different ways. Under subsection (a), a secured party may assign all of its power to affect a financing statement by naming an assignee in the initial financing statement. The secured party of record may accomplish the same result under subsection (b) by making a subsequent filing. Subsection (b) also may be used for an assignment of only some of the secured party of record's power to affect a financing statement, e.g., the power to affect the financing statement as it relates to particular items of collateral or as it relates to an undivided interest in a security interest in all the collateral. An initial financing statement may not be used to change the secured party of record under these circumstances. However, an amendment adding the assignee as a secured party of record may be used.

§ 25-9-515. Duration and effectiveness of financing statement; effect of lapsed financing statement.

(a) Five-year effectiveness. — Except as otherwise provided in subsections (b), (e), (f), and (g) of this section, a filed financing statement is effective for a period of five years after the date of filing.

(b) Public-finance or manufactured-home transaction. — Except as otherwise provided in subsections (e), (f), and (g) of this section, an initial financing statement filed in connection with a public-finance transaction or manufactured-home transaction is effective for a period of 30 years after the date of filing if it indicates that it is filed in connection with a public-finance transaction or manufactured-home transaction.

(c) Lapse and continuation of financing statement. — The effectiveness of a filed financing statement lapses on the expiration of the period of its effectiveness unless before the lapse a continuation statement is filed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section. Upon lapse, a financing statement ceases to be effective and any security interest or agricultural lien that was perfected by the financing statement becomes unperfected, unless the security interest is perfected otherwise. If the security interest or agricultural lien becomes unperfected upon lapse, it is deemed never to have been perfected as against a purchaser of the collateral for value.

(d) When continuation statement may be filed. — A continuation statement may be filed only within six months before the expiration of the five-year period specified in subsection (a) of this section or the 30-year period specified in subsection (b) of this section, whichever is applicable.

(e) Effect of filing continuation statement. — Except as otherwise provided in G.S. 25-9-510, upon timely filing of a continuation statement, the effectiveness of the initial financing statement continues for a period of five years commencing on the day on which the financing statement would have become ineffective in the absence of the filing. Upon the expiration of the five-year period, the financing statement lapses in the same manner as provided in subsection (c) of this section, unless, before the lapse, another continuation statement is filed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section. Succeeding continuation statements may be filed in the same manner to continue the effectiveness of the initial financing statement.

(f) Transmitting utility financing statement. — If a debtor is a transmitting utility and a filed financing statement so indicates, the financing statement is effective until a termination statement is filed.

(g) Record of mortgage as financing statement. — A record of a mortgage that is effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing under G.S. 25-9-502(c) remains effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing until the mortgage is released or satisfied of record or its effectiveness otherwise terminates as to the real property. (1866-7, c. 1, s. 1; 1872-3, c. 133, s. 1; Code, s. 1799; 1893, c. 9; Rev., s. 2052; C.S., s. 2480; 1925, c. 302, s. 1; 1927, c. 22; 1935, c. 205; 1945, c. 182, ss. 2, 4; c. 196, s. 2; 1955, c. 386, ss. 1, 2; c. 816; 1957, cc. 564, 999; 1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1967, c. 562, s. 1; 1969, c. 1115, s. 1; 1971, c. 1170; 1973, c. 1316, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 1977, cc. 156, 295; 1983, c. 713, s. 23; 1987, c. 792, s. 6; 1989, c. 523, s. 4; 1991, c. 164, s. 1; 1997-456, s. 55.3; 1997-475, s. 5.4; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-403(2), (3), and (6).

2. Period of Financing Statement's Effectiveness. Subsection (a) states the general rule: A financing statement is effective for a five-year period unless its effectiveness is continued under this section or terminated under section 9-513. Subsection (b) provides that if the financing statement relates to a public-finance transaction or a manufactured-home transaction and so indicates, the financing statement is effective for 30 years. These financings typically extend well beyond the standard, five-year period. Under subsection (f), a financing statement filed against a transmitting utility remains effective indefinitely, until a termination statement is filed. Likewise, under subsection (g), a mortgage effective as a fixture filing remains effective until its effectiveness terminates under real property law.

3. Lapse. When the period of effectiveness under subsection (a) or (b) expires, the effectiveness of the financing statement lapses. The last sentence of subsection (c) addresses the effect of lapse. The deemed retroactive unperfection applies only with respect to purchasers for value; unlike former section 9-403(2), it does not apply with respect to lien creditors.

Example 1: SP-1 and SP-2 both hold security interests in the same collateral. Both security interests are perfected by filing. SP-1 filed first and has priority under section 9-322(a)(1). The effectiveness of SP-1's filing lapses. As long as SP-2's security interest remains perfected thereafter, SP-2 is entitled to priority over SP-1's security interest, which is deemed never to have been perfected as against a purchaser for value (SP-2). See section 9-322(a)(2).

Example 2: SP holds a security interest perfected by filing. On July 1, LC acquires a judicial lien on the collateral. Two weeks later, the effectiveness of the financing statement lapses. Although the security interest becomes unperfected upon lapse, it was perfected when LC acquired its lien. Accordingly, notwithstanding the lapse, the perfected security interest has priority over the rights of LC, who is not a purchaser. See section 9-317(a)(2).

4. Effect of Debtor's Bankruptcy. Under former section 9-403(2), lapse was tolled if the debtor entered bankruptcy or another insolvency proceeding. Nevertheless, being unaware that insolvency proceedings had been commenced, filing offices routinely removed records from the files as if lapse had not been tolled. Subsection (c) deletes the former tolling provision and thereby imposes a new burden on the secured party: To be sure that a financing statement does not lapse during the debtor's bankruptcy. The secured party can prevent lapse by filing a continuation statement, even without first obtaining relief from the automatic stay. See Bankruptcy Code section 362(b)(3). Of course, if the debtor enters bankruptcy before lapse, the provisions of this article with respect to lapse would be of no effect to the extent that federal bankruptcy law dictates a contrary result (e.g., to the extent that the Bankruptcy Code determines rights as of the date of the filing of the bankruptcy petition).

5. Continuation Statements. Subsection (d) explains when a continuation statement may be filed. A continuation statement filed at a time other than that prescribed by subsection (d) is ineffective, see section 9-510(c), and the filing office may not accept it. See sections 9-516(b) and 9-520(a). Subsection (e) specifies the effect of a continuation statement and provides for successive continuation statements.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

Under North Carolina law, manufactured homes may be deemed to be motor vehicles (see G.S. 20-50) and subject to the laws governing motor vehicles with respect to the perfection of security interests in them or to be an improvement to real property or real property (see G.S. 47-20.6 and G.S. 47-20.7) and subject to the laws governing real property with respect to the perfection of security interests in them.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

A lien by levy pursuant to judgment does not relate back to the filing date of the financing statement when the security interest has become unperfected by the lapse of time. Hassell v. First Pa. Bank, 41 N.C. App. 296, 254 S.E.2d 768 (1979).

Security Interest in Mobile Home Affixed to Real Property. — A perfected lien noted on the certificate of title remains superior despite the annexation of the mobile home to realty. Hughes v. Young, 115 N.C. App. 325, 444 S.E.2d 248 (1994).

Once the title certificate has been issued for a mobile home and a creditor has perfected a lien upon the mobile home by registering its lien on the title certificate, the mobile home does not lose its status as a mobile home merely because the owner thereafter permanently affixes it to the land; therefore, the secured creditor with a lien on the title prevails over a subsequent creditor who takes a deed of trust on the land and mobile home. Peoples Sav. & Loan Assoc. v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 103 N.C. App. 762, 407 S.E.2d 251, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 197, 412 S.E.2d 59 (1991).

Where a duly licensed mobile home dealer purchased a doublewide from the manufacturer and attached it to a fixed, permanent foundation before transferring the lot and doublewide to the transferee, and the parties did not intend for the doublewide to be operated upon the highways, there was no requirement that the doublewide be registered or that a certificate of title be obtained by either party; therefore, the deed of trust created an encumbrance on both the land and the mobile home. In re Meade, 174 Bankr. 49 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1994).

No fixture filing was required, despite the fact that the mobile home was attached to realty, because G.S. 20-58 et seq. provides the exclusive method for a first mortgagee to perfect a security interest in a mobile home. Peoples Sav. & Loan Assoc. v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 103 N.C. App. 762, 407 S.E.2d 251, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 197, 412 S.E.2d 59 (1991).

A mobile home is a motor vehicle, and is subject to the mandatory provisions of the statutes relating to the registration of motor vehicles in this State. King Homes, Inc. v. Bryson, 273 N.C. 84, 159 S.E.2d 329 (1968).

Vehicle "Required to be Registered." — A vehicle is "required to be registered" only if the owner intends to operate it on state highways and only if the vehicle is not exempt from statutory registration requirements; both of these disjunctive requirements must be met before the vehicle is "required to be registered." Butler v. Green Tree Fin. Servicing Corp. (In re Wester), 229 Bankr. 348 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1998).

When Mobile Home is Not Vehicle. — Mobile home was not a motor vehicle "required to be registered," where it was permanently affixed to real estate and the owner had no intention to operate it on highways; thus, the creditor properly perfected his interest by recording a deed of trust for the real estate to which the mobile home was affixed. Butler v. Green Tree Fin. Servicing Corp. (In re Wester), 229 Bankr. 348 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1998).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

A continuation statement must be filed within the six-month period prior to the last date the original financing statement would have been effective. See opinion of Attorney General to Eunice Avers, Register of Deeds, Forsyth County, 46 N.C.A.G. 209 (1977), rendered prior to 2000 revision of Article 9.

Continuation from Last Effective Date of Original Statement. — The financing statement is continued for five years from the last date the original statement would have been effective if no continuation had been filed. See opinion of Attorney General to Eunice Avers, Register of Deeds, Forsyth County, 46 N.C.A.G. 209 (1977), rendered prior to 2000 revision of Article 9.

§ 25-9-516. What constitutes filing; effectiveness of filing.

(a) What constitutes filing. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this section, communication of a record to a filing office and tender of the filing fee or acceptance of the record by the filing office constitutes filing.

(b) Refusal to accept record; filing does not occur. — Filing does not occur with respect to a record that a filing office refuses to accept because:

- (1) The record is not communicated by a method or medium of communication authorized by the filing office;
 - (2) An amount equal to or greater than the applicable filing fee is not tendered;
 - (3) The filing office is unable to index the record because:
 - a. In the case of an initial financing statement, the record does not provide a name for the debtor;
 - b. In the case of an amendment or correction statement, the record:
 1. Does not identify the initial financing statement as required by G.S. 25-9-512 or G.S. 25-9-518, as applicable; or
 2. Identifies an initial financing statement whose effectiveness has lapsed under G.S. 25-9-515;
 - c. In the case of an initial financing statement that provides the name of a debtor identified as an individual or an amendment that provides a name of a debtor identified as an individual which was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the record relates, the record does not identify the debtor's last name; or
 - d. In the case of a record filed in the filing office described in G.S. 25-9-501(a)(1), the record does not provide a sufficient description of the real property to which it relates;
 - (4) In the case of an initial financing statement or an amendment that adds a secured party of record, the record does not provide a name and mailing address for the secured party of record;
 - (5) In the case of an initial financing statement or an amendment that provides a name of a debtor which was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the amendment relates, the record does not:
 - a. Provide a mailing address for the debtor;
 - b. Indicate whether the debtor is an individual or an organization; or
 - c. If the financing statement indicates that the debtor is an organization, provide:
 1. A type of organization for the debtor;
 2. A jurisdiction of organization for the debtor; or
 3. An organizational identification number for the debtor or indicate that the debtor has none;
 - (6) In the case of an assignment reflected in an initial financing statement under G.S. 25-9-514(a) or an amendment filed under G.S. 25-9-514(b), the record does not provide a name and mailing address for the assignee;
 - (7) In the case of a continuation statement, the record is not filed within the six-month period prescribed by G.S. 25-9-515(d); or
 - (8) In the case of a record presented for filing at the Department of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of State determines that the record is not created pursuant to this Chapter or is otherwise intended for an improper purpose, such as to hinder, harass, or otherwise wrongfully interfere with any person.
- (c) Rules applicable to subsection (b). — For purposes of subsection (b) of this section:

- (1) A record does not provide information if the filing office is unable to read or decipher the information; and
- (2) A record that does not indicate that it is an amendment or identify an initial financing statement to which it relates, as required by G.S. 25-9-512, 25-9-514, or 25-9-518, is an initial financing statement.

(d) Refusal to accept record; record effective as filed record. — A record that is communicated to the filing office with tender of the filing fee, but which the filing office refuses to accept for a reason other than one set forth in subsection (b) of this section, is effective as a filed record except as against a purchaser of the collateral which gives value in reasonable reliance upon the absence of the record from the files. (1866-7, c. 1, s. 1; 1872-3, c. 133, s. 1; Code, s. 1799; 1893, c. 9; Rev., s. 2052; C.S., s. 2480; 1925, c. 302, s. 1; 1927, c. 22; 1935, c. 205; 1945, c. 182, ss. 2, 4; c. 196, s. 2; 1955, c. 386, ss. 1, 2; c. 816; 1957, cc. 564, 999; 1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1967, c. 562, s. 1; 1969, c. 1115, s. 1; 1971, c. 1170; 1973, c. 1316, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 1977, cc. 156, 295; 1983, c. 713, s. 23; 1987, c. 792, s. 6; 1989, c. 523, s. 4; 1991, c. 164, s. 1; 1997-456, s. 55.3; 1997-475, s. 5.4; 2000-169, s. 1; 2001-231, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Subsection (a): Former section 9-403(1); the remainder is new.

2. What Constitutes Filing. Subsection (a) deals generically with what constitutes filing of a record, including an initial financing statement and amendments of all kinds (e.g., assignments, termination statements, and continuation statements). It follows former section 9-403(1), under which either acceptance of a record by the filing office or presentation of the record and tender of the filing fee constitutes filing.

3. Effectiveness of Rejected Record. Subsection (b) provides an exclusive list of grounds upon which the filing office may reject a record. See section 9-520(a). Although some of these grounds would also be grounds for rendering a filed record ineffective (e.g., an initial financing statement does not provide a name for the debtor), many others would not be (e.g., an initial financing statement does not provide a mailing address for the debtor or secured party of record). Neither this section nor section 9-520 requires or authorizes the filing office to determine, or even consider, the accuracy of information provided in a record. For example, the State A filing office may not reject under subsection (b)(5)(C) an initial financing statement indicating that the debtor is a State A corporation and providing a three-digit organizational identification number, even if all State A organizational identification numbers contain at least five digits and two letters.

A financing statement or other record that is communicated to the filing office but which the filing office refuses to accept provides no public notice, regardless of the reason for the rejection. However, this section distinguishes between records that the filing office rightfully rejects and those that it wrongfully rejects. A filer is able to prevent a rightful rejection by complying with the requirements of subsection (b). No purpose is served by giving effect to records that justifiably never find their way into the system, and subsection (b) so provides.

Subsection (d) deals with the filing office's unjustified refusal to accept a record. Here, the filer is in no position to prevent the rejection and as a general matter should not be prejudiced by it. Although wrongfully rejected records generally are effective, subsection (d) contains a special rule to protect a third-party purchaser of the collateral (e.g., a buyer or competing secured party) who gives value in reliance upon the apparent absence of the record from the files. As against a person who searches the public record and reasonably relies on what the public record shows, subsection (d) imposes upon the filer the risk that a record failed to make its way into the filing system because of the filing office's wrongful rejection of it. (Compare section 9-517, under which a mis-indexed financing statement is fully effective.) This risk is likely to be small, particularly when a record is presented electronically, and the filer can guard against this risk by conducting a post-filing search of the records. Moreover, section 9-520(b) requires the filing office to give prompt notice of its refusal to accept a record for filing.

4. Method or Medium of Communication. Rejection pursuant to subsection (b)(1) for failure to communicate a record properly should be understood to mean noncompliance with procedures relating to security, authentication, or other communication-related requirements that the filing office may impose. Subsection (b)(1) does not authorize a filing office to impose additional substantive requirements. See section 9-520, comment 2.

5. Address for Secured Party of Record.

Under subsection (b)(4) and section 9-520(a), the lack of a mailing address for the secured party of record requires the filing office to reject an initial financing statement. The failure to include an address for the secured party of record no longer renders a financing statement ineffective. See section 9-502(a). The function of the address is not to identify the secured party of record but rather to provide an address to which others can send required notifications, e.g., of a purchase-money security interest in inventory or of the disposition of collateral. Inasmuch as the address shown on a filed financing statement is an "address that is reasonable under the circumstances," a person required to send a notification to the secured party may satisfy the requirement by sending a notification to that address, even if the address is or becomes incorrect. See section 9-102 (definition of "send"). Similarly, because the address is "held out by (the secured party) as the place for receipt of such communications (i.e., communications relating to security interests)," the secured party is deemed to have received a notification delivered to that address. See section 1-201(26).

6. Uncertainty Concerning Individual Debtor's Last Name. Subsection (b)(3)(C) requires the filing office to reject an initial financing statement or amendment adding an individual debtor if the office cannot index the record because it does not identify the debtor's last name (e.g., it is unclear whether the debtor's name is Elton John or John Elton).

7. Inability of Filing Office to Read or Decipher Information. Under subsection (c)(1), if the filing office cannot read or decipher information, the information is not provided by a record for purposes of subsection (b).

8. Classification of Records. For purposes of subsection (b), a record that does not indicate it is an amendment or identify an initial financing statement to which it relates is deemed to be an initial financing statement. See subsection (c)(2).

9. Effectiveness of Rejectable But Unrejected Record. Section 9-520(a) requires the filing office to refuse to accept an initial financing statement for a reason set forth in subsection (b). However, if the filing office accepts such a financing statement nevertheless, the financing statement generally is effective if it complies with the requirements of section 9-502(a) and (b). See section 9-520(c). Similarly, an otherwise effective financing statement generally remains so even though the information in the financing statement becomes incorrect. See section 9-507(b). (Note that if the information required by subsection (b)(5) is incorrect when the financing statement is filed, section 9-338 applies.)

Subdivision (b)(8) has no counterpart in the uniform text.

§ 25-9-517. Effect of indexing errors.

The failure of the filing office to index a record correctly does not affect the effectiveness of the filed record. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Effectiveness of Mis-Indexed Records. This section provides that the filing office's error in mis-indexing a record does not render ineffective an otherwise effective record. As did former section 9-401, this section imposes the risk of filing-office error on those who search the files rather than on those who file.

§ 25-9-518. Claim concerning inaccurate or wrongfully filed record.

(a) Correction statement. — A person may file in the filing office a correction statement with respect to a record indexed there under the person's name if the person believes that the record is inaccurate or was wrongfully filed.

(b) Sufficiency of correction statement. — A correction statement must:

- (1) Identify the record to which it relates by the file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates;
- (2) Indicate that it is a correction statement; and

- (3) Provide the basis for the person's belief that the record is inaccurate and indicate the manner in which the person believes the record should be amended to cure any inaccuracy or provide the basis for the person's belief that the record was wrongfully filed. A correction statement that is subject to the provisions of subsection (b1) of this section shall include a written certification, under oath, by the person that the contents of the correction statement are true and accurate to the best of the person's knowledge.

(b1) In the case of a correction statement alleging that a previously filed record was wrongfully filed and that it should have been rejected under G.S. 25-9-516(b)(8), the Secretary of State shall, without undue delay, determine whether the contested record was wrongfully filed and should have been rejected. In order to determine whether the record was wrongfully filed, the Secretary of State may require the person filing the correction statement and the secured party to provide any additional relevant information requested by the Secretary of State, including an original or a copy of any security agreement that is related to the record. If the Secretary of State finds that the record was wrongfully filed and should have been rejected under G.S. 25-9-516(b)(8), the Secretary of State shall cancel the record and it shall be void and of no effect.

(c) Record not affected by correction statement. — The filing of a correction statement does not affect the effectiveness of an initial financing statement or other filed record. (2000-169, s. 1; 2001-231, ss. 2, 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Correction Statements. Former article 9 did not afford a nonjudicial means for a debtor to correct a financing statement or other record that was inaccurate or wrongfully filed. Subsection (a) affords the debtor the right to file a correction statement. Among other requirements, the correction statement must provide the basis for the debtor's belief that the public record should be corrected. See subsection (b). These provisions, which resemble the analogous remedy in the Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. section 1681i, afford an aggrieved person the opportunity to state its position on the public record. They do not permit an aggrieved person to change the legal effect of the public record. Thus, although a filed correction statement becomes part of the "financing statement," as defined in section 9-102, the filing does not affect the effectiveness of the initial financing statement or any other filed record. See subsection (c).

This section does not displace other provisions of this article that impose liability for making unauthorized filings or failing to file or send a termination statement (see section 9-625(e)), nor does it displace any available judicial remedies.

3. Resort to Other Law. This article cannot provide a satisfactory or complete solution to problems caused by misuse of the public records. The problem of "bogus" filings is not limited to the UCC filing system but extends to the real property records, as well. A summary judicial procedure for correcting the public record and criminal penalties for those who misuse the filing and recording systems are likely to be more effective and put less strain on the filing system than provisions authorizing or requiring action by filing and recording offices.

Subsection (b) is Alternative A of the uniform text. Subdivision (b)(3) is modified by adding the last sentence. Subsection (b1) has no counterpart in the uniform text.

Subpart 2. Duties and Operation of Filing Office.

§ 25-9-519. Numbering, maintaining, and indexing records; communicating information provided in records.

(a) Filing office duties. — For each record filed in a filing office, the filing office shall:

- (1) Assign a unique number to the filed record;
- (2) Create a record that bears the number assigned to the filed record and the date and time of filing;
- (3) Maintain the filed record for public inspection; and
- (4) Index the filed record in accordance with subsections (c), (d), and (e) of this section.

(b) File number. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (i) of this section, a file number assigned after January 1, 2003, must include a digit that:

- (1) Is mathematically derived from or related to the other digits of the file number; and
- (2) Aids the filing office in determining whether a number communicated as the file number includes a single-digit or transpositional error.

(c) Indexing: general. — Except as otherwise provided in subsections (d) and (e) of this section, the filing office shall:

- (1) Index an initial financing statement according to the name of the debtor and index all filed records relating to the initial financing statement in a manner that associates with one another an initial financing statement and all filed records relating to the initial financing statement; and
- (2) Index a record that provides a name of a debtor which was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the record relates also according to the name that was not previously provided.

(d) Indexing: real-property-related financing statement. — If a financing statement is filed as a fixture filing or covers as-extracted collateral or timber to be cut, the filing office shall index it:

- (1) Under the names of the debtor and of each owner of record shown on the financing statement as if they were the mortgagors under a mortgage of the real property described; and
- (2) To the extent that the law of this State provides for indexing of records of mortgages under the name of the mortgagee, under the name of the secured party as if the secured party were the mortgagee thereunder, or, if indexing is by description, as if the financing statement were a record of a mortgage of the real property described.

(e) Indexing: real-property-related assignment. — If a financing statement is filed as a fixture filing or covers as-extracted collateral or timber to be cut, the filing office shall index an assignment filed under G.S. 25-9-514(a) or an amendment filed under G.S. 25-9-514(b):

- (1) Under the name of the assignor as grantor; and
- (2) To the extent that the law of this State provides for indexing a record of the assignment of a mortgage under the name of the assignee, under the name of the assignee.

(f) Retrieval and association capability. — The filing office shall maintain a capability:

- (1) To retrieve a record by the name of the debtor and by the file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates; and

(2) To associate and retrieve with one another an initial financing statement and each filed record relating to the initial financing statement.

(g) Removal of debtor's name. — The filing office may not remove a debtor's name from the index until one year after the effectiveness of a financing statement naming the debtor lapses under G.S. 25-9-515 with respect to all secured parties of record.

(h) Timeliness of filing office performance. — The filing office shall perform the acts required by subsections (a) through (e) of this section at the time and in the manner prescribed by filing-office rule, but after January 1, 2003, not later than three business days after the filing office receives the record in question.

(i) Inapplicability to real-property-related filing office. — Subsection (b) of this section does not apply to a filing office described in G.S. 25-9-501(a)(1). (1866-7, c. 1, s. 1; 1872-3, c. 133, s. 1; Code, s. 1799; 1893, c. 9; Rev., s. 2052; C.S., s. 2480; 1925, c. 302, s. 1; 1927, c. 22; 1935, c. 205; 1945, c. 182, ss. 2, 4; c. 196, s. 2; 1955, c. 386, ss. 1, 2; c. 816; 1957, cc. 564, 999; 1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1967, c. 562, s. 1; 1969, c. 1115, s. 1; 1971, c. 1170; 1973, c. 1316, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 1977, cc. 156, 295; 1983, c. 713, s. 23; 1987, c. 792, s. 6; 1989, c. 523, s. 4; 1991, c. 164, s. 1; 1997-456, s. 55.3; 1997-475, s. 5.4; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former sections 9-403(4) and (7), and section 9-405(2).

2. Filing Office's Duties. Subsections (a) through (e) set forth the duties of the filing office with respect to filed records. Subsection (h), which is new, imposes a minimum standard of performance for those duties. Prompt indexing is crucial to the effectiveness of any filing system. An accepted but unindexed record affords no public notice. Subsection (f) requires the filing office to maintain appropriate storage and retrieval facilities, and subsection (g) contains minimum requirements for the retention of records.

3. File Number. Subsection (a)(1) requires the filing office to assign a unique number to each filed record. That number is the "file number" only if the record is an initial financing statement. See section 9-102.

4. Time of Filing. Subsection (a)(2) and section 9-523 refer to the "date and time" of filing. The statutory text does not contain any instructions to a filing office as to how the time of filing is to be determined. The method of determining or assigning a time of filing is an appropriate matter for filing-office rules to address.

5. Related Records. Subsections (c) and (f) are designed to ensure that an initial financing statement and all filed records relating to it are associated with one another, indexed under the name of the debtor, and retrieved together. To comply with subsection (f), a filing office (other than a real property recording office in a state that enacts subsection (f), Alternative B) must be capable of retrieving records in each of two ways: By the name of the debtor and by the file number of the initial financing statement to which the record relates.

6. Prohibition on Deleting Names from Index. This article contemplates that the filing office will not delete the name of a debtor from the index until at least one year passes after the effectiveness of the financing statement lapses as to all secured parties of record. See subsection (g). This rule applies even if the filing office accepts an amendment purporting to delete or modify the name of a debtor or terminate the effectiveness of the financing statement. If an amendment provides a modified name for a debtor, the amended name should be added to the index, see subsection (c)(2), but the preamendment name should remain in the index.

Compared to former article 9, the rule in subsection (g) increases the amount of information available to those who search the public records. The rule also contemplates that searchers—not the filing office—will determine the significance and effectiveness of filed records.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

The introductory language to subsection (b) is rewritten. Subsection (f) is Alternative A of the uniform text. Subsection (h) is modified by inserting "after January 1, 2003," and by changing "two business days" to "three business days."

§ 25-9-520. Acceptance, refusal to accept record, and cancellation of record.

(a) Mandatory refusal to accept record. — A filing office shall refuse to accept a record for filing for a reason set forth in G.S. 25-9-516(b) and may refuse to accept a record for filing only for a reason set forth in G.S. 25-9-516(b).

(b) Communication concerning refusal. — If a filing office refuses to accept a record for filing or cancels a record under G.S. 25-9-518(b1), it shall communicate to the person that presented the record the fact of and reason for the refusal or cancellation and the date and time the record would have been filed had the filing office accepted it. The communication must be made at the time and in the manner prescribed by filing-office rule but in no event more than three business days after the filing office receives or cancels the record.

(c) When filed financing statement effective. — A filed financing statement satisfying G.S. 25-9-502(a) and (b) is effective, even if the filing office is required to refuse to accept it for filing under subsection (a) of this section. However, G.S. 25-9-338 applies to a filed financing statement providing information described in G.S. 25-9-516(b)(5) which is incorrect at the time the financing statement is filed.

(d) Separate application to multiple debtors. — If a record communicated to a filing office provides information that relates to more than one debtor, this Part applies as to each debtor separately.

(e) Appeal. —

- (1) If the Secretary of State refuses to accept a record for filing pursuant to G.S. 25-9-516(b)(8) or cancels a wrongfully filed record pursuant to G.S. 25-9-518(b1), the secured party may file an appeal within 30 days after the refusal or cancellation in the Superior Court of Wake County. Filing a petition requesting to be allowed to file the document commences the appeal. The petition shall be filed with the court and with the Secretary of State and shall have the record attached to it. Upon the commencement of an appeal, it shall be set for hearing at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all matters except older matters of the same character. The appeal to the Superior Court is not governed by Article 3, 3A, or 4 of Chapter 150B of the General Statutes and shall be determined upon such further notice and opportunity to be heard, if any, as the court may deem appropriate under the circumstances. The court shall permit the joinder of any interested party that would be allowed under the Rules of Civil Procedure.
- (2) Upon consideration of the petition and other appropriate pleadings, the court may order the Secretary of State to file the record or take other action the court considers appropriate, including the entry of orders affirming, reversing, or otherwise modifying the decision of the Secretary of State. The court may order any other relief, including equitable relief, as may be appropriate.
- (3) The court's final decision may be appealed as in other civil proceedings. (2000-169, s. 1; 2001-231, s. 4.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.
2. Refusal to Accept Record for Filing. In some states, filing offices considered themselves obligated by former article 9 to review the form and content of a financing statement and to refuse to accept those that they determine are legally insufficient. Some filing offices imposed requirements for or conditions to filing that do not appear in the statute. Under this section, the filing office is not expected to make legal judgments and is not permitted to impose additional conditions or requirements.

Subsection (a) both prescribes and limits the bases upon which the filing office must and may reject records by reference to the reasons set forth in section 9-516(b). For the most part, the bases for rejection are limited to those that prevent the filing office from dealing with a record that it receives—because some of the requisite information (e.g., the debtor's name) is missing or cannot be deciphered, because the record is not communicated by a method (e.g., it is MIME-rather than UU-encoded) or medium (e.g., it is written rather than electronic) that the filing office accepts, or because the filer fails to tender an amount equal to or greater than the filing fee.

3. Consequences of Accepting Rejectable Record. Section 9-516(b) includes among the reasons for rejecting an initial financing statement the failure to give certain information that is not required as a condition of effectiveness. In conjunction with section 9-516(b)(5), this section requires the filing office to refuse to accept a financing statement that is legally sufficient to perfect a security interest under section 9-502 but does not contain a mailing address for the debtor, does not disclose whether the debtor is an individual or an organization (e.g., a partnership or corporation) or, if the debtor is an organization, does not give certain specified information concerning the organization. The information required by section 9-516(b)(5) assists searchers in weeding out “false positives,” i.e., records that a search reveals but which do not pertain to the debtor in question. It assists filers by helping to ensure that the debtor's name is correct and that the financing statement is filed in the proper jurisdiction.

If the filing office accepts a financing statement that does not give this information at all, the filing is fully effective. Section 9-520(c). The financing statement also generally is effective if the information is given but is incorrect; however, section 9-338 affords protection to buyers and holders of perfected security interests who give value in reasonable reliance upon the incorrect information.

4. Filing Office's Duties with Respect to Rejected Record. Subsection (b) requires the filing office to communicate the fact of rejection and the reason therefor within a fixed period of time. Inasmuch as a rightfully rejected record is ineffective and a wrongfully rejected record is not fully effective, prompt communication concerning any rejection is important.

5. Partial Effectiveness of Record. Under subsection (d), the provisions of this part apply to each debtor separately. Thus, a filing office may reject an initial financing statement or other record as to one named debtor but accept it as to the other.

Example: An initial financing statement is communicated to the filing office. The financing statement names two debtors, John Smith and Jane Smith. It contains all of the information described in section 9-516(b)(5) with respect to John but lacks some of the information with respect to Jane. The filing office must accept the financing statement with respect to John, reject it with respect to Jane, and notify the filer of the rejection.

Subsection (b) is modified by changing “two business days” to “three business days.” Subsection (b) is also modified by inserting the phrases “or cancels a record under G.S. 25-9-518(b1),” “or cancellation,” and “or cancels.” Subsection (e) has no counterpart in the uniform text.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. "Safe Harbor" Written Forms. Although Section 9-520 limits the bases upon which the filing office can refuse to accept records, this section provides sample written forms that must be accepted in every filing office in the country, as long as the filing office's rules permit it to accept written communications. By completing one of the forms in this section, a secured party can be certain that the filing office is obligated to accept it.

The forms in this section are based upon national financing statement forms that were in use under former Article 9. Those forms were developed over an extended period and reflect the comments and suggestions of filing officers, secured parties and their counsel, and service companies. The formatting of those forms and of the ones in this section has been designed to reduce error by both filers and filing offices.

A filing office that accepts written communications may not reject, on grounds of form or format, a filing using these forms. Although filers are not required to use the forms, they are encouraged and can be expected to do so, inasmuch as the forms are well designed and avoid the risk of rejection on the basis of form or format. As their use expands, the forms will rapidly become familiar to both filers and filing-office personnel. Filing offices may and should encourage the use of these forms by declaring them to be the "standard" (but not exclusive) forms for each jurisdiction, albeit without in any way suggesting that alternative forms are unacceptable.

The multi-purpose form in subsection (b) covers changes with respect to the debtor, the secured party, the collateral, and the status of the financing statement (termination and continuation). A single form may be used for several different types of amendments at once (e.g., both to change a debtor's name and continue the effectiveness of the financing statement.)

§ 25-9-522. Maintenance and destruction of records.

(a) Post-lapse maintenance and retrieval of information. — The filing office shall maintain a record of the information provided in a filed financing statement for at least one year after the effectiveness of the financing statement has lapsed under G.S. 25-9-515 with respect to all secured parties of record. The record must be retrievable by using the name of the debtor and by using the file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates.

(b) Destruction of written records. — Except to the extent that a statute governing disposition of public records provides otherwise, the filing office immediately may destroy any written record evidencing a financing statement. However, if the filing office destroys a written record, it shall maintain another record of the financing statement which complies with subsection (a) of this section. (1866-7, c. 1, s. 1; 1872-3, c. 133, s. 1; Code, s. 1799; 1893, c. 9; Rev., s. 2052; C.S., s. 2480; 1925, c. 302, s. 1; 1927, c. 22; 1935, c. 205; 1945, c. 182, ss. 2, 4; c. 196, s. 2; 1955, c. 386, ss. 1, 2; c. 816; 1957, cc. 564, 999; 1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1967, c. 562, s. 1; 1969, c. 1115, s. 1; 1971, c. 1170; 1973, c. 1316, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 1977, cc. 156, 295; 1983, c. 713, s. 23; 1987, c. 792,

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-403(3), revised substantially.

2. Maintenance of Records. Section 9-523 requires the filing office to provide information concerning certain lapsed financing statements. Accordingly, subsection (a) requires the filing office to maintain a record of the information in a financing statement for at least one year after lapse. During that time, the filing office may not delete any information with respect to a filed financing statement; it may only add information. This approach relieves the filing office from any duty to determine whether to substitute or delete information upon receipt of an amendment. It also assures searchers that they will receive all information with respect to financing statements filed against a debtor and thereby be able themselves to determine the state of the public record.

The filing office may maintain this information in any medium. Subsection (b) permits the filing office immediately to destroy written records evidencing a financing statement, provided that the filing office maintains another record of the information contained in the financing statement as required by subsection (a).

Subsection (a) is Alternative A of the uniform text.

§ 25-9-523. Information from filing office.

(a) Acknowledgment of filing written record. — If a person that files a written record requests an acknowledgment of the filing, the filing office shall send to the person an image of the record showing the number assigned to the record pursuant to G.S. 25-9-519(a)(1) and the date and time of the filing of the record. However, if the person furnishes a copy of the record to the filing office, the filing office may instead:

- (1) Note upon the copy the number assigned to the record pursuant to G.S. 25-9-519(a)(1) and the date and time of the filing of the record; and
- (2) Send the copy to the person.

(b) Acknowledgment of filing other record. — If a person files a record other than a written record, the filing office shall communicate to the person an acknowledgment that provides:

- (1) The information in the record;
- (2) The number assigned to the record pursuant to G.S. 25-9-519(a)(1); and
- (3) The date and time of the filing of the record.

(c) Communication of requested information. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (g) of this section, the filing office shall communicate or otherwise make available in a record, for which it shall not be liable, the following information to any person that requests it:

- (1) Whether there is on file on a date and time specified by the filing office, but not a date earlier than three business days before the filing office receives the request, any financing statement that:
 - a. Designates a particular debtor;
 - b. Has not lapsed under G.S. 25-9-515 with respect to all secured parties of record; and
 - c. If the request so states, has lapsed under G.S. 25-9-515 and a record of which is maintained by the filing office under G.S. 25-9-522(a);
- (2) The date and time of filing of each financing statement; and

(3) The information provided in each financing statement.

(d) Medium for communicating information. — In complying with its duty under subsection (c) of this section, the filing office may communicate information in any medium. However, if requested, the filing office shall communicate information by issuing a record that can be admitted into evidence in the courts of this State without extrinsic evidence of its authenticity.

(e) Timeliness of filing office performance. — The filing office shall perform the acts required by subsections (a) through (d) of this section at the time and in the manner prescribed by filing-office rule, but after January 1, 2003, for a filing office described in G.S. 25-9-501(a)(2), not later than three business days after the filing office receives the request.

(f) Reserved.

(g) Inapplicability to real-property-related filing office. — Subsection (c) of this section does not apply to a filing office described in G.S. 25-9-501(a)(1) with respect to financing statements filed on or after the effective date of this act. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1967, c. 562, s. 1; 1973, c. 1316, s. 7; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 1983, c. 713, ss. 27, 28; 1987, c. 792, s. 10; 1997-456, s. 55.3; 1997-475, s. 5.7; 2000-169, s. 1(d).)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-407; subsections (d) and (e) are new.

2. Filing Office's Duty to Provide Information. Former section 9-407, dealing with obtaining information from the filing office, was bracketed to suggest to legislatures that its enactment was optional. Experience has shown that the method by which interested persons can obtain information concerning the public records should be uniform. Accordingly, the analogous provisions of this article are not in brackets.

Most of the other changes from former section 9-407 are for clarification, to embrace medium-neutral drafting, or to impose standards of performance on the filing office.

3. Acknowledgments of Filing. Subsections (a) and (b) require the filing office to acknowledge the filing of a record. Under subsection (a), the filing office is required to acknowledge the filing of a written record only upon request of the filer. Subsection (b) requires the filing office to acknowledge the filing of a non-written record even in the absence of a request from the filer.

4. Response to Search Request. Subsection (c)(3) requires the filing office to provide "the information contained in each financing statement" to a person who requests it. This requirement can be satisfied by providing copies, images, or reports. The requirement does not in any manner inhibit the filing office from also offering to provide less than all of the information (presumably for a lower fee) to a person who asks for less. Thus, subsection (c) accommodates the practice of providing only the type of record (e.g., initial financing statement, continuation statement), number assigned to the record, date and time of filing, and names and addresses of the debtor and secured party when a requesting person asks for no more (i.e., when the person does not ask for copies of financing statements). In contrast, the filing office's obligation under subsection (b) to provide an acknowledgment containing "the information contained in the record" is not defined by a customer's request. Thus unless the filer stipulates otherwise, to comply with subsection (b) the filing office's acknowledgment must contain all of the information in a record.

Subsection (c) assures that a minimum amount of information about filed records will be available to the public. It does not preclude a filing office from offering additional services.

5. Lapsed and Terminated Financing Statements. This section reflects the policy that terminated financing statements will remain part of the filing office's data base. The filing office may remove from the data base only lapsed financing statements, and then only when at least a year has passed after lapse. See section 9-519(g). Subsection (c)(1)(C) requires a filing office to conduct a search and report as to lapsed financing statements that have not been removed from the data base, when requested.

6. Search by Debtor's Address. Subsection (c)(1)(A) contemplates that, by making a single request, a searcher will receive the results of a search of the entire public record maintained by any given filing office. Addition of the bracketed language in subsection (c)(1)(A) would permit a search report limited to financing statements showing a particular address for the debtor, but only if the search request is so limited. With or without the bracketed language, this subsection does not permit the filing office to compel a searcher to limit a request by address.

7. Medium of Communication; Certificates. Former article 9 provided that the filing office respond to a request for information by providing a certificate. The principle of medium-neutrality would suggest that the statute not require a written certificate. Subsection (d) follows this principle by permitting the filing office to respond by communicating "in any medium." By permitting communication "in any medium," subsection (d) is not inconsistent with a system in which persons other than filing office staff conduct searches of the filing office's (computer) records.

Some searchers find it necessary to introduce the results of their search into evidence. Because official written certificates might be introduced into evidence more easily than official communications in another medium, subsection (d) affords states the option of requiring the filing office to issue written certificates upon request. The alternative bracketed language in subsection (d) recognizes that some states may prefer to permit the filing office to respond in another medium, as long as the response can be admitted into evidence in the courts of that state without extrinsic evidence of its authenticity.

8. Performance Standard. The utility of the filing system depends on the ability of searchers to get current information quickly. Accordingly, subsection (e) requires that the filing office respond to a request for information no later than two business days after it receives the request. The information contained in the response must be current as of a date no earlier than three business days before the filing office receives the request. See subsection (c)(1). The failure of the filing office to comply with performance standards, such as subsection (e), has no effect on the private rights of persons affected by the filing of records.

9. Sales of Records in Bulk. Subsection (f), which is new, mandates that the appropriate official or the filing office sell or license the filing records to the public in bulk, on a nonexclusive basis, in every medium available to the filing office. The details of implementation are left to filing-office rules.

Subsection (c) is modified by inserting the phrases "Except as otherwise provided in subsection (g) of this section" and "for which it shall not be liable." Subsection (e) is modified by inserting the phrase "after January 1, 2003, for a filing office described in G.S. 25-9-501(a)(2)," and by changing "two business days" to "three business days." Subsection (f) of the uniform text is omitted. Subsection (g) has no counterpart in the uniform text.

§ 25-9-524. Delay by filing office.

Delay by the filing office beyond a time limit prescribed by this Part is excused if:

- (1) The delay is caused by interruption of communication or computer facilities, war, emergency conditions, failure of equipment, or other circumstances beyond control of the filing office; and
- (2) The filing office exercises reasonable diligence under the circumstances. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Source. New; derived from section 4-109.

§ 25-9-525. Fees.

(a) Initial financing statement or other record: general rule. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (e) of this section, the fee for filing and indexing a record under this Part is:

- (1) Thirty-eight dollars ($38.00) if the record is communicated in writing and consists of one or two pages;
- (2) Forty-five dollars ($45.00) if the record is communicated in writing and consists of more than two pages, plus two dollars ($2.00) for each page over 10 pages; and
- (3) Thirty dollars ($30.00) if the record is communicated by another medium authorized by filing-office rule.

(b) Reserved.

(c) Number of names. — The number of names required to be indexed does not affect the amount of the fee in subsection (a) of this section.

(d) Response to information request. — The fee for responding to a request for information from the filing office, including for communicating whether there is on file any financing statement naming a particular debtor, is:

- (1) Thirty-eight dollars ($38.00) if the request is communicated in writing; and
- (2) Thirty dollars ($30.00) if the request is communicated by another medium authorized by filing-office rule.

Upon request the filing office shall furnish a copy of any filed financing statement or statement of assignment for a uniform fee of two dollars ($2.00) per page. This subsection does not require that a fee be charged for remote access searching of the filing office database.

(e) Record of mortgage. — This section does not require a fee with respect to a record of a mortgage which is effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing or as a financing statement covering as-extracted collateral or timber to be cut under G.S. 25-9-502(c). However, the recording and satisfaction fees that otherwise would be applicable to the record of the mortgage apply. OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Various sections of former part 4.

2. Fees. This section contains all fee requirements for filing, indexing, and responding to requests for information. Uniformity in the fee structure (but not necessarily in the amount of fees) makes this article easier for secured parties to use and reduces the likelihood that a filed record will be rejected for failure to pay at least the correct amount of the fee. See section 9-516(b)(2).

The costs of processing electronic records are less than those with respect to written records. Accordingly, this section mandates a lower fee as an incentive to file electronically and imposes the additional charge (if any) for multiple debtors only with respect to written records.

When written records are used, this article encourages the use of the uniform forms in section 9-521. The fee for filing these forms should be no greater than the fee for other written records.

To make the relevant information included in a filed record more accessible once the record is found, this section mandates a higher fee for longer written records than for shorter ones. Finally, recognizing that financing statements naming more than one debtor are most often filed against a husband and wife, any additional charge for multiple debtors applies to records filed with respect to more than two debtors, rather than with respect to more than one.

Subsection (a) is rewritten. Subsection (b) of the uniform text is omitted. Subsection (c) is Alternative A of the uniform text. Subsection

(d) is modified by inserting the last two sentences.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2003-284, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2003'."

Session Laws 2003-284, s. 48.1, provides: "Parts 32 through 47 of this act do not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by those parts before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor do they affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal.”

Session Laws 2003-284, s. 49.3, provides: “Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2003-2005 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2003-2005 fiscal biennium.”

Session Laws 2003-284, s. 49.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2003-284, ss. 35B.1(a) and (b), effective July 15, 2003, substituted “Thirty-eight dollars ($38.00)” for “Thirty dollars ($30.00)” in subdivisions (a)(1) and (d)(1).

§ 25-9-526. Filing-office rules.

(a) Adoption of filing-office rules. — The Secretary of State shall adopt and publish rules to implement the Secretary of State’s responsibilities under this Part. The filing-office rules must be consistent with this Article.

(b) Harmonization of rules. — To keep the filing-office rules and practices of the filing office in harmony with the rules and practices of filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this Part, and to keep the technology used by the filing office compatible with the technology used by filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this Part, the Secretary of State, so far as is consistent with the purposes, policies, and provisions of this Article, in adopting, amending, and repealing filing-office rules, may:

- (1) Consult with filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this Part;
- (2) Consult the most recent version of the Model Rules promulgated by the International Association of Corporate Administrators or any successor organization; and
- (3) Take into consideration the rules and practices of, and the technology used by, filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this Part. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New; subsection (b) derives in part from the Uniform Consumer Credit Code (1974).

