

Report to the Joint Utility Review Committee
(Commission on Governmental Operations)

The State of Windstream North Carolina's Operations
In an Open and Competitive Retail Market

January 22, 2015

Background

On July 25, 2012, Windstream North Carolina, LLC, Windstream Concord, Inc. and Windstream Lexcom, Inc. (collectively “Windstream”) elected to be regulated pursuant to N.C.G.S. §62.-133.5(h). In its notification to the North Carolina Utilities Commission (“NCUC”), Windstream stated that its territory was open to competition and that it would (1) continue to offer stand alone basic residential service at rates less or comparable to those rates charged to urban customers for the same service; (2) commit to continue offering stand alone basic residential service; and (3) in the event that stand alone basic residential rates are increased, they will not increase by an amount that exceeds the percentage increase in the Gross Domestic Product Price Index from the previous year.

Pursuant to N.C.G.S. §62.-133.5(k), Windstream is required to file an annual report with the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations analyzing the level of telecommunications competition, an analysis of the service quality and an analysis of the rate levels since Windstream’s election.

Analysis of Telecommunications Competition in North Carolina

The telecommunications marketplace is vibrant in North Carolina. Customers have multiple choices for their telecommunications services including ILECs, CLECs, cable companies, over the top VoIP providers and wireless. As a result of such competition, as of December 31, 2013 Windstream had approximately 220,000 access lines a declined of 8.5% over the previous year.

- Total wireless connections in North Carolina totaled approximately 9.02 million by December 31, 2013.¹
- As of December 2013, approximately 39% of U.S. households rely solely on wireless service for their communications needs and 16% are ‘wireless mostly’.²
- Broadband connections in North Carolina increased approximately 11% December 31, 2012 versus December 31, 2013 and by December 31, 2013; total broadband connections in the state totaled approximately 8.3 million.³
- Approximately 44% of end user lines in the state are served by competitive local exchange carriers.⁴

Quality of Service

In order to remain competitive and retain its customer base, Windstream strives to provide high quality services to its customers. This is evidenced by the low number of service related complaints filed with the Commission or the FCC. In addition, we strive to minimize the number of outages and improve the reliability of our services.

- In 2013, Windstream customers filed two (2) service related complaints with the Commission and in 2014; Windstream customers filed four (4) service related complaints with the Commission.
- In 2013, Windstream customers filed four (4) service related complaints with the FCC and in 2014; Windstream customers only filed one (1) service related complaint with the FCC.⁵

Rate Analysis
