Bond was excluded had not ended at the time of the Court's decision. (The Court's decision was announced on December 5, 1966; Bond's term of office expired on December 31, 1966.) In any event, he had not been seated in a subsequent term, so the continuing controversy had not been rendered clearly moot by any action of the Georgia House, as it has here by the House of Representatives of the 91st Congress. No one suggested in Bond that the money claim was the only issue left in the case. Furthermore, the considerations which governed the Court's decision in Alejandrino were simply not present in Bond.Because of the State's stipulation, there was no doubt, as there is here, see infra, at 1989, that the Court's decision would lead to effective relief with respect to Bond's salary claim. And finally, there was no suggestion that Bond had an alternative remedy, as Powell has here, see infra, at 1989-1990, by which he could obtain full relief without requiring the Court to decide novel and delicate constitutional issues.

1989 *569 Both of the factors on which the Court relied in Alejandrino are present in this case. Indeed, the salary claim is an even more incidental and subordinate aspect of this case than it was of Alejandrino.[FN14] And the availability of effective relief for that claim against any of the present respondents is far from certain. As in Alejandrino, the briefs and memoranda submitted by the parties in this case contain virtually no discussion of this question-the only question of remedy remaining in the case. It appears from relevant provisions of law, however, that the Sergeant at Arms of the House-an official newly *570 elected by each Congress [FN15] -is responsible for the retention and disbursement to Congressmen of the funds appropriated for their salaries. These funds are payable from the United States Treasury[FN16] upon requisitions presented by the Sergeant at Arms, who is entrusted with keeping the books and accounts 'for the compensation and mileage of Members.'[FN17]A Congressman who has presented his credentials and taken the oath of office[FN18] is entitled to be paid monthly on the basis of certificates of the Clerk [FN19] and Speaker of the House.[FN20] Powell's prayer for a mandamus and an injunction against the Sergeant at Arms is presumably based on this statutory scheme.

FN14. Alejandrino was the only petitioner in the case, and since he was an appointed Senator, it appears that there was no group of voters who remained without representation of their choice in the Senate during his suspension.

FN15. Act of Oct. 1, 1890, s 6, 26 Stat. 646, 2 U.S.C. s 83.

FN16.U.S.Const., Art. I, s 6; 2 U.S.C. s 47.

FN17.2 U.S.C. ss 80, 78.

FN18.2 U.S.C. s 35.

FN19.2 U.S.C. s 34.

FN20.2 U.S.C. s 48.

Several important questions remain unanswered, however, on this record. Is the Sergeant at Arms the only necessary defendant? If so, the case is surely moot as to the other respondents, including the House members, and they should be dismissed as parties on that ground rather than after resolution of difficult constitutional questions under the Speech or Debate Clause. But it is far from clear that Powell has an appropriate or adequate remedy against the remaining respondents. For if the Speaker does not issue the requisite certificates and the House does not rescind Resolution No. 278, can the House agents be enjoined to act in direct contravention of the orders of their employers? Moreover, the office of Sergeant at Arms of the 90th Congress has now expired, and the present Sergeant at Arms serves the 91st Congress. If he were made a party in that capacity, would he have the authority-or could the 91st Congress *571 confer the authority-to disburse money for a salary owed to a Representative in the previous Congress, particularly one who never took the oath of office? Presumably funds have not been appropriated to the 91st Congress or requisitioned by its Sergeant at Arms for the payment of salaries to members of prior Congresses. Nor is it ascertainable from 1990 this record whether money appropriated for Powell's salary by the 90th Congress, if any, remains at the disposal of the current House and its Sergeant at Arms.[FN21]

FN21. The respondents allege without contradiction that the Sergeant at Arms does not have sufficient funds to pay Congressman Powell's back salary claims. Separate appropriations for the salaries of Congressmen are made in each fiscal year, see, e.g., 80 Stat. 354, 81 Stat. 127, 82 Stat. 398, and, according to the respondents, 'it is the custom of the Sergeant to turn back to the Treasury all unexpended funds at the end of each fiscal year.'Thus, the only funds still held by the Sergeant are said to be those appropriated for the present fiscal year commencing July 1, 1968.

There are, then substantial questions as to whether, on his salary claim, Powell could obtain relief against any or all of these respondents. On the other hand, if he was entitled to a salary as a member of the 90th Congress, he has a certain and completely satisfactory remedy in an action for a money judgment against the United States in the Court of Claims.[FN22] While that court could not have ordered Powell seated or entered a declaratory judgment on the constitutionality of his exclusion, [FN23] it *572 is not disputed that the Court of Claims could grant him a money judgment for lost salary on the ground that his discharge from the House violated the Constitution. I would remit Congressman Powell to that remedy, and not simply because of the serious doubts about the availability of the one he now pursues. Even if the mandatory relief sought by Powell is appropriate and could be effective, the Court should insist that the salary claim be litigated in a context that would clearly obviate the need to decide some of the constitutional questions with which the Court grapples today, and might avoid them altogether.

FN24 In an action in the Court of Claims for a money judgment against the United States, there would be no question concerning the impact of the Speech or Debate Clause on a suit against members of the House of Representatives and their agents, and questions of jurisdiction and justiciability would, if raised at all, be in a vastly different and more conventional form.

FN22.'The Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to render judgment upon any claim against the United States founded either upon the Constitution, or any Act of Congress * * *.'28 U.S.C. s 1491. The district courts have concurrent jurisdiction over such claims only in amounts less than $10,000. 28 U.S.C. s 1346.

FN23.United States v. King, 395 U.S. 1, 89 S.Ct. 1501, 23 L.Ed.2d 52. The petitioners suggest that the inability of the Court of Claims to grant such relief might make any remedy in that court inadequate. But since Powell's only remaining interest in the case is to collect his salary, a money judgment in the Court of Claims would be just as good as, and probably better than, mandatory relief against the agents of the House. The petitioners also suggest that the Court of Claims would be unable to grant relief because of the pendency of Powell's claim in another court, 28 U.S.C. s 1500, but that would, of course, constitute no obstacle if, as I suggest, the Court should order this action dismissed on grounds of mootness.

FN24. It is possible, for example, that the United States in such an action would not deny Powell's entitlement to the salary but would seek to offset that sum against the amounts which Powell was found by the House to have appropriated unlawfully from Government coffers to his own use.

In short, dismissal of Powell's action against the legislative branch would not in the slightest prejudice his money claim,[FN25] and it would avoid the necessity 1991 of deciding*573 constitutional issues which, in the petitioners' words, 'touch the bedrock of our political system (and) strike at the very heart of representative government.'If the fundamental principles restraining courts from unnecessarily or prematurely reaching out to decide grave and perhaps unsettling constitutional questions retain any vitality, see Ashwander v. TVA, 297 U.S. 288, 346-348, 56 S.Ct. 466, 482-483, 80 L.Ed. 688 (Brandeis, J., concurring), surely there have been few cases more demanding of their application than this one. And those principles are entitled to special respect in suits, like this suit, for declaratory and injunctive relief, which it is within a court's broad discretion to withhold.'We have cautioned against declaratory judgments on issues of public moment, even falling short of constitutionality, in speculative situations.' Public Affairs Associates, Inc. v. Rickover, 369 U.S. 111, 112, 82 S.Ct. 580, 582, 7 L.Ed.2d 604.' Especially where governmental action is involved, courts should not intervene unless the need for equitable relief is clear, not remote or speculative.' Eccles v. Peoples Bank of Lakewood Village, 333 U.S. 426, 431, 68 S.Ct. 641, 644,192 L.Ed. 784.

FN25. Relying on Bank of Marin v. England, 385 U.S. 99, 101, 87 S.Ct. 274, 276, 17 L.Ed.2d 197, the petitioners complain that it would impose undue hardship on Powell to force him to 'start all over again' now that he has come this far in the present suit. In view of the Court's remand of this case for further proceedings with respect to Powell's remedy, it is at least doubtful that remitting him to an action in the Court of Claims would entail much more cost and delay than will be involved in the present case. And the inconvenience to litigants of further delay or litigation has never been deemed to justify departure from the sound principle, rooted in the Constitution, that important issues of constitutional law should be decided only if necessary and in cases presenting concrete and living controversies.

© 2008 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

If this lawsuit is to be prolonged, I would at the very least not reach the merits without ascertaining that a decision can lead to some effective relief. The Court's remand for determination of that question implicitly recognizes that there may be no remaining controversy between petitioner Powell and any of these respondents redressable by a court, and that its opinion today may be wholly advisory. But I see no good reason for any court even to pass on the question of the availability *574 of relief against any of these respondents. Because the essential purpose of the action against them is no longer attainable and Powell has a fully adequate and far more appropriate remedy for his incidental back-pay claim, I would withhold the discretionary relief prayed for and terminate this lawsuit now. Powell's claim for salary may not be dead, but this case against all these respondents is truly moot. Accordingly, I would vacate the judgment below and remand the case with directions to dismiss the complaint.

Powell v. McCormack,
C.A.D.C. 1968.

United States Court of Appeals District of Columbia Circuit.
Adam Clayton POWELL, Jr., et al., Appellants,
v.
John W. McCORMACK, Speaker of the House of Representatives et al., Appellees.
No. 20897.

Feb. 28, 1968, As Amended July 30, 1968.

Action for injunctive and other relief on basis of unconstitutionality of House Resolution excluding Congressman-elect from membership in House of Representatives. The United States Distric Court for the District of Columbia, George L. Hart, Jr., J., 266 F.Supp. 354, denied application for three-judge court and dismissed complaint, and plaintiffs appealed. The Court of Appeals, Burger, Circuit Judge, held that the claim of Congressman-elect was one 'arising under Constitution' within constitutional provision extending federal judicial power to causes and controversies arising under Constitution. The Court further held that the Congressman's claim to his seat presented 'case or controversy' within constitutional provision extending federal judicial power to case or controversy arising under federal Constitution. The Court also held that statute giving district courts original jurisdiction of all civil actions which arise under Constitution was grant of jurisdiction to entertain the action. In addition the Court held that issues raised by the action were non-justiciable, and that Resolution of House of Representatives excluding Congressman-elect from membership was not 'act of Congress' within statute requiring three-judge district court to hear application for injunction restraining enforcement of act of Congress for repugnance to Constitution.

Affirmed.

This case presents for the first time the question whether courts can consider claims that a Member-elect has been improperly excluded from his seat in the United States House of Representatives. On the basis of findings by that body that Member-elect Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., had been guilty of misconduct as a Member of a prior Congress and of contumacious conduct toward the courts of the State of New York, the House voted to exclude him from the seat in the 90th

Congress to which he had been elected in 1966 by the voters of the 18th Congressional District of New York.[FN1]

FN1. Mr. Powell was thereafter re-elected to the Congress in the special election called to fill the vacancy determined to exist by reason of his exclusion. He has not since presented himself to take the oath.

This suit was brought by Mr. Powell and thirteen voters[FN2] of the 18th Congressional District of New York in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Appellants sought injunctive relief, mandamus, and a declaratory judgment against Appellees who are Members and officials of the House of Representatives of the 90th Congress. Appellees were sued individually, in their official positions, and as representatives of all Members of the House of Representatives.[FN3] The complaint was accompanied by a motion to convene a statutory three-judge court. The District Court dismissed Appellants' complaint for want of subject matter jurisdiction, Powell v. McCormack, 266 F.Supp. 354 (D.D.C.1967).

FN2. Appellants are Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., A. Philip Randolph, Percy E. Sutton, Basil Patterson, J. Raymond Jones, Lillian Upshur, Hulan Jack, Geraldine L. Daniels, Antonio Mendez, Hilda Stokley, Margaret Cox, Fannie Allison, Charles B. Rangel, and James P. Jones.

FN3. See pp. 584, 585 infra.

While Appellants' claims actually arose as a result of action taken by the House at the time of the organization of the 90th Congress, the factual genesis of that action derived from events involving the alleged conduct of Member-elect Powell during earlier Congresses. The underlying events were summarized in a House Report as follows:

During the 89th Congress open and widespread criticism developed with respect to the conduct of Representative Adam Clayton Powell, of New York. This criticism emanated both from within the House of Representatives and the public, and related primarily to Representative Powell's alleged contumacious conduct toward the courts of the State of New York and his alleged official misconduct in the management of his congressional office and his office as chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor. There were charges Representative Powell was misusing travel funds and was continuing to employ his wife on his clerk-hire payroll while she was living in San Juan, P.R., in violation of Public Law 89-90, and apparently performing few if any official duties.

In September 1966, as the result of protests made by a group of Representatives serving on the Committee on Education and Labor, the Committee on House Administration, acting through its chairman, issued instructions for the cancellation of all airline credit cards which had been issued to the Committee on Education and Labor and notified Chairman Powell that all future travel must be specifically approved by the Committee on House Administration prior to undertaking the travel.

The Special Subcommittee on Contracts of the Committee on House Administration, under the chairmanship of Representative Hays of Ohio, conducted an investigation into certain expenditures of the Committee on Education and Labor, which focused primarily on the travel expenses of Chairman Powell and of the committee's staff during the 89th Congress, and the clerk-hire status of Y. Marjorie Flores. Hearings were held on December 19, 20, 21 and 30, 1966, and a *580 357 report (H. Res. 2349) was filed just prior to the end of the 89th Congress. * * * Subsequent to the report of the Hays subcommittee and prior to the organization of the 90th Congress, the Democrat Members-elect, meeting in caucus, voted to remove Representative-elect Powell from his office as chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor. approving authorities as to travel expenses and that the record raised a strong presumption that the payment of funds to Mr. Powell's wife violated existing law. H.R.REP No. 2349, 89th Cong., 2d Sess. 6-7 (1966).

The 90th Congress met to organize on January 10, 1967. At that time Member-elect Van Deerlin, of California, objected to the administration of the oath to Member-elect Powell.[FN5] Upon request, Member-elect Powell stepped aside while the oath was administered to the other Members-elect. Shortly thereafter Representative Udall, of Arizona, introduced a resolution that the oath be administered to Member-elect Powell and that the question of his final right to be seated as a Member of the 90th Congress be referred to a select committee. The debate on this resolution centered on whether to seat Member-elect Powell or to delay his seating pending a committee investigation. Before a vote was taken, Member-elect Powell was permitted to make a statement to the House. The Udall resolution was replaced by a substitute resolution offered by Representative Ford, of Michigan, which was then adopted as House Resolution 1, 90th Congress 1st Session.[FN6]

House Resolution 1 referred to a Select Committee the question of whether or not Mr. Powell should be seated. This Select Committee was to be comprised of nine members selected by The Speaker, four of whom would be members of the minority party, designated by the Minority Leader. The Select Committee was authorized to hold hearings and compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents by subpoena. House Resolution 1 prohibited Mr. Powell from being sworn in or seated until the House acted on the Committee report. Mr. Powell, however, was permitted to receive the pay, allowances, and emoluments of a Member during the course of the investigation. The Select Committee was to report to the House within five weeks after its members were appointed.

On January 19, 1967, The Speaker appointed nine lawyer-Members to the bipartisan Select Committee.[FN7] The Select Committee wrote Mr. Powell on February 1, 1967, inviting him to testify and respond to interrogation before the Committee on February 8, 1967. The stated scope of the testimony and interrogation was to include Mr. Powell's

Comm. Pursuant to H.Res. 1, 90th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1967) (hereinafter Hearings). After a meeting of counsel for Mr. Powell and counsel for the Select Committee held on February 3, 1967, the Committee's chief counsel wrote to Mr. Powell's counsel on February 6, 1967, stating:

The Select Committee desires to interrogate Mr. Powell (as to) paragraphs 1 to 11 of the ' Conclusions' contained in the Report of the Committee on House Administration, Special Subcommittee on Contracts (pp. 6 and 7) relating to an investigation into expenditures during the 89th Congress by the House Committee on Education and Labor and the clerk-hire status of Y. Marjorie Flores (Mrs. Adam Clayton Powell).

Letter from William A. Geoghegan to Mrs. Jean C. Cahn, February 6, 1967, in Hearings 59.

FN9. Rule XI, paragraph 26, prescribes committee procedures. In addition to internal housekeeping provisions, it entitles a witness at any hearing to be accompanied by counsel, to submit statements in the discretion of the committee, and to obtain a transcript of testimony, upon payment of costs. H.R.Doc. No. 619, 87th Cong., 2d Sess. 364-368 (1963).

Mr. Powell appeared at the February 8 hearing, accompanied by his attorneys. At this time the Chairman, Mr. Celler, without objection from Mr. Powell, took official notice of the published hearings and conclusions of the Special Subcommittee on Contracts of the Committee on House Administration, relating to the investigation of Mr. Powell conducted during the 89th Congress. See note 4 supra, and accompanying text. The Chairman then explained that, in addition to the rights set forth in the letter of February 1, counsel for Mr. Powell would be permitted a reasonable length of time for oral argument and Mr. Powell would be permitted to make a statement to the Committee on all matters as to which he was invited to testify.

Counsel for Mr. Powell moved that the Committee limit its inquiry to Mr. Powell's age, citizenship, and inhabitancy and that, because the scope of the Committee's inquiry was constitutionally limited to these three requirements, it immediately terminate its proceedings and report to the House that Mr. Powell was entitled to his sear.[FN10] After oral argument on these motions Mr. Powell's counsel made several procedural motions asserting the invalidity of the Committee proceedings for failure to provide adequate notice and comply with the due process requirements of an adversary proceeding. In addition, certain specific procedural rights were requested:

FN10. Documentary evidence that Mr. Powell met these three requirements had been previously submitted to the Committee and made part of the record at the hearings. Hearings 14-25. Briefs in support of these motions were filed by counsel for Mr. Powell and the American Civil Liberties Union.

1. Fair notice as to the charges now pending against him, including a statement of charges and a bill of particulars by any accuser. 2. The right to confront his accuser, and in particular to attend in person and by counsel, all sessions of this committee at which testimony or evidence is taken, and to participate therein with full rights of cross-examination. 3. The right fully in every respect to open and public hearings in every respect in the proceedings before the select committee. 4. The right to have this committee issue its process to summon witnesses whom he may use in his defense. 5. The right to a transcript of every hearing.[FN11]

FN11. Hearings 54.

After the Committee took these motions under advisement, Mr. Powell was questioned by counsel for the Committee. After a few questions, Mr. Powell's counsel objected and insisted that Mr. Powell would not proceed further without a ruling on his pending motions. The Select Committee then recessed and, upon reconvening, the Chairman denied all of the *582 359 motions. With specific reference to the procedural motions, the Chairman said:

This is not an adversary proceeding. The committee is going to make every effort that a fair hearing will be afforded, and prior to this date has decided to give the Member-elect rights beyond those afforded an ordinary witness under the House rules.

The committee has put the Member-elect on notice of the matters into which it will inquire by its notice of the scope of inquiry and its invitation to appear, as well as by conferences with, and a letter from its chief counsel to the counsel for the Member-elect.

Prior to this hearing the committee decided that it would allow the Member-elect the right to an open and public hearing and the right to transcript of every hearing at which testimony is adduced.

The committee has decided to summon any witnesses having substantial relevant testimony to the inquiry upon the written request of the Member-elect or his counsel.

The Member-elect certainly has the right to attend all hearings at which testimony is adduced and to have counsel present at those hearings.[FN12]

FN12. Hearings 59.

After these rulings by the Chairman, Mr. Powell was interrogated, but upon advice of counsel he refused to answer any questions except those relating to his age, citizenship, and inhabitancy in New York. At the end of the February 8 hearing, the Chairman denied a request that Mr. Powell be permitted to make a statement at that time, suggesting that it should be renewed subsequently.[FN13]

FN13. Hearings 107.

By a letter of February 10, Mr. Powell was informed that the next hearing would be held on February 14. He was further advised that, upon written application, the Select Committee would summon any witnesses 'having substantial relevant testimony to the inquiry. * * *'The letter stated:

The Select Committee has deferred decision on the question raised by the original motion of your counsel as to whether the qualifications for membership in the House, specifically enumerated in Article I, Section 2, of the Constitution, age, citizenship, and inhabitancy, should be deemed exclusive. Further, we are of the opinion that the Select Committee is required by House Resolution 1, 90th Congress, to inquire not only into the question of your right to take the oath and be seated as a member of the 90th Congress, but additionally and simultaneously to inquire into the question of whether you should be punished or expelled pursuant to the powers granted by the House under Article I, Section 5, Clause 2, of the Constitution. In other words, the Select Committee is of the opinion that at the conclusion of the present inquiry, it has authority to report back to the House recommendations with respect to your seating, expulsion or other punishment.[FN14]

FN14. Letter from Emanuel Celler to Adam Clayton Powell, February 10, 1967, in Hearings 110.

Finally the letter queried whether in both the seating phase and the punishment and expulsion phase, Mr. Powell would refuse to testify about the legal proceedings against him and his alleged official misconduct. He was again invited to testify and advised he would be allowed to make a statement.

At the hearing on February 14 attended by Mr. Powell's attorneys but not by Mr. Powell, it was stated that Mr. Powell would not testify concerning the court proceedings or alleged official misconduct in either phase of the Committee's inquiry. Mr. Powell's attorneys reasserted their position that age, citizenship, and inhabitancy were the exclusive qualifications, and, further, took the position that no inquiry on the question of punishment or expulsion was possible until a Member had been seated, *583 360 and that the two issues- seating and punishment or expulsion- could not be merged into one proceeding.[FN15] The Select Committee then proceeded to hear evidence concerning the New York litigation involving Mr. Powell and evidence concerning the air travel, expense reimbursement and bank accounts of Mr. Powell and his associates.

FN15. Hearings 111-13.

Neither Mr. Powell nor his attorneys attended the final hearing of the Select Committee on February 16. At that time testimony was received from Mrs. Adam Clayton Powell (Y. Marjorie Flores) with respect to her financial affairs and those of her husband. Testimony was also received from a former assistant to Mr. Powell concerning disbursements for airplane travel. After the close of the hearings, counsel for Mr. Powell submitted another brief, reiterating the points previously raised.

On February 23, 1967, the Select Committee issued its report. Mr. Powell was found to be over 25 years of age, a United States citizen for more than 7 years, and, on the date of his election, and inhabitant of the State of New York.[FN16] The Committee also found, however, that Mr. Powell had asserted an unwarranted privilege and immunity from the processes of the courts of the State of New York; had wrongfully and wilfully diverted House funds for use of others and himself, in his capacity as a Member of Congress and as a committee chairman; and had made false reports on expenditures of foreign exchange currency to the Committee on House Administration.[FN17] Based on these findings of fact, the Select Committee recommended the adoption of a resolution stating:

FN16. The Committee report noted that no question as to Mr. Powell's age or citizenship had been raised but that members of the House and the public questioned his inhabitancy. H.R.REP. No. 27, 90th Cong. 1st Sess. 5 n. 7 (1967).

2. That upon taking the oath as a Member of the 90th Congress the said Adam Clayton Powell be brought to the bar of the House in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House and be there publicly censured by the Speaker in the name of the House.

3. That Adam Clayton Powell, as punishment, pay to the Clerk of the House to be disposed of by him according to law, $40,000. The Sergeant-at-Arms of the House is directed to deduct $1,000 per month from the salary otherwise due the said Adam Clayton Powell and pay the same to said Clerk, said deductions to continue while any salary is due the said Adam Clayton Powell as a Member of the House of Representatives until said $40,000 is fully paid. Said sums received by the Clerk shall offset to the extent thereof any liability of the said Adam Clayton Powell to the United States of America with respect to the matters referred to in the above paragraphs 3 and 4 of the preamble to this resolution. (See pp. 584, 585 infra.)

4. That the seniority of the said Adam Clayton Powell in the House of Representatives commence as of the date he takes the oath as a Member of the 90th Congress.

5. That if the said Adam Clayton Powell does not present himself to take the oath of office on or before March 13, 1967, the seat of the 18th District of the State of New York shall be deemed vacant and the Speaker shall notify the Governor of the State of New York of the existing vacancy.[FN18]

The report and proposed resolution of the Select Committee were presented to the House on March 1, 1967.[FN19] Although notice of this submission had been published in the Congressional Record,[FN20] Mr. 584 361 Powell did not appear in the House on March 1. The House extensively debated the proposed resolution, considering, inter alia, whether age, citizenship, and inhabitancy were the sole grounds for exclusion from membership in the House; whether the House should first seat Mr. Powell and then determine whether to punish or expel him; and whether a two-thirds vote would be required to exclude him on the basis of the Select Committee's findings. At the conclusion of debate, the House rejected, by a vote of 222 to 202, a motion to bring the resolution to an immediate vote. Mr. Curtis, of Missouri, offered an amendment to the Committee resolution; the thrust of the amendment was to exclude Mr. Powell and declare his seat vacant. At this point The Speaker ruled that a majority vote would be sufficient to pass the resolution if so amended.[FN21] After further debate this amendment was adopted by a roll call vote of 248 to 176. The amended resolution was then agreed upon, 307 to 116. The Select Committee's proposed preamble was then adopted so that House Resolution 278, 90th Congress, 1st Session, in its final form read:

FN19. The relevant proceedings on March 1, 1967, are found at 113 Cong.Rec. H 1918-57 (daily ed. March 1, 1967).

FN21. 113 Cong.Rec. H 1942 (daily ed. March 1, 1967). Mr. Curtis, speaking to his proffered amendment, stated:
During the debate on the resolution, for which this is a substitute, I advanced my own theory on what power was derived from the power of expulsion. I said that I felt the power of expulsion very clearly implied the right of exclusion. I do not see how anyone can argue very seriously against this implied power.
Also, if this is true, then in my own judgment exclusion would require a two-thirds vote.

WHEREAS, The Select Committee appointed Pursuant to H.Res. 1 (90th Congress) has reached the following conclusions:

First, Adam Clayton Powell possesses the requisite qualifications of age, citizenship and inhabitancy for membership in the House of Representatives and holds a Certificate of Election from the State of New York.

Second, Adam Clayton Powell has repeatedly ignored the processes and authority of the courts in the State of New York in legal proceedings pending therein to which he is a party, and his contumacious conduct towards the court of that State has caused him on several occasions to be adjudicated in contempt thereof, thereby reflecting discredit upon and bringing into disrepute the House of Representatives and its Members.

Third, as a Member of this House, Adam Clayton Powell improperly maintained on his clerk-hire payroll Y. Marjorie Flores (Mrs. Adam C. Powell) from August 14, 1964 to December 31, 1966, during which period either she performed no official duties whatever or such duties were not performed in Washington, D.C. or the State of New York as required by law.

Fourth, as Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, Adam Clayton Powell permitted and participated in improper expenditures of government funds for private purposes.

Fifth, the refusal of Adam Clayton Powell to cooperate with the Select Committee and the Special Subcommittee on Contracts of the House Administration Committee in their lawful inquiries authorized by the House of Representatives was contemptuous and was conduct unworthy of a Member; Now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That said Adam Clayton Powell, Member-Elect from the Eighteenth District of the State of New York, be and the same hereby is excluded from membership in the 90th Congress, and that the Speaker shall notify the Governor of the State of New York of the existing vacancy.

Thereafter, Appellants brought the suit from which the present appeal derives. Because of its importance to the resolution of the issues here presented, some attention must be devoted to the nature of the present claims. By their own statement of this case, Appellants *585 362 sued the Members of the present House of Representatives in a class action. Their complaint in the District Court named Representatives John W. McCormack, Carl Albert, Gerald R. Ford, Emanuel Celler, Arch A. Moore, Jr., and Thomas B. Curtis 'individually and, pursuant to Rule 23(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, as representatives of a class of citizens who are presently serving in the 90th Congress as members of the House of Representatives.'Speaker McCormack was also named in his official capacity. The Clerk of the House of Representatives, the Sergeant-at-Arms and the Doorkeeper were each named individually and in their official capacities.

Appellants' complaint challenged the action of the House by claiming that 'House Resolution No. 278 is null and void and in violation of the Constitution of the United States, in particular Article I, Section 2(2) thereof which sets forth the exclusive qualifications for membership in the House of Representatives,' and also because 'it violates Article I, Section I (2, cl. 1) of the Constitution of the United States which provides that members of the House shall be elected by the people of each state.'It further alleged that the House action violated the 'basic rights' of the electors of the 18th Congressional District of New York and that, as non-white citizens, these electors were being denied their rights under the fifth, thirteenth, and fifteenth amendments, and, as females, certain of the electors were being denied their rights under the nineteenth amendment. The complaint also attacked House Resolution 278 as a bill of attainder, an ex post facto law and as cruel and unusual punishment. Appellants further asserted that the hearings conducted by the Select Committee violated the fifth and sixth amendments by denying 'the elemental rights of due process, including but not limited to notice of charges, the right of confrontation of witnesses, effective representation by counsel who could cross-examine witnesses in regard to any matter alleged. * * *'

Appellants' complaint also challenged the actions of certain of the individuals here sued as follows. Speaker McCormack was alleged to have violated the fifth amendment in declaring a vacancy in the 18th Congressional District contrary to Article I, section 2(4), (5), section 3(6), (7) and section 5(2), and 2 U.S.C. § 8 (1964). The Speaker was also challenged for his refusal to administer the oath to Mr. Powell ('under color and authority of his office and the illegal and unconstitutional actions of the House of Representatives') and for his threat to exclude Mr. Powell from occupancy of his office space. The complaint further stated that the Clerk of the House threatened to refuse to perform the services for Mr. Powell to which a duly- elected Congressman is entitled, that the Sergeant-at-Arms refused to pay Mr. Powell his salary, and that the Doorkeeper threatened to refuse to admit Mr. Powell to the House Chamber.

We take special notice of the manner in which Appellants characterized their action: 'this is a proceeding to restrain the enforcement, operation or execution of House Resolution No. 278. * * *'The relief prayed for by the Appellants was that a statutory three-judge court be convened, that it grant a permanent injunction restraining Appellees from executing House Resolution 278, and that it issue a permanent injunction restraining Speaker McCormack from refusing to administer the oath, the Clerk from refusing to perform the duties due a Member of the House, the Sergeant-at-Arms from refusing to pay Mr. Powell, and the Doorkeeper from refusing to admit Mr. Powell to the Chamber. The requested injunction would also restrain the named Representatives 'and all other members of the class of citizens they represent who are members of the House of Representatives from taking any action to enforce House Resolution No. 278 or nay other action which will deny to plaintiff Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., the right to be seated. * * *'The complaint also asked for declaratory judgment that the denial of his seat violated *586 363 the Constitution. In addition Appellants requested writs of mandamus to require Speaker McCormack to administer the oath of office and to compel the relief requested against the other named officials. Finally, Appellants requested preliminary injunctions granting similar relief pending adjudication of the claims.

After detailed pleading and arguments of counsel, the District Court denied Appellants' application for a three-judge court, dismissed the complaint 'for want of jurisdiction of the subject matter,' and denied the motion for a preliminary injunction. Powell v. McCormack, 266 F.Supp. 354, 360 (D.D.C.1967). On April 27, 1967, this court denied Appellants' motion for summary reversal. Appellants' petition for writ of certiorari prior to judgment in this court was denied by the Supreme Court on May 29, 1967, Powell v. McCormack, 387 U.S. 933, 87 S.Ct. 2056, 18 L.Ed.2d 995 (1967).

While these legal proceedings were pending Mr. Powell was re-elected to the House of Representatives on April 11, 1967. The formal certification of election was received by the House on May 1, 1967. Mr. Powell has not presented himself again to the House or asked to be given the oath of office.

Claims and Issues

The issues on this appeal raise profound questions of constitutional law which go to the very heart of our form of government of powers delegated to separate branches by a written constitution. Inextricable are fundamental aspects of our commitment to representative government with elected legislators responsible directly to the people.

Appellants contend:

(a) that dismissal of the complaint in the District Court for want of jurisdiction was error;

(b) that the claims are justiciable;

(c) that refusal to seat Mr. Powell who was over twenty-five year of age, more than seven years a citizen and an inhabitant of New York violated Article I, sections 2 and 5 of the Constitution;

(d) that House Resolution 278 inflicted on Mr. Powell a punishment in violation of the Constitution;

(e) that Mr. Powell's exclusion from the House violated Due Process;

(f) that Mr. Powell's exclusion from the House violated rights of the voters of his district to a free choice of their representative;

(g) that federal courts have power to grant relief requested; and

(h) that the District Court erred in refusing to certify the necessity for a three-judge court.

The Appellees contend:

(a) that the Speech or Debate Clause of Article I is an absolute bar to the action;

(b) that there is no federal subject matter jurisdiction;

(c) that the complaint presents a political question; and

(d) that the claims asserted are not justiciable

Constitutional Provisions

Because we will have frequent occasion to refer to the text of certain constitutional provisions, we set out here some of the pertinent sections involved in this case:

Art. I, § 2, clause 2: 'No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.'

Art. I, § 5, clause 1: 'Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business; but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of Absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.'

*587 364 Art. I, § 5, clause 2: 'Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behavior, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.'

Art. I, § 6, clause 1: 'The Senators and Representatives shall receive a Compensation for their Services, to be ascertained by Law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all Cases, except Treason, Felony, and Breach of the Peace, be privileged from Arrest during their Attendance at the Session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any Speech or Debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other Place.'

Art. III, § 2, clause 1: 'The judicial Power shall extend to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their Authority; * * *.'

PART I

JURISDICTION

Historically there have been at least two concepts of the exercise of federal jurisdiction. One is the classical concept that once jurisdiction was found, a court could not decline to act. In Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. (6 Wheat.) 264, 404, 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821), for example, Chief Justice Marshall articulated the view that:

We have no more right to decline the exercise of jurisdiction which is given, than to usurp that which is not given. The one or the other would be treason to the constitution.

See Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. (1 Cranch) 137, 177-178, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803); Wechsler, Toward Neutral Principles of Constitutional Law, 73 HARV.L.REV. 1, 2-9 (1959). A second view is that, where a court finds jurisdiction, it may nevertheless decline to exercise its power. L. HAND THE BILL OF RIGHTS 14-18 (1958); Finkelstein, Judicial Self-Limition, 37 HARV.L.REV. 338 (1923).[FN22]

FN22. Both competing theories are discussed in BICKEL, THE LEAST DANGEROUS BRANCH 46-65 (1962). Professor Bickel himself comes very close to the second concept in his views on prudential techniques for avoiding the exercise of jurisdiction. Bickel, Foreword: The Passive Virtues, 75 HARV.L.REV. 40 (1961). A more thorough analysis is set forth in Scharpf, Judicial Review and the Political Question: A Functional Analysis, 75 YALE L.J. 517 (1966).

Much of what has been said and written on the concepts of jurisdiction, discretionary jurisdiction, justiciability, case or controversy, and political question, and any effort to fix firm boundaries defining these concepts, is now merged into a series of cases,[FN23] the most significant of which for our purposes is Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 82 S.Ct. 691, 7 L.Ed.2d 663 (1962). Almost imperceptibly at first, but quite clearly by the 1962 holding in Baker, the Supreme Court had established more comprehensive guidelines for identifying federal subject matter jurisdiction and justiciability. Since the present case turns on a constitutional grant of power to a coequal branch, the application of these guidelines presents what Mr. Justice Brennan termed in Baker,'a delicate exercise in constitutional interpretation,'id. at 211, 82 S.Ct. at 706.

When a court finds that the subject matter of the case is inappropriate for judicial consideration, Baker now establishes that it is nonjusticiable and the court declines to exercise admitted jurisdiction:

The District Court was uncertain whether our cases withholding federal judicial relief rested upon a lack of federal jurisdiction or upon the inappropriateness of the subject matter for 588 365 judicial consideration- what we have designated ' nonjusticiability.' The distinction between the two grounds is significant. In the instance of nonjusticiability, consideration of the cause is not wholly and immediately foreclosed; rather, the Court's inquiry necessarily proceeds to the point of deciding whether the duty asserted can be judicially identified and its breach judicially determined, and whether protection for the right asserted can be judicially molded. In the instance of lack of jurisdiction the cause either does not 'arise under' the Federal Constitution, laws or treaties (or fall within one of the other enumerated categories of Art. III, § 2), or is not a 'case or controversy' within the meaning of that section; or the cause is not one described by any jurisdictional statute.

Baker v. Carr, supra, at 198, 82 S.Ct. at 700.

The difficulties arising from the terms used on this elusive subject are suggested by the comments of other members of the Court in Baker. Mr. Justice Harlan, for example, described the majority holding as an 'abrupt departure * * * from judicial history.' He went on to note:

Once one cuts through the thicket of discussion devoted to 'jurisdiction,' 'standing,' 'justiciability, ' and 'political question,' there emerges a straightforward issue * * *. Does the complaint disclose a violation of a federal constitutional right * * *, a claim over which a United States District Court would have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(3) and 42 U.S.C. 1983? The majority opinion does not actually discuss this basic question, but, as one concurring Justice (Stewart) observes, seems to decide it 'sub silentio.' Ante, p. 261,82 S.Ct. p. 733 .

Baker v. Carr, supra, at 330-331, 82 S.Ct. 691, 771 (Harlan, J., dissenting).

In Baker, where the Court was dealing with state action, what the Court said, perhaps as much as what it did, staked out something of the new dimensions of federal subject matter jurisdiction, justiciability, the political question and other doctrines. If Baker was, as Mr. Justice Frankfurter thought, 'a massive repudiation of the experience of our whole past,'id. at 267, 82 S.Ct. at 737 (dissenting opinion), it is a holding which points the way for us as to the issues of jurisdiction and justiciability.

Mr. Justice Brennan in Baker enumerated three criteria each of which must be present to establish the existence of federal subject matter jurisdiction:

(1) the cause must 'arise under' the Federal Constitution, laws, or treaties (or fall within one of the other enumerated categories of Article III, section 2), and (2) the cause must be a 'case or controversy' within the meaning of Article III, section 2, and (3) the cause must be described in a jurisdictional statute enacted by Congress.

Id. at 198, 82 S.Ct. at 700.

1. Arising Under the Federal Constitution.

[1] Subject to congressional enactment, Article III, section 2, grants federal courts jurisdiction on over ' all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; * * *.' In 1875 Congress used similar language in a statute granting federal courts general and original jurisdiction over such cases. Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, § 1, 18 Stat. 470. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331(a) (1964). A commentator has recently noted that:

the key phrase, both in the Constitution and in the statute, is 'arises under.' Though the meaning of this phrase has attracted the interest of such giants of the bench as Marshall, Waite, Bradley, the first Harlan, Holmes, Cardozo, and Frankfurter, and has been the subject of voluminous scholarly writing, it cannot be said that any clear test has yet been developed*589 366 to determine which cases ' arise under' the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.

C. WRIGHT, FEDERAL COURTS 48 (1963).

Appellants' complaint in the District Court is predicated on the several Article I powers of the House, Article III, and on the Bill of Rights and Civil Rights Amendments. Neither the litigants nor the District Court [FN24] challenged the substantiality and importance of the constitutional claims, one of the most significant factors in the determination of subject matter jurisdiction.[FN25] Thus, leaving for subsequent discussion the question of whether the case 'arises under' in the context of the statutory grant of jurisdiction, this case would appear to present a substantial claim which arises 'directly' under the Constitution,[FN26] and thus 'arises under' in the context of the constitutional grant of jurisdiction of Article III. This conclusion is fortified by the broad reading given to Article III by Chief Justice Marshall in Osborn v. President, etc., Bank of the United States, 22 U.S. (9 Wheat.) 738, 846-858, 6 L.Ed. 204 (1824). See WRIGHT, supra, at 48-52; Chadbourn & Levin, Original Jurisdiction of Federal Questions, 90 U.Pa.L.Rev. 639, 649 (1942).

FN24.Powell v. McCormack, 266 F.Supp. 354, 355-356 (D.D.C.1967).

FN25. Dismissal of the complaint upon the ground of lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter would, therefore, be justified only if that claim were 'so attenuated and unsubstantial as to be absolutely devoid of merit,'Newburyport Water Co. v. City of Newburyport, 193 U.S. 561, 579, 24 S.Ct. 553, 557, 48 L.Ed. 795 or 'frivolous,' Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 683, 66 S.Ct. 773, 90 L.Ed. 939. That the claim is unsubstantial must be 'very plain.' Hart v. B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange, 262 U.S. 271, 274, 43 S.Ct. 540, 67 L.Ed. 977.
Baker v. Carr, supra, 369 U.S. at 199, 82 S.Ct. 691.

Appellees argue that the issue presented by this case arises exclusively and finally under Article I, section 5, and thus the case is withdrawn from the judicial power articulated in Article III. Their argument, which has the support of various contemporary constitutional authorities,[FN27] is that the text of the Constitution- 'Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members'- carved out from the Article III judicial powers all jurisdiction of the courts to review congressional judgment under this clause. Stated in another way, Appellees' argument is that the Constitution assigned this special kind of judging function to the Legislative Branch.[FN28] If so, it is the Constitution's allocation of powers that requires this result, rather than any failure of the claim to arise under the Constitution.Article III grants judicial power to cases 'arising under' the Constitution as a whole, not under any particular provision of it.

FN27. See Frank, Political Questions, in SUPREME COURT AND SUPREME LAW 36 (E. Cahn ed. 1954); Scharpf, supra note 22, at 539-40; Wechsler, supra, at 8.

FN28. Appellees' argument finds its logical basis in the classical theory of judicial review previously discussed. Under that view, as Professor Wechsler noted, the primary question is whether the Constitution commits the 'autonomous determination' of the issue to another coordinate branch. Wechsler, supra, at 7-9.

2. Case or Controversy.

[2] It is clear from the debates at the Philadelphia Convention that the Framers intended Article III's requirement of 'case or controversy' to mean cases or controversies 'of a judiciary nature.' E.g., 2 M. FARRAND, RECORDS OF THE FEDERAL CONVENTION OF 1787, at 430 (rev. ed. 1966). Analysis of English and Colonial precedents shows that after a long and bitter struggle judicial bodies were denied the power of review over legislative judgments concerning elections and qualifications of members. See 1 H. REMICK, THE POWERS OF CONGREES IN RESPECT TO MEMBERSHIP AND ELECTIONS 1-62 (1929); see generally M. CLARKE, PARLIAMENTARY PRIVILEGE IN THE AMERICAN*590 367 COLONIES (1943); C. WITTKE, THE HISTORY OF ENGLISH PARLIAMENTARY PRIVILEGE (1921). Nothing at the Convention suggests that the 'case or controversy' language of Article III was intended to change this familiar and historical allocation of powers. See 2 M. FARRAND, supra, at 39, 132-33, 186.Indeed, where departures from English precedents were intended they were explicitly written into Article III; for example, the provision extending judicial power to include cases in equity, 2id. at 428.