2. Rules Required. Operating a filing office is a complicated business, requiring many more rules and procedures than this article can usefully provide. Subsection (a) requires the adoption of rules to carry out the provisions of article 9. The filing office rules must be consistent with the provisions of the statute and adopted in accordance with local procedures. The publication requirement informs secured parties about filing office practices, aids secured parties in evaluating filing-related risks and costs, and promotes regularity of application within the filing office.

3. Importance of Uniformity. In today’s national economy, uniformity of the policies and practices of the filing offices will reduce the costs of secured transactions substantially. The International Association of Corporate Administrators (IACA), referred to in subsection (b), is an organization whose membership includes filing officers from every state. These individuals are responsible for the proper functioning of the article 9 filing system and have worked diligently to develop model filing office rules, with a view toward efficiency and uniformity.

Although uniformity is an important desideratum, subsection (a) affords considerable flexibility in the adoption of filing office rules. Each state may adopt a version of subsection (a) that reflects the desired relationship between the statewide filing office described in section 9-501(a)(2) and the local filing offices described in section 9-501(a)(1) and that takes into account the practices of its filing offices. Subsection (a) need not designate a single official or agency to adopt rules applicable to all filing offices, and the rules applicable to the statewide filing office need not be identical to those applicable to the local filing office. For example, subsection (a) might provide for the statewide filing office to adopt filing office rules, and, if not prohibited by other law, the filing office might adopt one set of rules for itself and another for local offices. Or, subsection (a) might designate one official or agency to adopt rules for the statewide filing office and another to adopt rules for local filing offices.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

Subsection (a) is modified by changing “this Article” to “the Secretary of State’s responsibilities under this Part” and by deleting subdivision (a)(2). Subsection (b) is modified by changing “shall” to “may.”

§ 25-9-527: Reserved for future codification purposes.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

Section 9-527 of the uniform text (duty to report) is omitted.

PART 6.

DEFAULT.

Subpart 1. Default and Enforcement of Security Interest.

§ 25-9-601. Rights after default; judicial enforcement; consignor or buyer of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes.

(a) Rights of secured party after default. — After default, a secured party has the rights provided in this Part and, except as otherwise provided in G.S. 25-9-602, those provided by agreement of the parties. A secured party:

- (1) May reduce a claim to judgment, foreclose, or otherwise enforce the claim, security interest, or agricultural lien by any available judicial procedure; and
- (2) If the collateral is documents, may proceed either as to the documents or as to the goods they cover.

(b) Rights and duties of secured party in possession or control. — A secured party in possession of collateral or control of collateral under G.S. 25-9-104, 25-9-105, 25-9-106, or 25-9-107 has the rights and duties provided in G.S. 25-9-207.

(c) Rights cumulative; simultaneous exercise. — The rights under subsections (a) and (b) of this section are cumulative and may be exercised simultaneously.

(d) Rights of debtor and obligor. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (g) of this section and G.S. 25-9-605, after default, a debtor and an obligor have the rights provided in this Part and by agreement of the parties.

(e) Lien of levy after judgment. — If a secured party has reduced its claim to judgment, the lien of any levy that may be made upon the collateral by virtue of an execution based upon the judgment relates back to the earliest of:

- (1) The date of perfection of the security interest or agricultural lien in the collateral;
- (2) The date of filing a financing statement covering the collateral; or
- (3) Any date specified in a statute under which the agricultural lien was created.

(f) Execution sale. — A sale pursuant to an execution is a foreclosure of the security interest or agricultural lien by judicial procedure within the meaning of this section. A secured party may purchase at the sale and thereafter hold the collateral free of any other requirements of this Article.

(g) Consignor or buyer of certain rights to payment. — Except as otherwise provided in G.S. 25-9-607(c), this Part imposes no duties upon a secured party that is a consignor or is a buyer of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes. (1866-7, c. 1, s. 2; 1872-3, c. 133, s. 2; 1883, c. 88; Code, s. 1800; 1893, c. 9; Rev., s. 2054; C.S., s. 2488; 1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-501(1), (2), (5).

2. Enforcement: In General. The rights of a secured party to enforce its security interest in collateral after the debtor's default are an important feature of a secured transaction. (Note that the term "rights," as defined in section 1-201, includes "remedies.") This part provides those rights as well as certain limitations on their exercise for the protection of the defaulting debtor, other creditors, and other affected persons. However, subsections (a) and (d) make clear that the rights provided in this part do not exclude other rights provided by agreement.

3. When Remedies Arise. Under subsection (a) the secured party's rights arise "(a)fter default." As did former section 9-501, this article leaves to the agreement of the parties the circumstances giving rise to a default. This article does not determine whether a secured party's post-default conduct can constitute a waiver of default in the face of an agreement stating that such conduct shall not constitute a waiver. Rather, it continues to leave to the parties' agreement, as supplemented by law other than this article, the determination whether a default has occurred or has been waived. See section 1-103.

4. Possession of Collateral; Section 9-207. After a secured party takes possession of collateral following a default, there is no longer any distinction between a security interest that before default was nonpossessory and a security interest that was possessory before default, as under a common-law pledge. This part generally does not distinguish between the rights of a secured party with a nonpossessory security interest and those of a secured party with a possessory security interest. However, section 9-207 addresses rights and duties with respect to collateral in a secured party's possession. Under subsection (b) of this section, section 9-207 applies not only to possession before default but also to possession after default. Subsection (b) also has been conformed to section 9-207, which, unlike former section 9-207, applies to secured parties having control of collateral.

5. Cumulative Remedies. Former section 9-501(1) provided that the secured party's remedies were cumulative, but it did not explicitly provide whether the remedies could be exercised simultaneously. Subsection (c) permits the simultaneous exercise of remedies if the secured party acts in good faith. The liability scheme of subpart 2 affords redress to an aggrieved debtor or obligor. Moreover, permitting the simultaneous exercise of remedies under subsection (c) does not override any non-UCC law, including the law of tort and statutes regulating collection of debts, under which the simultaneous exercise of remedies in a particular case constitutes abusive behavior or harassment giving rise to liability.

6. Judicial Enforcement. Under subsection (a) a secured party may reduce its claim to judgment or foreclose its interest by any available procedure outside this article under applicable law. Subsection (e) generally follows former section 9-501(5). It makes clear that any judicial lien that the secured party may acquire against the collateral effectively is a continuation of the original security interest (if perfected) and not the acquisition of a new interest or a transfer of property on account of a preexisting obligation. Under former section 9-501(5), the judicial lien was stated to relate back to the date of perfection of the security interest. Subsection (e), however, provides that the lien relates back to the earlier of the date of filing or the date of perfection. This provides a secured party who enforces a security interest by judicial process with the benefit of the "first-to-file-or-perfect" priority rule of section 9-322(a)(1).

7. Agricultural Liens. Part 6 provides parallel treatment for the enforcement of agricultural liens and security interests. Because agricultural liens are statutory rather than consensual, this article does draw a few distinctions between these liens and security interests. Under subsection (e), the statute creating an agricultural lien would govern whether and the date to which an execution lien relates back. Section 9-606 explains when a "default" occurs in the agricultural lien context.

8. Execution Sales. Subsection (f) also follows former section 9-501(5). It makes clear that an execution sale is an appropriate method of foreclosure contemplated by this part. However, the sale is governed by other law and not by this article, and the limitations under section 9-610 on the right of a secured party to purchase collateral do not apply.

9. Sales of Receivables; Consignments. Subsection (g) provides that, except as provided in section 9-607(c), the duties imposed on secured parties do not apply to buyers of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes. Although denominated "secured parties," these buyers own the entire interest in the property sold and so may enforce their rights without regard to the seller ("debtor") or the seller's creditors. Likewise, a true consignor may enforce its ownership interest under other law without regard to the duties that this part imposes on secured parties. Note, however, that section 9-615 governs cases in which a consignee's secured party (other than a consignor) is enforcing a security interest that is senior to the security interest (i.e., ownership interest) of a true consignor.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Rights and remedies under former § 25-9-501 were cumulative; therefore there was no double recovery by a creditor who was awarded a money judgment after having already repossessed debtor's car, because the car was worthless. See Ken-Mar Fin. v. Harvey, 90 N.C. App. 362, 368 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 365, 373 S.E.2d 545 (1988).

No Obligation to Take Possession Upon Demand of Debtor. — The right of the secured party to take possession of the collateral does not impose an obligation to take possession upon demand of the debtor. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Sharpe, 35 N.C. App. 404, 241 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Seller Entitled to VCR. — Where defendant purchased a VCR from plaintiff and he signed a purchase money security agreement, thereby granting plaintiff a purchase money security interest in the VCR, since a VCR is a consumer good, plaintiff did not have to file a financing statement in order to perfect its purchase money security interest in the VCR; therefore, when defendant failed to make any further payments for the VCR and defaulted on the security agreement, the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the VCR when it filed its action in small claims court. Kimbrell's of Sanford, N.C., Inc. v. KPS, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 830, 440 S.E.2d 329 (1994).

Debtor's Failure to Make Household Goods Exemption Election under § 1C-1601. — When debtor failed to make an election for an exemption under G.S. 1C-1601, allowing debtor to retain $2,500 worth of household goods and furnishings free from judgment, there was no unfair or deceptive practice on the part of a creditor who took a nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest in debtor's household goods and furnishings, even if creditor failed to inform debtor that such an exemption was available. See Ken-Mar Fin. v. Harvey, 90 N.C. App. 362, 368 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 365, 373 S.E.2d 545 (1988).

Because an exemption for household goods and furnishings is available at the election of a borrower, borrower's property is subject to creditor's action for repossession if borrower does not make the election, even if value of goods is listed on a security agreement. See Ken-Mar Fin. v. Harvey, 90 N.C. App. 362, 368 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 365, 373 S.E.2d 545 (1988).

As to former summary proceeding to enforce agricultural lien, see Thomas v. Campbell, 74 N.C. 787 (1876); Gray v. Nash, 84 N.C. 334 (1881); Cottingham & Bros. v. McKay, 86 N.C. 241 (1882).

§ 25-9-602. Waiver and variance of rights and duties.

Except as otherwise provided in G.S. 25-9-624, to the extent that they give rights to a debtor or obligor and impose duties on a secured party, the debtor or obligor may not waive or vary the rules stated in the following listed sections:

- (1) G.S. 25-9-207(b)(4)c., which deals with use and operation of the collateral by the secured party;
- (2) G.S. 25-9-210, which deals with requests for an accounting and requests concerning a list of collateral and statement of account;
- (3) G.S. 25-9-607(c), which deals with collection and enforcement of collateral;

- (4) G.S. 25-9-608(a) and G.S. 25-9-615(c) to the extent that they deal with application or payment of noncash proceeds of collection, enforcement, or disposition;
- (5) G.S. 25-9-608(a) and G.S. 25-9-615(d) to the extent that they require accounting for or payment of surplus proceeds of collateral;
- (6) G.S. 25-9-609 to the extent that it imposes upon a secured party that takes possession of collateral without judicial process the duty to do so without breach of the peace;
- (7) G.S. 25-9-610(b), 25-9-611, 25-9-613, and 25-9-614, which deal with disposition of collateral;
- (8) G.S. 25-9-615(f), which deals with calculation of a deficiency or surplus when a disposition is made to the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor;
- (9) G.S. 25-9-616, which deals with explanation of the calculation of a surplus or deficiency;
- (10) G.S. 25-9-620, 25-9-621, and 25-9-622, which deal with acceptance of collateral in satisfaction of obligation;
- (11) G.S. 25-9-623, which deals with redemption of collateral;
- (12) G.S. 25-9-624, which deals with permissible waivers; and
- (13) G.S. 25-9-625 and G.S. 25-9-626, which deal with the secured party's liability for failure to comply with this Article. (1866-7, c. 1, s. 2; 1872-3, c. 133, s. 2; 1883, c. 88; Code, s. 1800; 1893, c. 9; Rev., s. 2054; C.S., s. 2488; 1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-501(3).

2. Waiver: In General. Section 1-102(3) addresses which provisions of the UCC are mandatory and which may be varied by agreement. With exceptions relating to good faith, diligence, reasonableness, and care, immediate parties, as between themselves, may vary its provisions by agreement. However, in the context of rights and duties after default, our legal system traditionally has looked with suspicion on agreements that limit the debtor's rights and free the secured party of its duties. As stated in former section 9-501, comment 4, "no mortgage clause has ever been allowed to clog the equity of redemption." The context of default offers great opportunity for overreaching. The suspicious attitudes of the courts have been grounded in common sense. This section, like former section 9-501(3), codifies this longstanding and deeply rooted attitude. The specified rights of the debtor and duties of the secured party may not be waived or varied except as stated. Provisions that are not specified in this section are subject to the general rules in section 1-102(3).

3. Nonwaivable Rights and Duties. This section revises former section 9-501(3) by restricting the ability to waive or modify additional specified rights and duties: (i) Duties under section 9-207(b)(4)(C), which deals with the use and operation of consumer goods; (ii) the right to a response to a request for an accounting, concerning a list of collateral, or concerning a statement of account (section 9-210); (iii) the duty to collect collateral in a commercially reasonable manner (section 9-607); (iv) the implicit duty to refrain from a breach of the peace in taking possession of collateral under section 9-609; (v) the duty to apply noncash proceeds of collection or disposition in a commercially reasonable manner (sections 9-608 and 9-615); (vi) the right to a special method of calculating a surplus or deficiency in certain dispositions to a secured party, a person related to secured party, or a secondary obligor (section 9-615); (vii) the duty to give an explanation of the calculation of a surplus or deficiency (section 9-616); (viii) the right to limitations on the effectiveness of certain waivers (section 9-624); and (ix) the right to hold a secured party liable for failure to comply with this article (sections 9-625 and 9-626). For clarity and consistency, this article uses the term "waive or vary" instead of "renounc[e] or modify []," which appeared in former section 9-504(3).

This section provides generally that the specified rights and duties "may not be waived or varied." However, it does not restrict the ability of parties to agree to settle, compromise, or renounce claims for past conduct that may have constituted a violation or breach of those rights and duties, even if the settlement involves an express "waiver."

4. Waiver by Debtors and Obligors. The restrictions on waiver contained in this section apply to obligors as well as debtors. This resolves a question under former article 9 as to whether secondary obligors, assuming that they were “debtors” for purposes of former part 5, were permitted to waive, under the law of suretyship, rights and duties under that part.

5. Certain Post-Default Waivers. Section 9-624 permits post-default waivers in limited circumstances. These waivers must be made in agreements that are authenticated. Under section 1-201, an “‘agreement’ means the bargain of the parties in fact.” In considering waivers under section 9-624 and analogous agreements in other contexts, courts should carefully scrutinize putative agreements that appear in records that also address many additional or unrelated matters.

§ 25-9-603. Agreement on standards concerning rights and duties.

(a) Agreed standards. — The parties may determine by agreement the standards measuring the fulfillment of the rights of a debtor or obligor and the duties of a secured party under a rule stated in G.S. 25-9-602 if the standards are not manifestly unreasonable.

(b) Agreed standards inapplicable to breach of peace. — Subsection (a) of this section does not apply to the duty under G.S. 25-9-609 to refrain from breaching the peace. (1866-7, c. 1, s. 2; 1872-3, c. 133, s. 2; 1883, c. 88; Code, s. 1800; 1893, c. 9; Rev., s. 2054; C.S., s. 2488; 1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-501(3).

2. Limitation on Ability to Set Standards. Subsection (a), like former section 9-501(3), permits the parties to set standards for compliance with the rights and duties under this part if the standards are not “manifestly unreasonable.” Under subsection (b), the parties are not permitted to set standards measuring fulfillment of the secured party’s duty to take collateral without breaching the peace.

§ 25-9-604. Procedure if security agreement covers real property or fixtures.

(a) Enforcement: personal and real property. — If a security agreement covers both personal and real property, a secured party may proceed:

- (1) Under this Part as to the personal property without prejudicing any rights with respect to the real property; or
- (2) As to both the personal property and the real property in accordance with the rights with respect to the real property, in which case the other provisions of this Part do not apply.

(b) Enforcement: fixtures. — Subject to subsection (c) of this section, if a security agreement covers goods that are or become fixtures, a secured party may proceed:

- (1) Under this Part; or
- (2) In accordance with the rights with respect to real property, in which case the other provisions of this Part do not apply.

(c) Removal of fixtures. — Subject to the other provisions of this Part, if a secured party holding a security interest in fixtures has priority over all owners and encumbrancers of the real property, the secured party, after default, may remove the collateral from the real property.

(d) Injury caused by removal. — A secured party that removes collateral shall promptly reimburse any encumbrancer or owner of the real property, other than the debtor, for the cost of repair of any physical injury caused by the removal. The secured party need not reimburse the encumbrancer or owner for any diminution in value of the real property caused by the absence of the goods removed or by any necessity of replacing them. A person entitled to reimbursement may refuse permission to remove until the secured party gives adequate assurance for the performance of the obligation to reimburse. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1967, c. 562, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former sections 9-313(8) and 9-501(4).

2. Real-Property-Related Collateral. The collateral in many transactions consists of both real and personal property. In the interest of simplicity, speed, and economy, subsection (a), like former section 9-501(4), permits (but does not require) the secured party to proceed as to both real and personal property in accordance with its rights and remedies with respect to the real property. Subsection (a) also makes clear that a secured party who exercises rights under part 6 with respect to personal property does not prejudice any rights under real-property law.

This article does not address certain other real-property-related problems. In a number of states, the exercise of remedies by a creditor who is secured by both real property and non-real property collateral is governed by special legal rules. For example, under some antideficiency laws, creditors risk loss of rights against personal property collateral if they err in enforcing their rights against the real property. Under a "one-form-of-action" rule (or rule against splitting a cause of action), a creditor who judicially enforces a real property mortgage and does not proceed in the same action to enforce a security interest in personalty may (among other consequences) lose the right to proceed against the personalty. Although statutes of this kind create impediments to enforcement of security interests, this article does not override these limitations under other law.

3. Fixtures. Subsection (b) is new. It makes clear that a security interest in fixtures may be enforced either under real property law or under any of the applicable provisions of part 6, including sale or other disposition either before or after removal of the fixtures (see subsection (c)). Subsection (b) also serves to overrule cases holding that a secured party's only remedy after default is the removal of the fixtures from the real property. See, e.g., Maplewood Bank & Trust v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 625 A.2d 537 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1993).

Subsection (c) generally follows former section 9-313(8). It gives the secured party the right to remove fixtures under certain circumstances. A secured party whose security interest in fixtures has priority over owners and encumbrancers of the real property may remove the collateral from the real property. However, subsection (d) requires the secured party to reimburse any owner (other than the debtor) or encumbrancer for the cost of repairing any physical injury caused by the removal. This right to reimbursement is implemented by the last sentence of subsection (d), which gives the owner or encumbrancer a right to security or indemnity as a condition for giving permission to remove.

A secured party does not owe a duty based on its status as secured party:

- (1) To a person that is a debtor or obligor, unless the secured party knows:
 - a. That the person is a debtor or obligor;
 - b. The identity of the person; and
 - c. How to communicate with the person; or
- (2) To a secured party or lienholder that has filed a financing statement against a person, unless the secured party knows:
 - a. That the person is a debtor; and
 - b. The identity of the person. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Duties to Unknown Persons. This section relieves a secured party from duties owed to a debtor or obligor, if the secured party does not know about the debtor or obligor. Similarly, it relieves a secured party from duties owed to a secured party or lienholder who has filed a financing statement against the debtor, if the secured party does not know about the debtor. For example, a secured party may be unaware that the original debtor has sold the collateral subject to the security interest and that the new owner has become the debtor. If so, the secured party owes no duty to the new owner

(debtor) or to a secured party who has filed a financing statement against the new owner. This section should be read in conjunction with the exculpatory provisions in section 9-628. Note that it relieves a secured party not only from duties arising under this article but also from duties arising under other law by virtue of the secured party's status as such under this article, unless the other law otherwise provides.

§ 25-9-606. Time of default for agricultural lien.

For purposes of this Part, a default occurs in connection with an agricultural lien at the time the secured party becomes entitled to enforce the lien in accordance with the statute under which it was created. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.
2. Time of Default. Remedies under this part become available upon the debtor's "default." See section 9-601. This section explains when "default" occurs in the agricultural-lien context. It requires one to consult the enabling statute to determine when the lienholder is entitled to enforce the lien.

§ 25-9-607. Collection and enforcement by secured party.

(a) Collection and enforcement generally. — If so agreed, and in any event after default, a secured party:

- (1) May notify an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral to make payment or otherwise render performance to or for the benefit of the secured party;
 - (2) May take any proceeds to which the secured party is entitled under G.S. 25-9-315;
 - (3) May enforce the obligations of an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral and exercise the rights of the debtor with respect to the obligation of the account debtor or other person obligated on collateral to make payment or otherwise render performance to the debtor, and with respect to any property that secures the obligations of the account debtor or other person obligated on the collateral;
 - (4) If it holds a security interest in a deposit account perfected by control under G.S. 25-9-104(a)(1), may apply the balance of the deposit account to the obligation secured by the deposit account; and
 - (5) If it holds a security interest in a deposit account perfected by control under G.S. 25-9-104(a)(2) or (a)(3), may instruct the bank to pay the balance of the deposit account to or for the benefit of the secured party.
- (b) Nonjudicial enforcement of mortgage. — If necessary to enable a secured party to exercise under subdivision (a)(3) of this section the right of a debtor to enforce a mortgage nonjudicially, the secured party may record in the office in which a record of the mortgage is recorded:
- (1) A copy of the security agreement that creates or provides for a security interest in the obligation secured by the mortgage; and
 - (2) The secured party's sworn affidavit in recordable form stating that:
 - a. A default has occurred; and
 - b. The secured party is entitled to enforce the mortgage nonjudicially.
- (c) Commercially reasonable collection and enforcement. — A secured party shall proceed in a commercially reasonable manner if the secured party:
- (1) Undertakes to collect from or enforce an obligation of an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral; and
 - (2) Is entitled to charge back uncollected collateral or otherwise to full or limited recourse against the debtor or a secondary obligor.
- (d) Expenses of collection and enforcement. — A secured party may deduct from the collections made pursuant to subsection (c) of this section reasonable expenses of collection and enforcement, including reasonable attorney's fees and legal expenses incurred by the secured party.

(e) Duties to secured party not affected. — This section does not determine whether an account debtor, bank, or other person obligated on collateral owes a duty to a secured party. (1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-502; subsections (b), (d), and (e) are new.

2. Collections: In General. Collateral consisting of rights to payment is not only the most liquid asset of a typical debtor's business but also is property that may be collected without any interruption of the debtor's business. This situation is far different from that in which collateral is inventory or equipment, whose removal may bring the business to a halt. Furthermore, problems of valuation and identification, present with collateral that is tangible personal property, frequently are not as serious in the case of rights to payment and other intangible collateral. Consequently, this section, like former section 9-502, recognizes that financing through assignments of intangibles lacks many of the complexities that arise after default in other types of financing. This section allows the assignee to liquidate collateral by collecting whatever may become due on the collateral, whether or not the method of collection contemplated by the security arrangement before default was direct (i.e., payment by the account debtor to the assignee, "notification" financing) or indirect (i.e., payment by the account debtor to the assignor, "nonnotification" financing).

3. Scope. The scope of this section is broader than that of former section 9-502. It applies not only to collections from account debtors and obligors on instruments but also to enforcement more generally against all persons obligated on collateral. It explicitly provides for the secured party's enforcement of the debtor's rights in respect of the account debtor's (and other third parties') obligations and for the secured party's enforcement of supporting obligations with respect to those obligations. (Supporting obligations are components of the collateral under section 9-203(f).) The rights of a secured party under subsection (a) include the right to enforce claims that the debtor may enjoy against others. For example, the claims might include a breach-of-warranty claim arising out of a defect in equipment that is collateral or a secured party's action for an injunction against infringement of a patent that is collateral. Those claims typically would be proceeds of original collateral under section 9-315.

4. Collection and Enforcement Before Default. Like part 6 generally, this section deals with the rights and duties of secured parties following default. However, as did former section 9-502 with respect to collection rights, this section also applies to the collection and enforcement rights of secured parties even if a default has not occurred, as long as the debtor has so agreed. It is not unusual for debtors to agree that secured parties are entitled to collect and enforce rights against account debtors prior to default.

5. Collections by Junior Secured Party. A secured party who holds a security interest in a right to payment may exercise the right to collect and enforce under this section, even if the security interest is subordinate to a conflicting security interest in the same right to payment. Whether the junior secured party has priority in the collected proceeds depends on whether the junior secured party qualifies for priority as a purchaser of an instrument (e.g., the account debtor's check) under section 9-330(d), as a holder in due course of an instrument under sections 3-305 and 9-331(a), or as a transferee of money under section 9-332(a). See sections 9-330, comment 7; 9-331, comment 5; and 9-332.

6. Relationship to Rights and Duties of Persons Obligated on Collateral. This section permits a secured party to collect and enforce obligations included in collateral in its capacity as a secured party. It is not necessary for a secured party first to become the owner of the collateral pursuant to a disposition or acceptance. However, the secured party's rights, as between it and the debtor, to collect from and enforce collateral against account debtors and others obligated on collateral under subsection (a) are subject to section 9-341, part 4, and other applicable law. Neither this section nor former section 9-502 should be understood to regulate the duties of an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral. Subsection (e) makes this explicit. For example, the secured party may be unable to exercise the debtor's rights under an instrument if the debtor is in possession of the instrument, or under a non-transferable letter of credit if the debtor is the beneficiary. Unless a secured party has control over a letter-of-credit right and is entitled to receive payment or performance from the issuer or a nominated person under article 5, its remedies with respect to the letter-of-credit right may be limited to the recovery of any identifiable proceeds from the debtor. This section establishes only the baseline rights of the secured party vis-a-vis the debtor—the secured party is entitled to enforce and collect after default or earlier if so agreed.

7. Deposit Account Collateral. Subsections (a)(4) and (5) set forth the self-help remedy for a secured party whose collateral is a deposit account. Subsection (a)(4) addresses the rights of a secured party that is the bank with which the deposit account is maintained. That secured party automatically has control of the deposit account under section 9-104(a)(1). After default, and otherwise if so agreed, the bank/secured party may apply the funds on deposit to the secured obligation.

If a security interest of a third party is perfected by control (section 9-104(a)(2) or (a)(3)), then after default, and otherwise if so agreed, the secured party may instruct the bank to pay out the funds in the account. If the third party has control under section 9-104(a)(3), the depository institution is obliged to obey the instruction because the secured party is its customer. See section 4-401. If the third party has control under section 9-104(a)(2), the control agreement determines the depository institution's obligation to obey.

If a security interest in a deposit account is unperfected, or is perfected by filing by virtue of the proceeds rules of section 9-315, the depository institution ordinarily owes no obligation to obey the secured party's instructions. See section 9-341. To reach the funds without the debtor's cooperation, the secured party must use an available judicial procedure.

8. Rights Against Mortgagor of Real Property. Subsection (b) addresses the situation in which the collateral consists of a mortgage note (or other obligation secured by a mortgage on real property). After the debtor's (mortgagee's) default, the secured party (assignee) may wish to proceed with a nonjudicial foreclosure of the mortgage securing the note but may be unable to do so because it has not become the assignee of record. The assignee/secured party may not have taken a recordable assignment at the commencement of the transaction (perhaps the mortgage note in question was one of hundreds assigned to the secured party as collateral). Having defaulted, the mortgagee may be unwilling to sign a recordable assignment. This section enables the secured party (assignee) to become the assignee of record by recording in the applicable real property records the security agreement and an affidavit certifying default. Of course, the secured party's rights derive from those of its debtor. Subsection (b) would not entitle the secured party to proceed with a foreclosure unless the mortgagor also were in default or the debtor (mortgagee) otherwise enjoyed the right to foreclose.

9. Commercial Reasonableness. Subsection (c) provides that the secured party's collection and enforcement rights under subsection (a) must be exercised in a commercially reasonable manner. These rights include the right to settle and compromise claims against the account debtor. The secured party's failure to observe the standard of commercial reasonableness could render it liable to an aggrieved person under section 9-625, and the secured party's recovery of a deficiency would be subject to section 9-626. Subsection (c) does not apply if, as is characteristic of most sales of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, and promissory notes, the secured party (buyer) has no right of recourse against the debtor (seller) or a secondary obligor. However, if the secured party does have a right of recourse, the commercial reasonableness standard applies to collection and enforcement even though the assignment to the secured party was a "true" sale. The obligation to proceed in a commercially reasonable manner arises because the collection process affects the extent of the seller's recourse liability, not because the seller retains an interest in the sold collateral (the seller does not). Concerning classification of a transaction, see Section 9-109, Comment 4.

10. Attorney's Fees and Legal Expenses. The phrase "reasonable attorney's fees and legal expenses," which appears in subsection (d), includes only those fees and expenses incurred in proceeding against account debtors or other third parties. The secured party's right to recover these expenses from the collections arises automatically under this section. The secured party also may incur other attorney's fees and legal expenses in proceeding against the debtor or obligor. Whether the secured party has a right to recover those fees and expenses depends on whether the debtor or obligor has agreed to pay them, as is the case with respect to attorney's fees and legal expenses under sections 9-608(a)(1)(A) and 9-615(a)(1). The parties also may agree to allocate a portion of the secured party's overhead to collection and enforcement under subsection (d) or section 9-608(a).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case below was decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform

Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Burden on Secured Party Seeking Deficiency Judgment. — A secured party seeking a deficiency judgment under former G.S. 25-9-502 had the burden of establishing compliance with the twin duties of reasonable notification and commercially reasonable disposition. Placing the burden of persuasion on the secured party tends to insure that the deficiency sought has not been unnecessarily enhanced by abuses of the broad discretion accorded the secured party with respect to the disposition of collateral. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979); Church v. Mickler, 55 N.C. App. 724, 287 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

§ 25-9-608. Application of proceeds of collection or enforcement; liability for deficiency and right to surplus.

(a) Application of proceeds, surplus, and deficiency if obligation secured. — If a security interest or agricultural lien secures payment or performance of an obligation, the following rules apply:

- (1) A secured party shall apply or pay over for application the cash proceeds of collection or enforcement under G.S. 25-9-607 in the following order to:
 - a. The reasonable expenses of collection and enforcement and, to the extent provided for by agreement and not prohibited by law, reasonable attorney's fees and legal expenses incurred by the secured party;
 - b. The satisfaction of obligations secured by the security interest or agricultural lien under which the collection or enforcement is made; and
 - c. The satisfaction of obligations secured by any subordinate security interest in or other lien on the collateral subject to the security interest or agricultural lien under which the collection or enforcement is made if the secured party receives an authenticated demand for proceeds before distribution of the proceeds is completed.
- (2) If requested by a secured party, a holder of a subordinate security interest or other lien shall furnish reasonable proof of the interest or lien within a reasonable time. Unless the holder complies, the secured party need not comply with the holder's demand under sub-subdivision (a)(1)c. of this section.
- (3) A secured party need not apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds of collection and enforcement under G.S. 25-9-607 unless the failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. A secured party that applies or pays over for application noncash proceeds shall do so in a commercially reasonable manner.
- (4) A secured party shall account to and pay a debtor for any surplus, and the obligor is liable for any deficiency.

(b) No surplus or deficiency in sales of certain rights to payment. — If the underlying transaction is a sale of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes, the debtor is not entitled to any surplus, and the obligor is not liable for any deficiency. (1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Subsection (a) is new; subsection (b) derives from former section 9-502(2).

2. Modifications of Prior Law. Subsections (a) and (b) modify former section 9-502(2) by explicitly providing for the application of proceeds recovered by the secured party in substantially the same manner as provided in section 9-615(a) and (e) for dispositions of collateral.

3. Surplus and Deficiency. Subsections

(a)(4) and (b) omit, as unnecessary, the references contained in former section 9-502(2) to agreements varying the baseline rules on surplus and deficiency. The parties are always free to agree that an obligor will not be liable for a deficiency, even if the collateral secures an obligation, and that an obligor is liable for a deficiency, even if the transaction is a sale of receivables. For parallel provisions, see section 9-615(d) and (e).

4. Noncash Proceeds. Subsection (a)(3) addresses the situation in which an enforcing secured party receives noncash proceeds.

Example: An enforcing secured party receives a promissory note from an account debtor who is unable to pay an account when it is due. The secured party accepts the note in exchange for extending the date on which the account debtor's obligation is due. The secured party may wish to credit its debtor (the assignor) with the principal amount of the note upon receipt of the note, but probably will prefer to credit the debtor only as and when the note is paid.

Under subsection (a)(3), the secured party is under no duty to apply the note or its value to the outstanding obligation unless its failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. If the secured party does apply the note to the outstanding obligation, however, it must do so in a commercially reasonable manner. The parties may provide for the method of application of noncash proceeds by agreement, if the method is not manifestly unreasonable. See section 9-603. This section does not explain when the failure to apply noncash proceeds would be commercially unreasonable; it leaves that determination to case-by-case adjudication. In the example, the secured party appears to have accepted the account debtor's note in order to increase the likelihood of payment and decrease the likelihood that the account debtor would dispute its obligation. Under these circumstances, it may well be commercially reasonable for the secured party to credit its debtor's obligations only as and when cash proceeds are collected from the account debtor, especially given the uncertainty that attends the account debtor's eventual payment. For an example of a secured party's receipt of noncash proceeds in which it may well be commercially unreasonable for the secured party to delay crediting its debtor's obligations with the value of noncash proceeds, see section 9-615, comment 3.

When the secured party is not required to "apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds," the proceeds nonetheless remain collateral subject to this article. If the secured party were to dispose of them, for example, appropriate notification would be required (see section 9-611), and the disposition would be subject to the standards provided in this part (see section 9-610). Moreover, a secured party in possession of the noncash proceeds would have the duties specified in section 9-207.

5. No Effect on Priority of Senior Security Interest. The application of proceeds required by subsection (a) does not affect the priority of a security interest in collateral which is senior to the interest of the secured party who is collecting or enforcing collateral under section 9-607. Although subsection (a) imposes a duty to apply proceeds to the enforcing secured party's expenses and to the satisfaction of the secured obligations owed to it and to subordinate secured parties, that duty applies only among the enforcing secured party and those persons. Concerning the priority of a junior secured party who collects and enforces collateral, see section 9-607, comment 5.

(a) Possession; rendering equipment unusable; disposition on debtor's premises. — After default, a secured party:

- (1) May take possession of the collateral; and
- (2) Without removal, may render equipment unusable and dispose of collateral on a debtor's premises under G.S. 25-9-610.

(b) Judicial and nonjudicial process. — A secured party may proceed under subsection (a) of this section:

- (1) Pursuant to judicial process; or
- (2) Without judicial process, if it proceeds without breach of the peace.

(c) Assembly of collateral. — If so agreed, and in any event after default, a secured party may require the debtor to assemble the collateral and make it available to the secured party at a place to be designated by the secured party which is reasonably convenient to both parties. (1961, c. 574; 1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-503.

2. Secured Party's Right to Possession. This section follows former section 9-503 and earlier uniform legislation. It provides that the secured party is entitled to take possession of collateral after default.

3. Judicial Process; Breach of Peace. Subsection (b) permits a secured party to proceed under this section without judicial process if it does so "without breach of the peace." Although former section 9-503 placed the same condition on a secured party's right to take possession of collateral, subsection (b) extends the condition to the right provided in subsection (a)(2) as well. Like former section 9-503, this section does not define or explain the conduct that will constitute a breach of the peace, leaving that matter for continuing development by the courts. In considering whether a secured party has engaged in a breach of the peace, however, courts should hold the secured party responsible for the actions of others taken on the secured party's behalf, including independent contractors engaged by the secured party to take possession of collateral.

This section does not authorize a secured party who repossesses without judicial process to utilize the assistance of a law enforcement officer. A number of cases have held that a repossessing secured party's use of a law enforcement officer without benefit of judicial process constituted a failure to comply with former section 9-503.

4. Damages for Breach of Peace. Concerning damages that may be recovered based on a secured party's breach of the peace in connection with taking possession of collateral, see section 9-625, comment 3.

5. Multiple Secured Parties. More than one secured party may be entitled to take possession of collateral under this section. Conflicting rights to possession among secured parties are resolved by the priority rules of this article. Thus, a senior secured party is entitled to possession as against a junior claimant. Non-UCC law governs whether a junior secured party in possession of collateral is liable to the senior in conversion. Normally, a junior who refuses to relinquish possession of collateral upon the demand of a secured party having a superior possessory right to the collateral would be liable in conversion.

6. Secured Party's Right to Disable and Dispose of Equipment on Debtor's Premises. In the case of some collateral, such as heavy equipment, the physical removal from the debtor's plant and the storage of the collateral pending disposition may be impractical or unduly expensive. This section follows former section 9-503 by providing that, in lieu of removal, the secured party may render equipment unusable or may dispose of collateral on the debtor's premises. Unlike former section 9-503, however, this section explicitly conditions these rights on the debtor's default. Of course, this section does not validate unreasonable action by a secured party. Under section 9-610, all aspects of a disposition must be commercially reasonable.

7. Debtor's Agreement to Assemble Collateral. This section follows former section 9-503 also by validating a debtor's agreement to assemble collateral and make it available to a secured party at a place that the secured party designates. Similar to the treatment of agreements to permit collection prior to default under section 9-607 and former section 9-502, however, this section validates these agreements whether or not they are conditioned on the debtor's default. For example, a debtor might agree to make available to a secured party, from time to time, any instruments or negotiable documents that the debtor receives on account of collateral. A court should not infer from this section's validation that a debtor's agreement to assemble and make available collateral would not be enforceable under other applicable law.

8. Agreed Standards. Subject to the limitation imposed by section 9-603(b), this section's provisions concerning agreements to assemble and make available collateral and a secured party's right to disable equipment and dispose of collateral on a debtor's premises are likely topics for agreement on standards as contemplated by section 9-603.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Statute Is Self-Executing. — Former G.S. 25-9-503 (see now G.S. 25-9-609), allowing self-help repossessions by secured parties, is wholly self-executing and takes no involvement by any state employee to fully effect its purpose; in enacting the section, the General Assembly codified a right existing at common law, and it did not delegate to private parties authority previously held by the State. Giles v. First Va. Credit Servs., Inc., 149 N.C. App. 89, 560 S.E.2d 557, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 127 (2002), cert denied, 355 N.C. 491, 563 S.E.2d 568 (2002).

Landlord Perfecting Security Interest by Taking Possession Has Priority over Selling Company. — In an action to determine the right of possession to a piece of property as between a landlord under a lease agreement and a company who sold the property under a conditional sales contract, neither party having filed a financing statement, the landlord, who perfected its security interest under the lease by taking possession of the property, has priority over the selling company. Dunham's Music House, Inc. v. Asheville Theatres, Inc., 10 N.C. App. 242, 178 S.E.2d 124 (1970).

No Obligation to Take Possession upon Demand of Debtor. — The right of the secured party to take possession of the collateral does not impose an obligation to take possession upon demand of the debtor. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Sharpe, 35 N.C. App. 404, 241 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Right to Take Possession of Collateral Otherwise Exempt from Execution. — The legislature has seen fit to surround the family home with certain protection against the demands of urgent creditors to put it beyond the reach of those financial misfortunes which even the most prudent and sagacious cannot always avoid. It has not seen fit to prevent a debtor from "selling" or otherwise transferring an interest in that property to another, thereby giving the other priority of right to possession of the collateral. The constitutional exemption operates against general creditors so as to allow the debtor to retain his most valued $500.00 of property in the face of their executions. It does not operate so as to hinder secured creditors from realizing on the terms of their bargain. Montford v. Grohman, 36 N.C. App. 733, 245 S.E.2d 219, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 551, 248 S.E.2d 727 (1978).

In the cases of foreclosure of mortgages or of taking possession of collateral after default, no right to possession of property otherwise exempt remains in the debtor who has voluntarily bargained it away. Montford v. Grohman, 36 N.C. App. 733, 245 S.E.2d 219, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 551, 248 S.E.2d 727 (1978).

Debtor divested herself of her right to possession of personal property which might otherwise have been exempt by the terms of her consumer loan contract with her creditor whereby the creditor obtained a security interest in all of her personal property, including her household furnishings. When the debtor defaulted, the creditor had an immediate right to possess all articles in which she had given a security interest. However, this right must be distinguished from any interest which a creditor might seek under an executory waiver of the right to exemption. It has long been held that a debtor cannot be bound by any agreement to waive his exemption in case of levy upon her property. Montford v. Grohman, 36 N.C. App. 733, 245 S.E.2d 219, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 551, 248 S.E.2d 727 (1978).

Liability of Debtor for Expense of Retaking Collateral. — A secured party, entitled to possession of collateral upon default by the debtor, may legally require the debtor, upon redemption of the collateral, to pay reasonable expenses incurred in retaking the collateral even though the secured party gave no notice of intention to repossess. Because no such notice is required prior to repossession, the absence of notice does not preclude the secured party from recovering these expenses. Everett v. U.S. Life Credit Corp., 74 N.C. App. 142, 327 S.E.2d 269, modified on other grounds, 314 N.C. 113, 332 S.E.2d 480 (1985).

Where there is confrontation at the time of the attempted repossession, the secured party must cease the attempted repossession and proceed by court action in order to avoid a "breach of the peace." Everett v. U.S. Life Credit Corp., 74 N.C. App. 142, 327 S.E.2d 269, modified on other grounds, 314 N.C. 113, 332 S.E.2d 480 (1985).

Balancing Test to Determine Breach of the Peace. — A breach of the peace, in the context of a self-help repossession under former G.S. 25-9-503 (see now G.S. 25-9-609), is broader than the criminal law definition, and a confrontation is not always required; a breach of the peace analysis should be based upon the reasonableness of the time and manner of the repossession, and a balancing test using the five factors of (1) where the repossession took place, (2) the debtor's express or constructive consent, (3) the reactions of third parties, (4) the type of premises entered, and (5) the creditor's use of deception is adopted to determine whether a breach of the peace occurs when there is no confrontation. Giles v. First Va. Credit Servs., Inc., 149 N.C. App. 89, 560 S.E.2d 557, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 127 (2002), cert denied, 355 N.C. 491, 563 S.E.2d 568 (2002).

Seller Entitled to VCR. — Where defendant purchased a VCR from plaintiff and he signed a purchase money security agreement, thereby granting plaintiff a purchase money security interest in the VCR, since a VCR is a consumer good, plaintiff did not have to file a financing statement in order to perfect its purchase money security interest in the VCR; therefore, when defendant failed to make any further payments for the VCR and defaulted on the security agreement, the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the VCR when it filed its action in small claims court. Kimbrell's of Sanford, N.C., Inc. v. KPS, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 830, 440 S.E.2d 329 (1994).

§ 25-9-610. Disposition of collateral after default.

(a) Disposition after default. — After default, a secured party may sell, lease, license, or otherwise dispose of any or all of the collateral in its present condition or following any commercially reasonable preparation or processing.

(b) Commercially reasonable disposition. — Every aspect of a disposition of collateral, including the method, manner, time, place, and other terms, must be commercially reasonable. If commercially reasonable, a secured party may dispose of collateral by public or private proceedings, by one or more contracts, as a unit or in parcels, and at any time and place and on any terms.

(c) Purchase by secured party. — A secured party may purchase collateral:

(1) At a public disposition; or

(2) At a private disposition only if the collateral is of a kind that is customarily sold on a recognized market or the subject of widely distributed standard price quotations.

(d) Warranties on disposition. — A contract for sale, lease, license, or other disposition includes the warranties relating to title, possession, quiet enjoyment, and the like which by operation of law accompany a voluntary disposition of property of the kind subject to the contract.

(e) Disclaimer of warranties. — A secured party may disclaim or modify warranties under subsection (d) of this section:

(1) In a manner that would be effective to disclaim or modify the warranties in a voluntary disposition of property of the kind subject to the contract of disposition; or

(2) By communicating to the purchaser a record evidencing the contract for disposition and including an express disclaimer or modification of the warranties.

(f) Record sufficient to disclaim warranties. — A record is sufficient to disclaim warranties under subsection (e) of this section if it indicates "There is no warranty relating to title, possession, quiet enjoyment, or the like in this disposition" or uses words of similar import. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-504(1), (3).

2. Commercially Reasonable Dispositions. Subsection (a) follows former section 9-504 by permitting a secured party to dispose of collateral in a commercially reasonable manner following a default. Although subsection (b) permits both public and private dispositions, "every aspect of a disposition . . . must be commercially reasonable." This section encourages private dispositions on the assumption that they frequently will result in higher realization on collateral for the benefit of all concerned. Subsection (a) does not restrict dispositions to sales; collateral may be sold, leased, licensed, or otherwise disposed. Section 9-627 provides guidance for determining the circumstances under which a disposition is "commercially reasonable."

3. Time of Disposition. This article does not specify a period within which a secured party must dispose of collateral. This is consistent with this article's policy to encourage private dispositions through regular commercial channels. It may, for example, be prudent not to dispose of goods when the market has collapsed. Or, it might be more appropriate to sell a large inventory in parcels over a period of time instead of in bulk. Of course, under subsection (b) every aspect of a disposition of collateral must be commercially reasonable. This requirement explicitly includes the “method, manner, time, place, and other terms.” For example, if a secured party does not proceed under section 9-620 and holds collateral for a long period of time without disposing of it, and if there is no good reason for not making a prompt disposition, the secured party may be determined not to have acted in a “commercially reasonable” manner. See also section 1-203 (general obligation of good faith).