No cases have been cited as directly holding, and our search has not revealed any basis for saying, that a claim to a seat in the House is of a kind traditionally the concern of courts in the sense, for example, that Mr. Justice Frankfurter viewed traditional cases as those which English courts dealt with at the time of our Convention, Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee v. McGrath, 341 U.S. 123, 71 S.Ct. 624, 95 L.Ed. 817 (1951) (Frankfurter, J., concurring); Coleman v. Miller, 307 U.S. 433, 460, 59 S.Ct. 972, 83 L.Ed. 1385 (1939) (Frankfurter, J., concurring); see Atlas Life Ins. Co. v. W. I. Southern, Inc., 306 U.S. 563, 568, 59 S.Ct. 657, 83 L.Ed. 987 (1939). All traditions must have a genesis, however, and legal traditions are no exception. One might view Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S.Ct. 339, 17 L.Ed.2d 235 (1966), for example, as departing from existing federal traditions when it found jurisdiction over a state legislator's claim to his seat. It is interesting, however, that nowhere in the opinions of the three-judge Bond court is there any discussion of ' case or controversy.' Bond v. Floyd, 251 F.Supp. 333 (N.D.Ga.1966). Nor did the Supreme Court opinion in Bond elaborate on the 'case or controversy' aspect. The presence of a case or controversy was seemingly taken for granted or decided sub silentio. The same is true in Baker v. Carr.Although Baker explicitly tabulates 'case or controversy' as one of three indispensable factors for jurisdiction, nowhere in that opinion is there any discussion indicating just how the reapportionment of state electoral districts fell within the scope of matters 'of a judiciary nature.'[FN29]Yet the holding plainly assumes that a case or controversy was presented.

FN29. The Court merely stated: 'Our conclusion * * * that this cause presents no nonjusticiable 'political question' settles the only possible doubt that it is a case or controversy.'Baker v. Carr, supra, 369 U.S. at 198, 82 S.Ct. at 700.

Against this background we can hardly conclude that Mr. Powell's claim to a seat in the House fails to present a case or controversy as those terms must now be construed.

3. Statutory Grant of Jurisdiction.

[3] Even where the requisites of Article III, section 2 are met- that is, the claim presents a case or controversy which 'arises under' the Constitution or laws of the United States- jurisdiction of federal courts is dependent on an affirmative grant by Congress. U.S. CONST. art. III, § 1; Baker v. Carr, supra, 369 U.S. at 198, 82 S.Ct. 691; Ex parte McCardle, 74 U.S. (7 Wall.) 506, 19 L.Ed. 264 (1868).

Our examination of the various jurisdictional statutes relied upon by Appellants reveals that jurisdiction can be based only on 28 U.S.C. § 1331(a) (1964), [FN30] the relevant provision of which 591 368 is: 'The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions * * * (which arise) under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.'Although there is a paucity of legislative history for the statute, see generally FRANKFURTER & LANDIS, THE BUSINESS OF THE SUPREME COURT 65-69 (1927), commentators agree that a broad grant of jurisdiction was intended. Mishkin, supra note 26, at 160; Chadbourn & Levin, supra, at 644-645 (1942); Forrester, The Nature of a 'Federal Question,' 16 TULANE L. REV. 362, 374-385 (1942). We have already determined that this case ' arises under' the Constitution for the purposes of the Article III definition of judicial power. While section 1331 is not to be equated with the potential for federal jurisdiction in Article III, see e.g., Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 246-247 n. 8, 88 S.Ct. 391, 19 L.Ed.2d 444 (1967), and cases cited therein, we conclude that the statute is broad enough to operate as an affirmative jurisdictional grant here. See, e.g., Gully v. First Nat'l Bank, 299 U.S. 109, 112-114, 57 S.Ct. 96, 81 L.Ed. 70 (1936);

FN30. Appellants also rely on the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201, 2202 (1964), and the Three Judge Court statute, 28 U.S.C. § 2282 (1964), but it is clear that these statutes are not jurisdictional.Skelly Oil Co. v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 339 U.S. 667, 671-672, 70 S.Ct. 876, 94 L.Ed. 1194 (1950) (declaratory judgment); Cadillac Publishing Co. v. Summerfield, 97 U.S.App.D.C. 14, 227 F.2d 29,cert. denied, 350 U.S. 901, 76 S.Ct. 179, 100 L.Ed. 791 (1955) (same); Van Buskirk v. Wilkinson, 216 F.2d 735 (9th Cir. 1954) (three judge court). The civil rights statutes relied upon, 42 U.S.C. §§ 1971(a)(1), 1981, 1983 (1964), and 42 U.S.C. § 1971(a)(2) (1964), as amended, § 15, 79 Stat. 445 (1965), are not applicable because they deal either with state action or with specific acts of voter discrimination which are not alleged to have been involved here. Appellants' final jurisdictional predicate, 28 U.S.C. 1343(4) (1964) is equally unavailing. To the extent that it might confer jurisdiction as to federal deprivation of civil rights protected by Acts of Congress, those very acts, we have just noted, are not applicable here.

FN31. Appellees argue that 28 U.S.C. § 1344 (1964), conferring jurisdiction to recover possession of office but excluding the office of Representative in the House, plainly denied jurisdiction in cases like this. See Johnson v. Stevenson, 170 F.2d 108 (5th Cir. 1948), cert. denied, 336 U.S. 904, 69 S.Ct. 491, 93 L.Ed. 1069 (1949). That statute, however, is limited to election disputes. In addition, it requires that the sole question involved arise out of the denial of voting rights on account of race, color or servitude.

For other dismissals based on lack of a jurisdictional statute see Peterson v. Sears, 238 F.Supp. 12 (N.D.Iowa 1964) (suit to enjoin voting officials from unlocking voting machines after congressional election); Keogh v. Horner, 8 F.Supp. 933 (S.D.Ill.1934) (suit for writ of prohibition against Governor's issuance of certificate of election of Congressman).

PART II

JUSTICIABILITY- DISCRETION TO ACT

[4] Having found that under Baker jurisdiction arises, we now turn to the inquiry as to the appropriateness or inappropriateness of the subject matter of Appellants' claims for judicial consideration. Absent federal subject matter jurisdiction there would be nothing on which a court could act, but 'in the instance of nonjusticiability, consideration of the cause is not wholly and immediately foreclosed; rather, the court's inquiry necessarily proceeds' to determine whether a duty and its breach can be identified and determined and a remedy molded.Baker v. Carr, supra, 369 U.S. at 198, 82 S.Ct. at 700.

Appellees argue that the cause presents on its face a 'political question.' [FN32]But the fact that a claim seeks the enforcement of a political right or a claim to political office, as here, does not necessarily mean that it raises a 'political question.' See, e.g., Bond v. Floyd, supra. The term 'political' has been used to distinguish questions which are essentially for decision by the political branches from those which are essentially for adjudication by the judicial branch.

FN32. The standard authorities on the nature of a 'political question' are: Frank, supra note 27, at 36-43; POST, THE SUPREME COURT AND POLITICAL QUESTIONS (1936); Field, The Doctrine of Political Questions in the Federal Courts, 8 MINN.L.REV. 485 (1924); Finkelstein, Judicial Self-Limitation, 37 HARV.L.REV. 338 (1924); Finkelstein, Further Notes on Judicial Self-Limitation, 39 HARV.L.REV. 221 (1926); McCloskey, Foreword: The Reapportionment Case, 76 HARV.L.REV. 54, 59-64 (1962); Scharpf, supra note 22; Weston, Political Questions, 38 HARV.L.REV. 296 (1925).

*592 369 In some areas the political question can be readily discerned; for example, the conduct of foreign policy is vested exclusively in the Executive, e.g., United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corp., 299 U.S. 304, 319, 57 S.Ct. 216, 81 L.Ed. 255 (1936); Oetjen v. Central Leather Co., 246 U.S. 297, 302, 38 S.Ct. 309, 62 L.Ed. 726 (1918), whereas the power to declare war or raise armies is vested in the Congress, U.S. CONST. art. 1, § 8. Even in these areas questions can arise on the peripheries so that the labels of 'foreign policy' or 'state of war' are not automatic barriers to all judicial scrutiny, e.g., The Three Friends, 166 U.S. 1, 63-66, 17 S.Ct. 495, 41 L.Ed. 897 (1897); Baker v. Carr, supra, 369 U.S. at 212-213, 82 S.Ct. 691, and cases cited therein. No purpose would be served in pursuing delineation and we refer to it only to indicate that the law does not pivot on labels, even those of constitutional origin.

Appellees stress the applicability of a series of cases containing language indicating that the exercise of congressional power to judge the qualifications of members is beyond the scope of the judicial power, i.e., the courts have no jurisdiction at all. In the cases cited to us, either the issue of jurisdiction was never reached,[FN33] or the language relied upon is dictum.[FN34]Nevertheless, we note that they treat this congressional power as exclusive.[FN35]

FN34.Reed v. County Commissioners, 277 U.S. 376, 388, 48 S.Ct. 531, 72 L.Ed. 924 (1928); Jones v. Montague, 194 U.S. 147, 153, 24 S.Ct. 611, 48 L.Ed. 913 (1904); Johnson v. Stevenson, 170 F.2d 108, 110 (5th Cir. 1948), cert. denied, 336 U.S. 904, 69 S.Ct. 491, 93 L.Ed. 1069 (1949); Application of James, 241 F.Supp. 858, 860 (S.D.N.Y.1965); Peterson v. Sears, 238 F.Supp. 12, 13-14 (N.D.Iowa 1964); Keogh v. Horner, 8 F.Supp. 933, 935 (S.D.Ill.1934); In re Voorhis, 291 F. 673, 675 (S.D.N.Y.1923.)

In three of these case, Johnson, Peterson, and Keogh, the decision was based on lack of an appropriate jurisdictional statute.

FN35. For state cases to a similar effect see Laxalt v. Cannon, 80 Nev. 588, 397 P.2d 466 (1964); In re Williams' Contest, 198 Minn. 516, 270 N.W. 586 (1936).

The only holding of this court which bears directly on the issue is Sevilla v. Elizalde, 72 App.D.C. 108, 112 F.2d 29 (1940). In Sevilla, a resident of the Philippine Commonwealth sought a bill in equity to enjoin the resident commissioner of the Philippines from holding office because he lacked the requisite qualifications. The qualifications were specified in the Independence Act which provided for the resident commissioner to have a seat but no vote in the United States House of Representatives. The court characterized his role as partly a diplomatic resident of a 'foreign' state and partly a territorial delegate to Congress. Nothing that the question of the qualifications of foreign diplomats was committed to the Executive, and the question of the qualifications of a delegate was committed to Congress, this court held that the case presented a political question:

Courts have no jurisdiction to decide political questions. These are such as to have been entrusted by the sovereign for decision to the so-called political departments of government, as distinquished from questions which the sovereign has set to be decided in the courts.Article I, section 5 of the Constitution provides that 'each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members * * *.' And the Supreme Court has recognized that although these powers are judicial, as distinguished from legislative or executive, in type, they have nevertheless been lodged in the legislative branch by the Constitution.

Id. at 111, 116, 112 F.2d at 32, 37. The Sevilla holding standing alone might well be dispostive of the instant appeal but it must be read in light of cases since then, culminating in Baker.

593 370 The Supreme Court case on which the Sevilla court relied in reaching its conclusion is Barry v. United States ex rel. Cunningham, 279 U.S. 597, 49 S.Ct. 452, 73 L.Ed. 867 (1929). There a Senate investigation into the election of a Senator involved the subpoena of a witness to testify as to the source of campaign contributions. He refused to appear and the Senate ordered him arrested and brought to the Chamber. The Supreme Court held that the Senate had the power to bring a witness before it by arrest warrant pursuant to the exercise of its power to judge the qualifications of its Members.[FN36] More importantly, the Supreme Court noted that the power to judge encompassed the power to 'render a judgment which is beyond the authority of any other tribunal to review,'id. at 613, 49 S.Ct. at 455. See Mr. Justice Douglas' concurring opinion in Baker v. Carr, supra, 369 U.S. at 242 n. 2, 82 S.Ct. at 723:'Of course each House of Congress, not the Court, is 'the Judge of the Elections, Returns, and Qualifications of its own Members.''

FN36. In Barry the Senate was not judging qualifications in the sense here involved but inquiring into whether, because of fraud and illegal conduct of the candidate, no 'election' had been held.

Nonjusticiability of a question because it is found to be essentially political is declared by Baker to be a doctrine peculiar to confrontations within the federal establishment and derives from the fundamental structure of our system of divided and separate powers.[FN37] In Baker and Bond any possible confrontation was between federal power and a state. Cautiously avoiding any attempt to state the exclusive criteria for identifying a political question, Mr. Justice Brennan in Baker suggested six factors to be found 'prominent on the surface' of a political question case. They bear restatement:

FN37. In the Guaranty Clause cases and in the other 'political question' cases, it is the relationship between the judiciary and the coordinate branches of the Federal Government, and not the federal judiciary's relationship to the States, which gives rise to the 'political question.' Baker v. Carr, supra, at 210, 82 S.Ct. 706. See McCloskey, supra note 32, at 62.

Luther v. Borden, 48 U.S. (7 How.) 1, 12 L.Ed. 581 (1849), is the foremost of the guaranty clause cases. Although the dispute there arose within a state, the court focused on the potential conflict between the federal judicial power and the obligation of the legislative and executive branches to fulfill the guaranty clause.

(1) a textually demonstrable constitutional commitment of the issue to a coordinate political department; (2) or a lack of judicially discoverable and manageable standards for resolving it; (3) or the impossibility of deciding without an initial policy determination of a kind clearly for nonjudicial discretion; (4) or the impossibility of a court's undertaking independent resolution without expressing lack of the respect due coordinate branches of government; (5) or an unusual need for unquestioning adherence to a political decision already made; (6) or the potentiality of embarrassment from multifarious pronouncements by various departments on one question.

Treating these as 'symptoms' of a nonjusticiable political question, rather than as the exclusive criteria for identifying one, we turn to their application to this record, having in mind that under Baker the presence of any one of these six factors may be a bar to justiciability. This much Baker has settled.

(1) Article I, section 5 of the Constitution would seem in plain terms to vest in the House 'a texually demonstrable constitutional commitment of the issue ' of a judging function concerning the 594 371 elections, returns and qualifications of its own Members. The language that 'Each House shall be the judge' can hardly mean less than that the

Members, for this purpose, become 'judges,' withdrawing judging of qualifications from the judicial branch.

Mr. Powell and the class Appellants contend that what was textually committed to the House by Article I, section 5, was the narrow power to judge whether a Member-elect met the Article I, section 2, criteria of age, citizenship and inhabitancy and no more. On its face, section 5 commits the power to judge qualifications to the House in some measure. FN38 Although it may not be necessary to decide whether the power is confined to section 2 criteria or limited in some other respect, it is clear that a general power of judging has been committed by the Constitution to the House. If other factors, now to be considered, render the claims inappropriate for consideration, we need not rely on what seems to be a textual commitment.

> FN38. Deciding whether a matter has in any measure been committed by the Constitution to another branch of government, or whether the action of that branch exceeds whatever authority has been committed, is itself a delicate exercise in constitutional interpretation, and is a responsibility of this Court as ultimate interpreter of the Constitution.

Baker v. Carr, supra, at 211, 82 S.Ct. at 706 (emphasis added).

(2) Are there 'judicially discoverable and manageable standards for resolving' the issues raised? Laying aside for the present the availability of an efficient judicial remedy, it would be difficult to say that there are no 'manageable standards' for adjudicating the issues raised. Familiar judicial techniques are available to construe the meaning of Article I, section 2, criteria of age, citizenship, and inhabitancy and to decide whether these are the sole grounds on which a Member-elect may constitutionally be excluded. The language of Baker, 'manageable standards for resolving' the claims, must, however, be read in light of the earlier formulation inquiring 'whether protection for the right asserted can be judicially molded.'When we consider whether the available 'manageable standards' are adequate for resolving the question in the sense of solving and settling it, we are forced to conclude that courts do not possess the requisite means to fashion a meaningful remedy to compel Members of the House to vote to seat Mr. Powell or to compel The Speaker to administer the oath.

(3) This case does not present aspects to which the third criterion of Baker applies since the determination of the scope of a constitutional grant of power is not an 'initial policy determination of a kind clearly for nonjudicial discretion,' such as a declaration of war.

(4) It is difficult to see, assuming a decision favorable to Mr. Powell, that there could be an efficient judicial resolution which was contrary to the action of the House 'without expressing lack of respect due coordinate branches of government.' Appellants urge that the courts should not concern themselves with the prospect of a direct confrontation because Members of the House, or a majority of them, would as a matter of comity, respect a holding of this court and abide by its rulings. The issue is not, however, what reaction could be expected from the coordinate branch, but the nature of the judicial mandate requested.

(5) There does not seem to be present, except as it arises out of paragraphs (1) and (4) above, 'an unusual need for unquestioning adherence to a political decision already made.'This fifth criterion of Baker has no direct relevance here as it would for example to a specific foreign policy determination within the scope of Executive power. See, e.g., Chicago & Southern Air Lines, Inc. v. Waterman S.S. Corp., 333 U.S. 103, 68 S.Ct. 431, 92 L.Ed. 568 (1948); Eminente v. Johnson, 124 U.S.App.D.C. 56, 361 F.2d 73,cert. denied, 385 U.S. 929, 87 S.Ct. 287, 17 L.Ed.2d 211 (1966); 595372Pauling v. McNamara, 118 U.S.App.D.C. 50, 331 F.2d 796 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 933, 84 S.Ct. 1336, 12 L.Ed.2d 297 (1964).

(6) There is, in only a limited sense, and perhaps not at all in the sense contemplated by Baker, a ' potentiality of embarrassment from multifarious pronouncements by various departments on one question.'However, if we view the risk of conflicting pronouncements by the House and the courts as within this criterion, the potential for embarrassment is rather obvious. A judicial mandate to seat Mr. Powell would in effect be a command to The Speaker to administer the oath contrary to the terms of House Resolution 278. The command to seat Mr. Powell might be obviated were we to hold that our mandate constituted an ' equity substitute' for a resolution of the House, the effect of which would be to treat him as having been sworn and seated. But the resulting confusion from such conflicting pronouncements seems clear.

It would therefore appear that not one but probably several of the Baker 'symptoms' of nonjusticiability are prominent on the surface of the claims asserted and indeed are inextricable from them; this alone might well be sufficient to warrant a conclusion of ' the inappropriateness of the subject matter for judicial consideration.'Baker v. Carr, supra, 369 U.S. at 198, 82 S.Ct. at 700. Baker, it will be recalled, emphasizes the difference between jurisdiction and justiciability. After stating that the distinction 'is significant,' the Court noted:

In the instance of nonjusticiability, consideration of the cause is not wholly and immediately foreclosed; rather, the Court's inquiry necessarily proceeds to the point of deciding whether the duty asserted can be judicially identified and its breach judicially determined, and whether protection for the right asserted can be judicially molded.

Ibid.

If we read 'duty' and 'breach' in the conventional judicial sense, good arguments can be advanced that we can judicially identify the asserted duty of the House to seat a qualified Member-elect, and that a breach of such a duty can, in the abstract, be judicially determined. We will assume, arguendo, that these hurdles are cleared. However, when we come to the next inquiry, 'whether protection for the right asserted can be judicially molded,' we are confronted with problems quite different from and indeed not present in adjudications of conventional equitable claims or claims involving state action. Although Professor Wechsler was not pointing to precisely the problem we have here, his characterization of political questions is apropos: ' what is crucial * * * is not the nature of the question but the nature of the answer that may validly be given by the courts.'Wechsler, supra, at 15.

In Baker, the Supreme Court concluded that protection for the rights arising under the equal protection clause could be molded, saying 'we have no cause at this stage to doubt the District Court will be able to fashion relief * * *.'Baber v. Carr, supra, at 198, 82 S.Ct. at 699. No further elucidation of this is found in the Court's opinion. The only other reference to the scope and mechanics of the relief to be molded is the comment of Mr. Justice Douglas that 'any relief accorded can be fashioned in the light of well-known principles of equity.'Id. at 250, 82 S.Ct. at 727 (Douglas, J., concurring opinion).

Can the District Court mold relief which will protect the rights here asserted? Looking first to the complaint in the District Court, we find that after the prayer for a three-judge court, the complaint asks judgment:

(1) to enjoin execution of House Resolution 278; (2) to require The Speaker of the House to administer the oath to Mr. Powell; (3) to enjoin all Members of the House from any action to enforce Resolution *596 373 278 or otherwise to deny Mr. Powell his seat; (4) for declaratory judgment declaring House Resolution 278 null and void; (5) for injunctive and mandatory relief addressed to non-elected employees of the House relating to access to the House, pay, and other perquisites of the office of a Member.

Any judgment which enjoined execution of House Resolution 278, or commanded the Speaker of the House to administer the oath, or commanded Members of the House as to any action or vote within the Chamber would inevitably bring about a direct confrontation with a co-equal branch and if that did not indicate lack of respect due that Branch, it would at best be a gesture hardly comporting with our ideas of separate co-equal branches of the federal establishment. These circumstances would give rise to a classic political question and fall within the definition of such a question under Baker. On this record, therefore, the claims of Appellants for coercive equitable relief are inappropriate for judicial consideration.

Appropriateness of Subject Matter for Declaratory Relief

[4] Although we have determined that we cannot mold relief in coercive form, we next consider Appellants' claims for a declaratory judgment independent of the coercive equitable relief sought. [FN39] Cf. Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 253-254, 88 S.Ct. 391, 19 L.Ed.2d 444 (1967). The Declaratory Judgment Act provides:

> In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal taxes, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

FN39. One of the reasons, not present here however, that declaratory relief should be considered independently of other relief is the fact that coercive relief 'looks only to some immediate need, whereas the declaration of rights, by clarifying the legal relations, has prospective value in stabilizing the legal position. * * *' BORCHARD, DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS 433 (2d ed. 1941).

FN40. All authorities agree that the purpose of a declaratory judgment is to settle actual controversies before they ripen into violations of law or breaches of duty and to afford relief from uncertainty and insecurity by a 'premature' adjudication. See, e.g., BORCHARD, supra note 39, at 299; Luckenbach S.S. Co. v. United States, 312 F.2d 545 (2d Cir. 1963); Scott-Burr Stores Corp. v. Wilcox, 194 F.2d 989 (5th Cir. 1952).

A declaratory judgment is sui generis, neither strictly legal nor equitable, United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Koch, 102 F.2d 288, 290-291 (3d Cir. 1939). In common with equitable relief, however, it recognizes judicial competence to declare rights without imposing a duty to do so, i.e., its exercise is discretionary. Public Affairs Associates, Inc. v. Rickover, 369 U.S. 111, 112, 82 S.Ct. 580, 7 L.Ed.2d 604 (1962).[FN41] It is clear that this discretion must be exercised judiciously and cautiously, with regard for the circumstances of the case and the purpose of a declaratory judgment. The Supreme Court recently noted:

> The propriety of declaratory relief in a particular case will depend upon *597 374 a circumspect sense of its fitness informed by the teachings and experience concerning the functions and extent of federal judicial power.

Public Service Commission v. Wykoff, supra note 41, 344 U.S. at 243,73 S.Ct. at 240. Some of the same factors which led us to hold that judicial consideration of the claims was not appropriate, dictate a holding that we decline to undertake declaratory relief. Declaratory relief in this case is particularly inappropriate since it could not finally terminate the controversy,[FN42] indeed, it might well tend to resurrect the very conflict our holding of inappropriateness seeks to avoid.[FN43] Our conclusion is reinforced by Mr. Justice Frankfurter's opinion in Colegrove v. Green, 328 U.S. 549, 66 S.Ct. 1198, 90 L.Ed. 1432 (1946), which, although modified in other aspects by Baker and its progeny, remains relevant with respect to the discussion of declaratory judgments:

> FN42. Cf. Cha-Toine Hotel Apartments Bldg. Corp. v. Shogren, 204 F.2d 256, 258 (7th Cir. 1953); United States v. Jones, 176 F.2d 278, 280 (9th Cir. 1949).

And so, the test for determining whether a federal court has authority to make a declaration such as is here asked, is whether the controversy 'would be justiciable in this Court if presented in a suit for injunction * * *.'Nashville, C. & St. L.R. Co. v. Wallace, 288 U.S. 249, 262, 53 S.Ct. 345, 348, 77 L.Ed. 730, 87 A.L.R. 1191.

The Claims of Voters

We cannot be unmindful of the claims which relate to the highly important constitutional rights to vote and to be represented by the choice reflected by the voting process. These are by no means unimportant claims. The 'right to vote freely for the candidate of one's choice is of the essence of a democratic society, and any restrictions on that right strike at the heart of representative government.'Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 555, 84 S.Ct. 1362, 1378, 12 L.Ed.2d 506 (1964); see Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 13, 84 S.Ct. 526, 11 L.Ed.2d 481 (1964). The right of all voters who meet a state's qualifications to vote is protected by the Constitution and by congressional acts, Ex Parte Yarbrough, 110 U.S. 651, 4 S.Ct. 152, 28 L.Ed. 274 (1884); United States v. Classic, 313 U.S. 299, 61 S.Ct. 1031, 85 L.Ed. 1368 (1941), and the qualifications established by the states may not discriminate either in terms of race or color, U.S. CONST. amend. XV, or in terms of sex, U.S. CONST. amend. XIX, or by weighing unfairly the votes of those in one geographical area or electoral district over the votes of others, e.g., Wesberry v. Sanders, supra.

The rights so protected, however, relate to the initial right to vote- the right to say who shall be the representative. They do not directly extend to the right to have that particular representative be seated in Congress under all circumstances. The Constitution itself, as we have noted earlier, sets explicit limits on the right of electors to have whomever they choose sit in Congress: it fixes eligibility requirements of age, citizenship and inhabitancy in Article I, section 2; additionally Congress can determine the times, places and manners of holding the elections under Article I, section 4; and Congress is granted exclusion and expulsion powers. Certainly these provisions make clear that the carefully guarded right to vote for whomever the elector desires does not necessarily carry 598 375 with it a concomitant right to have that person seated in the Congress. In United States v. Classic, supra, the Court made clear that the right is not absolute: 'That the free choice by the people of representatives in Congress, subject only to the restrictions to be found in §§ 2 and 4 of Article I and elsewhere in the Constitution, was one of the grest purposes of our constitutional scheme of government cannot be doubted,'id. at 316, 61 S.Ct. at 1038.[FN44]

> FN44. We think the language of the court in Barry v. United States ex rel. Cunningham, supra, while not directly > dealing with the right to vote as here developed, is relevant to the relationship between the power of Congress to exclude or expel and the right of a citizen to vote:

> The equal representation clause is found in Article V, which authorizes and regulates amendments to the Constitution, 'provided, * * * that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.'This constitutes a limitation upon the power of amendment, and has nothing to do with a situation such as the one here presented. The temporary deprivation of equal representation which results from the refusal of the Senate to seat a member pending inquiry as to his election or qualifications is the necessary consequence of the exercise of a constitutional power, and no more deprives the state of its 'equal suffrage' in the constitutional sense than would a vote of the Senate vacating the seat of a sitting member or a vote of expulsion.

We have already noted that the holding in Bond v. Floyd, supra, was bottomed on state action which imposed a penalty on Bond for exercising his first amendment rights to discuss public issues. The Supreme Court's rationale would apply equally if Bond had been excluded from the state university because of his speeches. The Court did not reach the question of the standing of Bond's constituents to assert claims on their own behalf.Id. 385 U.S. at 137 n. 14, 87 S.Ct. 339. The class Appellants have not argued their claims in terms of first amendment rights, but lurking in the language of the Court in Bond can be detected some hint of a possible relationship between first amendment rights to political expression and the related right of voters to have their views articulated for them in Congress. FN45

> FN45. The germ of this concept can be found in the language of the Court in Bond that a legislator's speech is protected so that the people may hear from their legislator and 'also so they may be represented in governmental debates by the person they have elected.'Bond v. Floyd, supra, at 136-137, 87 S.Ct. at 349-350.See also Meiklejohn, The First Amendment Is an Absolute, 1961 SUP.CT.REV. 245, 254; Comment, 35 U.CHI.L.REV. 151, 170-172 (1967).

The essence of representative government is the one speaking for the many; hence the rights of those who are to be represented must always be accorded high standing and any infringment must be carefully scrutinized. Nevertheless, we have seen that even this crucial right is hedged in by various restrictions which arise out of the Constitution itself. The same Constitution which guarantees the right to expression and the right to vote also limits the powers of courts.

The right to vote is not an academic right; its primary objective is frustrated when the person elected cannot assume the powers and responsibilities of office. Nevertheless, the subject matter of Mr. Powell's claim and the voting claims of the class Appellants are so interrelated that neither can be regarded as having an existence entirely independent of the other; in the context of this case, they stand or fall together. It must follow that as Mr. Powell's claims are inappropriate for judicial consideration, so also are those of the class Appellants.

Our conclusion that the subject matter of the suit is inappropriate for judicial consideration is not inconsistent with the conclusion of Judge Hart. Powell v. McCormack, Cormack, 266 F.Supp. 354 (D.D.C.1967). He found that the subject matter embraced a 'political question' under Baker 599 *376 and relied on this to conclude that there was no jurisdiction. Our application of Baker leads to the conclusion that the presence of a 'political question' does not invariably preclude jurisdiction but rather affords a basis for declining to exercise it. The decisions of the District Court and of this court both are bottomed on concepts of separation of powers. FN46

> FN46. As I read the concurring observations of my colleagues, a majority agrees on the essential holdings that (a) the court has jurisdiction, (b) the claims in this > case are inappropriate for judicial consideration, and (c) a three-judge court was not required. Baker is definitive, it is recent, and it is authoritative; and there is no need to press beyond the new outer limits it establishes for jurisdiction, justiciability and political questions. I do not express a view as to whether exclusion may be accomplished for reasons outside section 2 criteria, nor do I rely on the fact that more than two-thirds of the House voted for Resolution 278 in its final form. The Speaker had made a ruling that a simple majority was sufficient and it is the essence of speculation to place any reliance on the quantum of the vote as actually cast. The Speaker ruled that Members were voting on exclusion, not on expulsion. The contention which merges exclusion and expulsion powers seems to me part of what is inappropriate for judicial consideration.

PART III

THE SPEECH OR DEBATE CLAUSE

Appellees treat the Speech or Debate Clause under their argument on jurisdiction and urge that it bars any court from questioning Members of the House of Representatives, individually or collectively, with respect to legitimate legislative activities and that this includes the exercise of their constitutional responsibility to vote on the seating of a Memberelect. Treatment of this claim has been deferred because it is not entirely clear whether it goes to jurisdiction or some other bar to granting the relief sought. For our purposes we need not resolve that classification. Since two of the four Supreme Court holdings on the Clause are barely two years old the point merits some comment.

The Clause confers personal immunity on each Member of the House but it is not strictly a personal right since its purpose is to protect the legislative process in our system of representative government. The broad sweep of the bar is suggested by what the Supreme Court said about a legislator's burdens of responding to and defending a suit growing out of his legislative activities in Tenney v. Brandhove, 341 U.S. 367, 377, 71 S.Ct. 783, 788, 95 L.Ed. 1019 (1951):

> Legislators are immune from deterrents to the uninhibited discharge of their legislative duty, not for their private indulgence but for public good. * * * The privilege would be of little value if they could be subjected to the cost and inconvenience and distractions of a trial upon a conclusion of the pleader, or to the hazards of a judgment against them based on a jury's speculation as to motives.

The language of Article I, section 6, clause 1 is simply that 'for any Speech or Debate in either House, they (Members) shall not be questioned in any other Place.' That Clause had its genesis in the English Bill of Rights proclaimed by the Parliament of 1688-89.[FN47] The *600 * *377 struggles arising in England were re-en-acted in the American colonies where immunity for acts within the legislative chambers was asserted by the colonial lawmakers, see JOURNALS OF THE HOUSE OF BURGESSES OF VIRGINIA: 1727-1740, at 242 (1910); see generally, M. CLARKE, PARLIAMENTARY PRIVILEGE IN THE AMERICAN COLONIES 93-97 (1943). Indeed, the Supreme Court as recently as 1951 noted that ' freedom of speech and action in the legislature was taken as a matter of course by those who served the Colonies from the Crown and founded our Nation.' Tenney v. Brandhove, supra, at 372, 71 S.Ct. at 786. [FN48]

> FN47. 'That the freedom of speech, and debates or proceedings in Parlyament ought not to be impeached or questioned in any court or place out of Parlyament.' 1 Will. v. Mary s. 2, c. 2 (1689), reprinted in T. TASWELL-LANGMEAD, ENGLISH CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY 449, 451 (Plucknett ed. 1960).

The privilege of freedom of speech and debate was first included in the Speaker's petition to the King requesting certain Parliamentary privileges in 1541. An earlier indication of this privilege occurred during the reign of Richard II, when a member of Parliament who had introduced a bill containing reflections upon the King's extravagance was condemned to death. In a subsequent reign, the member's petition to annul the judgment on the ground that it was introduced and debated in Parliamend was granted. C. WITTKE, THE HISTORY OF ENGLISH PARLIAMENTARY PRIVILEGE 23-24 (1921).

As is pointed out in United States v. Johnson, 383 U.S. 169, 182-183 n. 13, 86 S.Ct. 749, 15 L.Ed.2d 681 (1966), language similar to that ultimately codified in 1688 was adopted in a statute of 1513, 4 Henry VIII, c. 8, as a result of the prosecution of Strode, a member of the House of Commons, for introducing certain mining legislation in which he had a personal interest. All of the early cases reveal a struggle between privilege and prerogative-between King and Parliament or its members whom the King believed to be meddling in non-Parliamentary affairs. The struggle reached culmination in the prosecution of Eliot and other members of Commons for making seditious speeches and conspiring to restrain the Speaker from adjourning the session. The defendants pleaded Strode's Act but the court held it to be a private bill. Eliot's Case, 3 How.St.Tr. 294, 309 (1629). Thereafter, in 1667, Parliament declared Strode's Act to be a general law. See T. TASWELL-LANGMEAD, supra, at 246-50, 377-78.

> FN48. That the privilege was firmly embedded in English practice is revealed from Blackstone's writings:

For, as every court of justice hath laws and customs for its direction, some of the civil and canon, some of the common law, others their own peculiar laws and customs, so the high court of parliament hath also its own peculiar law, called the lex et consuetudo parliamenti. * * * It will be sufficient to observe Parliament has its original from this one maxim, 'that whatever matter arises concerning either house of parliament, ought to be examined, discussed, and adjudged in that house to which it relates, and not elsewhere.

1 BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES *163.

So well known and accepted was this legislative immunity doctrine that the records of the Constitutional Convention show it was written into Article I without opposition or debate.[FN49] The objectives of the delegates can be gleaned from the writings of James Wilson, perhaps the most influential member of the Committee on Detail which drafted the provision for the convention:

> FN49. The first notation of the Clause comes from a document in James Wilson's handwriting, considered by the Committee on Detail. 2 M. FARRAND, RECORDS OF THE FEDERAL CONVENTION OF 1787, at 156 (rev. ed. 1966). Subsequent documents contain the first full expression of the Clause as it was reported to the convention and adopted. 2 id. at 166, 181, 246.

In order to enable and encourage a representative of the public to discharge his public trust with firmness and success, it is indispensably necessary, that he should enjoy the fullest liberty of speech, and that he should be protected from the resentment of everyone, however powerful, to whom the exercise of that liberty may occasion offense.

2 WORKS OF JAMES WILSON 421 (McCloskey ed. 1967).

The scope of the Clause has been considered by the Supreme Court four times. First, in Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U.S. 168, 26 L.Ed. 377 (1880), the plaintiff, a recalcitrant witness before a House committee, was arrested and imprisoned by the Sergeant-at-Arms pursuant to a resolution of the House. The Supreme Court held that, although the imprisonment of Kilbourn was indeed unlawful, the Speech or Debate Clause constituted a bar to civil claims against the Speaker and the Members of the House, id. at 205, 26 L.Ed. 377.[FN50]

> FN50. The Court remanded the case as to the officers of the House, and plaintiff eventually recovered against them, Kilbourn v. Thompson, 11 Dist.Col. (MacArthur & Mackey) 401 (1883).

It seems to us that the views expressed in the authorities we have cited are sound and are applicable to this *601 378 case. It would be a narrow view of the constitutional provision to limit it to words spoken in debate. The reason of the rule is as forcible in its application to written reports presented in that body by its committees, to resolutions offered, which, though in writing, must be reproduced in speech, and to the act of voting, whether it is done vocally or by passing between the tellers. In short, to things generally done in a session of the House by one of its members in relation to the business before it.

Id. at 204, 26 L.Ed. 377.

Tenney v. Brandhove, 341 U.S. 367, 71 S.Ct. 783, 95 L.Ed. 1019 (1951), was the second case to come before the Supreme Court on the Speech or Debate Clause. Brandhove was called to testify before a state legislative committee and when he refused to respond was held in contempt. The Supreme Court relied upon the general doctrine of legislative immunity, reflected in Article I, to insulate the members of the state legislature from suit. The opinion focused on the historical immunity of legislators from civil or criminal liability for their exercise of the privileges of speech and debate, within the sphere of legitimate legislative activity. Id. at 377-378, 71 S.Ct. 783.

In the third case to reach the Supreme Court, United States v. Johnson, 383 U.S. 169, 86 S.Ct. 749, 15 L.Ed.2d 681 (1966), a former Congressman challenged his conviction for violation of federal conflict of interest laws and conspiracy, asserting the immunities of the Clause. The conspiracy count was based in part on a speech delivered by him in the House, for which the Congressman was found to have received substantial sums of money claimed by the prosecution to be a bribe. The Fourth Circuit reversed and Chief Judge Sobeloff phrased the issue in terms of jurisdiction:

> This is the first case, within our knowledge, squarely raising the question whether the congressional privilege deprives a court of jurisdiction to try a member on a criminal charge of accepting money to make a speech in the House of which he is a member.

337 F.2d 180, 186 (4th Cir. 1964).

In affirming the Fourth Circuit the Supreme Court accepted the linkage of the Article I Clause with the English and Colonial precedents, characterizing its adoption into Article I as a culmination of the > history of conflict between the Commons and the Tudor and Stuart monarchs during which successive monarchs utilized the criminal and civil law to suppress and intimidate critical legislators.

383 U.S. at 178, 86 S.Ct. at 754. That the Clause must be 'read broadly to effectuate its purposes,' is made abundantly clear:

> The privilege was not born primarily of a desire to avoid private suits such as those in Kilbourn and Tenney, but rather to prevent intimidation by the executive and accountability before a possibly hostile judiciary.

Id. at 181, 86 S.Ct. at 755. The Supreme Court did not discuss the claim of Johnson in jurisdictional terms.[FN51]

> FN51. The entire thrust of the opinion suggests that the holding rests on the fact that a criminal indictment charged a Member of the House with conduct basely motivated- 'precisely what the Speech or Debate Clause generally forecloses from executive and judicial inquiry.'United States v. Johnson, 383 U.S. 169, 180, 86 S.Ct. 749, 755 (1966). If Appellants' claims are read as asserting that the votes of the House Members were racially motivated it is clear that the Supreme Court views motives of legislators, however unworthy, as irrelevant. Mr. Justice Frankfurter's statement in Brandhove is sweeping:
> The claim of an unworthy purpose does not destroy the (Speech or Debate) privilege. * * * The holding of this Court in Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch 87, 130, 3 L.Ed. 162, that it was not consonant with our scheme of government for a court to inquire into the motives of legislators, has remained unquestioned.

Tenney v. Brandhove, supra, 341 U.S. at 377, 71 S.Ct. at 788.

*602 379 The most recent of the four cases involving the Clause is Dombrowski v. Eastland, 387 U.S. 82, 87 S.Ct. 1425, 18 L.Ed.2d 577 (1967). This court affirmed summary judgment for the defendants in a suit against a Senate Committee Chairman and its chief counsel for injunctive relief and damages flowing from an alleged conspiracy between the defendants and Louisiana state officials to seize property and records of the petitioners in violation of their fourth amendment rights. Dombrowski v. Burbank, 123 U.S.App.D.C. 190, 358 F.2d 821 (1966) (per curiam). The Supreme Court affirmed as to the Committee Chairman. It reversed and ordered a new trial only as to the chief counsel:

It is the purpose and office of the doctrine of legislative immunity, having its roots as it does in the Speech or Debate Clause of the Constitution, Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U.S. 168, 204, 26 L.Ed. 377 (1881), that legislators engaged 'in the sphere of legitimate legislative activity', Tenney v. Brandhove, supra, 341 U.S. 367, at 376, 71 S.Ct. 783, 95 L.Ed. 1019, should be protected not only from the consequences of litigation's results but also from the burden of defending themselves.

387 U.S. at 84-85, 87 S.Ct. at 1427.

If the Members of the House who are Appellees here cannot be 'questioned in any other Place,' it would seem that they need not answer in any other place, including courts. From this it is arguable that had the class defendants elected to ignore the complaint, the District Court might have had an obligation to apply sua sponte the bar of the Clause; however, we need not decide that point.

Having in mind the breadth accorded the Clause in Kilbourn, Tenney and Dombrowski and the ' prophylactic purposes of the clause,' United States v. Johnson, supra, 383 U.S. at 182, 86 S.Ct. 749, it would seem, although we need not decide, that, however characterized, the Clause would operate as a bar to the maintenance of this suit.[FN52]

FN52. In both Kilbourn and Dombrowski money damages were sought and officers of the House and Senate were held not to share the absolute immunity accorded Members. In the instant case Appellants seek, not money damages, but extraordinary coercive equitable relief against employees of the House directly contrary to commands of the House itself.

PART IV

THREE JUDGE COURT

[5] In their complaint in the District Court, Appellants applied for the convening of a three-judge court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2282 (1964).[FN53] The District Court denied the application of the ground that a resolution of one House, such as House Resolution 278, excluding Appellant Powell from the House was not an 'Act of Congress' within the meaning of the statute. Powell v. McCormack, 266 F.Supp. 354, 355 (D.D.C.1967). Cf. Krebs v. Ashbrook, 275 F.Supp. 111, 118 (D.D.C.1967).

FN53.Section 2282 provides: 'An interlocutory or permanent injunction restraining the enforcement, operation or execution of any Act of Congress for repugnance ro the Constitution of the United States shall not be granted by any district court or judge thereof unless the application therefor is heard and determined by a district court of three judges under section 2284 of this title.'

The District Court's conclusion is amply supported by the plain meaning of 'Act of Congress' as used in the statute and by the legislative history and purpose of section 2282. The decided cases demonstrate that the legislative history of § 2282 and of its complement, § 2281, requiring three judges to hear injunctive suits directed against federal and state legislation, respectively, indicates that these sections were enacted to prevent a federal judge from being able to paralyze totally the single operation *603 380 of an entire regulatory scheme, either state or federal, by issuance of a broad injunctive order.

Kennedy v. Mendoza-Martinez, 372 U.S. 144, 154, 83 S.Ct. 554, 560, 9 L.Ed.2d 644 (1963). See Zemel v. Rusk, 381 U.S. 1, 7 n. 4, 85 S.Ct. 1271, 14 L.Ed.2d 179 (1965); Phillips v. United States, 312 U.S. 246, 248-251, 61 S.Ct. 480, 85 L.Ed. 800 (1941). The legislative purpose is not served by construing the statute to cover the resolution in this case since the statute is to be construed narrowly. Bailey v. Patterson, 369 U.S. 31, 33, 82 S.Ct. 549, 7 L.Ed.2d 512 (1962). House Resolution 278 is a resolution of one House only and relates to the organization and internal governing of the House of Representatives. It creates no broad statutory scheme which would be frustrated by injunctive relief, and it does not contain the attributes of the usual 'Act of Congress' which involves the House of Representatives, the Senate, and the President. FN54

FN54. Although there are no direct holdings in point, prior case law supports the District Court's conclusion. In Krebs v. Ashbrook, 275 F.Supp. 111 (D.D.C.1967). Rule XI of the House of Representatives, the charter of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, was held not to be an 'Act of Congress' within the meaning of the statute. Contra Stamler v. Willis, 371 F.2d 413 (7th Cir. 1966).

Since we predicate our holding on the absence of an Act of Congress as required by the statute, we are not required to reach the alternative grounds suggested by Appellees, that even assuming that House Resolution 278 is an Act of Congress, a single district judge may dismiss the action for lack of federal jurisdiction. See Lion Mfg. Co. v. Kennedy, 117 U.S.App.D.C. 367, 330 F.2d 833 (1964); cf. Reed Enterprises v. Corcoran, 122 U.S.App.D.C. 387, 354 F.2d 519 (1965).

CONCLUSION

Our disposition of this appeal on the ground that the claims are nonjusticiable because of the inappropriateness of the subject matter for judicial consideration, makes it unnecessary to reach the claims on the merits. Nevertheless, some mention of the conflicting views is appropriate.

Debate on the scope and meaning of Article I, sections 2 and 5 began at Philadelphia and has engaged the attention of legal writers, including Members of both Houses, ever since. As with the debates over other issues arising under the Constitution, this debate has not been and possibly never will be judicially resolved. To vest in the members of a legislative body the powers intimated in the literal language of section 5 'to be the Judge' of matters as significant as the exclusion and expulsion of members plainly involves risks. Professor Chafee parades some of the horrendous possibilities which from time to time have been suggested:

If it (Congress) can add crime or disloyalty acts as bars, it can add profiteering as well. * * * A majority * * * can raise the minimum age to fifty * * * bar men of Jewish race, * * * require that members must be already enrolled in either the Republican or the Democratic Party, or recognize only a single party entitled to nominate candidates. There is no line to be drawn, once the legislature is allowed to cross the constitutional limits. It can turn our democracy into an oligarchy by imposing high property qualifications, or into a dictatorship of the proletariat by declaring ineligible all persons deriving income from rents and invested capital.

Z. CHAFEE, FREE SPEECH IN THE UNITED STATES 255 (1942).

But Professor Chafee acknowledges that there is much to be said for the view that requirements other than those of section 2 must be embraced in the less precise language of section 5 that each House is to be 'Judge' of the qualifications of its Members. He concludes by saying that neither of the extreme views, i.e., no exclusion power except for section 2 reasons, or unrestricted exclusion powers, is sound and that the actual practice and usage has long taken an intermediate ground.

*604 381 As to elected persons satisfying all the requirements in the Constitution, we are not forced to choose between giving the House absolute power to unseat whomever it dislikes, and giving the voters absolute power to seat whomever they elect. A third alternative has been adopted, fairly close to the second view. The constitutional qualifications ordinarily suffice; but Congress has rather cautiously imposed some additional tests by statute, FN55 and the House of Representatives or the Senate has probably added a very few more qualifications by established usage (a sort of legislative common law) to cover certain obvious cases of unfitness.

> FN55. Professor Chafee's reference to a 'statute' is not followed by any citation. It may be that he had reference to a statute enacted in the Civil War period prescribing an oath of past loyalty, Act of July 2, 1862, ch. 128, 12 Stat. 502, or to a statute which forever renders a Senator, Representative, department head, or other officer of the government incapable of holding office under the United States if such person receives compensation for services in any matter in which the government is a party, Act of June 11, 1864, ch. 119, 13 Stat. 123; see Burton v. United States, 202 U.S. 344, 26 S.Ct. 688, 50 L.Ed. 1057 (1906).

Great reliance is placed by Appellants on the views of Professor Charles Warren, another constitutional writer. Professor Warren views section 2 as fixing the only qualifications for membership in the House. Referring to the Convention's refusal to adopt 'the proposal to give Congress power to establish qualifications in general (or adopt) * * * the proposal for a property qualification,' he concludes:

Such action would seem to make it clear that the Convention did not intend to grant to a single branch of Congress, either to the House or to the Senate, the right to establish any qualifications for its members, other than those qualifications established by the Constitution itself, viz., age, citizenship, and residence. For certainly it did not intend that a single branch of Congress should possess a power which the Convention had expressly refused to vest in the whole Congress. As the Constitution, as then drafted, expressly set forth the qualifications of age, citizenship, and residence, and as the Convention refused to grant to Congress power to establish qualifications in general, the maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius would seem to apply.

The protagonists for the conflicting views on the scope of exclusion powers of the House draw on the various aspects of history, custom and usage which support their respective positions.FN56 Most of this, of course, is addressed to what are the merits of the claims asserted by Appellants. Reference to these unresolved constitutional questions is made in order to indicate their scope and nature and to underscore what it is that we do not decide.

Conflicts between our co-equal federal branches are not merely unseemly but often destructive of important values.*605 382 In the interpretation of provisions which are pregnant with such conflicts the unavailability of a remedy and the consequences of any unresolved confrontation between coordinate branches weigh heavily in pointing to a conclusion either that no jurisdiction was intended or that if jurisdiction exists it should not be exercised.

The checks and balances we boast of can check and balance just so far. The Framers had hard choices in many areas. To allow, for example, total immunity for speech, debate and votes in the Congress risked irreparable injury to innocent persons if false or scurrilous charges were made on the floor of a Chamber; to allow the Executive exclusive power of foreign relations risked unwise policies which might lead to war; to tolerate the essential supremacy of constitutional interpretation in a Supreme Court meant the risk of unwise decisions by a transient majority. But that is the way our system is constructed. Under stress what some may think are weaknesses turn out to be strengths and the wisdom of Framers in dividing the spheres of delegated power becomes clear.

That each branch may occasionally make errors for which there may be no effective remedy is one of the prices we pay for this independence, this separateness, of each co-equal branch and for the desired supremacy of each within its own assigned sphere. When the focus is on the particular acts of one branch, it is not difficult to conjure the parade of horrors which can flow from unreviewable power. Inevitably, in a case with large consequences and a paucity of legal precedents, advocates tend to raise the spectre of hypothetical situations which would be permitted by the result they oppose. Our history shows scant evidence that such dire predictions eventuate and the occasional departures in each branch have been thought more tolerable than any alternatives that would give any one branch domination over another. That courts encounter some problems for which they can supply no solution is not invariably an occasion for regret or concern; this is an essential limitation in a system of divided powers. That courts cannot compel the acts Appellants would have us order in this case rece des into relative insignificance alongside the blow to representative government were judges either so rash or so sure of their infallibility as to think they should command an elected co-equal branch in these circumstances.

We should resist the temptation to speculate whether and under what circumstances courts might find claims to a seat in Congress which would be justiciable. We do well to heed the admonition of Mr. Justice Miller, uttered nearly a century ago, that judges confine themselves to the case at hand:

It is not necessary to decide here that there may not be things done, in the one House or the other, of an extraordinary character, for which the members who take part in the act may be held legally responsible. If we could suppose the members of these bodies so far to forget their high functions and the noble instrument under which they act as to imitate the Long Parliament in the execution of the Chief Magistrate of the nation, or to follow the example of the French Assembly in assuming the function of a court for capital punishment we are not prepared to say that such an utter perversion of their powers to a criminal purpose would be screened from punishment by the constitutional provision for freedom of debate.

Kilbourn v. Thompson, supra 103 U.S. at 204-205, 26 L.Ed. 377.

McGOWAN, Circuit Judge (concurring separately):

[4][5] My colleagues and I reach a common result, that is to say, (1) a threejudge court was not required for the reasons stated by Judge Burger, and (2) we do not think it either necessary or appropriate to direct the District Court to reinstate the complaint and to determine after*606 383 trial whether the particular relief sought should be given. Because this second determination involves considerations peculiarly committed to judicial discretion, it is not surprising that, although our identification and weighing of relevant factors presents some overlap, each of us has preferred to characterize in his own words the route he has travelled.[FN1]

FN1. For example, the allegedly exclusive power of the House to pass upon the fitness of a member, and the claimed reach of the Speech and Debate Clause, have played no part whatsoever in my vote. I do not profess to know what their precise constitutional meaning is, nor do I say that they are wholly without relevance to a discretionary declination of jurisdiction. I simply have not found it necessary to take them into account in my determination.

This record demonstrates to me that, from the beginning, Representative Powell's view of the Constitution has explicitly and continuously been that, so long as he possesses the requisite qualifications of age, citizenship, and inhabitancy, his right to serve in the House is solely a matter between him and his constituents, not his colleagues. If the voters of his district do not like his conduct in office, they can turn him out at the next election; or, if that conduct be thought violative of the criminal laws, the proper authorities can seek indictments. But, so his reasoning proceeds, for his colleagues to make that conduct the occasion for severance of their association together in the House would be, without observance of the amending process, to add further qualification requirements to the three now stated in the Constitution.

Thus it was that, although the Select Committee expressly informed him that the scope of its inquiry included both (1) his qualifications in terms of age, citizenship, and inhabitancy, and (2) alleged misconduct in office warranting expulsion or other punishment, he persistently refused to answer any questions or supply any information except with respect to (1). Somewhat belatedly, he sought to fortify his legal position by asserting that the Committee could, at most, take up (2) only after he had been seated, even though he was at the moment of that claim continuing to receive full pay and other allowances and emoluments. But there is no reason to think that, had the Committee deferred the second aspect of its inquiry until after searing, his basic constitutional position would have been abandoned.

In the context of the kind of misconduct in office involved here,[FN2] I regard that position as untenable. In saying this, I distinguish very sharply between conduct abusing the privileges of House membership, on the one hand, and status or speech, on the other. If the House were to withhold recognition of a member because of his race, or religion, or political or philosophical views, there would indeed have been an addition to qualifications without benefit of constitutional amendment. But the allegations in the complaint which suggest that this is such a case are so purely conclusory in character as, under elemental pleading concepts, not to require a hearing on the merits.

FN2. It is argued that the misconduct cannot be assumed because Powell was denied procedural due process by his colleagues in the investigation of his activities. But no one can read the record of the Select Committee's relationships with Powell without concluding that there was no serious purpose upon Powell's part to participate in the ascertainment of the facts. This was unquestionably due to his fundamental constitutional theory that he was accountable for his conduct only to his constituents. One cannot escape the impression that any procedural problems would have been resolved satisfactorily if there had been willingness to accept the relevance of the alleged misconduct to his continuance in the House. Against this background, I see no need to reinstate the complaint solely to pursue the procedural issues.

Appellant Powell's cause of action for a judicially compelled seating thus boils down, in my view, to the narrow issue of whether a member found by his colleagues, after notice and opportunity for hearing, to have engaged in official misconduct*607 384 must, because of the accidents of timing, be formally admitted before he can be either investigated or expelled. The sponsor of the motion to exclude stated on the floor that he was proceeding on the theory that the power to expel included the power to exclude, provided a 2/3 vote was forthcoming. It was.[FN3]Therefore, success for Mr. Powell on the merits would mean that the District Court must admonish the House that it is form, not substance, that should govern in great affairs, and accordingly command the House members to act out a charade.

> FN3. It is true that the Speaker, after inquiry to the Parliamentarian, announced that the motion would carry on a majority vote. All this suggests to me is that, in this instance, Representative Curtis was a better parliamentarian than the Parliamentarian. In any event, the result conformed to the more exacting standard; and for me to guess whether the result would have been different if the Speaker's ruling had been different would be to engage in the speculation Judge Burger deplores (fn. 46).

As to Judge Burger's implication that I have gotten into the merits, I note only that he, having decided that the words of the Constitution vest in the House the power to judge a member's fitness, concludes that jurisdiction may be declined to review its exercise in this instance. I, having read the text of the Constitution as declaring a power in the House to expel a member for misconduct in office by a 2/3 vote, conclude that jurisdiction may be declined to pursue the narrower question of whether the Constitution requires that the House must first seat before it expels. It would appear that each of us has, preliminarily to concluding whether jurisdiction must be exercised, gone no further in deciding questions of 'textual commitment' than is contemplated by the majority opinion in Baker v. Carr.

[1][2][3] Our already overtaxed courts arguably have more pressing work to do than this, including the hearing and determination of serious and substantial claims of deprivations of civil rights. The only question really presented by this complaint is whether the House must go through the formality of seating a member before it expels him for official misconduct. Unlike the District Court, I am prepared to say that even such a narrow issue confers subject-matter jurisdiction in the familiar sense of (a) a claim arising under the Constitution, (b) a case or controversy, and (c) a statute founding jurisdiction. But the Supreme Court in Baker v. Carr was at pains to make clear that the existence of jurisdiction does not invariably require its exercise. The question is one of whether, under all the circumstances and with a wise regard for the nature and capabilities of judicial power and for the respect it must always command, the court is bound to hear and determine a complaint on its merits.[FN4]

> FN4. The factors that are relevant to this kind of a determination obviously include the nature of the relief sought- in this case, injunction, mandamus, and declaratory judgment. All have traditionally been regarded as reposing peculiarly in the discretion of the court and as subject to denial, even after hearing on the merits, for reasons unrelated to the merits. The potential embarrassments and confusions, both within the House and between it and the judicial and executive branches, inevitable upon their grant in this case are worthy of sober remark. These and like matters are legitimately the setting in which are to be considered the urgencies, in terms of simple justice, of the bringing to bear of judicial power.

[2] The challenged action by the House in this case reflects in substance an equation by it of its power to expel for legislative misconduct by a 2/3 vote with a power to deny seating for the same reason and by the same vote. That action was rooted in the judgment of the House as to what was necessary or appropriate for it to do to assure the integrity of its legislative performance and its institutional acceptability to the people at large as a serious and responsible instrument of government. That is a judgment which, on this record, presents no impelling occasion for judicial scrutiny.

LEVENTHAL, Circuit Judge:

[1][2][3][5] I concur in the result. Judge Burger's opinion presents the background 608 385 of this case in detail. I agree with some aspects of his opinion- particularly the conclusions in Part I and Part IV. As to other aspects, I am either in disagreement or find it unnecessary to define my position. It would unduly protract and delay our disposition for me to make a point by point analysis. Accordingly I confine myself at this time to a relatively sparse, almost topic-sentence, statement of my approach, as follows:

1. The complaint on its face presents a matter within the subject-matter jurisdiction of the District Court. It alleges a claim arising under the Constitution, there is a case or controversy, and there exists a Federal statute giving district courts jurisdiction to consider such a case, namely, 28 U.S.C. § 1331. The fact that this is a novel law suit does not negative jurisdiction.Baker v. Carr. 369 U.S. 186, 82 S.Ct. 691, 7 L.Ed.2d 663 (1962).

2. I do not feel required to decide appellees' contention that the case lacks justiciability, a concept that I think was developed in Baker v. Carr as defining the kind of case or issue that is inherently inappropriate for determination by any court.

For example, I am not prepared to say at this juncture that a complainant charging an unconstitutional exclusion from Congress avowedly put on racial or religious grounds cannot obtain a declaratory judgment or other relief. Nor do I consider whether appellant Powell may have available other judicial remedies.

3. In my view the issue presented by the complaint is of such a nature that dismissal is appropriate in the exercise of sound judicial discretion. Plaintiffs were seeking remedies- mandamus; equity decree; declaratory judgment- each of which is not necessarily automatically available to one asserting (and even establishing) the underlying right. In an action seeking such remedies a court has discretion in deciding whether, when and how far to consider the merits.[FN1]

FN1. See Abbott Laboratories v. Gardner, 387 U.S. 136, 148, 87 S.Ct. 1507, 18 L.Ed.2d 681 (1967); Public Affairs Associates, Inc. v. Rickover, 369 U.S. 111, 82 S.Ct. 580, 7 L.Ed.2d 604 (1962).

4. For present purposes I assume appellants are correct in their assertion that Article I, Section 5, Cl. 1 of the Constitution is exclusive in stating conditions of eligibility for Congressmen. But that does not mean that appellant Powell was immune from exclusion on grounds that would justify expulsion under Article I, Section 5, Cl. 2.

The record before us shows that the exclusion by the House of appellant Powell was by a vote of 307 to 116, on a motion put forward by its sponsor, Congressman Thomas Curtis of Missouri, on the ground that Mr. Powell's conduct was such as to warrant his expulsion under Article I, Section 5, Cl. 2 of the Constitution if he were seated, and that he should therefore be excluded at the outset.

Certainly members of the House, who cannot be questioned in court for action taken within a 'sphere of legitimate legislative activity,'[FN2] can, without being 609 386 subject to court disapproval, expel a member they find to have mis-used travel credit cards, and kept on his payroll a person (his wife) who resided neither in his District nor in the District of Columbia. The fact that the House is not a court, with power to enter a judgment of conviction for violation of laws, does not preclude it from concluding that the pertinent acts were committed by the Congressman, as a part of an ultimate determination of lack of fitness for service in the House, a determination entrusted to the House by Article 1, Section 5, Clause 2 of the Constitution.

FN2.Tenney v. Brandhove, 341 U.S. 367, 376, 71 S.Ct. 783, 95 L.Ed. 1019 (1951), quoted in Dombrowski v. Eastland, 387 U.S. 82, 84, 85, 87 S.Ct. 1425, 18 L.Ed.2d 577 (1967), confirms the principle inherent in separation of powers that such action is not subject to judicial scrutiny or cognizance.

Compare the rule establishing immunity from suit of judges of courts of general jurisdiction, considered a fundamental requirement of an independent judiciary.Bradley v. Fisher, 13 Wall. (80 U.S.) 335, 351, 20 L.Ed. 646 (1871), holds that such judges ' are not liable to civil actions for their judicial acts, even when such acts are in excess of their jurisdiction, and are alleged to have been done maliciously or corruptly.'The Court also stated (pp. 351-352, 20 L.Ed. 646):'Where there is clearly no jurisdiction over the subject-matter any authority exercised is a usurped authority, and for the exercise of such authority, when the want of jurisdiction is known to the judge, no excuse is permissible.'In Pierson v. Ray, 386 U.S. 547, 554, 87 S.Ct. 1213, 18 L.Ed.2d 288 (1967) the Court referred with approval to Bradley v. Fisher, and referred to the historic immunities of judges and legislators as 'equally well established.'

5. Appellant Powell seems to have been of the view that whatever grounds the House may have had to expel him once he was seated, they could not be used as grounds to exclude him without seating him.

On this point I think that in a case like Powell's where the record (including reports of legislative committees) provides abundant indication that there was at least a substantial question of misconduct in Congressional office, the view of Congressman Curtis was permissible under the Constitution, and appellants' contention to the contrary must be rejected.

As to the interim period, I am at least reassured by the provision in H.R.Res. 1 of the 90th Congress, 1st Sess., adopted after debate in which Mr. Powell participated, that pending the investigation and report by the Select Committee and House action thereon Mr. Powell was to receive the pay, allowances and emoluments authorized for Members of the House, though he was not to be sworn in or occupy a seat in the House.

As to the right of the other appellants to be represented during the interim period, they stand on no higher ground than the claim of appellant Powell to be seated.[FN3]

FN3. See Barry v. United States ex rel. Cunningham, 279 U.S. 597, 616, 49 S.Ct. 452, 456, 73 L.Ed. 867 (1929): 'The temporary deprivation of equal representation which results from the refusal of the Senate to seat a member pending inquiry as to his election or qualifications is the necessary consequence of the exercise of a constitutional power, and no more deprives the state of its 'equal suffrage' in the constitutional sense than would a vote of the Senate vacating the seat of a sitting member or a vote of expulsion.'

Appellants say in rebuttal, inter alia, that the theory advanced by Congressman Curtis is not available to appellees since the House did not accept the need for a 2/3 vote, which Mr. Curtis recognized as essential. The Speaker announced, on a parliamentary inquiry, that only a majority vote was required for exclusion of appellant Powell.

This contention is not without force. But assuming, arguendo, that the procedure used to exclude Powell may have been improper that does not mean he is entitled to maintain an action for discretionary relief of a nature that brings a court close to confrontation with members of the coordinate legislative branch of government. Thus, a court may decline to entertain an action based on such a procedural defect unless it appears not only that the defect may have been prejudicial but also that it probably was prejudicial, at least where as here the relief sought is extraordinary.

6. The fact that the House voted exclusion by a 2/3 vote is not irrelevant, even assuming the majority ground rule was improper for it at least generates a substantial doubt that a court declaration would provide Powell his seat- even assuming as I think we should, that the House would respect the court's declaratory judgment. Compare Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S.Ct. 339, 17 L.Ed.2d 235 (1966). The House could immediately exclude on the same ground, by the same vote.

True, the House could do this, by hypothesis, only if the 'ground rule' were that a 2/3 vote was necessary. But it does not appear that appellant Powell ever staked his position on the need for a 2/3 ground rule.

610 387 7. It is significant that appellant Powell, though duly re-elected in April 1967, has not availed himself of the legislative remedy available with this reelection to assert his claim to represent his district.

On the argument for stay Powell's counsel indicated that at least one reason, and apparently a major reason, why appellant Powell did not invoke that legislative remedy is that it would not maintain his seniority and chairmanship. Perhaps so, but a court would be going to the extreme edge of its authority if it were to declare his status as a Congressman. It cannot reasonably be asked to provide such extraordinary relief to enable complainant to obtain perquisites, however important, that are essentially a matter for legislative determination, and certainly are not assured by any constitutional clause. A court has a duty, in the sound exercise of discretion, to consider litigation seeking relief that raises problems of confrontation with a coordinate branch with an approach that will, wherever possible, confine relief narrowly.

8. If Powell had acquiesced in the premise that there was authority to exclude, but only by a 2/3 vote and 2/3 ground rule, there would likely have been a very different kind of legislative situation. He could not consistently have stood on the position that the House and its Select Committee were acting beyond the proper sphere of authority by considering matters other than age, citizenship and residence. He may have been unwilling to wage battle even on a 2/3 ground rule after a hearing that admittedly was warranted in inquiring into various financial and salary arrangements. The premise of permissible exclusion would have undercut the position that permitted him to defer as a matter of principle any explanation of those arrangements.

9. The various objections lodged by appellant Powell to the procedure of the House Committee must all be viewed in the light of his then position that the Committee's scope was restricted to the three issues of age, citizenship and residence. It cannot be assumed that procedural differences would have loomed as large, or been unmanageable, if appellant Powell had accepted what I think was a valid premise of the House and its Committee. That premise- which I uphold by a ruling on the merits on this issue- is that the Constitution gives the House legislative 'jurisdiction,' even prior to seating a member-designate, to make inquiry as to whether he has committed acts justifying punishment or expulsion of a member.

10. My approach may not hang tidily on the pegs of jurisprudence thus far called to may attention. It makes sense to me, however, and labels and concepts can emerge in due course.

What seems to have received most discussion in recent years is the concept of justiciability as a requirement in addition to subject-matter jurisdiction. As I read them the discussions of justiciability and non-justiciability have emerged primarily in terms of whether the issue is of a kind that lies within any province of any court at any time. I refrain from accepting absolutes about the case before us- to lay it down flatly either that no court may consider the issue and rule differently from the House, or that there may not be a state of facts that would properly call upon the District Court to grant declaratory and perhaps other relief. There are recent decisions indicating that when there is a determination of both subject-matter jurisdiction and justiciability for the issues, the courts are required to decide the issues and to vindicate the applicant's constitutional rights- to refrain from sidestepping this duty merely because the framing of judicial relief presents large difficulties,[FN4] and to take cognizance of a case seeking declaratory relief even where an injunction cannot properly be obtained.[FN5] By strict logic the same approach should 611 388 apply when there is a hypothesis of justiciability or at least a disinclination to enter a ruling of non-justiciability. Yet there have been instances when the courts have bypassed crucial jurisdictional issues and disposed of cases on the merits.[FN6] I think the spirit of those cases also justifies the course I follow- of deciding the merits on one key point and yet refraining, in the exercise of discretion, a full adjudication on the merits.

FN4.Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 84 S.Ct. 526, 11 L.Ed.2d 481 (1964).

FN6. See, e.g., Secretary of Agriculture v. Central Riog Ref. Co., 338 U.S. 604, 619-620, 70 S.Ct. 403, 94 L.Ed. 381 (1950); Ex parte Bakelite Corp., 279 U.S. 438, 448, 49 S.Ct. 411, 73 L.Ed. 789 (1929).

The Key point, to me, is that Congressman Powell erred in his assumption that his satisfaction of the Constitutional requirements (of residence, citizenship and age) meant that he had to be seated, and that grounds justifying expulsion could only be applied to those who had already been seated. My ruling on the merits of this Constitutional issue leads to the conclusion that the House had legislative jurisdiction to consider and appraise the activities and fitness of appellant Powell at the time he presented his credentials. It is not a full adjudication of the merits of the claim of appellant Powell that he was wronged. It does not necessarily mean either that the House acted properly when it failed to heed the ground rule of a 2/3 vote put forward by Congressman Curtis as the assumption of his motion to exclude, or that a court considering a different prayer for relief would be disabled from saying so upon a full consideration of Powell's case on its merits.

The case before us presents problems of confrontation with a coordinate branch and of molding relief. These are considerations that lead a court in some instances to find non-justiciability of the issue for any court.[FN7] They may also properly be invoked, I think, as backdrop and perspective for a ruling to decline to provide a full adjudication on the merits, even assuming justiciability. My reasoning is that the confrontations would likely have evolved in a quite different way if appellant Powell had recognized a power to exclude on grounds of misconduct (albeit on 2/3 vote) and had conducted himself on this premise from the start. Hence I do not think it mandatory for a court to consider and determine the constitutional issue as he has chosen to frame it, from an erroneous premise; and specifically, I think it proper to refrain from a full determination of the merits in a case where petitioner is seeking an extraordinary remedy yet had failed to invoke to the fullest extent the remedies and procedures available within the legislative branch.

U.S. v. Rose
C.A.D.C.,1994.

United States Court of Appeals,District of Columbia Circuit.
UNITED STATES of America
v.
Charles G. ROSE III, Appellant.
No. 92-5241.

Argued Nov. 12, 1993.
Decided July 12, 1994.

Department of Justice (DOJ) brought Ethics in Government Act suit against congressman. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Thomas Penfield Jackson, J., 790 F.Supp. 340, denied congressman's motion to dismiss, and congressman appealed. The Court of Appeals, Buckley, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) it had jurisdiction over congressman's appeal since his motion to dismiss raised claims of immunity based on speech or debate clause and on separation of powers doctrine; (2) congressman's testimony before House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct relating to allegations that he violated Act was not protected by speech or debate clause; and (3) separation of powers concerns did not bar DOJ from following its statutory mandate and prosecuting congressman for knowing and willful violations of Act.

Affirmed and remanded.

Before BUCKLEY and RANDOLPH, Circuit Judges, and LEVIN H. CAMPBELL, FN* Circuit Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

FN* Sitting by designation pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 291(a).

Opinion for the court filed by Circuit Judge BUCKLEY.BUCKLEY, Circuit Judge:
Charles G. Rose III, a member of the United States House of Representatives, appeals the denial of his motion to dismiss a civil action brought by the Department of Justice under the Ethics in Government Act. Congressman Rose contends that the complaint relies upon his testimony before the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct in violation of the Speech or Debate Clause of the Constitution. He also argues that the separation of powers doctrine prohibits the Justice Department from bringing 183 * *316 this action because the Committee has already investigated him.

Rejecting both arguments, we affirm. Congressman Rose's testimony is not protected by the Speech or Debate Clause because it is unrelated to legislative matters. And the separation of powers doctrine does not bar this action because a prior investigation of Congressman Rose by the Committee does not prevent the Department of Justice from enforcing the Ethics in Government Act.

I. BACKGROUND

A. The Ethics in Government Act

Congress enacted the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 ("Ethics Act" or "Act"), Pub.L. No. 95-521, 92 Stat. 1824 (1978), in the aftermath of Watergate. Among other things, the Act established financial reporting requirements for key personnel in each of the three branches of the federal government, allocating these requirements to the three different parts of the U.S.Code governing the legislative, executive, and judicial branches. *See*2 U.S.C. §§ 701-09 (1988) (legislative); 5 U.S.C. app. §§ 201-12 (1988) (executive); and 28 U.S.C. app. §§ 301-09 (1988) (judicial). (Although Congress has since consolidated the three sets of provisions under one title of the U.S.Code, we will refer to the provisions of the Act by their original designations to conform to the citations in the parties' briefs and the district court's opinion.)

Under the Ethics Act, Members of Congress must file a "full and complete" financial disclosure report by May 15th of each year. 2 U.S.C. §§ 702(a), 701(a). This report must include, inter alia, the " source, type, and amount or value" of non-U.S. government income aggregating $100 or more, id. § 702(a)(1)(A); gifts from a non-relative aggregating $100 or more, id. § 702(a)(2)(B); and liabilities to creditors over $10,000, except certain secured loans, id. § 702(a)(4).

Congress itself oversees its Members' compliance with these provisions. Representatives and Senators must file their reports, respectively, with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate. Id. § 703(a), (b). Committees designated by the House and Senate must review these reports and "determine whether [they] are filed in a timely manner, are complete, and are in proper form." Id. § 705(a). If a committee determines that a report was not properly filed, it "shall so inform the reporting individual and direct him to take all necessary corrective action." Id. The committees also may issue advisory opinions, which immunize those who rely upon them:
[T]he designated committee[s] ... have power ... to render any advisory opinion interpreting this chapter, in writing, to persons covered by this chapter. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the individual to whom a public advisory opinion is rendered ... who ... acts in good faith in accordance with the provisions and findings of such advisory opinion shall not, as a result of such act, be subject to any sanction provided in this chapter.

Id. § 705(b). The "designated committee" in the House is the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. Rules of the House of Representatives, 101st Cong., 2d Sess., Rule X, cl.

The House of Representatives has taken an additional step to ensure that its Members comply with the Ethics Act: Pursuant to its constitutional authority to regulate the conduct of its Members, see U.S. Const. art. I, § 5, cl. 2 ("Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member"), the House has adopted the full text of the Act as a House Rule. See House Rule XLIV, cl. 2.

While Congress has retained much of the task of ensuring compliance with the Ethics Act by its own Members, it has authorized [t]he Attorney General [to] bring a civil action in any appropriate United States district court against any individual who knowingly and willfully falsifies or who knowingly and willfully fails to file or report any information that such individual is required to report pursuant to section 702 of this title.

184 *317 2 U.S.C. § 706. The section also authorizes the assessment of a civil penalty against such individual in an amount not to exceed $5,000. Id. It is under this provision that the Department of Justice ("DOJ") is suing Congressman Rose.

B. Procedural History

In October 1986, the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct ("Committee") received a complaint that Congressman Rose had failed to report various financial transactions in violation of House rules and the Ethics Act. The alleged transactions included personal loans from banks and from the Congressman's campaign committee totalling some $138,000. The complaint also charged that Congressman Rose had failed to report foregone interest on loans from his campaign committee and the use of a campaign committee asset as collateral for a personal loan. The Committee conducted an extensive investigation in which Congressman Rose cooperated and gave testimony.

On March 23, 1988, the Committee issued a report on its investigation. In the Matter of Representative Charles G. Rose III, H.R.Rep. No. 526, 100th Cong., 2d Sess. (1988) ("the Rose Report " or "the Report"). The Report concluded that Congressman Rose had violated both House rules and the Ethics Act. Id. at 25. Specifically, it found that he had (a) "borrowed from his campaign on eight separate occasions from 1978 to 1985, in violation of House Rule XLIII, clause 6"; (b) " pledged a $75,000 certificate of deposit belonging to his campaign on a personal loan ..., in violation of House Rule XLIII, clause 6"; (c) "failed to list as liabilities to his campaign the borrowings referred to [in (a) above] on his Financial Disclosure Statements" for the years 1982 through 1986, in violation of the Ethics Act and House Rule XLIV, clause 2; and (d) "failed to list liabilities to certain financial institutions on his Financial Disclosure Statements, in violation of the [Act]." Id.

In accordance with the Report's recommendation, the Committee sent "a formal and public letter of reproval" to Congressman Rose "as a public rebuke for the violations." Id. at 26, 523-25. The Report did not say whether the Committee had found the violations to be knowing and willful.

Meanwhile, the DOJ began investigating whether Congressman Rose had "knowingly and willfully" filed inaccurate financial statements. *See*2 U.S.C. § 706. In a letter dated January 26, 1989, Acting Assistant Attorney General Brent Hatch advised the Committee that the DOJ was contemplating bringing a civil action against Congressman Rose and solicited the Committee's views on the matter. Appendix Exhibits at 22-25. The letter stated that " [b]ased on a review of the Complaint filed with the Committee on Standards, and [the Rose Report], we believe that Representative Rose has violated the disclosure requirements of the [Ethics Act]" and that "there is evidence that he knowingly and willfully failed to report" various loans and financial transactions. Id. at 22. Commenting on the DOJ's authority, Assistant Attorney General Hatch asserted that the Committee's investigation does not "preclude[ ] a civil penalty action [by the DOJ] for the failures to report the loans" and that " [t]he Attorney General's authority is not limited to instances in which the House either has not acted on such violations or has referred the matter [to the DOJ] for an enforcement action." Id. at 24-25.

The Chairman and Ranking Minority Member of the Committee responded in a letter dated February 9, 1989, urging the DOJ to drop its plans to proceed against Congressman Rose. Appendix Exhibits at 26-29. According to the letter, the Committee's investigation had led it to conclude that Congressman Rose had not knowingly and willfully violated the Ethics Act: "Instead, the Committee concluded that the congressman's disclosures were the result of the sincerely held, albeit incorrect, belief that his campaign organization owed him the funds disbursed." Id. at 27. The letter also suggested that a DOJ action against Congressman Rose would raise separation of powers concerns:
The United States Constitution, at Article I, clause 5, empowers the Congress to discipline its own Members. As a matter of policy, the Committee takes the position that it will be impaired in carrying out this 185 318 constitutional mandate[ ] if it must factor in with each case reviewed the actions another branch of government might take based on Committee actions. While not implying that the Department of Justice is precluded by law from pursuing the matter, it is critical that in the subject case the Committee did not fail to act consistent with its duties under [the Ethics Act].... Initiation of litigation as contemplated by the Department would not only be inconsistent with fairness, precedent and policy, but would also give rise to the inference that the Committee did not satisfy its responsibilities under House rules and statute [sic].

Id. at 28-29.

Notwithstanding the Committee's request, the DOJ filed this action against Congressman Rose on May 19, 1989. The complaint alleged six knowing and willful reporting violations between the years 1979 and 1985 and sought fines totalling $30,000. Congressman Rose moved to dismiss the complaint on three grounds. First, he asserted that the Rose Report constituted an advisory opinion under the Ethics Act, *see*2 U.S.C. § 705(b), and thus provided him with immunity from suit. Second, he claimed that the action was barred by the Speech or Debate Clause because the complaint made use of his testimony before the Committee. Third, he argued that the separation of powers doctrine barred the DOJ from suing him after the Committee had fully investigated him.

Noting that claims of speech or debate immunity are subject to immediate appeal, the district court considered only Congressman Rose's argument that the DOJ's use of his testimony violated the Speech or Debate Clause. United States v. Rose, 790 F.Supp. 340, 340-41 (D.D.C.1992). The court held that Congressman Rose's testimony concerning his financial reporting was not a "legislative act" protected by the Clause because it fell "outside the deliberative and communicative functions of the House." Id. at 343 (quoting United States v. Hansen, 566 F.Supp. 162 (D.D.C.), *aff'd,*No. 83-1689 (D.C.Cir. Aug. 1, 1983) (unpublished order)). Accordingly, the court denied the motion to dismiss.

On appeal, Congressman Rose renews only his speech or debate and separation of powers claims. The Speaker and Bipartisan Leadership Group of the House of Representatives ("House Leadership Group") has filed an amicus curiae brief in support of these claims. We first consider whether they are properly before us.

II. ANALYSIS

A. Appellate Jurisdiction

[1][2][3][4] "Though the parties have not contested our subject-matter jurisdiction, we must independently satisfy ourselves that it exists." International Bhd. of Teamsters v. Pena, 17 F.3d 1478, 1481 (D.C.Cir.1994). Courts of appeal have jurisdiction only over "final decisions of the district courts,"28 U.S.C. § 1291 (1988), and thus may not entertain interlocutory appeals. United States v. Hollywood Motor Car Co., Inc., 458 U.S. 263, 264-65, 102 S.Ct. 3081, 3082, 73 L.Ed.2d 754 (1982). In general, orders denying motions to dismiss are not "final decisions" because such orders "ensure [ ] that litigation will continue in the District Court." Lauro Lines s.r.l. v. Chasser, 490

© 2008 Thomson/West. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

U.S. 495, 498, 109 S.Ct. 1976, 1978, 104 L.Ed.2d 548 (1989) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Denials of claims of speech or debate immunity, however, fall within a well-recognized exception to this rule; such rulings are immediately appealable because the Speech or Debate Clause is designed to protect Members of Congress not only from liability but also from the cost and inconvenience of litigation. Helstoski v. Meanor, 442 U.S. 500, 506-08, 99 S.Ct. 2445, 2448-49, 61 L.Ed.2d 30 (1979); see also Browning v. Clerk, U.S. House of Representatives, 789 F.2d 923, 926 n. 6 (D.C.Cir.1986). Thus, Congressman Rose's Speech or Debate Clause claim is properly before us.

[5] We conclude that we also have jurisdiction over his separation of powers claim. Three other circuits have recognized claims of immunity based on the separation of powers doctrine as an additional exception to the general rule against interlocutory appeals. See United States v. Claiborne, 727 F.2d 842, 844 (9th Cir.1984) (federal judge arguing that 186 319 separation of powers doctrine immunized him from criminal prosecution could immediately appeal district court's denial of his motion to dismiss); United States v. Hastings, 681 F.2d 706, 708-09 (11th Cir.1982) (same); United States v. Myers, 635 F.2d 932, 935-36 (2d Cir.1980) (permitting congressional defendant in criminal prosecution to raise separation of powers defense as well as Speech or Debate Clause defense on pre-trial appeal).

The Myers case is particularly instructive because it involved a congressional defendant who, like Congressman Rose, brought an interlocutory appeal based on both the Speech or Debate Clause and the separation of powers doctrine. The court held that it had jurisdiction over both claims:

> Though [the separation of powers] doctrine does not provide as precise a protection as the Speech or Debate Clause, there are equivalent reasons for vindicating in advance of trial whatever protection it affords as a defense to prosecution on criminal charges. If, because of the separation of powers, a particular prosecution of a Member of Congress is constitutionally prohibited, the policies underlying that doctrine require that the Congressman be shielded from standing trial.

Id. at 935. While this case is a civil action and Myers was a criminal prosecution, we do not find that difference material. Like speech or debate immunity, separation of powers immunity should protect legislators from the burden of litigation and diversion from congressional duties, whether the litigation be civil or criminal. See Helstoski, 442 U.S. at 506-08, 99 S.Ct. at 2448-49 (interlocutory appeal of speech or debate claim allowable in criminal prosecution of Member of Congress); Browning, 789 F.2d at 926 n. 6 (interlocutory appeal of speech or debate claim in civil action against Speaker of House, Clerk of House, and others).

B. The Speech or Debate Claim

We first must decide whether the complaint filed by the DOJ makes use of Congressman Rose's testimony. The DOJ contends that its complaint " does not mention [Rose's] testimony in any way." DOJ Brief at 41. While that may be true, there can be little doubt that the DOJ relied on the testimony in preparing the complaint. In opposing a discovery motion by Congressman Rose in the district court, the DOJ stated that > [t]he allegations set forth in the government's complaint are largely taken from [the Rose Report] issued by the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, before which Mr. Rose defended his actions. They relate to a finite number of Mr. Rose's own transactions, which have been well ventilated in the Committee process.

Plaintiff's Opposition to Defendant's Motion for Extension of Time to Respond to Discovery at 2 n. 3, Civ. No. 89-1469 (D.D.C.1989). In addition, the letter from Acting Assistant Attorney General Hatch to the Committee makes clear that the DOJ's decision to sue Congressman Rose was "[b]ased on a review of the complaint filed with the Committee on Standards, and [the Rose Report]." Appendix Exhibits at 22. Much of the Rose Report consists of transcripts of Congressman Rose's testimony before the Committee. See Rose Report at 184-92,

These statements persuade us that Congressman Rose's testimony was used to prepare the complaint; and if that testimony is protected, using it as background material for a complaint would clearly violate the Speech or Debate Clause. See United States v. Helstoski, 635 F.2d 200, 204-05 (3d Cir.1980) (quashing indictment that was based on materials that were protected by Speech or Debate Clause, and noting that "the mere threat of an indictment is enough to intimidate the average congressman and jeopardize his independence").

In determining whether Congressman Rose's testimony is protected, it is helpful to begin with a brief history of the speech or debate privilege. It was formulated in seventeenth-century England following a long "history of conflict between the [House of] Commons and the Tudor and Stuart monarchs during which successive monarchs utilized the criminal and civil law to suppress and intimidate critical legislators." United States v. Johnson, 383 U.S. 169, 178, 86 S.Ct. 749, 754, 15 L.Ed.2d 681 (1966) (footnote 187 320 omitted). The enshrinement of the privilege in the English Bill of Rights of 1689 thus represented "the culmination of a long struggle for parliamentary supremacy." Id.; see also The English Bill of Rights of 1689, 1 W. & M., Sess. 2, c. 2 (1689), quoted in Johnson, 383 U.S. at 178, 86 S.Ct. at 754 ("That the Freedom of speech, and Debates or Proceedings in Parliament, ought not to be impeached or questioned in any Court or Place out of Parliament.").