4. Pre-Disposition Preparation and Processing. Former section 9-504(1) appeared to give the secured party the choice of disposing of collateral either “in its then condition or following any commercially reasonable preparation or processing.” Some courts held that the “commercially reasonable” standard of former section 9-504(3) nevertheless could impose an affirmative duty on the secured party to process or prepare the collateral prior to disposition. Subsection (a) retains the substance of the quoted language. Although courts should not be quick to impose a duty of preparation or processing on the secured party, subsection (a) does not grant the secured party the right to dispose of the collateral “in its then condition” under all circumstances. A secured party may not dispose of collateral “in its then condition” when, taking into account the costs and probable benefits of preparation or processing and the fact that the secured party would be advancing the costs at its risk, it would be commercially unreasonable to dispose of the collateral in that condition.

5. Disposition by Junior Secured Party. Disposition rights under subsection (a) are not limited to first-priority security interests. Rather, any secured party as to whom there has been a default enjoys the right to dispose of collateral under this subsection. The exercise of this right by a secured party whose security interest is subordinate to that of another secured party does not of itself constitute a conversion or otherwise give rise to liability in favor of the holder of the senior security interest. Section 9-615 addresses application of the proceeds of a disposition by a junior secured party. Under section 9-615(a), a junior secured party owes no obligation to apply the proceeds of disposition to the satisfaction of obligations secured by a senior security interest. Section 9-615(g) builds on this general rule by protecting certain juniors from claims of a senior concerning cash proceeds of the disposition. Even if a senior were to have a nonarticle 9 claim to proceeds of a junior’s disposition, section 9-615(g) would protect a junior that acts in good faith and without knowledge that its actions violate the rights of a senior party. Because the disposition by a junior would not cut off a senior’s security interest or other lien (see section 9-617), in many (probably most) cases the junior’s receipt of the cash proceeds would not violate the rights of the senior.

The holder of a senior security interest is entitled, by virtue of its priority, to take possession of collateral from the junior secured party and conduct its own disposition, provided that the senior enjoys the right to take possession of the collateral from the debtor. See section 9-609. The holder of a junior security interest normally must notify the senior secured party of an impending disposition. See section 9-611. Regardless of whether the senior receives a notification from the junior, the junior’s disposition does not of itself discharge the senior’s security interest. See section 9-617. Unless the senior secured party has authorized the disposition free and clear of its security interest, the senior’s security interest ordinarily will survive the disposition by the junior and continue under section 9-315(a)(1). If the senior enjoys the right to repossess the collateral from the debtor, the senior likewise may recover the collateral from the transferee.

When a secured party’s collateral is encumbered by another security interest or other lien, one of the claimants may seek to invoke the equitable doctrine of marshaling. As explained by the Supreme Court, that doctrine “rests upon the principle that a creditor having two funds to satisfy his debt, may not by his application of them to his demand, defeat another creditor, who may resort to only one of the funds.” Meyer v. United States, 375 U.S. 233, 236 (1963), quoting Sowell v. Federal Reserve Bank, 268 U.S. 449, 456-57 (1925). The purpose of the doctrine is “to prevent the arbitrary action of a senior lienor from destroying the rights of a junior lienor or a creditor having less security.” Id. at 237. Because it is an equitable doctrine, marshaling “is applied only when it can be equitably fashioned as to all of the parties” having an interest in the property. Id. This article leaves courts free to determine whether marshaling is appropriate in any given case. See section 1-103.

6. Security Interests of Equal Rank. Sometimes two security interests enjoy the same priority. This situation may arise by contract, e.g., pursuant to “equal and ratable” provisions in indentures, or by operation of law. See section 9-328(6). This article treats a security interest having equal priority like a senior security interest in many respects. Assume, for example, that SP-X and SP-Y enjoy equal priority, SP-W is senior to them, and SP-Z is junior. If SP-X disposes of the collateral under this section, then (i) SP-W’s and SP-Y’s security interests survive the disposition but SP-Z’s does not, see section 9-617, and (ii) neither SP-W nor SP-Y is entitled to receive a distribution of proceeds, but SP-Z is. See section 9-615(a)(3).

When one considers the ability to obtain possession of the collateral, a secured party with equal priority is unlike a senior secured party. As the senior secured party, SP-W should enjoy the right to possession as against SP-X. See section 9-609, comment 5. If SP-W takes possession and disposes of the collateral under this section, it is entitled to apply the proceeds to satisfy its secured claim. SP-Y, however, should not have such a right to take possession from SP-X; otherwise, once SP-Y took possession from SP-X, SP-X would have the right to get possession from SP-Y, which would be obligated to redeliver possession to SP-X, and so on. Resolution of this problem is left to the parties and, if necessary, the courts.

7. Public vs. Private Dispositions. This part maintains two distinctions between “public” and other dispositions: (i) The secured party may buy at the former, but normally not at the latter (section 9-610(c)), and (ii) the debtor is entitled to notification of “the time and place of a public disposition” and notification of “the time after which” a private disposition or other intended disposition is to be made (section 9-613(1)(E)). It does not retain the distinction under former section 9-504(4), under which transferees in a noncomplying public disposition could lose protection more easily than transferees in other noncomplying dispositions. Instead, section 9-617(b) adopts a unitary standard. Although the term is not defined, as used in this article, a “public disposition” is one at which the price is determined after the public has had a meaningful opportunity for competitive bidding. “Meaningful opportunity” is meant to imply that some form of advertisement or public notice must precede the sale (or other disposition) and that the public must have access to the sale (disposition).

8. Investment Property. Dispositions of investment property may be regulated by the federal securities laws. Although a “public” disposition of securities under this article may implicate the registration requirements of the Securities Act of 1933, it need not do so. A disposition that qualifies for a “private placement” exemption under the Securities Act of 1933 nevertheless may constitute a “public” disposition within the meaning of this section. Moreover, the “commercially reasonable” requirements of subsection (b) need not prevent a secured party from conducting a foreclosure sale without the issuer’s compliance with federal registration requirements.

9. “Recognized Market.” A “recognized market,” as used in subsection (c) and section 9-611(d), is one in which the items sold are fungible and prices are not subject to individual negotiation. For example, the New York Stock Exchange is a recognized market. A market in which prices are individually negotiated or the items are not fungible is not a recognized market, even if the items are the subject of widely disseminated price guides or are disposed of through dealer auctions.

10. Relevance of Price. While not itself sufficient to establish a violation of this part, a low price suggests that a court should scrutinize carefully all aspects of a disposition to ensure that each aspect was commercially reasonable. Note also that even if the disposition is commercially reasonable, section 9-615(f) provides a special method for calculating a deficiency or surplus if (i) the transferee in the disposition is the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor, and (ii) the amount of proceeds of the disposition is significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought.

11. Warranties. Subsection (d) affords the transferee in a disposition under this section the benefit of any title, possession, quiet enjoyment, and similar warranties that would have accompanied the disposition by operation of nonarticle 9 law had the disposition been conducted under other circumstances. For example, the article 2 warranty of title would apply to a sale of goods, the analogous warranties of article 2A would apply to a lease of goods, and any common law warranties of title would apply to dispositions of other types of collateral. See, e.g., Restatement (2d), Contracts section 333 (warranties of assignor).

Subsection (e) explicitly provides that these warranties can be disclaimed either under other applicable law or by communicating a record containing an express disclaimer. The record need not be written, but an oral communication would not be sufficient. See section 9-102 (definition of “record”). Subsection (f) provides a sample of wording that will effectively exclude the warranties in a disposition under this section, whether or not the exclusion would be effective under nonarticle 9 law.

The warranties incorporated by subsection (d) are those relating to “title, possession, quiet enjoyment, and the like.” Depending on the circumstances, a disposition under this section also may give rise to other statutory or implied warranties, e.g., warranties of quality or fitness for purpose. Law other than this article determines whether such other warranties apply to a disposition under this section. Other law also determines issues relating to disclaimer of such warranties. For example, a foreclosure sale of a car by a car dealer could give rise to an implied warranty of merchantability (section 2-314) unless effectively disclaimed or modified (section 2-316).

This section’s approach to these warranties conflicts with the former comment to section 2-312. This article rejects the baseline assumption that commercially reasonable dispositions under this section are out of the ordinary commercial course or peculiar. The comment to section 2-312 has been revised accordingly.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Both Public and Private Sales Authorized. — The UCC specifically authorizes the disposition of collateral by either public or private proceedings. Associates Fin. Servs. Corp. v. Welborn, 269 N.C. 563, 153 S.E.2d 7 (1967).

A provision in a conditional sales contract for private sale of the chattel after default and repossession is not contrary to statute or public policy of this State, and is valid. Associates Fin. Servs. Corp. v. Welborn, 269 N.C. 563, 153 S.E.2d 7 (1967).

A stipulation in a chattel mortgage or conditional sales agreement authorizing the creditor to sell the personal property described therein at private sale violated no statute or public policy of this State. Appliance Buyers Credit Corp. v. Mason, 269 N.C. 567, 153 S.E.2d 3 (1967), decided under § 45-21.38 prior to the 1967 amendment thereto.

In order to recover a deficiency judgment under a conditional sales contract, plaintiff had to allege and prove facts showing (1) that defendant executed and delivered to him or his assignor the contract upon which he sued; (2) that defendant was in default under the terms of the contract; (3) lawful repossession and sale of the property or facts establishing the impossibility of such repossession and sale; (4) the application of the proceeds of the sale; and (5) the amount of the deficiency. Associates Fin. Servs. Corp. v. Welborn, 269 N.C. 563, 153 S.E.2d 7 (1967) (construing § 45-21.38 prior to the 1967 amendment thereto).

A creditor, when suing for a deficiency, has the burden of proving that the disposition of the collateral was conducted in a commercially reasonable manner. ITT-Industrial Credit Co. v. Milo Concrete Co., 31 N.C. App. 450, 229 S.E.2d 814 (1976); Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37

N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978); Church v. Mickler, 55 N.C. App. 724, 287 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

When a secured party seeks a deficiency judgment, it has the burden of establishing compliance with the twin duties of reasonable notification and commercially reasonable disposition. Don Jenkins & Son Ford-Mercury v. Catlette, 59 N.C. App. 482, 297 S.E.2d 409 (1982).

In order to recover a deficiency judgment against a defendant, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show the sale of the collateral was commercially reasonable. Parks Chevrolet, Inc. v. Watkins, 74 N.C. App. 719, 329 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

Failure to Conduct Commercially Reasonable Sale Not Absolute Bar to Deficiency Judgment. — A creditor's failure to conduct the sale in a commercially reasonable manner or to give the required notice of the sale is not an absolute bar to obtaining a deficiency judgment. NationsBank v. American Doubloon Corp., 125 N.C. App. 494, 481 S.E.2d 387 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 882, 487 S.E.2d 551 (1997).

Duty of Good Faith in Selling Property. — An authorization in a chattel mortgage or conditional sales agreement permitting a private sale of the personal property does not relieve the mortgagee, in taking possession of and selling the property, from the duty of acting in the utmost good faith. Appliance Buyers Credit Corp. v. Mason, 269 N.C. 567, 153 S.E.2d 3 (1967), decided under § 45-21.38 prior to the 1967 amendment thereto.

Conclusive Presumption of Commercial Reasonableness Created by Compliance. — If the secured creditor disposes of the collateral in a manner in substantial compliance with former Part 6 of this Article, a conclusive presumption of commercial reasonableness was created. ITT-Industrial Credit Co. v. Milo Con- crete Co., 31 N.C. App. 450, 229 S.E.2d 814 (1976).

The failure to give notice and/or to dispose of collateral in a commercially reasonable manner results in: (1) a presumption that the collateral was worth at least the amount of the debt; and (2) the amount that could have reasonably been obtained from a commercially reasonable sale of the collateral being credited to the debt. NationsBank v. American Doubloon Corp., 125 N.C. App. 494, 481 S.E.2d 387 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 882, 487 S.E.2d 551 (1997).

Public Sale Conclusively Presumed To Be Commercially Reasonable. — If the secured creditor disposed of the collateral at a public sale as directed in former G.S. 25-9-601 et seq., a conclusive presumption of commercial reasonableness was created. Parks Chevrolet, Inc. v. Watkins, 74 N.C. App. 719, 329 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

But a public sale might be commercially reasonable even though it did not substantially comply with former Part 6 of this Article. ITT-Industrial Credit Co. v. Milo Concrete Co., 31 N.C. App. 450, 229 S.E.2d 814 (1976).

Absent the establishment of the conclusive presumption of commercial reasonableness, under former Part 6 of this Article, a question of fact remained as to whether the sale was conducted in a commercially reasonable manner. ITT-Industrial Credit Co. v. Milo Concrete Co., 31 N.C. App. 450, 229 S.E.2d 814 (1976).

Former § 25-9-507 offered guidance as to what constituted a “commercially reasonable” disposition of collateral. Hodges v. Norton, 29 N.C. App. 193, 223 S.E.2d 848 (1976).

Although former G.S. 25-9-504 did not define commercial reasonableness, former G.S. 25-9-507(2) helped in the determination. Don Jenkins & Son Ford-Mercury v. Catlette, 59 N.C. App. 482, 297 S.E.2d 409 (1982).

Burden on Creditor to Prove Commercial Reasonableness. — A creditor, when suing for deficiency judgment, bears the burden of proving that the disposition of the collateral was conducted in a commercially reasonable manner, i.e., reasonable notice and commercially reasonable disposition. NationsBank v. American Doubloon Corp., 125 N.C. App. 494, 481 S.E.2d 387 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 882, 487 S.E.2d 551 (1997).

Commercial reasonableness is a question of fact. Fritts v. Selvais, 103 N.C. App. 149, 404 S.E.2d 505 (1991).

Commercial Reasonableness Is Jury Question. — Because reasonable minds may differ over the application of standard such as commercial reasonableness, this determination is inherently a jury question, which does not readily lend itself to summary judgment. Parks

Chevrolet, Inc. v. Watkins, 74 N.C. App. 719, 329 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

Absent the establishment of the conclusive presumption through a public sale in compliance with former G.S. 25-9-601 et seq., commercial reasonableness presented a factual issue to be determined by the jury in light of the relevant circumstances of each case. Parks Chevrolet, Inc. v. Watkins, 74 N.C. App. 719, 329 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

Commercial reasonableness is a jury question and does not readily lend itself to summary judgment, as reasonable minds may differ over what is commercially reasonable. NationsBank v. American Doubloon Corp., 125 N.C. App. 494, 481 S.E.2d 387 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 882, 487 S.E.2d 551 (1997).

A commercially reasonable sale is not an absolute bar to successor liability. G.P. Publications, Inc. v. Quebecor Printing - St. Paul, Inc., 125 N.C. App. 424, 481 S.E.2d 674 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 546, 488 S.E.2d 800 (1997).

All Elements of Sale Must Be Considered Together. — There may be cases in which the price paid for the collateral will be commercially reasonable even though a higher price could have been obtained at a different time or in a different market. Nor is a price which is slightly inadequate necessarily commercially unreasonable. The trier of fact must consider all the elements of the sale together. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

When deciding if a sale of repossessed collateral meets the statute, the trier of fact must consider all of the elements of the sale together. Don Jenkins & Son Ford-Mercury v. Catlette, 59 N.C. App. 482, 297 S.E.2d 409 (1982).

Effect of Grossly Inadequate Price. — When the debtor offers independent evidence of a gross inadequacy of price, in North Carolina, that sufficiently raises the issue of the commercial reasonableness of the sale to take the case to the jury. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

Price Actually Received as Evidence of Value of Collateral. — Once the secured party makes a prima facie showing that the sale was otherwise “commercially reasonable,” then the price he actually receives for the collateral must be accepted as competent evidence of the value of the collateral and, therefore, as competent evidence that the price was “commercially reasonable.” Such evidence is sufficient to withstand defendants’ motion for a directed verdict and to take the case to the jury. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

Three factors have been identified to give some guidance in determining the commercial reasonableness of the resale price of collateral: (1) the price reflected by price handbooks, (2) the fair market value of the collateral, and (3) the price received on a second resale. Fritts v. Selvais, 103 N.C. App. 149, 404 S.E.2d 505 (1991).

Public Sale Held Valid Despite Absence of Other Bidders. — A lender conducted a valid public sale of a repossessed automobile pursuant to a purchase money security agreement, notwithstanding the fact that no third persons bid at the sale, where the lender duly sent notice to the debtor, and the sale was held as scheduled, at which time any person had the right to enter a bid on the automobile. Under G.S. 25-9-605(1)(a), the sale did not have to be postponed because of the lack of bidders. Therefore, the transaction did not constitute a mere transfer of collateral under former G.S. 25-9-504(5) and defendant dealer had no obligation to account to debtor for any surplus proceeds received through its subsequent resale of the automobile. Shields v. Bobby Murray Chevrolet, Inc., 44 N.C. App. 427, 261 S.E.2d 238, aff'd, 300 N.C. 366, 266 S.E.2d 658 (1980).

Evidence as to Commercial Reasonableness of Resale Held Insufficient. — Where plaintiff made a private resale of repossessed collateral, and presented little evidence as to the manner of the resale other than its statement that plaintiff sold the automobile to a wholesaler, in granting summary judgment for plaintiff the court improperly concluded that the evidence presented was sufficient to establish the commercial reasonableness of the resale as a matter of law. Parks Chevrolet, Inc. v. Watkins, 74 N.C. App. 719, 329 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

A person who is liable to a secured party under a repurchase agreement and takes possession of collateral pursuant to an agreement with the secured party has the rights and duties of a secured party. Joyce v. Cloverbrook Homes, Inc., 81 N.C. App. 270, 344 S.E.2d 58, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 42 (1986).

Lender's Liability Under Repurchase Agreement. — A lender who repossessed a car and transferred it to a dealer under a repurchase agreement was not liable for the dealer's failure to sell the car within 90 days of repossession as required by former G.S. 25-9-505(1). Brooks v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 96 N.C. App. 89, 384 S.E.2d 288 (1989).

Guarantor May Waive Right to Commercially Reasonable Disposition of Debtor's Collateral. — While it is true that a debtor may not waive his entitlement to a commercially reasonable disposition of his collateral by a secured creditor, a guarantor may contractually waive his right to a commercially reasonable disposition of the debtor's collateral. Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. v. Johnston, 97 N.C. App. 575, 389 S.E.2d 429 (1990), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 254, 424 S.E.2d 918 (1993).

Dealer's Repossession of Car Did Not Change It to "Inventory." — Where bank recorded a lien on the title of car, plaintiff recorded a second lien on the title of the car and the bank subsequently repossessed the car and assigned its lien on the auto to defendant dealer, defendant assignee did not need to give notice to plaintiff when it sold the car; the car was consumer goods at the time plaintiff entered the finance agreement and the automobile did not become inventory upon dealer's repossession. City Fin. Co. v. Massey Motor Co., 95 N.C. App. 623, 383 S.E.2d 454, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 47, 389 S.E.2d 86 (1990).

(a) "Notification date." — In this section, "notification date" means the earlier of the date on which:

- (1) A secured party sends to the debtor and any secondary obligor an authenticated notification of disposition; or
- (2) The debtor and any secondary obligor waive the right to notification.

(b) Notification of disposition required. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this section, a secured party that disposes of collateral under G.S. 25-9-610 shall send to the persons specified in subsection (c) of this section a reasonable authenticated notification of disposition.

(c) Persons to be notified. — To comply with subsection (b) of this section, the secured party shall send an authenticated notification of disposition to:

- (1) The debtor;
- (2) Any secondary obligor; and
- (3) If the collateral is other than consumer goods:
 - a. Any other person from which the secured party has received, before the notification date, an authenticated notification of a claim of an interest in the collateral;

- b. Any other secured party or lienholder that, 10 days before the notification date, held a security interest in or other lien on the collateral perfected by the filing of a financing statement that:
 - 1. Identified the collateral;
 - 2. Was indexed under the debtor's name as of that date; and
 - 3. Was filed in the office in which to file a financing statement against the debtor covering the collateral as of that date; and
 - c. Any other secured party that, 10 days before the notification date, held a security interest in the collateral perfected by compliance with a statute, regulation, or treaty described in G.S. 25-9-311(a).
- (d) Subsection (b) inapplicable: perishable collateral; recognized market. — Subsection (b) of this section does not apply if the collateral is perishable or threatens to decline speedily in value or is of a type customarily sold on a recognized market.
- (e) Compliance with sub-subdivision (c)(3)b. — A secured party complies with the requirement for notification prescribed by sub-subdivision (c)(3)b. of this section if:
- (1) Not later than 20 days or earlier than 30 days before the notification date, the secured party requests, in a commercially reasonable manner, information concerning financing statements indexed under the debtor's name in the office indicated in sub-subdivision (c)(3)b. of this section; and
 - (2) Before the notification date, the secured party:
 - a. Did not receive a response to the request for information; or
 - b. Received a response to the request for information and sent an authenticated notification of disposition to each secured party or other lienholder named in that response whose financing statement covered the collateral. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-504(3).

2. Reasonable Notification. This section requires a secured party who wishes to dispose of collateral under section 9-610 to send "a reasonable authenticated notification of disposition" to specified interested persons, subject to certain exceptions. The notification must be reasonable as to the manner in which it is sent, its timeliness (i.e., a reasonable time before the disposition is to take place), and its content. See sections 9-612 (timeliness of notification), 9-613 (contents of notification generally), 9-614 (contents of notification in consumer-goods transactions).

3. Notification to Debtors and Secondary Obligors. This section imposes a duty to send notification of a disposition not only to the debtor but also to any secondary obligor. Subsections (b) and (c) resolve an uncertainty under former article 9 by providing that secondary obligors (sureties) are entitled to receive notification of an intended disposition of collateral, regardless of who created the security interest in the collateral. If the surety created the security interest, it would be the debtor. If it did not, it would be a secondary obligor. (This article also resolves the question of the secondary obligor's ability to waive, pre-default, the right to notification—waiver generally is not permitted. See section 9-602.) Section 9-605 relieves a secured party from any duty to send notification to a debtor or secondary obligor unknown to the secured party.

Under subsection (b), the principal obligor (borrower) is not always entitled to notification of disposition.

Example: Behnfeldt borrows on an unsecured basis, and Bruno grants a security interest in her car to secure the debt. Behnfeldt is a primary obligor, not a secondary obligor. As such, she is not entitled to notification of disposition under this section.

4. Notification to Other Secured Parties. Prior to the 1972 amendments to article 9, former section 9-504(3) required the enforcing secured party to send reasonable notification of the disposition:

except in the case of consumer goods to any other person who has a security interest in the collateral and who has duly filed a financing statement indexed in the name of the debtor in this State or who is known by the secured party to have a security interest in the collateral.

The 1972 amendments eliminated the duty to give notice to secured parties other than those from whom the foreclosing secured party had received written notice of a claim of an interest in the collateral.

Many of the problems arising from dispositions of collateral encumbered by multiple security interests can be ameliorated or solved by informing all secured parties of an intended disposition and affording them the opportunity to work with one another. To this end, subsection (c)(3)(B) expands the duties of the foreclosing secured party to include the duty to notify (and the corresponding burden of searching the files to discover) certain competing secured parties. The subsection imposes a search burden that in some cases may be greater than the pre-1972 burden on foreclosing secured parties but certainly is more modest than that faced by a new secured lender.

To determine who is entitled to notification, the foreclosing secured party must determine the proper office for filing a financing statement as of a particular date, measured by reference to the "notification date," as defined in subsection (a). This determination requires reference to the choice of law provisions of part 3. The secured party must ascertain whether any financing statements covering the collateral and indexed under the debtor's name, as the name existed as of that date, in fact were filed in that office. The foreclosing secured party generally need not notify secured parties whose effective financing statements have become more difficult to locate because of changes in the location of the debtor, proceeds rules, or changes in the debtor's name.

Under subsection (c)(3)(C), the secured party also must notify a secured party who has perfected a security interest by complying with a statute or treaty described in section 9-311(a), such as a certificate of title statute.

Subsection (e) provides a "safe harbor" that takes into account the delays that may be attendant to receiving information from the public filing offices. It provides, generally, that the secured party will be deemed to have satisfied its notification duty under subsection (c)(3)(B) if it requests a search from the proper office at least 20 but not more than 30 days before sending notification to the debtor and if it also sends a notification to all secured parties (and other lienholders) reflected on the search report. The secured party's duty under subsection (c)(3)(B) also will be satisfied if the secured party requests but does not receive a search report before the notification is sent to the debtor. Thus, if subsection (e) applies, a secured party who is entitled to notification under subsection (c)(3)(B) has no remedy against a foreclosing secured party who does not send the notification. The foreclosing secured party has complied with the notification requirement. Subsection (e) has no effect on the requirements of the other paragraphs of subsection (c). For example, if the foreclosing secured party received a notification from the holder of a conflicting security interest in accordance with subsection (c)(3)(A) but failed to send to the holder a notification of the disposition, the holder of the conflicting security interest would have the right to recover any loss under section 9-625(b).

5. Authentication Requirement. Subsections (b) and (c) explicitly provide that a notification of disposition must be "authenticated." Some cases read former section 9-504(3) as validating oral notification.

6. Second Try. This article leaves to judicial resolution, based upon the facts of each case, the question whether the requirement of "reasonable notification" requires a "second try," i.e., whether a secured party who sends notification and learns that the debtor did not receive it must attempt to locate the debtor and send another notification.

7. Recognized Market; Perishable Collateral. New subsection (d) makes it clear that there is no obligation to give notification of a disposition in the case of perishable collateral or collateral customarily sold on a recognized market (e.g., marketable securities). Former section 9-504(3) might be read (incorrectly) to relieve the secured party from its duty to notify a debtor but not from its duty to notify other secured parties in connection with dispositions of such collateral.

8. Failure to Conduct Notified Disposition. Nothing in this article prevents a secured party from electing not to conduct a disposition after sending a notification. Nor does this article prevent a secured party from electing to send a revised notification if its plans for disposition change. This assumes, however, that the secured party acts in good faith, the revised notification is reasonable, and the revised plan for disposition and any attendant delay are commercially reasonable.

9. Waiver. A debtor or secondary obligor may waive the right to notification under this section only by a post-default authenticated agreement. See section 9-624(a).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform

Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Notice to Debtor Required. — Where, prior to the filing by debtor of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, creditor with a nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest in debtor's household goods repossessed and sold the collateral at private sale, the creditor was required under former G.S. 25-9-504(3) to send written notice to the debtor, and failure to do so made creditor liable to debtor under former G.S. 25-9-507. Wood v. Provident Fin. Co., 13 Bankr. 245 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1981).

Notice of Collection. — The court found that notice was required under former G.S. 25-9-507 to debtors who provided instruments as collateral before the secured party collected under those instruments upon default. Roberts v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 124 N.C. App. 713, 478 S.E.2d 809 (1996), cert. granted, 345 N.C. 346, 483 S.E.2d 176 (1997).

Burden of Proving Notice to Debtor. — In actions by a creditor to obtain a deficiency judgment, the burden of proving that notice was properly sent by the creditor to the debtor rests with the creditor. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 38 N.C. App. 120, 247 S.E.2d 648 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Effort to Notify Held Reasonable. — Creditor's effort to notify debtors of private sale by sending a first class letter to debtors' last known address was reasonable where there was no evidence that the letter was returned, or that the debtors did not receive such notice, or that the debtors had provided creditor with a new address. In re Marshall, 219 Bankr. 687 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1997).

Effect of Failure to Give Notice of Sale. — Lack of notice raises a presumption that the collateral was worth at least the amount of the debt. This is not a conclusive presumption, however, and may be overcome by the creditor by proving that the collateral was sold at market value, and that the market value was less than the amount of the debt. Church v. Mickler, 55 N.C. App. 724, 287 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

A creditor's failure to give the debtor notice of the sale of collateral does not bar the creditor from obtaining a deficiency judgment against the debtor, provided that the creditor can prove that the sale resulted in the collateral's bringing its market value. Church v. Mickler, 55 N.C. App. 724, 287 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

A creditor's failure to give the required notice does not absolutely bar a deficiency judgment. Rather, the debt will be credited with the amount that reasonably could have been obtained via a commercially reasonable sale of the collateral. Church v. Mickler, 55 N.C. App. 724, 287 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

§ 25-9-612. Timeliness of notification before disposition of collateral.

(a) Reasonable time is question of fact. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this section, whether a notification is sent within a reasonable time is a question of fact.

(b) Ten-day period sufficient in nonconsumer transaction. — In a transaction other than a consumer transaction, a notification of disposition sent after default and 10 days or more before the earliest time of disposition set forth in the notification is sent within a reasonable time before the disposition. (2000-169, s. 1.)

2. Reasonable Notification. Section 9-611(b) requires the secured party to send a "reasonable authenticated notification." Under that section, as under former section 9-504(3), one aspect of a reasonable notification is its timeliness. This generally means that the notification must be sent at a reasonable time in advance of the date of a public disposition or the date after which a private disposition is to be made. A notification that is sent so near to the disposition date that a notified person could not be expected to act on or take account of the notification would be unreasonable.

3. Timeliness of Notification: Safe Harbor. The 10-day notice period in subsection (b) is intended to be a "safe harbor" and not a minimum requirement. To qualify for the "safe harbor" the notification must be sent after default. A notification also must be sent in a commercially reasonable manner. See section 9-611(b) ("reasonable authenticated notification"). These requirements prevent a secured party from taking advantage of the "safe harbor" by, for example, giving the debtor a notification at the time of the original extension of credit or sending the notice by surface mail to a debtor overseas.

§ 25-9-613. Contents and form of notification before disposition of collateral: general.

Except in a consumer-goods transaction, the following rules apply:

- (1) The contents of a notification of disposition are sufficient if the notification:
 - a. Describes the debtor and the secured party;
 - b. Describes the collateral that is the subject of the intended disposition;
 - c. States the method of intended disposition;
 - d. States that the debtor is entitled to an accounting of the unpaid indebtedness and states the charge, if any, for an accounting; and
 - e. States the time and place of a public disposition or the time after which any other disposition is to be made.
- (2) Whether the contents of a notification that lacks any of the information specified in subdivision (1) of this section are nevertheless sufficient is a question of fact.
- (3) The contents of a notification providing substantially the information specified in subdivision (1) of this section are sufficient, even if the notification includes:
 - a. Information not specified by that subdivision; or
 - b. Minor errors that are not seriously misleading.
- (4) A particular phrasing of the notification is not required.
- (5) The following form of notification and the form appearing in G.S. 25-9-614(3), when completed, each provides sufficient information:

NOTIFICATION OF DISPOSITION OF COLLATERAL

To: [Name of debtor, obligor, or other person to which the notification is sent]
From: [Name, address, and telephone number of secured party]
Name of Debtor(s): [Include only if debtor(s) is/are not an addressee]
[For a public disposition:]
We will sell [or lease or license, as applicable] the [describe collateral] [to the highest qualified bidder] in public as follows:
Day and Date: _____
Time: _____
Place: _____
[For a private disposition:]
We will sell [or lease or license, as applicable] the [describe collateral] privately sometime after [day and date] .
You are entitled to an accounting of the unpaid indebtedness secured by the property that we intend to sell [or lease or license, as applicable] [for a charge of $ _____].
You may request an accounting by calling us at [telephone number]
(2000-169, s. 1.)

- 1. Source. New.
- 2. Contents of Notification. To comply with the “reasonable authenticated notification” requirement of section 9-611(b), the contents of a notification must be reasonable. Except in a consumer-goods transaction, the contents of a notification that includes the information set forth in paragraph (1) are sufficient as a matter of law, unless the parties agree otherwise. (The reference to “time” of disposition means here, as it did in former section 9-504(3), not only the hour of the day but also the date.) Although a secured party may choose to include additional information concerning the transaction or the debtor’s rights and obligations, no additional information is required unless the parties agree otherwise. A notification that lacks some of the information set forth in paragraph (1) nevertheless may be sufficient if found to be reasonable by the trier of fact, under paragraph (2). A properly completed sample form of notification in paragraph (5) or in section 9-614(3) is an example of a notification that would contain the information set forth in paragraph (1). Under paragraph (4), however, no particular phrasing of the notification is required.

§ 25-9-614. Contents and form of notification before disposition of collateral: consumer-goods transaction.

In a consumer-goods transaction, the following rules apply:

- (1) A notification of disposition must provide the following information:
 - a. The information specified in G.S. 25-9-613(1);
 - b. A description of any liability for a deficiency of the person to which the notification is sent;
 - c. A telephone number from which the amount that must be paid to the secured party to redeem the collateral under G.S. 25-9-623 is available; and
 - d. A telephone number or mailing address from which additional information concerning the disposition and the obligation secured is available.
- (2) A particular phrasing of the notification is not required.
- (3) The following form of notification, when completed, provides sufficient information:

[Name and address of secured party]

NOTICE OF OUR PLAN TO SELL PROPERTY

[Name and address of any obligor who is also a debtor]

Subject: [Identification of Transaction]

We have your [describe collateral], because you broke promises in our agreement.

[For a public disposition:]

We will sell [describe collateral] at public sale. A sale could include a lease or license. The sale will be held as follows:

Date: _____

Time: _____

Place: _____

You may attend the sale and bring bidders if you want.

[For a private disposition:]

We will sell [describe collateral] at private sale sometime after [date]. A sale could include a lease or license.

The money that we get from the sale (after paying our costs) will reduce the amount you owe. If we get less money than you owe, you [will or will not, as applicable] still owe us the difference. If we get more money than you owe, you will get the extra money, unless we must pay it to someone else.

You can get the property back at any time before we sell it by paying us the full amount you owe (not just the past due payments), including our expenses. To learn the exact amount you must pay, call us at [telephone number].

If you want us to explain to you in writing how we have figured the amount that you owe us, you may call us at [telephone number] or write us at [secured party's address] and request a written explanation. [We will charge you $ _____ for the explanation if we sent you another written explanation of the amount you owe us within the last six months.]

If you need more information about the sale call us at [telephone number] [or write us at [secured party's address].

We are sending this notice to the following other people who have an interest in [describe collateral] or who owe money under your agreement:

[Names of all other debtors and obligors, if any]

We are sending this notice to the following other people who have an interest in [describe collateral] or who owe money under your agreement:

[Names of all other debtors and obligors, if any]

- (4) A notification in the form of subdivision (3) of this section is sufficient, even if additional information appears at the end of the form.
- (5) A notification in the form of subdivision (3) of this section is sufficient, even if it includes errors in information not required by subdivision (1) of this section, unless the error is misleading with respect to rights arising under this Article.
- (6) If a notification under this section is not in the form of subdivision (3) of this section, law other than this Article determines the effect of including information not required by subdivision (1) of this section. (2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. New.

2. Notification in Consumer-Goods Transactions. Paragraph (1) sets forth the information required for a reasonable notification in a consumer-goods transaction. A notification that lacks any of the information set forth in paragraph (1) is insufficient as a matter of law. Compare section 9-613(2), under which the trier of fact may find a notification to be sufficient even if it lacks some information listed in paragraph (1) of that section.

3. Safe-Harbor Form of Notification; Errors in Information. Although paragraph (2) provides that a particular phrasing of a notification is not required, paragraph (3) specifies a safe-harbor form that, when properly completed, satisfies paragraph (1). Paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) contain special rules applicable to erroneous and additional information. Under paragraph (4), a notification in the safe-harbor form specified in paragraph (3) is not rendered insufficient if it contains additional information at the end of the form. Paragraph (5) provides that nonmisleading errors in information contained in a notification are permitted if the safe-harbor form is used and if the errors are in information not required by paragraph (1). Finally, if a notification is in a form other than the paragraph (3) safe-harbor form, other law determines the effect of including in the notification information other than that required by paragraph (1).

§ 25-9-615. Application of proceeds of disposition; liability for deficiency and right to surplus.

(a) Application of proceeds. — A secured party shall apply or pay over for application the cash proceeds of disposition under G.S. 25-9-610 in the following order to:

- (1) The reasonable expenses of retaking, holding, preparing for disposition, processing, and disposing, and, to the extent provided for by agreement and not prohibited by law, reasonable attorney's fees and legal expenses incurred by the secured party;
- (2) The satisfaction of obligations secured by the security interest or agricultural lien under which the disposition is made;

- (3) The satisfaction of obligations secured by any subordinate security interest in or other subordinate lien on the collateral if:
 - a. The secured party receives from the holder of the subordinate security interest or other lien an authenticated demand for proceeds before distribution of the proceeds is completed; and
 - b. In a case in which a consignor has an interest in the collateral, the subordinate security interest or other lien is senior to the interest of the consignor; and
 - (4) A secured party that is a consignor of the collateral if the secured party receives from the consignor an authenticated demand for proceeds before distribution of the proceeds is completed.
- (b) Proof of subordinate interest. — If requested by a secured party, a holder of a subordinate security interest or other lien shall furnish reasonable proof of the interest or lien within a reasonable time. Unless the holder does so, the secured party need not comply with the holder's demand under subdivision (a)(3) of this section.
- (c) Application of noncash proceeds. — A secured party need not apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds of disposition under G.S. 25-9-610 unless the failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. A secured party that applies or pays over for application noncash proceeds shall do so in a commercially reasonable manner.
- (d) Surplus or deficiency if obligation secured. — If the security interest under which a disposition is made secures payment or performance of an obligation, after making the payments and applications required by subsection (a) of this section and permitted by subsection (c) of this section:
- (1) Unless subdivision (a)(4) of this section requires the secured party to apply or pay over cash proceeds to a consignor, the secured party shall account to and pay a debtor for any surplus; and
 - (2) The obligor is liable for any deficiency.
- (e) No surplus or deficiency in sales of certain rights to payment. — If the underlying transaction is a sale of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes:
- (1) The debtor is not entitled to any surplus; and
 - (2) The obligor is not liable for any deficiency.
- (f) Calculation of surplus or deficiency in disposition to person related to secured party. — The surplus or deficiency following a disposition is calculated based on the amount of proceeds that would have been realized in a disposition complying with this Part to a transferee other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor if:
- (1) The transferee in the disposition is the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor; and
 - (2) The amount of proceeds of the disposition is significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought.
- (g) Cash proceeds received by junior secured party. — A secured party that receives cash proceeds of a disposition in good faith and without knowledge that the receipt violates the rights of the holder of a security interest or other lien that is not subordinate to the security interest or agricultural lien under which the disposition is made:
- (1) Takes the cash proceeds free of the security interest or other lien;
 - (2) Is not obligated to apply the proceeds of the disposition to the satisfaction of obligations secured by the security interest or other lien; and
 - (3) Is not obligated to account to or pay the holder of the security interest or other lien for any surplus. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-504(1) and (2).

2. Application of Proceeds. This section contains the rules governing application of proceeds and the debtor's liability for a deficiency following a disposition of collateral. Subsection (a) sets forth the basic order of application. The proceeds are applied first to the expenses of disposition, second to the obligation secured by the security interest that is being enforced, and third, in the specified circumstances, to interests that are subordinate to that security interest.

Subsections (a) and (d) also address the right of a consignor to receive proceeds of a disposition by a secured party whose interest is senior to that of the consignor. Subsection (a) requires the enforcing secured party to pay excess proceeds first to subordinate secured parties or lienholders whose interests are senior to that of a consignor and, finally, to a consignor. Inasmuch as a consignor is the owner of the collateral, secured parties and lienholders whose interests are junior to the consignor's interest will not be entitled to any proceeds. In like fashion, under subsection (d)(1) the debtor is not entitled to a surplus when the enforcing secured party is required to pay over proceeds to a consignor.

3. Noncash Proceeds. Subsection (c) addresses the application of noncash proceeds of a disposition, such as a note or lease. The explanation in section 9-608, comment 4, generally applies to this subsection.

Example: A secured party in the business of selling or financing automobiles takes possession of collateral (an automobile) following its debtor's default. The secured party decides to sell the automobile in a private disposition under section 9-610 and sends appropriate notification under section 9-611. After undertaking its normal credit investigation and in accordance with its normal credit policies, the secured party sells the automobile on credit, on terms typical of the credit terms normally extended by the secured party in the ordinary course of its business. The automobile stands as collateral for the remaining balance of the price. The noncash proceeds received by the secured party are chattel paper. The secured party may wish to credit its debtor (the assignor) with the principal amount of the chattel paper or may wish to credit the debtor only as and when the payments are made on the chattel paper by the buyer.

Under subsection (c), the secured party is under no duty to apply the noncash proceeds (here, the chattel paper) or their value to the secured obligation unless its failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. If a secured party elects to apply the chattel paper to the outstanding obligation, however, it must do so in a commercially reasonable manner. The facts in the example indicate that it would be commercially unreasonable for the secured party to fail to apply the value of the chattel paper to the original debtor's secured obligation. Unlike the example in comment 4 to section 9-608, the noncash proceeds received in this example are of the type that the secured party regularly generates in the ordinary course of its financing business in nonforeclosure transactions. The original debtor should not be exposed to delay or uncertainty in this situation. Of course, there will be many situations that fall between the examples presented in the comment to section 9-608 and in this comment. This article leaves their resolution to the court based on the facts of each case.

One would expect that where noncash proceeds are or may be material, the secured party and debtor would agree to more specific standards in an agreement entered into before or after default. The parties may agree to the method of application of noncash proceeds if the method is not manifestly unreasonable. See section 9-603.

When the secured party is not required to "apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds," the proceeds nonetheless remain collateral subject to this article. See section 9-608, comment 4.

4. Surplus and Deficiency. Subsection (d) deals with surplus and deficiency. It revises former section 9-504(2) by imposing an explicit requirement that the secured party "pay" the debtor for any surplus, while retaining the secured party's duty to "account." Inasmuch as the debtor may not be an obligor, subsection (d) provides that the obligor (not the debtor) is liable for the deficiency. The special rule governing surplus and deficiency when receivables have been sold likewise takes into account the distinction between a debtor and an obligor. Subsection (d) also addresses the situation in which a consignor has an interest that is subordinate to the security interest being enforced.

5. Collateral Under New Ownership. When the debtor sells collateral subject to a security interest, the original debtor (creator of the security interest) is no longer a debtor inasmuch as it no longer has a property interest in the collateral; the buyer is the debtor. See section 9-102. As between the debtor (buyer of the collateral) and the original debtor (seller of the collateral), the debtor (buyer) normally would be entitled to the surplus following a disposition. Subsection (d) therefore requires the secured party to pay the surplus to the debtor (buyer), not to the original debtor (seller) with which it has dealt. But, because this situation typically arises as a result of the debtor's wrongful act, this article does not expose the secured party to the risk of determining ownership of the collateral. If the secured party does not know about the buyer and accordingly pays the surplus to the original debtor, the exculpatory provisions of this article exonerate the secured party from liability to the buyer. See sections 9-605 and 9-628(a) and (b). If a debtor sells collateral free of a security interest, as in a sale to a buyer in ordinary course of business (see section 9-320(a)), the property is no longer collateral and the buyer is not a debtor.

6. Certain "Low-Price" Dispositions. Subsection (f) provides a special method for calculating a deficiency or surplus when the secured party, a person related to the secured party (defined in section 9-102), or a secondary obligor acquires the collateral at a foreclosure disposition. It recognizes that when the foreclosing secured party or a related party is the transferee of the collateral, the secured party sometimes lacks the incentive to maximize the proceeds of disposition. As a consequence, the disposition may comply with the procedural requirements of this article (e.g., it is conducted in a commercially reasonable manner following reasonable notice) but nevertheless fetch a low price.

Subsection (f) adjusts for this lack of incentive. If the proceeds of a disposition of collateral to a secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor are "significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought," then instead of calculating a deficiency (or surplus) based on the actual net proceeds, the calculation is based upon the amount that would have been received in a commercially reasonable disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor. Subsection (f) thus rejects the view that the secured party's receipt of such a price necessarily constitutes noncompliance with part 6. However, such a price may suggest the need for greater judicial scrutiny. See section 9-610, comment 10.

7. "Person Related To." Section 9-102 defines "person related to." That term is a key element of the system provided in subsection (f) for low-price dispositions. One part of the definition applies when the secured party is an individual, and the other applies when the secured party is an organization. The definition is patterned closely on the corresponding definition in section 1.301(32) of the Uniform Consumer Credit Code.

§ 25-9-616. Explanation of calculation of surplus or deficiency.

(a) Definitions. — In this section:

(1) "Explanation" means a writing that:

- a. States the amount of the surplus or deficiency;
- b. Provides an explanation in accordance with subsection (c) of this section of how the secured party calculated the surplus or deficiency;
- c. States, if applicable, that future debits, credits, charges, including additional credit service charges or interest, rebates, and expenses may affect the amount of the surplus or deficiency; and
- d. Provides a telephone number or mailing address from which additional information concerning the transaction is available.

(2) "Request" means a record:

- a. Authenticated by a debtor or consumer obligor;
- b. Requesting that the recipient provide an explanation; and
- c. Sent after disposition of the collateral under G.S. 25-9-610.

(b) Explanation of calculation. — In a consumer-goods transaction in which the debtor is entitled to a surplus or a consumer obligor is liable for a deficiency under G.S. 25-9-615, the secured party shall:

- (1) Send an explanation to the debtor or consumer obligor, as applicable, after the disposition and:
 - a. Before or when the secured party accounts to the debtor and pays any surplus or first makes written demand on the consumer obligor after the disposition for payment of the deficiency; and
 - b. Within 14 days after receipt of a request; or

- (2) In the case of a consumer obligor who is liable for a deficiency, within 14 days after receipt of a request, send to the consumer obligor a record waiving the secured party's right to a deficiency.
- (c) Required information. — To comply with sub-subdivision (a)(1)b. of this section, a writing must provide the following information in the following order:
- (1) The aggregate amount of obligations secured by the security interest under which the disposition was made, and, if the amount reflects a rebate of unearned interest or credit service charge, an indication of that fact, calculated as of a specified date:
 - a. If the secured party takes or receives possession of the collateral after default, not more than 35 days before the secured party takes or receives possession; or
 - b. If the secured party takes or receives possession of the collateral before default or does not take possession of the collateral, not more than 35 days before the disposition;
 - (2) The amount of proceeds of the disposition;
 - (3) The aggregate amount of the obligations after deducting the amount of proceeds;
 - (4) The amount, in the aggregate or by type, and types of expenses, including expenses of retaking, holding, preparing for disposition, processing, and disposing of the collateral, and attorney's fees secured by the collateral which are known to the secured party and relate to the current disposition;
 - (5) The amount, in the aggregate or by type, and types of credits, including rebates of interest or credit service charges, to which the obligor is known to be entitled and which are not reflected in the amount in subdivision (1) of this subsection; and
 - (6) The amount of the surplus or deficiency.
- (d) Substantial compliance. — A particular phrasing of the explanation is not required. An explanation complying substantially with the requirements of subsection (a) of this section is sufficient, even if it includes minor errors that are not seriously misleading.
- (e) Charges for responses. — A debtor or consumer obligor is entitled without charge to one response to a request under this section during any six-month period in which the secured party did not send to the debtor or consumer obligor an explanation pursuant to subdivision (b)(1) of this section. The secured party may require payment of a charge not exceeding twenty-five dollars ($25.00) for each additional response. (2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. New.