Like much of the English legal tradition, the speech or debate privilege was transplanted to American soil and ultimately took root in the Constitution, where it appears in the following form: "[F]or any Speech or Debate in either House, [Senators and Representatives] shall not be questioned in any other Place." U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. The rationale for including this provision in the nation's charter was explained by Thomas Jefferson and James Madison in these terms:

In order to give to the will of the people the influence it ought to have, and the information which may enable them to exercise it usefully, it was a part of the common law, adopted as the law of this land, that their representatives, in the discharge of their functions, should be free from the cognizance or coercion of the co-ordinate branches, Judiciary and Executive....

8 Works of Thomas Jefferson 322-23 (1797), reprinted in Philip B. Kurland & Ralph Lerner, 2 The Founder's Constitution 336 (1987).

But while the constitutional privilege was recognized as a necessary guarantor of legislative independence, it was also understood to be limited to the legislative sphere. Thus Jefferson would instruct that the privilege " 'is restrained to things done in the House in a Parliamentary course.... For [the Member] is not to have privilege contra morem parliamentarium, to exceed the bounds and limits of his place and duty.' " Hutchinson v. Proxmire, 443 U.S. 111, 125, 99 S.Ct. 2675, 2683, 61 L.Ed.2d 411 (1979) (quoting Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 20 (1854)). Indeed, the American speech or debate privilege was to be a more modest shield than its English ancestor:

We should bear in mind that the English system differs from ours in that their Parliament is the supreme authority, not a coordinate branch. Our speech or debate privilege was designed to preserve legislative independence, not supremacy.

United States v. Brewster, 408 U.S. 501, 508, 92 S.Ct. 2531, 2535, 33 L.Ed.2d 507 (1972) (footnote omitted).

[6][7] To further the privilege's core purpose of " prevent[ing] intimidation by the executive and accountability before a possibly hostile judiciary," United States v. Johnson, 383 U.S. 169, 181, 86 S.Ct. 749, 755, 15 L.Ed.2d 681 (1966), without unduly trampling "the rights of private individuals," Gravel v. United States, 408 U.S. 606, 624 n. 15, 92 S.Ct. 2614, 2626 n. 15, 33 L.Ed.2d 583 (1972), the Supreme Court has restricted congressional speech immunity to "legislative acts." Id. at 624-25, 92 S.Ct. at 2626-27; see also Johnson, 383 U.S. at 185, 86 S.Ct. at 757 ("Our decision does not touch a prosecution which ... does not draw in question the legislative acts of the defendant member of Congress or his motives for performing them."). Such acts include not only speech or debate in either House, but also any act that is an integral part of the deliberative and communicative processes by which Members participate in committee and House proceedings with respect to the consideration and passage or rejection of proposed legislation or with respect to other matters which the Constitution places within the jurisdiction of either House.

Gravel, 408 U.S. at 625, 92 S.Ct. at 2627. The Clause thus does not protect acts that are not " legislative in nature," even if they are performed in a Member's "official capacity." Id. Nor does it insulate "activities that are casually or incidentally related to legislative affairs but not a part of the legislative process itself." Brewster, 408 U.S. at 528, 92 S.Ct. at 2545.

Applying these principles, the Court has held that the Speech or Debate Clause immunizes voting and various committee activities, such as "authorizing an investigation," *321 *188 "holding hearings," " preparing a report," and "authorizing the publication and distribution of that report." Doe v. McMillan, 412 U.S. 306, 313, 93 S.Ct. 2018, 2025, 36 L.Ed.2d 912 (1973) (dismissing claim against Committee members and staff for the acts of compiling and releasing a committee report); see also Gravel, 408 U.S. at 624, 92 S.Ct. at 2626 (holding that Senator who convened subcommittee hearing and read into record portions of top secret Defense Department documents was protected by Speech or Debate Clause and noting that "voting by Members and committee reports are protected"); Minpeco, S.A. v. Conticommodity Services, Inc., 844 F.2d 856, 860 (D.C.Cir.1988) ("the process by which a committee takes statements and prepares them for publication clearly qualifies as an activity within the legislative sphere") (internal quotation marks omitted). Conversely, the Court has found that many activities routinely engaged in by lawmakers, such as constituent services, communications with government agencies, assistance in securing government contracts, and speeches delivered outside of Congress, do not qualify for immunity. Brewster, 408 U.S. at 512, 92 S.Ct. at 2537; Gravel, 408 U.S. at 625, 92 S.Ct. at 2627; see also Hutchinson, 443 U.S. at 133, 99 S.Ct. at 2687 (privilege does not protect newsletters and press releases of Member).

[8] Our survey of the history and scope of the Speech or Debate Clause leads us to conclude that it does not protect Congressman Rose's testimony before the Committee. The testimony related to allegations that Congressman Rose had violated the Ethics Act by failing to report various personal loans and included detailed explanations of each financial transaction at issue. The testimony was not addressed to a pending bill or to any other legislative matter; it was, instead, the Congressman's defense of his handling of various personal financial transactions. See Rose Report at 301-503. In short, Congressman Rose was acting as a witness to facts relevant to a congressional investigation of his private conduct; he was not acting in a legislative capacity.

[9] The House Leadership Group nevertheless argues that if Congressman Rose had given his testimony on the House floor, rather than in a committee room, he would clearly qualify for speech or debate immunity. To the extent that this argument suggests that speech or debate immunity should not hinge on Congress's choice of the location in which it will conduct its business, we agree. By its terms, the Speech or Debate Clause prohibits questioning Members "for any Speech or Debate in either House"; it does not say where "in either House"-on the floor or in the committee room-the speech must occur. See Coffin v. Coffin, 4 Mass. 1, 28 (1808) (in construing the speech or debate privilege in the Massachusetts Constitution, Mass. Const. Ann. Pt. 1, art. 21, the court noted: " If a member ... be out of the chamber, sitting in committee, executing the commission of the house, it appears to me that such member is within the reason of the article, and ought to be considered within the privilege"); see also Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U.S. 168, 202-03, 26 L.Ed. 377 (1880) (examining Coffin for "general idea" of speech or debate privilege "in the minds of the members of the constitutional convention").

But to the extent that the argument suggests that the Clause protects "speech ... in either House" that is wholly unrelated to legislative business, we disagree. The Supreme Court has held that "the Speech or Debate Clause prohibits inquiry only into those things generally said or done in the House or the Senate in the performance of official duties and into the motivation for those acts." Brewster, 408 U.S. at 512, 92 S.Ct. at 2537 (emphasis added); see also Coffin, 4 Mass. 1, 28 ("[A Member] ought therefore to be protected from civil or criminal prosecutions for every thing [sic] said or done by him in the exercise of his functions, as a representative in committee, either in debating, in assenting to, or in draughting a report.") (emphasis added). Thus, we rely not on the fact that Congressman Rose testified in a committee room but on the fact that his testimony was given in a personal capacity rather than "in the performance of [his] official duties"; we focus on what Congressman Rose said, not where he said it.

Ray v. Proxmire, 581 F.2d 998 (D.C.Cir.1978), which is relied upon by the House 189 322 Leadership Group, is thus distinguishable. In Ray, we found that Senator Proxmire's letter to the Chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Standards and Conduct was protected by the Speech or Debate Clause. Id. at 1000. The letter was in response to an allegation that Senator Proxmire had misused Senate rooms, an allegation that directly touched the institution of the Senate and raised a possible violation of Senate Rules. Indeed, the Ray court pinned its holding on a finding that the Senate inquiry was into the "exercise of [Senator Proxmire's] official powers." Id. By contrast, in this case, the House Ethics Committee was probing allegations that Rose had failed to report certain personal financial transactions.

[10] Our focus on the content of the speech also disposes of the argument by the House Leadership Group that Congressman Rose's testimony is protected because he was speaking to other Members; the key factor is the subject matter of the speech, not the identity of the listener. We are not alone in reaching this result. In Federal Election Comm'n v. Wright, 777 F.Supp. 525 (N.D.Tex.1991) , a case that is almost on all fours with this one, the court held that the Speech or Debate Clause did not protect former House Speaker James Wright's testimony before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct about the use of his campaign funds: "[A]ny testimony given by Wright to the Committee on Standards was given by him in his capacity as a witness and not in his legislative capacity with the consequence that no immunity attached by virtue of the Clause." Id. at 530.

United States v. Myers, 692 F.2d 823 (2d Cir.1982), and United States v. Hansen, 566 F.Supp. 162 (D.D.C.), *aff'd,*No. 83-1689 (D.C.Cir. Aug. 1, 1983) (unpublished order), offer further support for this position. Both cases held that the filing by Members of Congress of financial disclosure reports under the Ethics Act was not a protected " legislative act." See Myers, 692 F.2d at 849 (" Disclosure of income from sources other than employment by the United States is no part of [the] deliberative and communicative processes [by which Members participate in committee and House proceedings.]") (internal quotation marks and citations omitted); Hansen, 566 F.Supp. at 169-70. It is but a short step from those rulings to hold that testimony by a Member of Congress about the filing of a financial disclosure report under the Ethics Act is not protected.

Two courts, however, have drawn the line differently. In United States v. Eilberg, 465 F.Supp. 1080, 1082-83 (E.D.Penn.1979), the district court found that a congressman's testimony before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct was protected by the Speech or Debate Clause. The court relied on the statement from Gravel that "a member's conduct at legislative committee hearings ... is within the sphere of legitimate legislative activity." Id. at 1083 (quoting Gravel, 408 U.S. at 624, 92 S.Ct. at 2626 (internal quotation marks omitted)). But the "member's conduct" referred to in Gravel was Senator Gravel's convening and chairing of a subcommittee meeting, and his reading into the record portions of the Pentagon Papers. Congressman Rose, by contrast, was neither a member of the Ethics Committee nor one of its agents. Thus, we do not think he was participating in the Committee's deliberations in the way envisaged by the Gravel Court.

[11] United States v. Durenberger, No. 3-93-65, 1993 WL 556454 (D.Neb. Dec. 6, 1993), which held that representations by a Senator and his aide to the Senate Ethics Committee were protected, likewise rests on a misreading of Supreme Court precedent. The Durenberger court read Doe v. McMillan, 412 U.S. 306, 313, 93 S.Ct. 2018, 2025, 36 L.Ed.2d 912 (1973), for the proposition that legislative acts include "providing testimony," a phrase that nowhere appears in Doe. Durenberger, slip op. at 2, 1993 WL 556454. Indeed, the Supreme Court has never decided if the Speech or Debate Clause protects a Member's testimony given in a personal capacity to a congressional committee. We conclude that it does not based on our review of the history and purpose of the Clause.

C. The Separation of Powers Claim

Congressman Rose argues that the constitutional provision granting each House the power to regulate the conduct of its Members,190 323 *see*art. I, § 5, cl. 2, bars the DOJ from bringing an action charging "knowing and willful violations" of the Ethics Act after the Committee has determined that the violations were inadvertent. Congressman Rose also contends that allowing the DOJ to ignore Committee decisions would hinder the Committee because Members of Congress would refuse to cooperate with Committee investigations lest the DOJ turn their testimony against them in a subsequent civil action, and because Committee members would worry that their findings might serve as ammunition in a subsequent DOJ lawsuit.

[12] We do not think the DOJ's action against Congressman Rose offends the separation of powers doctrine. The DOJ brought this action under section 706 of the Ethics Act, which authorizes it to investigate and prosecute "knowing and willful" violations of the Act. 2 U.S.C. § 706. It is true that the disclosure requirements of the Ethics Act applicable to Members of Congress have been incorporated into the House Rules, see House Rule XLIV, cl. 2 (adopting full text of Ethics Act), which are enforced by the House pursuant to its constitutional power to discipline its Members. But by codifying these requirements in a statute, Congress has empowered the executive and judicial branches to enforce them; in bringing this action, then, the DOJ was fulfilling its constitutional responsibilities, not encroaching on Congress's.

Moreover, Congressman Rose's assertion that lawsuits by the DOJ will discourage Members of Congress from cooperating with the Committee does not trouble us because the Committee has the power to refer evidence of ethical violations disclosed in a committee investigation to the DOJ. See House Rule X, cl. 4(e)(1)(C); *see also*H.R.Rep. No. 1817, 95th Cong., 2d Sess., at 59 (noting that testimony by former Members involved in Korean influence-peddling scandal was sent to DOJ for consideration of possible perjury charges). Thus, even if we dismissed this action, Members would have no guarantee that their voluntary cooperation with the Committee would not be used against them in a subsequent DOJ action.

We are conscious of the Committee's concern, as expressed by its Chairman and Ranking Minority Member in their letter to Acting Assistant Attorney General Hatch, that the Committee "will be impaired in carrying out [its constitutional mandate] if it must factor in with each case reviewed the actions another branch of government might take based on Committee action." Appendix Exhibits at 28-29. With respect, however, we see no "risk of control, interference, or intimidation [of the Committee] by [an]other branch [ ],"Nixon v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 731, 761, 102 S.Ct. 2690, 2707, 73 L.Ed.2d 349 (1982) (Burger, C.J., concurring), merely because the Committee's deliberations might be affected by an awareness that the DOJ might make use of its proceedings to bring an action against a Member. Executive agencies are fully aware that their actions might trigger a congressional response, and it is common knowledge that they will at times trim their sails as a consequence. Yet no one suggests that the separation of powers is threatened by this interaction between the two branches as each pursues its constitutional responsibilities.

[13] Nevertheless, should the Committee find its work inhibited by the ability of the DOJ to make use of it, the Committee is quite capable of protecting its interests. For example, if the Committee had wished to prevent the DOJ from using any part of its proceedings to prosecute Congressman Rose, it could have declined to issue a report or issued one in redacted form. And if Congress as a whole feels threatened by DOJ actions such as this one, it can amend the Ethics Act to restrict the jurisdiction of the DOJ or to exempt Members of Congress. But as the Committee has made public Congressman Rose's unprotected testimony by issuing a report, we see no separation of powers concerns that should bar the DOJ from following its statutory mandate.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the district court's decision is affirmed; and the case is 191 324 remanded to the district court for further proceedings.

So ordered.

PRIVILEGES AND POWERS OF BOTH HOUSES OF CONGRESS.

§ 835. The next clause is, "each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members "for disorderly behaviour, and, with the concurrence of "two thirds, expel a member." No person can doubt the propriety of the provision authorizing each house to determine the rules of its own proceedings. If the power did not exist, it would be utterly impracticable to transact the business of the nation, either at all, or at least with decency, deliberation, and order. The humblest assembly of men is understood to possess this power; and it would be absurd to deprive the councils of the nation of a like authority. But the power to make rules would be nugatory, unless it was coupled with a power to punish for disorderly behaviour, or disobedience to those rules. And as a member might be so lost to all sense of dignity and duty, as to disgrace the house by the grossness of his conduct, or interrupt its deliberations by perpetual violence or clamour, the power to expel for very aggravated misconduct was also indispensable, not as a common, but as an ultimate redress for the grievance. But such a power, so summary, and at the same time so subversive of the rights of the people, it was foreseen, might be exerted for mere purposes of faction or party, to remove a patriot, or to aid a corrupt measure; and it has therefore been wisely guarded by the restriction, that there shall be a concurrence of two thirds of the members, to justify an expulsion.[1] This clause, requiring a concurrence of two thirds, was not in the original draft of the constitution, but it was inserted by a vote of ten states, one being divided.[2] A like general authority to expel, exists in the British house of commons; and in the legislative bodies of many of the states composing the Union.

§ 836. What must be the disorderly behaviour, which the house may punish, and what punishment, other than expulsion, may be inflicted, do not appear to have been settled by any authoritative adjudication of either house of congress. A learned commentator supposes, that members can only be punished for misbehaviour committed during the session of congress, either within, or without the walls of the house; though he is also of opinion, that expulsion may be inflicted for criminal conduct committed in any place.[3] He does not say, whether it must be committed during the session of congress or otherwise. In July, 1797, William Blount was expelled from the senate, for "a high misdemeanour, entirely inconsistent with his public trust and duty as a senator." The offence charged against him was an attempt to seduce an American agent among the Indians from his duty, and to alienate the affections and confidence of the Indians from the public authorities of the United States, and a negotiation for services in behalf of the British government among the Indians. It was not a statuteable offence; nor was it committed in his official character; nor was it committed during the session of congress; nor at the seat of government.

2 Journal of Convention, 218, 243.

3 Rawle on the Constitution, ch. 4, p. 47.

Yet by an almost unanimous vote[1] he was expelled from that body; and he was afterwards impeached (as has been already stated) for this, among other charges.[2] It seems, therefore, to be settled by the senate upon full deliberation, that expulsion may be for any misdemeanour, which, though not punishable by any statute, is inconsistent with the trust and duty of a senator. In the case of John Smith (a senator) in April, 1808, the charge against him was for participation in the supposed treasonable conspiracy of Colonel Burr. But the motion to expel him was lost by a want of the constitutional majority of two thirds of the members of the senate.[3] The precise ground of the failure of the motion does not appear; but it may be gathered from the arguments of his counsel, that it did not turn upon any doubt, that the power of the senate extended to cases of misdemeanour, not done in the presence or view of the body; but most probably it was decided upon some doubt as to the facts.[4] It may be thought difficult to draw a clear line of distinction between the right to inflict the punishment of expulsion, and any other punishment upon a member, founded on the time, place, or nature of the offence. The power to expel a member is not in the British house of commons confined to offences committed by the party as a member, or during the session of parliament; but it extends to all cases, where the offence is such, as, in the judgment of the house, unfits him for parliamentary duties.[1]

§ 837. The next clause is, "each house shall keep "a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time "publish the same, except such parts, as may in their "judgment require secrecy. And the yeas and nays of "the members of either house on any question shall, at "the desire of one fifth of those present, be entered on "the journal."

§ 838. This clause in its actual form did not pass in the convention without some struggle and some propositions of amendment. The first part finally passed by an unanimous vote; the exception was carried by a close vote of six states against four, one being divided; and the remaining clause, after an ineffectual effort to strike out "one fifth,"-and insert in its stead, "if every member present," was finally adopted by an unanimous vote.[2] The object of the whole clause is to ensure publicity to the proceedings of the legislature, and a correspondent responsibility of the members to their respective constituents. And it is founded in sound policy and deep political foresight. Intrigue and cabal are thus deprived of some of their main resources, by plotting and devising measures in secrecy.[3] The public mind is enlightened by an attentive examination of the public measures; patriotism, and integrity, and wisdom obtain their due reward; and votes are ascertained, not by vague conjecture, but by positive facts. Mr. Justice Blackstone seems, indeed, to suppose, that

5. Secrecy of Debates and Proceedings

623. This subject has already been considered, in the greater part, under the head of proceeding with open or closed doors;[1] and, for the same reason, that, according to the theory of legislative assemblies, it is one of their essential privileges to be secret in their proceedings and debates, and, therefore, to exclude all strangers from witnessing them, no person, whether a member or other person accidentally or otherwise present, or any of its officers or servants, is allowed to promulgate or publish what is said and done, either by speaking, writing, or printing the same, without the leave of the assembly.

624. But this prohibition to publish any account of the proceedings of a legislative assembly, without previously obtaining its permission, though still existing potentially, as it did actually, from time out of mind, until about the middle of the last century, is now practically abandoned in England, the reporters for daily journals being allowed places, by the indulgence of the presiding officers, for the exercise of their functions. In this country, if this restraint can be said ever to have had any existence in fact, (though in theory, the right to conduct their proceedings, in secret, evidently includes a right to restrain any one from publishing them,) it is certainly abandoned in theory, as well as in fact, in those States where the proceedings are required to be in public, except on occasions when secrecy is requisite. In all the other States, it seems to have been practically abandoned. The senate of the United States, which, besides being one branch of congress, is also an executive council, has never conducted its proceedings in the latter capacity with open doors.[2] It must be competent, however, to every legislative assembly to enjoin secrecy, upon its members and officers, as well as others, either in respect to a particular matter, or to its proceedings generally; and any breach of its injunction in this respect, or any invasion of its right of secrecy will, of course, be punishable as a contempt.[3]

6. Expulsion or Discharge of a Member.

625. The power to expel a member is naturally and even necessarily incidental to all aggregate, and especially all legislative bodies;[4] which, without such power, could not exist honorably, and fulfil the object of their creation. In England, this power is sanctioned by continued usage, which, in part, constitutes the law of parliament. It is in its very nature discretionary, that is, it is impossible to specify beforehand all the causes, for which a member ought to be expelled; and, therefore, in the exercise of this power, in each particular case, a legislative body should be governed by the strictest justice; for if the violence of party should be let loose upon an obnoxious member, and a representative of the people discharged of the trust conferred upon him by his constituents, without good cause, a power of control would thus be assumed by the representative body over the constituent, wholly inconsistent with the freedom of election.[1]

[4] Male, 44. See, in the fourth volume of the Journals of the Senate of the United States the case of Mr. Senator Smith, of Ohio, against whom a resolution of expulsion was reported, for his participation in Burr's conspiracy, by a committee, of which Mr John Quincy Adams was chairman.

626. The power to expel also includes in it a power to discharge a member, for good cause, without inflicting upon him the censure and disgrace implied in the term expulsion; and this has accordingly been done, in some instances, by the house of commons.[2]

627. Analogous to the right of expulsion, is that of suspending a member from the exercise of his functions as such, for a longer or shorter period; which is a sentence of a milder character than the former, though attended with somewhat different effects; for during the suspension, the electors are deprived of the services of their representative, without power to supply his place; but the rights of the electors are no more infringed by this proceeding, than by an exercise of the power to imprison.[3]

7. Protection against Personal Violence.

628. All attacks upon the persons of the members, or officers, of a legislative assembly, or others attending and privileged, as witnesses and parties, whether by actual violence, or by threats, and all disorders, in, near, or about the place of sitting, have been always deemed high breaches of privilege and punishable accordingly.

8. Protection against Slanderous and Libellous Attacks.

629. No form of attack, upon the rights and privileges of a legislative assembly, has been more common, or subjected offenders to a severer punishment, than this. When the libel is on the assembly itself, there can be but little doubt of its authority to punish the offender; but, when it is committed against a member, it can hardly be considered a breach of privilege, unless it attack him in that capacity, or on account of something said or done by him as a member.[1]

9. Protection against Corruption.

630. Bribery or attempts to bribe, or otherwise improperly influence or corrupt members or officers,[2] are high breaches of privilege and punishable accordingly. So it is an offence to suborn or tamper with witnesses attending.[3]

10. Right to be informed by Public Officers.

631. In England, it has always been deemed the right of both houses of parliament, (and this right, it is believed, is incidental to every legislative assembly,) to call on the officers connected with other branches or departments of the government for information touching public affairs, sometimes by a direct application, and sometimes through the head of the executive department.

632. In some of the States, it is expressly provided by constitution, and, in all of them, it is understood to be the duty of the chief executive officer, that the latter shall give information of the state of public affairs to the legislature, on their assembling and organization, and from time to time afterwards, as may be deemed proper; and, though this leaves it in some degree discretionary with the executive, as to the time, manner, and extent of the communication, yet it is the constant practice in all our legislative assemblies to ask for, and for the executive to communicate, information touching the public affairs, at any time, during the session of the assemblies. When a communication is made by the executive, without being called for by either branch, it is usually addressed to both; though, when the subject of it relates particularly to the functions of one, it may be addressed to that one alone; but it is the right of either, without the concurrence of the other, to request information.

[1] For a case of the first description, see the proceedings in the case of William Duane in the senate of the United States, J. of S. III. 87; Jefferson's Manual, Sec. III.; see also J. of S. 29th Cong. 1st Sess. 101; Cong. Globe, XV. 525; and for the case of a libellous attack upon an individual member, see Cong. Globe, XV. 457, 458

[2] See the case of Whitney and Randall, J. of H. II. 389; and that of John Anderson, J. of H. 15th Cong. 1st Sess. 117.

[3] See the case of William Williams, in the proceedings concerning the conduct of the Duke of York, Hans. (1), XII. 460.

In a few of the States, there is a provision of the constitution conferring upon the governor, for this purpose, among others, the right to require information of the officers of the executive department upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

11. Right to require Opinions of the Judges.

633. In England, the judges of the superior courts are technically considered as assistants in the house of lords, and are summoned to attend as such. In this country, the right to call upon the superior courts, for their opinions on important questions of law, and on solemn occasions, is conferred upon the legislative bodies, by express constitutional provision, only in the States of New Hampshire, Maine, and Massachusetts.[1] In the other States, where there is no such constitutional provision, the right cannot be considered to exist.

12. Right of Investigation.

634. It has always, at least practically, been considered to be the right of legislative assemblies, to call upon and examine all persons within their jurisdiction, as witnesses, in regard to subjects, in reference to which they have power to act, and into which they have already instituted, or are about to institute an investigation. Hence they are authorized to summon and compel the attendance of all persons, within the limits of their constituency, as witnesses, and to bring with them papers and records, in the same manner, as is practised by courts of law. When an assembly proceeds by means of a committee, in the investigation of any subject, the committee may be, and usually is, authorized by the assembly to send for persons, papers, and records.[2]

635. Witnesses before a legislative assembly, or a committee, are not sworn, unless there is some express provision of law or constitution, authorizing their examination in that manner; but they give their testimony under the penalty of being adjudged guilty of a contempt, and punished accordingly, if they prevaricate, or testify falsely.

[1] These opinions, although given upon the arguments of persons interested, which, of course, must be voluntary, are not considered by the court as binding precedents in actions subsequently arising. Adams v. Bucklin, Pickering's Reports, VII. 125.

[2] In the constitution of Maryland it is provided that the house of delegates may inquire, on the oath of witnesses, into all complaints, grievances, and offences, as the grand inquest of the State, and may commit any person for any crime to the public jail, there to remain until discharged by due course of law.

636. The right of investigation implies that of hearing parties and their counsel, as well as witnesses; and, consequently, the house of commons in England has, from the earliest times, exercised the right of giving the protection and privilege of the house to the several persons who have been ordered to attend the house or committees, or who, either on public or private concerns, were attending the service or business of the house; and in many of such cases, the house has given orders, that such persons, having been arrested by process from the courts of law, should be delivered out of custody.[1]

637. There are precedents for the granting of this protection to persons attending to prefer or prosecute a private bill,[2] or as the solicitor of a party,[3] to prosecute a petition,[4] to claim a seat as a member,[5] or to attend an election committee,[5] summoned to testify as a witness, either before the house, or a committee.[6]

638. In all cases of the above description, if the person privileged is arrested, he is to be discharged in the same manner, and by the same proceeding, as in the case of members; if not yet arrested, but only in danger, he may give information thereof to the assembly, and thereupon an order will be passed, that the protection of the assembly be allowed to such person, during the pendency of the matter or business which entitles him to privilege. This order is equivalent to the writ of privilege, granted to parties, witnesses, etc., by the ordinary tribunals. It does not seem to be necessary in the case of members, whose official character is supposed to be known to everybody (all persons being bound to take notice of who are members returned of record);[7] but, in the case of other persons, it may be of utility in preventing an arrest, or in rendering the officer making it liable to an action.[8]

13. Freedom from Interference.

639. It has been already seen with how much care the parliamentary law has guarded against all interference in the proceedings of a legislative assembly, on the part of private persons. The same jealous watchfulness is also manifested to protect them from all influence of one another, or of other coördinate departments of the government. In England, accordingly, it is held to be a high breach of privilege, for the king to interfere in or take notice of any proceeding in either branch, except in such manner as he is constitutionally authorized to do; and it is also a high breach of privilege for either branch to interfere, in any other than the regular and constitutional manner, in the proceedings of the other; though either house, when sending a bill to the other, may signify its wish to have it attended to, and may, in the course of business, send to the other for information in regard to the state of any bill or other matter, in which it has a common concern. The same principles prevail here, both as regards the executive, and both branches of the legislature.

CHAPTER FOURTH.

OF THE INCIDENTAL POWERS OF A LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

640. The powers incidental to a legislative assembly, like the rights and immunities, which, under the name of privileges, have been considered, are such only as are necessary to enable it to perform its principal or legislative and administrative functions. These powers are of two kinds, the inquisitorial and the judicial.

641. A legislative assembly being authorized, in the exercise of its constitutional functions, both administrative and legislative, to institute inquiries into all grievances of the citizen, which are remediable by legislative enactment, and into all abuses of power by persons in office, with a view either to their removal by address, or to their punishment by impeachment, it has a power to investigate all such subjects, by the examination of witnesses, or otherwise, in the same manner, as is practised by grand-juries; and, as a consequence of this authority, the assembly itself, its officers, and servants, and all persons connected with every such investigation, enjoy a perfect immunity for every thing fairly said, done, or published, in the course of such inquiry.

642. The other incidental powers of a legislative assembly, being more strictly analogous to those exercised by judicial tribunals, constitute its judicial powers, as distinguished from its legislative; and accordingly, in the exercise of these functions, a legislative assembly is considered as a court, and the journal of its proceedings as a record. The judicial powers, anciently claimed and exercised by the house of commons, in England, were much more extensive than they are at present; having, in the course of many conflicts with the courts, and by the gradual progress of knowledge on the subject of the separation of the legislative and judicial functions of government, been reduced from a vague, uncertain, and indefinite mass of powers to those alone, which are considered necessary to enable it to discharge its peculiar functions as the depositary of the legislative, and, in part, of the administrative power of the State.

643. The judicial powers,[1] exercised by a legislative assembly, as incidental to or in aid of its general functions, must be carefully distinguished from those which it exercises as a branch of its legislative duties or in the course of the latter. Thus, in the exercise of its general functions of administration or legislation, a legislative assembly frequently has occasion to pass upon the private rights of individuals, in conflict either with those of other individuals, or with those of the public. The railroad legislation of modern times furnishes abundant example of the exercise of judicial functions of this description. So, likewise, in the exercise of its supreme and sovereign power, where such power is not expressly restrained, a legislative assembly may find it necessary to try, convict, and punish offenders, out of the common course of criminal jurisdiction, by means of acts of attainder, and of pains and penalties. Legislative proceedings of this description, though frequent in the earlier periods of parliamentary history, have, in modern times, become extremely infrequent; partly, in consequence of the improvements which have taken place in the criminal law and its administration; but chiefly, perhaps, from an unwillingness to administer criminal justice through the forms of legislation. In all these cases, the proceedings are to a greater or less extent judicial, and conducted accordingly. Judicial functions of this description, not coming under the head of incidental powers, will be treated of in another place. These functions can only be exercised by the concurrent act of the two branches and the consent of the executive. The judicial powers, which are incidental, are exercised by each branch separately and independently of the other.

644. In treating of those judicial powers of a legislative assembly, which are now in question, namely, those which are incidental to its general functions, it will be convenient to consider, first, the jurisdiction; second, the mode of proceeding; third, in what manner the judgments of the assembly are enforced; and fourth, what punishments it may inflict; and, under each head, to state the differences, if there are any, between cases in which the proceedings relate to members, and those in which they relate to other persons.

[1] In the exercise of its judicial functions, a legislative body is governed by its ordinary rules of proceeding. See Reg. of Deb. VIII Part 2, 2548; Cong. Globe, IV. 176.

SECTION I. — OF THE INCIDENTAL JURISDICTION OF A LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

645. This jurisdiction, being conferred for the purpose of enabling a legislative assembly to discharge its peculiar functions, in a free, independent, and intelligent manner, is in its very nature, original, exclusive, and final.

646. It is original, because, being conferred for the benefit of the assembly itself, and not for the advantage of any private individual, it arises only in reference to matters growing out of the proceedings, or connected with the official character of the members of the assembly.

647. It is exclusive, because, otherwise, the objects for which it is conferred, namely, the freedom and independence of the assembly, would fail of their attainment; inasmuch as a portion of the means, by which the assembly is enabled to perform these functions, would be restrained, by the concurrent or appellant jurisdiction of some other tribunal.

648. But this jurisdiction is not exclusive in any other sense than this, that no other tribunal can control the action, set aside the judgments, or revise the proceedings, of the assembly; though, whenever any question, which has already been decided by the assembly itself, or which belongs within its jurisdiction, arises incidentally in any other court or tribunal, and for any other purpose than that for which it is entertained by, or comes within the jurisdiction of, the assembly, such tribunal may judge of and decide that question, for the purposes of the proceeding in reference to which it has arisen. Thus, the assembly is the judge of the election of its members, and may consequently, for that purpose, decide upon the right of an elector to vote; but, notwithstanding, an elector, whose vote has been refused, by the returning officers, may also bring his action against them for damages, for such refusal, and for that purpose may establish his right to vote, at law, though the assembly may have decided otherwise in determining the election.

649. The jurisdiction of a legislative assembly, acting judicially is necessarily final, that is, its proceedings cannot be revised, nor its judgment suspended, by any other court or tribunal. Thus, when a member is expelled, no other court can revise the doings of the assembly, and reinstate such member in his place. So, if a legislative assembly commit a member or other person as a punishment for a contempt or other offence, no other court or tribunal can discharge the prisoner, on the ground of his having been illegally committed, provided the cause of the commitment appear with the requisite certainty. In cases of this kind, therefore, it should clearly appear, in the warrant, that the assembly has jurisdiction of the matter for which the commitment takes place; but the particular facts of the case, upon which the assembly has predicated its judgment, should not be stated; if they are, they will be subject to revision.

650. The jurisdiction of a legislative assembly, as a judicial tribunal, is both civil and criminal, but chiefly the latter, and for contempts.

1. Civil Jurisdiction.

651. As a civil tribunal, a legislative assembly, at the present day, claims and exercises no other jurisdiction, than to decide upon the returns and elections of its members, and upon the question of their rights as such, as affected by disqualifying circumstances subsequently arising. Formerly, the house of commons, in England, under pretence of privilege, entertained jurisdiction of cases of mere civil right, in which members were concerned; but this course of proceeding, which appears to have commenced with the long parliament, and to have terminated only about the year 1768,[1] is now wholly abandoned. In this country, no such pretence was ever set up, and the only civil jurisdiction of a judicial nature, exercised in our legislative assemblies, either before or since the revolution, is that of deciding upon the returns and elections of their members.

2. Criminal Jurisdiction.

652. The criminal jurisdiction of a legislative assembly is much more extensive than the civil; embracing the misconduct or disorderly behavior of its own members, as well as misdemeanors and offences committed by other persons. In both cases, the offence may be committed either against the assembly itself, or against its members individually.

653. Members may be guilty of misconduct, either towards the assembly itself, towards one another, or towards strangers. Misconduct of members towards the assembly, besides being the same in general as may be committed by other persons, consists of any breaches of decorum or order, or of any disorderly conduct, disobedience to the rules of proceeding, neglect of attendance, etc.; or of any crime, misdemeanor, or misconduct, either civil, moral, or official, which, though not strictly an attack upon the house itself, is of such a nature as to render the individual a disgrace to the body of which he is a member. Misconduct of members towards one another consists of insulting remarks in debate, personal assaults, threats, challenges, etc., in reference to which, besides the ordinary remedies at law or otherwise, the assembly interferes to protect the member, who is injured, insulted, or threatened. Offences by members towards other persons, of which the assembly has cognizance, consist only of injurious and slanderous assertions, either in speech or by writing, which, as there is no other remedy, the assembly itself, if it thinks proper, takes cognizance of and punishes.

654. The offences against a legislative assembly, which may be committed by persons who are not members of it, are exceedingly multifarious; embracing all offences against its members individually, all breaches of privilege, whether personal or collective, and all wilful obstructions to its regular proceedings, and to the free, independent, and full performance of its various functions.

3. Jurisdiction of Contempts.

655. Like every other tribunal, a legislative assembly is authorized to punish persons, whether members or others, who are guilty of any contempt towards it, by disorderly or contumacious behavior in its presence, or by any wilful disobedience to its orders. It seems necessary to observe, that the contempts punishable by a legislative assembly are not confined to proceedings in its judicial capacity, but may arise in the course of its legislative or other functions.

SECTION II.—OF THE MODE OF PROCEEDING BY A LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY, IN THE EXERCISE OF ITS JUDICIAL FUNCTIONS.

656. It will be most convenient, as well as intelligible, to consider the mode of proceeding, under the several heads which have already been adopted in treating of the jurisdiction, namely:—first, civil proceedings; second, criminal proceedings; and, third, contempts.

1. Civil Proceedings.

657. The only subjects, which come within the civil jurisdiction of a legislative assembly, relate to the rights of members to their seats; in reference to which, the proceedings are either between parties adversely interested, or ex parte. Cases of the first kind arise where a member is returned, and the return, election, or right of the member returned to sit, is controverted by the electors or some of them, or by an opposing candidate. Cases of the latter kind occur, when an inquiry is instituted by the assembly itself, on the motion or suggestion of some member. In the former class of cases, which constitute what are usually called controverted elections, if the proceedings are not otherwise regulated by law, as they are in England and in some of the United States, the trial may be either at the bar of the assembly, or, in the first instance, before a committee appointed for the purpose, and, in either case, the proceedings are as closely assimilated, as the nature of the subject will admit, to those which usually take place on the trial of an action at law in the ordinary courts; the parties being commonly assisted by counsel, and witnesses examined, as in other cases, except that they are not necessarily or perhaps usually upon oath. Where an inquiry is instituted ex parte, on the motion or suggestion of a member, the subject is generally referred to a committee; and if the right of a member or other person happens to be involved in the proceedings, they may assume the form of a controverted election, in which case, they will be the same as already mentioned; but, where the investigation is one-sided, the committee may examine witnesses or arrive at the knowledge of the facts in such other way as it may think proper. Members, if interested in such investigation, are to withdraw from the assembly, after being heard, in the manner stated under the head of Criminal Proceedings.

658. Witnesses may be summoned to appear and give their testimony, before the assembly, or before a committee, either by a warrant from the presiding officer, issued in pursuance of a general order previously adopted, authorizing him to send "for persons, papers, and records," or in pursuance of a special order to the same effect, relating to the particular case or person; or they may be summoned by the special order of a committee, in pursuance of a similar general or special order. The summons may be served by the sergeant-at-arms, a messenger, or by any other officer, or in such other manner, as will be legal in other cases, according to the laws of the particular State.[1]

659. If the person, whose testimony is wanted as a witness, is in custody, it is the practice for the presiding officer, by the order and direction of the assembly, to issue his warrant to the officer having such person in custody, and to the sergeant-at-arms of the assembly, for the production of the witness at the bar, or before the committee. When the witness is in the custody of the assembly itself, he may be brought to the bar or before the committee, by an order to that effect to the sergeant-at-arms. It is usual, also, where the testimony of a witness in the custody of the sergeant is wanted before a committee, for the assembly to order, that when the committee requires the attendance of the witness, it may send for him.[2]

660. With regard to the expenses of the witnesses, the rule in legislative assemblies is analogous to that which prevails in courts of law, not to compel a witness to give his testimony, until his reasonable charges have been paid or tendered.[3] Where a witness is summoned on the behalf and at the request of an individual, such party is bound to pay the expenses; but where the investigation is ex parte, he can only receive payment of his expenses, in the same manner that government witnesses are paid according to the laws of the particular State. In all cases, however, it seems, that witnesses are bound to appear, in obedience to the summons, without being previously paid their expenses.[4]

661. The only difference, between the examination of witnesses, before a legislative assembly or committee, and their examination before other tribunals, is, that in the former, the testimony is not usually given under oath; a legislative assembly, unless there is particular provision to that effect by law, not being authorized to administer oaths.[5] Whether, however, the testimony is given under oath or not, if a witness prevaricates, testifies falsely, or otherwise misbehaves himself, in giving or refusing to give his testimony, he will be guilty of a contempt, and punishable accordingly. If such misbehavior occurs at the bar of the assembly, the offender may be proceeded against at once; if, before a committee, it must first be reported to the assembly, for its interposition.

662. If a witness, being duly summoned, in either of the modes above mentioned, refuses or neglects to appear, and such refusal or neglect is made manifest to the assembly, by the non-appearance of the witness at the time appointed, or upon the report of the committee, the witness may be ordered to be taken into custody by the sergeant-at-arms, and will also be punishable as for a contempt.

663. Parties and witnesses, attending as such, or having occasion, or ordered, to attend as such, before a legislative assembly or its committees, are entitled to the same protection in going, staying, and returning, as they would receive in a court of law; and, if arrested, will be entitled to their discharge in the same manner as members, and by the same form of proceeding. When they are apprehensive of an arrest, and make that fact known to the assembly, it is usual for that body to order that its protection be allowed to such persons, during the pendency of the business which entitles them to privilege, or their necessary attendance as witnesses.[1]

2. Criminal Proceedings.

664. The conduct of members may become implicated either incidentally in the course of other proceedings, or it may be the subject of a direct complaint, verbal or in writing, by other members, or by other persons; and, in all these cases, the proceedings do not differ essentially from what they would be in the case of private persons, except that it is not necessary, in all cases, to place the member accused at the bar. When a complaint is to be made against a member, it appears to be the practice to give him notice beforehand,[2] or to procure an order to be passed, requiring his attendance at a particular time to hear the complaint, and otherwise not to make it in his absence. Where the member remains in his place in the assembly, during the preliminary proceedings, it is the rule, that when the question is stated in the assembly, the

[1] As to the effect of these orders of protection, see ante, 638, note.

[2] In the case of Mr. Senator Smith, the committee to whom his case was referred, gave notice when they were ready to report, and thereupon, at the suggestion of the chairman, an order was passed for the attendance of Mr. Smith in his place. Ann. of Cong. 10th Cong. 1st Sess. I. 39, 56.

member implicated should be first heard, and then withdraw from the assembly, until the question is decided. This is the established practice in the house of commons, and is founded in the indecency of a man's sitting as a judge in his own cause. If the member does not withdraw of his own accord, he may be ordered to do so by the assembly. If the case be not perfectly clear, as to the propriety of a member's withdrawing, he may himself make a question to the assembly for their opinion.

665. But where the immediate question before the assembly is not the one in which a member is interested, but only relates to the time at which that question is to be tried,[1] or is a mere question of order involving the precedence of business, with relation thereto,[2] it has been held in this country that such member may nevertheless vote thereon.