2. Duty to Send Information Concerning Surplus or Deficiency. This section reflects the view that, in every consumer-goods transaction, the debtor or obligor is entitled to know the amount of a surplus or deficiency and the basis upon which the surplus or deficiency was calculated. Under subsection (b)(1), a secured party is obligated to provide this information (an "explanation," defined in subsection (a)(1)) no later than the time that it accounts for and pays a surplus or the time of its first written attempt to collect the deficiency. The obligor need not make a request for an accounting in order to receive an explanation. A secured party who does not attempt to collect a deficiency in writing or account for and pay a surplus has no obligation to send an explanation under subsection (b)(1) and, consequently, cannot be liable for noncompliance.

A debtor or secondary obligor need not wait until the secured party commences written collection efforts in order to receive an explanation of how a deficiency or surplus was calculated. Subsection (b)(2) obliges the secured party to send an explanation within 14 days after it receives a "request" (defined in subsection (a)(2)).

3. Explanation of Calculation of Surplus or Deficiency. Subsection (c) contains the requirements for how a calculation of a surplus or deficiency must be explained in order to satisfy subsection (a)(1)(B). It gives a secured party some discretion concerning rebates of interest or credit service charges. The secured party may include these rebates in the aggregate amount of obligations secured, under subsection (c)(1), or may include them with other types of rebates and credits under subsection (c)(5). Rebates of interest or credit service charges are the only types of rebates for which this discretion is provided. If the secured party provides an explanation that includes rebates of precomputed interest, its explanation must so indicate. The expenses and attorney's fees to be described pursuant to subsection (c)(4) are those relating to the most recent disposition, not those that may have been incurred in connection with earlier enforcement efforts and which have been resolved by the parties.

4. Liability for Noncompliance. A secured party who fails to comply with subsection (b)(2) is liable for any loss caused plus $500. See section 9-625(b), (c), and (e)(6). A secured party who fails to send an explanation under subsection (b)(1) is liable for any loss caused plus, if the noncompliance was "part of a pattern, or consistent with a practice of noncompliance," $500. See section 9-625(b), (c), and (e)(5). However, a secured party who fails to comply with this section is not liable for statutory minimum damages under section 9-625(c)(2). See section 9-628(d).

§ 25-9-617. Rights of transferee of collateral.

(a) Effects of disposition. — A secured party's disposition of collateral after default:

- (1) Transfers to a transferee for value all of the debtor's rights in the collateral;
- (2) Discharges the security interest under which the disposition is made; and
- (3) Discharges any subordinate security interest or other subordinate lien.

(b) Rights of good-faith transferee. — A transferee that acts in good faith takes free of the rights and interests described in subsection (a) of this section, even if the secured party fails to comply with this Article or the requirements of any judicial proceeding.

(c) Rights of other transferee. — If a transferee does not take free of the rights and interests described in subsection (a) of this section, the transferee takes the collateral subject to:

- (1) The debtor's rights in the collateral;
- (2) The security interest or agricultural lien under which the disposition is made; and
- (3) Any other security interest or other lien. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-504(4).

2. Title Taken by Good Faith Transferee.

Subsection (a) sets forth the rights acquired by persons who qualify under subsection (b)—transferees who act in good faith. Such a person is a "transferee," inasmuch as a buyer at a foreclosure sale does not meet the definition of "purchaser" in section 1-201 (the transfer is not, vis-a-vis the debtor, "voluntary"). By virtue of the expanded definition of the term "debtor" in section 9-102, subsection (a) makes clear that the ownership interest of a person who bought the collateral subject to the security interest is terminated by a subsequent disposition under this part. Such a person is a debtor under this article. Under former article 9, the result arguably was the same, but the statute was less clear. Under subsection (a), a disposition normally discharges the security interest being foreclosed and any subordinate security interests and other liens.

A disposition has the effect specified in subsection (a), even if the secured party fails to comply with this article. An aggrieved person (e.g., the holder of a subordinate security interest to whom a notification required by section 9-611 was not sent) has a right to recover any loss under section 9-625(b).

3. Unitary Standard in Public and Private Dispositions. Subsection (b) now contains a unitary standard that applies to transferees in both private and public dispositions—acting in good faith. However, this change from former section 9-504(4) should not be interpreted to mean that a transferee acts in good faith even though it has knowledge of defects or buys in collusion, standards applicable to public dispositions under the former section. Properly understood, those standards were specific examples of the absence of good faith.

4. Title Taken by Nonqualifying Transferee. Subsection (c) specifies the consequences for a transferee who does not qualify for protection under subsections (a) and (b) (i.e., a transferee who does not act in good faith). The transferee takes subject to the rights of the debtor, the enforcing secured party, and other security interests or other liens.

§ 25-9-618. Rights and duties of certain secondary obligors.

(a) Rights and duties of secondary obligor. — A secondary obligor acquires the rights and becomes obligated to perform the duties of the secured party after the secondary obligor:

- (1) Receives an assignment of a secured obligation from the secured party;
- (2) Receives a transfer of collateral from the secured party and agrees to accept the rights and assume the duties of the secured party; or
- (3) Is subrogated to the rights of a secured party with respect to collateral.

(b) Effect of assignment, transfer, or subrogation. — An assignment, transfer, or subrogation described in subsection (a) of this section:

- (1) Is not a disposition of collateral under G.S. 25-9-610; and
- (2) Relieves the secured party of further duties under this Article. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-504(5).

2. Scope of This Section. Under this section, assignments of secured obligations and other transactions (regardless of form) that function like assignments of secured obligations are not dispositions to which part 6 applies. Rather, they constitute assignments of rights and (occasionally) delegations of duties. Application of this section may require an investigation into the agreement of the parties, which may not be reflected in the words of the repurchase agreement (e.g., when the agreement requires a recourse party to “purchase the collateral” but contemplates that the purchaser will then conduct an article 9 foreclosure disposition).

This section, like former section 9-504(5), does not constitute a general and comprehensive rule for allocating rights and duties upon assignment of a secured obligation. Rather, it applies only in situations involving a secondary obligor described in subsection (a). In other contexts, the agreement of the parties and applicable law other than article 9 determine whether the assignment imposes upon the assignee any duty to the debtor and whether the assignor retains its duties to the debtor after the assignment.

Subsection (a)(1) applies when there has been an assignment of an obligation that is secured at the time it is assigned. Thus, if a secondary obligor acquires the collateral at a disposition under section 9-610 and simultaneously or subsequently discharges the unsecured deficiency claim, subsection (a)(1) is not implicated. Similarly, subsection (a)(3) applies only when the secondary obligor is subrogated to the secured party's rights with respect to collateral. Thus, this subsection will not be implicated if a secondary obligor discharges the debtor's unsecured obligation for a post-disposition deficiency. Similarly, if the secured party disposes of some of the collateral and the secondary obligor thereafter discharges the remaining obligation, subsection (a) applies only with respect to rights and duties concerning the remaining collateral, and, under subsection (b), the subrogation is not a disposition of the remaining collateral.

As discussed more fully in comment 3, a secondary obligor may receive a transfer of collateral in a disposition under section 9-610 in exchange for a payment that is applied against the secured obligation. However, a secondary obligor who pays and receives a transfer of collateral does not necessarily become subrogated to the rights of the secured party as contemplated by subsection (a)(3). Only to the extent the secondary obligor makes a payment in satisfaction of its secondary obligation would it become subrogated. To the extent its payment constitutes the price of the collateral in a section 9-610 disposition by the secured party, the secondary obligor would not be subrogated. Thus, if the amount paid by the secondary obligor for the collateral in a section 9-610 disposition is itself insufficient to discharge the secured obligation, but the secondary obligor makes an additional payment that satisfies the remaining balance, the secondary obligor would be subrogated to the secured party's deficiency claim. However, the duties of the secured party as such would have come to an end with respect to that collateral. In some situations the capacity in which the payment is made may be unclear. Accordingly, the parties should in their relationship provide clear evidence of the nature and circumstances of the payment by the secondary obligor.

3. Transfer of Collateral to Secondary Obligor. It is possible for a secured party to transfer collateral to a secondary obligor in a transaction that is a disposition under section 9-610 and that establishes a surplus or deficiency under section 9-615. Indeed, this article includes a special rule, in section 9-615(f), for establishing a deficiency in the case of some dispositions to, inter alia, secondary obligors. This article rejects the view, which some may have ascribed to former section 9-504(5), that a transfer of collateral to a recourse party can never constitute a disposition of collateral which discharges a security interest. Inasmuch as a secured party could itself buy collateral at its own public sale, it makes no sense to prohibit a recourse party ever from buying at the sale.

4. Timing and Scope of Obligations. Under subsection (a), a recourse party acquires rights and incurs obligations only "after" one of the specified circumstances occurs. This makes clear that when a successor assignee, transferee, or subrogee becomes obligated it does not assume any liability for earlier actions or inactions of the secured party whom it has succeeded unless it agrees to do so. Once the successor becomes obligated, however, it is responsible for complying with the secured party's duties thereafter. For example, if the successor is in possession of collateral, then it has the duties specified in section 9-207.

Under subsection (b), the same event (assignment, transfer, or subrogation) that gives rise to rights to, and imposes obligations on, a successor relieves its predecessor of any further duties under this article. For example, if the security interest is enforced after the secured obligation is assigned, the assignee—but not the assignor—has the duty to comply with this part. Similarly, the assignment does not excuse the assignor from liability for failure to comply with duties that arose before the event or impose liability on the assignee for the assignor's failure to comply.

§ 25-9-619. Transfer of record or legal title.

(a) "Transfer statement." — In this section, "transfer statement" means a record authenticated by a secured party stating:

- (1) That the debtor has defaulted in connection with an obligation secured by specified collateral;
- (2) That the secured party has exercised its postdefault remedies with respect to the collateral;
- (3) That, by reason of the exercise, a transferee has acquired the rights of the debtor in the collateral; and
- (4) The name and mailing address of the secured party, debtor, and transferee.

(b) Effect of transfer statement. — A transfer statement entitles the transferee to the transfer of record of all rights of the debtor in the collateral specified in the statement in any official filing, recording, registration, or certificate-of-title system covering the collateral. If a transfer statement is presented with the applicable fee and request form to the official or office responsible for maintaining the system, the official or office shall:

- (1) Accept the transfer statement;
- (2) Promptly amend its records to reflect the transfer; and
- (3) If applicable, issue a new appropriate certificate of title in the name of the transferee.

(c) Transfer not a disposition; no relief of secured party's duties. — A transfer of the record or legal title to collateral to a secured party under subsection (b) of this section or otherwise is not of itself a disposition of collateral under this Article and does not of itself relieve the secured party of its duties under this Article. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Transfer of Record or Legal Title. Potential buyers of collateral that is covered by a certificate of title (e.g., an automobile) or is subject to a registration system (e.g., a copy-right) typically require as a condition of their purchase that the certificate or registry reflect their ownership. In many cases, this condition can be met only with the consent of the record owner. If the record owner is the debtor and, as may be the case after the default, the debtor refuses to cooperate, the secured party may have great difficulty disposing of the collateral.

Subsection (b) provides a simple mechanism for obtaining record or legal title, for use primarily when other law does not provide one. Of course, use of this mechanism will not be effective to clear title to the extent that subsection (b) is preempted by federal law. Subsection (b) contemplates a transfer of record or legal title to a third party, following a secured party's exercise of its disposition or acceptance remedies under this part, as well as a transfer by a debtor to a secured party prior to the secured party's exercise of those remedies. Under subsection (c), a transfer of record or legal title (under subsection (b) or under other law) to a secured party prior to the exercise of those remedies merely puts the secured party in a position to pass legal or record title to a transferee at foreclosure. A secured party who has obtained record or legal title retains its duties with respect to enforcement of its security interest, and the debtor retains its rights as well.

3. Title-Clearing Systems Under Other Law. Applicable non-UCC law (e.g., a certificate of title statute, federal registry rules, or the like) may provide a means by which the secured party may obtain or transfer record or legal title for the purpose of a disposition of the property under this article. The mechanism provided by this section is in addition to any title clearing provision under law other than this article.

§ 25-9-620. Acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of obligation; compulsory disposition of collateral.

(a) Conditions to acceptance in satisfaction. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (g) of this section, a secured party may accept collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures only if:

- (1) The debtor consents to the acceptance under subsection (c) of this section;
- (2) The secured party does not receive, within the time set forth in subsection (d) of this section, a notification of objection to the proposal authenticated by:
 - a. A person to which the secured party was required to send a proposal under G.S. 25-9-621; or
 - b. Any other person, other than the debtor, holding an interest in the collateral subordinate to the security interest that is the subject of the proposal;
- (3) If the collateral is consumer goods, the collateral is not in the possession of the debtor when the debtor consents to the acceptance; and
- (4) Subsection (e) of this section does not require the secured party to dispose of the collateral or the debtor waives the requirement pursuant to G.S. 25-9-624.

(b) Purported acceptance ineffective. — A purported or apparent acceptance of collateral under this section is ineffective unless:

- (1) The secured party consents to the acceptance in an authenticated record or sends a proposal to the debtor; and
- (2) The conditions of subsection (a) of this section are met.

(c) Debtor's consent. — For purposes of this section:

- (1) A debtor consents to an acceptance of collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures only if the debtor agrees to the terms of the acceptance in a record authenticated after default; and
- (2) A debtor consents to an acceptance of collateral in full satisfaction of the obligation it secures only if the debtor agrees to the terms of the acceptance in a record authenticated after default or the secured party:

- a. Sends to the debtor after default a proposal that is unconditional or subject only to a condition that collateral not in the possession of the secured party be preserved or maintained;
 - b. In the proposal, proposes to accept collateral in full satisfaction of the obligation it secures; and
 - c. Does not receive a notification of objection authenticated by the debtor within 20 days after the proposal is sent.
- (d) Effectiveness of notification. — To be effective under subdivision (a)(2) of this section, a notification of objection must be received by the secured party:
- (1) In the case of a person to which the proposal was sent pursuant to G.S. 25-9-621, within 20 days after notification was sent to that person; and
 - (2) In other cases:
 - a. Within 20 days after the last notification was sent pursuant to G.S. 25-9-621; or
 - b. If a notification was not sent, before the debtor consents to the acceptance under subsection (c) of this section.
- (e) Mandatory disposition of consumer goods. — A secured party that has taken possession of collateral shall dispose of the collateral pursuant to G.S. 25-9-610 within the time specified in subsection (f) of this section if:
- (1) Sixty percent (60%) of the cash price has been paid in the case of a purchase-money security interest in consumer goods; or
 - (2) Sixty percent (60%) of the principal amount of the obligation secured has been paid in the case of a non-purchase-money security interest in consumer goods.
- (f) Compliance with mandatory disposition requirement. — To comply with subsection (e) of this section, the secured party shall dispose of the collateral:
- (1) Within 90 days after taking possession; or
 - (2) Within any longer period to which the debtor and all secondary obligors have agreed in an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default.
- (g) No partial satisfaction in consumer transaction. — In a consumer transaction, a secured party may not accept collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-505.

2. Overview. This section and the two sections following deal with strict foreclosure, a procedure by which the secured party acquires the debtor's interest in the collateral without the need for a sale or other disposition under section 9-610. Although these provisions derive from former section 9-505, they have been entirely reorganized and substantially rewritten. The more straightforward approach taken in this article eliminates the fiction that the secured party always will present a "proposal" for the retention of collateral and the debtor will have a fixed period to respond. By eliminating the need (but preserving the possibility) for proceeding in that fashion, this section eliminates much of the awkwardness of former section 9-505. It reflects the belief that strict foreclosures should be encouraged and often will produce better results than a disposition for all concerned.

Subsection (a) sets forth the conditions necessary to an effective acceptance (formerly, retention) of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation. Section 9-621 requires in addition that a secured party who wishes to proceed under this section notify certain other persons who have or claim to have an interest in the collateral. Unlike the failure to meet the conditions in subsection (a), under section 9-622(b) the failure to comply with the notification requirement of section 9-621 does not render the acceptance of collateral ineffective. Rather, the acceptance can take effect notwithstanding the secured party's noncompliance. A person to whom the required notice was not sent has the right to recover damages under section 9-625(b). Section 9-622(a) sets forth the effect of an acceptance of collateral.

3. Conditions to Effective Acceptance.

Subsection (a) contains the conditions necessary to the effectiveness of an acceptance of collateral. Subsection (a)(1) requires the debtor's consent. Under subsections (c)(1) and (c)(2), the debtor may consent by agreeing to the acceptance in writing after default. Subsection (c)(2) contains an alternative method by which to satisfy the debtor's-consent condition in subsection (a)(1). It follows the proposal-and-objection model found in former section 9-505: The debtor consents if the secured party sends a proposal to the debtor and does not receive an objection within 20 days. Under subsection (c)(1), however, that silence is not deemed to be consent with respect to acceptances in partial satisfaction. Thus, a secured party who wishes to conduct a "partial strict foreclosure" must obtain the debtor's agreement in a record authenticated after default. In all other respects, the conditions necessary to an effective partial strict foreclosure are the same as those governing acceptance of collateral in full satisfaction. (But see subsection (g), prohibiting partial strict foreclosure of a security interest in consumer transactions.)

The time when a debtor consents to a strict foreclosure is significant in several circumstances under this section and the following one. See sections 9-620(a)(1), (d)(2), 9-621(a)(1), (a)(2), and (a)(3). For purposes of determining the time of consent, a debtor's conditional consent constitutes consent.

Subsection (a)(2) contains the second condition to the effectiveness of an acceptance under this section—the absence of a timely objection from a person holding a junior interest in the collateral or from a secondary obligor. Any junior party—secured party or lienholder—is entitled to lodge an objection to a proposal, even if that person was not entitled to notification under section 9-621. Subsection (d), discussed below, indicates when an objection is timely.

Subsections (a)(3) and (a)(4) contain special rules for transactions in which consumers are involved. See comment 12.

4. Proposals. Section 9-102 defines the term "proposal." It is necessary to send a "proposal" to the debtor only if the debtor does not agree to an acceptance in an authenticated record as described in subsection (c)(1) or (c)(2). Section 9-621(a) determines whether it is necessary to send a proposal to third parties. A proposal need not take any particular form as long as it sets forth the terms under which the secured party is willing to accept collateral in satisfaction. A proposal to accept collateral should specify the amount (or a means of calculating the amount, such as by including a per diem accrual figure) of the secured obligations to be satisfied, state the conditions (if any) under which the proposal may be revoked, and describe any other applicable conditions. Note, however, that a conditional proposal generally requires the debtor's agreement in order to take effect. See subsection (c).

5. Secured Party's Agreement; No "Constructive" Strict Foreclosure. The conditions of subsection (a) relate to actual or implied consent by the debtor and any secondary obligor or holder of a junior security interest or lien. To ensure that the debtor cannot unilaterally cause an acceptance of collateral, subsection (b) provides that compliance with these conditions is necessary but not sufficient to cause an acceptance of collateral. Rather, under subsection (b), acceptance does not occur unless, in addition, the secured party consents to the acceptance in an authenticated record or sends to the debtor a proposal. For this reason, a mere delay in collection or disposition of collateral does not constitute a "constructive" strict foreclosure. Instead, delay is a factor relating to whether the secured party acted in a commercially reasonable manner for purposes of section 9-607 or 9-610. A debtor's voluntary surrender of collateral to a secured party and the secured party's acceptance of possession of the collateral does not, of itself, necessarily raise an implication that the secured party intends or is proposing to accept the collateral in satisfaction of the secured obligation under this section.

6. When Acceptance Occurs. This section does not impose any formalities or identify any steps that a secured party must take in order to accept collateral once the conditions of subsections (a) and (b) have been met. Absent facts or circumstances indicating a contrary intention, the fact that the conditions have been met provides a sufficient indication that the secured party has accepted the collateral on the terms to which the secured party has consented or proposed and the debtor has consented or failed to object. Following a proposal, acceptance of the collateral normally is automatic upon the secured party's becoming bound and the time for objection passing. As a matter of good business practice, an enforcing secured party may wish to memorialize its acceptance following a proposal, such as by notifying the debtor that the strict foreclosure is effective or by placing a written record to that effect in its files. The secured party's agreement to accept collateral is self-executing and cannot be breached. The secured party is bound by its agreement to accept collateral and by any proposal to which the debtor consents.

7. No Possession Requirement. This section eliminates the requirement in former section 9-505 that the secured party be "in possession" of collateral. It clarifies that intangible collateral, which cannot be possessed, may be subject to a strict foreclosure under this section. However, under subsection (a)(3), if the collateral is consumer goods, acceptance does not occur unless the debtor is not in possession.

8. When Objection Timely. Subsection (d) explains when an objection is timely and thus prevents an acceptance of collateral from taking effect. An objection by a person to which notification was sent under section 9-621 is effective if it is received by the secured party within 20 days from the date the notification was sent to that person. Other objecting parties (i.e., third parties who are not entitled to notification) may object at any time within 20 days after the last notification is sent under section 9-621. If no such notification is sent, third parties must object before the debtor agrees to the acceptance in writing or is deemed to have consented by silence. The former may occur any time after default, and the latter requires a 20-day waiting period. See subsection (c).

9. Applicability of Other Law. This section does not purport to regulate all aspects of the transaction by which a secured party may become the owner of collateral previously owned by the debtor. For example, a secured party's acceptance of a motor vehicle in satisfaction of secured obligations may require compliance with the applicable motor vehicle certificate of title law. State legislatures should conform those laws so that they mesh well with this section and section 9-610, and courts should construe those laws and this section harmoniously. A secured party's acceptance of collateral in the possession of the debtor also may implicate statutes dealing with a seller's retention of possession of goods sold.

10. Accounts, Chattel Paper, Payment Intangibles, and Promissory Notes. If the collateral is accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes, then a secured party's acceptance of the collateral in satisfaction of secured obligations would constitute a sale to the secured party. That sale normally would give rise to a new security interest (the ownership interest) under sections 1-201(37) and 9-109. In the case of accounts and chattel paper, the new security interest would remain perfected by a filing that was effective to perfect the secured party's original security interest. In the case of payment intangibles or promissory notes, the security interest would be perfected when it attaches. See section 9-309. However, the procedures for acceptance of collateral under this section satisfy all necessary formalities and a new security agreement authenticated by the debtor would not be necessary.

11. Role of Good Faith. Section 1-203 imposes an obligation of good faith on a secured party's enforcement under this article. This obligation may not be disclaimed by agreement. See section 1-102. Thus, a proposal and acceptance made under this section in bad faith would not be effective. For example, a secured party's proposal to accept marketable securities worth $1,000 in full satisfaction of indebtedness in the amount of $100, made in the hopes that the debtor might inadvertently fail to object, would be made in bad faith. On the other hand, in the normal case proposals and acceptances should be not second guessed on the basis of the "value" of the collateral involved. Disputes about valuation or even a clear excess of collateral value over the amount of obligations satisfied do not necessarily demonstrate the absence of good faith.

12. Special Rules in Consumer Cases. Subsection (e) imposes an obligation on the secured party to dispose of consumer goods under certain circumstances. Subsection (f) explains when a disposition that is required under subsection (e) is timely. An effective acceptance of collateral cannot occur if subsection (e) requires a disposition unless the debtor waives this requirement pursuant to section 9-624(b). Moreover, a secured party who takes possession of collateral and unreasonably delays disposition violates subsection (e), if applicable, and may also violate section 9-610 or other provisions of this part. Subsection (e) eliminates as superfluous the express statutory reference to "conversion" found in former section 9-505. Remedies available under other law, including conversion, remain available under this article in appropriate cases. See sections 1-103 and 1-106.

Subsection (g) prohibits the secured party in consumer transactions from accepting collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures. If a secured party attempts an acceptance in partial satisfaction in a consumer transaction, the attempted acceptance is void.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

"Secured party" was not synonymous with "titleholder" and holding title was not a prerequisite to being a secured party within the context of former G.S. 25-9-506. Lincoln v.

Grinstead, 94 N.C. App. 122, 379 S.E.2d 671 (1989).

Husband as Secured Party Although Title Was in Wife's Name. — Trial court did not commit error by treating husband as converter of motor vehicle even though the repossessed vehicle was titled in his wife's name only; where record revealed that defendant husband negotiated with plaintiff throughout the financial transaction regarding the sale of the vehicle, represented to plaintiff that the vehicle's transmission was in good condition, signed the sales agreement conveying the truck to plaintiff, and completed repossession forms with the Department of Motor Vehicles, husband was a party to sales agreement which created a security interest in the vehicle, and therefore was subject to the provisions of this section pertaining to compulsory disposition of collateral. Lincoln v. Grinstead, 94 N.C. App. 122, 379 S.E.2d 671 (1989).

Lender's Liability When Collateral Transferred Under Repurchase Agreement. — A lender who repossessed a car and transferred it to a dealer under a repurchase agreement was not liable for the dealer's failure to sell the car within ninety days of repossession as required by former G.S. 25-9-506(1). Brooks v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 96 N.C.

App. 89, 384 S.E.2d 288 (1989).

Not Applicable to Instrument Intended to Be Cashed in. — Former G.S. 25-9-506(2) did not apply where the collateral involved was an instrument which the secured party intended to cash in. Roberts v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 124 N.C. App. 713, 478 S.E.2d 809 (1996), cert. granted, 345 N.C. 346, 483 S.E.2d 176 (1997).

The failure to give notice and/or to dispose of collateral in a commercially reasonable manner results in: (1) a presumption that the collateral was worth at least the amount of the debt; and (2) the amount that could have reasonably been obtained from a commercially reasonable sale of the collateral being credited to the debt. NationsBank v. American Doubloon Corp., 125 N.C. App. 494, 481 S.E.2d 387 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 882, 487 S.E.2d 551 (1997).

§ 25-9-621. Notification of proposal to accept collateral.

(a) Persons to which proposal to be sent. — A secured party that desires to accept collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures shall send its proposal to:

- (1) Any person from which the secured party has received, before the debtor consented to the acceptance, an authenticated notification of a claim of an interest in the collateral;
- (2) Any other secured party or lienholder that, 10 days before the debtor consented to the acceptance, held a security interest in or other lien on the collateral perfected by the filing of a financing statement that:
 - a. Identified the collateral;
 - b. Was indexed under the debtor's name as of that date; and
 - c. Was filed in the office or offices in which to file a financing statement against the debtor covering the collateral as of that date; and
- (3) Any other secured party that, 10 days before the debtor consented to the acceptance, held a security interest in the collateral perfected by compliance with a statute, regulation, or treaty described in G.S. 25-9-311(a).

(b) Proposal to be sent to secondary obligor in partial satisfaction. — A secured party that desires to accept collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures shall send its proposal to any secondary obligor in addition to the persons described in subsection (a) of this section. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-505.

2. Notification Requirement. Subsection (a) specifies three classes of competing claimants to whom the secured party must send notification of its proposal: (i) Those who notify the secured party that they claim an interest in the collateral; (ii) holders of certain security interests and liens who have filed against the debtor; and (iii) holders of certain security interests who have perfected by compliance with a statute (including a certificate of title statute), regulation, or treaty described in section 9-311(a). With regard to (ii), see section 9-611, comment 4. Subsection (b) also requires notification to any secondary obligor if the proposal is for acceptance in partial satisfaction.

“safe harbor,” which excuses an enforcing secured party from notifying certain secured parties and other lienholders. This is because, unlike section 9-610, which requires that a disposition of collateral be commercially reasonable, section 9-620 permits the debtor and secured party to set the amount of credit the debtor will receive for the collateral subject only to the requirement of good faith. An effective acceptance discharges subordinate security interests and other subordinate liens. See section 9-622. If collateral is subject to several liens securing debts much larger than the value of the collateral, the debtor may be disinclined to refrain from consenting to an acceptance by the holder of the senior security interest, even though, had the debtor objected and the senior disposed of the collateral under section 9-610, the collateral may have yielded more than enough to satisfy the senior security interest (but not enough to satisfy all the liens). Accordingly, this section imposes upon the enforcing secured party the risk of the filing office’s errors and delay. The holder of a security interest who is entitled to notification under this section but does not receive it has the right to recover under section 9-625(b) any loss resulting from the enforcing secured party’s noncompliance with this section.

§ 25-9-622. Effect of acceptance of collateral.

(a) Effect of acceptance. — A secured party’s acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures:

- (1) Discharges the obligation to the extent consented to by the debtor;
- (2) Transfers to the secured party all of a debtor’s rights in the collateral;
- (3) Discharges the security interest or agricultural lien that is the subject of the debtor’s consent and any subordinate security interest or other subordinate lien; and
- (4) Terminates any other subordinate interest.

(b) Discharge of subordinate interest notwithstanding noncompliance. — A subordinate interest is discharged or terminated under subsection (a) of this section, even if the secured party fails to comply with this Article. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Effect of Acceptance. Subsection (a) specifies the effect of an acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation. The acceptance to which it refers is an effective acceptance. If a purported acceptance is ineffective under section 9-620, e.g., because the secured party receives a timely objection from a person entitled to notification, then neither this subsection nor subsection (b) applies. Paragraph (1) expresses the fundamental consequence of accepting collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation—the obligation is discharged to the extent consented to by the debtor. Unless otherwise agreed, the obligor remains liable for any deficiency. Paragraphs (2) through (4) indicate the effects of an acceptance on various property rights and interests. Paragraph (2) follows section 9-617(a) in providing that the secured party acquires “all of a debtor’s rights in the collateral.” Under paragraph (3), the effect of strict foreclosure on holders of junior security interests and other liens is the same regardless of whether the collateral is accepted in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation: All junior encumbrances are discharged. Paragraph (4) provides for the termination of other subordinate interests.

Subsection (b) makes clear that subordinate interests are discharged under subsection (a) regardless of whether the secured party complies with this article. Thus, subordinate interests are discharged regardless of whether a proposal was required to be sent or, if required, was sent. However, a secured party’s failure to send a proposal or otherwise to comply with this article may subject the secured party to liability under section 9-625.

(a) Persons that may redeem. — A debtor, any secondary obligor, or any other secured party or lienholder may redeem collateral.

(b) Requirements for redemption. — To redeem collateral, a person shall tender:

- (1) Fulfillment of all obligations secured by the collateral; and
- (2) The reasonable expenses and attorney's fees described in G.S. 25-9-615(a)(1).

(c) When redemption may occur. — A redemption may occur at any time before a secured party:

- (1) Has collected collateral under G.S. 25-9-607;
- (2) Has disposed of collateral or entered into a contract for its disposition under G.S. 25-9-610; or
- (3) Has accepted collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures under G.S. 25-9-622. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former section 9-506.

2. Redemption Right. Under this section, as under former section 9-506, the debtor or another secured party may redeem collateral as long as the secured party has not collected (section 9-607), disposed of or contracted for the disposition of (section 9-610), or accepted (section 9-620) the collateral. Although this section generally follows former section 9-506, it extends the right of redemption to holders of nonconsensual liens. To redeem the collateral a person must tender fulfillment of all obligations secured, plus certain expenses. If the entire balance of a secured obligation has been accelerated, it would be necessary to tender the entire balance. A tender of fulfillment obviously means more than a new promise to perform an existing promise. It requires payment in full of all monetary obligations then due and performance in full of all other obligations then matured. If unmatured secured obligations remain, the security interest continues to secure them (i.e., as if there had been no default).

3. Redemption of Remaining Collateral Following Partial Enforcement. Under section 9-610 a secured party may make successive dispositions of portions of its collateral. These dispositions would not affect the debtor's, another secured party's, or a lienholder's right to redeem the remaining collateral.

4. Effect of "Repledging." Section 9-207 generally permits a secured party having possession or control of collateral to create a security interest in the collateral. As explained in the comments to that section, the debtor's right (as opposed to its practical ability) to redeem collateral is not affected by, and does not affect, the priority of a security interest created by the debtor's secured party.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case below was decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Public Policy. — The public policy of the State of North Carolina favors allowing debtors to redeem their property pledged as collateral, if possible, in order to protect their interest. Roberts v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 124 N.C. App. 713, 478 S.E.2d 809 (1996), cert. granted, 345 N.C. 346, 483 S.E.2d 176 (1997).

§ 25-9-624. Waiver.

(a) Waiver of disposition notification. — A debtor or secondary obligor may waive the right to notification of disposition of collateral under G.S. 25-9-611 only by an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default.

(b) Waiver of mandatory disposition. — A debtor may waive the right to require disposition of collateral under G.S. 25-9-620(e) only by an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default.

(c) Waiver of redemption right. — Except in a consumer-goods transaction, a debtor or secondary obligor may waive the right to redeem collateral under G.S. 25-9-623 only by an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former sections 9-504(3), 9-505, and 9-506.

2. Waiver. This section is a limited exception to section 9-602, which generally prohibits waiver by debtors and obligors. It makes no provision for waiver of the rule prohibiting a secured party from buying at its own private disposition. Transactions of this kind are equivalent to "strict foreclosures" and are governed by sections 9-620, 9-621, and 9-622.

§ 25-9-625. Remedies for secured party's failure to comply with Article.

(a) Judicial orders concerning noncompliance. — If it is established that a secured party is not proceeding in accordance with this article, a court may order or restrain collection, enforcement, or disposition of collateral on appropriate terms and conditions.

(b) Damages for noncompliance. — Subject to subsections (c), (d), and (f) of this section, a person is liable for damages in the amount of any loss caused by a failure to comply with this Article. Loss caused by a failure to comply may include loss resulting from the debtor's inability to obtain, or increased costs of, alternative financing.

(c) Persons entitled to recover damages; statutory damages in consumer-goods transaction. — Except as otherwise provided in G.S. 25-9-628:

- (1) A person that, at the time of the failure, was a debtor, was an obligor, or held a security interest in or other lien on the collateral may recover damages under subsection (b) of this section for its loss; and
- (2) If the collateral is consumer goods, a person that was a debtor or a secondary obligor at the time a secured party failed to comply with this Part may recover for that failure in any event an amount not less than the credit service charge plus ten percent (10%) of the principal amount of the obligation or the time-price differential plus ten percent (10%) of the cash price.

(d) Recovery when deficiency eliminated or reduced. — A debtor whose deficiency is eliminated under G.S. 25-9-626 may recover damages for the loss of any surplus. However, a debtor or secondary obligor whose deficiency is eliminated or reduced under G.S. 25-9-626 may not otherwise recover under subsection (b) of this section for noncompliance with the provisions of this Part relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance.

(e) Statutory damages: noncompliance with specified provisions. — In addition to any damages recoverable under subsection (b) of this section, the debtor, consumer obligor, or person named as a debtor in a filed record, as applicable, may recover five hundred dollars ($500.00) in each case from a person that:

- (1) Fails to comply with G.S. 25-9-208;
- (2) Fails to comply with G.S. 25-9-209;
- (3) Files a record that the person is not entitled to file under G.S. 25-9-509(a);
- (4) Fails to cause the secured party of record to file or send a termination statement as required by G.S. 25-9-513(a) or (c);
- (5) Fails to comply with G.S. 25-9-616(b)(1) and whose failure is part of a pattern, or consistent with a practice, of noncompliance; or
- (6) Fails to comply with G.S. 25-9-616(b)(2).

(f) Statutory damages: noncompliance with G.S. 25-9-210. — A debtor or consumer obligor may recover damages under subsection (b) of this section and, in addition, five hundred dollars ($500.00) in each case from a person that, without reasonable cause, fails to comply with a request under G.S. 25-9-210. A recipient of a request under G.S. 25-9-210 which never claimed an interest in the collateral or obligations that are the subject of a request under that section has a reasonable excuse for failure to comply with the request within the meaning of this subsection.

(g) Limitation of security interest: noncompliance with G.S. 25-9-210. — If a secured party fails to comply with a request regarding a list of collateral or a statement of account under G.S. 25-9-210, the secured party may claim a security interest only as shown in the list or statement included in the request as against a person that is reasonably misled by the failure. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-507.

2. Remedies for Noncompliance; Scope. Subsections (a) and (b) provide the basic remedies afforded to those aggrieved by a secured party's failure to comply with this article. Like all provisions that create liability, they are subject to section 9-628, which should be read in conjunction with section 9-605. The principal limitations under this part on a secured party's right to enforce its security interest against collateral are the requirements that it proceed in good faith (section 1-203), in a commercially reasonable manner (sections 9-607 and 9-610), and, in most cases, with reasonable notification (sections 9-611 through 9-614). Following former section 9-507, under subsection (a) an aggrieved person may seek injunctive relief, and under subsection (b) the person may recover damages for losses caused by noncompliance. Unlike former section 9-507, however, subsections (a) and (b) are not limited to noncompliance with provisions of this part of article 9. Rather, they apply to noncompliance with any provision of this article. The change makes this section applicable to noncompliance with sections 9-207 (duties of secured party in possession of collateral), 9-208 (duties of secured party having control over deposit account), 9-209 (duties of secured party if account debtor has been notified of an assignment), 9-210 (duty to comply with request for accounting, etc.), 9-509(a) (duty to refrain from filing unauthorized financing statement), and 9-513(a) (duty to provide termination statement). Subsection (a) also modifies the first sentence of former section 9-507(1) by adding the references to "collection" and "enforcement." Subsection (c)(2), which gives a minimum damage recovery in consumer goods transactions, applies only to noncompliance with the provisions of this part.

3. Damages for Noncompliance with This Article. Subsection (b) sets forth the basic remedy for failure to comply with the requirements of this article: A damage recovery in the amount of loss caused by the noncompliance. Subsection (c) identifies who may recover under subsection (b). It affords a remedy to any aggrieved person who is a debtor or obligor. However, a principal obligor who is not a debtor may recover damages only for noncompliance with section 9-616, inasmuch as none of the other rights and duties in this article run in favor of such a principal obligor. Such a principal obligor could not suffer any loss or damage on account of noncompliance with rights or duties of which it is not a beneficiary. Subsection (c) also affords a remedy to an aggrieved person who holds a competing security interest or other lien, regardless of whether the aggrieved person is entitled to notification under part 6. The remedy is available even to holders of senior security interests and other liens. The exercise of this remedy is subject to the normal rules of pleading and proof. A person who has delegated the duties of a secured party but who remains obligated to perform them is liable under this subsection. The last sentence of subsection (d) eliminates the possibility of double recovery or other over-compensation arising out of a reduction or elimination of a deficiency under section 9-626, based on noncompliance with the provisions of this part relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance. Assuming no double recovery, a debtor whose deficiency is eliminated under section 9-626 may pursue a claim for a surplus. Because section 9-626 does not apply to consumer transactions, the statute is silent as to whether a double recovery or other over-compensation is possible in a consumer transaction.

Damages for violation of the requirements of this article, including section 9-609, are those reasonably calculated to put an eligible claimant in the position that it would have occupied had no violation occurred. See section 1-106. Subsection (b) supports the recovery of actual damages for committing a breach of the peace in violation of section 9-609, and principles of tort law supplement this subsection. See section 1-103. However, to the extent that damages in tort compensate the debtor for the same loss dealt with by this article, the debtor should be entitled to only one recovery.

4. Minimum Damages in Consumer-Goods Transactions. Subsection (c)(2) provides a minimum, statutory, damage recovery for a debtor and secondary obligor in a consumer-goods transaction. It is patterned on former section 9-507(1) and is designed to ensure that every noncompliance with the requirements of part 6 in a consumer goods transaction results in liability, regardless of any injury that may have resulted. Subsection (c)(2) leaves the treatment of statutory damages as it was under former article 9. A secured party is not liable for statutory damages under this subsection more than once with respect to any one secured obligation (see section 9-628(e)), nor is a secured party liable under this subsection for failure to comply with section 9-616 (see section 9-628(d)).

Following former section 9-507(1), this article does not include a definition or explanation of the terms "credit service charge," "principal amount," "time-price differential," or "cash price," as used in subsection (c)(2). It leaves their construction and application to the court, taking into account the subsection's purpose of providing a minimum recovery in consumer-goods transactions.

5. Supplemental Damages. Subsections (e) and (f) provide damages that supplement the recovery, if any, under subsection (b). Subsection (e) imposes an additional $500 liability upon a person who fails to comply with the provisions specified in that subsection, and subsection (f) imposes like damages on a person who, without reasonable excuse, fails to comply with a request for an accounting or a request regarding a list of collateral or statement of account under section 9-210. However, under subsection (f), a person has a reasonable excuse for the failure if the person never claimed an interest in the collateral or obligations that were the subject of the request.

6. Estoppel. Subsection (g) limits the extent to which a secured party who fails to comply with a request regarding a list of collateral or statement of account may claim a security interest.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Failure to Dispose of Collateral as Required Raises Presumption of Worth. — Creditor's failure to dispose of the collateral as required raises a presumption that the collateral was worth at least the amount of the debt.

Hodges v. Norton, 29 N.C. App. 193, 223 S.E.2d 848 (1976).

And places upon the creditor the burden of overcoming such presumption by proving the market value of the collateral by evidence other than the resale price. Hodges v. Norton, 29 N.C. App. 193, 223 S.E.2d 848 (1976).

Creditor's Right to Deficiency Judgment. — Provision that a debtor has a right to recover from the creditor any loss caused by failure to comply with the Code contemplates the right to deficiency judgment by the creditor who fails to comply with the UCC provisions in disposing of the collateral. Hodges v. Norton, 29 N.C. App. 193, 223 S.E.2d 848 (1976).

Creditor's Recovery by Deficiency Subject to Offset by Penalty. — If the debtor asserts damages or penalty against the creditor, the creditor's recovery by deficiency is subject to credit or offset by such damages or penalty. Hodges v. Norton, 29 N.C. App. 193, 223 S.E.2d 848 (1976).

When Right to 10% of Principal Indebtedness Attaches. — Absolute right to recovery of 10% of the principal indebtedness only attaches when the collateral in question is consumer goods, rather than farm equipment. Church v. Mickler, 55 N.C. App. 724, 287 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

Mobile Home. — The trial court did not err by applying the consumer goods provision of former G.S. 25-9-507(1) to a case involving failure to give notice of sale of a mobile home. Joyce v. Cloverbrook Homes, Inc., 81 N.C. App. 270, 344 S.E.2d 58, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 42 (1986).

Lender who repossessed car and transferred it to dealer under a repurchase agreement was not liable for the dealer's failure to sell the car within 90 days of repossession as required by former G.S. 25-9-505(1). Brooks v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 96 N.C. App. 89, 384 S.E.2d 288 (1989).

§ 25-9-626. Action in which deficiency or surplus is in issue.

(a) Applicable rules if amount of deficiency or surplus in issue. — In an action arising from a transaction, other than a consumer transaction, in which the amount of a deficiency or surplus is in issue, the following rules apply:

- (1) A secured party need not prove compliance with the provisions of this Part relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance unless the debtor or a secondary obligor places the secured party's compliance in issue.
- (2) If the secured party's compliance is placed in issue, the secured party has the burden of establishing that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance was conducted in accordance with this Part.
- (3) Except as otherwise provided in G.S. 25-9-628, if a secured party fails to prove that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance was conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Part relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance, the liability of a debtor or a secondary obligor for a deficiency is limited to an amount by which the sum of the secured obligation, expenses, and attorney's fees exceeds the greater of:
 - a. The proceeds of the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance; or
 - b. The amount of proceeds that would have been realized had the noncomplying secured party proceeded in accordance with the provisions of this Part relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance.
- (4) For purposes of sub-subdivision (a)(3)b. of this section, the amount of proceeds that would have been realized is equal to the sum of the secured obligation, expenses, and attorney's fees unless the secured party proves that the amount is less than that sum.
- (5) If a deficiency or surplus is calculated under G.S. 25-9-615(f), the debtor or obligor has the burden of establishing that the amount of proceeds of the disposition is significantly below the range of prices that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought.

(b) Nonconsumer transactions; no inference. — The limitation of the rules in subsection (a) of this section to transactions other than consumer transactions is intended to leave to the court the determination of the proper rules in consumer transactions. The court may not infer from that limitation the nature of the proper rule in consumer transactions and may continue to apply established approaches. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Scope. The basic damage remedy under section 9-625(b) is subject to the special rules in this section for transactions other than consumer transactions. This section addresses situations in which the amount of a deficiency or surplus is in issue, i.e., situations in which the secured party has collected, enforced, disposed of, or accepted the collateral. It contains special rules applicable to a determination of the amount of a deficiency or surplus. Because this section affects a person's liability for a deficiency, it is subject to section 9-628, which should be read in conjunction with section 9-605. The rules in this section apply only to noncompliance in connection with the "collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance" under part 6. For other types of noncompliance with part 6, the general liability rule of section 9-625(b)—recovery of actual damages—applies. Consider, for example, a repossession that does not comply with section 9-609 for want of a default. The debtor's remedy is under section 9-625(b). In a proper case, the secured party also may be liable for conversion under non-UCC law. If the secured party thereafter disposed of the collateral, however, it would violate section 9-610 at that time, and this section would apply.