666. When, in consequence of words spoken in debate, or in the course of any other proceeding of the house, or of a committee either select or of the whole or otherwise, a quarrel arises between members, which the speaker sees may lead to injurious results, it is his duty to interfere at once without waiting for the previous authority of the house, and, by means of a retraction or apology, compel such members to settle their quarrel immediately, or, by ordering them into the custody of the sergeant-at-arms, prevent them from leaving the house until they pledge themselves that the quarrel shall go no further.[3] The propriety of this course is still more manifest where the parties, as sometimes happens, resort to blows or other acts of violence.[4] The speaker, instead of proceeding at once, of his own authority, or the implied sanction of the house, may wait for it to take or indicate such course as it may think proper. The former method is most generally adopted by the speaker of the house of commons; the latter has been most commonly pursued by presiding officers in this country. The sending of a challenge by one member to another, or by any person to a member, for words spoken by the latter in debate, is a breach of privilege, and will be dealt with accordingly, unless a full and ample apology is offered to the house and to the member offended.[5]

667. The most usual course of proceeding, where a person not a member has been guilty of some misconduct, of which the assembly has judicial cognizance, is, in the first place, upon the complaint or motion of some member to ascertain the facts, and then to declare them to be an offence, and to order the individual implicated or supposed to be guilty, into the custody of the sergeant-at-arms. When that officer has informed the assembly, through the speaker, that he has the offender in custody, he is brought to the bar of the assembly, and being there informed of the charge against him, is interrogated as to his guilt or innocence. He is then heard in his defence, by counsel, if he desires it, and such subsequent proceedings are adopted as may be deemed proper. If he refuses to answer the interrogatories, he will be punishable as for a contempt. If he denies the facts alleged against him, they may be investigated either by the assembly itself, or by a committee. If the proceedings require more than one sitting, the accused is to be retained in the custody of the sergeant-at-arms, and brought to the bar whenever the assembly may order. Sometimes the supposed offender, instead of being ordered into the custody of the sergeant-at-arms, and brought to the bar by that officer, is merely summoned to appear before the assembly at an appointed time, to answer to the offence alleged against him.[1] An offender may be discharged, at any time upon causing a petition, expressing proper contrition for his offence, to be presented to the assembly.[2]

668. When the matter complained of is something published in a newspaper, the newspaper must be produced, in order that the paragraphs complained of may be read; and, in one case, in the house of commons, where a member, who complained of the manner in which his speech was published in a newspaper, was proceeding to address the house, he was stopped by the speaker for the reason that he had no copy of the newspaper on which to found his complaint. The member, who makes the complaint, must also be prepared with the names of the printer or publisher if he intends to follow up his complaint with a motion.[3]

669. According to Mr. May,[4] "It is the present practice" in parliament, "when a complaint is made, to order the party complained of to attend the house; and on his appearance at the bar, he is examined and dealt with according as the explanations of his conduct are satisfactory or otherwise; or as the contrition expressed by him for his offence conciliates the displeasure of the house. If there be any special circumstances arising out of a complaint of a breach of privilege it is usual to appoint a select committee, to inquire into them, and the house suspends its judgment until their report has been presented."

670. If there are, in the particular State, by the authority of whose legislative assemblies a commitment takes place, any constitutional or legal provisions relating to the subject of criminal commitments generally, it will be safest to follow such provisions; but the warrant should only state the fact of the offence, in general terms, in order to show that the assembly has jurisdiction of it without setting forth the particular facts, which are supposed by the assembly, to constitute the offence.

3. Proceedings in case of Contempt.

671. A contempt of the authority of a legislative assembly may be committed either in or out of its presence. In the former case, it may be either by a person already in custody of the sergeant-at-arms, or by some person attending as a party or witness, or as a spectator or auditor of the proceedings. Where the contempt is in the presence of the assembly, if the offender is not in custody, the first thing is to order him to be taken into custody, and then, which is also the case where the offender is already in custody, the assembly proceeds at once, the offence being apparent, to pass such sentence upon him as it may think proper.

672. Contempts committed out of the presence of the assembly usually consist of disobedience to its orders. In these cases, the first step is to adjudge the disobedience a contempt, and then to order the offender into custody. He is then brought to the bar and interrogated, and such further proceedings had as may be deemed proper. Where the offender is a member, the proceedings do not differ, except in his being required to withdraw when the question is made.

SECTION III. IN WHAT MANNER THE JUDGMENTS OF A LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ARE ENFORCED.

673. One of the modes by which the orders or judgments of a legislative assembly may be enforced, is, to bring the person refusing or disobeying to the bar, and there require him to submit himself to the assembly; and, on his refusing, in their presence, so to do, to punish him as for a contempt.

674. It was formerly the practice, in both houses of the British parliament, to require offenders to receive the judgment of the house kneeling at the bar. But the practice has long since been discontinued in both houses; though in the lords, the entries in the journals still assume that the prisoners "are on their knees" at the bar. In the house of commons, in the year 1750, Mr. Alexander Murray obstinately refused to receive his sentence kneeling at the bar, and was severely punished for his contempt of the authority of the house.[1] But, afterwards, in 1772, and probably in consequence of this refusal, the house ordered, that whenever any person should thenceforth be brought to the bar for judgment, or to be discharged, he should receive the judgment of the house standing, unless, it should be otherwise directed in the order.[2]

SECTION IV. OF THE PUNISHMENTS WHICH A LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY MAY INFLICT.

675. The punishments, besides the withdrawal of privileges conferred,[3] which are usually within the competency of a legislative assembly to inflict, are those of fine, imprisonment, and reprimand, to which must be added, where the offender is a member, that of expulsion.

1. Fine.

676. In England, both houses of parliament were anciently in the practice of imposing the payment of a fine by way of punishment; and this is understood, at the present day, to be the practice of the lords; but the commons appear to have long since waived or abandoned this form of punishment; and it has even been laid down that they now have no such power. In this country, with one or two exceptions, in which there is a special constitutional provision to that effect, the legislative assemblies are not authorized to impose a fine by way of punishment. The house of commons, however, does, in some sort inflict a fine; persons in the custody of the sergeant-at-arms being usually required, before being discharged, to pay the fees of that officer. Where this punishment is inflicted, the order is that the offender pay such a sum, and, in the mean time, stand committed to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms.

[3] As for example that of a reporter. J. of H. 24th Cong. 1st Sess. 983, 1020, 1021

2. Imprisonment.

677. This mode of punishment is, in general, the only one now authorized or resorted to, in ordinary cases, by legislative assemblies. According to the parliamentary law of England, there is a difference between the lords and commons, in this respect, the former being authorized, and the latter not, to imprison for a period beyond the session. In this country, the power to imprison is either incidental to or expressly conferred upon all our legislative assemblies; and in some of the States, it is also regulated by express constitutional provision. Where it is not so regulated it is understood, that the imprisonment terminates with the session.

678. Where there is no provision regulating the time of imprisonment, if a commitment is general, the prisoner will be entitled to his discharge on the termination of the session; if it is for a certain time, the prisoner will be entitled to his discharge on the expiration of the time, or the termination of the session, whichsoever first happens.

679. Where the time of imprisonment is regulated and limited, a commitment for any period not exceeding that time may be made, notwithstanding the termination of the session in the mean time; but, if a commitment is general, without limitation of time, the case must be deemed the same, as if it had been for the utmost limit of time, and such commitment will accordingly terminate either with the expiration of that time, or with the session.

680. Where this form of punishment is adopted, a warrant is issued by the presiding officer, by order of the assembly, reciting the judgment or order of the assembly, and directing the sergeant-at-arms, to commit the prisoner to such a prison, and the keeper thereof to receive him into his custody, and safely keep him to the expiration of the sentence.

681. In the house of commons, when an offender is punished by imprisonment, the form of the sentence is, that he be committed to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms, or to Newgate, or the Tower, during the pleasure of the house; and the practice is, to keep offenders, so committed, in custody, until they present petitions praying for their release, and expressing contrition for their offences, or, until upon motion made in the house, it is resolved that they shall be discharged. They are then to be brought to the bar, and after an admonition or reprimand from the speaker, are discharged on the payment of their fees.[1] Under peculiar circumstances, however, attendance at the bar,[2] and the admonition or reprimand,[3] have been dispensed with, and the payment of fees remitted.[4]

3. Reprimand.

682. Where this form of punishment is inflicted upon a person who is not a member, the offender is brought to the bar of the assembly, by the sergeant-at-arms, and there reprimanded by the presiding officer, in the name, and by the authority of the assembly. The offender is then discharged. Where the offender is a member, he receives the reprimand standing in his place. Admonition may be considered as a mild form of reprimand. What is said by the presiding officer on these occasions, is usually ordered to be entered on the journal.

4. Expulsion.

683. The three forms of punishment already mentioned may be inflicted upon all persons, whether members or not; but expulsion can only be inflicted upon members. Where no provision is made relating to this subject, expulsion takes place in the same manner with any other proceeding. In some of the constitutions, there are express provisions upon this subject, which in those States, of course, must be observed.

SECTION V. IN WHAT MANNER AND TO WHAT EXTENT THE INCIDENTAL POWERS OF LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLIES IN THE UNITED STATES HAVE BEEN AFFECTED BY CONSTITUTIONAL AND LEGAL PROVISIONS.

684. The constitutions of the United States, and of almost all the States, contain provisions relating to the incidental powers of their legislative assemblies, which, although widely differing among themselves, in some cases, as to the number of powers enumerated, come clearly within the first two rules[5] already mentioned in regard to the privileges of members, and do not, in any degree, change, either by enlarging or diminishing, the powers of jurisdiction recognized by the ordinary parliamentary law. The only changes, made by these provisions, relate to the kind, form, and duration of the punishments to be inflicted. It may be laid down, therefore, first, that every legislative assembly in the United States possesses all the powers of jurisdiction, in a judicial way, which are recognized by the common parliamentary law; and, second, that they possess authority to punish agreeably to the rules of that law, as modified by express constitutional or legal provision. It only remains, therefore, to state these modifications; first, those which relate to the members themselves, and, second, those which relate to other persons.

ARTICLE I. Incidental Powers relating to Members.

685. In all the constitutions except those of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, Michigan, and California, there is inserted an express provision authorizing each branch of the legislature thereby established, "to punish its members for disorderly behavior;" to which the constitution of Rhode Island adds a general authority to punish for contempt, and that of Maryland the word "disrespectful."

686. In the constitution of New Hampshire the power to punish members appears to be included in that of punishing generally; that of Vermont, after enumerating certain powers, declares, of the general assembly, that "they shall have all other powers necessary for the legislature of a free and sovereign State;" whilst those of Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, Michigan, and California, are altogether silent on the subject. In all these States, therefore, members of the legislative assemblies are amenable to their respective houses according to the principles of the common parliamentary law.

687. In the States of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, and North Carolina, there being no constitutional provision on this subject, the power to expel exists, as a necessary incident to every deliberative[1] body, and may be exercised at the discretion of the assembly, and in the usual way of proceeding.

688. In the constitutions of the United States, and of all the other States, the power to expel is expressly recognized and declared; but, in all of them, except those of Vermont and Georgia, in which the usual majority only is required, the concurrence of two thirds is necessary. In Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, and Wisconsin, two thirds of all the members elected are requisite to a vote of expulsion.

[1] It does not belong to every collective body which deliberates, as for instance, a committee, or a board of trustees or bank directors, or other similar officers.

689. In the constitutions of Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Louisiana, Mississippi, Illinois, Alabama, Michigan, Arkansas, Texas, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Missouri, there is a prohibition against expelling a member a second time for the same offence; in those of Vermont and Michigan, there is a prohibition against expulsion for causes known to the constituents of a member antecedent to his election; and in Georgia, the power to expel is restrained, as to cause, to disorderly behavior, and to conviction of any felonious or infamous offence. The constitutions of Illinois and Michigan require the reasons for the expulsion to be entered on the journal with the names of the members voting on the question.

ARTICLE II. Incidental Powers relating to Persons not Members.

690. In the American constitutions, this subject, though important as regards the independence of the legislature, is very diversely treated; some contain no provision at all, or a general one, relating to it; others enumerate the offences that may be committed against a legislative assembly by persons not members of it with considerable detail; while all, which contain any thing on the subject, unite in prescribing imprisonment as the mode of punishment.

691. The constitution of Maine gives authority to each branch of its legislature, during the session, to punish any person not a member by imprisonment not extending beyond the session. "Each house, during its session, may punish, by imprisonment, any person not a member, for disrespectful or disorderly behavior in its presence; for obstructing any of its proceedings; for threatening, assaulting, or abusing any of its members for any thing said, done, or doing, in either house; provided, that no imprisonment shall extend beyond the period of the same session." This provision is apparently broad enough to include all the incidental powers of a legislative assembly, in regard to persons not members, by the common parliamentary law. The mode and duration of punishment are also the same.

		ALABAMA
Constitution Art. 4, § 53	In 2007, Sen. Charles Bishop punched Sen. Lowell Barron on the Senate floor.	The Senate president appointed a five-member bipartisan Senate Ethics and Conduct Committee to review the complaint.	The committee hired an attorney to assist it in the review.	Investigation is on-going.
		ALASKA
Constitution Art. 2, Sec. 12	In 1993, Sen. George Jacko used or attempted to use his position to gain sexual favors from a 17-year-old legislative page.	The 7-member Senate subcommittee of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics (5 private citizens and 2 senators) held three public hearings on five charges of ethics violations by Sen. Jacko. The committee took two days to review the testimony and evidence, including briefs on Sen. Jacko's assertion that the ethics laws are silent on prohibiting or punishing attempted acts.	The committee found clear and convincing evidence against Sen. Jacko in three of the five charges. It also found that Sen. Jacko lied in parts of his sworn testimony before the committee and refused to accept responsibility for his actions. As a result, the committee issued a report recommending that Sen. Jacko be: 1. censured; 2. stripped of all committee chair positions and appointing authority during the remainder of his term; 3. prohibited from state-funded out-of-state travel during the remainder of his term; 4. required to complete, at his expense, a court-sanctioned Male Awareness Program; and 5. placed on probation for remainder of his term.	Censure and the other recommended sanctions (20-0).
	In 1988, Sen. Paul Fischer was accused of taking personal trips at state expense.	The 6-member Senate subcommittee of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics investigated the complaint.	The committee found an "inference of improper conduct" in Sen. Fischer's undocumented travel reimbursements. In testimony to the committee, Fischer stated that he was quite sure he discussed legislative business during	No action.

	In 1983, Sen. Al Adams allegedly used forged documents and his office to arrange jobs for a subcontractor. In return the subcontractor agreed to give Adams a $100,000 cash advance and ultimately paid him $772,668 over 2.5 years. The contractor also said he made a $12,000 loan to Sen. Adams in 1981 that was not repaid and not reported on Adams conflict of interest form.	The 6-member Senate subcommittee of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics (3 private citizens and 3 senators) deliberated privately.	After reviewing the allegations, the committee dismissed the complaint because the allegations stemmed from actions that occurred either before the applicable ethics law was in place or outside the law's two-year statute of limitations. 	In 1982, Sen. ~~George H.~~ Hohman, Jr. was convicted of felonious bribery and receiving a bribe for offering to share a $20,000 bribe with another legislator in return for a vote in favor of the state purchasing two Canadian firefighting planes. He was sentenced to three years in prison.	The 6-member Senate Rules Committee (3 private citizens and 3 senators) reviewed the record of the jury trial and took testimony from Sen. Hohman, witnesses on his behalf, and his attorney.	The committee found that the jury's verdict and the evidence presented to the committee clearly established that Sen. 		DELAWARE
Constitution Art. 2, § 9	In 2007, Rep. John Atkins assaulted his wife after using his legislative position to avoid a drunk driving arrest. He was stopped by police after the pickup truck he was driving was seen speeding and drifting. He was not cited or arrested despite a preliminary breath test of 0.14 BAC. He pled guilty to offensive touching (a misdemeanor) for supposedly grabbing his wife's arm during a fight and was sentenced to probation and ordered to complete domestic violence and anger management counseling.	The House Ethics Committee, a standing committee established by House Rules, investigated and made recommendations. The committee consisted of three Republicans and two Democrats. The committee determined the matter merited further inquiry and staff performed a preliminary inquiry.	Committee staffers made the following findings. • Atkins filed a misleading affidavit with the committee stating that he presented his legislative ID card after police asked for it. He later admitted that he showed it without being asked and repeatedly reminded officers about being a legislator to attempt to be treated leniently. • The police officer told Atkins and his wife to get a ride home and friends drove them part of the way before Atkins got into his truck to drive home. • Another police officer saw Atkins run a stop sign but did not stop him because he recognized the vehicle which had legislative plates. • Police shortly after responded to a 911 hang-up call at the Atkins home. After his arrest based on a domestic dispute, he expressed his concern about the press since the election was in 10 days. He made requests to speak to the police chief. • Atkins was sentenced to probation after pleading guilty to offensive touching for supposedly grabbing	Resignation (before scheduled House debate on a censure resolution).

			his wife's arm during a fight. Staff found that the fight involved greater physical contact than described in the police complaint. The committee unanimously found that Atkins violated House rules and brought the chamber into "disrepute" by using his position in an effort to be treated leniently during the traffic stop and ensuing events culminating in his arrest. In voting to censure, the committee recommended he surrender his legislative identification car and license tag, pay a $550 fine, forego any committee chairmanships, undergo an alcohol abuse evaluation, and complete court-ordered domestic violence counseling.

		of the legislative session. Reddick was not seeking re-election but asked the House to find a violation and impose a penalty.
	In 2000, Rep. Gustavo Barreiro failed to report a liability of more than $1,000 on his disclosure of financial interests that he filed when qualifying to run for the House.	The speaker received a final order and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree, the parties accepted the Ethics Committee's findings and agreed there was no evidence the violation was willful or intentional. The committee recommended a letter of admonishment from the speaker and Barreiro agreed to apologize to the House and the public and contribute $500 to a homeless shelter. The committee also recommended clarifying the law.	Admonishment. The House accepted the consent decree and the speaker's letter of admonishment was printed in the journal.
	In 1997, the Ethics Commission found that Rep. Alzo J. Reddick violated constitutional provisions on ethics through financial disclosure violations in 21 separate instances.	The speaker received a final order and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree, Reddick stipulated to findings of fact that in six years he committed various violations including failing to report a loan, underreporting a loan, failing to report the value of stock, overestimating the value of stock, failing to report certain income, not filing the address and amount of sources of income, and failing to accurately reporting his net worth.	Reprimand. The House accepted the consent decree.

			The committee's proposed order stated that Reddick apologizes for "any unintentional adverse effect his actions may have brought" on the House. Because there was no evidence of use of office for personal gain or that the actions impacted legislative duties, the committee proposed and Reddick accepted the penalty of a reprimand.
	In 1996, Rep. Marvin Couch failed to report one liability of more than $1,000 on his 1992 financial disclosure form and two liabilities of more than $1,000 on his 1993 form.	The speaker received a final order and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree, the parties (1) accepted the Ethics Commission's findings on violations, (2) found no evidence that the violations were willful or intentional, and (3) found that the Ethics Commission became aware of the debt because Couch revealed it in an amended disclosure in 1993. Because of the inadvertent nature of the violations, the parties agreed that no additional penalty was warranted.	No action.
	In 1995, Rep. Evelyn J. Lynn was investigated for failing to report certain assets and income on various financial disclosure forms over a four year period.	The speaker received a complaint and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree, the parties agreed that the Ethics Commission already found a violation and imposed a penalty and the House should take no action. They also recommended that the legislature consider clarifying jurisdiction over	No action.

	In 1994, Rep. John Thrasher was investigated for violating the statutes on representing others before a state agency for compensation.	The speaker received a complaint and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a select committee to investigate.	In a consent decree entered into between Thrasher and the committee, Thrasher waived a hearing on the violations and penalty, stipulated to facts, and agreed to a penalty. The findings included the following. • As general counsel for the Florida Medical Association, he personally appeared on the association's behalf before a subcommittee of the Board of Medicine of the Department of Professional Regulation on a rule relating to surgery in doctors' offices. • Before his appearance, he had a phone conversation with a longtime friend who chaired the subcommittee and invited Thrasher to appear and address the rule. Thrasher had previously received a general notice about the meeting. • There was no indication that the appearance was intended to misuse his position to improperly influence a state agency, nothing indicated that	The House adopted the report and a letter of admonishment from the speaker was printed in the journal.

			his status was relevant to his appearance, and it was clear from the transcript that he appeared as a representative of the association. • Thrasher acknowledged his appearance was an unintentional violation of the constitution, statutes, and House Rules. The committee's proposed order stated that the appearance before the subcommittee was a violation and he was admonished to prevent recurrences. He agreed that he should avoid even the appearance of impropriety and he apologized for "any unintentional adverse effect his actions may have brought" on the House. The committee recommended admonishment by the speaker.
	In 1992, Rep. Michael E. Langton was investigated for representing others before a state agency for compensation and seeking a benefit inconsistent with the proper performance of his public duties.	The speaker received a complaint and public report from the Ethics Commission. He appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree between Langton and the committee, Langton waived a hearing on the violations and penalty, stipulated to facts, and agreed to a penalty. The findings included the following. • Langton was a consultant to cities and counties applying for	Reprimand. The House voted 116-0 in favor.

When it appeared that this interpretation was contrary to the legislative intent, Langton contacted the department to clarify the interpretation. • Langton recognized that his contact with the department reflected adversely on him and the House. Such conduct was

The committee's proposed order stated that contacting the employee was a violation and he was admonished to prevent recurrences. Langton agreed that he should avoid even the appearance of impropriety and he apologized for "any unintentional adverse effect his actions may have brought" on the House. The committee recommended a reprimand.
	In 1991, Rep. Frederick Lippman was investigated for (1) failing to properly supervise staff as chair of the Committee on Regulatory Reform from 1983 to 1986, (2) violating the statute that restricts outside employment of a full-time staff employee,	The speaker appointed a select committee to investigate. Under House Rules, he was suspended from the House pending appeal or the end of his term. • In December, a federal judge vacated the verdicts on rumors of jury tampering and Gaffney was reinstated pending a new trial. • In January 1988, a federal grand jury returned a 21-count indictment that included new charges.
*	In 1986, Rep. John Thomas was convicted in federal court on four of five felony charges of making misstatements on a Small Business Administration (SBA) application for a loan relating to private business ventures. Thomas received a suspended sentence, four years probation, and the court required restitution.	The speaker appointed a select committee to investigate. The committee reviewed the record, heard testimony from interested constituents of Rep. Thomas, and heard presentations by the federal prosecutor and defense counsel.	The committee considered a House Rule that suspends a member immediately, pending appeals, for a felony conviction that relates to the member's responsibility as a public officer. The committee found that this rule did not apply to Thomas because (1) the federal crime must be comparable to a state felony for this provision to apply but the comparable state crime in this instance was a misdemeanor and (2) the convictions did not relate to	Censure. The House voted 109-6. A motion to substitute a reprimand (a higher penalty than censure) failed 21-95.

			responsibilities as a public officer. The committee report stated that it was not clear whether the conduct was illegal because the conviction was on appeal but Thomas' conduct shows "he was inattentive to matters that ultimately led to his federal convictions and have cast a shadow on the honor of the House of Representatives." The committee recommended censure (the least form of punishment available to the committee) because of 1. the complexity of the forms; 2. the bank's involvement in setting the loan amount; 3. a bank officer filling in some of the figures; 4. the personal financial statement was obviously incorrect and did not balance but the SBA approved it anyway; 5. the SBA and bank continued to process the loan after discovering liens that were not in the application; 6. a bank official signed the loan settlement sheets verifying that

	In 1980, Rep. Gene Flinn was investigated for sexual discrimination and sexual harassment of two female aides and using aides for non-legislative duties.	The speaker appointed a select committee to investigate. The committee took depositions, conducted hearings, and gave Rep. Flinn an opportunity to appear and give testimony and evidence.	The committee found that Flinn violated House rules and a state statute. It recommended a reprimand.	The House adopted a resolution to reprimand Flinn by a vote of 109-4. Two legislators placed remarks in the journal arguing that expulsion was appropriate.

Constitution Art. 3, § 4, Paragraph 7	In 2000, Rep. Arnold Ragas failed to file mandatory campaign finance reports indicating his person wealth and campaign contributions received between 1996 and 2000. He also ignored the $10,600 in fines the State Ethics Commission imposed for the violations.	Representative Snow introduced a proposed resolution (House Resolution 747) reprimanding Rep. Ragas. The House referred the resolution to the Rules Committee. It was subsequently withdrawn from that committee and referred to the House Ethics Committee. As a standing committee, the House Ethics Committee could not vote on a matter before it without giving the sponsor the opportunity to appear and be heard. It is unclear whether the committee held hearings.	After one meeting, the committee voted unanimously to recommend a reprimand and an order to pay the $10,600 fine.	Reprimand (161-3).

	In 1999, Sen. Diana Harvey Johnson was convicted of five counts of federal mail fraud for funneling an estimated $80,000 of state tourism funds to her own consulting business. She was sentenced to 41 months in prison, fined $7,500, and ordered to pay $21,600 in restitution.	The governor impaneled a 3-member review committee after Sen Johnson was indicted.	The committee concluded that Sen. Johnson's indictment impaired her ability to serve her constituents.	The governor suspended Sen. Johnson with pay. She resigned her seat after a federal judge suggested he would not free her on bond while appealing her conviction unless she gave up her seat.
	In 1998, Sen. Ralph Abernathy III was detained at the Atlanta airport for smuggling a small amount of marijuana into the country.	Senators Madden, Cheeks, Oliver, and Middleton introduced a proposed resolution (Senate Resolution 459) censuring Sen. Abernathy. The Senate referred the resolution to the 13-member Senate Ethics Committee. As a standing committee, the Senate Ethics Committee could not vote on a matter before it without giving the sponsor the opportunity to appear and be heard (Senate Rule 2-1.9). Benefield acknowledged bringing the toy into the chamber but denied intentionally showing it to children. A Georgia Bureau of Investigation report found insufficient evidence that criminal laws were violated. As a result, Benefield was never charged with a crime.	Rep. Posten filed an ethics complaint on behalf of a 14-year-old page who claimed a legislator showed him the toy and Benefield laughed. The House referred the complaint to the 11-member House Ethics Committee, which hired a prosecutor and held a hearing over two days. House pages, the mother of the 14-year-old, a lobbyist, and three house members testified. The hearings were open to the public, except when the pages testified. The committee limited its questions of Benefield to his role in the incident. It voted not to look into claims by two female lobbyists that Benefield showed them the toy.	The committee recommended a reprimand even though reprimand was not among the committee's official disciplinary options as spelled out in the state constitution. The committee's options were no action, censure, or expulsion.	Reprimand (129-25).

Constitution Art. 3, § 11	In 2005, Sen. Jack Noble introduced legislation to change the method of measurement of the required distance between a liquor store and a school after he and his wife were denied a license to sell liquor from their store.	Pursuant to Senate Rule 53, a six-member bipartisan Ethics Committee appointed by the Senate president pro tempore held four public hearings.	The committee found that the senator gave false or deceptive information to the Senate State Affairs Committee about the origin of the legislation and his potential benefit. Sen. Noble, while under oath, testified before the committee twice. It recommended that the senator be censured and stripped of any leadership responsibilities.	Resignation.

Constitution Art. 3, § 19	In December 1997, a series of newspaper stories raised questions about Sen. Larry Young, chair of the Senate Subcommittee on Health, accepting gifts from health care companies and a state college, failing to disclose a contract with a state agency, mixing his legislative and private office budgets, and using the prestige of his office for personal gain. The legislature initiated an investigation that resulted in his expulsion in January 1998.	On December 3, 1997, the presiding officers referred the matter to the Joint Committee on Legislative Ethics, a joint committee of the Senate and the House under Maryland state law (Md. 	In 1986, Rep. Randy Staten pled guilty to felony theft charges, admitting that he wrote 76 bad checks. The original charge of theft of over $2,500 was reduced to theft of over $250. He was sentenced to one year's probation, a 90 day jail sentence which he would serve only if he violated probation, and continued treatment. Even though the crime was a felony, he was given a misdemeanor sentence and therefore it was considered a misdemeanor. Staten said he was chemically dependent and financially irresponsible, and had completed a residential treatment program. He made restitution before criminal charges were brought.	The speaker appointed a bipartisan four-member Select Committee on the Staten Case. The committee investigated Staten for writing $8,200 in bad checks and questionable campaign finance reporting. In October 1975, the chief justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court entered an order accepting the resignation of Sen. Duffield after the Disciplinary Board recommended a two-year suspension. The consent disbarment resulted from seven charges of professional misconduct against Sen. Duffield in his private law practice including: • improperly converting $7,500 from a client's estate to personal use, and • co-mingling $3,400 in funds between clients' estates.	The Senate president pro tempore appointed a Senate Select Committee to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the voluntary disbarment and advise the Senate as to what disciplinary action, if any, was warranted. The committee held a hearing on November 13, 1975 and four days later, on November 17, issued a report with its findings and recommendations. The Senate president pro tempore requested and received official documents containing specific allegations of misconduct from the Disciplinary Board of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Sen. Duffield was notified of the inquiry and afforded the right to counsel. The hearing was conducted under oath and Sen. Duffield was allowed to present testimony and rebut or explain the charges against him.	The Select Committee found, in part, that: • converting trust funds to personal use and compounding that act by co-mingling further trust funds to restore the converted amounts constituted a grave and serious matter and conduct unbecoming any public official and • five of the seven disciplinary charges against Sen. Duffield involved negligent acts in the conduct of his private law practice and should remain within the purview of the Bar for discipline. The committee recommended that the Senate: • remove Sen. The committee found clear and convincing evidence against Sen. Jacko in three of the five charges. It also found that Sen. Jacko lied in parts of his sworn testimony before the committee and refused to accept responsibility for his actions. As a result, the committee issued a report recommending that Sen. Jacko be: 6. censured; 7. stripped of all committee chair positions and appointing authority during the remainder of his term; 8. prohibited from state-funded out-of-state travel during the remainder of his term; 9. required to complete, at his expense, a court-sanctioned Male Awareness Program; and 10. placed on probation for remainder of his term.	Censure and the other recommended sanctions (20-0).

The committee found that this rule did not apply to Thomas because (1) the federal crime must be comparable to a state felony for this provision to apply but the comparable state crime in this instance was a misdemeanor and (2) the convictions did not relate to responsibilities as a public officer. The committee report stated that it was not clear whether the conduct was illegal because the conviction was on appeal but Thomas' conduct shows "he was inattentive to matters that ultimately led to his federal convictions and have cast a shadow on the honor of the House of Representatives." The committee recommended censure (the least form of punishment available to the committee) because of 9. the complexity of the forms; 10. the bank's involvement in setting the loan amount; 11. a bank officer filling in some of the figures; 12. the personal financial statement was obviously incorrect and did not	109-6. One member of the committee moved for expulsion but was defeated. He argued

GEORGIA	In 1998, Sen. Ralph Abernathy III was detained at the Atlanta airport for smuggling a small amount of marijuana into the country.	Senators Madden, Cheeks, Oliver, and Middleton introduced a proposed resolution (Senate Resolution 459) censuring Sen. Abernathy. The Senate referred the resolution to the 13-member Senate Ethics Committee. As a standing committee, the Senate Ethics Committee could not vote on a matter before it without giving the sponsor the opportunity to appear and be heard (Senate Rule 2-1.9). It is unclear whether the committee held a hearing; however, Sen. Abernathy waived any notice and hearing with respect to the actions by the committee and Senate.	The committee returned the resolution with amendments that the Senate rejected.	Censure. (The senator also voluntarily resigned from his position as chairman of the Interstate Cooperation Committee.)
HAWAII	In March 1989, Sen. Steven Cobb was fined $500 for soliciting an undercover policewoman. He wrote the Senate a letter of apology and told them it was an isolated incident. He was embraced by the Senate until it was later reported that he was involved in two earlier cases of soliciting prostitutes. He asked to be put on leave to attend therapy. In July 1989, his therapist said he was ready to resume his Senate duties.	In September 1989, 17 senators met in a closed-door session to decide what action to take. The Senate president presented the senator with recommendations for sanctions and they were adopted.	The sanctions, for the 1990 session, were: (1) remove Sen. Cobb as committee chairperson and vice chairperson, (2) remove him as a member of the Judiciary Committee, (3) require him to submit a formal letter of apology to the Senate and the people of Hawaii, (4) subject him to a "public reprimand" for soliciting prostitution, (5) tell him that any repeat incidents could result in expulsion from the Senate, and (5) reassign him to a smaller office.	Censure.

MINNESOTA	In February 1996, several individuals claimed Rep. Jeff Bertram harassed them with anonymous calls, bullied them, and pressured them to make campaign contributions. In 1996, the legislature investigated Rep. Jeff Bertram for pressuring a businessman into giving a campaign contribution with the threat of doing business with a competitor; pressuring a store-owner to drop shoplifting charges filed against his brother, Sen. Joe Bertram; making false statements about several individuals; and engaging in other acts of intimidation, threats, and harassment. Law enforcement agencies were asked to investigate allegations of misusing state campaign funds and coercing people that surfaced in the ethics investigation. He was also later sued by a couple who said he told lies about them. The couple also received a restraining order against Bertram.	The House Ethics Committee received a complaint.	The committee found that Bertram harassed and intimidated critics and political opponents. The committee recommended censure by the House in open session; that he publicly admit on the House floor in open session to acts of misconduct specified in the committee report; that he apologize on the floor to the House, his constituents, and each of the victims named in the report; that he agree to undergo a psychological evaluation for anger and report the results to the speaker and the chairman and vice chairman of the Ethics Committee; and that he resign from all House committee chair or vice-chair positions and membership on legislative commissions.	Censure by a vote of 82-21. The full House adopted the recommendations in the committee's report. Rep. Bertram consented. A minority report recommending expulsion was presented to the full House, but failed to get 2/3 of the vote, failing 68-65. Bertram did not seek re-election.
MINNESOTA	In 1995, Rep. Bob Johnson threatened the Public Safety commissioner when the State Patrol	The House Ethics Committee heard the matter.	A recommendation to expel Johnson failed 5-5.	Censure. The House voted 82-50.

Also in 1995, he had three DWI arrests in less than seven weeks. The third occurred after the legislature initiated an investigation and while he was distraught over recent events and threatening suicide in calls from his car phone. His license had been revoked at the time. He said a severe bout of depression ended 14 years of sobriety. He pled guilty to all three DWIs (they appear to all be misdemeanors). On the first, he received a fine and probation. (The later DWI arrests violated his probation and he was sentenced to 20 days of electronic home monitoring after the 1996 legislative session ended, 40 hours of community service, and a one year license suspension.) For the 3rd, he pled guilty to habitual drunk driving and refusing a breath test (a gross misdemeanor) and received a one year sentence. He spent one month in jail with his days out on work release. He also spent 28 days in an alcoholism treatment		By a 7-3 vote, the committee asked Johnson to resign and to run in a special election if he wanted to continue. The committee also recommended censure; that he repay to the House the portion of his salary that was paid or that may be paid while he was or may be incarcerated or under house arrest for DWI convictions; 120 hours of community service; and random tests for alcohol with results forwarded to the speaker and Johnson paying for the testing. By a 7-3 vote, the committee voted to reconsider the recommendation to expel and laid the motion on the table, if Johnson did not resign.	A vote on expulsion received 76 votes, short of the 90 required for a 2/3 vote.

He was sentenced for the 2nd violation last and received (1) a one year sentence that was suspended except for 30 days in jail, (2) three years probation, (3) a $1,500 fine plus $303 in fees, and (4) a requirement to continue taking prescription medication for depression and stay in alcohol treatment. He did not seek re-election.
MINNESOTA	In 1986, Rep. Randy Staten pled guilty to felony theft charges, admitting that he wrote 76 bad checks. The original charge of theft of over $2,500 was reduced to theft of over $250. He was sentenced to one year's probation, a 90 day jail sentence which he would serve only if he violated probation, and continued treatment. Even though the crime was a felony, he was given a misdemeanor sentence and therefore it was considered a misdemeanor. Staten said he was chemically dependent and financially irresponsible, and had completed a residential treatment program. He made restitution before criminal charges were brought.	The speaker appointed a bipartisan four-member Select Committee on the Staten Case. The committee investigated Staten for writing $8,200 in bad checks and questionable campaign finance reporting.	The committee voted unanimously to recommend expulsion, based on the conviction and campaign report violations. The 24 member House Rules and Legislative Investigations Committee also recommended expulsion on a voice vote. The committee rejected censure.	Censure. An initial vote to censure failed. Then a vote to expel failed 80-52, short of the required 90 for a 2/3 vote. Then a vote to censure passed 99-31. The censure also ordered him to: donate 18% of his pay for the remainder of the year to a nonprofit chemical dependency program of his choice; perform 100 hours of volunteer service; undergo chemical dependency treatment; and, if campaign finance reporting problems continued, return all public financing money.

	The Ethical Practices Board also found he filed late and incomplete campaign disclosure reports for four years (which could involve misdemeanor or gross misdemeanor violations).
NEW HAMPSHIRE	For seven years, House Speaker Gene Chandler held a series of corn roast galas raising $64,000 from supporters, lobbyists, and others who had business before the legislature. Chandler used the money for personal expenses such as car repairs, hotel stays, and meals. In October 2004, the Legislative Ethics Committee received a complaint and in November it issued a statement of charges and notice of hearing. In March 2005, Chandler pled guilty to a misdemeanor for failing to report the gifts. He was fined $2,000 and required to perform 100 hours of community service. The attorney general did not find any evidence that he did political favors for those who donated. The committee held its first hearing in May 2005.	The Legislative Ethics Committee received a complaint. After reviewing the complaint, the committee conducted an extensive preliminary investigation and voted unanimously to begin formal proceedings. A formal statement of charges and notice of hearing was sent and a hearing was held. Chandler formally answered the statement of charges and appeared at the hearing to testify and present other evidence through his counsel.	The committee voted unanimously to recommend expulsion. The committee found that Chandler violated ethics provisions by (1) soliciting, accepting, or agreeing to accept gifts with an aggregate value over $250 while knowing or believing the givers were or were likely to be interested in matters pending at the legislature, (2) using his public position to obtain gifts with aggregate value over $250 for private benefit, and (3) disregarding the obligation to report gifts over $50 (which he acknowledged through his misdemeanor plea). The committee found that for seven years the annual corn roasts solicited and received cash from businesses, lobbyists, and individuals. They were organized by "friends" so that Chandler had income to continue in the legislature. Flyers advertising them were sent out and sometimes mentioned legislative issues. Chandler had sole discretion over how the funds were spent. He did not report the gifts except in one year.	Censure. The vote to expel failed 189-172 following a three-hour debate. The vote to amend the report and recommend censure passed 217-143. The vote to accept the report with the sanction of censure passed 274-86.

NEW MEXICO	In 1991, Rep. Ronald G. Olguin was charged with solicitation of bribery (a felony) and demanding a bribe by a public official and two other felony counts alleging that he sought $15,000 for his consulting services in exchange for state funding.	The House adopted rules establishing the Rules and Order of Business Committee. A subcommittee investigated, received certain evidence under a confidentiality agreement, and recommended that the committee find probable cause to move to a formal hearing. The full committee agreed and held an evidentiary hearing. The committee heard evidence, took testimony, questioned witnesses, allowed cross examination, and heard closing arguments.	The committee found that Olguin engaged in a course of conduct while seeking to sell his consulting services that violated his public trust as a legislator. • While agreeing to provide consulting services for a fee aimed at obtaining new program funding from a county, he also identified program needs at the state level, offered a legislative solution, and offered his assistance in obtaining that solution. • He either included an agreement to influence the state legislative process in a proposed contract for consulting services or proposed a contract for services at the county level with free services at the state legislative level. • His conduct was a serious breach of ethical responsibilities as a legislator. The committee voted 11-4 to censure. A minority report recommended expulsion.	Censure. (Floor debate included a motion for expulsion that was defeated.)
NORTH CAROLINA	In 1995-6, Rep. Ken Miller was investigated for improper advances toward a page, legislative employee, and lobbyist. In July 1995, Miller allegedly made a pass at a 16 year old page. Miller submitted a letter admitting to unwanted advances as the committee prepared to take sworn statements from the alleged victims. PENNSYL-VANIA	In 1975, Sen. William Duffield admitted to misappropriating thousands of dollars from an estate for which he was executor and attorney. In October 1975, the chief justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court entered an order accepting the resignation of Sen. Duffield after the Disciplinary Board recommended a two-year suspension. The consent disbarment resulted from seven charges of professional misconduct against Sen. Duffield in his private law practice including: • improperly converting $7,500 from a client's estate to personal use, and • co-mingling $3,400 in funds between clients' estates.	The Senate president pro tempore appointed a Senate Select Committee to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the voluntary disbarment and advise the Senate as to what disciplinary action, if any, was warranted. The committee held a hearing on November 13, 1975 and four days later, on November 17, issued a report with its findings and recommendations. The Senate president pro tempore requested and received official documents containing specific allegations of misconduct from the Disciplinary Board of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Sen. Duffield was notified of the inquiry and afforded the right to counsel. The hearing was conducted under oath and Sen. Duffield was allowed to present testimony and rebut or explain the charges against him.	The Select Committee found, in part, that: • converting trust funds to personal use and compounding that act by co-mingling further trust funds to restore the converted amounts constituted a grave and serious matter and conduct unbecoming any public official and • five of the seven disciplinary charges against Sen. Duffield involved negligent acts in the conduct of his private law practice and should remain within the purview of the Bar for discipline. The committee recommended that the Senate: • remove Sen. Duffield for the balance of his term from his standing committee chairmanship and vice chairmanship, • bar him for the balance of his term from membership on any standing committee, and • adopt a censure resolution.	Censure (unanimous vote).
SOUTH DAKOTA	In 2006, an 18-year-old page contacted the attorney general alleging that Sen. Dan Sutton made sexual advances and inappropriately touched him at a motel. Sutton resigned the day after the Senate released its proposed rules for the special session, but stated that he intended to reclaim his seat in January 2007 pursuant to his reelection. The special session was cancelled. When the regular session convened, Sutton took the oath of office. The Senate voted to adopt the same rules as the previous session. It also adopted rules regarding discipline and expulsion of members as a new chapter in the rules. Sen. Sutton went to the circuit court and received an order prohibiting the Senate from holding any hearings about him under the rules. The state Supreme Court ruled that the courts had no jurisdiction to halt a legislative disciplinary process. The Senate voted 27-6 to appoint a Select Committee on Discipline and Expulsion to investigate. They concluded that something serious involving unwanted touching of a sexual nature occurred in Sen. Sutton's motel room during the period of February 5 to February 7, 2006. In its dissent, the minority wrote, "[g]iven the serious nature of the allegations and given our belief that the evidence shows an unwanted touching of a sexual nature happened during the nights in question, we cannot agree that censure is a sufficiently serious response to what we see as the misconduct of Sen. Sutton. We believe the committee should have made a recommendation of expulsion from the South Dakota Senate." The committee voted 6-3 to recommend censure for conduct by a senator unbecoming the Senate.