3. Rebuttable Presumption Rule. Section 9-626 establishes the rebuttable presumption rule for transactions other than consumer transactions. Under paragraph (1), the secured party need not prove compliance with the relevant provisions of this part as part of its prima facie case. If, however, the debtor or a secondary obligor raises the issue (in accordance with the forum's rules of pleading and practice), then the secured party bears the burden of proving that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance complied. In the event the secured party is unable to meet this burden, then paragraph (3) explains how to calculate the deficiency. Under this rebuttable presumption rule, the debtor or obligor is to be credited with the greater of the actual proceeds of the disposition or the proceeds that would have been realized had the secured party complied with the relevant provisions. If a deficiency remains, then the secured party is entitled to recover it. The references to "the secured obligation, expenses, and attorney's fees" in paragraphs (3) and (4) embrace the application rules in sections 9-608(a) and 9-615(a).

Unless the secured party proves that compliance with the relevant provisions would have yielded a smaller amount, under paragraph (4) the amount that a complying collection, enforcement, or disposition would have yielded is deemed to be equal to the amount of the secured obligation, together with expenses and attorney's fees. Thus, the secured party may not recover any deficiency unless it meets this burden.

4. Consumer Transactions. Although section 9-626 adopts a version of the rebuttable presumption rule for transactions other than consumer transactions, with certain exceptions part 6 does not specify the effect of a secured party's noncompliance in consumer transactions. (The exceptions are the provisions for the recovery of damages in section 9-625.) Subsection (b) provides that the limitation of subsection (a) (section 9-626) to transactions other than consumer transactions is intended to leave to the court the determination of the proper rules in consumer transactions. It also instructs the court not to draw any inference from the limitation as to the proper rules for consumer transactions and leaves the court free to continue to apply established approaches to those transactions.

Courts construing former section 9-507 disagreed about the consequences of a secured party's failure to comply with the requirements of former part 5. Three general approaches emerged. Some courts have held that a noncomplying secured party may not recover a deficiency (the "absolute bar" rule). A few courts held that the debtor can offset against a claim to a deficiency all damages recoverable under former section 9-507 resulting from the secured party's noncompliance (the "offset" rule). A plurality of courts considering the issue held that the noncomplying secured party is barred from recovering a deficiency unless it overcomes a rebuttable presumption that compliance with former part 5 would have yielded an amount sufficient to satisfy the secured debt. In addition to the nonuniformity resulting from court decisions, some states enacted special rules governing the availability of deficiencies.

5. Burden of Proof When Section 9-615(f) Applies. In a non-consumer transaction, paragraph (5) imposes upon a debtor or obligor the burden of proving that the proceeds of a disposition are so low that, under section 9-615(f), the actual proceeds should not serve as the basis upon which a deficiency or surplus is calculated. Were the burden placed on the secured party, then debtors might be encouraged to challenge the price received in every disposition to the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor.

6. Delay in Applying This Section. There is an inevitable delay between the time a secured party engages in a noncomplying collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance and the time of a subsequent judicial determination that the secured party did not comply with part 6. During the interim, the secured party, believing that the secured obligation is larger than it ultimately is determined to be, may continue to enforce its security interest in collateral. If some or all of the secured indebtedness ultimately is discharged under this section, a reasonable application of this section would impose liability on the secured party for the amount of any excess, unwarranted recoveries but would not make the enforcement efforts wrongful.

§ 25-9-627. Determination of whether conduct was commercially reasonable.

(a) Greater amount obtainable under other circumstances; no preclusion of commercial reasonableness. — The fact that a greater amount could have been obtained by a collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance at a different time or in a different method from that selected by the secured party is not of itself sufficient to preclude the secured party from establishing that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance was made in a commercially reasonable manner.

(b) Dispositions that are commercially reasonable. — A disposition of collateral is made in a commercially reasonable manner if the disposition is made:

- (1) In the usual manner on any recognized market;
- (2) At the price current in any recognized market at the time of the disposition; or
- (3) Otherwise in conformity with reasonable commercial practices among dealers in the type of property that was the subject of the disposition.

(c) Approval by court or on behalf of creditors. — A collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance is commercially reasonable if it has been approved:

- (1) In a judicial proceeding;
- (2) By a bona fide creditors' committee;
- (3) By a representative of creditors; or
- (4) By an assignee for the benefit of creditors.

(d) Approval under subsection (c) of this section not necessary; absence of approval has no effect. — Approval under subsection (c) of this section need not be obtained, and lack of approval does not mean that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance is not commercially reasonable. (1965, c. 700, s. 1; 1975, c. 862, s. 7; 2000-169, s. 1.)

1. Source. Former section 9-507(2).

2. Relationship of Price to Commercial Reasonableness. Some observers have found the notion contained in subsection (a) (derived from former section 9-507(2)) (the fact that a better price could have been obtained does not establish lack of commercial reasonableness) to be inconsistent with that found in section 9-610(b) (derived from former section 9-504(3)) (every aspect of the disposition, including its terms, must be commercially reasonable). There is no such inconsistency. While not itself sufficient to establish a violation of this part, a low price suggests that a court should scrutinize carefully all aspects of a disposition to ensure that each aspect was commercially reasonable.

The law long has grappled with the problem of dispositions of personal and real property which comply with applicable procedural requirements (e.g., advertising, notification to interested persons, etc.) but which yield a price that seems low. This article addresses that issue in section 9-615(f). That section applies only when the transferee is the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor. It contains a special rule for calculating a deficiency or surplus in a complying disposition that yields a price that is "significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought.”

3. Determination of Commercial Reasonableness; Advance Approval. It is important to make clear the conduct and procedures that are commercially reasonable and to provide a secured party with the means of obtaining, by court order or negotiation with a creditors’ committee or a representative of creditors, advance approval of a proposed method of enforcement as commercially reasonable. This section contains rules that assist in that determination and provides for advance approval in appropriate situations. However, none of the specific methods of disposition specified in subsection (b) is required or exclusive.

4. “Recognized Market.” As in sections 9-610(c) and 9-611(d), the concept of a “recognized market” in subsections (b)(1) and (2) is quite limited; it applies only to markets in which there are standardized price quotations for property that is essentially fungible, such as stock exchanges.

CASE NOTES

Editor’s Note. — The cases below were decided under former Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code prior to its revision by Session Laws 2000-169.

Credit Against Debt Where Sale Not Commercially Reasonable. — Where sale is not conducted in a commercially reasonable manner, the debt is to be credited with the amount that reasonably should have been obtained through a sale conducted in a reasonably commercial manner according to the UCC. Hodges v. Norton, 29 N.C. App. 193, 223 S.E.2d 848 (1976).

Creditor Not Given Unbridled Discretion. — Former G.S. 25-9-507 (2) only prohibited second-guessing the secured party; it did not give him unbridled discretion. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

“Reasonable Commercial Practices” Necessitate Commercially Reasonable Price. — The sale of a single unit cannot be “in conformity with reasonable commercial practices among dealers” when the sale is for a commercially unreasonable price. In short, “reasonable commercial practices” necessitate a commercially reasonable price. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

But All Elements of Sale Must Be Considered Together. — There may be cases in which the price paid for the collateral will be commercially reasonable even though a higher price could have been obtained at a different time or in a different market. Nor is a price which is slightly inadequate necessarily commercially unreasonable. The trier of fact must consider all the elements of the sale together. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

Former § 25-9-507(2) did not make every inadequacy in price, however slight, commercially unreasonable. A truly gross inadequacy in price, however, if established by the evidence and believed by the jury, would support a finding that the sale was not “in conformity with reasonable commercial practices among dealers.” Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

But Evidence of Gross Inadequacy Raises Issue of Reasonableness of Sale. — When the debtor offers independent evidence of a gross inadequacy of price, in North Carolina, that sufficiently raises the issue of the commercial reasonableness of the sale to take the case to the jury. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Davis, 37 N.C. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 566 (1978).

Fact that the price obtained by a private sale was less than what the creditor’s expert had estimated to be the fair market value of the unit did not make the sale commercially unreasonable where the final sale price was representative of the condition of the mobile home and was relative to other prices obtained on comparable mobile homes. In re Marshall, 219 Bankr. 687 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1997).

§ 25-9-628. Nonliability and limitation on liability of secured party; liability of secondary obligor.

(a) Limitation of liability of secured party for noncompliance with Article. — Unless a secured party knows that a person is a debtor or obligor, knows the identity of the person, and knows how to communicate with the person:

- (1) The secured party is not liable to the person, or to a secured party or lienholder that has filed a financing statement against the person, for failure to comply with this Article; and

- (2) The secured party's failure to comply with this Article does not affect the liability of the person for a deficiency.
- (b) Limitation of liability based on status as secured party. — A secured party is not liable because of its status as secured party:
- (1) To a person that is a debtor or obligor, unless the secured party knows:
 - a. That the person is a debtor or obligor;
 - b. The identity of the person; and
 - c. How to communicate with the person; or
 - (2) To a secured party or lienholder that has filed a financing statement against a person, unless the secured party knows:
 - a. That the person is a debtor; and
 - b. The identity of the person.
- (c) Limitation of liability if reasonable belief that transaction not a consumer-goods transaction or consumer transaction. — A secured party is not liable to any person, and a person's liability for a deficiency is not affected, because of any act or omission arising out of the secured party's reasonable belief that a transaction is not a consumer-goods transaction or a consumer transaction or that goods are not consumer goods, if the secured party's belief is based on its reasonable reliance on:
- (1) A debtor's representation concerning the purpose for which collateral was to be used, acquired, or held; or
 - (2) An obligor's representation concerning the purpose for which a secured obligation was incurred.
- (d) Limitation of liability for statutory damages. — A secured party is not liable to any person under G.S. 25-9-625(c)(2) for its failure to comply with G.S. 25-9-616.
- (e) Limitation of multiple liability for statutory damages. — A secured party is not liable under G.S. 25-9-625(c)(2) more than once with respect to any one secured obligation. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Exculpatory Provisions. Subsections (a), (b), and (c) contain exculpatory provisions that should be read in conjunction with section 9-605. Without this group of provisions, a secured party could incur liability to unknown persons and under circumstances that would not allow the secured party to protect itself. The broadened definition of the term "debtor" underscores the need for these provisions.

If a secured party reasonably, but mistakenly, believes that a consumer transaction or consumer-goods transaction is a non-consumer transaction or non-consumer-goods transaction, and if the secured party's belief is based on its reasonable reliance on a representation of the type specified in subsection (c)(1) or (c)(2), then this article should be applied as if the facts reasonably believed and the representation reasonably relied upon were true. For example, if a secured party reasonably believed that a transaction was a non-consumer transaction and its belief was based on reasonable reliance on the debtor's representation that the collateral secured an obligation incurred for business purposes, the secured party is not liable to any person, and the debtor's liability for a deficiency is not affected, because of any act or omission of the secured party which arises out of the reasonable belief. Of course, if the secured party's belief is not reasonable or, even if reasonable, is not based on reasonable reliance on the debtor's representation, this limitation on liability is inapplicable.

3. Inapplicability of Statutory Damages to Section 9-616. Subsection (d) excludes non-compliance with section 9-616 entirely from the scope of statutory damage liability under section 9-625(c)(2).

4. Single Liability for Statutory Minimum Damages. Subsection (e) ensures that a secured party will incur statutory damages only once in connection with any one secured obligation.

PART 7

TRANSITION.

§ 25-9-701. Effective date.

This act takes effect on July 1, 2001. References in this Part to “this act” refer to PARTS I, II, and III of the session law by which this Part is added to Article 9 of Chapter 25 of the General Statutes. References in this Part to “former Article 9” are to Article 9 of Chapter 25 of the General Statutes as in effect immediately before July 1, 2001. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

A uniform law as complex as article 9 necessarily gives rise to difficult problems and uncertainties during the transition to the new law. As is customary for uniform laws, this article is based on the general assumption that all states will have enacted substantially identical versions. While always important, uniformity is essential to the success of this article. If former article 9 is in effect in some jurisdictions, and this article is in effect in others, horrendous complications may arise. For example, the proper place in which to file to perfect a security interest (and thus the status of a particular security interest as perfected or unperfected) would depend on whether the matter was litigated in a state in which former article 9 was in effect or a state in which this article was in effect. Accordingly, this section contemplates that states will adopt a uniform effective date for this article. Any one state's failure to adopt the uniform effective date will greatly increase the cost and uncertainty surrounding the transition.

Other problems arise from transactions and relationships that were entered into under former article 9 or under non-UCC law and which remain outstanding on the effective date of this article. The difficulties arise primarily because this article expands the scope of former article 9 to cover additional types of collateral and transactions and because it provides new methods of perfection for some types of collateral, different priority rules, and different choice of law rules governing perfection and priority. This section and the other sections in this part address primarily this second set of problems.

This section is modified by adding the last two sentences.

§ 25-9-702. Savings clause.

(a) Pre-effective-date transactions or liens. — Except as otherwise provided in this Part, this act applies to a transaction or lien within its scope, even if the transaction or lien was entered into or created before July 1, 2001.

(b) Continuing validity. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) of this section and G.S. 25-9-703 through G.S. 25-9-709:

- (1) Transactions and liens that were not governed by former Article 9, were validly entered into or created before July 1, 2001, and would be subject to this act if they had been entered into or created after July 1, 2001, and the rights, duties, and interests flowing from those transactions and liens remain valid after July 1, 2001; and
- (2) The transactions and liens described in subdivision (1) of this subsection may be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced as required or permitted by this act or by the law that otherwise would apply if this act had not taken effect.

(c) Pre-effective-date proceedings. — This act does not affect an action, case, or proceeding commenced before July 1, 2001.

(d) Special rule for certain governmental transactions. — Notwithstanding any other provision of this act, security interests that were excluded under former Article 9 pursuant to former G.S. 25-9-104(e) or as to which the filing requirements of former Article 9 did not apply pursuant to former G.S. 25-9-302(6), and which are effective prior to July 1, 2001, but for which the applicable requirements for creation, perfection, or enforceability under this act are not satisfied on July 1, 2001, shall nonetheless be treated as valid, enforceable, and perfected security interests under this act for the duration of those security interests. (2000-169, s. 1; 2001-218, s. 4.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Pre-Effective-Date Transactions. Subsection (a) contains the general rule that this article applies to transactions, security interests, and other liens within its scope (see section 9-109), even if the transaction or lien was entered into or created before the effective date. Thus, secured transactions entered into under former article 9 must be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced under this article. Subsection (b) is an exception to the general rule. It applies to valid, pre-effective-date transactions and liens that were not governed by former article 9 but would be governed by this article if they had been entered into or created after this Article takes effect. Under subsection (b), these valid transactions, such as the creation of agricultural liens and security interests in commercial tort claims, retain their validity under this article and may be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced under this article. However, these transactions also may be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced by the law that otherwise would apply had this article not taken effect.

2. Judicial Proceedings Commenced Before Effective Date. As is usual in transition provisions, subsection (c) provides that this article does not affect litigation pending on the effective date.

Subdivision (b)(2) is modified by inserting the phrase “described in subdivision (1) of this subsection.” Subsection (d) has no counterpart in the uniform text.

The intent of the special public finance-related transition rule added by subsection (d) is that security interests created prior to July 1, 2001, and not subject to former Article 9 through the specified provisions thereof will remain exempt from this Article after that date. Security interests that are subject to former Article 9 and created in connection with transactions involving governmental units prior to July 1, 2001, will either be (a) of a type not subject to this Article, in which case no action need be taken, or (b) of a type that is subject to this Article, in which case G.S. 25-9-703 through G.S. 25-9-709 are applicable thereto.

(a) Continuing priority over lien creditor: perfection requirements satisfied. — A security interest that is enforceable immediately before July 1, 2001 and would have priority over the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor at that time is a perfected security interest under this act if, on July 1, 2001, the applicable requirements for enforceability and perfection under this act are satisfied without further action.

(b) Continuing priority over lien creditor: perfection requirements not satisfied. — Except as otherwise provided in G.S. 25-9-705, if, immediately before July 1, 2001, a security interest is enforceable and would have priority over the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor at that time, but the applicable requirements for enforceability or perfection under this act are not satisfied on July 1, 2001, the security interest:

- (1) Is a perfected security interest for one year after July 1, 2001;
- (2) Remains enforceable thereafter only if the security interest becomes enforceable under G.S. 25-9-203 before the year expires; and

- (3) Remains perfected thereafter only if the applicable requirements for perfection under this act are satisfied before the year expires. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Perfected Security Interests Under Former Article 9 and This Article. This section deals with security interests that are perfected (i.e., that are enforceable and have priority over the rights of a lien creditor) under former article 9 or other applicable law immediately before this article takes effect. Subsection (a) provides, not surprisingly, that if the security interest would be a perfected security interest under this article (i.e., if the transaction satisfies this article's requirements for enforceability (attachment) and perfection), no further action need be taken for the security interest to be a perfected security interest.

2. Security Interests Enforceable and Perfected Under Former Article 9 but Unenforceable or Unperfected Under This Article. Subsection (b) deals with security interests that are enforceable and perfected under former article 9 or other applicable law immediately before this Article takes effect but do not satisfy the requirements for enforceability (attachment) or perfection under this article. Except as otherwise provided in section 9-705, these security interests are perfected security interests for one year after the effective date. If the security interest satisfies the requirements for attachment and perfection within that period, the security interest remains perfected thereafter. If the security interest satisfies only the requirements for attachment within that period, the security interest becomes unperfected at the end of the one-year period.

Example 1: A pre-effective-date security agreement in a consumer transaction covers "all securities accounts." The security interest is properly perfected. The collateral description was adequate under former article 9 (see former section 9-115(3)) but is insufficient under this article (see section 9-108(e)(2)). Unless the debtor authenticates a new security agreement describing the collateral other than by "type" (or section 9-203(b)(3) otherwise is satisfied) within the one-year period following the effective date, the security interest becomes unenforceable at the end of that period.

Other examples under former article 9 or other applicable law that may be effective as attachment or enforceability steps but may be ineffective under this article include an oral agreement to sell a payment intangible or possession by virtue of a notification to a bailee under former section 9-305. Neither the oral agreement nor the notification would satisfy the revised section 9-203 requirements for attachment.

Example 2: A pre-effective-date possessory security interest in instruments is perfected by a bailee's receipt of notification under former section 9-305. The bailee has not, however, acknowledged that it holds for the secured party's benefit under revised section 9-313. Unless the bailee authenticates a record acknowledging that it holds for the secured party (or another appropriate perfection step is taken) within the one-year period following the effective date, the security interest becomes unperfected at the end of that period.

3. Interpretation of Pre-Effective-Date Security Agreements. Section 9-102 defines "security agreement" as "an agreement that creates or provides for a security interest." Under section 1-201(3), an "agreement" is a "bargain of the parties in fact." If parties to a pre-effective-date security agreement describe the collateral by using a term defined in former article 9 in one way and defined in this article in another way, in most cases it should be presumed that the bargain of the parties contemplated the meaning of the term under former article 9.

Example 3: A pre-effective-date security agreement covers "all accounts" of a debtor. As defined under former article 9, an "account" did not include a right to payment for lottery winnings. These rights to payment are "accounts" under this article, however. The agreement of the parties presumptively created a security interest in "accounts" as defined in former article 9. A different result might be appropriate, for example, if the security agreement explicitly contemplated future changes in the article 9 definitions of types of collateral—e.g., "Accounts" means 'accounts' as defined in the UCC article 9 of (State X), as that definition may be amended from time to time." Whether a different approach is appropriate in any given case depends on the bargain of the parties, as determined by applying ordinary principles of contract construction.

A security interest that is enforceable immediately before July 1, 2001 but which would be subordinate to the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor at that time:

- (1) Remains an enforceable security interest for one year after July 1, 2001;
- (2) Remains enforceable thereafter if the security interest becomes enforceable under G.S. 25-9-203 on July 1, 2001 or within one year thereafter; and
- (3) Becomes perfected:
 - a. Without further action, on July 1, 2001 if the applicable requirements for perfection under this act are satisfied before or at that time; or
 - b. When the applicable requirements for perfection are satisfied if the requirements are satisfied after that time. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section deals with security interests that are enforceable but unperfected (i.e., subordinate to the rights of a person who becomes a lien creditor) under former article 9 or other applicable law immediately before this Article takes effect. These security interests remain enforceable for one year after the effective date, and thereafter if the appropriate steps for attachment under this article are taken before the one-year period expires. (This section's treatment of enforceability is the same as that of section 9-703.) The security interest becomes a perfected security interest on the effective date if, at that time, the security interest satisfies the requirements for perfection under this article. If the security interest does not satisfy the requirements for perfection until sometime thereafter, it becomes a perfected security interest at that later time.

Example: A security interest has attached under former article 9 but is unperfected because the filed financing statement covers "all of debtor's personal property" and controlling case law in the applicable jurisdiction has determined that this identification of collateral in a financing statement is insufficient. Upon the effective date of this Article, the financing statement becomes sufficient under section 9-504(2). On that date the security interest becomes perfected. (This assumes, of course, that the financing statement is filed in the proper filing office under this article.)

(a) Pre-effective-date action; one-year perfection period unless reperfected. — If action, other than the filing of a financing statement, is taken before July 1, 2001 and the action would have resulted in priority of a security interest over the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor had the security interest become enforceable before July 1, 2001, the action is effective to perfect a security interest that attaches under this act within one year after July 1, 2001. An attached security interest becomes unperfected one year after July 1, 2001 unless the security interest becomes a perfected security interest under this act before the expiration of that period.

(b) Pre-effective-date filing. — The filing of a financing statement before July 1, 2001 is effective to perfect a security interest to the extent the filing would satisfy the applicable requirements for perfection under this act.

(c) Pre-effective-date filing in jurisdiction formerly governing perfection. — This act does not render ineffective an effective financing statement that, before July 1, 2001, is filed and satisfies the applicable requirements for perfection under the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in G.S. 25-9-103 of former Article 9. However, except as otherwise provided in subsections (d) and (e) of this section and G.S. 25-9-706, the financing statement ceases to be effective at the earlier of:

- (1) The time the financing statement would have ceased to be effective under the law of the jurisdiction in which it is filed; or
- (2) June 30, 2006.

(d) Continuation statement. — The filing of a continuation statement after July 1, 2001 does not continue the effectiveness of the financing statement filed before July 1, 2001. However, upon the timely filing of a continuation statement after July 1, 2001 and in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in Part 3 of this Article, the effectiveness of a financing statement filed in the same office in that jurisdiction before July 1, 2001 continues for the period provided by the law of that jurisdiction.

(e) Application of subdivision (c)(2) to transmitting utility financing statement. — Subdivision (c)(2) of this section applies to a financing statement that, before July 1, 2001, is filed against a transmitting utility and satisfies the applicable requirements for perfection under the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in G.S. 25-9-103 of former Article 9 only to the extent that Part 3 of this Article provides that the law of a jurisdiction other than the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed governs perfection of a security interest in collateral covered by the financing statement.

(f) Application of Part 5. — A financing statement that includes a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001 and a continuation statement filed after July 1, 2001 is effective only to the extent that it satisfies the requirements of Part 5 of this Article for an initial financing statement. (2000-169, s. 1; 2001-487, s. 15.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. General. This section addresses primarily the situation in which the perfection step is taken under former article 9 or other applicable law before the effective date of this Article, but the security interest does not attach until after that date.

2. Perfection Other Than by Filing. Subsection (a) applies when the perfection step is a step other than the filing of a financing statement. If the step that would be a valid perfection step under former article 9 or other law is taken before this Article takes effect, and if a security interest attaches within one year after this Article takes effect, then the security interest becomes a perfected security interest upon attachment. However, the security interest becomes unperfected one year after the effective date unless the requirements for attachment and perfection under this article are satisfied within that period.

3. Perfection by Filing: Ineffective Filings Made Effective. Subsection (b) deals with financing statements that were filed under former article 9 and which would not have perfected a security interest under the former article (because, e.g., they did not accurately describe the collateral or were filed in the wrong place), but which would perfect a security interest under this article. Under subsection (b), such a financing statement is effective to perfect a security interest to the extent it complies with this article. Subsection (b) applies regardless of the reason for the filing. For example, a secured party need not wait until the effective date to respond to the change this article makes with respect to the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection of certain security interests. Rather, a secured party may wish to prepare for this change by filing a financing statement before the effective date in the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection under this article. When this Article takes effect, the filing becomes effective to perfect a security interest (assuming the filing satisfies the perfection requirements of this article). Note, however, that section 9-706 determines whether a financing statement filed before the effective date operates to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed in another office before the effective date.

4. Perfection by Filing: Change in Applicable Law or Filing Office. Subsection (c) provides that a financing statement filed in the proper jurisdiction under former section 9-103 remains effective for all purposes, despite the fact that this article would require filing of a financing statement in a different jurisdiction or in a different office in the same jurisdiction. This means that, during the early years of this article's effectiveness, it may be necessary to search not only in the filing office of the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection under this article but also (if different) in the jurisdiction(s) and filing office(s) designated by former article 9. To limit this burden, subsection (c) provides that a financing statement filed in the jurisdiction determined by former section 9-103 becomes ineffective at the earlier of the time it would become ineffective under the law of that jurisdiction or June 30, 2006. The June 30, 2006, limitation addresses some nonuniform versions of former article 9 that extended the effectiveness of a financing statement beyond five years. Note that a financing statement filed before the effective date may remain effective beyond June 30, 2006, if subsection (d) (concerning continuation statements) or (e) (concerning transmitting utilities) or section 9-706 (concerning initial financing statements that operate to continue pre-effective-date financing statements) so provides.

Subsection (c) is an exception to section 9-703(b). Under the general rule in section 9-703(b), a security interest that is enforceable and perfected on the effective date of this Article is a perfected security interest for one year after this article takes effect, even if the security interest is not enforceable under this article and the applicable requirements for perfection under this article have not been met. However, in some cases subsection (c) may shorten the one-year period of perfection; in others, if the security interest is enforceable under section 9-203, it may extend the period of perfection.

Example 1: On July 3, 1996, D, a State X corporation, creates a security interest in certain manufacturing equipment located in State Y. On July 6, 1996, SP perfects a security interest in the equipment under former article 9 by filing in the office of the State Y Secretary of State. See former section 9-103(1)(b). This article takes effect in States X and Y on July 1, 2001. Under section 9-705(c), the financing statement remains effective until it lapses in July 2001. See former section 9-403. Had SP continued the effectiveness of the financing statement by filing a continuation statement in State Y under former article 9 before July 1, 2001, the financing statement would have remained effective to perfect the security interest through June 30, 2006. See subsection (c)(2). Alternatively, SP could have filed an initial financing statement in State X under subsection (b) or section 9-706 before the State Y financing statement lapsed. Had SP done so, the security interest would have remained perfected without interruption until the State X financing statement lapsed.

5. Continuing Effectiveness of Filed Financing Statement. A financing statement filed before the effective date of this Article may be continued only by filing in the state and office designated by this article. This result is accomplished in the following manner: Subsection (d) indicates that, as a general matter, a continuation statement filed after the effective date of this Article does not continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed under the law designated by former section 9-103. Instead, an initial financing statement must be filed under section 9-706. The second sentence of subsection (d) contains an exception to the general rule. It provides that a continuation statement is effective to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before this Article takes effect if this article prescribes not only the same jurisdiction but also the same filing office.

Example 2: On November 8, 2000, D, a State X corporation, creates a security interest in certain manufacturing equipment located in State Y. On November 15, 2000, SP perfects a security interest in the equipment under former article 9 by filing in the office of the State Y Secretary of State. See former section 9-103(1)(b). This article takes effect in States X and Y on July 1, 2001. Under section 9-705(c), the financing statement ceases to be effective in November, 2005, when it lapses. See section 9-515. Under this article, the law of D's location (State X, see section 9-307) governs perfection. See section 9-301. Thus, the filing of a continuation statement in State Y on or after July 1, 2001, would not continue the effectiveness of the financing statement. See subsection (d). However, the effectiveness of the financing statement could be continued under section 9-706.

Example 3: The facts are as in Example 2, except that D is a State Y corporation. Assume State Y adopted former section 9-401(1) (second alternative). State Y law governs perfection under part 3 of this article. (See sections 9-301 and 9-307.) Under the second sentence of subsection (d), the timely filing of a continuation statement in accordance with the law of State Y continues the effectiveness of the financing statement.

Example 4: The facts are as in Example 3, except that the collateral is equipment used in farming operations and, in accordance with former section 9-401(1) (second alternative) as enacted in State Y, the financing statement was filed in State Y, in the office of the Shelby County Recorder of Deeds. Under this article, a continuation statement must be filed in the office of the State Y Secretary of State. See section 9-501(a)(2). Under the second sentence of subsection (d), the timely filing of a continuation statement in accordance with the law of State Y operates to continue a pre-effective-date financing statement only if the continuation statement is filed in the same office as the financing statement. Accordingly, the continuation statement is not effective in this case, but the financing statement may be continued under section 9-706.

Example 5: The facts are as in Example 3, except that State Y enacted former section 9-401(1) (third alternative). As required by former section 9-401(1), SP filed financing statements in both the office of the State Y Secretary of State and the office of the Shelby County Recorder of Deeds. Under this article, a continuation statement must be filed in the office of the State Y Secretary of State. See section 9-501(a)(2). The timely filing of a continuation statement in that office after this Article takes effect would be effective to continue the effectiveness of the financing statement (and thus continue the perfection of the security interest), even if the financing statement filed with the county recorder lapses.

6. Continuation Statements. In some cases, this article reclassifies collateral covered by a financing statement filed under former article 9. For example, collateral consisting of the right to payment for real property sold would be a "general intangible" under the former article but an "account" under this article. To continue perfection under those circumstances, a continuation statement must comply with the normal requirements for a continuation statement. See section 9-515. In addition, the pre-effective-date financing statement and continuation statement, taken together, must satisfy the requirements of this article concerning the sufficiency of the debtor's name, secured party's name, and indication of collateral. See subsection (f).

Example 6: A pre-effective-date financing statement covers "all general intangibles" of a debtor. As defined under former article 9, a "general intangible," would include rights to payment for lottery winnings. These rights to payment are "accounts" under this article, however. A post-effective-date continuation statement will not continue the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement with respect to lottery winnings unless it amends the indication of collateral covered to include lottery winnings (e.g., by adding "accounts," "rights to payment for lottery winnings," or the like). If the continuation statement does not amend the indication of collateral, the continuation statement will be effective to continue the effectiveness of the financing statement only with respect to "general intangibles" as defined in this article.

Example 7: The facts are as in Example 6, except that the pre-effective-date financing statement covers "all accounts and general intangibles." Even though rights to payment for lottery winnings are "general intangibles" under former Article 9 and "accounts" under this Article, a post-effective-date continuation statement would continue the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement with respect to lottery winnings. There would be no need to amend the indication of collateral covered, inasmuch as the indication ("accounts") satisfies the requirements of this article.

§ 25-9-706. When initial financing statement suffices to continue effectiveness of financing statement.

(a) Initial financing statement in lieu of continuation statement. — The filing of an initial financing statement in the office specified in G.S. 25-9-501 continues the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001 if:

- (1) The filing of an initial financing statement in that office would be effective to perfect a security interest under this act;
- (2) The pre-effective-date financing statement was filed in an office in another state or another office in this State; and
- (3) The initial financing statement satisfies subsection (c) of this section.

(b) Period of continued effectiveness. — The filing of an initial financing statement under subsection (a) of this section continues the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement:

- (1) If the initial financing statement is filed before July 1, 2001, for the period provided in G.S. 25-9-403 of former Article 9 with respect to a financing statement; and
- (2) If the initial financing statement is filed after July 1, 2001, for the period provided in G.S. 25-9-515 with respect to an initial financing statement.

(c) Requirement for initial financing statement under subsection (a). — To be effective for purposes of subsection (a) of this section, an initial financing statement must:

- (1) Satisfy the requirements of Part 5 of this Article for an initial financing statement;
- (2) Identify the pre-effective-date financing statement by indicating the office in which the financing statement was filed and providing the dates of filing and file numbers, if any, of the financing statement and of the most recent continuation statement filed with respect to the financing statement; and
- (3) Indicate that the pre-effective-date financing statement remains effective. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Continuation of Financing Statements Not Filed in Proper Filing Office Under This Article. This section deals with continuing the effectiveness of financing statements that are filed in the proper state and office under former article 9, but which would be filed in the wrong state or in the wrong office of the proper state under this article. Section 9-705(d) provides that, under these circumstances, filing a continuation statement after the effective date of this article in the office designated by former article 9 would not be effective. This section provides the means by which the effectiveness of such a financing statement can be continued if this article governs perfection under the applicable choice of law rule: Filing an initial financing statement in the office specified by section 9-501.

Although it has the effect of continuing the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement, an initial financing statement described in this section is not a continuation statement. Rather, it is governed by the rules applicable to initial financing statements. (However, the debtor need not authorize the filing. See section 9-707.) Unlike a continuation statement, the initial financing statement described in this section may be filed any time during the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement—even before this article is enacted—and not only within the six months immediately prior to lapse. In contrast to a continuation statement, which extends the lapse date of a filed financing statement for five years, the initial financing statement has its own lapse date, which bears no relation to the lapse date of the pre-effective-date financing statement whose effectiveness the initial financing statement continues. See subsection (b).

As subsection (a) makes clear, the filing of an initial financing statement under this section continues the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement. If the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement lapses before the initial financing statement is filed, the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement cannot be continued. Rather, unless the security interest is perfected otherwise, there will be a period during which the security interest is unperfected before becoming perfected again by the filing of the initial financing statement under this section.

If an initial financing statement is filed under this section before the effective date of this Article, it takes effect when this Article takes effect (assuming that it is ineffective under former article 9). Note, however, that former article 9 determines whether the filing office is obligated to accept such an initial financing statement. For the reason given in the preceding paragraph, an initial financing statement filed before the effective date of this Article does not continue the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement unless the latter remains effective on the effective date of this Article. Thus, for example, if the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement lapses before this Article takes effect, the initial financing statement would not continue its effectiveness.

2. Requirements of Initial Financing Statement Filed in Lieu of Continuation Statement. Subsection (c) sets forth the requirements for the initial financing statement under subsection (a). These requirements are needed to inform searchers that the initial financing statement operates to continue a financing statement filed elsewhere and to enable searchers to locate and discover the attributes of the other financing statement. A single initial financing statement may continue the effectiveness of more than one financing statement filed before this Article's effective date. See section 1-102(5)(a) (words in the singular include the plural). If a financing statement has been filed in more than one office in a given jurisdiction, as may be the case if the jurisdiction had adopted former Section 9-401(1), third alternative, then an identification of the filing in the central filing office suffices for purposes of subsection (c)(2). If under this article the collateral is of a type different from its type under former article 9—as would be the case, e.g., with a right to payment of lottery winnings (a “general intangible” under former article 9 and an “account” under this article), then subsection (c) requires that the initial financing statement indicate the type under this article.

§ 25-9-707. Amendment of pre-effective-date financing statement.

(a) "Pre-effective-date financing statement". — In this section, "pre-effective-date financing statement" means a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001.

(b) Applicable law. — After July 1, 2001, a person may add or delete collateral covered by, continue or terminate the effectiveness of, or otherwise amend the information provided in, a pre-effective-date financing statement only in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in Part 3 of this Article. However, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement also may be terminated in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed.

(c) Method of amending: general rule. — Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this section, if the law of this State governs perfection of a security interest, the information in a pre-effective-date financing statement may be amended after July 1, 2001 only if:

- (1) The pre-effective-date financing statement and an amendment are filed in the office specified in G.S. 25-9-501;
- (2) An amendment is filed in the office specified in G.S. 25-9-501 concurrently with, or after the filing in that office of, an initial financing statement that satisfies G.S. 25-9-706(c); or
- (3) An initial financing statement that provides the information as amended and satisfies G.S. 25-9-706(c) is filed in the office specified in G.S. 25-9-501.

(d) Method of amending: continuation. — If the law of this State governs perfection of a security interest, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement may be continued only under G.S. 25-9-705(d) and (f) or G.S. 25-9-706.

(e) Method of amending: additional termination rule. — Whether or not the law of this State governs perfection of a security interest, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement filed in this State may be terminated after July 1, 2001, by filing a termination statement in the office in which the pre-effective-date financing statement is filed, unless an initial financing statement that satisfies G.S. 25-9-706(c) has been filed in the office specified by the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in Part 3 of this Article as the office in which to file a financing statement. However, a termination statement shall not be filed under this section in the register of deeds office unless it is the office specified in G.S. 25-9-501.

(f) No additional fee. — No separate fee shall be charged for the filing or indexing of a concurrently filed termination statement under subdivision (c)(2) of this section. (2000-169, s. 1; 2001-231, s. 6.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Scope of This Section. This section addresses post-effective-date amendments to pre-effective-date financing statements.

2. Applicable Law. Determining how to amend a pre-effective-date financing statement requires one first to determine the jurisdiction whose law applies. Subsection (b) provides that, as a general matter, post-effective-date amendments to pre-effective-date financing statements are effective only if they are accomplished in accordance with the substantive (or local) law of the jurisdiction governing perfection under Part 3 of this Article. However, under certain circumstances, the effectiveness of a financing statement may be terminated in accordance with the substantive law of the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed. See Comment 5, below.

Example 1: D is a corporation organized under the law of State Y. It owns equipment located in State X. Under former Article 9, SP properly perfected a security interest in the equipment by filing a financing statement in State X. Under this Article, the law of State Y governs perfection of the security interest. See Sections 9-301, 9-307. After this Article takes effect, SP wishes to amend the financing statement to reflect a change in D's name. Under subsection (b), the financing statement may be amended in accordance with the law of State Y, i.e., in accordance with subsection (c) as enacted in State Y.

Example 2: The facts are as in Example 1, except that SP wishes to terminate the effectiveness of the State X filing. The first sentence of subsection (b) provides that the financing statement may be terminated after the effective date of this Article in accordance with the law of State Y, i.e., in accordance with subsection (c) as enacted in State Y. However, the second sentence provides that the financing statement also may be terminated in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction in which it is filed, i.e., in accordance with subsection (e) as enacted in State X. If the pre-effective-date financing statement is filed in the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection (here, State Y), then both sentences would designate the law of State Y as applicable to the termination of the financing statement. That is, the financing statement could be terminated in accordance with subsection (c) or (e) as enacted in State Y.

3. Method of Amending. Subsection (c) provides three methods of effectuating a post-effective-date amendment to a pre-effective-date financing statement. Under subsection (c)(1), if the financing statement is filed in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article, then an effective amendment may be filed in the same office.

Example 3: D is a corporation organized under the law of State Z. It owns equipment located in State Z. Before the effective date of this Article, SP perfected a security interest in the equipment by filing in two offices in State Z, a local filing office and the office of the Secretary of State. See former Section 9-401(1) (third alternative). State Z enacts this Article and specifies in Section 9-501 that a financing statement covering equipment is to be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. SP wishes to assign its power as secured party of record. Under subsection (b), the substantive law of State Z applies. Because the pre-effective-date financing statement is filed in the office specified in subsection (c)(1) as enacted by State Z, SP may effectuate the assignment by filing an amendment under Section 9-514 with the office of the Secretary of State. SP need not amend the local filing, and the priority of the security interest perfected by the filing of the financing statement would not be affected by the failure to amend the local filing.

If a pre-effective-date financing statement is filed in an office other than the one specified by Section 9-501 of the relevant jurisdiction, then ordinarily an amendment filed in that office is ineffective. (Subsection (e) provides an exception for termination statements.) Rather, the amendment must be effectuated by a filing in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article. That filing may consist of an initial financing statement followed by an amendment, an initial financing statement together with an amendment, or an initial financing statement that indicates the information provided in the financing statement, as amended. Subsection (c)(2) encompasses the first two options; subsection (c)(3) contemplates the last. In each instance, the initial financing statement must satisfy Section 9-706(c).

4. Continuation. Subsection (d) refers to the two methods by which a secured party may continue the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement under this Part. The Comments to Section 9-705 and 9-706 explain these methods.

5. Termination. The effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement may be terminated pursuant to subsection (c). This section also provides an alternative method for accomplishing this result: filing a termination statement in the office in which the financing statement is filed. The alternative method becomes unavailable once an initial financing statement that relates to the pre-effective-date financing statement and satisfies Section 9-706(c) is filed in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article.

Example 4. The facts are as in Example 1, except that SP wishes to terminate a financing statement filed in State X. As explained in Example 1, the financing statement may be amended in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection under this Article, i.e., in accordance with the substantive law of State Y. As enacted in State Y, subsection (c)(1) is inapplicable because the financing statement was not filed in the State Y filing office specified in Section 9-501. Under subsection (c)(2), the financing statement may be amended by filing in the State Y filing office an initial financing statement followed by a termination statement. The filing of an initial financing statement together with a termination statement also would be legally sufficient under subsection (c)(2), but Section 9-512(a)(1) may render this method impractical. The financing statement also may be amended under subsection (c)(3), but the resulting initial financing statement is likely to be very confusing. In each instance, the initial financing statement must satisfy Section 9-706(c). Applying the law of State Y, subsection (e) is inapplicable, because the financing statement was not filed in "this State," i.e., State Y.

This section affords another option to SP. Subsection (b) provides that the effectiveness of a financing statement may be terminated either in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection (here, State Y) or in accordance with the substantive law of the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed (here, State X). Applying the law of State X, the financing statement is filed in "this State," i.e., State X, and subsection (e) applies. Accordingly, the effectiveness of the financing statement can be terminated by filing a termination statement in the State X office in which the financing statement is filed, unless an initial financing statement that relates to the financing statement and satisfies Section 9-706(c) as enacted in State X has been filed in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article (here, the State Y filing office).

Subsection (e) is modified by adding the last sentence. Subsection (f) has no counterpart in the uniform text.

§ 25-9-708. Persons entitled to file initial financing statement or continuation statement.

A person may file an initial financing statement or a continuation statement under this Part if:

- (1) The secured party of record authorizes the filing; and
- (2) The filing is necessary under this Part:
 - a. To continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001; or
 - b. To perfect or continue the perfection of a security interest. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section permits a secured party to file an initial financing statement or continuation statement necessary under this part to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before this Article takes effect or to perfect or otherwise continue the perfection of a secu-urity interest. Because a filing described in this section typically operates to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement whose filing the debtor already has authorized, this section does not require authorization from the debtor.

§ 25-9-709. Priority.

(a) Law governing priority. — This act determines the priority of conflicting claims to collateral. However, if the relative priorities of the claims were established before July 1, 2001, former Article 9 determines priority.

(b) Priority if security interest becomes enforceable under G.S. 25-9-203. — For purposes of G.S. 25-9-322(a), the priority of a security interest that becomes enforceable under G.S. 25-9-203 dates from July 1, 2001 if the security interest is perfected under this act by the filing of a financing statement before July 1, 2001 which would not have been effective to perfect the security interest under former Article 9. This subsection does not apply to conflicting security interests each of which is perfected by the filing of such a financing statement. (2000-169, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Law Governing Priority. Ordinarily, this article determines the priority of conflicting claims to collateral. However, when the relative priorities of the claims were established before July 1, 2001, former article 9 governs.

Example 1: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for goods sold ("account"). SP-1 fails to file a financing statement. This Article takes effect on July 1, 2001. Thereafter, on August 1, 2001, D creates a security interest in the same account in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement. This Article determines the relative priorities of the claims. SP-2's security interest has priority under section 9-322(a)(1).

Example 2: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for goods sold ("account"). SP-1 fails to file a financing statement. In 2000, D creates a security interest in the same account in favor of SP-2, who likewise fails to file a financing statement. This Article takes effect on July 1, 2001. Because the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, former Article 9 governs priority, and SP-1's security interest has priority under former section 9-312(5)(b).

Example 3: The facts are as in Example 2, except that, on August 1, 2001, SP-2 files a proper financing statement under this article. Until August 1, 2001, the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, as in Example 2. However, by taking the affirmative step of filing a financing statement, SP-2 established anew the relative priority of the conflicting claims after the effective date. Thus, this article determines priority. SP-2's security interest has priority under section 9-322(a)(1).

As Example 3 illustrates, relative priorities that are "established" before the effective date do not necessarily remain unchanged following the effective date. Of course, unlike priority contests among unperfected security interests, some priorities are established permanently, e.g., the rights of a buyer of property who took free of a security interest under former article 9.

One consequence of the rule in subsection (a) is that the mere taking effect of this article does not of itself adversely affect the priority of conflicting claims to collateral.

Example 4: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for lottery winnings (a "general intangible" as defined in former Article 9 but an "account" as defined in this Article). SP-1's security interest is unperfected because its filed financing statement covers only "accounts." In 2000, D creates a security interest in the same right to payment in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement covering "accounts and general intangibles." Before this Article takes effect on July 1, 2001, SP-2's perfected security interest has priority over SP-1's unperfected security interest under former section 9-312(5). Because the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, former Article 9 continues to govern priority after this Article takes effect. Thus, SP-2's priority is not adversely affected by this Article's having taken effect.

Note that were this article to govern priority, SP-2 would become subordinated to SP-1 under section 9-322(a)(1), even though nothing changes other than this article's having taken effect. Under section 9-704, SP-1's security interest would become perfected; the financing statement covering "accounts" adequately covers the lottery winnings and complies with the other perfection requirements of this article, e.g., it is filed in the proper office.

Example 5: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for lottery winnings—a "general intangible" (as defined under former article 9). SP-1's security interest is unperfected because its filed financing statement covers only "accounts." In 2000, D creates a security interest in the same right to payment in favor of SP-2, who makes the same mistake and also files a financing statement covering only "accounts." Before this article takes effect on July 1, 2001, SP-1's unperfected security interest has priority over SP-2's unperfected security interest, because SP-1's security interest was the first to attach. See former section 9-312(5)(b). Because the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, former Article 9 continues to govern priority after this Article takes effect. Although section 9-704 makes both security interests perfected for purposes of this article, both are unperfected under former article 9, which determines their relative priorities.

2. Financing Statements Ineffective Under Former Article 9 but Effective Under This Article. If this article determines priority, subsection (b) may apply. It deals with the case in which a filing that occurs before the effective date of this Article would be ineffective to perfect a security interest under former article 9 but effective under this article. For purposes of section 9-322(a), the priority of a security interest that attaches on or after July 1, 2001, and is perfected in this manner dates from the time this Article takes effect.

Example 6: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in D's existing and after-acquired instruments and files a financing statement covering "instruments." In 2000, D grants a security interest in its existing and after-acquired accounts in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement covering "accounts." After this Article takes effect on July 1, 2001, one of D's account debtors gives D a negotiable note to evidence its obligation to pay an overdue account. Under the first-to-file-or-perfect rule in section 9-322(a), SP-1 would have priority in the instrument, which constitutes SP-2's proceeds. SP-1's filing in 1999 was earlier than SP-2's in 2000. However, subsection (b) provides that, for purposes of section 9-322(a), SP-1's priority dates from the time this article takes effect (July 1, 2001). Under section 9-322(b), SP-2's priority with respect to the proceeds (instrument) dates from its filing as to the original collateral (accounts). Accordingly, SP-2's security interest would be senior.

Subsection (b) does not apply to conflicting security interests each of which is perfected by a pre-effective-date filing that was not effective under former article 9 but is effective under this article.

Example 7: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in D's existing and after-acquired instruments and files a financing statement covering "instruments." In 2000, D grants a security interest in its existing and after-acquired instruments in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement covering "instruments." After this article takes effect on July 1, 2001, one of D's account debtors gives D a negotiable note to evidence its obligation to pay an overdue account. Under the first-to-file-or-perfect rule in section 9-322(a), SP-1 would have priority in the instrument. Both filings are effective under this article, see section 9-705(b), and SP-1's filing in 1999 was earlier than SP-2's in 2000. Subsection (b) does not change this result.

§ 25-9-710. Special transitional provision for maintaining and searching local-filing office records.

(a) In this section:

(1) "Former-Article-9 records" means:

- a. Financing statements and other records that have been filed in the local-filing office before July 1, 2001, and that are, or upon processing and indexing will be, reflected in the index maintained, as of June 30, 2001, by the local-filing office for financing statements and other records filed in the local-filing office before July 1, 2001; and
- b. The index as of June 30, 2001.

The term does not include records presented to a local-filing office for filing after June 30, 2001, whether or not the records relate to financing statements filed in the local-filing office before July 1, 2001.

(2) "Local-filing office" means a filing office, other than the office of the Secretary of State, that is designated as the proper place to file a financing statement under G.S. 25-9-401(1) of former Article 9. The term applies only with respect to a record that covers a type of collateral as to which the filing office is designated in that section as the proper place to file.

(b) A local-filing office must not accept for filing a record presented after June 30, 2001, whether or not the record relates to a financing statement filed in the local-filing office before July 1, 2001. This subsection does not apply, with respect to financing statements and other records, to a filing office in which mortgages or records of mortgages on real property are required to be filed or recorded, if:

- (1) The collateral is timber to be cut or as-extracted collateral; or
- (2) The record is or relates to a financing statement filed as a fixture and the collateral is goods that are or are to become fixtures.

(c) Until July 1, 2008, each local-filing office must maintain all former-Article-9 records in accordance with former Article 9. A former-Article-9 record that is not reflected on the index maintained at June 30, 2001, by the local-filing office must be processed and indexed, and reflected on the index as of June 30, 2001, as soon as practicable but in any event no later than July 30, 2001.

(d) Until at least June 30, 2008, each local-filing office must respond to requests for information with respect to former-Article-9 records relating to a debtor and issue certificates, in accordance with former Article 9. The fees charged for responding to requests for information relating to a debtor and issuing certificates with respect to former-Article-9 records must be the fees in effect under former Article 9 on June 30, 2001.

(e) After June 30, 2008, each local-filing office may remove and destroy, in accordance with any then applicable record retention law of this State, all former-Article-9 records, including the related index.

(f) Repealed by Session Laws 2001-231, s. 7, effective July 1, 2001. (2000-169, s. 1; 2001-231, s. 7.)

§ 25-10-102. Specific repealer; provision for transition.

(1) The following acts and all other acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed:

Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act, G.S. 25-1 through G.S. 25-199.

Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act, G.S. 27-1 through G.S. 27-53.

Uniform Bills of Lading Act, G.S. 21-1 through G.S. 21-41.

Uniform Stock Transfer Act, G.S. 55-75 through G.S. 55-98.

Uniform Trust Receipts Act, G.S. 45-46 through G.S. 45-66.

Agricultural liens for advances, G.S. 44-52 through G.S. 44-64.

Bank collections, G.S. 53-57 and 53-58.

Bulk sales, G.S. 39-23.

Factor's lien acts, G.S. 44-70 through G.S. 44-76.

Assignment of accounts receivable, G.S. 44-77 through G.S. 44-85.

(2) Transactions validly entered into before July 1, 1967, and the rights, duties and interests flowing from them remain valid thereafter and may be terminated, completed, consummated or enforced as required or permitted by any statute or other law amended or repealed by this act as though such repeal or amendment had not occurred. (1965, c. 700, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Section 39-23, referred to in the ninth paragraph of subdivision (1), has been repealed.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Subsection (1) provides for the repeal of present uniform and other acts superseded by this Act. Subsection (2) provides for the transition to the Code.

CASE NOTES

Section 20-72 Not Repealed. — It would require a strained interpretation to hold that it was the intention of the General Assembly in adopting the Uniform Commercial Code to repeal the provisions of G.S. 20-72, relating to transfer of title to motor vehicles, without a mention of that section in the specific repealer.

§ 25-10-103. General repealer.

Except as provided in the following section, all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed. (1965, c. 700, s. 6.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section provides for the repeal of all other legislation inconsistent with this Act.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1965, c. 700, s. 6, reads "the following sections 7 and 8" instead of "the following section" as in the 1962

Official Text of the uniform act. Section 7 of c. 700 is codified as G.S. 25-10-104 and § 8 amends G.S. 47-20 and 47-20.2.

CASE NOTES

Motor Vehicles Act Not Repealed. — The legislature did not intend to repeal the Motor Vehicles Act in the general repealer section. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hayes, 276 N.C.

620, 174 S.E.2d 511 (1970).

§ 25-10-104. Laws not repealed.

(1) The article on documents of title (article 7) does not repeal or modify any laws prescribing the form or contents of documents of title or the services or facilities to be afforded by bailees, or otherwise regulating bailees' businesses in respects not specifically dealt with herein; but the fact that such laws are violated does not affect the status of a document of title which otherwise complies with the definition of a document of title (G.S. 25-1-201).

(2) Repealed by Session Laws 1997-181, s. 21. (1965, c. 700, s. 7; 1997-181, s. 21.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section subordinates the Article of this Act on Documents of Title (Article (7) to the more specialized regulations of particular classes of bailees under other legislation and international treaties. Particularly, the provisions of that Article are superseded by applicable inconsistent provisions regarding the obligation of carriers and the limitation of their liability found in federal legislation dealing with transportation by water (including the Harter Act, Act of February 13, 1893, 27 Stat. 445, and the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, Act of April 16, 1936, 49 Stat. 1207); the Warsaw Convention on International Air Transportation, 49 Stat. 3000, and Section 20(11) of the Interstate Commerce Act, Act of February 20, 1887 24 Stat. 386, as amended. The Documents of Title provisions of this Act supplement such legislation largely in matters other than obligation of the bailee, e. g., form and effects of negotiation, procedure in the case of lost documents, effect of overissue, possibility of rapid transmission.

§ 25-11-101.1. Definitions.

(1) As used in this article, "old article 9" means: G.S. 25-1-105, 25-1-201(9), 25-1-201(37), 25-2-107, 25-5-116, and article 9 of chapter 25 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, Uniform Commercial Code, as they are in effect on June 30, 1976, immediately prior to the effective date of this act.

(2) As used in this article, "new article 9" means: G.S. 25-1-105, 25-1-201(9), 25-1-201(37), 25-2-107, 25-5-116, and article 9 of chapter 25 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, Uniform Commercial Code, as said provisions are enacted pursuant to this act, as of July 1, 1976, its effective date. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

§ 25-11-102. Preservation of old transition provisions.

The provisions of article 10 of chapter 25 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, Uniform Commercial Code, G.S. 25-10-101 through 25-10-106, thereof shall continue to apply to new article 9, and for this purpose the old article 9 and the new article 9 shall be considered one continuous statute. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section may be necessary in states in which the U.C.C. has only recently been effective. It preserves the principle of Section 10-102(2) of the 1962 Code that pre-Code transactions continue to be governed by pre-Code law. A different principle is set forth in this Article 11 for transition problems between the old article 9 and the new article 9, because the changes are not nearly as great. That principle is that the new article 9 governs (with minor exceptions).

§ 25-11-103. Transition to new article 9; general rule.

(1) Transactions validly entered into after midnight on June 30, 1967, and before July 1, 1976, and which were subject to the provisions of old article 9 and which would be subject to this act as amended if they had been entered into after July 1, 1976, and the rights, duties and interests following from such transactions remain valid after the latter date and may be terminated, completed, consummated or enforced as required or permitted by the new article 9.

(2) Security interests arising out of such transactions which are perfected when new article 9 becomes effective shall remain perfected until they lapse as provided in new article 9, and may be continued as permitted by new article 9, except as stated in G.S. 25-11-105. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This makes the new article 9 applicable to existing security interests, e. g., the revised notice provisions of Part 5 will apply to existing security interests. This would be so even if a 30-day notice period concerning retention of the collateral in lieu of sale were running on the effective date of the new article 9.

Suppose that a security interest attached in State A and the secured party filed in State B and assumed that he had 30 days to have the goods reach State B, in a non-purchase money case, under Section 9-103(3) of the old article 9. Section 9-103(1) (c) of the new article 9 limits the 30-day provision on intended removals to purchase money cases. So long as an ample period of waiting and familiarization is allowed under Section 11-101, this should cause no practical problem.

The "except" clause at the end is necessary because of the possibility that new financing statements would have to be filed in different offices.

§ 25-11-104. Transition provisions on change of requirement of filing.

A security interest for the perfection of which filing or the taking of possession was required under old article 9 and which attached prior to July 1, 1976, but was not perfected shall be deemed perfected on July 1, 1976, if new article 9 permits perfection without filing or authorizes filing in the office or offices where prior ineffective filing was made. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This covers the case of a purchase money security interest in consumer goods, which would not have had to be filed under the original Code if the goods had not been fixtures. Under the new article 9, the security interest will be perfected without filing, subject to the rights of real estate parties. Section 9-301(1)(d).

This also covers the case of factory or office machinery or replacement consumer goods appliances where the filing of a financing statement under the original Code in the regular chattel files was invalid because the goods were fixtures, but under the new article 9 that filing would be proper.

Under the old article 9 the status of assignments of revenues and similar collateral for governmental obligations was unclear. Section 9-104(e) of the new article 9 will make clear that Article 9 does not apply to these transfers. Section 11-108 of this draft may apply on the theory that the changes made by the new article 9 are considered to be merely declaratory. If this does not dispose of the matter, and if it might sometime be held that an assignment by a municipality had been ineffective for lack of filing, this provision would then apply from the effective date of the new article 9.

(1) A financing statement or continuation statement filed prior to July 1, 1976, which shall not have lapsed prior to July 1, 1976, shall remain effective for the period provided in the old article 9, but not less than five years after the filing.

(2) With respect to any collateral acquired by the debtor subsequent to July 1, 1976, any effective financing statement or continuation statement described in this section shall apply only if the filing or filings are in the office or offices that would be appropriate to perfect the security interests in the new collateral under new article 9.

(3) The effectiveness of any financing statement or continuation statement filed prior to July 1, 1976, may be continued by a continuation statement as permitted by new article 9, except that if new article 9 requires a filing in an office where there was no previous financing statement, a new financing statement conforming to G.S. 25-11-106 shall be filed in that office.

(4) If the record of a mortgage of, or a deed of trust on, real estate would have been effective as a fixture filing of goods described therein if new article 9 had been in effect on the date of recording the mortgage or deed of trust, the mortgage or deed of trust shall be deemed effective as a fixture filing as to such goods under subsection (6) of G.S. 25-9-402 of the new article 9 on July 1, 1976. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Subsection (1): All existing financing statements with a duration of less than 5 years are extended to the full 5 years. In the case of transmitting utilities for which a special rule of longer validity had been provided, the special rule will be continued.

Subsection (2) makes clear that all existing financing statements and continuations on the effective date remain valid for the remainder of the five years as to existing collateral, even though the appropriate place for filing may have changed under the new rules for accounts, general intangibles, etc. The existing filings also apply to new collateral acquired after the effective date, unless the appropriate filing place is different under the new rules. In that case there will have to be a new filing on the effective date to catch new collateral.

Subsection (3): A continuation statement may be filed after the effective date, but if the appropriate places under the new rules are different, the filing should be a financing statement.

Subsection (4) retroactively validates real estate mortgage recording as fixture filing.

(1) If a security interest is perfected or has priority when this act takes effect as to all persons or as to certain persons without any filing or recording, and if the filing of a financing statement would be required for the perfection or priority of the security interest against those persons under new article 9, the perfection and priority rights of the security interest continue until three years after July 1, 1976. The perfection will then lapse unless a financing statement is filed as provided in subsection (4) or unless the security interest is perfected otherwise than by filing.

(2) If a security interest is perfected when new article 9 takes effect under a law other than chapter 25 of the General Statutes, Uniform Commercial Code, which requires no further filing, refiling or recording to continue its perfection, perfection continues until and will lapse three years after new article 9 takes effect, unless a financing statement is filed as provided in subsection (4) or unless the security interest is perfected otherwise than by filing, or unless under subsection (3) of G.S. 25-9-302 the other law continues to govern filing.

(3) If a security interest is perfected by a filing, refiling or recording under a law repealed by this act which required further filing, refiling or recording to continue its perfection, perfection continues and will lapse on the date provided by the law so repealed for such further filing, refiling or recording unless a financing statement is filed as provided in subsection (4) or unless the security interest is perfected otherwise than by filing.

(4) A financing statement may be filed within six months before the perfection of a security interest which would otherwise lapse. Any such financing statement may be signed by either the debtor or the secured party. It must identify the security agreement, statement or notice (however denominated in any statute or other law repealed or modified by this act), state the office where and the date when the last filing, refiling or recording, if any, was made with respect thereto, and the filing number, if any, or book and page, if any, of recording and further state that the security agreement, statement or notice, however denominated, in another filing office under chapter 25, Uniform Commercial Code, or under any statute or other law repealed or modified by this act is still effective. G.S. 25-9-401 and 25-9-103 determine the proper place to file such a financing statement. Except as specified in this subsection, the provisions of G.S. 25-9-403(3) for continuation statements apply to such a financing statement. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Subsection (1) covers farm equipment perfected without filing. The three-year period ought to cover most existing transactions. It also applies to equipment trusts, and would appear to allow three years for filing. But generally filing under Article 9 for equipment trusts is excluded by Section 9-302(3), and the old pre-amendment filing under the Interstate Commerce Act will continue to serve the purpose.

Subsection (2) covers transmitting utility statutes and the like which were outside the Code, and provided for indefinite duration. It allows three years for refiling. But perfection under a certificate of title law or the like continues to be effective.

Some states dealt with transmitting utilities by internal amendment of the Code to permit filing which was good indefinitely. Section 11-105(1) operates to validate those filings indefinitely even though they may not have been in the Secretary of State's office.

Similarly, Section 11-105(1) would preserve the effect of Ohio's present Section 9-403(2), which in effect makes financing statements related to combined real estate and chattel mortgages good for the duration of the real estate mortgage, whether or not the chattels are fixtures.

Subsection (3) covers the case (if any) where a prior transmitting utility provision outside the Code had a filing of limited duration.

Subsection (4) covers a case where an ordinary continuation statement cannot be filed because the original filing was a non-Code filing or was a Code filing in a different filing office. It was thought advisable to use the concept of financing statement rather than the concept of continuation statement for these fact situations.

§ 25-11-107. Transition provisions as to priorities.

Except as otherwise provided in article 11, old article 9 shall apply to any questions of priority if the positions of the parties were fixed prior to July 1, 1976. In other cases questions of priority shall be determined by new article 9. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Most questions of priority can be broken down to questions between two parties, and the rule is that the new article 9 applies unless the rights of both parties were fixed under the old article 9.

If a creditor acquires knowledge of an unfiled security interest before the effective date of the new article 9, but gets his judgment after the effective date, the rule of the new article 9 governs, since he has no rights until after judgment and levy.

§ 25-11-108. Presumption that rule of law continues unchanged.

Unless a change in law has clearly been made, the provisions of new article 9 shall be deemed declaratory of the meaning of the old article 9. (1975, c. 862, s. 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This asserts that the new article 9 is declaratory, except where a change is clearly intended. This is an effort to minimize transitional problems.

§ 25A-1. Scope of act.

This Chapter applies only to consumer credit sales as hereinafter defined, except that G.S. 25A-37, referral sales, applies to all sales of goods or services as provided therein. This Chapter does not apply to a bona fide direct loan transaction in which a lender makes a direct loan to a borrower, and such lender is not regularly engaged, directly or indirectly, in the sale of goods or the furnishing of services as defined in this Chapter.

Except for G.S. 25A-37, referral sales, and those sales defined in G.S. 25A-2(b), this Chapter does not apply to any party or transaction that is not also subject to the provisions of the Consumer Credit Protection Act (Federal Truth-in-Lending Act). (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1983, c. 686, s. 1.)

Lender Not Engaged in Sale of Goods And Services. — Plaintiff borrowers' contention that bank was "indirectly" engaged in the furnishing of goods and services when it provided loan for a mobile home was supported by neither logic nor the plain language of this section. *Collins v. Class Actions Allowed. — When the General Assembly has wished to prevent class actions to enforce statutory claims for relief, where the relief sought was personal and penal in nature, it has said so expressly and unequivocally. The failure of the General Assembly to expressly prohibit class actions to enforce this statute convinces the Supreme Court that it intended to allow them for such purposes. *Crow v. § 25A-2. "Consumer credit sale" defined.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a "consumer credit sale" is a sale of goods or services in which

- (1) The seller is one who in the ordinary course of business regularly extends or arranges for the extension of consumer credit, or offers to extend or arrange for the extension of such credit,
- (2) The buyer is a natural person,
- (3) The goods or services are purchased primarily for a personal, family, household or agricultural purpose,
- (4) Either the debt representing the price of the goods or services is payable in installments or a finance charge is imposed, and
- (5) The amount financed does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) or, in the case of a debt secured by real property or a manufactured home as defined in G.S. 143-145(7), regardless of the amount financed.

(b) "Sale" includes but is not limited to any contract in the form of a bailment or lease if the bailee or lessee contracts to pay as compensation for use a sum substantially equivalent to or in excess of the aggregate value of the goods and services involved, and it is agreed that the bailee or lessee will become, or for no other or for a nominal consideration, has the option to become, the owner of the goods and services upon full compliance with his obligations under such contract.

The term also includes a contract in the form of a terminable bailment or lease of goods or services in which the bailee or lessee can renew the bailment or lease contract periodically by making the payment or payments specified in the contract if:

- (1) The contract obligates the bailor or lessor to transfer ownership of the property to the bailee or lessee for no other or a nominal consideration (no more than ten percent (10%) of the cash price of the property at the time the bailor or lessor initially enters into the contract with the bailee or lessee) upon the making of a specified number of payments by the bailee or lessee; and

- (2) The dollar total of the specified number of payments necessary to exercise the purchase option is more than ten percent (10%) in excess of the aggregate value of the property and services involved. For the purposes of this subsection, the value of goods shall be the average cash retail value of the goods. The value of services shall be the average retail value, if any, of such services, as determined by substantial cash sales of such services. If a contract is found to be a sale under this subsection, these values shall be used to determine the amount financed for purposes of G.S. 25A-15.

(c) A sale in which the seller allows the buyer to purchase goods or services pursuant to a credit card issued by someone other than a seller that is engaged in part or entirely in the business of selling goods or services or similar arrangement is not a consumer credit sale. A sale in which the seller allows the buyer to purchase goods or services pursuant to a credit card issued by the seller, a subsidiary or a parent corporation of the seller, a principal supplier of the seller or any corporation having shareholders in common with the seller holding over twenty-five percent (25%) of the voting stock in each corporation is a consumer credit sale within the terms of this Chapter.

(d) For the purposes of this Chapter, a consumer credit sale shall be deemed to have been made in this State, and therefore subject to the provisions of this Chapter, if the seller offers or agrees in this State to sell to a buyer who is a resident of this State, or if such buyer accepts or makes the offer in this State to buy, regardless of the situs of the contract as specified therein.

Any solicitation or communication to sell, oral or written, originating outside of this State, but forwarded to and received in this State by a buyer who is a resident of this State, shall be deemed to be an offer or agreement to sell in this State.

Any solicitation or communication to buy, oral or written, originating within this State, from a buyer who is a resident of this State, but forwarded to and received by a retail seller outside of this State, shall be deemed to be an acceptance or offer to buy in this State.

(e) If an advertisement for a terminable bailment or lease defined as a sale in subsection (b) above states the amount of any payment, the advertisement must also clearly and conspicuously state the following items, as applicable:

- (1) A statement that the transaction advertised is a lease;
- (2) The total amount of periodic payments necessary to acquire ownership or a statement that the consumer has the option to purchase the property and at what time;
- (3) That the consumer acquires no ownership rights if either the property is not leased for the term required for ownership to transfer or the terms of purchase are not otherwise satisfied.

If an advertisement for a terminable bailment or lease defined as a sale in subsection (b) above refers to the right to acquire ownership, the advertisement must clearly and conspicuously state whether or not the consumer may terminate the lease at any time without penalty and that the consumer acquires no ownership rights if either the property is not leased for the term required for ownership to transfer or the terms of purchase are not otherwise satisfied.

No one shall advertise in connection with any terminable bailment or lease defined as a sale in subsection (b) above the ownership option as a means of deceiving any lessee into believing that he is purchasing the item of personal property. CASE NOTES

Transaction Held Not Consumer Credit Sale. — A transaction whereby the seller would forbear collection of an amount due from the buyer on an open-end credit plan and reduce interest rates, and the buyer would execute a promissory note to the seller and give the seller a deed of trust on a farm to secure the note was not a “consumer credit sale” within the meaning of this section, but rather constituted a novation of the old agreement. Anderson v.

§ 25A-3. “Payable in installments” defined.

A debt is “payable in installments” when the buyer is required or permitted by agreement to make payment in more than four installments, excluding a down payment, and whether or not a finance charge is imposed by the seller. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-4. “Goods” defined.

(a) “Goods” means all things which are moveable at the time of the sale or at the time the buyer takes possession, including goods not in existence at the time the transaction is entered into and goods which are furnished or used at the time of sale or subsequently in modernization, rehabilitation, repair, alteration, improvement or construction on real property so as to become a part thereof whether or not they are severable therefrom. “Goods” also includes merchandise certificates.

(b) “Merchandise certificate” means a writing issued by a seller not redeemable in cash and usable in its face amount in lieu of cash in exchange for goods and services. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-5. “Services” defined.

(a) “Services” includes:

- (1) Work, labor, and other personal services; and
- (2) Privileges with respect to transportation, hotel and restaurant accommodations, education, entertainment, recreation, physical culture, hospital accommodations, funerals and other similar services.

(b) “Services” does not include:

- (1) Services for which the cost is by law fixed or approved by or filed with or subject to approval or disapproval by the United States or the State of North Carolina or any agency, instrumentality or subdivision thereof;
- (2) Insurance premiums financing covered by G.S. 58-35-1 to 58-35-95 and G.S. 58-3-145; or
- (3) Insurance provided by an insurer that is licensed to do business in this State. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-6. “Seller” defined.

“Seller” means one regularly engaged in the business of selling goods or services. Unless otherwise provided, “seller” also means and includes an assignee of the seller’s right to payment but use of the term does not itself impose on an assignee any obligation of the seller with respect to events occurring before the assignment. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-7. “Cash price” defined.

“Cash price” of goods and services means the price at which the goods or services are offered for sale by the seller to cash buyers in the ordinary course of business and may include:

- (1) Applicable sales, use, and excise and documentary stamp taxes; and
- (2) The cash price of accessories or related services such as installation, delivery, servicing, repairs or alterations. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in In re Frady, 141 Bankr. 600 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1991).

§ 25A-8. “Finance charge” defined.

(a) “Finance charge” means the sum of all charges payable directly or indirectly by the buyer and imposed by the seller as an incident to the extension of credit, including any of the following types of charges which are applicable:

- (1) Interest, time price differential, service, carrying or other similar charge however denominated;
- (2) Premium or other charges for any guarantee or insurance protecting the seller against the buyer’s default or other credit loss;
- (3) Loan fee, finder’s fee or similar charge; and
- (4) Fee for an appraisal, investigation or credit report.

(b) Finance charge does not include transfer of equity fees, substitution of collateral fees, default or deferment charges, or additional charges for insurance as permitted by G.S. 25A-17 or charges for insurance excluded by Section 226.4(a) of Regulation Z promulgated pursuant to section 105 of the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

(c) With respect to a transaction in which the seller acquires a security interest in real property, finance charge does not include charges excluded by section 226.4(e) of Regulation Z promulgated pursuant to section 105 of the Consumer Credit Protection Act. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-9. “Amount financed” defined.

(a) “Amount financed” means the total of the following to the extent that payment is deferred by the seller:

- (1) The cash price of the goods or services less the amount of any down payment whether made in cash or property traded in,

- (2) The amount actually paid or to be paid by the seller pursuant to an agreement with the buyer to discharge a security interest or lien on property traded in,
- (3) Additional charges for insurance described in G.S. 25A-8(b) and charges referred to in G.S. 25A-8(c), and
- (4) Official fees as described in G.S. 25A-10, to the extent they are itemized and disclosed to the buyer.

(b) If not included in the cash price, the amount financed includes any applicable sales, use or documentary stamp taxes and any amount actually paid or to be paid by the seller for registration, certificate of title or license fees. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-10. "Official fees" defined.

"Official fees" means:

- (1) Fees and charges prescribed by law which actually are or will be paid to public officials for determining the existence of or for perfecting, releasing, or satisfying a security interest related to a consumer credit sale; or
- (2) Premiums payable for insurance in lieu of perfecting a security interest otherwise required by the seller in connection with a consumer credit sale if the premium does not exceed the fees or charges described in subdivision (1) of this section which would otherwise be payable. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-11. "Revolving charge account contract" defined.

"Revolving charge account contract" means an agreement or understanding between a seller and a buyer under which consumer credit sales may be made from time to time, under the terms of which a finance charge or service charge is to be computed in relation to the buyer's unpaid balance from time to time, and under which the buyer has the privilege of paying the balance in full or in installments. This definition shall not affect the meaning of the term "revolving charge account" appearing in G.S. 24-11(a). (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-12. "Consumer credit installment sale contract" defined.

"Consumer credit installment sale contract" means the agreement between a buyer and a seller in a consumer credit sale other than a sale made pursuant to a revolving charge account. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-13. "Consumer Credit Protection Act" defined.

"Consumer Credit Protection Act" means the Consumer Credit Protection Act, an act of Congress of May 29, 1968, as amended (Public Law 90-321; 82 Stat. 146; 15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), and regulations and rulings promulgated thereunder. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-14. Finance charge rates and service charge for revolving charge account contracts.

(a) The finance-charge rate and either the annual charge or the monthly service charge for a consumer credit sale made under a revolving charge account contract may not exceed the rates and charge provided for revolving credit by G.S. 24-11.

(b) In the event the revolving charge account contract is secured in whole or in part by a security interest in real property, then the finance-charge rate shall not exceed the rate set out in G.S. 25A-15(d).

(c) No default or deferral charge shall be imposed by the seller in connection with a revolving charge-account contract, except as specifically provided for in G.S. 24-11(d1). (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1983, c. 126, s. 7; 1991, c. 506, s. 7.)

§ 25A-15. Finance charge rates for consumer credit installment sale contracts.

(a) With respect to a consumer credit installment sale contract, a seller may contract for and receive a finance charge not exceeding that permitted by this section. For the purposes of this section, the finance charge rates are the rates that are required to be disclosed by the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

(b) Except as hereinafter provided, the finance charge rate for a consumer credit installment sales contract may not exceed:

- (1) Twenty-four percent (24%) per annum where the amount financed is less than one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500);
- (2) Twenty-two percent (22%) per annum where the amount financed is one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500) or greater, but less than two thousand dollars ($2,000);
- (3) Twenty percent (20%) where the amount financed is two thousand ($2,000) or greater, but less than three thousand dollars ($3,000);
- (4) Eighteen percent (18%) per annum where the amount financed is three thousand dollars ($3,000) or greater, except that a minimum finance charge of five dollars ($5.00) may be imposed.

(c) A finance charge rate not to exceed the higher of the rate established in subsection (b) or the rate set forth below may be imposed in a consumer credit installment sale contract repayable in not less than six installments for a self-propelled motor vehicle:

- (1) Eighteen percent (18%) per annum for vehicles one and two model years old;
- (2) Twenty percent (20%) per annum for vehicles three model years old;
- (3) Twenty-two percent (22%) per annum for vehicles four model years old; and
- (4) Twenty-nine percent (29%) per annum for vehicles five model years old and older.

A motor vehicle is one model year old on January 1 of the year following the designated year model of the vehicle.

(d) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (b) and (c), above, in the event that the amount financed in a consumer credit sale contract is secured in whole or in part by a security interest in real property, the finance charge rate may not exceed sixteen percent (16%) per annum.

(e) A seller may not divide a single credit sale transaction into two or more sales to avoid the limitations as to maximum finance charges imposed by this section.

(f) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (b) or (d), the parties to a consumer credit installment sale contract for the sale of a residential manufactured home which is secured by a first lien on that home or on the land on which such home is located may contract in writing for the payment of a finance charge as agreed upon by the parties. Provided, this subsection shall only apply if the parties would have been entitled to so contract by the provisions of section 501 of United States Public Law 96-221, and have complied with the regulations promulgated thereto.

For the purposes of this subsection (f), a "residential manufactured home" means a mobile home as defined in G.S. 143-145(7) which is used as a dwelling. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1330, ss. 1, 2; 1981, c. 446, ss. 1-3; 1983, c. 126, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Subsection (d) Not Applicable to Novation. — Where the transaction in question was not a "consumer credit sale" under this Chapter but a novation, the restrictions of subsection (d) of this section would not be applicable. Anderson v. Pamlico Chem. Co., 470 F. Supp. 12 (E.D.N.C. 1977).

§ 25A-16. Transfer of equity.

If a buyer voluntarily transfers his rights in collateral pursuant to applicable law and the seller agrees, the seller may impose a transfer fee not to exceed ten percent (10%) of the unpaid balance of the debt or thirty-five dollars ($35.00), whichever is less. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 2000-169, s. 31.)

§ 25A-17. Additional charges for insurance.

(a) As to revolving charge account contracts defined in G.S. 25A-11, in addition to the finance charges permitted in G.S. 24-11(a), a seller in a consumer credit sale may contract for and receive additional charges or premiums (i) for insurance written in connection with any consumer credit sale, against loss of or damage to property securing the debt pursuant to G.S. 25A-23, provided a clear, conspicuous and specific statement in writing is furnished by the seller to the buyer setting forth the cost of the insurance if obtained from or through the seller and stating that the buyer may choose the insurer through which the insurance is obtained; (ii) for credit life, credit accident and health, or credit unemployment insurance, written in connection with any consumer credit sale, provided the insurance coverage is not required by the seller and this fact is clearly disclosed to the buyer, and any buyer desiring such insurance coverage gives affirmative indication of such desire after disclosure of the cost of such insurance.

(b) As to revolving charge account contracts defined in G.S. 25A-11, insurance that is required by a seller and is not an additional charge permitted by subsection (a) of this section, shall be included in the finance charge as computed according to G.S. 24-11(a).

(c) As to consumer credit installment sale contracts defined in G.S. 25A-12, in addition to the finance charges permitted in G.S. 25A-15, a seller in a consumer credit sale may contract for and receive additional charges or premiums (i) for insurance written in connection with any consumer credit sale, for loss of or damage to property or against liability arising out of the ownership or use of property, provided a clear, conspicuous and specific statement in writing is furnished by the seller to the buyer setting forth the cost of the insurance if obtained from or through the seller and stating that the buyer may choose the person through which the insurance is to be obtained; (ii) for credit life, credit accident and health, or credit unemployment insurance, written in connection with any consumer credit sale, provided the insurance coverage is not required by the seller and this fact is clearly and conspicuously disclosed in writing to the buyer; and any buyer desiring such insurance coverage gives specific dated and separately signed affirmative written indication of such desire after receiving written disclosure to him of the cost of such insurance. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1993, c. 226, s. 15.)

§ 25A-18. Confession of judgment.

A buyer may not authorize any person to confess judgment on a claim arising out of a consumer credit sale. An authorization in violation of this section is void. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-19. Acceleration.

With respect to a consumer credit sale, the agreement may not provide for repossession of any goods or acceleration of the time when any part or all of the time balance becomes payable other than for breach by the buyer of any promise or condition clearly set forth in the agreement. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-20. Disclaimer of warranty.

With respect to any consumer credit sale, the agreement may not contain any provision limiting, excluding, modifying or in any manner altering the terms of any express warranty given by any seller (excluding assignees) to any buyer and made a part of the basis of the bargain between the original parties. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-21. Attorneys' fees.

With respect to a consumer credit sale:

- (1) In the event that the seller institutes a suit and prevails in the litigation and obtains a money judgment, the presiding judge shall allow a reasonable attorney's fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the seller in such suit, said attorney's fee to be taxed to the buyer as part of the court costs.
- (2) In the event that a seller instituting suit does not prevail in the litigation, the presiding judge shall allow a reasonable attorney's fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the buyer in such suit, said attorney's fee to be taxed to the seller as a part of the court costs. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-22. Receipts for payments; return of title documents upon full payment.

(a) When any payment is made under any consumer credit sale transaction, the person receiving such payment shall, if the payment is made in cash, give the buyer a written receipt therefor. If the buyer specifies that the payment is made on one of several obligations, the receipt shall so state.

(b) Upon the payment of all sums for which the buyer is obligated under a consumer credit sale, the seller shall promptly release any security interest in accordance with the terms of G.S. 25-9-513 or G.S. 20-58.4, whichever is applicable. In the event a security interest in real property is involved, the seller shall take such action as is necessary to enable the lien to be discharged of record under the provisions of G.S. 45-37. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 2000-169, s. 32.)

§ 25A-23. Collateral taken by the seller.

(a) The seller in a consumer credit sale may take a security interest only in the following property of the buyer to secure the debt arising from the sale:

- (1) The property sold,
- (2) Property previously sold by the seller to the buyer and in which the seller has an existing security interest,
- (3) Personal property to which the property sold is installed, if the amount financed is more than three hundred dollars ($300.00),
- (4) Real property to which the property sold is affixed, if the amount financed is more than one thousand dollars ($1,000), and
- (5) A self-propelled motor vehicle to which repairs are made, if the amount financed exceeds one hundred dollars ($100.00).
- (6) Any property which is used for agricultural purposes, if the property sold is to be used in the operation of an agricultural business.

(b) A security interest taken in property other than that permitted in subsection (a) of this section shall be void and not enforceable.

(c) Nothing in this section shall affect any right or liens granted by Chapter 44A of the General Statutes.

(d) The provisions of G.S. 24-11(a), limiting the taking of a security interest in property under an open end credit or similar plan, shall not apply to revolving charge account contracts regulated by this Chapter; provided, however, the application of payments rule set out in G.S. 25A-27 shall apply to such contracts; provided further, that in any action initiated by the seller for the possession of such property, a judgment for the possession thereof shall be restricted to commercial units (as defined in G.S. 25-2-105(6)) for which the cash price was one hundred dollars ($100.00) or more. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1977, c. 508; c. 789, s. 1.)

§ 25A-24. Identification of instruments of indebtedness.

With respect to consumer credit sales, each instrument of indebtedness shall be identified on the face of the instrument as a consumer credit document, or otherwise clearly indicate on its face that it arises out of a consumer credit sale, provided, that such designation of an instrument of indebtedness regarding as sale which is not by definition a "consumer credit sale," shall not solely because of such designation cause the transaction to be a consumer credit sale. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-25. Preservation of consumers' claims and defenses.

(a) In a consumer credit sale, a buyer may assert against the seller, assignee of the seller, or other holder of the instrument or instruments of indebtedness, any claims or defenses available against the original seller, and the buyer may not waive the right to assert these claims or defenses in connection with a consumer credit sales transaction. Affirmative recovery by the buyer on a claim asserted against an assignee of the seller or other holder of the instrument of indebtedness shall not exceed amounts paid by the buyer under the contract.

(b) Every consumer credit sale contract shall contain the following provision in at least ten-point boldface type:

NOTICE

ANY HOLDER OF THIS CONSUMER CREDIT CONTRACT IS SUBJECT TO ALL CLAIMS AND DEFENSES WHICH THE DEBTOR COULD ASSERT AGAINST THE SELLER OF GOODS OR SERVICES OBTAINED PURSUANT HERETO OR WITH THE PROCEEDS HEREOF. RECOVERY HEREUNDER BY THE DEBTOR SHALL NOT EXCEED AMOUNTS PAID BY THE DEBTOR HEREUNDER.

(c) Compliance with the requirements of the Federal Trade Commission rule on preservation of consumer claims and defenses is considered full compliance with this act. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1977, c. 921.)

§ 25A-26. Substitution of collateral.

Subject to the provisions of G.S. 25A-23, if all involved parties agree, there may be a substitution of collateral under a security instrument in a consumer credit sale. For such substitution, the seller may impose a fee not to exceed ten percent (10%) of the unpaid balance of the debt or fifteen dollars ($15.00), whichever is less. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-27. Application of payments.

(a) Where a seller in a consumer credit sale makes a subsequent sale to a buyer and takes a security interest pursuant to G.S. 25A-23 in goods previously purchased by the buyer from the seller, the seller shall make application of payments received, for the purpose of determining the amount of the debt secured by the various security interests, as follows:

- (1) The entire amount of all payments made prior to such subsequent purchase shall be deemed to have been applied to the previous purchases, and
 - (2) Unless otherwise designated by the buyer, the amount of down payment on such subsequent purchase shall be applied to the subsequent purchase, and
 - (3) All subsequent payments shall be applied first to finance charges and then to principal. The application of payments to principal shall be applied to the various purchases on the basis that the first sums paid in shall be deemed applied to the oldest purchase or obligation assumed to satisfy the original debt secured by the purchase money security interest until payment is received in full and other payments shall be applied accordingly to all other purchases in the order that each obligation is assumed. At the time any original debt would have been satisfied by subsequent payments, the purchase money security interest in said purchase shall be extinguished.
- (b) Where a seller and a buyer agree to consolidate two or more consumer credit installment sale contracts pursuant to G.S. 25A-31, the seller shall apply payments received, for the purpose of determining the amount of the debt secured by the various security interests, as follows:
- (1) The entire amount of all payments received prior to the consolidation shall be applied to the respective contracts under which the payments were made, and
 - (2) All subsequent payments shall be applied first to finance charges and then to principal. The application of payments to principal shall be applied to the various purchases on the basis that the first sums paid in shall be deemed applied to the oldest purchase or obligation assumed to satisfy the original debt secured by the purchase money security interest until payment is received in full and other payments shall be applied accordingly to all other purchases in the order that each obligation is assumed. At the time any original debt would have been satisfied by subsequent payments, the purchase money security interest in said purchase shall be extinguished.
- (c) For payments received by a seller on or after October 1, 1988, but before October 1, 1993, a seller may elect to apply the provisions of this section as the section read October 1, 1993, or as the section read September 30, 1993. A seller made this election when the seller determined, and disclosed to the buyer, how payments received on a consumer credit sale would be applied: either on a proportional basis or on a "first in - first out" basis with the payments applied first to finance charges and then to principal in the order that each obligation is assumed.
- (d) The exclusive remedy for failure of a seller to apply payments of a buyer as required by subdivision (a)(3) or (b)(2) of this section during the period October 1, 1993, through October 1, 1996, is an order that the seller apply the payments as required by those provisions. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1993, c. 370, s. 2; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 745, s. 38.3(a).)

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under this section prior to the 1993 amendment of subdivisions (a)(3) and (b)(2), which formerly provided for proportional application of payments.

This section was drafted for the protection of both merchant and consumer, not just the merchant. Dossenbach's of Clinton, Inc.

v. Bartelt (In re Beasley), 23 Bankr. 404 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1982).

And clearly places the burden of apportionment of payments upon the seller. If the creditor-seller wishes to avail itself of the benefits of this statute, the creditor-seller must apportion the debtor-purchaser's payments when they are made and not wait for litigation to ensue. It would even seem appropriate for the retail installment contract or purchase-money instrument to provide for the apportionment of payments as specified in the statute so that the debtor-purchaser would be fully informed of the fact that the creditor-seller intends to exercise its rights under this statute in the event of default. Otherwise, the merchants might be inclined to assert a security interest in an item of property to the full extent of the total debt even though there was only a lesser sum owed on the balance of the purchase price of that item of property. Dossenbach's of Clinton, Inc. v. Bartelt (In re Beasley), 23 Bankr. 404 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1982).

The apportionment requirements of this section inherently recognize the continuing purchase money nature of installment sale contracts which are consolidated in that payments must be applied to the various contracts in the same proportion or ratio as the original cash prices in the various contracts bear to one another. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Payments Must Be Applied as Stated in Subsection (b). — As G.S. 25A-31(b) reveals, the only statutory requirement governing the terms of refinancing or consolidation agreements is that the agreements must be in writing, dated, and signed by the parties. However, upon consolidation of two or more installment sale contracts, the seller must apply payments as set out in subsection (b) of this section. The purpose of such application is to permit a determination of the amount of the debt secured by each of the various security agreements. A similar application is required where a seller in a consumer credit sale makes a subsequent sale to a buyer and takes a security interest in goods previously purchased by the buyer from the seller. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

In the event a dispute arises concerning application of payments, the statutory guidelines established by this section must be followed. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Compliance Required. — Revolving chart account requiring that finance charges for newly purchased goods be satisfied before payments would be applied to previously purchased items expanded the existing security interest in prior purchases to secure not only their own purchase price but also the payment of finance charges on items bought later was an agreement that created a security interest in previously purchased property, and thereby required compliance with the apportionment provisions of this section. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Vandeusen, 155 Bankr. 358 (E.D.N.C. 1993).

erence to unfair or deceptive acts or practices, see 21 Wake Forest L. Rev. 633 (1986).

If any installment is past due for 10 days or more according to the original terms of the consumer credit installment sale contract, a default charge may be made in an amount not to exceed five percent (5%) of the installment past due or six dollars ($6.00), whichever is the lesser. A default charge may be imposed only one time for each default.

If a default charge is deducted from a payment made on the contract and such deduction results in a subsequent default on a subsequent payment, no default charge may be imposed for such default.

If a default charge has been once imposed with respect to a particular default in payment, no default charge shall be imposed with respect to any future payments which would not have been in default except for the previous default.

A default charge for any particular default shall be deemed to have been waived by the seller unless, within 45 days following the default, (i) the charge is collected or (ii) written notice of the charge is sent to the buyer. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-30. Deferral charges.

(a) A seller may, by agreement with the buyer, defer the due date of all or any part of one or more installments under an existing consumer credit installment sale contract.

(b) Except as provided by subsections (e) and (f) of this section, a deferral agreement must be in writing, dated and signed by the parties.

(c) A deferral agreement may provide for a deferral charge not to exceed the rate of one and one-half percent (1 1/2%) of each installment for each month from the date which such installment or part thereof would otherwise have been payable to the date when such installment or part thereof is made payable under the deferral agreement.

(d) If a deferral charge is made pursuant to a deferral agreement, a default charge provided in G.S. 25A-29 may be imposed only if the installment as deferred is not paid when due and no new deferral agreement is entered into with respect to that installment.

(e) If the deferral agreement extends the due date of only one installment, the agreement need not be in writing.

(f) A deferral agreement for which no charge is made shall not be subject to subsections (b), (c) or (d) of this section. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-31. Consolidation and refinancing.

(a) A seller and a buyer may agree at any time to refinance an existing consumer credit installment sale contract or to consolidate into a single debt repayable on a single schedule of payments, two or more consumer credit installment sale contracts.

(b) A refinancing or consolidation agreement must be in writing, dated and signed by the parties.

(c) The refinancing or consolidation agreement may provide for a finance charge which shall not exceed the rates provided in G.S. 25A-15, with the amount financed being the unpaid time balance of the contract or contracts refinanced or consolidated, less the rebate provided by G.S. 25A-32. In computing the rebate to be credited to the previous time balances for purposes of this section, no prepayment charge shall be imposed. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section recognizes the right of a seller and buyer to consolidate one consumer credit installment sale contract with another. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

However, a seller's willingness to consolidate or refinance may be affected by recent bankruptcy decisions. Several bankruptcy courts have held that the purchase money status of a consumer credit installment sale may be lost when refinanced or consolidated with loans or other indebtedness. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Subsection (b) does not require that the consolidation or refinancing agreement provide for apportionment in its written terms. The purchase money character of agreements which are refinanced or consolidated is not destroyed by failure to provide for apportionment. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Payments Must Be Applied as Stated in § 25A-27(b). — As subsection (b) of this section reveals, the only statutory requirement governing the terms of refinancing or consolidation agreements is that the agreements must be in writing, dated, and signed by the parties. However, upon consolidation of two or more installment sale contracts, the seller must apply payments as set out in G.S. 25A-27(b). The purpose of such application is to permit a determination of the amount of the debt secured by each of the various security agreements. A similar application is required where a seller in a consumer credit sale makes a subsequent sale to a buyer and takes a security interest in goods previously purchased by the buyer from the seller. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Section 25A-27 Controls in Case of Dispute. — In the event a dispute arises concerning application of payments, the statutory guidelines established by G.S. 25A-27 must be followed. Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

§ 25A-32. Rebates on prepayment.