VIRGINIA	In 1987, Senator Peter Babalas was censured for casting votes in violation of Senate conflict of interest rules. Babalas had earlier successfully defended himself against two counts of a criminal misdemeanor for alleged violations of state conflict of interest laws. One count was dismissed and Babalas was acquitted on the second count.		The Privileges and Elections committee recommended censure by a 12-3 vote. The Senate Rules Committee, by a 9-5 vote with Babalas (the chairman of the committee) abstaining, then approved a resolution of censure of Babalas for unethical conduct.	Censure. FLORIDA	In 1997, the Ethics Commission found that Rep. Alzo J. Reddick violated constitutional provisions on ethics through financial disclosure violations in 21 separate instances.	The speaker received a final order and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree, Reddick stipulated to findings of fact that in six years he committed various violations including failing to report a loan, underreporting a loan, failing to report the value of stock, overestimating the value of stock, failing to report certain income, not filing the address and amount of sources of income, and failing to accurately reporting his net worth. The committee's proposed order stated that Reddick apologizes for "any unintentional adverse effect his actions may have brought" on the House. Because there was no evidence of use of office for personal gain or that the actions impacted legislative duties, the committee proposed and Reddick	Reprimand. The House accepted the consent decree.

FLORIDA	In 1992, Rep. Michael E. Langton was investigated for representing others before a state agency for compensation and seeking a benefit inconsistent with the proper performance of his public duties.	The speaker received a complaint and public report from the Ethics Commission. He appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree between Langton and the committee, Langton waived a hearing on the violations and penalty, stipulated to facts, and agreed to a penalty. The findings included the following. • Langton was a consultant to cities and counties applying for Department of Community Affairs for Community Development Block Grant funds before and after his election. • He asked the Ethics Commission for an opinion whether he could continue this consulting and was informed that he could as long as he did not represent anyone personally for compensation before an agency. • The House Community Affairs Committee chair asked Langton to work on changes to the grant program and he did so while continuing to consult with cities and counties who applied for grants. • Under new legislation, the department enacted a rule for application criteria. When it appeared that this interpretation was contrary to the legislative intent, Langton contacted the department to clarify the interpretation. • Langton recognized that his contact	Reprimand. Such conduct was prohibited when it benefited a member's client or business interest. • On behalf of his consulting company, Langton phoned a department employee to express concerns about misstated facts in monitoring reports the employee prepared. The committee's proposed order stated that contacting the employee was a violation and he was admonished to prevent recurrences. Langton agreed that he should avoid even the appearance of impropriety and he apologized for "any unintentional adverse effect his actions may have brought" on the House. The committee recommended a reprimand.
FLORIDA	In 1980, Rep. Gene Flinn was investigated for sexual discrimination and sexual harassment of two female aides and using aides for non-legislative duties.	The speaker appointed a select committee to investigate. The committee took depositions, conducted hearings, and gave Rep. Flinn an opportunity to appear and give testimony and evidence.	The committee found that Flinn violated House rules and a state statute. It recommended a reprimand.	The House adopted a resolution to reprimand Flinn by a vote of 109-4. Two legislators placed remarks in the journal arguing that expulsion was appropriate.

GEORGIA	In 1993, Rep. Jimmy Benefield displayed a sex toy in the House chamber where it was allegedly showed to young pages. Benefield acknowledged bringing the toy into the chamber but denied intentionally showing it to children. A Georgia Bureau of Investigation report found insufficient evidence that criminal laws were violated. As a result, Benefield was never charged with a crime.	Rep. Posten filed an ethics complaint on behalf of a 14-year-old page who claimed a legislator showed him the toy and Benefield laughed. The House referred the complaint to the 11-member House Ethics Committee, which hired a prosecutor and held a hearing over two days. House pages, the mother of the 14-year-old, a lobbyist, and three house members testified. The hearings were open to the public, except when the pages testified. The committee limited its questions of Benefield to his role in the incident. It voted not to look into claims by two female lobbyists that Benefield showed them the toy.	The committee recommended a reprimand even though reprimand was not among the committee's official disciplinary options as spelled out in the state constitution. The committee's options were no action, censure, or expulsion.	Reprimand (129-25).
IDAHO	In 1990, Representative Ray Infanger, in a letter to the director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Services, threatened the agency's funding if the director did not grant Infanger's son an electrical contracting license.	The speaker appointed a six-member bipartisan committee to (1) review the letter of accusation written by the director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Services; (2) interview Rep. Infanger, the director, and one other knowledgeable person; and (3) report its findings and recommendations.	The committee found that a serious lack of judgment left the impression that Infanger used his position, contrary to public interest, to benefit a member of his family. Recommended a reprimand. FLORIDA	In 2000, Rep. Alzo J. Reddick, Sr. failed to timely file a financial disclosure form for 1998.	The speaker received a copy of a stipulation of fact and recommended order from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate. The Ethics Committee had not approved the stipulation and could not do so before the end of the legislative session. Reddick was not seeking re-election but asked the House to find a violation and impose a penalty. The speaker received a final order and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate. The speaker received a complaint and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a select committee to investigate.	In a consent decree entered into between Thrasher and the committee, Thrasher waived a hearing on the violations and penalty, stipulated to facts, and agreed to a penalty. The findings included the following. • As general counsel for the Florida Medical Association, he personally appeared on the association's behalf before a subcommittee of the Board of Medicine of the Department of Professional Regulation on a rule relating to surgery in doctors' offices. • Before his appearance, he had a phone conversation with a longtime friend who chaired the subcommittee and invited Thrasher to appear and address the rule. Thrasher had previously received a general notice about the meeting. • There was no indication that the appearance was intended to misuse his position to improperly influence a state agency, nothing indicated that his status was relevant to his appearance, and it was clear from the transcript that he appeared as a	The House adopted the report and a letter of admonishment from the speaker was printed in the journal.

APOLOGY (MAY INCLUDE OTHER SANCTIONS)
MINNESOTA	In 2006, Sen. Dean Johnson made comments at a private meeting concerning alleged conversations he had with members of the state Supreme Court relating to the court's possible action on the state's Defense of Marriage Act. A tape of the comments surfaced.	The Senate Subcommittee on Ethical Conduct (a subcommittee of the Rules and Administration Committee) heard the matter.	The committee dismissed the complaint but voted unanimously to require a public apology to the Senate and a written apology to the group that held the meeting where the comments were made.	Required to apologize on the Senate Floor and to those at the meeting.
MINNESOTA	In 2004, Sen. Michael Jungbauer was accused of performing campaign activities from his Senate office. He sent a Senate e-mail to 1,700 people forwarding a media advisory about a press conference whose organizers were seeking to defeat senators of a particular party if they did not pass a same-sex marriage ban constitutional amendment. Senate rules prohibit use of equipment for commercial purposes or a political campaign.	A senator filed a complaint and the Senate Subcommittee on Ethical Conduct heard the matter.	The committee voted unanimously to require a written apology.	Required a written apology to each member of the Senate and the complaint was dismissed upon delivery of apologies.
MINNESOTA	In 1994 and 1996, Sen. Sam Solon was investigated for providing the Senate's long-distance access code to his ex-wife. He pled guilty to a misdemeanor charge relating to the use of the phone account in 1992 and 1993.	The Senate Subcommittee on Ethical conduct heard the matter.	The committee recommended voluntary resignation as chair of the Commerce and Consumer Protection Committee as an appropriate disciplinary action; that he be removed from membership on the Committee on Rules and Administration; that he make restitution to the Senate for the cost of the calls; that he apologize to the Senate in open session; and that the reprimand of March 24, 1994 (for giving telephone access code to lobbyists) be reaffirmed.	The Senate adopted the report by a vote of 57-6, after voting down an amendment seeking his resignation 17-48.
MINNESOTA	In 1995, Sen. Kevin Chandler was	The Senate Subcommittee on Ethical	The subcommittee reported that Sen.	By a vote of 63-0, the Senate

The police investigated and Chandler asked them to charge him and stated he would plead guilty to 5th degree assault (a misdemeanor). He was charged with that crime and two counts of disorderly conduct (all misdemeanors). In September 1995, he pled guilty to 5th degree assault for slapping his estranged wife and the other charges were dropped. He was placed on probation for one year and fined $210. In 1996, the legislature investigated. He did not seek re-election.	Conduct heard the matter. Chandler's decision to voluntary resign his leadership positions in the Senate was appropriate and that he apologize to the Senate in open session.
OHIO	In January 1996, Rep. Michael A. Fox accepted an airline ticket and lodging from a lobbyist. Fox said he thought he had repaid the lobbyist for the ticket and he thought staying at the home owned by the lobbyist was not a gift that had to be reported.	In 1997, the legislative inspector general investigated and presented findings to the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee.	The committee recommended that Fox be removed as chairman of the Education Committee and apologize.	The House voted 89-7 and the Senate voted 31-0 to remove Fox as chairman of the Education Committee and require him to apologize.
OTHER SANCTIONS
INDIANA	In September 1997, Sen. Steven Johnson had an affair with his Senate intern.	The Senate Committee on Legislative Ethics considered a complaint filed by Sen. Kent Adams. Sen. Johnson acknowledged a "moral and ethical" failure and apologized to the Senate.	The committee found Sen. Johnson to be immoral and unethical "in contradiction to the high moral and ethical standards expected of members of the Indiana State Senate under the Rules of the Senate."	Removed as Senate committee chair and assigned Senate seat located in a less prominent position.

OHIO	In 2006, Sen. Jeffry Armbruster was investigated after requesting a workers' compensation rate discount for his business. Term limits barred him from seeking reelection. The ethics committee held hearing after Armbruster left office.	The Joint Legislative Ethics Committee investigated (a bipartisan 12 member committee). The committee served him with a complaint in December 2006. Based on a preliminary investigation, he was accused of meeting with Bureau of Workers' Compensation officials at his legislative office to discuss the premium rate of his company. In 2007, after he left office, the committee held formal hearings with the legislative inspector general acting similar to a prosecutor.	The committee found that he violated a prohibition against using his position to represent his personal business interests before a state agency.	The matter was referred to the county prosecutor.
OHIO	In 2005, Reps. Jim Raussen, Diana M. Fessler, and Michelle G. Schneider failed to disclose gifts of dinner and pro football tickets on disclosure forms.	The Joint Legislative Ethics Committee investigated.	The committee cleared them of any "wrongful intent" but required them to reimburse the costs to the lobbyist and attend one hour of ethic training.	Reimbursement of costs and training.

ALABAMA	In 2007, Sen. Charles Bishop punched Sen. Lowell Barron on the Senate floor.	The Senate president appointed a five-member bipartisan Senate Ethics and Conduct Committee to review the complaint.	The committee hired an attorney to assist it in the review.	Investigation is on-going.

NORTH CAROLINA	In 2007, an investigation of Rep. Thomas Wright by the state Board of Elections discovered evidence that Wright did not report hundreds of thousands of dollars in campaign contributions and he reportedly used a letter awarding a bogus grant to secure a bank loan for a foundation he controlled. In August, prosecutors stated that they hoped to finish their investigation by October 1. A search warrant for bank records indicated a suspicion of obtaining property by false pretences. The Board of Elections suspended Wright's reelection campaign for failing to file the required campaign disclosure report for the first six months of 2007.	The Joint Legislative Ethics Committee began an investigation.	N/A	Committee investigation is not yet complete.

ARKANSAS	In 1999, Sen. Nick Wilson was convicted in federal court on felony charges of conspiring to evade taxes on $325,000. The case involved "washing" checks that were payments from a real estate agent. The agent testified that he split his commission after Wilson tipped him off that a agency might buy a downtown bank building. He also faced a	Under one provision of the state constitution, no one convicted of an "infamous crime" is eligible to serve in the General Assembly. CALIFORNIA	In 1994, Sen. Frank Hill was one of several legislators ensnared in an FBI sting operation focused on legislative corruption. He was convicted of extortion, conspiracy, and money laundering after accepting $25,000 in exchange for his support on Louisiana shrimp boat legislation. He was sentenced to 46 months in prison and ordered to pay a fine of $2,500. At least some convictions were felonies.	A demand was made on the Senate floor for Hill's expulsion. The Rules Committee put aside consideration after receiving Hill's resignation letter, but he did not set a resignation date	The 5-member Rules Committee later voted 4-0 to expel Hill. One member abstained.	Resignation (before vote on resolution).
COLORADO	In 2006, Sen. Deanna Hanna allegedly requested a $1,400 campaign contribution as a "reparations request" from a group that backed her election opponent.	A complaint initiated the process calling for an inquiry. An ethics committee of three Democrats and two Republicans was appointed (under Senate Rule 43).	N/A	Hanna resigned while the committee was investigating.
DELAWARE	In 2007, Rep. John Atkins assaulted his wife after using his legislative position to avoid a drunk driving arrest. He was stopped by police after the pickup truck he was driving was seen speeding and drifting. He was not cited or arrested despite a preliminary breath test of 0.14 BAC. He pled guilty to offensive touching (a misdemeanor) for supposedly	The House Ethics Committee, a standing committee established by House Rules, investigated and made recommendations. Committee staffers made the following findings. • Atkins filed a misleading affidavit with the committee stating that he presented his legislative ID card after police asked for it. He later admitted that he showed it without being asked and repeatedly reminded officers about being a legislator to attempt to be treated leniently. • The police officer told Atkins and his wife to get a ride home and friends drove	Resignation (before scheduled House debate on a censure resolution).

After his arrest based on a domestic dispute, he expressed his concern about the press since the election was in 10 days. He made requests to speak to the police chief. • Atkins was sentenced to probation after pleading guilty to offensive touching for supposedly grabbing his wife's arm during a fight. Staff found that the fight involved greater physical contact than described in the police complaint. The committee unanimously found that Atkins violated House rules and brought the chamber into "disrepute" by using his position in an effort to be treated leniently during the traffic stop and ensuing events culminating in his arrest. In voting to censure, the committee recommended he surrender his legislative identification car and license tag, pay a $550 fine, forego any committee chairmanships, undergo an alcohol abuse evaluation, and complete court-ordered domestic violence counseling.

Under House Rules, he was suspended from the House pending appeal or the end of his term. • In December, a federal judge vacated the verdicts on rumors of jury tampering and Gaffney was reinstated pending a new trial. • In January 1988, a federal grand jury returned a 21-count indictment that included new charges.	committee to investigate.		before the start of the 1988 session. GEORGIA	In 1999, Sen. Diana Harvey Johnson was convicted of five counts of federal mail fraud for funneling an estimated $80,000 of state tourism funds to her own consulting business. She was sentenced to 41 months in prison, fined $7,500, and ordered to pay $21,600 in restitution.	The governor impaneled a 3-member review committee after Sen Johnson was indicted.	The committee concluded that Sen. Johnson's indictment impaired her ability to serve her constituents.	The governor suspended Sen. Johnson with pay. She resigned her seat after a federal judge suggested he would not free her on bond while appealing her conviction unless she gave up her seat.
IDAHO	In 2005, Sen. Jack Noble introduced legislation to change the method of measurement of the required distance between a liquor store and a school after he and his wife were denied a license to sell liquor from their store.	Pursuant to Senate Rule 53, a six-member bipartisan Ethics Committee appointed by the Senate president pro tempore held four public hearings.	The committee found that the senator gave false or deceptive information to the Senate State Affairs Committee about the origin of the legislation and his potential benefit. Sen. Noble, while under oath, testified before the committee twice. It recommended that the senator be censured and stripped of any leadership responsibilities.	Resignation.

MINNESOTA	In 1990, Rep. Jeff Conway, a financial planner, was indicted for diverting about $90,000 of customers' money to his personal use. He was charged with 30 felony counts of diverting money from 15 couples or individuals over several months. He was suspended from the job and then resigned. He relinquished his broker's and insurance agent's licenses after the state Commerce Department found he mishandled funds. He allegedly invested money for a client after he resigned from his job. After he resigned from the House, he pled guilty to charges that were consolidated into four counts. He was sentenced to eight months in prison, 10 years probation, 500 hours of community service, a $5,000 fine, and $50,342 restitution. The judge stayed a sentence of just under nine years in prison.	A complaint was filed with the House Ethics Committee.	The committee found probable cause that Conway engaged in misconduct. NEW HAMPSHIRE	In 2004, Rep. NEW YORK	From 1983 to 1986, Queens County Democratic Organization Secretary Richard Rubin placed no-show employees on the legislative payroll of Assemblywoman Gerdi E. Lipschutz. She was granted immunity in criminal proceeding.	In 1987, the Committee on Ethics conducted a five-week investigation that included testimony given in Rubin's trial in which he was found guilty of mail-fraud in that he caused a no-show secretary to be placed on the assemblywoman's payroll. The committee reviewed the state constitution, the proceedings of two constitutional conventions, and constitutional case law to determine if Article 3, Sections 7 and 9 authorize the Assembly to expel a member.	The committee found Lipschutz guilty of (1) falsely certifying personal service vouchers, (2) approving the hiring of a "no-show" employee knowing that the employee did not perform any official duties, and (3) committing the acts to obtain a political benefit. Assemblywoman Lipschutz cooperated with the U.S. Attorney in the Rubin trial and provided essential testimony after receiving a grant of immunity. The committee found that no member has ever been expelled and that the Assembly does not have the constitutional authority to expel a member. The committee recommended that (1) she resign, (2) the Assembly remove her	Resigned (after the committee made its recommendations).

OHIO	In March 1998, Sen. The federal charges involved pressuring inner-city grocers for campaign contributions in exchange for help in obtaining government licenses for nutrition and food stamp programs and to sell liquor and lottery tickets. TENNESSEE	In 2005, Sen. John Ford was investigated on charges including whether he resided outside his district, used campaign funds for his daughter's wedding, received consulting fees to help companies get state business, and failed to disclose his sources of income as required by Senate rules. (Other entities also investigated misconduct by Ford, including the FBI in a bribery scandal called Operation Tennessee Waltz.)	A complaint was filed with the Senate's Ethics Committee (a standing committee). The committee issued a subpoena and a subcommittee investigated and found probable cause for the full committee to investigate the issue of failing to disclose income. The full committee voted to bring in a special counsel to expand its investigation regarding consulting fees and deals. The special counsel presented a report of the investigation. The committee was preparing a six-count charge for ethical violations when Ford resigned.	Ford resigned before the committee issued its report.	Resigned (before the committee reported but after the FBI arrested him for bribery and other charges).
TEXAS	In 1957, Rep. Cox was indicted for consenting to accept a bribe. He was censured by a House committee but the censure came after the member had resigned.	An investigatory committee was appointed pursuant to a resolution.	The committee recommended that the entire House censure Rep. Cox but take no other action in view of the fact that he had already resigned. The committee vote appears to have been 9-0.	Resigned. It is unclear whether the entire House ever acted on censure.

ALASKA	In 1989, Sen. Paul Fischer was accused of taking personal trips at state expense.	The 6-member Senate subcommittee of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics investigated the complaint.	The committee found an "inference of improper conduct" in Sen. Fischer's undocumented travel reimbursements. In testimony to the committee, Fischer stated that he was quite sure he discussed legislative business during brief airport layovers but neither he nor his aide could remember the dates or where the meeting took place. The committee recommended no	No action.

ALASKA	In 1983, Sen. Al Adams allegedly used forged documents and his office to arrange jobs for a subcontractor. In return the subcontractor agreed to give Adams a $100,000 cash advance and ultimately paid him $772,668 over 2.5 years. The contractor also said he made a $12,000 loan to Sen. Adams in 1981 that was not repaid and not reported on Adams conflict of interest form.	The 6-member Senate subcommittee of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics (3 private citizens and 3 senators) deliberated privately.	After reviewing the allegations, the committee dismissed the complaint because the allegations stemmed from actions that occurred either before the applicable ethics law was in place or outside the law's two-year statute of limitations.	No action
FLORIDA	In 1996, Rep. Marvin Couch failed to report one liability of more than $1,000 on his 1992 financial disclosure form and two liabilities of more than $1,000 on his 1993 form.	The speaker received a final order and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree, the parties (1) accepted the Ethics Commission's findings on violations, (2) found no evidence that the violations were willful or intentional, and (3) found that the Ethics Commission became aware of the debt because Couch revealed it in an amended disclosure in 1993. Because of the inadvertent nature of the violations, the parties agreed that no additional penalty was warranted.	No action.
FLORIDA	In 1995, Rep. Evelyn J. Lynn was investigated for failing to report certain assets and income on various financial disclosure forms over a four year period.	The speaker received a complaint and public report from the Ethics Commission and appointed a Select Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to investigate.	In a consent decree, the parties agreed that the Ethics Commission already found a violation and imposed a penalty and the House should take no action. They also recommended that the legislature consider clarifying jurisdiction over a member's conduct before taking office.	No action.

IDAHO	In 1990, Sen. John Peavey took another senator's outgoing mail from the sergeant at arm's desk to determine if the mail volume limit was exceeded.	A six-member special committee determined facts, reached conclusions, and reported recommendations.	The committee found that the senator did not violate any Senate rules; however, his conduct showed a lack of good judgment. Unanimously recommended no formal action and an apology.	No formal action.
IOWA	In 2006, Sen. Stewart Iverson took a position with a political action committee before his term ended.	The Senate Ethics Committee, a standing committee, received a complaint.	Before the committee took any action, Iverson returned his pay and quit the job. The committee dismissed the complaint.	None.
IOWA	In 2001, a complaint against Sen. Mike Sexton alleged conflict of interest for (1) sitting in on an environmental protection commission meeting regarding a fine of his employer and (2) quashing legislation as chairman of the Natural Resources Committee to prevent new regulations that would affect his employer.	The Senate Ethics Committee received a complaint.	The committee dismissed the complaint but required senators to ask for an ethics ruling in the future before taking jobs that might be a conflict of interest.	None
MINNESOTA	In 2003, Rep. Arlon Lindner made controversial statements about gays in the Holocaust and AIDS in Africa.	Eight representatives filed a complaint and the House Ethics Committee (a bipartisan standing committee) heard the matter.	The committee failed to find probable cause for a violation by a 2-2 vote. MINNESOTA	In 1996, Sen. Florian Chmielewski was accused of abusing Senate phone privileges. Previously, in December 1995, he pled guilty to misconduct of a public officer, a gross misdemeanor (it is unclear whether he faced other charges). He was accused of letting family and friends use his Senate phone access code for more than $3,800 in personal long distance calls. He was sentenced to two years probation and 100 hours of community service.	A senator filed a complaint with the Senate Subcommittee on Ethical Conduct.	The sub-committee recommended removal from two committees; no use of the Senate phone code; no reimbursement for lodging expenses outside his district; and loss of seniority.	None. The Ethics Committee recommendations had to be approved by the Senate Rules Committee which had no scheduled meetings until the following year. The recommendations expired and the senator was defeated in a primary election.
MINNESOTA	In 1996, Sen. LeRoy Stumpf requested an investigation of a possible conflict of interest relating to consultant contract. A newspaper article reported that Stumpf sponsored a bill in 1994 that provided $50,000 to a coalition of six counties to control beavers whose dams caused floods. Two weeks after the bill became law, he was hired as a consultant by the Red Lake Watershed District, which was picked by the counties to administer the program. He was paid $14,000, with the money coming from the district's account which is derived from property taxes.	Stumpf requested that the Senate ethics subcommittee (a bipartisan subcommittee) review the situation.	The Special Subcommittee on Ethical Conduct unanimously found that it was not a conflict of interest. The subcommittee report stated that no money appropriated as a result of Stumpf's legislative work was used directly or indirectly to pay him and he took reasonable steps to avoid a conflict of interest, such as consulting Senate counsel on the matter. It also found no evidence that Stumpf discussed the job while the bill was pending.	None.

DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS IN OTHER STATES' LEGISLATIVE BODIES THAT INVOLVED CRIMINAL CONDUCT

Criminal Investigation, Charge, or Conviction

Of the 86 disciplinary cases that we identified in our research, at least 46 involved conduct that was the subject of a criminal investigation, charge, or conviction. Table 1 shows details of these cases. Of these 46 cases:

1. 10 resulted in expulsions,
2. 11 resulted in censure,
3. 17 resulted in resignations,
4. one resulted in an admonishment,
5. three resulted in an apology and other sanctions, such as restitution and loss of a chairmanship,
6. one resulted in no action (the committee recommendations expired at the end of the session and the legislator lost in a primary),
7. one resulted in a referral to the county prosecutor (the investigation finished after the legislator was out of office), and
8. two have on-going investigations.

Seriousness of Criminal Charge

Regarding the seriousness of the criminal charges in these 46 cases:

1. 21 involved felony charges or convictions;
2. 13 involved misdemeanor charges or convictions;
3. in five cases, the level of charges was not clear;
4. in one case, the legislator was granted immunity in exchange for testimony (New York); and
5. in six cases, there were no charges brought while the legislature investigated or the criminal investigation is still on-going.

Initial Charge Broader or More Serious Than Conviction

Of the legislators in these 46 cases, we identified eight cases where the initial criminal charges were clearly broader or more serious than the eventual criminal convictions.

1. In Arkansas, Sen. Wilson was convicted on felony charges of conspiring to evade taxes. He also faced a 133-count racketeering indictment which was later dropped in exchange for his testimony.

2. In Florida, Rep. Thomas was convicted on four of five felony charges of making misstatements on loan applications.
3. In Michigan, Sen. Stallings was charged with a felony but pled guilty to the misdemeanor of taking less than $100 under false pretense.
4. In Minnesota, Rep. Chandler was charged with 5th degree assault and two counts of disorderly conduct (all misdemeanors) but pled guilty to the assault charge in a domestic assault.
5. In Minnesota, Rep. Conway was indicted on 30 felony counts for diverting clients funds as a financial planner and he pled guilty to charges consolidated into four counts.
6. In Minnesota, Rep. Staten pled guilty to a reduced felony theft charge and received what was considered a misdemeanor sentence.
7. In Ohio, Sen. Johnson was indicted on six felony corruption charges and was convicted on three of them.
8. In West Virginia, Sen. Smith was convicted of felony vote tampering but he was found not guilty of perjury and two bribery trials resulted in hung juries.

Timing of Legislative Investigation

In 22 of these 46 cases, the legislature investigated after the member was convicted of a crime. In nine cases, the investigation began after the member was charged or arrested for a crime. In six cases, the member was the subject of a criminal investigation or charged with a crime after the legislature completed its proceedings on the case, including one case where the legislator was acquitted (Sen. Young in Maryland). In one case, the legislator was acquitted of criminal charges before the legislative investigation (Sen. Balabas in Virginia). In two cases, criminal investigations continued during the legislative investigation. In the remaining six cases, the legislator did not face charges, the criminal investigation is on-going, or the result of the criminal investigation is unclear.

Legislative Investigation Broader Than Criminal Charges

The following provides some examples of cases where a legislator was charged with or convicted of a crime and the legislature also investigated other conduct.

1. In Delaware, Rep. John Atkins assaulted his wife after using his legislative position to avoid a drunk driving arrest. He was stopped by police after the pickup truck he was driving was seen speeding and drifting. He was not cited or arrested despite a preliminary breath test of 0.14 BAC. He pled guilty to offensive touching (a misdemeanor) for supposedly grabbing his wife's arm during a fight.
2. In Michigan, Sen. David Jaye was investigated for three drunk driving convictions, two alleged physical altercations with his fiancée, having sexually explicit photos on his Senate-owned computer, and alleged verbal abuse of Senate staff.
3. In Minnesota, the legislature investigated Joe Bertram for shoplifting a vest and offering $1,000 to the store owner to not file criminal charges. He was convicted of the shoplifting charge before the legislative investigation. After his resignation, he was charged with bribery for offering money to the store owner.

4. In Minnesota, Rep. Bob Johnson threatened the Public Safety commissioner when the State Patrol turned down his request to fly him to St. Paul for the funeral of a former governor. He also had three drunk driving arrests in a seven week period.
5. In Minnesota, the legislature investigated Rep. Staten based on his guilty plea to a reduced felony theft charge and questionable campaign finance reporting.
6. In New York, Queens County Democratic Organization Secretary Richard Rubin placed no-show employees on the legislative payroll of Assemblywoman Gerdi E. Lipschutz. Lipschutz was granted criminal immunity for her testimony.

In some other instances, the legislative investigation led to a criminal investigation. In others, a criminal investigation resulted in no charges. In the case of Maryland Sen. Young, he was indicted after his expulsion and later acquitted on the charges.

Investigations of Official or Private Conduct

Of the 86 disciplinary cases, approximately 64 involved conduct legislators engaged in in their official capacity, 14 cases involved personal conduct, and three involved both official and private conduct. In the remaining five cases, it is unclear whether the conduct was official or private.

EXPULSION
ALASKA	In 1982, Sen. George H. Hohman, Jr. was convicted of felonious bribery and receiving a bribe for offering to share a $20,000 bribe with another legislator in return for a vote in favor of the state purchasing two Canadian firefighting planes. He was sentenced to three years in prison.	The 6-member Senate Rules Committee (3 private citizens and 3 senators) reviewed the record of the jury trial and took testimony from Sen. Hohman, witnesses on his behalf, and his attorney.	The committee found that the jury's verdict and the evidence presented to the committee clearly established that Sen. Hohman intentionally violated "the most fundamental of his duties, which are to safeguard the public trust and to preserve the integrity of this body."	Expulsion by adoption of Senate Resolution (16-4).
ARIZONA	In 1991, Sen. Carolyn Walker was one of 11 legislators indicted in a year-long undercover operation on vote selling. Sen. Walker was videotaped taking money from a paid informant for her support of legislation that would have legalized casino gambling. The legislation did not pass.	The Senate referred the matter to the five-member Ethics Committee, which adopted rules for receiving and investigating complaints. The Senate retained special counsel to advise the Senate and the committee and to conduct a preliminary investigation into the allegations against Sen. Walker. Counsel reported his findings and recommended that the committee issue a complaint charging Sen. Walker with unethical conduct. The committee issued the complaint, held two public hearings on it, and subsequently issued a report to the Senate.	The committee found that Sen. Walker engaged in unethical conduct in violation of Senate rules and personal and state campaign finance disclosure laws. It unanimously recommended that Sen. Walker, the majority whip, be expelled. The legislature initiated an investigation that resulted in his expulsion in January 1998. In December 1998, he was indicted by a county grand jury on nine counts for demanding $52,000 in bribes and two computers from a health care company, extorting $74,493 and the computers from the companies and $8,000 for an aide, and filing a false state income tax return in 1995. They requested that the committee convene immediately to make a thorough review of allegations of improprieties on the part of Sen. Young. They asked the committee to investigate all aspects of the senator's business practices as they related to his position in the legislature and to report back before the 1998 legislative session. From the outset, the co-chairs of the committee limited their investigation and report to potential violations of public ethics laws. The committee met in closed session a total of four times. Its first meeting was on December 9, 1997. During the third session, it met to interview Sen. Young, who was represented by counsel (that hearing was closed to the public at the senator's request). Sen. Young called one witness. The committee's report appears to indicate that its last meeting, the fifth one, was not closed to the public. After a month-long investigation, the committee reported. The committee voted unanimously to recommend that the Senate: • remove Sen. Young immediately as a member of Senate leadership; chairman of any committee or subcommittee; and member of any standing, statutory, joint, or select committees or subcommittees; • adopt a censure resolution; and • consider an expulsion resolution based on its findings.

CENSURE
FLORIDA	In 1986, Rep. John Thomas was convicted in federal court on four of five felony charges of making misstatements on a Small Business Administration (SBA) application for a loan relating to private business ventures. Thomas received a suspended sentence, four years probation, and the court required restitution.	The speaker appointed a select committee to investigate. The committee reviewed the record, heard testimony from interested constituents of Rep. Thomas, and heard presentations by the federal prosecutor and defense counsel.	The committee considered a House Rule that suspends a member immediately, pending appeals, for a felony conviction that relates to the member's responsibility as a public officer. The committee found that this rule did not apply to Thomas because (1) the federal crime must be comparable to a state felony for this provision to apply but the comparable state crime in this instance was a misdemeanor and (2) the convictions did not relate to responsibilities as a public officer.	Censure. The House voted 109-6. A motion to substitute a reprimand (a higher penalty than censure) failed 21-95.

			The committee report stated that it was not clear whether the conduct was illegal because the conviction was on appeal but Thomas' conduct shows "he was inattentive to matters that ultimately led to his federal convictions and have cast a shadow on the honor of the House of Representatives." The committee recommended censure (the least form of punishment available to the committee) because of 1. the complexity of the forms; 2. the bank's involvement in setting the loan amount; 3. a bank officer filling in some of the figures; 4. the personal financial statement was obviously incorrect and did not balance but the SBA approved it anyway; 5. the SBA and bank continued to process the loan after discovering liens that were not in the application; 6. a bank official signed the loan settlement sheets verifying that disbursements were used according to the loan authorization but the banker was not charged; 7. the federal judge commented at

One member of the committee moved for expulsion but was defeated. He argued that a harsher penalty was appropriate because of Thomas' statement to the FBI and because the jury convicted of him of crimes that require willful actions.

HAWAII	In March 1989, Sen. Steven Cobb was fined $500 for soliciting an undercover policewoman. He wrote the Senate a letter of apology and told them it was an isolated incident. He was embraced by the Senate until it was later reported that he was involved in two earlier cases of soliciting prostitutes. He asked to be put on leave to attend therapy. In July 1989, his therapist said he was ready to resume his Senate duties.	In September 1989, 17 senators met in a closed-door session to decide what action to take. The Senate president presented the senator with recommendations for sanctions and they were adopted.	The sanctions, for the 1990 session, were: (1) remove Sen. Cobb as committee chairperson and vice chairperson, (2) remove him as a member of the Judiciary Committee, (3) require him to submit a formal letter of apology to the Senate and the people of Hawaii, (4) subject him to a "public reprimand" for soliciting prostitution, (5) tell him that any repeat incidents could result in expulsion from the Senate, and (5) reassign him to a smaller office. MINNESOTA	In 1995, Rep. Bob Johnson threatened the Public Safety commissioner when the State Patrol turned down his request to fly him to St. Paul for the funeral of a former governor. After the incident, he lost his position as assistant majority leader. Also in 1995, he had three DWI arrests in less than seven weeks. The third occurred after the legislature initiated an investigation and while he was distraught over recent events and threatening suicide in calls from his car phone.	The House Ethics Committee heard the matter.	A recommendation to expel Johnson failed 5-5. By a 7-3 vote, the committee asked Johnson to resign and to run in a special election if he wanted to continue. The committee also recommended censure; that he repay to the House the portion of his salary that was paid or that may be paid while he was or may be incarcerated or under house arrest for DWI convictions; 120 hours of community service; and random tests for alcohol with results forwarded to the speaker and Johnson paying for the testing. For the 3rd, he pled guilty to habitual drunk driving and refusing a breath test (a gross misdemeanor) and received a one year sentence. He spent one month in jail with his days out on work release. He also spent 28 days in an alcoholism treatment program. He was sentenced for the 2nd violation last and received (1) a one year sentence that was suspended except for 30 days in jail, (2) three years probation, (3) a $1,500 fine plus $303 in fees, and (4) a requirement to continue taking prescription medication for depression and stay in alcohol		By a 7-3 vote, the committee voted to reconsider the recommendation to expel and laid the motion on the table, if Johnson did not resign.

MINNESOTA	In 1986, Rep. Randy Staten pled guilty to felony theft charges, admitting that he wrote 76 bad checks. The original charge of theft of over $2,500 was reduced to theft of over $250. He was sentenced to one year's probation, a 90 day jail sentence which he would serve only if he violated probation, and continued treatment. Even though the crime was a felony, he was given a misdemeanor sentence and therefore it was considered a misdemeanor. Staten said he was chemically dependent and financially irresponsible, and had completed a residential treatment program. He made restitution before criminal charges were brought. The Ethical Practices Board also found he filed late and incomplete campaign disclosure reports for four years (which could involve misdemeanor or gross misdemeanor violations).	The speaker appointed a bipartisan four-member Select Committee on the Staten Case. The committee investigated Staten for writing $8,200 in bad checks and questionable campaign finance reporting.	The committee voted unanimously to recommend expulsion, based on the conviction and campaign report violations. The 24 member House Rules and Legislative Investigations Committee also recommended expulsion on a voice vote. The committee rejected censure.	Censure. An initial vote to censure failed. Then a vote to expel failed 80-52, short of the required 90 for a 2/3 vote. Then a vote to censure passed 99-31. The censure also ordered him to: donate 18% of his pay for the remainder of the year to a nonprofit chemical dependency program of his choice; perform 100 hours of volunteer service; undergo chemical dependency treatment; and, if campaign finance reporting problems continued, return all public financing money.

A formal statement of charges and notice of hearing was sent and a hearing was held. Chandler formally answered the statement of charges and appeared at the hearing to testify and present other evidence through his counsel.	The committee found that Chandler violated ethics provisions by (1) soliciting, accepting, or agreeing to accept gifts with an aggregate value over $250 while knowing or believing the givers were or were likely to be interested in matters pending at the legislature, (2) using his public position to obtain gifts with aggregate value over $250 for private benefit, and (3) disregarding the obligation to report gifts over $50 (which he acknowledged through his misdemeanor plea). The committee found that for seven years the annual corn roasts solicited and received cash from businesses, lobbyists, and individuals. They were organized by "friends" so that Chandler had income to continue in the legislature. Flyers advertising them were sent out and sometimes mentioned legislative issues. Chandler had sole discretion over how the funds were spent. He did not report the gifts except in one year.	The vote to expel failed 189-172 following a three-hour debate. The vote to amend the report and recommend censure passed 217-143. The vote to accept the report with the sanction of censure passed 274-86.
NEW MEXICO	In 1991, Rep. Ronald G. SOUTH DAKOTA	In 2006, an 18-year-old page contacted the attorney general alleging that Sen. Dan Sutton made sexual advances and inappropriately touched him at a motel. The attorney general investigated for possible criminal charges. By the time of censure, no charges had been brought.	The Senate president pro tempore wrote to Sutton indicating he would refer the matter to the Senate's executive board if he did not resign within a week. The governor, in response to a request from the Senate's executive board, called the Senate into special session to investigate the allegations. In the meantime, Sutton won reelection. Sutton resigned the day after the Senate released its proposed rules for the special session, but stated that he intended to reclaim his seat in January 2007 pursuant to his reelection. The special session was cancelled. When the regular session convened, Sutton took the oath of office. The Senate voted to adopt the same rules as the previous session. It also adopted rules regarding discipline and expulsion	In its majority report, the Select Committee on Discipline and Expulsion recommended censure, finding that the senator exercised poor judgment in inviting and permitting a serving Senate page to share his motel room and bed. Further, that allegations arising out of that poor judgment resulted in public allegations of misconduct, which, though unproved, served to bring Sen. Sutton and the honor of the Senate into public disrepute. In a minority report, three out of the nine senators on the committee dissented. They concluded that something serious involving unwanted touching of a sexual nature occurred in Sen. Sutton's motel room during the period of February 5 to February 7, 2006. It is unclear whether Halverson waived the disciplinary hearing which would have required appointment of a special prosecutor.	The House Ethics Committee recommended expulsion.	The full House voted against expulsion by a narrow margin (2 votes). Halverson was censured and subsequently resigned.
VIRGINIA	In 1987, Senator Peter Babalas was censured for casting votes in violation of Senate conflict of interest rules. Babalas had earlier successfully defended himself against two counts of a criminal misdemeanor for alleged violations of state conflict of interest laws. One count was dismissed and Babalas was acquitted on the second count.		The Privileges and Elections committee recommended censure by a 12-3 vote. MINNESOTA	In 1994 and 1996, Sen. Sam Solon was investigated for providing the Senate's long-distance access code to his ex-wife. He pled guilty to a misdemeanor charge relating to the use of the phone account in 1992 and 1993.	The Senate Subcommittee on Ethical conduct heard the matter.	The committee recommended voluntary resignation as chair of the Commerce and Consumer Protection Committee as an appropriate disciplinary action; that he be removed from membership on the Committee on Rules and Administration; that he make restitution to the Senate for the cost of the calls; that he apologize to the Senate in open session; and that the reprimand of March 24, 1994 (for giving telephone access code to lobbyists) be reaffirmed.	The Senate adopted the report by a vote of 57-6, after voting down an amendment seeking his resignation 17-48.
OHIO	In 2005, Sen. Ray Miller was investigated for having his aide work for his nonprofit organization while on state time. The legislative inspector general referred evidence of using state personnel and equipment for private business to the county prosecutor. The prosecutor did not pursue charges.	The Joint Legislative Ethics Committee investigated.	The committee required a letter of apology and $936 restitution, which covered the aide's salary for the time she worked for the private organization.	N/A

RESIGNATION
ARKANSAS	In 1999, Sen. Nick Wilson was convicted in federal court on felony charges of conspiring to evade taxes on $325,000. The case involved "washing" checks that were payments from a real estate agent. The agent testified that he split his commission after Wilson tipped him off that a agency might buy a downtown bank building. He also faced a 133-count racketeering indictment as "kingpin" of a corrupt organization that skimmed nearly $2 million from an assortment of state programs through kickbacks and contracts to friends and allies.	Under one provision of the state constitution, no one convicted of an "infamous crime" is eligible to serve in the General Assembly. Another provision gives each house the power to expel a member. A majority of members signed a petition to request a hearing on Wilson, as required by the rules. 28 of 35 senators signed the petition.	N/A	Resigned. Wilson submitted a letter announcing his resignation at a future date and the Senate president pro tem cancelled a meeting on expulsion. Other criminal charges were later dropped by prosecutors in exchange for Wilson's testimony.

DELAWARE	In 2007, Rep. John Atkins assaulted his wife after using his legislative position to avoid a drunk driving arrest. He was stopped by police after the pickup truck he was driving was seen speeding and drifting. He was not cited or arrested despite a preliminary breath test of 0.14 BAC. He pled guilty to offensive touching (a misdemeanor) for supposedly grabbing his wife's arm during a fight and was sentenced to probation and ordered to complete domestic violence and anger management counseling.	The House Ethics Committee, a standing committee established by House Rules, investigated and made recommendations. The committee consisted of three Republicans and two Democrats. The committee determined the matter merited further inquiry and staff performed a preliminary inquiry.	Committee staffers made the following findings. • Atkins filed a misleading affidavit with the committee stating that he presented his legislative ID card after police asked for it. He later admitted that he showed it without being asked and repeatedly reminded officers about being a legislator to attempt to be treated leniently. • The police officer told Atkins and his wife to get a ride home and friends drove them part of the way before Atkins got into his truck to drive home. • Another police officer saw Atkins run a stop sign but did not stop him because he recognized the vehicle which had legislative plates. • Police shortly after responded to a 911 hang-up call at the Atkins home. After his arrest based on a domestic dispute, he expressed his concern about the press since the election was in 10 days. He made requests to speak to the police chief. • Atkins was sentenced to probation after pleading guilty to offensive touching for supposedly grabbing his wife's arm during a fight. The committee unanimously found that Atkins violated House rules and brought the chamber into "disrepute" by using his position in an effort to be treated leniently during the traffic stop and ensuing events culminating in his arrest. In voting to censure, the committee recommended he surrender his legislative identification car and license tag, pay a $550 fine, forego any committee chairmanships, undergo an alcohol abuse evaluation, and complete court-ordered domestic violence counseling.
FLORIDA	In 1988, Rep. Donald George Gaffney was investigated regarding his previous position as Jacksonville City councilman and a rezoning petition before the council. • He was charged with bribery and grand theft days before his election in 1986. • A federal grand jury returned a 23-count indictment on extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, and mail fraud in February 1987. • After the 1987 session ended, he was convicted of conspiracy, extortion, and	The speaker appointed a select committee to investigate. GEORGIA	In 1999, Sen. Diana Harvey Johnson was convicted of five counts of federal mail fraud for funneling an estimated $80,000 of state tourism funds to her own consulting business. MacKenzie were convicted in federal court for extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, and conspiracy to violate the Travel Act in connection with their performance as senators. Some, if not all, charges were felonies.	The Senate referred the matter to its Committee on Ethics on the day of the conviction. The committee held two hearings, after which it determined that disciplinary proceedings should be conducted pursuant to the Senate's inherent power with respect to its members. The committee held a third hearing to determine if the convictions "were compatible with [the senators'] continued service in the Senate..." MINNESOTA	In 1990, Rep. Jeff Conway, a financial planner, was indicted for diverting about $90,000 of customers' money to his personal use. He was charged with 30 felony counts of diverting money from 15 couples or individuals over several months. He was suspended from the job and then resigned. He relinquished his broker's and insurance agent's licenses after the state Commerce Department found he mishandled funds. He allegedly invested money for a client after he resigned from his job. After he resigned from the House, he pled guilty to charges that were consolidated into four counts. He was sentenced to eight months in prison, 10 years probation, 500 hours of community service, a $5,000 fine, and $50,342 restitution. The judge stayed a sentence of just under nine years in prison. Here is the timelines I have sent to Bill and Alec for their review. I expect we will discuss these dates with them at least during our meeting tomorrow.

I have spoken to Sen. Clodfelter and he can do Feb. 11th. Accordingly I will poll the remainder of the Committee but I think we can proceed to send out the notice without their reply if we are prepared to reschedule as needed. Sen. Clodfelter did express some concerns about whether Bill and Alec will be able to be ready under this timeline for all things he thinks needs to be looked at for this hearing, including the revenue records and some additional research we can discuss.

Thanks.

Importance: High

Based on the ethics team's telephone conversation with Rep. Glazier last week, I have drafted proposed timelines for conducting the proceedings against Rep. Wright in both the LEC and the House Select Committee.

Please look at these timelines closely and let me know if you think they are workable for you.

Since Wright has now responded, I think the cochairs will want to set the hearing date for the LEC this week. The hearing date for the House Select committee can be later. I want to be sure you have adequate time to prepare your cases before we set these dates. Thanks.

V.	)	RESPONSE TO ETHICS
	)	COMPLAINT
REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS WRIGHT,	)
Respondent.	)

The Respondent in the above captioned matter, Representative Thomas Wright, hereby responds to the ethics allegations contained in a complaint issued by the North Carolina Joint Legislative Ethics Committee on December 11, 2007 and served upon him, by certified mail, on December 26, 2007 by showing the following:

1. Respondent specifically denies that any contacts and interactions with Torlen Wade on either March 13, 2002 or March 15, 2002 occurred while Respondent was acting or serving in his capacity as a member of the North Carolina General Assembly and/or that his contacts and interactions with Torlen Wade were improper, illegal or unethical.

2. The conduct alleged in the Ethics complaint does not constitute ethical and/or criminal conduct over which the Legislative Ethics Committee has jurisdiction to consider.

3. Merely soliciting and/or obtaining a letter from a State employee which contains untrue information does not constitute a criminal and/or ethical violation.

4. Respondent did not use nor intend to use a letter which was obtained from a State Employee to obtain a loan, grant or other funding for the Community Health Foundation.

5. The allegations contained in the complaint does not constitute conduct committed by a Legislator who was acting within his official capacity as a participant in the lawmaking process.

6. The Legislative Ethics Committee is barred from considering the allegations contained in the complaint due to the expiration of the Statute of Limitations and/or laches in that the Committee has failed to allege and consider this matter in a timely manner.

7. The allegations contained in the complaint involves conduct which did not constitute a criminal and/or ethical violation at the time that it was allegedly committed and the Legislative Ethics Committee consideration of this complaint at this time violates the State and Federal Constitutions..

8. The conduct alleged in the complaint involves conduct which was allegedly committed

8. The conduct alleged in the complaint involves conduct which was allegedly committed during a past and closed session of the North Carolina General Assembly and said conduct did not violate any ethics rules and constitute criminal conduct at that time. Neither the Legislative Ethics Committee nor the House Select Committee can constitutionally be empowered to investigate conduct committed during past legislative sessions of the North Carolina General Assembly.

9. The creation of the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee and actions which it has taken in this matter by initiating misconduct allegations against the Respondent, prosecuting those allegations and determining their validity violate State and federal Constitutional Rights of Due Process and Equal Protection.

10. The creation of the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee and actions which it has taken in this matter by initiating misconduct allegations against the Respondent, prosecuting those allegations and determining their validity violates Article II, Section 20 of the North Carolina Constitution in that members of the North Carolina Senate are unlawfully involved in the investigation and prosecution of this complaint.

11. The actions of the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee violate Article VI, Section 8 by seeking to disqualify Respondent from a legislative office in the North Carolina House of representatives to which he was duly elected where he has not been convicted or adjudged guilty, by any competent authority, of treason, a felony, corruption or malpractice in office nor has he been removed from office by impeachment.

WHEREFORE, the Respondent, after responding to the complaint issued by the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee, respectfully moves to dismiss this matter, or, in the alternative, suspend any further proceedings or actions regarding this matter until criminal charges which have been lodged against the Respondent in the Wake County Superior Court have been resolved.

This the 7th day of January, 2007.

The Honorable Joe Hackney, Speaker
North Carolina House of Representatives

At the request of the Speaker of the House and on its own motion, the Legislative Ethics Committee initiated an ethics investigation into the conduct of Representative Thomas Wright. At the request of law enforcement agencies and on the advice of its counsel, the Committee has coordinated its investigation with those of the law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction. The Legislative Ethics Committee now makes this initial report of its findings in its ongoing investigation:

> The Legislative Ethics Committee has considered the indictments rendered by the grand jury sitting in Wake County in the matter of State of North Carolina v. Thomas E. Wright, contained in criminal files 07 CRS 84372, 84373, 84374, 84375, 84376 and 84377, charging felonies of obtaining property by false pretenses and a felony of obstruction of justice with respect to campaign finance reports.
> Having considered the evidence presently available to it and having assumed that evidence to be true, the Committee has concluded that under the Legislative Ethics Act as it existed at the time the matters in these indictments are alleged to have occurred, the Committee's jurisdiction under the then existing law would not reach the matters alleged in the indictments.

However, the Committee finds that, if true, the acts alleged in the indictments are unethical and warrant such action as the House of Representatives may determine.

The Committee refers the specific matters contained in Wake County criminal files 07 CRS 84372, 84373, 84374, 84375, 84376 and 84377 to the North Carolina House of Representatives for such action as the House deems appropriate under Article II, § 20, of the North Carolina Constitution. The Committee notes that the jurisdiction of the House of Representatives in this matter is broader than that which is statutorily granted to the Committee under the former Legislative Ethics Act.

HOUSE SELECT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ALLEGED MISCONDUCT AND OTHER MATTERS INCLUDED IN INDICTMENTS AGAINST REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS E. WRIGHT

TO THE HONORABLE MEMBERS OF THE NORTH CAROLINA HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Whereas, the State Board of Elections conducted a hearing on May 15, 2007, to consider allegations and evidence of alleged violations by Representative Thomas E. Wright of campaign finance regulations and other possible criminal wrongdoing; and

Whereas, after that hearing the State Board of Elections referred the matter to the Wake County District Attorney to consider criminal charges against Representative Wright; and

Whereas, on May 21, 2007, the Speaker requested the Legislative Ethics Committee investigate the alleged violation of the Legislative Ethics Act or the criminal law, or both, by Representative Wright; and

Whereas, on December 10, 2007, the Wake County Grand Jury indicted Representative Wright on six felony charges: five of obtaining property by false pretenses and one of obstruction of justice; and

Whereas, on December 12, 2007, the Legislative Ethics Committee made to the House of Representatives and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives the following initial report of that Committee's findings in its ongoing investigation:

> "The Legislative Ethics Committee has considered the indictments rendered by the grand jury sitting in Wake County in the matter of State of North Carolina v. Thomas E. Wright, contained in criminal files 07 CRS 84372, 84373, 84374, 84375, 84376 and 84377, charging felonies of obtaining property by false pretenses and a felony of obstruction of justice with respect to campaign finance reports.
> Having considered the evidence presently available to it and having assumed that evidence to be true, the Committee has concluded that under the Legislative Ethics Act as it existed at the time the matters in these indictments are alleged to have occurred, the Committee's jurisdiction under the then existing law would not reach the matters alleged in the indictments.

However, the Committee finds that, if true, the acts alleged in the indictments are unethical and warrant such action as the House of Representatives may determine.

The Committee refers the specific matters contained in Wake County criminal files 07 CRS 84372, 84373, 84374, 84375, 84376 and 84377 to the North Carolina House of Representatives for such action as the House deems appropriate under Article II, § 20, of the North Carolina Constitution. The Committee notes that the jurisdiction of the House of Representatives in this matter is broader than that which is statutorily granted to the Committee under the former Legislative Ethics Act."; and

Whereas, the Legislative Ethics Committee continues to have jurisdiction over matters related to its powers under Article 14 of Chapter 120 and the conduct of Representative Wright and may make further reports to the House of Representatives and the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and

Whereas, Article II, Section 20, of the North Carolina Constitution requires each house of the General Assembly to be the judge of the qualifications of its members; and

Whereas, Article VI, Section 8, of the North Carolina Constitution provides that a member of the General Assembly is disqualified from his or her office if adjudged guilty of treason, any other felony, or corruption or malpractice in any office; and

Whereas, the House of Representatives possesses the inherent power of a legislative body to discipline its members for violations of its rules, for unlawful behavior, for unethical conduct, for corruption or malpractice in office, for violations of the oath of office, and for offenses injurious to the House; and

Whereas, it is now necessary for the House of Representatives to investigate the matters alleged in the indictments against Representative Wright and other allegations of misconduct in order to determine their truth and, if so, to determine his qualifications to continue to hold office as a member of the House of Representatives as required by the Constitution; and

Whereas, it is now necessary for the House of Representatives to investigate the matters alleged in the indictments against Representative Wright and other allegations of misconduct in order to determine their truth and, if so, to determine whether his conduct violates the rules of the House, violates his oath of office, is unlawful or unethical, is corrupt or constitutes malpractice in office, is abuse of office, or is injurious to the House, and whether within the inherent powers to discipline its members the House of Representatives shall impose any sanctions against Representative Wright;

Now, therefore:

Section 1. The House Select Committee to Investigate Alleged Misconduct and Other Matters Included in Indictments Against Representative Thomas E. Wright is established by the Speaker as a select committee of the House pursuant to G.S. 120-19.6(a) and Rule 26(a) of the Rules of the House of Representatives of the 2007 General Assembly.

Section 2. The Select Committee consists of six House members. The individuals listed below are appointed as members of the Select Committee. Members serve at the pleasure of the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Representative Rick Glazier, Chair
Representative Paul Stam, Vice Chair
Representative Marvin W. Lucas
Representative William C. McGee
Representative Edith D. Warren
Representative Laura I. Wiley

Section 3. The Select Committee shall investigate the matters reflected in the attached indictments against Representative Thomas E. Wright and other allegations of possible unethical or unlawful conduct that are outside the jurisdiction of the Legislative Ethics Committee applying the substantive law in effect before January 1, 2007. The Select Committee shall also investigate any additional matters referred to it by the Speaker upon a report of the Legislative Ethics Committee.

Section 4. The Select Committee shall conduct a preliminary investigation to determine whether there is probable cause that Representative Wright has committed unethical or unlawful conduct. The Select Committee shall notify Representative Wright of its determination and any charges against him. If the Select Committee determines there is probable cause to proceed, it shall conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine whether Representative Wright's conduct was unethical or unlawful and constitutes grounds for sanctions by the House of Representatives. If the Select Committee finds that the conduct was not unethical or unlawful or that no sanctions are warranted, the Select Committee shall report this to the House of Representatives and to Representative Wright. If the Select Committee determines that Representative Wright's conduct was unethical or unlawful and that sanctions should arise, the Select Committee shall report its Findings to the House of Representatives and to Representative Wright. The report shall also include recommended legislation for appropriate action, which may include reprimand, censure, or expulsion.

Section 5. The Select Committee shall promptly adopt rules of procedure, a copy of which shall be delivered to Representative Wright. To the extent practical, the Select Committee shall conduct its work in concert with the work of the Legislative Ethics Committee.

Section 6. Representative Wright has the right to be present, present evidence, cross-examine witnesses, and to be represented by legal counsel at any evidentiary hearing of the Select Committee.

Section 7. The Select Committee may meet during the interim period or during sessions upon the call of its chair.

Section 8. The Select Committee is vested with the authority contained in Article 5A of Chapter 120 of the General Statutes.

Section 9. The Legislative Services Officer shall assign professional and clerical staff to assist the Select Committee in its work. The Director of Legislative Assistants of the House of Representatives shall assign clerical support staff to the Select Committee.

Section 10. Members of the Select Committee shall receive per diem, subsistence, and travel allowance at the rate established in G.S. 120-3.1.

Section 11. The expenses of the Select Committee are considered expenses incurred for the operation of the House of Representatives and shall be paid pursuant to G.S. 120-35 from funds available to the House of Representatives for its operations. Individual expenses of $5,000 or less, including per diem, travel, and subsistence expenses of members of the Select Committee, and clerical expenses shall be paid upon the authorization of the chair of the Select Committee. Individual expenses in excess of $5,000 shall be paid upon the written approval of the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Select Committee may arrange for or contract for professional, clerical, or consultant services, as approved by the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Section 12. The Select Committee shall continue until dissolved by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Speaker of the House of Representatives may dissolve the Select Committee at any time.

Effective this 13th of December, 2007.

Joe Hackney

RULES

RULES OF THE HOUSE SELECT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ALLEGED MISCONDUCT AND OTHER MATTERS INCLUDED IN INDICTMENTS AGAINST REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS E. WRIGHT

(Adopted December 18, 2007)

PART A. – GENERAL PROVISIONS.

1. All proceedings of the House Select Committee To Investigate Alleged Misconduct and Other Matters Included in Indictments Against Representative Thomas E. Wright (hereinafter referred to as the "Committee") shall be governed by Article 5A, Committee Activity, of Chapter 120 of the General Statutes; the authorization issued by the Speaker of the House of Representatives dated December 13, 2007 creating the Committee (hereinafter "Authorization"); and other applicable law. All other matters, not otherwise governed above, shall be subject to the procedures set forth in these Rules.

PART B. – [RESERVED]

PART C. - OUTLINE OF PROCEDURE FOR INVESTIGATIONS.

1. Meetings. –

   (a) The Committee shall meet upon the call of the chair.

   (b) A quorum of the Committee shall consist of four members.

2. Committee votes. – All votes of the Committee taken under Rules C.5.(b), C.5.(d), and C.15., shall be by roll call and included in the minutes.

3. Investigation Authorization. — The Committee shall conduct investigations into the matters contained in the Authorization.

4. Investigation. –

   (a) The chair shall be responsible for the preliminary investigation of alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator.

(b) The chair may do any of the following:

(1) Ask the Attorney General to provide outside legal counsel for the Committee and to direct the State Bureau of Investigation to conduct the preliminary investigation.

(2) Request that the Legislative Services Officer facilitate the hiring of an investigator to conduct the preliminary investigation. The Legislative Services Officer shall forward the request to employ a hired investigator to the Speaker of the House of Representatives for approval of the request and the allocation of funds for that purpose. If requested by the chair, the Legislative Services Officer shall furnish the chair with a list of at least three qualified investigators from whom the chair may select an investigator or investigators. The Legislative Services Officer shall employ as the hired investigator the person or persons whom the chair selects subject to the approval of the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

(3) The chair shall request that the Legislative Services Officer facilitate the hiring of outside legal counsel at such time as the chair determines the assistance of outside counsel is necessary. Outside counsel services shall be used for the coordination of the investigation of alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator, preparation of proposed charges of alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator, and for presentment of evidence at hearings. The Legislative Services Officer shall forward the request to employ outside counsel to the Speaker of the House of Representatives for approval of the request and to allocate funds for that purpose. The Legislative Services Officer shall give the chair a list of at least three qualified attorneys willing to serve as outside counsel from whom the chair may select outside counsel. The Legislative Services Officer shall employ as the Committee's outside counsel the individual whom the chair selects, subject to the approval of the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

(d) The person or persons directed to conduct the investigation shall:

(1) Present to the Committee, at the direction of the chair, all information relevant to the Committee's investigation.

(2) Research, as directed by the chair, allegations relevant to the alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator.

(3) Interview potential witnesses having information relevant to the inquiry.

(4) Obtain sworn statements from persons willing to give them.

(5) Prepare the presentation of information and the investigative findings to the Committee.

(6) Present to the Committee a list of recommended witnesses to be called.

(7) Provide, as authorized by the chair, to the accused legislator or the legislator's private legal counsel, copies of documents or other evidence to be presented to the Committee and any documents or other evidence which a reasonable person would believe might exculpate the accused legislator.

(8) Carry out other duties as directed by the chair.

5. Presentment of preliminary investigation findings –

(a) The chair shall arrange for the presentation to the Committee of the findings of the preliminary investigation and, if warranted, recommendations of specific charges of alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator.

C(5)(4)

(b) After the presentation of the findings of the preliminary investigation, the Committee shall determine by majority vote of the Committee members present and voting whether there is probable cause to believe that the accused legislator has committed unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator.] 5+0

(c) If at the end of its preliminary inquiry, the Committee determines by majority vote of the Committee members present and voting that probable cause does not exist to proceed with further investigation, the Committee shall notify the accused legislator, the House of Representatives, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of its findings.

(d) If at the end of its preliminary inquiry, the Committee determines that probable cause exists to proceed with further investigation, the Committee by a majority vote of the Committee members present and voting shall specify the charges of unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator to be considered against the accused legislator.

6. Notification of charges and scheduling of hearings. – The chair shall notify the accused legislator of the charges against the legislator and of the date of the hearing on the charges. The chair shall schedule a hearing on the matter as soon as is reasonable. The notice shall contain the time and place of the hearing on the matter, which shall be no less than 30 days after the date of the notice, unless waived by the accused legislator. The notice shall also inform the accused legislator of the legislator's right to respond to the Committee in writing to the charges against the accused legislator within a period of time specified by the Committee.

7. Rights of accused legislator. – The legislator against whom the charges are brought has the right to respond in writing to the charges within a period of time specified by the Committee, and to be present, present evidence, call and examine witnesses, cross-examine witnesses, introduce exhibits and be represented by private legal counsel paid for by the accused legislator at any evidentiary hearing. The Committee shall provide to the accused legislator, or the legislator's private legal counsel, copies of all documents or other evidence which are intended to be presented by the Committee's legal counsel to the Committee at the hearing, or which a reasonable person would believe might exculpate the accused legislator. All documents and other evidence to be provided to the accused legislator under this rule shall be furnished at least 10 days prior to the date of the hearing, except documents or other evidence discovered within 15 days of the hearing shall be furnished as soon as possible after discovery but prior to the hearing.

8. Ruling on Motions. – The accused legislator, the accused legislator's legal counsel, and counsel for the Committee may submit motions to the Committee for consideration, including prehearing motions, by submitting the motions to the chair of the Committee. The chair will render a ruling on any motion and inform the accused legislator, the accused legislator's legal counsel, counsel for the Committee, and members of the Committee of the ruling as soon as reasonable. All prehearing motions and rulings shall be read into the record at the next meeting of the Committee after the motions and rulings are made. Motions and rulings made during a meeting of the Committee shall be read into the record when made. The ruling of the chair on any motion shall be sustained unless overruled by a majority vote of the Committee members present and voting.

9. Subpoenas. – The forms for subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum approved on November 2, 1973 by the Legislative Services Commission shall be the forms utilized by the Committee. The Committee may issue subpoenas to compel the attendance of witnesses or the production of documents, books or other records, as permitted by Article 5A of Chapter 120 of the General Statutes. The accused legislator may request that the Committee issue subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum, and the chair shall issue subpoenas for witnesses requested by the accused legislator to be heard at the hearing as approved by the Committee in accordance with Rule C.10. The accused legislator shall notify the Committee of all requests for subpoenas at least ten days prior to the hearing, unless waived by the Committee.

10. Witnesses to take oath and all written statements to be sworn. –

(a) The chair shall notify the accused legislator of all witnesses who may appear at a hearing inquiring into alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator at least twenty days prior to the hearing, unless waived by the Committee. A copy of any affidavit of a witness setting forth matters on which the witness may testify shall be made available to the accused legislator at that time. If no affidavit of the witness exists, the Committee shall make available to the accused legislator a summary of the matters on which the witness may testify. Any information which would tend to clear or lessen from blame or fault the charges against the accused legislator shall be made available to the accused legislator or the legislator's private legal counsel as soon as is reasonable.

(b) The accused legislator shall notify the Committee chair of the names of the witnesses the accused legislator desires to have appear at a hearing inquiring into alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by a legislator at least ten days prior to the hearing, unless waived by the Committee. A copy of any affidavit of a witness setting forth matters on which the witness may testify shall be made available to the Committee at that time. If no affidavit of the witness exists, the accused legislator shall make available to the Committee a summary of the matters on which the witness may testify.

(c) The Committee shall determine by majority vote of the Committee members present and voting which witnesses shall be heard. All witnesses shall be sworn before testifying.

(d) All written statements to the Committee shall be by sworn affidavit before being considered by the Committee.

11. Counsel for witnesses permitted. – Any witness testifying before the Committee may have private legal counsel present. Participation by a witness's counsel at a hearing and while the witness is testifying is limited to advising the witness of the witness's legal rights. Counsel's failure to abide by these procedures is grounds for counsel's exclusion from the hearing.

12. Propounding of questions. –

(a) Committee members and staff, if requested by the chair or Committee, may question any witness. The chair shall recognize Committee members who wish to question a witness for a series of questions. The Committee member may ask the witness all questions without interruption so long as permitted by the chair. Upon completion of a series of questions by a Committee member, the chair may recognize another Committee member for questions in the order recognized.

After all Committee members desiring to ask questions have been given an opportunity to ask a series of questions, the chair may give members additional opportunities to ask a series of questions in the same order.

(b) After receiving permission from the chair, all questions to be asked of any witness shall be directed to the witness. The chair may permit a series of questions to be asked without requiring specific consent for each individual question.

(c) A member of the Committee, the accused legislator, or the accused legislator's private legal counsel, may object to any question before the question is answered. All objections shall be directed to the chair. If an objection is raised, the chair shall determine whether the question is relevant and has probative value as to a substantive issue, and is not a waste of time or redundant, and whether the witness will be allowed to answer. The ruling of the chair, without objection from a member of the Committee, shall stand.

(d) If the chair's ruling is objected to by a member of the Committee, the motion shall be, "That the ruling of the chair be overruled." The chair's ruling shall be overruled if the motion is adopted by majority vote of the members of the Committee present and voting.

13. Meetings of Committee. –

(a) The Committee's meetings shall be held in open session, except for matters that could otherwise be considered in closed session under G.S. 143-318.11.

(b) All proceedings of any evidentiary hearings shall be transcribed.

(c) The accused legislator and the legislator's private legal counsel shall be permitted to attend any closed session held for the purpose of the presentation of evidence or taking testimony from a witness testifying as to matters related to allegations against the accused legislator.

(d) Private legal counsel of any witness shall be permitted in a closed session during the period of the witness's testimony. The parents or legal guardian of a minor witness shall be permitted in a closed session during the period of the minor witness's testimony.

14. Division of issues. – After hearing evidence on the substantive issues of the alleged unethical or unlawful conduct by the accused legislator, the Committee shall address the following issues:

(1) Whether, by clear and convincing evidence, one or more of the charges against the accused legislator is true.

(2) If so, what action will be taken by the Committee.

(3) Whether, by a preponderance of the evidence, the accused legislator should be exonerated of the charges.

15. Disposition of cases. – When the Committee has concluded its inquiries into alleged violations, the Committee, by majority vote of those present and voting, shall do one of the following:

(1) If the Committee fails to find the alleged violations are established by clear and convincing evidence, the Committee shall report this to the House of Representatives and to the accused legislator. If the Committee finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the accused legislator should be exonerated of the charges, the chair shall transmit this finding in writing to the accused legislator and to the House of Representatives.

(2) If the Committee finds the alleged violations are established by clear and convincing evidence, the Committee shall do one or both of the following:

a. Refer the matter to the Attorney General for investigation and referral to the district attorney for possible prosecution if the Committee finds substantial evidence of a violation of a criminal law that is not already the subject of an indictment.

b. Refer the matter to the House or Representatives for appropriate action, which may include admonishment, censure and expulsion.

16. Role of Committee members and staff. –

(a) The duties of staff assigned to the Committee shall be directed by the chair.

(b) Legislative staff may be authorized to do the following:

(1) Research any legal issues arising from the investigation.

(2) Help Committee members prepare for meetings.

(3) Consult with the Attorney General's staff or other outside legal counsel on matters arising from the investigation as necessary.

(4) Carry out other duties as directed by the chair.

(c) Other staff:

(1) All investigations, at the chair's discretion, may be performed by an investigator designated in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rule C.4.

(2) Outside counsel designated in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rule C.4. of these procedures shall be authorized to oversee the investigation in preparation for hearings and shall prepare and present evidence to the Committee, including the initial presentation of the evidence through the questioning of witnesses.

Wright CHAIR RULINGS

North Carolina General Assembly
Legislative Ethics Committee

January 2, 2008

In Re the Matter of Representative Thomas Wright
C-LEC-07-002

EXTENSION OF TIME TO FILE RESPONSE TO COUNT 1

This matter is before the Chairs on oral motion of Irving Joyner, counsel for Representative Thomas Wright (hereinafter "Wright"). Irving Joyner has requested an extension of time to file a response to the ethics charge against Wright pending in the Legislative Ethics Committee (hereinafter "LEC") as identified in the LEC's December 13, 2007 letter to Wright setting forth the ethics charge, identified as Count 1, and allowing any written response to that specific charge against Wright to be filed by December 28, 2007 with the LEC. No response was timely filed nor was any request made to extend time to file a response prior to the expiration of the deadline. Notwithstanding this failure, by telephone call to Committee co-counsel Bill Hart, Irving Joyner notified Bill Hart on December 31, 2007 that he would be representing Wright before the LEC and requested an extension of time to file the written response allowed in the LEC's December 13, 2007 letter. Although good cause has not been shown to extend the deadline, the chairs, in their discretion, nonetheless GRANT the request and extend the time Wright may file a written response to the LEC charge until Monday, January 7, 2008, at noon.

This ruling confirms the decision made by the cochairs and conveyed orally by telephone to Irving Joyner by Bill Hart on December 31, 2007.

Bill,

Representative Glazier called and asked me to contact you. He told me that Colon Willoughby has authorized us to send the December 28th letter that Colon sent you to Speaker Hackney. My understanding is that the letter explains the district attorney's concern about turning over the criminal file and suggests proceeding on the Legislative Ethics Committee charge first.

Representative Glazier has asked our staff to fax this to the Speaker's law office today. Also, our staff would like to review the letter as well.

Please let me know if you can send this letter by email. The letter can also be faxed to the fax number listed below my name. If you are going to fax the letter, please let me know so I can retrieve it. I'd also be happy to discuss further with you if necessary. Thanks.

We will be happy to meet with you at your convenience on Tuesday. We discussed most of these issues in our ethics staff meeting Friday afternoon.

The staff discussed meeting with Bill and Alec late Tuesday morning to go over with them what we anticipate Brad will have on probable cause, and what Kory and Heather have on the history of legislative discipline - NC, Congressional, and other states. We want to make sure that our historical grounds for sanctions match up with the proposed charges or counts that Bill is proposing.

We discussed the set up for 643. We need to look at the number of seats on the dais, but I think we will suggest that Bill, Alec and the SBI agent sit to the left of the chair, that Stam, Carin and maybe the court reporter sit to right of the chair, that the other staff sit on the back rows of the dais, and the remaining 4 committee members sit in the first row of seats to the left of the chair, directly in front of Bill. If Wright and/or his attorneys are present, they can sit in the front row on the right of the chair. We may want to coordinate with the court reporter who may prefer to sit where they can see the mouths of the persons speaking. Sitting Bill and Alec up front avoids them having to press the mic button the entire time they are speaking and avoids them speaking from the front podium which puts their backs to the chair and requires the mic to be shared. The Committee members and Wright's party, if they are allowed to speak, can hold down the mic button when they speak. The court reporter does not need a mic.

We have been trying to consider various scenarios to suggest to you to consider how you want to handle. Under the rules, Wright has no right to present at this stage since the Committee has not decided how or about what to proceed against him. Until the Committee proposes charges, or courts, nothing is ripe for Wright to file a motion for (i.e. - dismiss count for lack of probable cause, dismiss all counts for lack of jurisdiction, etc.). Since Wright has yet to be [redacted]ged with anything like in a criminal case, I don't think he has a right to cross examine witnesses or put on his own [redacted]sses like you would in a probable cause hearing in a criminal case. I guess you could let him make remarks before the presentation of the evidence but at that point the only thing he has to challenge is the committee itself or the proceeding itself. He could make his argument that because the Committee is charged with looking at the evidence in the indictments and the indictments are before the criminal court the Committee should withhold all action until after the criminal action is completed. Until the Committee determines what the charges are, what evidence they are based on, and the nature of the alleged unethical conduct, you don't know whether they will be the same as the indictments so I believe his comments at that stage would be premature.

After the Committee decides the charges I think motions to dismiss should be filed after the charges are delivered to Wright (i.e. not made orally at this meeting), and then considered by the chair and the Committee at another time. Wright could still ask the Committee to hold off on proceeding arguing that his due process rights are being denied because he cannot answer the charges without giving up his 5th amendment rights, and that the Committee should wait until the criminal matters are resolved so he can defend himself in the legislative proceedings. He could argue to proceed otherwise would be a shame because his hands are tied in presenting a defense to the Committee's charges while the criminal matters are pending. I think you could rule that that argument should be made in the form of a written motion and that if he decides not to respond to the charges in the time the Committee gives him, the Committee could decide on his motions before setting a hearing date, but otherwise the Committee will direct Bill to prepare the case for hearing.

I will try to continue to think about other possible scenarios over the weekend and may have some additional issues for you to consider on Monday. Thanks.

some logisitics issues as well--how to set up committee and counsel and if Wright and his counsel are there for the pc hearing in 643. In addition, trying to anticipate any motions or actions--I know the rules do not provide for Wright's participation at the pc proceeding, but is there is any authority or precedent to suggest they should, in the chair's [redacted]etion, be allowed to speak to the issue of pc at that hearing? I am strongly inclined not to allow that as it relates to [redacted]esentation and to the pc determination since the rules clearly do not provide for that, but I am inclined before the p[redacted]entation starts and after to allow them to be heard as to any motion or procedural issue. Your thoughts next week would be appreciated. Take care. Rick

I would like to suggest that the ethics staff meet with you two, possible late Tuesday morning, to go over what the legislative staff plans to present to the Select Committee on Wednesday on the issue of what probable cause standard should the Committee apply and what the historical research sets out as grounds under which a legislative body can take disciplinary action against a member. We would like our presentations to dovetail with detail of information you plan to present to the Committee and the legal basis for alleged unethical conduct you set forth in the various charges that you are recommending to the committee. How does that sound to you? We are flexible on the time but thought Tuesday morning would give us both time to make any necessary modifications to each of our presentations before Wednesday afternoon. Just let me know. Thanks.

I agree with you and will do so shortly.

For your information, Rep. Wright stopped by to see me this afternoon. He informed me that in addition to Irving Joyner representing him before the LEC and Select Committee, he would also be represented by his criminal attorney, Douglas Harris. Rep. Wright has asked us to send all matters and proceedings to both his attorneys as well as to Rep. Wright's legislative email account, as appropriate. Rep. Wright has also asked that we provide him and his attorneys with copies of the complaint from the Speaker, the memberships of the LEC and the Select Committee, the LEC statute and the LEC's transmittal to the Speaker on the indictment issues. I am preparing to send him this information today if possible.

Rep. Wright has also asked if we could provide him with any materials or research we were going to be presenting to the Committee. I told him that we would certainly provide him with any thing handed out to the Committee at the meeting, but that I would also check with you to see if you would authorize us to give him information before it was handed out to the Committee. While we may not have our presentations completed until Wednesday morning, I am thinking that our charts on the NC history, Congressional history and other states history might be finished sooner. Please let me know how you would like me to respond to his request.

Rep. Wright also asked me to use his home address for any correspondence that needed to be mailed to him and also approved deliver to his legislative office if necessary.

I will be contacting Douglas Harris hopefully by Monday and will ask him for his mailing and email addresses and will send them when they are available.

Feel free to call me if you have questions. Cell - 919-749-7467, home - 919-467-7934. Thanks.

Sounds good. FYI, if he requests research on the same issues we have already researched we need to discuss with you and Terry how we need to respond. Typically we duplicate research requests we provide the same research to both members without telling them about the other request. I expect Wright will be satisfied to wait until Wednesday on this type of research and I do not plan to respond to him on his request for the 2nd paragraph unless he asks me again before Wednesday. Thanks.

Thanks Walker and I certainly agree he is entitled to all of the materials in the first paragraph and absolutely lets make sure all of his counsel get notice. He is not, however, entitled to the materials in the second paragraph until those are handed out to the Committee on Wednesday and you present to the Committee and I am not authorizing their disclosure to him before the Committee gets the presentation. Thanks and take care. Have a good weekend. Rick

Dear Bill:

I am responding to your request for information, in your capacity as Counsel to the House Select Committee to Investigate Alleged Misconduct and Other Matters included in indictments against Representative Thomas E. Wright ("Select Committee"). As we have discussed, the Wake County Grand Jury has returned six (6) true bills of indictment against Rep. Wright charging him with five (5) Class H felonies and one (1) Class C felony. If convicted, the minimum presumptive sentence for the Class C felony is not less than 58, nor more than 79 months of active imprisonment. The Select Committee has no statutory privilege of confidentiality and all documents given to the Select Committee will be public documents. Given the number and seriousness of these charges, and Rep. Wright's elected position as a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, I expect any information that is released publicly will be widely reported. Under the North Carolina State Bar's Rules of Professional Conduct and the Constitutional protections provided by our State and Federal Courts, I believe extreme care and caution should be used by all those involved in handling information that could prejudice Rep. Wright's upcoming trial by jury in Wake County. I would urge you, on behalf of the Attorney General, to share these concerns with the Select Committee and encourage them as lawyers and public officials to remember the paramount duty to insure that the accused has a fair trial and that justice is properly served.

There are four types of allegations covered in these six indictments, specifically: (1) that Rep. Wright induced a state employee to write a letter that was misused, (2) that Rep. Wright solicited charitable contributions that were misused, (3) that Rep. Wright obtained a loan that was misused, and (4) that Rep. Wright failed to properly report campaign contributions and expenditures. Our earlier discussions focused on information that was developed while investigating the first allegation, and addressed issues of whether Rep. Wright may have used his official position as a Representative in obtaining the letter. It was my impression that the Select Committee would focus on that matter as it may have related to his official conduct. Now, it appears that the Select Committee wishes to investigate all the allegations contained in the indictments and whether Rep. Wright properly performed duties he may have owed to a private entity. As we have discussed, there may be a number of legislators who have solicited loans or contributions for various foundations, charities, and religious organizations with which the legislators have close ties, and from whom they may have derived benefit for themselves, relatives or friends. Private foundations, scholarship "charities", and churches are but a few of those organizations that have not previously been scrutinized by legislative ethical oversight. If the Select Committee decides this type of review is appropriate, there may be a number of activities they will feel compelled to review if they are concerned with the public's perception that they are treating all legislators with equal fairness.

The Select Committee also has expressed interest in the charge alleging that Rep. Wright failed to properly report his campaign contributions and expenditures. Historically, these types of allegations have been investigated and addressed by the State Board of Elections and the various District Attorneys of the State. There have been recent Board hearings involving other legislators who have failed to properly disclose contributions and expenditures, and there are some similar irregularities of legislators' campaign finance activities currently being investigated. These matters have never previously attracted legislative ethical oversight. If the Select Committee is going to investigate and attempt to address matters that historically have been handled by the Board and the Courts, we need to know and make referrals to the Select Committee or the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee. The potential for disrupting the Board of Elections' and Court's investigations and prosecutions of these matters is significant and may require us to alter the way we handle these matters.

Even in view of my concerns, in order to enable you to properly advise the Select Committee of our work, I have asked two (2) SBI officials, Assistant Director Eric Hooks and Assistant Special Agent in Charge Johnny Umphlet, along with the Deputy Director of the State Board of Elections, Kim Strach, to meet with you and brief you on the investigation. I have not released the nearly 7,000 pages of the SBI's criminal investigative report because I believe those documents would be made public, and that would violate my duties as a lawyer and my responsibilities as District Attorney. A copy of those documents will be made available to Rep. Wright's counsel of record in the criminal case as soon as I know who that person is.

I respect that the Select Committee is trying to carry out its new duties and determine whether Rep. Wright should be disciplined for his conduct, and I respect the public's right to know what its government is doing. However, I sincerely urge them to respect Rep. Wright's right to a fair trial, and not to take action that could adversely impact that right. The public also has a right to see that this matter is handled properly by all of us, and previous Legislatures have enacted laws addressing this particular issue. The Committee can proceed with the allegation about the letter and not address the issues in the other indictments without calling into question its handling of other similar cases or Rep. Wright's right to a fair trial. The Legislative Ethics Act recognizes that these problems can occur and authorizes the Legislature to defer to other authorities when appropriate. See N. C. G. S. §120-103.1(b)(2)c.

I hope they will give use the opportunity to carry out appropriately the responsibilities they have assigned to us.

With highest personal and professional regards, I remain

Very truly yours,

Colon Willoughby
District Attorney

The meeting of the House Select Committee has been rescheduled for next Wednesday, January 9th beginning at 1:00 p.m. in Room 643. We confirmed with Rep. Glazier this morning that he does want a court reporter for this meeting. I anticipate that the meeting could run 2 hours, and possibly 3, but probably not longer. We will not need an immediate turn around on the transcription of this meeting. I understand from Rep. Glazier that the Speaker has OK this expense.

Please feel free to work with Denise Huntley on any of the procedural questions the reporter might have, like contact information and seating arrangements.

Let me know if you have questions or need further assistance from me. Thanks.

The meeting of the House Select Committee on the Wright Investigation scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 3rd at 10:00 a.m. has been cancelled due to the death of Rep. Warren's husband. Rep. Warren is a member of the Committee.

We will be polling the Committee members about rescheduling the meeting next week, either Tuesday at 1 or Wednesday at 3 and will let you know the time for the meeting.

Bill and Alec: Please let Denise know as soon as possible if you are available on both Tuesday and Wednesday before she polls the Committee about those days. Thanks.

Rep. Glazier - I completely agree with you that DOR should be able to provide the tax records under the current law. I am forwarding to you an email that I sent to Alec Peters on 12/19 regarding the same. I think the other issues are more a matter of logistics and can be worked-out fairly quickly once we get this resolved.

I'm not quite sure why the AG's office has not moved more quickly on obtaining the subpoena. I've expressed repeatedly to Alec that this issue is something the LEC directed the AG's office to move forward on some time ago and that returning with a report of no substantial progress is not going to be well received.

Its pretty clear we won't have the records by the 3rd, but I will continue to push for a quick turn-around.

Will see you soon.

LEC only

Rep. Glazier,

Per request, I am summarizing our attempts to deliver the LEC's Notice of Charge of Unethical Conduct by Rep. Thomas E. Wright (transmittal of count 1 and a copy of the updated rules):

12/13–I sent the notice and the rules via certified mail, return receipt requested, to Rep. Wright's home address. No return receipt has been received to date.

12/13–I sent the notice and the rules via regular mail to Rep. Wright's home address. No letter has been returned as undeliverable.

12/14–Bill Hart had a SBI agent attempt to deliver a copy of the notice to Rep. Wright at the Wake County courthouse three separate times. Rep. Wright refused to accept the envelope.

12/17–Clarestene Stewart, legislative assistant to Rep. Wright, signed a confirmation of delivery of the notice.

Subject: RE: agenda for thursday

Attachments:

I have gotten your messages about the SEC Christmas card message, background on probable cause standards, the proposed agenda for Thursday's meeting and the request to arrange a court reporter for Thursday. I would like to respond to all these matters but may need to do so by separate emails.

As to the court reporter for Thursday, I have a call into Bill Hart to make sure he does not have a problem with this for Thursday. When we last spoke before Christmas, he was planning to have the lead SBI agent appear before the Committee and was going to work with Colin to be sure that does not create problems for him. Colin has concerns about the Committee getting sworn testimony from his witnesses before the criminal case is tried, because any inconsistencies can be exploited by Wright's attorney on cross. Bill does not expect that the SBI will be called as a witness so he did not think having the SBI agent appearing before the Committee would be a concern to the DA, but he wanted to check.

I also have a call into George Hall about arrangements for a court reporter. He will want to clear this with the Speaker's office since this will have to be paid from House funds. I expect to contact Robin as we work out the details. We will be working on those details this afternoon.

As to your proposed agenda, I think this looks good. I would suggest two additional presentations, both prior to the presentment of the case. The first would be a presentation on the history and authority of legislatures disciplining their members, including the history in NC, in Congress and other states. This will help the Committee focus on the types of conduct for which disciplinary action can be taken. The second would be a presentation on the legal concept of probable cause. This would help the Committee focus on the standard of proof that they should consider at this stage of the proceedings. We will begin working on finding the probable cause standard on Wednesday.

I see where Rep. Warren's husband has died and I am wondering whether that might affect this week's schedule.

Please feel free to call me either on my home phone – 919-467-7934 or my cell phone – 919-749-7467 if we need to talk further today. Thanks.