Notwithstanding any provision in a consumer credit installment sale contract to the contrary, any buyer may satisfy the debt in full at any time before maturity, and in so satisfying such debt, shall receive a rebate, the amount of which shall be computed under the "rule of 78's," as follows:

"The amount of such rebate shall represent as great a proportion of the finance charge (less a prepayment charge of ten percent (10%) of the unpaid balance, not to exceed twenty-five dollars ($25.00)) as the sum of the periodical time balances after the date of prepayment in full bears to the sum of all the periodical time balances under the schedule of payments in the original contract." No rebate is required if the amount thereof is less than one dollar ($1.00).

If the prepayment is made otherwise than on the due date of an installment, it shall be deemed to have been made on the installment due date nearest in time to the actual date of payment.

If a seller obtains a judgment on a debt arising out of a consumer credit installment sale or the seller repossesses the collateral securing the debt, the seller shall credit the buyer with a rebate as if the payment in full had been made on the date the judgment was obtained or 15 days after the repossession occurred. If the seller obtains a judgment and repossesses the collateral, the seller shall credit the buyer with a rebate as if payment in full had been made on the date of the judgment or 15 days after the repossession, whichever occurs earlier. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-32.1. Unearned finance charge credits on prepayment of loans secured by real property and mobile home loans.

(a) Notwithstanding any statutory or contractual provision to the contrary, in a consumer credit installment sale contract with an amount financed of five thousand dollars ($5000.00) or more secured by real estate or by a residential manufactured home as defined in G.S. 143-145(7), any buyer may satisfy the debt in full at any time before maturity, and in so satisfying the debt, shall be credited with all unearned finance charges as computed on the simple interest or actuarial method.

(b) If a seller obtains a judgment on a debt arising out of a consumer credit installment sale described in subsection (a) of this section, or if the seller forecloses or repossesses the collateral securing the debt, the seller shall credit the buyer with all unearned finance charges as computed on the simple interest or actuarial method as if the payment in full had been made on the date the judgment was obtained or 15 days after the foreclosure or repossession.

sion occurred, whichever is earlier. If the seller obtains a judgment and repossesses the collateral, the seller shall credit the buyer with all unearned finance charges as if payment in full had been made on the date of the judgment or 15 days after the repossession, whichever occurs earlier. (1991, c. 602, s. 2.)

§ 25A-33. Terms of payments.

A consumer credit installment sale contract shall provide for complete payment of all charges due under the contract, including the amount financed, the finance charge, and additional insurance charges, if any, within a period from the time of the sale of

- (1) Forty-two months, if the amount financed is less than one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500), or
- (2) Sixty-four months, if the amount financed is one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500) or greater, but less than two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500), or
- (3) One hundred and twenty-two months, if the amount financed is two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) or greater, but less than five thousand dollars ($5,000), or
- (4) One hundred and eighty-two months, if the amount financed is five thousand dollars ($5,000) or greater, but less than ten thousand dollars ($10,000), or
- (5) As the contract provides, if the amount financed is ten thousand dollars ($10,000) or greater.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to a consumer credit installment sale contract executed in connection with any financing which is insured under regulations of the Federal Housing Administration or the Veterans Administration. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1973, c. 1446, s. 3.)

§ 25A-34. Balloon payments.

With respect to a consumer credit sale, other than one pursuant to a revolving charge account, no scheduled payment may be more than ten percent (10%) (except the final payment may be twenty-five percent (25%)) larger than the average of earlier scheduled payments. This provision does not apply when the payment schedule is adjusted to the seasonal or irregular income of the buyer. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-35. Statement of account.

(a) One time during each 12-month period following execution of a consumer credit installment sale contract and when the buyer repays the debt early, the buyer shall be entitled upon request and without charge to a statement of account from the seller. The statement of account shall contain the following information identified as such in the statement:

- (1) The itemized amounts paid by or on behalf of the buyer to the date of the statement of account, except that upon early termination of the contract by prepayment or otherwise, the statement shall include itemized charges for expenses of repossession, storage and legal expenses;
- (2) The itemized amounts, if any, which have become due but remain unpaid, including any charges for defaults, expenses of repossession and deferral charges;
- (3) The number of installment payments and the dollar amount of each installment not due but still to be paid and the remaining period the contract is to run.

(b) The buyer may request and shall be entitled to additional statements of account but for such additional statements the seller may impose a charge of one dollar ($1.00).

(c) If the buyer requests information for income tax purposes as to the amount of the finance charges, the seller shall provide such information within 30 days without charge but only once in each calendar year. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

§ 25A-36. Certificates of insurance and rebates.

(a) Within 45 days following the purchase of insurance by the buyer from or through the seller, the seller shall deliver, send or cause to be sent to the buyer a policy or policies of such insurance or a certificate or certificates thereof. If such insurance is cancelled, or the premium adjusted, any rebate received by the seller shall be promptly applied to the purchase of other similar insurance, credited to the buyer's account, or rebated to the buyer. Unless otherwise required by law or the provisions of the policy, rebates of cancelled insurance shall be computed under the rule of 78's, without the deduction of a prepayment charge.

(b) In those cases where the insurance premium is added in the contract, and the buyer did not actually pay the premium, the return premium plus unearned finance charge on the amount of returned premium (at the same rate as used in the contract) shall be credited to the unpaid balance of the contract. If the required insurance premium is adjusted upward by the insurance company or is added in accordance with the contract, the buyer, after 10 days' notice,

- (1) May pay the additional premium, or
- (2) Have the additional premium plus finance charge (at the same rate as used in the contract) added to the unpaid balance and spread equally over the remaining installments unpaid, provided, the seller may require a buyer who wishes to finance such additional premium to be financed by the seller in accordance with North Carolina insurance regulations. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1977, c. 650.)

§ 25A-37. Referral sales.

The advertisement for sale or the actual sale of any goods or services (whether or not a consumer credit sale) at a price or with a rebate or payment or other consideration to the purchaser that is contingent upon the procurement of prospective customers provided by the purchaser, or the procurement of sales to persons suggested by the purchaser, is declared to be unlawful. Any obligation of a buyer arising under such a sale shall be void and a nullity and a buyer shall be entitled to recover from the seller any consideration paid to the seller upon tender to the seller of any tangible consumer goods made the basis of the sale. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Referral Sale. — In essence, a referral sale is a transaction in which a person is induced to purchase goods or services upon the representation that the purchaser can reduce or recover the purchase price or earn a commission by referring other prospective buyers to the seller for similar purchases. Chapel Hill Spa Health Club, Inc. v. Goodman, 90 N.C. App. 198, 368 S.E.2d 60 (1988).

Referral Sales Condemned. — In recognition of the vast potential for deception and exploitation of the public inherent in referral sales and in furtherance of the vital state interest in protecting citizens from fraud, our legislature, by enacting this section, has condemned all referral sales contracts, declaring them both unlawful and unenforceable. Chapel Hill Spa Health Club, Inc. v. Goodman, 90 N.C. App. 198, 368 S.E.2d 60 (1988).

Fact that contingency in referral contract related to price of renewal rather than original membership was of little significance, since in either circumstance the promise of something for nothing would serve as the incentive to make a purchase. Chapel Hill Spa Health Club, Inc. v. Goodman, 90 N.C. App. 198, 368 S.E.2d 60 (1988).

Where spa represented to purchaser, in effect, that if she purchased an initial membership, she could then obtain an additional year or years of membership free by referring an adequate number of prospects to the spa, this transaction clearly constituted a sale of services with other consideration to the purchaser that is contingent upon the procurement of prospective customers provided by the purchaser. Thus, the contract between purchaser and the spa constituted a referral sale, in violation of this section, and was void and unenforceable. Chapel Hill Spa Health Club, Inc. v. Goodman, 90 N.C. App. 198, 368 S.E.2d 60 (1988).

§ 25A-38. "Home-solicitation sale" defined.

"Home-solicitation sale" means a consumer credit sale of goods or services in which the seller or a person acting for him engages in a personal solicitation of the sale at a residence of the buyer and the buyer's agreement or offer to purchase is there given to the seller or a person acting for him. It does not include

- (1) A sale made to a buyer who has previously engaged in a similar business transaction with the seller;
- (2) A sale made pursuant to a preexisting revolving charge account;
- (3) A sale made pursuant to negotiations between the parties on the premises of a business establishment at a fixed location where such goods or services are offered or exhibited for sale;
- (4) A sale which is regulated by the provisions of Section 226.9 of Regulation Z promulgated pursuant to Section 105 of the Consumer Credit Protection Act; or
- (5) Sales of personal wearing apparel, motor vehicles defined in G.S. 20-286(10), farm equipment and goods and services to be utilized within 10 days in connection with funeral services. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1973, c. 672.)

§ 25A-39. Buyer's right to cancel.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this section, in addition to any right otherwise to revoke an offer, the buyer has the right to cancel a home-solicitation sale until midnight of the third business day after the day on which the buyer signs an agreement or offer to purchase which complies with G.S. 25A-40, or which complies with the requirements of the Federal Trade Commission Trade Regulation Rule Concerning a Cooling-Off Period for Door-to-Door Sales.

(b) Cancellation occurs when the buyer gives written notice of cancellation to the seller at the address stated in the agreement or offer to purchase.

(c) Notice of cancellation, if given by mail, is given when it is deposited in the United States mail properly addressed and postage prepaid.

(d) Unless the seller complies with G.S. 25A-40(b), notice of cancellation given by the buyer need not take a particular form and is sufficient if it indicates by any form of written expression the intention of the buyer not to be bound by the home-solicitation sale.

(e) The buyer may not cancel a home-solicitation sale if the buyer requests the seller in a separate writing to provide goods or services without delay because of an urgency or an emergency, and

- (1) The seller in good faith makes a substantial beginning of performance of the contract before the buyer gives notification of cancellation,

- (2) In the case of goods, the goods cannot be returned to the seller in substantially as good condition as when received by the buyer, and
- (3) Unless the buyer returns the goods, if any, to the seller at his expense.
- (f) A buyer, who has not received delivery of the goods and services from the seller in a home-solicitation sale within 30 days following the execution of the contract (and such delay is the fault of the seller), shall have the right at any time thereafter before acceptance of the goods and services to rescind the contract and to receive a refund of all payments made and to a return of all goods traded in to the seller on account of or in contemplation of such contract, or if the goods traded in cannot or are not returned to the buyer within 10 days after cancellation, the buyer may elect to recover an amount equal to the trade-in allowance stated in the contract. By written agreement, the buyer may agree to a later time for the delivery of goods and services. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1975, c. 805, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Unfair and Deceptive Act. — Failure to comply with a Federal Trade Commission regulation, 16 C.F.R. G.S. 429.1(e), by failing to orally explain to purchasers their rights to cancel at the time the agreement was signed, coupled with defective notice of cancellation, which was incomplete and unattached to the contract in violation of G.S. 25A-40(b) and 16 C.F.R. G.S. 429.1(b), constituted an unfair and deceptive act in violation of G.S. 75-1.1. Eastern Roofing & Aluminum Co. v. Brock, 70 N.C. App. 431, 320 S.E.2d 22 (1984).

§ 25A-40. Form of agreement or offer; statement of buyer's rights.

(a) In a home-solicitation sale the seller must present to the buyer and obtain his signature to a fully completed written agreement or offer to purchase which is in the same language as that principally used in the oral sales presentation and which designates as the date of the transaction the date on which the buyer actually signs and which contains the name and address of the seller, and which contains in immediate proximity to the space reserved for the signature of the buyer in bold face type of a minimum size of 10 points, a statement in substantially the following form:

“You, the buyer, may cancel this transaction at any time prior to midnight of the third business day after the date of this transaction. See the attached Notice of Cancellation form for an explanation of this right.”

(b) The seller must, in addition to furnishing the buyer with a copy of the contract or offer to purchase, furnish to the buyer at the time he signs the home-solicitation sale contract or otherwise agrees to buy consumer goods or services from the seller, a completed form in duplicate, captioned “Notice of Cancellation,” which shall be attached to the contract and easily detachable, and which shall contain in 10 point bold face type the following information and statements in the same language as that used in the contract:

“Notice of Cancellation

(enter date of transaction)

You may cancel this transaction, without any penalty or obligation, within three business days from the above date.

If you cancel, any property traded in, and payments made by you under the contract or sale, and any negotiable instrument executed by you will be returned within 10 business days following receipt by the seller of your cancellation notice, and any security interest arising out of the transaction will be canceled.

If you cancel, you must make available to the seller at your residence, in substantially as good condition as when received, any goods delivered to you under this contract or sale; or you may, if you wish, comply with the instructions of the seller regarding the return shipment of the goods at the seller's expense and risk.

If you do make the goods available to the seller and the seller does not pick them up within 20 days of the date of your notice of cancellation, you may retain or dispose of the goods without any further obligation. If you fail to make the goods available to the seller, or if you agree to return the goods to the seller and fail to do so, then you remain liable for performance of all obligations under the contract.

To cancel this transaction, mail or deliver a signed and dated copy of this cancellation notice or any other written notice, or send a telegram to _____, § 25A-41. Restoration of down payment; retention of goods.

(a) Except as provided in this section, within 10 business days after a home-solicitation sale has been canceled or an offer to purchase revoked in accordance with G.S. 25A-40, the seller must tender to the buyer any payments made by the buyer and any note or other evidence of indebtedness.

(b) If the down payment includes goods traded in, the goods must be tendered at the buyer's residence in substantially as good condition as when received by the seller. If the seller fails to tender the goods as provided by this section, the buyer may elect to recover an amount equal to the trade-in allowance stated in the agreement.

(c) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 805, s. 3.

(d) Until the seller has complied with the obligations imposed by this section, the buyer may retain possession of goods delivered to him by the seller and has a lien on the goods in his possession or control for any recovery to which he is entitled. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1975, c. 805, s. 3.)

§ 25A-42. Duties as to care and return of goods; no compensation for services prior to cancellation.

(a) Except as provided by the provisions on retention of goods by the buyer (G.S. 25A-41(d)), within a reasonable time after a home-solicitation sale has been canceled, the buyer must make available to the seller at the buyer's residence in substantially as good condition as received, any goods delivered under the contract or sale, or in the alternative, the buyer may comply with the instructions of the seller regarding the return shipment of the goods at the seller's expense and risk. The seller shall within 10 business days of receipt of the buyer's notice of cancellation notify the buyer whether the seller intends to repossess or to abandon any shipped or delivered goods. If the buyer makes the goods available to the seller and the seller does not pick them up within 20 days of the date of the notice of cancellation, the buyer may retain or dispose of the goods without any further obligation. If the buyer fails to make the goods available to the seller, or agrees to return the goods to the seller and fails to do so, then the buyer shall remain liable for performance of all obligations under the contract.

(b) The buyer has the duty of a bailee to take reasonable care of the goods in his possession before cancellation or revocation and for a reasonable time thereafter, during which time the goods are otherwise at the seller's risk.

(c) If the seller has performed any services pursuant to a home-solicitation sale prior to its cancellation, the seller is entitled to no compensation therefor.

(d) The seller shall not negotiate, transfer, sell, or assign any note, contract, or other evidence of indebtedness arising out of a home-solicitation sale to a finance company or other third party prior to midnight of the fifth business day following the day the contract was signed or the goods or services were purchased. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1975, c. 805, s. 4.)

§ 25A-43. Unconscionability.

(a) With respect to a consumer credit sale, if the court finds the agreement or any clause of the agreement to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, the court may refuse to enforce the agreement, or it may enforce the remainder of the agreement without the unconscionable clause, or it may so limit the application of any unconscionable clause as to avoid any unconscionable result.

(b) If it is claimed or appears to the court that the agreement or any clause thereof may be unconscionable, all parties shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to present evidence as to its setting, purpose and effect to aid the court in making its determination.

(c) As used in this section, "unconscionable" shall mean totally unreasonable under all of the circumstances. (1971, c. 796, s. 1.)

In addition to remedies hereinbefore provided, the following remedies shall apply to consumer credit sales:

- (1) In the event that a consumer credit sale contract requires the payment of a finance charge not more than two times in excess of that permitted by this Chapter, the seller or an assignee of the seller shall not be permitted to recover any finance charge under that contract and, in addition, the seller shall be liable to the buyer in an amount that is two times the amount of any finance charge that has been received by the seller, plus reasonable attorney's fees incurred by the buyer as determined by the court. However, if the requirement of an excess charge results from an accidental or good faith error, the seller shall be liable only for the amount by which the finance charge exceeds the rates permitted by this Chapter.
- (2) In the event that a consumer credit sale contract requires the payment of a finance charge more than two times that permitted by this Chapter, the contract shall be void. The buyer may, at his option, retain without any liability any goods delivered under such a contract and the seller or an assignee of the rights shall not be entitled to recover anything under such contract.
- (3) In the event the seller or an assignee of the seller (i) shall fail to make any rebate required by G.S. 25A-32 or G.S. 25A-36, (ii) shall charge and receive fees or charges in excess of those specifically authorized by this Chapter, or (iii) shall charge and receive sums not authorized by this Chapter, the buyer shall be entitled to demand and receive the rebate due and excessive or unauthorized charges. Ten days after receiving written request therefor, the seller shall be liable to the buyer for an amount equal to three times the sum of any rebate due and all improper charges which have not been rebated or refunded within the 10-day period.
- (4) The knowing and willful violation of any provision of this Chapter shall constitute an unfair trade practice under G.S. 75-1.1.
- (5) Any buyer injured by any violation of G.S. 25A-2(e) may bring an action for recovery of damages, including reasonable attorney's fees. (1971, c. 796, s. 1; 1983, c. 686, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Availability of Remedies. — In order to create a security interest in previously purchased property, the seller must provide for apportioning payments in the charge account contract. The failure to do so means that no security interest comes into existence and the remedies for a violation of this Act contained in this section do not apply. *Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. ARTICLE 1.

Credit Rights of Women.

§ 25B-1. Equal availability of credit for women.

(a) No married woman shall be denied credit in her own name if her uncommingled earnings, separate property or other assets are such that a man possessing the same amount of uncommingled earnings, separate property or other assets would receive credit.

(b) No unmarried woman shall be denied credit in her own name if her property, earnings or other assets are such that a man possessing the same amount of property, earnings or other assets would receive credit.

(c) For the purposes of this section, "credit" means the obtaining of money, property, labor or services on a deferred-payment basis. (1973, c. 1394, s. 1.)

§ 25B-2. Responsibility of credit-reporting agency to maintain separate credit histories.

A credit-reporting agency shall, upon written request of a married person, identify within any report delivered by the agency, both the separate credit history of each spouse and the credit history of their joint accounts, if such information is on file with the credit-reporting agency. (1973, c. 1394, s. 2.)

§ 25B-3. Right of action to enforce Article.

(a) A married or unmarried woman denied credit in violation of this Chapter shall have a right of action on account of such violation in which she shall be entitled to actual damages, and reasonable attorney's fees in the discretion of the court to be taxed as part of the cost.

(b) Violations of this Chapter may be enjoined by action of the Attorney General brought in behalf of the State pursuant to authority granted in G.S. 114-2. (1973, c. 1394, s. 3.)

§ 25B-4. Granting of credit not otherwise affected.

Nothing contained herein shall be construed to deprive any credit grantor of his right to deny credit or limit its terms based upon its evaluation of the applicant's capability or willingness to repay, or to require any credit grantor to give preferential treatment to any applicant because of sex or marital status. (1973, c. 1394, s. 4.)

ARTICLE 1.

Artwork on Consignment.

§ 25C-1. Definitions.

As used in this Article unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

- (1) "Art dealer" means an individual, partnership, firm, association, or corporation that undertakes to sell a work of fine art created by someone else;
- (2) "Artist" means the creator of a work of fine art;
- (3) "On consignment" means delivered to an art dealer for the purpose of sale or exhibition, or both, to the public by the art dealer; and
- (4) "Work of fine art" means an original art work that is:
 - a. A visual rendition, including a painting, drawing, sculpture, mosaic, or photograph;
 - b. A work of calligraphy;
 - c. A work of graphic art, including an etching, lithograph, offset print, or silk screen;
 - d. A craft work in materials, including clay, textile, fiber, wood, metal, plastic, or glass; or
 - e. A work in mixed media, including a collage or a work consisting of any combination of works included in this subdivision. (1983, c. 822, s. 1; 1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§ 25C-2. Interest of art dealer who accepts works of fine art on consignment.

If an art dealer accepts a work of fine art on a fee, commission, or other compensation basis on consignment from the artist:

- (1) The art dealer is, with respect to that work of fine art, the bailee of the artist;
- (2) The work of fine art is bailment property in which the art dealer has no legal or equitable interest until the work is sold to a bona fide third party; and
- (3) The proceeds of the sale of the work of fine art are bailment property in which the art dealer has no legal or equitable interest until the amount due the artist from the sale, minus the agreed commission, is paid. (1983, c. 822, s. 1.)

§ 25C-3. Status of works of fine art subsequently purchased by art dealer for his own account.

Notwithstanding the subsequent purchase of a work of fine art by the art dealer directly or indirectly for the art dealer's own account, a work of fine art that is bailment property when initially accepted by the art dealer remains bailment property until the purchase price minus the agreed upon commission, is paid in full to the artist. (1983, c. 822, s. 1.)

§ 25C-4. Creditors of art dealer may not reach works of fine art on consignment with art dealer.

Property that is bailment property under this Article is not subject to the claims, liens, or security interests of the creditors of an art dealer. (1983, c. 822, s. 1; 1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§ 25C-5. Risk of loss; insurable interest.

Nothing in this Article shall affect any provision of law pertaining to the risk of loss between or among the parties to a consignment agreement under this Article or pertaining to the insurable interest of any such party. (1983, c. 822, s. 1; 1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§§ 25C-6 through 25C-9: Reserved for future codification purposes.

ARTICLE 2.

Sale of Prints.

§ 25C-10. Definitions.

As used in this Article, the term:

- (1) "Artist" means any person who created or who conceived of and approved:
 - a. The master image of a work of art for a print, including but not limited to a photograph or a negative; or
 - b. The master image of a work of art which served as the model for a print.
- (2) "Art dealer" means a person:
 - a. Who is in the business of dealing in prints to which this Article applies; or
 - b. Who holds himself out as having knowledge or skills particular to prints to which this Article applies; or
 - c. Who employs an agent or other intermediary who holds himself out as having knowledge or skills particular to prints to which this Article applies; or
 - d. Who is a professional auctioneer who sells prints to which this Article applies, at auctions.
- (3) "Fine print" means a printed image on paper or any other suitable substance which is based on an artist's master image and has been taken off a plate by printing, stamping, casting, or any other process commonly used in the graphic arts, and includes but is not limited to engraving, etching, woodcut, lithograph, or serigraph, or a print developed or created from a negative when such negative is itself an original work of art.

- (4) "Person" means an individual, partnership, corporation, association, joint venture, or any other legal or commercial entity.
- (5) "Plate" means a plate, stone, block, or other material used to create a fine print or from which a fine print is taken.
- (6) "Print" means a fine print or reproduction as defined in this Article.
- (7) "Photograph" means the image produced upon a photosensitive surface by the chemical action of light.
- (8) "Negative" means any negative image, photographic plate, slide, or other material created by the artist and used for the purpose of creating the print.
- (9) "Reproduction" means a copy of a fine print or other work of art made by a commercial mechanical process which does not require the use of an original plate or an original negative.
- (10) "Signed print" means a finished fine print autographed by the artist and not by mechanical means of reproduction, whether or not it was signed or unsigned in the plate.
- (11) "Work of art" means an original art work that is:
 - a. A visual rendition, including a painting, drawing, sculpture, mosaic, or photograph;
 - b. A work of calligraphy;
 - c. A work of graphic art, including but not limited to a fine print;
 - d. A craft work in materials, including clay, textile, fiber, wood, metal, plastic, or glass; or
 - e. A work in mixed media, including a collage or a work consisting of any combination of works included in this subdivision. (1989, c. 464, s. 1; 1997-456, s. 27.)

Cross References. — As to applicability of this Article, see G.S. 25C-16.

Editor's Note. — The subdivisions of this section were renumbered pursuant to Session Laws 1997-456, s. 27, which authorized the Revisor of Statutes to renumber or reletter sections and parts of sections having a number or letter designation that is incompatible with the General Assembly's computer database.

§ 25C-11. General prohibitions.

(a) An art dealer may not publish in or distribute in, into or from, this State any catalog, prospectus, circular, advertisement or other publication which solicits a direct sale, by inviting transmittal of payment for a specific print not exempt under G.S. 25C-16, unless it clearly sets forth, in close physical proximity to the place in such publication describing the print, all information required by G.S. 25C-14. This requirement does not apply to general written material or advertising that does not solicit such a direct sale.

(b) An art dealer may not sell or invite offers to buy any print not exempt under G.S. 25C-16, either at retail or wholesale, unless the art dealer clearly and conspicuously discloses in writing to prospective purchasers, all information required by G.S. 25C-14. At public or private auction, an art dealer may not invite offers to buy any non-exempt print unless the art dealer clearly and conspicuously discloses in writing such required information to prospective bidders before any offer is made and until an offer is accepted. (1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§ 25C-12. Sale by artist; consignments.

(a) The disclosure requirements of this Article do not apply to a sale of a print by the artist who produced the print, directly to a purchaser, without the intervention of a wholesale or retail merchant, unless the artist is an art dealer within the definition of G.S. 25C-10(2)a. or unless the artist consigns a print of his own creation.

(b) An artist or art dealer who consigns a print to an art dealer for the purpose of effecting a sale of such print shall have no liability to a purchaser under this Article if such consignor, as to the consignee, has complied with the disclosure requirements of this Article. (1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§ 25C-13. Warranties.

(a) Whenever an art dealer discloses information as required by G.S. 25C-11, such information shall be a part of the basis of the bargain and shall create express warranties as to the information so provided.

(b) When information is not disclosed as required by G.S. 25C-11, such nondisclosure shall constitute an express warranty that such information is not required to be disclosed.

(c) Evidence of a warranty made in accordance with this Article shall be prima facie evidence of reliance upon the warranty. (1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§ 25C-14. Disclosure requirements.

(a) An art dealer who sells or offers to sell a print not exempt under G.S. 25C-16, shall disclose the following information in a writing to the prospective purchaser:

- (1) The name of the artist;
- (2) The year the plate or negative was created;
- (3) The year when the print was printed or created;
- (4) The process used to create the master image;
- (5) The process used to create the print;
- (6) Whether the print is part of a limited edition.

(b) If the print or its plate or negative is a mechanical, photomechanical or photographic copy or reproduction of a master image previously created or produced in another medium, this information shall be disclosed as part of the disclosure required by subsection (a) of this section.

(c) If the print is represented to be part of a limited edition, the disclosure required by subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall further state:

- (1) The authorized maximum number of numbered or signed prints, or both, in the edition;
- (2) The authorized maximum number of unnumbered or unsigned prints, or both, in the edition;
- (3) Any authorized maximum number of artist's, publisher's, printer's, or other proofs, exclusive of trial proofs, outside the regular edition;
- (4) The total number of prints, either numbered or unnumbered, in the edition;
- (5) Whether the plate or negative has been destroyed, effaced, altered, defaced, or cancelled after the current edition;
- (6) If there were any prior plates or negatives of the same master image, the total number of plates or negatives and a designation of the plate or negative from which the print was taken;
- (7) If there were any prior or later editions from the same plate or negative, the series number of the edition of which the print is a part, and the aggregate size of all other editions;

- (8) Whether the print was published as a book illustration or in a magazine article;
 - (9) Whether the edition is a posthumous edition or a restrike, and, if it is, whether the plate has been reworked;
 - (10) The name of any workshop where the edition was printed; and
 - (11) Whether the print has been printed on acid-free paper.
- (d) Whenever an art dealer disclaims knowledge as to a particular item about which information is required, such disclaimer shall be clearly and conspicuously stated in unqualified terms as to each of those items of information required by this section and shall be contained in writing in the physical context of other language setting forth the required information to be disclosed under this section. (1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§ 25C-15. Rights and liabilities not inclusive.

(a) An art dealer who sells a print in violation of this Article shall be liable to the purchaser of the print; the purchaser shall be entitled to recover of the art dealer the consideration paid by the purchaser for the print, with interest at the legal rate thereon, upon the tender of the print in substantially the same condition in which it was received by the purchaser.

(b) If an art dealer liable to a purchaser under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section wrongfully refuses to repay the purchaser's consideration as specified therein, the purchaser who prevails in a civil action to recover such consideration may also recover all expenses incurred in connection with the action, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

(c) A willful violation of this Article shall constitute a prima facie violation of G.S. 75-1.1.

(d) The rights and liabilities created by this Article shall be construed to be in addition to and not in substitution, exclusion, or displacement of other rights and liabilities provided by law. (1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

§ 25C-16. Exemptions.

(a) This Article shall not apply to any print when offered for sale or sold at wholesale or retail for one hundred dollars ($100.00) or less, exclusive of the value of any frame.

(b) This Article shall not apply to any print described clearly and conspicuously in writing by the seller as a "reproduction and not a fine print", unless the print is said or represented to be one in a limited edition, an edition of numbered or signed prints, or any combination thereof.

(c) This Article shall not apply to the sale of any print sold before January 1, 1990. (1989, c. 464, s. 1.)

Chapter 26.

Suretyship.

Sec.	Sec.
26-1. Surety and principal distinguished in judgment and execution.	26-6. Dissenting surety not liable to surety on stay of execution.
26-2. Principal liable on execution before surety.	26-7. Surety, indorser, or guarantor may notify creditor to take action.
26-3. Summary remedy of surety against principal.	26-8. Notice; how given; prima facie evidence thereof.
26-3.1. Surety's recovery on obligation paid; no assignment necessary.	26-9. Effect of failure of creditor to take action.
26-4. Subrogation of surety paying debt of deceased principal.	26-10. [Repealed.]
26-5. Contribution among sureties.	26-11. Cancellation of judgment as to surety.
	26-12. Joinder of debtor by surety.

§ 26-1. Surety and principal distinguished in judgment and execution.

In the trial of actions upon contracts either of the defendants may show in evidence that he is surety, and if it be satisfactorily shown, the jury in their verdict, or the magistrate in his judgment, shall distinguish the principal and surety, which shall be endorsed on the execution by the clerk of superior court. (1826, c. 31, s. 1; R.C., c. 31, s. 124; Code, s. 2100; Rev., s. 2840; C.S., s. 3961; 1973, c. 108, s. 14.)

Cross References. — As to right of surety to subrogation, see note to G.S. 26-3.

CASE NOTES

A guaranty of payment is an absolute promise by the guarantor to pay a debt at maturity if it is not paid by the principal debtor. This obligation is independent of the obligation of the principal debtor, and the creditor's cause of action against the guarantor ripens immediately upon the failure of the principal debtor to pay the debt at maturity. Exxon Chem. Ams. v. Kennedy, 59 N.C. App. 90, 295 S.E.2d 770 (1982).

A surety is bound with his principal as an original promisor. Coleman v. Fuller, 105 N.C. 328, 11 S.E. 175 (1890).

And Must Pay Debt When Principal Fails to Do So. — The surety's promise is to pay a debt, which becomes his own debt when the principal fails to pay it. Coleman v. Fuller, 105 N.C. 328, 11 S.E. 175 (1890).

The liability of a surety cannot be enlarged by construction. George D. Witt Shoe Co. v. Peacock, 150 N.C. 545, 64 S.E. 437 (1909).

Liability of Principal and Surety Limited to Terms of Contract. — The principal and his surety are liable under a contract expressed in definite terms and their liability cannot be carried beyond the fair meaning of those terms. State ex rel. Duckett v. Pettee, 50

N.C. App. 119, 273 S.E.2d 317 (1980).

Obligation of Surety on Corporate Debt Is Measured by Obligation of Corporation. — While a surety's liability is primary, its liability for a corporate debt is not indistinguishable from that of the corporation. The obligation of the surety is ordinarily measured by the obligation of the corporation, and a surety has usually been held to his or her contract, except where the entire agreement is unenforceable. Colonial Acceptance Corp. v. Northeastern Printcrafters, Inc., 75 N.C. App. 177, 330 S.E.2d 76 (1985).

Order of Liability. — The order in which parties to a security are liable at law is the order in which, independently of contract, they will be held bound in equity. Smith v. Smith, 16 N.C. 173 (1828).

Where it appeared that a negotiable instrument was signed by three persons other than the principal obligor, and it also appeared from a writing executed some time thereafter by one to indemnify the other two that they (the other two) "signed as co-sureties" of the third, it was held that the character of suretyship in which all three signed was sufficiently established. Southerland v. Fremont, 107 N.C. 565, 12 S.E. 237 (1890).

Same — Parol Evidence to Show Coprincipals. — In Williams v. Glenn, 92 N.C. 253 (1885), the note (under seal) was made with W. "as principal" and B. and G. "as sureties," yet as between the obligors the court held that parol evidence was admissible to show that Boyden and Glenn were coprincipals, and that the rule of contribution obtained among them. Smith v. Carr, 128 N.C. 150, 38 S.E. 732 (1901).

While all of the makers may appear as principals upon the face of the paper, or some principals and some sureties, yet it may be shown that while appearing as principals they were in fact sureties, or some principals and others sureties; and upon the establishment of the fact of co-suretyship, the right of contribution follows. Smith v. Carr, 128 N.C. 150, 38 S.E. 732 (1901).

Same — Issue Submitted. — In an action against the maker and endorsers of a note, an issue would be submitted as to whether or not the endorsers were cosureties, or whether one was a supplemental surety to the other. Parish v. Graham, 129 N.C. 230, 39 S.E. 825 (1901).

Suretyship May Be Alleged and Proved. — When sued, either of the defendants could allege that he was surety, and, if the allegation was proven, the jury in their verdict and the court in the judgment would distinguish the principal and surety, and it would be so endorsed on the execution issued for the collection of the judgment. Bank of Commerce & Trusts v. McArthur, 261 F. 97 (E.D.N.C. 1919), aff'd, 265 F. 1019 (4th Cir. 1920).

In Gatewood v. Leak, 99 N.C. 357, 6 S.E. 635 (1888), it was said: "If the appellee was surety, as he alleges, he might, as allowed by the statute (this section), have shown, by proper evidence on the trial in the actions in which the judgments were obtained by the appellant, that he was such surety, and the jury in their verdict, or the justice of the peace in his judgment, would have distinguished him as surety, and the executions would have been issued with a proper endorsement to that effect; and in that case the sheriff would have levied the sum required to be collected, first, out of the property of the principal if he had sufficient for that purpose."

Same — Practice of Courts. — It is not the practice of the courts to see that evidence of suretyship is produced and such fact inserted in the judgment, in the absence of the defendants and without any averment or request on their part. Morehead Banking Co. v. Duke, 121 N.C. 110, 28 S.E. 191 (1897).

Effect of Not Alleging Suretyship. — In Bank of Commerce & Trusts v. McArthur, 261 F. 97 (E.D.N.C. 1919), aff'd, 265 F. 1019 (4th Cir. 1920), it was said that: "It would not seem that, by failing to set up his suretyship in the action brought by the American National Bank on the note, McArthur lost any equitable rights against McBryde to which he was entitled as surety. It is true, as held in Gatewood v. Leak, 99 N.C. 357, 6 S.E. 635 (1888), that the surety, who has failed to set up the fact and have it found as provided by the statute, cannot enjoin the plaintiff in the judgment from proceeding to sell his land for its satisfaction. Neither McArthur nor plaintiffs may enjoin the bank from enforcing its judgment against himself until it has exhausted McBryde's property."

The magistrate is not bound to discriminate except upon the application of, and due proof by, the surety. Stewart v. Ray, 26 N.C. 269 (1844).

Effect of Finding of Jury. — Where a suit is brought at law against two persons, a finding of the jury that one of the defendants is principal, and the other surety, if binding at all between the parties, does not in equity establish the relation of suretyship. Lowder v. Noding, 43 N.C. 208 (1851).

When Execution Does Not Distinguish. — Where an execution against two does not distinguish which is principal and which surety, the sheriff has a right to collect it from either; and the sheriff may collect it from the surety, though the plaintiff in the execution directed him to collect it from the other. Shuford v. Cline, 35 N.C. 463 (1852).

Right of Surety to Assign Judgment. — It was stated in Barringer v. Boyden, 52 N.C. 187 (1859): "The right of a surety to keep alive a judgment, which he has paid, by having an assignment made to a stranger for his benefit, is unquestionable. When he advances the money, he has a clear equity (if he desires it) to be subrogated to the rights of the creditor, and to use the creditor's judgment for the purpose of coercing payment against the principal. Whether money advanced in such a way be an extinguishment or a purchase seems to be a question of intention. If it be paid, and nothing be said or done to show a contrary intentment, an extinguishment will be presumed; but if an assignment be made to one party, so as to show a purpose to keep it alive, it is sufficient. That a party defendant furnishes the money, and that the assignment is made on a day subsequent to the advancement of the money, can make no difference, provided it was intended, at the time it was advanced, as a purchase and not as a payment." Bank of Commerce & Trusts v. McArthur, 261 F. 97 (E.D.N.C. 1919), aff'd, 265 F. 1019 (4th Cir. 1920).

Signing on Faith of Creditor's Representations. — Persons signing a note as surety upon faith in the creditor's representation that another will sign as cosurety, leaving the note with the creditor for that purpose, are not bound thereon to such creditor upon the failure of the fulfillment of the representation. Bank of Benson v. Jones, 147 N.C. 419, 61 S.E. 193 (1908).

Bond Joint and Several on Face. — Although a bond is joint and several on its face, it can be shown by parol that a party thereto is a surety. Coffey v. Reinhardt, 114 N.C. 509, 19 S.E. 370 (1894).

Statute of Limitations. — If the purchaser of a note before maturity, for value and without notice, subsequently receives notice that a party thereto is a surety and delays action for three years after maturity, the surety will be protected by the three years' statute of limitations. Coffey v. Reinhardt, 114 N.C. 509, 19 S.E. 370 (1894).

Surety Held Liable for Face Value of Its Bond. — Where individual defendant as guardian of an incompetent and defendant insurance company as surety executed a bond and where nothing in the language of the bond indicated any intent that the bond be anything other than continuous, the bond clearly went to the entire administration of the estate, not to a single year of the administration and, thus, defendant insurance company's maximum liability over the entire term of guardianship was the face amount of the bond. State ex rel. Duckett v. Pettee, 50 N.C. App. 119, 273 S.E.2d 317 (1980).

Usury Defense Precluded. — A surety for a corporate debt answered "in behalf" of the corporation, within the plain meaning of G.S. 24-9, and was, under the plain meaning of that section, precluded from raising the defense of usury. Colonial Acceptance Corp. v. Northeastern Printcrafters, Inc., 75 N.C. App. 177, 330 S.E.2d 76 (1985).

Discharge in bankruptcy of debtor does not affect liability of any other entity on such debt. Exxon Chem. Ams. v. Kennedy, 59 N.C. App. 90, 295 S.E.2d 770 (1982).

§ 26-2. Principal liable on execution before surety.

When an execution, indorsed as aforesaid, shall come to the hands of any officer for collection, he shall levy on all the property of the principal, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the execution, and, for want of sufficient property of the principal, also on the property of the surety, and make sale of all the property of the principal levied on before that of the surety. (1826, c. 31, s. 2; R.C., c. 31, s. 125; Code, s. 2101; Rev., s. 2841; C.S., s. 3962.)

CASE NOTES

Surety's Interest in Collateral. — The surety is entitled to the benefit of every additional or collateral security which the creditor gets into his hands for the debt for which the surety is bound, as soon as such a security is created, and by whatever means the surety's interest in it arises; and the creditor cannot himself, nor by any collusion with the debtor, do any act to impair the security or destroy the surety's interest. First Nat'l Bank v. Homesley, 99 N.C. 531, 6 S.E. 797 (1888).

§ 26-3. Summary remedy of surety against principal.

Any person who may have paid money for and on account of those for whom he became surety, upon producing to the clerk of superior court, a receipt, and showing that an execution has issued, and he has satisfied the same, and making it appear by sufficient testimony that he has expended any sum of money as the surety of such person, may move the clerk for judgment against his principal for the amount which he has actually paid; a citation having previously issued against the principal to show cause why execution should not be awarded; and should the principal not show sufficient cause, the clerk shall award execution against the principal. (1797, c. 487, s. 1, P.R.; R.C., c. 110, s. 1; Code, s. 2093; Rev., s. 2842; C.S., s. 3963; 1973, c. 108, s. 15.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Subrogation.
- III. Assignments.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — This section, providing that a surety who shows that he has paid out money upon a judgment against his principal and himself may have a citation issued to the principal by the clerk to show cause why execution should not be awarded him therefor, is constitutional. Bank of N. Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N.C. 594, 61 S.E. 570 (1908).

A surety who has paid money for his principal cannot sue him in tort. Ledbetter v. Torney, 33 N.C. 294 (1850).

Notice to Corporation to Show Cause. — A notice issued by a court of competent jurisdiction, served upon the secretary and treasurer of a corporation, to show cause why an execution should not be awarded in favor of a surety who had paid a judgment against the corporation and himself, which set out the date and amount of the judgment, the relation of the parties, that the surety had actually expended money in payment of said judgment, and that the principal had not reimbursed him, was in compliance with the section. Bank of N. Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N.C. 594, 61 S.E. 570 (1908).

Validity of Order. — While the court could not revive a dormant judgment against the principal and the surety, an order otherwise valid was not rendered void by the addition of the words "that the judgment heretofore rendered is hereby revived, to the end that execution may be issued." The last sentence would be regarded as surplusage. Bank of N. Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N.C. 594, 61 S.E. 570 (1908).

When Surety Entitled to Action for Money Paid. — A judgment against a surety will not entitle him to maintain an action for money paid to the use of the defendant, until it has been satisfied. Hodges v. Armstrong, 14 N.C. 253 (1831).

To enable a surety to recover for money paid to the use of his principal, he must prove an actual payment in satisfaction of the debt. Hodges v. Armstrong, 14 N.C. 253 (1831).

The principal is not obligated to his surety until his surety has made a payment. American Nat'l Fire Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, 260 N.C. 681, 133 S.E.2d 669 (1963).

Right of Surety When Funds Misapplied. — Where a surety prays a judgment against his principal, he may recover any funds wrongfully converted or misapplied by the principal. Fidel- ity Co. v. Jordan, 134 N.C. 236, 46 S.E. 496 (1904).

Surety Cannot Trace Property. — A surety who has to pay the debt has no equity to follow the specific property which the principal debtor purchased with the borrowed money. Carlton v. Simonton, 94 N.C. 401 (1886).

Same — Bank Deposits. — Where the principal debtor borrowed a sum of money, which he deposited in a bank which soon afterwards became insolvent, and the surety had to pay the debt, the debt, the surety had no equity to enjoin the principal debtor from collecting the dividends from the insolvent bank, until he could recover a judgment. Carlton v. Simonton, 94 N.C. 401 (1886).

Where a writ is issued against two co-partners for partnership debt, and one of them is arrested and gives bail, such bail, upon being afterwards compelled by due course of law to pay the debt, has no remedy except against the individual for whom he became bail. He has no claim upon the other partner. Foley v. Robards, 25 N.C. 177 (1842).

Where one indorsed a note at the request of a member of a firm for the purpose of obtaining money for the use of the firm, and the proceeds were so used, the indorser, upon payment of the note, can recover therefor against the firm, though no member of such firm signed the note. Springs v. McCoy, 122 N.C. 628, 29 S.E. 903 (1898).

Property mortgaged by an administrator to a surety to secure him against loss may be subjected to payment of estate debts, though the personal liability of the surety is barred. Hooker v. Yellowley, 128 N.C. 297, 38 S.E. 889 (1901).

A mortgage given by an administrator to a surety on his bond to secure the latter against loss inures to the benefit of the creditors of the estate. Hooker v. Yellowley, 128 N.C. 297, 38 S.E. 889 (1901).

The obligation of a bond for the forthcoming of property is only that the property shall be delivered to the officer at the time designated, and not that the execution shall be delivered to the officer at the time designated and not that the execution shall be satisfied; and therefore, if a surety to the forthcoming bond before it is forfeited discharges the execution without the request of his principal, such surety cannot maintain an action against his principal for money expended for the latter's use, although by the payment of the money in satisfaction of the execution the bond was discharged. Gray v. Bowls, 18 N.C. 437 (1836).

Bond of Guardian in Suit on Behalf of Ward. — Where a guardian, having given a bond for the prosecution of a suit by him on behalf of his ward and having signed the same individually, was compelled to pay the costs of the suit out of his individual estate, he could not recover the same under the provisions of this section, which gives a summary method for reimbursement of a surety who has paid money for another. Green v. Burgess, 117 N.C. 495, 23 S.E. 439 (1895).

II. SUBROGATION.

Subrogation Explained. — Subrogation is the substitution of another person in the place of a creditor, so that the former can succeed to the rights of the latter in relation to the debt; to entitle one to such equitable relief, he must have paid the money upon request or as surety or under some compulsion made necessary by the adequate protection of his own rights. Liles v. Rogers, 113 N.C. 197, 18 S.E. 104 (1893).

Legal subrogation is based upon payment and exists where one who has an interest to protect or is secondarily liable makes payment, while conventional subrogation, so named from the convention or agreement of the civil law, is founded upon the agreement of the parties, which really amounts to an equitable assignment. Liles v. Rogers, 113 N.C. 197, 18 S.E. 104 (1893); Commercial & Farmers Bank v. Scotland Neck Bank, 158 N.C. 238, 73 S.E. 157 (1911); Journal Publishing Co. v. Barber, 165 N.C. 478, 81 S.E. 694 (1914); Joyner v. Reflector Co., 176 N.C. 274, 97 S.E. 44 (1918).

The doctrine of equity, by which subsequent cases have been ruled, was first announced in the following terms: "By the fact of payment the surety becomes an equitable assignee of all such securities, and is entitled to have them assigned and delivered up to him by the creditor, in order that he may enforce them for his own reimbursement and exoneration. If, therefore, the creditor refuses to surrender up such securities, the surety may maintain an equitable suit to compel their assignment and surrender." Bank of Commerce & Trusts v. McArthur, 261 F. 97 (E.D.N.C. 1919), aff'd, 265 F. 1019 (4th Cir. 1920).