Introduction of purpose of hearing and personnel, incl ct reporter

Committee counsel to present possible counts for consideration--please ask Bill to have them on document to hand out to committee

Presentation of evidence by committee counsel generally--witnesses and documents

Presentation of each count and argument to support probable cause determination on each count based on presentation of evidence

Committee questions on each count as we proceed

Committee debate on each count as we proceed

Committee vote on each count as we proceed

If probable cause found on any count, committee discussion at the end on schedule for hearing and pre hearing deadlines

Subject: response to your December 20th e-mail

Kory: This note is in response to your December 20th e-mail on an LEC subpoena for Rep. Wright's tax records. First, as to the subpoena, even if the Joint Ethics Committee is limited by 120-102, the House Select Committee is not so the House Select Committee may proceed here if LEC can not. However, second, I think 105-259 (b) (1) allows disclosure [redacted]urt order in these circumstances, (b) (2) allows disclosure to the AG or his representative which is also available [redacted]since the AG designee is our counsel, and (b) (15a) would also apply thru the AG and SBI. These exceptions I think are clearly contemplated in the 120-19, 120-102.1 scheme and there is no bar in my view to the Joint Committee obtaining the records under one or all of these 105-259 exceptions. Third, I am convinced that DOR can, with some minimum effort, determine which tax return belongs to a Thomas Wright in Wilmington who is a state rep. without reference to a SSN so that issue really should as a practical matter be moot. Fourth, para. 3 of your note is now moot since we are past the holidays. Fifth, I agree on the need to meet, but believe that can be by conference call. Finally, I think the tax records can tell us a great deal--as Rep. Stam has suggested, we know Rep. Wright's leg salary b/t 2001-06 . He is accused of receiving another 350K of income. Even if the state returns are not itemized, we will probably be able to tell if income of that magnitude was reported or not. If he reported a large amount of income, that may end our ability to investigate the matter without federal records, but if it was not, then we legitimately have an issue to look at. Either way, I think it is worth pursuing. My vote would be for staff and committee counsel to pursue this issue as the LEC has discussed and twice now authorized. I will forward these comments to Senator Clodfelter for his review and decision. Take care and many thanks for all of the work on this. Happy New Year to you and your family. Rick

1. I would like to get a short memo on any caselaw, in any context, that exists (federal or state) on the public's right to integrity of the legislative process and of the legislature; a representative's constituents' right to the opportunity for fair, full and effective representation–that is the district's right to be represented; and the House of Representatives' (or any legislative body) right to determine for itself the basic ethical standards of its members. I am asking for this research in anticipation of an argument that the only right at issue here is Rep. Wright's Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial and all other rights must cede to it, which strikes me at first glance as an incomplete and unbalanced look at all of the rights involved here.

2. Second, please create a notebook for me of the following materials: In re Chapman, 166 U.S. 661 (1897); Powell v McCormack, 395 U.S. 486 (1969) as well as all of the Circuit court opinions in the case, including the concurring opinion by Judge McGowan; United States v. Rose, 28 F.3d 181 (D.C.Cir. 1994); Justice Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States, Vol. II, Sections 835 and 836 (Boston 1883); Cushing, The Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies, pp. 250-270 (Boston 1874); and 29 Syracuse Law Review 1071 (1978).

Rick, Here's the relevance; We know exactly what his legislative salary has been 2001-2006 because it is the same as yours. He's accused of receiving another 350k of income. Even if the state returns are not itemized I think that you will be able to tell if he is reporting additional income of the magnitude. On the other hand if he is reporting large sums as income, you won't necessarily know the source. Skip I'm betting on the former as a probability. Skip

Subject: LEC Subpoena for Wright's tax records

Rep. Glazier and Sen. Clodfelter - I wanted to update you on the status of obtaining Wright's tax records. I've been working with Alec Peters, who has been working with the DOR's attorney, Bill and Grayson Kelly. We have been working towards obtaining the information in time for a LEC meeting on 1/3, but have also encountered several issues that make that date problematic.

1. What authority would a judge have to order DOR to release the records to the LEC? DOR is concerned that language in 120-19 and 120-102.1(b) prohibit the General Assembly from obtaining tax records. Those statutes have language to the effect that notwithstanding any other law, agencies shall provide information to committees of the General Assembly, except for tax records and subject to 105-259. Although 105-259 allows DOR to release tax records in response to a court order, they believe the "notwithstanding" language may preclude the court from making that order.

2. Wright's Social Security Number - DOR has indicated that it needs Wrights SSN in order to be sure it is releasing the correct information in the event it has the authority to do so. Although the General Assembly has Wright's SSN, we are concerned that b/c it is part of his personnel file, there are significant restrictions on GA administrative staff from releasing it. We also believe it would be a conflict of interest for us to advise GA administrative staff on this matter given that we are staffing the committee that is seeking the information. I have explained this to Alec and asked that the AG's State Personnel attorneys look at this and advise our administrative staff. We are trying to think of some public source where we can get the information.

3. Logistics of executing the subpoena - G.S. 120-19.2 allows a GA committee to issue a subpoena, but only if authorized by both the Speaker and President Pro Tempore, both cochairs, and in this case, a judge. Tracking down Basnight, Hackney, each of you and a Superior Court Judge during the holidays is possible, but has its challenges.

Does the LEC have to hold a meeting to receive the documents? Based upon the language in the statutes and also the language in the subpoena that the Legislative Services Commission has adopted (and we must use), it appears that the LEC must hold a meeting even if its just for the purpose of the delivery of documents. While we can do this via telephone conference, arrangements will need to be made for that.

5. What will the DOR tax records tell us? We have had some brief conversations with the DOR attorneys who have raised concerns that the State tax records are based on the federal filings. As a result, the State does not get W-2s or other documentation of income. While the State has access to some federal records, DOR did not think the W-2s, etc. are documents that the feds generally save.

So, at this point, Alec and Bill are meeting with Grayson Kelly this afternoon to try and work these things out. One possibility that is being discussed is whether Bill and Alec could be added to the list of AG designees who are authorized under 105-259 to review tax records. While they could not inform the committee of what they see, they could make a judgment about the returns' probative value and whether it is worth the LEC's time to push forward with a subpoena. We will keep you posted.

I'll be in the office tomorrow (Friday) if you have any questions.

Kory

File - Wright Ethics Committee

Representative Glazier,

Walker Reagan has sent me proposed dates for action by the House Special Ethics Committee. I am concerned that those dates may be somewhat ambitious. Colon Willoughby has not yet decided whether he will allow us to have copies of the SBI reports. We will be able to talk with the Agents, but that review may take some time, and there may be additional information that we may need to flesh out any action that taken under the auspices of Representative Wright's position as a Legislator. I'm concerned about how much we will be able to present on January 3rd. I'm more concerned about the dates after that and our ability to prepare the information needed to present in a full hearing. I'd be glad to talk about this with you at your convenience.

FYI and Skip and I will keep you informed of all critical correspondence. I also want to alert you to a likely schedule for the next several weeks and will try to keep it to a minimum of travel for the holiday break. Staff will be working through the weekend on a draft of rules of operation for the committee for us to review asap next week. Staff will circulate to all of us as soon as a draft is available. I will be checking with all of you on schedules for Tuesday, but right now, will likely call a conference call meeting of all of us late that afternoon to discuss the rules and adopt them. In addition, we will have to consider authorizing counsel to investigate any charges we wish reviewed consistent with our charge. AG Counsel from Joint Ethics were requested by the Speaker today to serve as counsel for our committee as well. I believe that was approved by the AG, but have not heard for certain. Counsel and staff will work on possible investigation authorization language. We will also have to adopt a tentative schedule. I have suggested some dates today with staff and they are running the dates and numbers this weekend so we can decide in our conference call. Several reminders to all of us are probably in order. First, unlike Joint Ethics, our committee will operate fully in [redacted]ic–even our conference call, from which I will place with public notice likely from either Room 544 or 643. Second, [redacted] are still proceedings in Joint Ethics that are private and not public until the hearing date so please as best as [redacted]ible differentiate correspondence for the two meetings. Any information on the House Committee alone will be available to the public; not necessarily so on the Joint correspondence. In that vein, it is totally your choice, but you may want to limit any comments on even the House Committee's work except to acknowledge schedule and defer substantive questions to counsel, the Chair or Vice Chair. Third, all of us need to remember we are only in the preliminary investigative stage of the House Committee and although we are likely to be on a track that moves with all deliberate speed consistent with due process, we are several steps behind the Joint Committee at this point. Fourth, attached is the staff appointments' correspondence. From the amount and quality of staff, you can see the leadership and Leg Services committment to provide us all the resources we need to do this very difficult and I anticipate time consuming task to the best of our ability–please, please feel free to call on them whenever needed or if you can not reach me or Skip or have any questions about anything we are doing or having to decide. Fifth, I have also asked staff to begin legal research on several early issues we may confront. They have worked most of the day on our Committee work and I suspect will be giving up most of next week and even some of the holiday break to get the Committee in a position to act expeditiously and fairly as is our charge. The same will be true of Alec and Bill and all of their work is tremendously appreciated. Sixth, Rep. Wright was given his initial appearance today in Raleigh on the criminal charges and released on bond. I do not know of counsel appointment or retention. Finally, I know I can get this from staff, but would really appreciate it if everyone can e-mail me their home and cell numbers over the weekend or whatever number would be easiest to get you during the time we are not in Raleigh over the next 8 weeks or so. Thanks so very much for assuming this responsibility and I will try to do all I can to limit the number of meetings we must have and to provide all of the assistance you want or need to help in the decisions we will have to make together. Take good care and have a great weekend. Rick

NOTICE OF CHARGES OF UNETHICAL CONDUCT BY REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS E. WRIGHT

Draft

The Legislative Ethics Committee, having convened for hearing on the report of preliminary investigative findings on questions of possible criminal and/or unethical conduct, hereby finds that there is sufficient basis to believe that Representative Thomas E. Wright has engaged in unethical conduct during his tenure as a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives by committing the following acts:

COUNT 1 Adopted unanimously by vote

Between on or about March 13, 2002 and on or about March 15, 2002, while a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, Thomas E. Wright did orally and in writing improperly and unethically solicit Torlen L. Wade, Acting Director of the North Carolina Department of Health and Human Services Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development, to write and mail to him a fraudulent letter stating that such Office was endorsing the Community Health Foundation's project to convert a building located on the 900 block of 4th Street in Wilmington, North Carolina into Community Health Foundation offices, New Hanover Community Health Center offices, and a History Museum and committing $150,000.00 in funding toward the completion of that project. At the time of the solicitation, Thomas E. Wright was the Chairman of the Community Health Foundation, Inc., located at 322 South 17th Street in Wilmington, North Carolina. Thomas E. Wright confirmed his earlier oral solicitation by having his legislative assistant type the necessary details needed in the commitment letter in an e-mail that was sent to Torlen L. Wade by use of his State e-mail account and on a State computer, both of which were authorized for him based on his position as a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives. At the time of the oral solicitation, the typing and sending of the e-mail, and the typing and sending of the Torlen L. Wade letter, both Thomas E. Wright and Torlen L. Wade knew that the Office of Rural Health would not make such a grant and that Thomas E. Wright would use the letter in seeking to fraudulently obtain funding for the Community Health Foundation from other sources such as financial institutions and other organizations that make grants and that would believe and rely on the false representations in Torlen L. Wade's letter.

COUNT 2 Not adopted

Between on or about July 1, 2000 and on or about May 31, 2007, while a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, Thomas E. Wright did apply for, receive, and keep reimbursement funds in the total amount of $1,404.71 from the State of North Carolina, through the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) and the General Assembly, that he was not entitled to under the laws and rules related to reimbursement of Legislators. Those improper reimbursements, as outlined in the attached spread sheet include the following:

1. eight instances where Representative Wright received subsistence and/or mileage reimbursement from DHHS as well as from the General Assembly for the same time period;

2. two instances where Representative Wright received subsistence ($104/day) reimbursement from DHHS although the Office of Minority Health and Health Disparities paid for his lodging directly;

3. two instances where Representative Wright appears to have claimed excessive mileage (380 miles) reimbursement for attending Minority Health Advisory Council meetings in Raleigh;

4. one instance where Representative Wright received excess reimbursement when he submitted two different mileage reimbursement requests for attending the same Public Health Task Force meeting.

We will start working on these things tomorrow. Some we may want to include Bill and Alec since they will be handling the legal arguments with Wright's counsel and will be representing the Committee before the court if necessary.

I have had problems getting online today but have gotten ISD to fix the problem for me now. My wife and I have a dinner party related to her work in Farrington Village tonight at 6:30 p.m. After we get back from the dinner, I will work on the final staff revisions to the suggested rules and will get them to you tonight. I would love to get your OK on these before sending them to the Committee members tomorrow. We can also work on editing tomorrow and even more on Tuesday if necessary.

I agree with you that the most important issue we need to help the Committee with is what constitutes conduct for which a person can be expelled. I think the evidence will speak for itself and probably will not be in great dispute, but how the GA should view that evidence in light of the constitutional tests of what disqualifies an elected member from continuing to serve is the real question. The second most important thing to do is to be sure that we provide all the minimal due process protections so the Supreme Court will not be willing to issue a stay against the House's expulsion. If there is a reasonable dispute as to whether fundamental due process has been provided for I think Wright has a better chance for the courts to slow this down to think about it. I want to encourage you to do this in such a way that it is a no-brainer.

Is Carin coming in tomorrow? We need to work with her on the meeting notice which will be slightly different since the meeting will be done by teleconference.

I will be back in touch later tonight. Thanks.

First, a note of thanks for all of your work to date and in the future on this committee. You will not hear thanks from many on this task except those involved on the committee, so store it away for those days when thanks should be expressed by many, but was not. Second, for Tuesday, Walker if you and staff could talk by phone with each member of the committee as you suggested and remind them, including me, of any protocol needed for public session telephone conference calls that would be most appreciated. Third, in your e-mail out to all the members, please remind them to have a copy of the rules you send in front of them for the conference. Fourth, not for this meeting, but I would like to get lined up a list of court reporters who would be available and willing to record and transcribe all proceedings in this case--any hearing where counsel or Rep. Wright are involved and that will include any meetings with just the chair for [redacted]relim matters if counsel or Wright are involved. One condition is that I would like to get next day transcript of any [redacted]ntiary hearings so that will need to be included in their consideration and price. As soon as we set dates with [redacted]idence, I will want to lock a reporter in and also can we just hire, do we go thru LSC, etc.... Fourth, I would like to survey thru NCSL or otherwise, and know if any other states have conducted a similar ethics inquiry at this level that might have led, and those that did lead, to a recommendation of a legislator's removal. I would like a copy of any official docs and procedures from those states if they exist and are available or a summary from y'all of those proceedings. I am particularly looking for what factors any state has used for determining recommendation as to punishment in these cases.; that is, how does one decide objectively whether censure is appropriate, or removal; or something in between. Fifth, I would like a summary of the law on Rep. Wright's Fifth Amendment protections in our context as it relates to cross examination if he takes the stand so to speak; the panel asking him questions; and advice I must give him before any of the proceedings to make certain he is informed of those rights. Sixth, what should be the defintion of relevancy in these proceedings and, for that matter, do the proceedings have to follow the rules of evidence or, even if not, should they as a practical matter, and if they should, which rules? Seventh, what is our subpoena power over persons and documents? Thanks very much. Rick

FROM: Assistant Special Agent in Charge J. E. Umphlet

SUBJECT: Attempted Service of Legislative Ethics Paperwork

On Thursday, December 13, 2007, State Bureau of Investigation (SBI) Assistant Special Agent in Charge (ASAC) J. E. Umphlet was requested through SBI Assistant Director E. A. Hooks to serve administrative Legislative Ethics Committee paperwork on Representative Thomas Wright. On Friday, December 14, 2007, ASAC Umphlet obtained the required paperwork from your office through ASAC M. A. DeSilva.

On Friday, December 14, 2007, at approximately 11:30 am, ASAC Umphlet attempted to serve Representative Wright with the Legislative paperwork during the period of time Representative Wright was being served with an order for his arrest. Representative Wright refused to take the paperwork after learning the paperwork was from the Legislative Ethics Committee. ASAC Umphlet made several attempts to hand the paperwork to Representative Wright, at which Wright advised that he would not accept the paperwork from ASAC Umphlet and that the Legislative Committee could either mail him the paperwork or hand it to him in person. Representative Wright advised he did not want to involve ASAC Umphlet in the process. As a result the paperwork was not handed to Representative Wright, but was returned to your office on the same date.

Wright pleading not guilty, attorney tells judge

[redacted]id Ingram, The Charlotte Observer

RALEIGH - An attorney for state Rep. Thomas Wright told a judge today that Wright is pleading not guilty to charges that he took $350,000 from banks, corporations and campaign contributors.

"He is pleading not guilty to all charges. He has read all the charges against him," the attorney, Douglas Harris, told Judge Donald Stephens of Wake Superior Court in a hearing.

Wright, a Wilmington Democrat, is charged with five felony counts of obtaining property by false pretenses and one felony count of obstruction of justice. He is the latest N.C. legislator to be caught up in a corruption probe that led to the conviction of former House Speaker Jim Black, a Mecklenburg County Democrat.

A Wake County grand jury indicted Wright last month after a yearlong investigation.

Harris said a criminal trial could come this summer. He also said that Wright plans to run for re-election this year and will fight the threat of expulsion by House colleagues.

"I spent all of New Year's Day eating greens and black-eyed peas and looking through two boxes of documents. I believe that Thomas Wright is innocent," Harris said.

Wright, who declined to comment today, has attributed the accusations to sloppy bookkeeping. Harris agreed.

"A lot of people don't do things as they should," he said, "and I think a lot of CPAs would attest to that."

A hearing for pretrial motions is expected in February.

Wright probe's fallout feared

Region's ties may hamper Raleigh efforts

State Rep. Thomas Wright's been stripped of his leadership positions in the General Assembly, the bills he supports get treated like hazardous waste, and he has largely gone underground.

But so far Wilmington and New Hanover County appear to have been spared most of the fallout from Wright's legal troubles.

The other members of the region's legislative delegation said they were able to massage through local bills and funding, such as those for the State Port and Wilmington's rickety sewer system, this year.

But with the criminal and legislative investigations against Wright expected to intensify in early 2008, officials fear the Cape Fear region could soon find itself in the cross hairs, a victim of simple association, if the Wilmington Democrat decides to aggressively fight the charges against him.

"It's given us, everybody, a black eye," said state Rep. Danny McComas, R-New Hanover. "It's affecting everybody."

Wilmington Mayor Bill Saffo said it has been made clear to him and others that, right or wrong, any legislation pushed by Wright won't be going anywhere.

"That's unfortunate," Saffo said. "But that's the nature of the beast."

Going public

While the first formal complaint against Wright was filed last December, the issue remained largely [redacted] of the public eye through the first half of 2007, overshadowed by the scandals surrounding [redacted]mer House Speaker Jim Black.

But this summer Wright's troubles burst into the spotlight when the N.C. State Board of Elections referred Wright's case to the Wake County district attorney. Earlier this month he was indicted on six felony charges of swindling banks, campaign donors and businesses out of nearly $350,000.

His fellow House members then moved swiftly to distance themselves from Wright, with two ethics committees launching investigations into his behavior.

They could end up recommending Wright's expulsion if they find he took part in unethical conduct, corruption and violations of the oath of office and "offenses injurious to the House."

If thrown out, he would become the first member of the General Assembly forced from office since 1880.

He also is facing as much as 11 years in prison if convicted on the criminal charges.

Wright, who didn't return calls to his home and office this week, has repeatedly proclaimed his innocence.

A man apart

Last winter, when other members of the local delegation huddled in Raleigh with state regulators to try to cobble together a solution to Wilmington's leaky sewer system, Wright was conspicuously absent.

He also was a no-show at a follow-up meeting in downtown Wilmington with city and county officials a month later.

State Rep. Carolyn Justice, a Republican who represents parts of New Hanover and Pender counties, said she personally invited Wright to participate in the discussions.

"But he declined, and I don't know why," she said, although Wright's well-known feud with state [redacted]en. Julia Boseman, D-New Hanover, might have played a role.

[redacted]at wasn't the first time Wright has been aloof from his fellow legislators.

But with legal storm clouds gathering around him, Wright has become more and more distant - and isolated.

Some feel that has carried over into how he's represented his district, which stretches from downtown Wilmington to Burgaw in Pender County.
[redacted] Councilwoman Laura Padgett, who ran against Wright in 2006, said Wilmington is already getting the cold shoulder from Raleigh because of Wright's legal woes.
"I wouldn't say it's a case of exclusion, but of omission more than anything else," she said.
In Raleigh, officials said most of the important legislation pertaining to Wilmington and New Hanover included in this year's long session passed.
McComas said that might have been because most of the major bills were already approved, or well on their way to Gov. Mike Easley's desk, when the serious allegations against Wright surfaced in the summer.

Short session concern

McComas and Justice both cautioned things could get even stickier in May, when the short session begins, if Wright is still in office.
In the upcoming session of the General Assembly, time is of the essence when trying to get legislation passed.
That means avoiding any bills that have a hint of controversy, and that requires having all members of the local delegation on board.
But McComas and Justice said they don't know how Wright will respond, whether positively or negatively, and how any actions will be viewed by the House leadership.
"We've got some major issues dealing with transportation, film incentives and state ports funding coming up," McComas said. "Hopefully, it won't affect any of that. But we just don't know."
Justice said she is pushing for transportation funding to study U.S. 17 through Pender County. The study would look at whether the fast-growing corridor needs to be turned into a "superstreet," similar to what the N.C. Department of Transportation did on U.S. 17 through Leland in Brunswick County.
[redacted] she said that means coordinating meetings with DOT and Pender officials - and with Wright.
[redacted]e initiative that appears to have lost steam this year is a suite of bills generated by the Wilmington Race Riot Commission, a body that was headed by Wright.
Although a resolution condemning the politically and racially charged attack was approved, other commission recommendations have languished. They include calls for additions to textbooks and new library programs.
But officials said the most visible move to recognize the stain on the Port City's history, the 1898 Memorial on North Third Street, is fully funded and under construction.
Another project in Wright's district that has suffered this year is the N.C. 53 Bypass around Burgaw.
That project was recently pushed back on the state's long-range transportation plan.
But Lanny Wilson, who represents the region on the N.C. Board of Transportation, said financial issues and the community's inability to coalesce around a single path for the proposed roadway caused the delay.
"Politics had nothing to do with that decision," he said.

Convention center

Ironically, Wright's legal woes could have actually energized Wilmington officials to jump-start one of the area's most controversial projects.
Wilmington City Council earlier this month held a ceremonial groundbreaking for the $60 million downtown riverfront convention center.
Although it would be built without an attached hotel, city leaders said it was time to move the project forward.
"We felt we needed to send a message to the private sector that we are serious about getting this [redacted]nvention center built," Saffo said.
[redacted] other forces also could have played a role in the decision.

The city faced a deadline next summer for starting construction to avoid risking the loss of room-tax funding for the project.

And while the convention center has been marketed as a regional asset, the project is in Wright's [redacted]trict, and he was one of the primary backers of the legislation allowing taxpayer funds to be [redacted]ed for it.

Similar deadlines have been extended before, Saffo said.

"But I felt personally that if we had to go back to Raleigh to extend the tax, we wouldn't have the support of the state legislature to do that," he said.

And, although he has remained largely out of the spotlight since his troubles came to a head, Wright did appear in public at the Dec. 3 groundbreaking for the center.

Mecklenburg pols split over Wright

THE SOURCE | POLITICS & PUBLIC LIFE IN THE CAROLINAS -- Mecklenburg pols split over Wright A week ago, state Rep. Jim Gulley, a Matthews Republican, called for the resignation of one of his colleagues. He said Rep. Thomas Wright, a Wilmington Democrat, should step down after being charged with six felonies for allegedly swindling $350,000 from corporations and his campaign fund.

Since then, The Source surveyed the other nine House members from Mecklenburg County and asked whether Wright should resign. The delegation is split.

Joining Gulley are three freshmen: Charlotte Democrat Tricia Cotham, Charlotte Republican Ric Killian and Huntersville Republican Thom Tillis.

"Very bad judgment was used," Tillis said, "and I don't want members in the General Assembly who use that kind of judgment, especially when it might affect public policy."

In disagreement are Charlotte Democrat Becky Carney, Charlotte Democrat Pete Cunningham and Huntersville Democrat Drew Saunders.

"We use that word very loosely -- `resign' -- no matter what comes out," Cunningham said. "Let's hear all the facts first and let the chips fall where they may."

Charlotte Republican Ruth Samuelson was in the middle. She said she hasn't given the issue much thought and wouldn't call for Wright to resign but, if pressed, would vote to expel him.

Charlotte Democrats Martha Alexander and Beverly Earle did not return calls.

Wright has rebuffed calls for him to quit. He has not yet entered a plea. -- David Ingram

Bishop says he lacked effectiveness

It's not often a politician admits he's not effective. But that's what Mecklenburg County commissioner Dan Bishop says in explaining why he won't run again next year.Bishop, 43, is calling it quits after two terms representing south Charlotte's District 5. He was part of a Republican minority.

"It's a good idea for people who have these district seats to move up or out," he says. "And I don't think I've been terribly effective as a member of that board. I'm not saying `mea culpa' really. But the things I'd like to see accomplished I'm not seeing done.

"I'm just saying another Republican might be able to lead Republicans to a majority."

Plus, he says, four years in politics goes a long way.

"I've had a good dose," he says. -- jim morrill

Hoyle says he'll run for another term

N.C. Sen. David Hoyle, the Gaston County Democrat who has managed to hang on to his Republican-leaning district, said he's up for another round. He will run for re-election next year.

Hoyle, 68 and serving his eighth term, had talked of retiring but said his work on education, transportation and economic development is unfinished. He is a co-chair of the finance committee, one of two critical money committees in the Senate, and remains a close ally of Senate President Pro Tem Marc Basnight. The two are roommates in Raleigh during the legislative session.

Republicans are expected to try and take the seat, and Hoyle seemed to be bracing for a tough campaign in a statement Friday.

"I will continue to run the type of positive campaign I have always run," he said, "because the people of Gaston County deserve a campaign about the issues, not about mudslinging." -- mark Johnson

Edwards offers a solution to bullying

Former U.S. Sen. John Edwards' stump speech on the presidential campaign trail focuses on the fight he wants to wage against special interests, such as health insurance companies and drug companies. He offers a variety of biographical nuggets to illustrate his readiness for such a confrontation, including a tale of getting beat up at age 4 or 5.Edwards tells crowds that his father sat him down and told him he should never start a fight, but that he should never walk away from one. Then he approvingly recalls his father's instructions:

"He said, `Tomorrow you go out and find that kid and kick his butt,' " Edwards tells voters.

U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Dole, R-N.C., has hired a manager for her 2008 re-election campaign.

Sam Daniels is expected to begin work in January, bringing experience from several other Southern GOP races. He worked for N.C. gubernatorial candidate Bill Cobey, Alabama Gov. Bob Riley and S.C. Gov. Mark Sanford. He also served as executive director of the S.C. Republican Party. -- David Ingram

He enjoys this kind of media

Gov. Mike Easley is to appear on PBS' "The Woodwright's Shop" on Dec. 29, though it's not scheduled to air in Charlotte.Easley taped the woodworking show in October. The show's creator and host, Roy Underhill, is a UNC Chapel Hill graduate who tapes the 28-year-old program at WUNC's studios in Research Triangle Park.

Rep. Wright appears in court

RALEIGH (AP) — State Representative Thomas Wright has been given two boxes of evidence that prosecutors collected in their criminal case against him.

Wake County District Attorney Colin Willoughby released the evidence during a court hearing Monday.

Wright has been charged with five felony counts for fraudulently obtaining $160,000 in bank loans and pocketing $185,000 meant for his campaign.

He declined comment after the hearing Monday. Another hearing is scheduled Friday.

Meanwhile, a panel of six House members will meet later this week to decide whether there's enough evidence to show that Wright may have participated in unethical or illegal conduct.

The committee could recommend to the entire chamber that Wright be censured or removed from office.

Wright disciplinary process begins

DAVID INGRAM

A legislative panel started proceedings Tuesday for the expulsion of state Rep. Thomas Wright, a Wilmington Democrat accused of taking $350,000 from corporations and his campaign fund.

The six members of the House select committee met for an hour and approved the rules they expect to follow over the next couple of months during what should be a historic proceeding. The General Assembly has not expelled a member since 1880.

Wright, 52, was indicted last week on six felony charges -- five counts of obtaining property by false pretenses and one count of obstruction of justice. He has said repeatedly he will not resign, despite calls from Gov. Mike Easley, House Speaker Joe Hackney and others to do so.

The committee voted 6-0 to adopt rules that allow it, by majority vote, to refer Wright's case to the full House for "appropriate action," including censure or expulsion. It is scheduled to meet again Jan. 3 to hear preliminary evidence and consider whether to have a full hearing.

"We have a sitting member who has been indicted on six charges, and besides the criminal process, the public has to have confidence in the ethics of the people who are governing them," said Rep. Rick Glazier, the committee's chair and a Fayetteville Democrat.

A top ally of former House Speaker Jim Black, a Matthews Democrat, Wright is the latest person to be indicted as part of sweeping state and federal investigations of corruption in Raleigh. Black, 72, resigned in February, pleaded guilty to corruption and is now serving a five-year federal prison term.

Wright did not attend Tuesday's hearing, did not appear to have a representative there and did not return a message from the Observer left on his mobile phone Tuesday. Rep. Paul Stam, vice chair and a Wake County Republican, said he did not know whether Wright had an attorney.

House begins Wright probe

Panel expedites action, hearing set for Jan. 3

Raleigh | The meeting was rather mundane, covering the processes and procedures the committee would follow in investigating the alleged infractions.

Housekeeping, to put it nicely, by the House Select Committee to Investigate Alleged Misconduct/Other Matters Included in Indictments against Rep. Thomas Wright.

But the message was clear, even if little actual action was taken Tuesday.

The House was taking the matter seriously, and moving swiftly to investigate the charges against one of its own.

State Rep. Rick Glazier, D-Cumberland, said House Speaker Jim Hackney had made it clear that he wants the Wright matter "expedited."

That, in part, prompted the committee to set a Jan. 3 date for the hearing to determine probable cause, which would allow officials to move the investigation forward.

Although only two weeks and two big holidays away, Glazier said it would be enough time because the indictments had already been researched by Wake County officials and the State Bureau of Investigation.

Wright, D-New Hanover, was indicted earlier this month by a Wake County grand jury on six felony charges. The most serious included using a fraudulent grant letter to secure a $150,000 loan and misusing up to $185,000 in campaign funds.

[redacted]right has continued to proclaim that he is innocent of the charges and has refused to [redacted]sign from the House.

The six-member special legislative committee, with the mouthful of a name, was cobbled together Dec. 12 to investigate the charges against Wright.

That was two days after Wright was indicted, and a day before the Wilmington Democrat turned himself in to authorities and was released on a $50,000 unsecured bond.

The six committee members are the same six House members who serve on the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee, which is conducting its own investigation of Wright.

The House select committee will consider the indictments under the law in effect prior to January, because the alleged infractions occurred before stiffer rules were enacted this year in the wake of the corruption scandal that engulfed former House Speaker Jim Black.

Wright was a trusted ally of Black, who is now serving a 60-month sentence in a federal work camp after pleading guilty to a political corruption charge.

The committee eventually will make a recommendation to the rest of the House on whether sanctions, up to and including expulsion, are warranted against Wright.

Under state law, the General Assembly is the judge of its own members. That means the House can discipline its members for violation of its rules, including unethical conduct, corruption and violations of the oath of office and "offenses injurious to the House."

Glazier said it's important that the public have confidence in the ethics and conduct of the people who are serving.

But that doesn't make the committee's work easy, said state Rep. Paul Stam, R-Wake and vice chairman of the committee.

"It's unpleasant and sad," the House minority leader said of having to investigate the potential misdeeds of someone he's worked with for years.

[redacted]Wright is expelled by his fellow legislators, it would represent the first time a sitting representative has been forced from the General Assembly since 1880.

Wright didn't attend Tuesday's meeting.
But Glazier said he was invited.
"He received a notice of this hearing like every member of this House," Glazier said, "and he is still a member of this House."

THE OBSERVER'S EDITORIALS

MORE MENDING

Our View: More news of political corruption shows need for further reform.

A flurry of corruption-related stories this week reminds us that the ethics reforms that began in the General Assembly this year are only that — a beginning.

The indictment of Rep. Thomas Wright — a New Hanover County Democrat and close associate of jailed former Speaker Jim Black — was another piece of expected fallout from Black's own political demise.

But there was more, and when the pieces are viewed together, it's clear that the reforms initiated under new House Speaker Joe Hackney need to go further.

Out in Asheville, former Buncombe County Sheriff Bobby Medford and three of his former deputies were indicted on charges that they took money to protect an illegal video-poker ring in western North Carolina. Despite its being banned from this state, there is still plenty of video poker money floating around. As reformer Joe Sinsheimer — the watchdog who brought Black down — points out, the former speaker was "the video poker industry's legislative sugar daddy." Further, "thirty-seven different members of the House Democratic Caucus accepted $86,000 in contributions from the video poker industry in 2003-2005 and served as Jim Black's enablers in this scandal."

And speaking of Jim Black, Wake County District Attorney Colon Willoughby said Wednesday that the State Bureau of Investigation is looking into state contracts awarded to Black's son, Jon, whose pest-control company did work at three state prisons, despite charging three times more than the lowest bidder. A former project manager says he was ordered to hire Black at the behest of an unnamed lawmaker.

Sinsheimer says, "If the General Assembly is serious about putting this era behind us, they should use the upcoming February 2008 special session ... to pass a law allowing investigative grand jury powers in political corruption cases." Attorney General Roy Cooper and Wake DA Willoughby have both urged the passage of such a law.

Legislators made great strides in ethics reform in this year's session, and the February public hearings by the Legislative Ethics Committee on the Wright case are compelling evidence of a new era in Raleigh. But there is much work to be done. We hope lawmakers will attend to it, as a top priority, in their next session.

State Rep. Thomas Wright turns himself in RALEIGH — State Rep. Thomas Wright appeared before a Wake County magistrate Friday on six felony charges of illegally obtaining or misusing more than $350,000.

Wright, 52, was released on a $50,000 unsecured bond, and his next court appearance is Dec. 31, according to the Wake County Magistrate's Office. Prosecutors accuse Wright of fraudulently obtaining $160,000 in bank loans for a foundation he led in Wilmington and for converting $185,000 in campaign contributions to his personal use.

"You would have thought I had murdered somebody, wouldn't you?" he quipped as he left the county's public safety center surrounded by cameras.

Wright

A grand jury indicted Wright this week on five counts of obtaining property by false pretense and a sixth on obstruction of justice. If convicted on all counts, he could face up to 11 years in prison.

Two legislative committees are investigating his actions, raising the possibility that the House could remove him from office in a vote. The legislature hasn't removed a lawmaker since 1880.

Wright, an eight-term Democratic lawmaker from Wilmington, refused to resign his seat despite calls to do so by House Speaker Joe Hackney and Gov. Mike Easley back in May, when the State Board of Elections referred Wright's case to prosecutors after a public hearing.

Wright is accused of persuading a state health administrator in 2002 to write a letter to a bank about a fake grant, which helped him get a $150,000 loan for a community health foundation he chaired.

Prosecutors also said Wright used $9,980 from a line of credit at a credit union for himself even though it was for the foundation. He also hid campaign contributions and took $8,900 from three companies that believed the money would be used for the foundation's charitable work, according to the indictment.

Hackney said Wednesday the joint Legislative Ethics Committee would hold a public hearing in February to look into allegations that Wright misused his office to obtain a bank loan. The hearing would give Wright a chance to respond to the allegations and call witnesses.

A separate House committee created by Hackney late Thursday will review only the specific allegations made in the indictments.

Both committees could recommend the House censure Wright or remove him from office. If that occurs, the full House would vote on a punishment.

Wright to face hearing before ethics panel

A bad week for state Rep. Thomas Wright got worse Wednesday as House Speaker Joe Hackney said the Legislative Ethics Committee had found enough evidence against the lawmaker to hold a public hearing on charges against him.

Wright already is facing a bruising court battle after being indicted Monday on five counts of obtaining property by false pretense and one count of obstructing justice. Now he will have to fight against being punished by fellow lawmakers, whose options could include expulsion.

Hackney said the ethics committee probably will meet in February, allowing both sides to present evidence. Any punishment would require a vote of the full House, which would not usually convene until May.

But in a sign of Wright's increasingly precarious position, Gov. Mike Easley said Wednesday he was willing to call a special session of the General Assembly to deal with the Wright situation. Easley previously called on Wright, a fellow Democrat, to resign, part of a chorus of similar voices that includes the New Hanover County Democratic Party.

Both the criminal trial and the ethics investigation are rooted in an N.C. State Board of Elections investigation into campaign finance records. The most serious charges allege that Wright used a state grant letter to fraudulently obtain a $150,000 bank loan and that he pocketed $185,000 in campaign contributions for his personal benefit.

The results of either the ethics or the criminal investigation could cost Wright the job he has held for 15 years. Legislators may vote to remove Wright, who would lose his position anyway if he's found guilty of a felony.

Wright didn't return messages left Wednesday on his cell phone.

His declining fortunes are turning attention to who would replace him. In the event of a vacancy, his replacement would be voted on by the District 18 committee, four previously appointed representatives from the New Hanover and Pender chapters of the Democratic Party. Wright's district covers parts of both counties.

Pete Cowan, one of the representatives, said he accepted his appointment to the committee several years ago without thinking he'd ever have to do anything.

At the time, the odds of having to replace the area's senior legislator seemed long indeed, said Cowan, who is mayor of Burgaw.

But suddenly it seems the holders of the usually ceremonial positions might soon have to take action, he said.

"It's just starting to sink in," said Cowan, who said any decision would be made in consultation with other party members. "We'll have to give it some serious thought."

Reese Smith, a retired longshoreman who is one of the New Hanover representatives, said he never expected things to go so far. He is a Wright supporter who hasn't thought much about a replacement.

"Let the system play out and then if I've got to make a decision, I'll make a decision," he said.

James Faison, who stepped down as chairman of the Pender County Democratic Party in May, is the other Pender representative. He said the group would look for someone who wants to hold the position past next year's election. It's not a perfect way of naming a replacement, he said, but it's the best way he knows.

Lynn McIntyre is the other New Hanover County representative on the committee.

Another indictment

A Wake County grand jury has made appalling but not unexpected news. It has indicted state Rep. Thomas Wright, once a key aide of former N.C. House Speaker Jim Black, on five charges of cheating banks, corporations and political contributors out of $350,000. In doing so he helped rob the people of North Carolina of their trust in elected government and contributed to the state's growing reputation for corruption in public office.

In our system of justice, of course, Rep. Wright is entitled to a strong defense on the charges of false pretences and obstruction of justice, which could bring him a prison term of about 11 years. But the House judges its members' fitness to serve. There's no need to wait for the legal process to run its course before concluding he no longer deserves to hold his seat in the N.C. House of Representatives, where he once chaired the health committee and cochaired the powerful budget committee.

House Speaker Joe Hackney, who succeeded Jim Black and has called for Rep. Wright's resignation, at first reacted with restraint to the news. "It's disappointing anytime an elected official is accused of wrongdoing, but the allegations in this case date back several years and don't reflect on the many good things we did this past legislative session," he said. He later said the House likely will return for a special session to consider expulsion after February hearings on allegations against Rep. Wright.

Speaker Hackney is right that Rep. Wright's offenses must be resolved quickly by the House. The speaker was overly patient in acquiescing in the request of the Wake County district attorney to wait while state investigators were probing Rep. Wright's activities. Rep. Wright's recent record, and findings by the State Board of Elections last spring, clearly define him as a huckster, a swindler and a public predator willing to take whatever financial advantage he can from his position.

Among other things, he failed to report nearly $200,000 in contributions, spent $185,000 in contributions for personal use and talked a state employee into writing a bogus letter about forthcoming state funds so that a foundation he headed could get a $150,000 bank loan that was never repaid. He also walked off with a $10,000 credit union loan meant for the foundation, the grand jury charged. These constitute a disgraceful performance.

That's why the House must move swiftly to expel Rep. Wright. The Legislative Ethics Committee gave Wake District Attorney Colon Willoughby plenty of time to perform a thorough investigation of Mr. Wright so its own inquiry would not complicate the Wake County grand jury's job. But the House has had plenty of information upon which to judge Rep. Wright's fitness for public office.

Mr. Wright is entitled to a presumption of innocence in the courtroom. But there's ample evidence to establish that he no longer deserves to remain a member of the General Assembly.

The year 2008 has opened in Raleigh with some lingering unpleasant business left over from 2007 — the case of Rep. Thomas Wright, D-New Hanover.

The ethics accusations leveled against Wright are serious, with allegations he hoodwinked campaign contributors, banks and corporations out of $350,000. Calls for the eight-term representative to step down reached a crescendo last spring, when fellow Democrats Gov. Mike Easley and House Speaker Joe Hackney suggested he head for the exit.

Given the fact Wright was indicted last month on an obstruction of justice charge and five charges of obtaining property by false pretenses, we see no reason why that assessment should change.

On Monday Wright appeared in a Raleigh courtroom to answer to the charges. Even that short appearance added an additional layer of contention to the saga: His lawyer didn't appear with him. (Wright said he was at a trial). Judge Donald Stephens ordered the lawyer, Douglas Harris, to appear Friday, saying, "I want a lawyer here to stand before me and tell me he represents Mr. Wright."

Wright is the focus of two legislative committees. A House group is looking at the criminal charges leveled against Wright; a House-Senate committee is also probing Wright. Either committee could issue a recommendation to the House calling for Wright's censure or removal.

In a nutshell, the charges against Wright go like this: He allegedly spent nearly a quarter of a million dollars in campaign contributions for personal purposes over six years. Additionally, Wright is said to have asked a prominent state official to write a letter saying a historic building would receive a state grant of $150,000. (No such grant existed). A community health foundation headed by Wright in Wilmington was to turn the building into a museum commemorating the horrific race riots of 1898. The letter noting a grant that didn't exist was used to get a bank loan, which in turn wasn't repaid, and subsequently the building went into foreclosure.

Prison time possible

If Wright is convicted on all the charges he faces, he could be in prison a very long time. As it is, he hasn't even effectively responded to them publicly, despite being under an ethical cloud for a couple of years. The episode is a reminder of ethical woes in some corners of state government that have been all-too evident for years, scandals that have taken down a one-time agriculture commissioner and House speaker.

The reminders of that speaker, Jim Black, are not surprising. Wright was an ally and defender of Black when he faced ethical charges, and Black overstayed his welcome in state government.

It's possible Wright can see his name cleared, but it doesn't seem possible he can effectively represent his constituents.

Gary Robertson of The Associated Press reported State Sen. Julia Boseman, D-New Hanover, told television on WECT the Wright case "... is a disgrace for North Carolina. It's a disgrace for Wilmington. I wish he would step down so we could have somebody in there who could help us."

If Wright doesn't do his constituents right, it's up to the House to do it for them. In North Carolina, a House member hasn't been kicked out since 1880.

2008 may be the time to see that streak end.