It is held that an endorser on a note may pay it and demand its delivery, and if the contract has been merged into a judgment, his right is to an assignment of the judgment and to enforce it for his own benefit. The principle is clearly stated by Prof. Langdell: "If payment of a debt be secured by a pledge of the debtor's property, and also by the obligation of a personal surety, and the surety pay the debt, equity will compel the creditor to deliver the pledge to him and not to the debtor, though the latter has a clear legal right to receive it, the debt being paid and extinguished; i. e., equity destroys the legal right of the debtor, and converts the creditor into a trustee for surety. This is done upon the theory that the debt is not paid by the surety, but is purchased by him, and that he is therefore entitled to the pledge as an incident of the debt. This, however, is only a fiction—a fiction, moreover, which is contrary to law, for the payment by the surety extinguishes the debt. Equity does this under the name of subrogation, and perhaps her best justification is that she borrowed both the name and the thing from the civil law." Bank of Commerce & Trusts v. McArthur, 261 F. 97 (E.D.N.C. 1919), aff'd, 265 F. 1019 (4th Cir. 1920).

A surety paying the debt of his principal is entitled to be subrogated to all the rights of the creditors, against a co-surety as well as against the principal, and this includes the right to have a judgment which he has paid assigned to a trustee for his benefit, so as to compel his co-surety to pay his pro rata part. Peebles v. Gay, 115 N.C. 38, 20 S.E. 173 (1894).

In Brandt on Suretyship, G.S. 347, quoted in Tripp v. Harris, 154 N.C. 296, 70 S.E. 470 (1911), it is said: "A surety who pays the debt of his principal is entitled to subrogation to a mortgage given by the principal to the creditor for the security of the debt, and he may with or without a formal assignment thereof, have the same foreclosed in his own name, for his benefit."

Where a surety, as such, paid the whole of a debt, then the section gives him a right of action against co-sureties at law, and also such priority as the creditor would have had as a claimant against his principal's estate. Holden v. Strickland, 116 N.C. 185, 21 S.E. 684 (1895).

Rights Acquired. — The party for whose benefit the doctrine of subrogation is invoked and exercised can acquire no greater rights than those of the party for whom he is substituted, and if the latter had not a right of recovery the former can acquire none. Sheldon on Subrogation, G.S. 6; Clark v. Williams, 70 N.C. 679 (1874); Liles v. Rogers, 113 N.C. 197, 18 S.E. 104 (1893).

An endorser or surety who pays the indebtedness is subrogated to the rights of the creditor as against the property of the debtor. Ex parte Pittinger, 142 N.C. 85, 54 S.E. 845 (1906).

A surety to an administration bond who paid one half of a debt recovered against the insolvent administrator is not subrogated to the rights of the creditor whose debt he paid, but to the right of the administrator for whom he paid it. Clark v. Williams, 70 N.C. 679 (1874).

Same — Liens and Securities. — A surety who pays the debt is subrogated to all the specific liens and securities which the creditor has against the principal debtor. Carlton v. Simonton, 94 N.C. 401 (1886).

When Doctrine Cannot Be Invoked. — If a surety pays a judgment and has it entered "satisfied," without having it assigned to a trustee for his benefit, the remedy of subrogation is lost. Peebles v. Gay, 115 N.C. 38, 20 S.E. 173 (1894).

Where several or successive obligations of suretyship are not in substance and nature for the same thing and have no relation to or operation upon each other, the doctrine of subrogation cannot be invoked. Liles v. Rogers, 113 N.C. 197, 18 S.E. 104 (1893).

Same — Corporation Note. — The endorsers on a note of a corporation secured by mortgage on its property are not entitled to subrogation, either legal or conventional, when it is ascertained that the note was paid by the corporation, and not the endorsers, and where there is evidence that the latter had paid it, the question should be submitted to the jury. Joyner v. Reflector Co., 176 N.C. 274, 97 S.E. 44 (1918).

Rights of Surety Against Party Receiving Money with Full Knowledge. — A surety company which has been called upon to pay a devastavit committed by its principal, an administrator, is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the creditor against a party who received the money with knowledge of its wrongful appropriation, and his rights are exactly those of the creditor. Caviness v. Fidelity Co., 140 N.C. 58, 52 S.E. 265 (1905).

A surety, omitted in the deed of trust to secure the sureties, is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of his co-sureties pro tanto, if he has paid the debts, and the payees in the notes have a superior equitable right of subrogation to the benefit of any security given by the principal debtor to his sureties. Wiswall v. Potts, 58 N.C. 184 (1859); Harrison v. Styres, 74 N.C. 290 (1876); Ijames v. Gaither, 93 N.C. 358 (1885); Sherrod v. Dixon, 120 N.C. 60, 26 S.E. 770 (1897). And this is true whether they knew of it or not. Matthews v. Joyce, 85 N.C. 258 (1881); Blanton & Co. v. Bostic, 126 N.C. 418, 35 S.E. 1035 (1900).

III. ASSIGNMENTS.

Preservation of Lien by Assignment. — A surety may preserve the lien of judgment against the principal and himself by paying the judgment creditor and having the judgment assigned to a third person for his own benefit; and this also applies to a judgment against his co-sureties and himself in enforcing an equality of obligation between them. Fowle v. McLean, 168 N.C. 537, 84 S.E. 852 (1915).

A surety who pays the amount recovered against him and his principal, or co-sureties, may have the judgment assigned to another in trust for his use, and it will continue in force for his benefit; and he may, upon motion in the cause, have satisfaction of the judgment entered, even against the consent of the assignee. State v. Hearn, 109 N.C. 150, 13 S.E. 895 (1891).

Assignment of Right by Surety. — Where one of two defendants has paid a joint judgment upon a note against them both, and has the judgment assigned to another for his use, who brings action to recover against the other judgment debtor, he may, as between themselves, show that the defendant in the second action was the principal payee, and that he, the plaintiff, was an endorser, though not pleaded in the original action, and recover the full amount of the judgment he has paid, the action being, in substance, one by the surety on the note to recover against the principal thereon. Haywood v. Russell, 182 N.C. 711, 110 S.E. 81 (1921).

When One Half of Judgment Is Paid and the Other Assigned. — Where a surety paid and had satisfaction entered as to one half of a judgment against himself, his principal and a co-surety, and procured the judgment as to the other half to be assigned to a trustee for his benefit, it was in effect the same as if he had procured the whole judgment to be so assigned. Peebles v. Gay, 115 N.C. 38, 20 S.E. 173 (1894).

When Assignment of Security Is Taken. — If an assignment of the security is taken, the surety may have his redress upon it immediately in the name of the creditor, but, while it is not in force, the surety can not maintain an action for the money paid for the assignment. Hodges v. Armstrong, 14 N.C. 253 (1831).

When Person Is Charged with Notice of Assignment. — Where a judgment against a principal and the sureties on a note is paid by the sureties, and an assignment thereof is made to a trustee for the benefit of the sureties, but by a mistake payment is entered on the judgment record, which is afterwards corrected by the entry thereon of the assignment, a person taking a mortgage on the property of the judgment debtor, after the assignment is entered on the record, takes with notice of the assignment. Patton v. Cooper, 132 N.C. 791, 44 S.E. 676 (1903).

§ 26-3.1. Surety's recovery on obligation paid; no assignment necessary.

(a) A surety who has paid his principal's note, bill, bond or other written obligation, may either sue his principal for reimbursement or sue his principal on the instrument and may maintain any action or avail himself of any remedy which the creditor himself might have had against the principal debtor. No assignment of the obligation to the surety or to a third-party trustee for the surety's benefit shall be required.

(b) The word "surety" as used herein includes a guarantor, accommodation maker, accommodation indorser, or other person who undertakes liability for the written obligation of another. (1959, c. 1120.)

CASE NOTES

A surety paying the debt of his principal is entitled to be substituted to all the rights of the creditor. Exxon Chem. Ams. v. Kennedy, 59 N.C. App. 90, 295 S.E.2d 770 (1982).

Sureties on bonds issued by principal cannot sue principal before paying all or part of the penal amount of the bonds. Harshaw v. Mustafa, 321 N.C. 288, 362 S.E.2d 541 (1987).

Time of Suit. — This section allows a surety to sue a principal on the original instrument or for reimbursement on the surety agreement. After three years, a suit on the latter theory would be barred by G.S. 1-52. Where surety elects to sue on the underlying note under seal, he has the same rights the bank had on the original note. Thus, the 10-year statute of limitations, G.S. 1-47, would apply. Adams v. Bass, 88 N.C. App. 599, 364 S.E.2d 194 (1988), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 363, 389 S.E.2d 810 (1990).

§ 26-4. Subrogation of surety paying debt of deceased principal.

Whenever a surety, or his representative, shall pay the debt of his deceased principal, the claim thus accruing shall have such priority in the administration of the assets of the principal as had the debt before its payment. (1829, c. 23; R.C., c. 110, s. 4; Code, s. 2096; Rev., s. 2843; C.S., s. 3964.)

CASE NOTES

Scope. — This section, which confers on the claim of a surety paying the debt for which he is surety the dignity, in the administration of the assets of the principal, which the debt, if unpaid, would have had, applies to a judgment, whether the payment be made before or after the death of the principal. Drake v. Coltrane, 44 N.C. 300 (1853).

When Co-Surety Deemed Bond Creditor. — A co-surety, who pays the bond debt for which the other surety is equally bound, shall be deemed a bond creditor in the administration of the estate of the deceased co-surety, under the Act of 1828 as construed in Drake v. Coltrane, 44 N.C. 300 (1853); Howell v. Reams, 73 N.C. 391 (1875).

When a plaintiff, a co-surety, discharged the bond debt, for the payment of which the defendant's intestate was equally bound, he became a bond creditor as to the assets of the intestate; and when, pending an action for contribution, the administrator paid off the bonds voluntarily, of equal dignity with said surety debt, having previously paid an open account, he committed a devastavit to the extent of the plaintiff's claim for contribution, such claim being for a sum smaller than the bonds so preferred and the open account. Howell v. Reams, 73 N.C. 391 (1875).

For case in which this section was applied in subrogating widow to rights of mortgagee where policy in which she was named beneficiary was assigned to and paid to mortgagee, see Russel v. Owen, 203 N.C. 262, 165 S.E. 687 (1932).

Cited in Brown v. McLean, 217 N.C. 555, 8 S.E.2d 807 (1940).

§ 26-5. Contribution among sureties.

Where there are two or more sureties for the performance of a contract, and one or more of them may have been compelled to perform and satisfy the same, or any part thereof, such surety may have and maintain an action against every other surety for a just and ratable proportion of the same which may have been paid as aforesaid, whether of principal, interest or cost. (1807, c. 722, P.R.; R.C., c. 110, s. 2; Code, s. 2094; Rev., s. 2844; C.S., s. 3965; 1957, c. 981.)

- II. When Surety Obtains Advantage over Co-Sureties.
- III. Contribution Enforced.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Actions and Incidents Thereof.

I. THE RIGHT TO CONTRIBUTION GENERALLY.

Rule of Contribution. — The rule of contribution is founded upon the maxim that “equality is equity,” and not upon contract. It is a rule of a common justice whereby parties who undertake to account for the default or miscarriage of another should equally bear the burden imposed by a failure of their principal. As between them, there is no agreement implied, but an equitable presumption raised by the fact of the payment by one, that the others will equalize the burden thus borne by him, by paying to him such sums as will make the loss equal upon each, which can be rebutted by showing that there was an agreement, whether verbal or written, to the contrary. Smith v. Carr, 128 N.C. 150, 38 S.E. 732 (1901). See Allen v. Wood, 38 N.C. 386 (1844).

This maxim can only be applied to those whose situations are equal; otherwise equality is not equity, and hence if one surety stipulates for a separate indemnity, the equality of situation between him and his co-surety ceases, and the maxim does not apply. Moore v. Moore, 11 N.C. 358 (1826).

It is broadly stated in 2 Brandt Suretyship 309, that “A surety who pays his principal’s debt is entitled to be subrogated to all the rights and remedies of the creditor against his co-surety in the same manner as against the principal.” This is founded in reason and justice, and up to the adoption of our present Constitution was enforced in the courts of equity. N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 1 abolished the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity, leaving such rights and remedies to be enforced in the one court, which theretofore had administered simply legal rights. Peebles v. Gay, 115 N.C. 38, 20 S.E. 173 (1894).

The liability of sureties among themselves is controlled by the equitable principle of equality arising out of a common risk, and in case of insolvency or nonresidence these rights are adjusted by reference to the number of sureties who are solvent or who have property available to process within the jurisdiction of the court.

Fowle v. McLean, 168 N.C. 537, 84 S.E. 852 (1915).

Same — Primary and Conditional Liability. — The equitable doctrine of contribution is enforced upon the principle that those engaged in a common hazard in the same degree or relation should bear the loss equally, but where one is surety and the others endorers, the liability of the former is primary and of the latter a conditional one, and not being in the same situation with regard to the hazard, the surety is not entitled to contribution from the endorers. Edwards v. Jefferson Std. Life Ins. Co., 173 N.C. 614, 92 S.E. 695 (1917).

Rebuttable Presumption of Equal Liability. — Co-principals and co-sureties are presumed to assume equal liability, but this presumption may be rebutted by parol evidence. Smith v. Carr, 128 N.C. 150, 38 S.E. 732 (1901).

Surety for Other Sureties. — It is entirely competent for one person to become surety for other sureties, or to limit the extent of his liability with respect to other sureties. The test of liability is the intent of the parties as indicated by their agreement. Citizens Nat’l Bank v. Burch, 145 N.C. 316, 59 S.E. 71 (1907).

Sureties on Successive Guardianship Bonds. — The sureties to the successive bonds of a guardian stand in the relation of co-sureties, one bond to the other or others, and are liable, in case of insolvency of the guardian, to contribution in proportion to the amount of the several penalties of the bonds. The risk they take is a joint risk, and there is an implied engagement or obligation, each set of sureties with the other, to bear any loss which may fall on them proportionally, as above stated; or, if it is borne by one class, to contribute by way of reimbursement. Bell v. Jasper, 37 N.C. 597 (1843); Jones v. Hays, 38 N.C. 502 (1845); Bright v. Lennon, 83 N.C. 184 (1880).

Where a guardian gives several successive bonds for the faithful discharge of his trust, the sureties on each bond stand in the relation of co-sureties to the sureties on every other bond; the only qualification to the rule being that the sureties are bound to contribution only according to the amount of the penalty of the bond in which each class is bound. Jones v. Hays, 38 N.C. 502 (1845).

All the bonds given by a guardian are but securities for the same thing, and the sureties on each are bound to contribution, but their liabilities are in proportion to the amount of their respective bonds. Jones v. Blanton, 41 N.C. 115 (1848).

When Surety Should Answer for Default and Stop Costs. — As a general rule, upon the default and insolvency of a principal, a surety should answer for the default, and not unnecessarily let costs be run up where the liability and amount thereof is clear. But where the guardian claimed to have settled with and paid the wards, it was prudent in plaintiff in regard to his own interests and as an act of justice to his co-sureties on other bonds to incur costs to the point of developing how the fact of alleged settlement was, and to this effect are the authorities. Bright v. Lennon, 83 N.C. 184 (1880).

The costs incurred by one surety, or one set of sureties, are not always to be regarded as a loss borne to which in equity contribution may be had, but it would seem to depend on the prudence and bona fides of the defense by which they were incurred. Bright v. Lennon, 83 N.C. 184 (1880).

Assets Given Up by Mistake of Law. — Where A and B were co-sureties on an administration bond, and were sued upon the same by one of the next of kin, and while the suit was pending compromised the same under the advice of counsel and from an honest belief that both were liable to a larger sum on account of the devastavit and insolvency of their principal, and it was afterwards discovered that B, who had administered on the estate of the principal, had, by a misapprehension of law, but acting under legal counsel, and in good faith, erroneously given up assets of their principal to another claim, which, if they had been held by him, would have saved them both from loss by this suretyship, it was held that A could not sustain a bill to throw the whole loss on B, there being no evidence that B had concealed from A the fact of having thus parted with the assets, there being no allegation of fraud or imposition on the part of B. Brandon v. Medley, 54 N.C. 313 (1854).

Release of Principal. — A surety who seeks to recover from a co-surety a ratable part of money paid must take care to do no act which will prevent the co-surety from having recourse against the principal. If, therefore, he releases the principal, it is a discharge of the co-surety. Draughan v. Bunting, 31 N.C. 10 (1848).

Sureties on Sheriff's Tax Bond. — The right of contribution does not exist between sureties of the different bonds of a sheriff as tax collector. McGuire v. Williams, 123 N.C. 349, 31 S.E. 627 (1898).

When One Surety in Fact Surety for

Co-Surety. — Where A and B signed a negotiable note apparently as joint principals, when, in fact, the latter was surety for the former and the appellant signed the note by writing his name across the back, with the word "surety" underneath, it was held that in the absence of any evidence that appellant knew of the relation between the makers, he was surety for the two, and that surety B could not compel contribution. Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Burch, 145 N.C. 316, 59 S.E. 71 (1907).

Release by Securing Part of Debt. — If there are several sureties for the same principal, and one of them is fixed with the payment of the whole debt, or of more than his ratable part thereof, the others, who are solvent, shall be compelled to contribute, in order to equalize the loss. But if by any agreement between the sureties, one of them is released by the creditor, upon his securing the payment of a certain part of the debt, he shall not afterwards be called upon to contribute to one or more of the remaining sureties, for a loss arising from the deficiency of another to them. Moore v. Isley, 22 N.C. 372 (1839).

Agreement Between Sureties. — There can be no doubt that after two persons have become sureties for a common principal they may, by agreement between themselves, renounce their right to take benefit from any securities they may respectively obtain, and each look out for himself exclusively for an indemnity from the principal or for contribution from another co-surety. Long v. Barnett, 38 N.C. 631 (1845); Commissioners of McDowell County v. Nichols, 131 N.C. 501, 42 S.E. 938 (1902).

Where the land of one of two sureties of a third person was sold under execution for the debt, and the other surety and a third person bid it off, it was held that an agreement by the surety who owned the land to take the whole debt upon himself and satisfy the execution in return for an assignment of the bid to him was a promise to pay his own debt and was not affected by the statute of frauds; and in such case the surety who paid could not obtain contribution from his co-surety. Hockaday v. Parker, 53 N.C. 16 (1860).

Where one of two sureties claims to be a supplemental surety by agreement, the burden is upon him to show the agreement. Carr v. Smith, 129 N.C. 232, 39 S.E. 831 (1901).

Surety May Contract for Different Indemnity. — This section does not say that parties may not by contract agree to different rights than are provided by the statute. A surety may contract for a different indemnity than he would be given by law in the absence of such an agreement. Hofler v. Hill, 58 N.C. App. 201, 293 S.E.2d 238 (1982), modified and aff'd, 311 N.C. 325, 317 S.E.2d 670 (1984).

Doctrine of Contribution Applied. Atwater v. Farthing, 118 N.C. 388, 24 S.E. 736

(1896), was a case where A endorsed a note for the maker, and subsequently, but before it was discounted, F endorsed it. The principal became insolvent and left the State. A paid the note. The court held that F was a co-surety and that the doctrine of contribution was applicable for A's benefit. The court said that the decision was governed by Daniel v. McRae, 9 N.C. 590 (1823) and Dawson v. Pettway, 20 N.C. 531 (1839).

II. WHEN SURETY OBTAINS ADVANTAGE OVER CO-SURETIES.

Property Advanced by Principal to One of Sureties. — Where money is advanced by the principal to one of the sureties, to discharge the debt, before the debt is actually discharged, the co-surety may file his bill in equity for an account and for relief, but if the money is paid by the principal after the debt has been discharged by the sureties, to one of two sureties, to reimburse both, then the co-surety has his remedy against the surety receiving the money, by an action at law for money had and received, and therefore cannot support a suit in equity. Allen v. Wood, 38 N.C. 386 (1844).

An indemnity obtained from a principal by one of two co-sureties, after the risk is incurred, inures equally to the benefit of both. Pool v. Williams, 30 N.C. 286 (1848).

Where the principal placed property in the hands of a surety sufficient to satisfy the debt, and then left the State, it was held that a third person, also bound for the debt as surety, having been compelled to pay it, might recover its amount from the person who had received the property without making a previous demand. Parham v. Green, 64 N.C. 436 (1870).

When two persons engage in a common risk as sureties for a third and one of them subsequently takes an indemnity from the principal debtor it inures to the benefit of both. Fagan v. Jacobs, 15 N.C. 263 (1833); Gregory v. Murrell, 37 N.C. 233 (1842); Hall v. Robinson, 30 N.C. 56 (1847).

Separate Indemnity. — In Long v. Barnett, 38 N.C. 631 (1845), the court said: "As one, when he is about to become a surety with others, may stipulate for a separate indemnity from the principal to him, and the co-sureties would be only entitled to a surplus after his reimbursement. Moore v. Moore, 11 N.C. 358, 15 Am. Dec. 523 (1826)." Commissioners of McDowell County v. Nichols, 131 N.C. 501, 42 S.E. 938 (1902).

When Indemnity May Be Reached. — The indemnity taken by one surety can be reached by the other only in two cases, either when it was taken in fraud, or for the benefit of the other. Moore v. Moore, 11 N.C. 358 (1826).

Before and After Severance of Relationship. — While the relation of joint sureties exists, funds received by one of them (except under special circumstances) for the discharge of, or as an indemnity against, his liability, are to be applied for the common benefit of the sureties. But after that connection has been severed by an agreement among the sureties, each of them has his distinct and several claim to prosecute, because of what he has paid for his principal, or for an insolvent joint surety; and the others have no right to demand participation in what his diligence may enable him to procure, while thus prosecuting his several claims. Moore v. Isley, 22 N.C. 372 (1839).

When Advantage Lost by Laches. — Where the surety merely had a deed of trust for certain property, as an indemnity, executed by the principal, and neglected to have it registered, so that the property was sold by other creditors, the co-surety was not entitled, on account of this laches, to make him responsible for the value of the property. Pool v. Williams, 30 N.C. 286 (1848).

Parties. — One of three joint solvent sureties cannot sustain a bill against either of his co-sureties for contribution out of a fund alleged to have been received by that surety for this indemnity from the estate of an insolvent co-surety, without making the other a party. Moore v. Isley, 22 N.C. 372 (1839).

III. CONTRIBUTION ENFORCED.

A. In General.

Accommodation Maker and Endorser. — An accommodation maker who pays a note may recover contribution from an accommodation endorser of the note where they intended to become co-sureties. Gilliam v. Walker, 189 N.C. 189, 126 S.E. 424 (1925).

Co-Surety Paying Bond Debt Deemed Bond Creditor. — In Howell v. Reams, 73 N.C. 391 (1875), it was held that a co-surety who pays the bond debt, for which the other surety is equally bound, shall be deemed a bond creditor in the administration of the estate of the deceased co-surety. Peebles v. Gay, 115 N.C. 38, 20 S.E. 173 (1894).

Liability for Ratable Part of Debt Only. — The section provides that where one or more sureties have been compelled to satisfy the contract of their principal, they may sue their co-sureties for their ratable part of the debt paid for the principal. Peebles v. Gay, 115 N.C. 38, 20 S.E. 173 (1894).

There was a judgment against the principal and two sureties, and an execution levied on the property of one of the sureties. A bought this property from this surety, pending the levy, and afterwards obtained an assignment of the judgment to enable him to have the whole amount satisfied out of the property of the co-surety, and issued an execution for that purpose. It was held that he was restrained from collecting out of the co-surety more than the fair proportion which the latter owed, whether A had actual notice of the lien of the execution or not. Dobson v. Prather, 41 N.C. 31 (1849).

Rights of Surety Paying Entire Debt. — Under the Act of 1807, now this section, one surety may recover at law from another his ratable proportion of the debt of the principal, but the rights of the surety who pays the debt are not enlarged, nor is the co-surety deprived of any just grounds of defense which would before have been available to him in equity. Hall v. Robinson, 30 N.C. 56 (1847).

A surety who, pursuant to his contractual obligation, pays the debt of his principal has a right of action to recover the sum so paid. American Nat'l Fire Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, 260 N.C. 681, 133 S.E.2d 669 (1963).

This section affords a right to one surety, who has paid a debt for which he and another are equally liable, to call on the other for contribution. American Nat'l Fire Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, 260 N.C. 681, 133 S.E.2d 669 (1963).

In Case of Absent Co-Surety. — A co-surety must make contribution, without regard to the share of contribution which the absent co-surety would have had to pay had he been within the reach of the process of North Carolina courts. Jones v. Blanton, 41 N.C. 115 (1848).

Accommodation Endorser Not Liable as Co-Surety. — Where A, as surety, signed the note of B, payable to C, and it was endorsed by C, at the request and for the accommodation of B, there being no contract between A and C whereby they agreed to become co-sureties of B, it was held that A had no right to contribution from C. Smith v. Smith, 16 N.C. 173 (1828).

Liability Need Not Be Fixed by Judgment. — It is not necessary, to entitle a surety to maintain an action for contribution, that the amount of his liability which was paid by him should be fixed by a judgment. Bright v. Lennon, 83 N.C. 184 (1880).

Statute of Limitations. — In the case of a surety's payment and action for contribution against the co-surety, the statute of limitations runs only from the payment. Sherrod v. Woodward, 15 N.C. 360 (1833); Craven v. Freeman, 82 N.C. 361 (1880).

A surety who pays money for his principal may maintain an action against his co-surety for his ratable part, without first making a demand, and the statute of limitations begins to run from the time of the payment of the money. Sherrod v. Woodward, 15 N.C. 360 (1833).

While the right to contribution among co-indemnitors or sureties has common law origin, since 1807 it has been a statutory right under the provisions of this section; accordingly, the applicable statute in this case provided that an action upon a liability created by statute must be brought within three years. Finch v. Barnes, 102 N.C. App. 733, 403 S.E.2d 552, rev'd on other grounds sub nom. State v. Case, 330 N.C. 192, 410 S.E.2d 57 (1991).

Same — Failure to Plead. — A surety when sued is not bound to plead the statute of limitations, but may or may not according to his discretion. Jones v. Blanton, 41 N.C. 115 (1848); Street v. Board of Comm'rs, 70 N.C. 644 (1874); Craven v. Freeman, 82 N.C. 361 (1880). And if so, the withdrawal of such a plea or a waiver of it ought not to affect and does not affect the right to contribution. The design of that plea is to protect against a false and unjust claim or one of whose discharge the evidence is lost, but it is not obligatory in morals or law to use it to defeat a just debt. Bright v. Lennon, 83 N.C. 184 (1880).

A surety to a guardian bond, when sued by the wards, is not bound to avail himself of the statute of limitations, and a failure to do so does not release co-sureties. Jones v. Blanton, 41 N.C. 115 (1848).

B. Actions and Incidents Thereof.

A surety's right of action accrues at the time of payment, not before. American Nat'l Fire Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, 260 N.C. 681, 133 S.E.2d 669 (1963).

Action at Law for Aliquot Parts. — An action at law by surety for contribution lies only against the co-sureties, severally, for the aliquot part due from each. Adams v. Hayes, 120 N.C. 383, 27 S.E. 47 (1897).

Where two sureties on a note to a bank agreed, after the insolvency of their principal, to employ a broker to buy notes of the bank to an amount sufficient to pay the debt, and one of them paid the broker for notes purchased by him, and discharged the debt, it was held that he could maintain an action on the case against his co-surety for contribution. DeRossett v. Bradley, 63 N.C. 17 (1868).

Surety Should Allege Principal's Insolvency. — When one surety brings a bill for contribution against a co-surety, he should at least allege that the principal is insolvent, so that he can have no redress against him; for the equity of a plaintiff, seeking contribution from a co-surety, lies in the insolvency of the principal. Allen v. Wood, 38 N.C. 386 (1844).

A surety has no right to call upon his co-surety in equity for contribution, without showing that he could not obtain satisfaction for the amount he has paid from their common principal. Rainey v. Yarborough, 37 N.C. 249 (1842).

When Insolvency Not Alleged and Improper Relief Asked. — Where a complaint in an action by a surety for contribution joined the principals as parties, and alleged the contract of suretyship, payment by the plaintiff and demand of the co-sureties "for their contributive shares," and asked judgment against all, but did not allege insolvency of the principal except by the averment that plaintiff was compelled to pay the debt, it was held that, though the proper relief was not asked, and the insolvency of the principals was imperfectly alleged, the cause of action would be construed, on demurrer, as equitable rather than legal, in order to confer jurisdiction below. Adams v. Hayes, 120 N.C. 383, 27 S.E. 47 (1897).

Costs Paid by Plaintiff. — In an action by a surety of an insolvent guardian for contribution against other sureties, it is proper to include in the sum adjudged to be raised by contribution costs which were paid by plaintiff in an action against him as a condition for leave to plead the statute of limitations. Bright v. Lennon, 83 N.C. 184 (1880).

When Surety Must Show Actual Money Payment. — Where a surety brings an action of assumpsit, for money paid for the use and at the request of the defendant, against his co-surety, to obtain contribution, it is not sufficient for him to show that he has given his note for the debt due by the principal, and that the same has been accepted by the creditor as a payment and discharge of the debt. To entitle him to recover in his action, he must prove an actual payment in money, or in money's worth, such as bank notes, the note of a third person, or a horse or the like, which is valuable in itself to the surety who parts with it. Brisendine v. Martin, 23 N.C. 286 (1840).

Notice. — In an action for contribution by a surety against four different guardian bonds, with different penalties and different sureties, some solvent and some otherwise, it is not necessary that notice should be given before the action is brought. Bright v. Lennon, 83 N.C. 184 (1880).

Right to Demand Waived. — Where the plaintiff brings suit for contribution against a co-surety on a note, alleging defendant's liability as such, and that defendant had failed or refused reimbursement to the extent of his liability to the plaintiff, who had paid the same, and the defendant answers, denying liability, and there is no averment that demand had been previously made on the defendant, the right to a demand is waived by the answer, and the statement of the cause of action, being only defective, is cured. Shuford v. Cook, 164 N.C. 46, 80 S.E. 61 (1913).

What Co-Sureties Must Be Made Parties. — A surety who has been compelled to pay the debt of his principal must make all his co-sureties parties to a bill for contribution if they are in this State and solvent. But where one is out of the jurisdiction of the court, and others are within it, the plaintiff, by stating the fact in his bill, is at liberty to proceed against the latter alone. Jones v. Blanton, 41 N.C. 115 (1848).

Principal or Executor Party Defendant. — To a bill brought by one surety against his co-surety for contribution, their common principal, or, if he be dead, his executor or administrator should be made a party defendant. Rainey v. Yarborough, 37 N.C. 249 (1842).

Bankruptcy of Principal. — Where it appeared that the principal on a note had secured his discharge in bankruptcy from his obligations, including a note paid at maturity by one of two sureties thereon, and that a few months thereafter the surety who paid the note brought his action for contribution against his co-surety, who had paid nothing, the right of action given by Revisal, G.S. 2844, now this section, would not, without more, be denied upon the ground that it required the insolvency of the principal, in such cases, to be shown at the institution of the action. Shuford v. Cook, 164 N.C. 46, 80 S.E. 61 (1913).

Interest on Collaterals. — In an action against an alleged co-surety to recover money paid in settlement of their joint liability, the amount received by the plaintiff as interest on collaterals deposited should be deducted from the amount paid by plaintiff. Carr v. Smith, 129 N.C. 232, 39 S.E. 831 (1901).

Discharge of Levy by Co-Surety. — A, having a judgment against B, as principal, and C, as surety, C, without the consent of A, has an execution issued and levied upon B's property. A has a right to withdraw the execution and discharge the levy, without making herself liable to C. Forbes v. Smith, 40 N.C. 369 (1848).

Principal's Reputation as Evidence of History of Insolvency. — In an action for contribution by a surety against his co-surety, the plaintiff may offer evidence of their principal's insolvency by showing his general reputation, and this even after direct evidence of the said principal's insolvency. Leak v. Covington, 99 N.C. 559, 6 S.E. 241 (1888).

Record of Judgment in Evidence. — A surety seeking contribution from a co-surety can offer in evidence the record of a judgment against the surety as such, which, in the absence of any suggestion of fraud or collusion in procuring the same, is prima facie proof of the damages suffered by the said surety. Leak v. Covington, 99 N.C. 559, 6 S.E. 241 (1888).

Operation of Parol Evidence Rule. — The rule that parol evidence cannot be admitted to contradict a written contract applies to actions on the contract itself, but not to such as arise collaterally out of it. So where it appeared on the face of a note that certain parties thereto were sureties, in an action for contribution, parol evidence was admissible to show that they were really principals. Williams v. Glenn, 92 N.C. 253 (1885).

§ 26-6. Dissenting surety not liable to surety on stay of execution.

Whenever any judgment shall be obtained against a principal and his surety, and the principal debtor shall desire to stay the execution thereon, but the surety is unwilling that such stay shall be had, the surety may cause his dissent thereto to be entered by the judge or clerk, which shall absolve him from all liability to the surety who may stay the same. And the sheriff or other officer, who may have the collection of the debt, shall make the money out of the property of the principal debtor, and that of the surety for the stay of execution, if he can, before he shall sell the property of the surety before judgment. (1829, c. 6, ss. 1, 2; R.C., c. 110, s. 3; Code, s. 2095; Rev., s. 2845; C.S., s. 3966; 1973, c. 108, s. 16.)

§ 26-7. Surety, indorser, or guarantor may notify creditor to take action.

(a) After any note, bill, bond, or other obligation becomes due and payable, any surety, indorser, or guarantor thereof may give written notice to the holder or owner of the obligation requiring him to use all reasonable diligence to recover against the principal and to proceed to realize upon any securities which he holds for the obligation.

(b) The surety, indorser or guarantor who gives notice to the holder or owner of the obligation as provided by subsection (a) shall forthwith give written notice to all co-sureties, co-indorsers and co-guarantors of the fact that such notice is being given to the holder or owner of the obligation, and such co-sureties, co-indorsers and co-guarantors shall have ten days after receipt of the notice in which themselves to give written notice to the holder or owner of the obligation and to their co-sureties, co-indorsers, and co-guarantors, that they join in or adopt the notice given pursuant to subsection (a). Failure of such surety, indorser or guarantor to give the required notice to co-sureties, co-indorsers or co-guarantors whose names and residences are known to him or can be obtained by due diligence bars such surety indorser or guarantor from any of the benefits of G.S. 26-9.

(c) The holder or owner of the obligation shall on demand disclose to any surety, indorser, or guarantor of the obligation the names and addresses of all other sureties, indorsers and guarantors which appear on the obligation or of which he has knowledge.

(d) Nothing herein contained shall apply to official bonds, or bonds given by any person acting in a fiduciary capacity. (1868-9, c. 232, s. 1; Code, s. 2097; Rev., s. 2846; C.S., s. 3967; 1951, c. 763, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Decisions Under Prior Law.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Scope of Protection. — G.S. 26-7, while it provides guarantors with certain protections, does not protect them from litigation in the event that the creditor fails to exhaust his remedies against the principal; rather, the statutory scheme created by the North Carolina legislature permits a court to discharge the obligation of the guarantor to the extent that the guarantor is prejudiced by the creditor's delay in proceeding against the principal; so the guarantor's argument that the application of G.S. 26-7 required a federal court to abstain from exercising its jurisdiction was without merit. Nat'l Textiles, LLC v. Daugherty, 250 F. Supp. 2d 575, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2135 (M.D.N.C. 2003).

"Principal". — This section does not refer to the principal of the guaranty, but rather, it refers clearly to the principal debtor on the indebtedness or obligations underlying the guaranty. Gillespie v. DeWitt, 53 N.C. App. 252, 280 S.E.2d 736, petition for cert. denied, 304 N.C. 390, 285 S.E.2d 832 (1981).

Finding that language in guarantees served only to identify the guaranty as guaranty of payment and was not intended to waive this section comported with the rules of construction and the case law and would be upheld. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366 S.E.2d 592, aff'd, 323 N.C. 471, 373 S.E.2d 439 (1988).

In the parties' guaranty agreement, defendant promised not only to be liable for the entire balance of the note when it became due and payable upon a default, but also to make payment of any delinquent full installment, including delinquent interest 30 days after he had been given written notice of the default. Thus defendant's written promise to pay each individual installment upon default created an obligation covered by subsection (a) of this section. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366 S.E.2d 592, aff'd, 323 N.C. 471, 373 S.E.2d 439 (1988).

To be relevant on issue of implied waiver, evidence must show that defendant acted in manner which induced plaintiff to believe defendant intended to waive provisions of this section. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366 S.E.2d 592, aff'd, 323 N.C. 471, 373 S.E.2d 439 (1988).

Duty to mitigate arises only in tort actions and breach of contract actions. Defendant's rights and remedies are statutorily mandated by this section through G.S. 26-9. These statutes do not require defendant, as guarantor, to mitigate the damages he suffered because of plaintiff's failure to comply with this section. Therefore, the court declined to expand the scope of the duty to mitigate. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366 S.E.2d 592, aff'd, 323 N.C. 471, 373 S.E.2d 439 (1988).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Where note installment payment became due and payable on 1 January 1982, plaintiff notified defendant of the payment's delinquency on 19 January 1982, and defendant informed plaintiff on 25 January 1982 that he was exercising his rights under this section through G.S. 26-9, the trial court's findings and conclusion, holding that defendant properly invoked subsection (a), were based on sufficient evidence. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366

Under this statute, plaintiff's refusal to move against either farm or the farm's collateral to collect the balance of the note due released defendant, as guarantor, only to the extent he was prejudiced. If the solvency of the farm and the value of its collateral were equivalent to the same values existing when note became due, when defendant gave plaintiff this section's notice, defendant would not have been prejudiced by plaintiff's failure to act and would have continued to be liable for the entire amount of the note he originally guaranteed. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366 S.E.2d 592, aff'd, 323 N.C. 471, 373 S.E.2d 439 (1988).

Applied in Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. v. Johnston, 97 N.C. App. 575, 389 S.E.2d 429 (1990).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided prior to the 1951 amendment, which rewrote this section.

Reasonable Compliance. — The requirements of this section are reasonably complied with when the holder of a negotiable note, after receiving notice in accordance with this section, within thirty days causes the maker to be a party defendant, and it is made to appear that he is a nonresident. Taylor v. Bridger, 185 N.C. 85, 116 S.E. 94 (1923).

Written Notice Required. — To have the benefit of the next preceding section and so that there may be no controversy as to whether the demand is sufficient to have this effect, a notice in writing must be given to the creditor; and its benefits are secured to such only as give the notice if there is more than one surety. First Nat'l Bank v. Homesley, 99 N.C. 531, 6 S.E. 797 (1888).

Protection Secured. — In Moore v. Goodwin, 109 N.C. 218, 13 S.E. 772 (1891), it was held that payment made by a principal upon a bond, before the cause of action thereon is barred against the sureties, arrests the operation of the statute of limitations.

This section affords relief to securities in cases not provided for in the preexisting law, by requiring the creditor, at the instance of the surety who considers himself in danger of loss from his contingent liability, to bring suit, and use reasonable diligence in making his money from the principal, and saving harmless the surety, at the hazard of losing his claim upon the latter, if negligent in doing so. But official bonds or securities held as collateral are excepted from the operation of this section; nor does it reach a case where the requirement of the sureties was verbal only, if in other aspects applicable to such case. First Nat'l Bank v.

Where an action was brought upon a negotiable instrument the defendants on its face being joint makers, the mere fact that the plaintiff had told one of the defendants, without the knowledge of the other, "that he would take up and carry the note until fall," was held to constitute an extension of payment for a "fixed and definite" period, which would operate as a release to such other from liability, but his remedy was by quia timet notice under this section. Roberson-Ruffin Co. v. Spain, 173 N.C. 23, 91 S.E. 361 (1917).

Same — Endorser in Blank of Nonnegotiable Paper. — The rights of an endorser in blank upon a nonnegotiable note are sufficiently protected under the section, which provides that a surety or endorser on any note, bill, bond or written obligation, except those held in trust or as collateral, may notify, in writing, the payee or holder, requiring him to bring suit and use all diligence to collect, and if the payee or holder refuses to bring action within thirty days, the surety or holder giving notice is discharged. Johnson v. Lassiter, 155 N.C. 47, 71 S.E. 23 (1911).

Surety Released After Thirty Days. — The surety can give the holder written notice quia timet to bring suit under this section, and if the holder does not do so within thirty days the surety will be released. Cole v. Fox, 83 N.C. 463 (1880); Coffey v. Reinhardt, 114 N.C. 509, 19 S.E. 370 (1907).

Legal Duty of Principal. — Except when required by written notice under this section, it is not the legal duty of the principal to institute a suit against the debtor, or to pursue such a suit with diligence and to call to his aid all of the remedies provided by the law. Bell v. Howerton, 111 N.C. 69, 15 S.E. 891 (1892).

When Inapplicable. — Where there is an agreement in a negotiable note that the endorsers will continue to be bound notwithstanding an extension of time granted to the maker, the endorsers cannot avail themselves of the provisions of this section, when the maker is a nonresident, and demand for payment after dishonor has been made upon the resident endorsers, defendants in the action, and they have delayed to give the statutory notice until after action has been commenced. Taylor v. Bridger, 185 N.C. 85, 116 S.E. 94 (1923).

§ 26-8. Notice; how given; prima facie evidence thereof.

(a) Any notice authorized or required to be given by G.S. 26-7 shall—

- (1) Be served by the sheriff by delivering a copy thereof to the person entitled to the notice, or
- (2) Be sent by the person giving notice, by registered mail, with return receipt requested, to the last known address of the person being notified.

(b) Upon serving the notice, the sheriff shall return the original thereof, with his return thereon, to the person who caused the notice to be given.

(c) The sheriff's return, when the notice is served by the sheriff, or the return receipt, when the notice is sent by registered mail, shall be prima facie evidence of the giving of the notice. (1868-9, c. 232, s. 3; Code, s. 2099; Rev., s. 2848; C.S., s. 3968; 1951, c. 763, s. 2.)

§ 26-9. Effect of failure of creditor to take action.

(a) If the holder or owner of the obligation refuses or fails, within 30 days from the service or receipt of such notice, to take appropriate action pursuant thereto, the following persons shall be discharged on any such note, bond, bill or other obligation to the extent that they are prejudiced thereby:

- (1) The surety, indorser or guarantor giving such notice, and
- (2) All co-sureties, co-indorsers or co-guarantors joining therein or adopting such notice as provided by G.S. 26-7, and
- (3) All the co-sureties, co-indorsers, or co-guarantors whose names or addresses such holder or owner of the obligation failed to disclose on demand as required by subsection (c) of G.S. 26-7.

(b) The fact that an instrument contains a provision waiving any defense of any surety, indorser or guarantor by reason of the extension of the time for payment does not prevent the operation of this section. Any such notice to the holder or owner of the obligation as is authorized by G.S. 26-7 may be given at or subsequent to the time such obligation is due or at or subsequent to the termination of a period of extension.

(c) The failure of any co-surety, co-indorser or co-guarantor to join in or adopt a notice to the holder or owner of the obligation as authorized by subsection (b) of G.S. 26-7 does not prevent such co-surety, co-indorser or co-guarantor from giving a separate notice as authorized by subsection (a) of G.S. 26-7. (1868-9, c. 232, s. 2; Code, s. 2098; Rev., s. 2847; C.S., s. 3969; 1951, c. 763, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Extension of Time. — Where a creditor enters into a binding contract with his principal debtor for an extension of time, without consent of sureties, this ipso facto discharges them, and also any security given for the debt. Hinton v. Greenleaf, 113 N.C. 6, 18 S.E. 56 (1893); Smith v. Building & Loan Ass'n, 119 N.C. 257, 26 S.E. 40 (1896); Jenkins v. Daniel, 125 N.C. 161, 34 S.E. 239, 74 Am. St. R. 632 (1899); Flemming v. Bordon, 127 N.C. 214, 37 S.E. 219, 53 L.R.A. 316 (1900).

Receipt of interest in advance is prima facie evidence of a binding contract of forbearance. Hollingsworth v. Tomlinson, 108 N.C. 245, 12 S.E. 989 (1891); Scott v. Fisher, 110 N.C. 311, 14 S.E. 799, 28 Am. St. R. 688 (1892); Smith v. Parker, 131 N.C. 470, 42 S.E. 910 (1902).

Where a plaintiff creditor made a parol contract with principal to extend the time of payment of bond beyond the date of the commencement of a suit thereon, without the knowledge or consent of the surety, it was held that such contract had the effect of suspending the plaintiff's right of action and of exonerating the surety from liability. Carrier v. Duncan, 84 N.C. 676 (1881).

An agreement with a principal on a sufficient consideration to forbear to sue for a fixed period, without reserving the right to proceed against the surety, made without his assent, will exonerate him from liability. The exoneration grows out of the agreement to forbear and is not affected by the creditor's breach of it. Forbes v. Sheppard, 98 N.C. 111, 3 S.E. 817 (1887).

Duty to mitigate arises only in tort actions and breach of contract actions. Defendant's rights and remedies are statutorily mandated by G.S. 26-7 through this section. These statutes do not require defendant, as guarantor, to mitigate the damages he suffered because of plaintiff's failure to comply with G.S. 26-7. Therefore, the court declined to expand the scope of the duty to mitigate. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366 S.E.2d 592, aff'd, 323 N.C. 471, 373 S.E.2d 439 (1988).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Where note installation payment became due and payable on 1 January 1982, plaintiff notified defendant of the payment's delinquency on 19 January 1982, and defendant informed plaintiff on 25 January 1982 that he was exercising his rights under G.S. 26-7 through this section, the trial court's findings and conclusion, holding that defendant properly invoked subsection (a), were based on sufficient evidence. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 89 N.C. App. 395, 366 S.E.2d 592, aff'd, 323 N.C. 471, 373 S.E.2d 439 (1988).

Whenever a judgment shall be rendered in any court in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 26-1 and the surety, endorser or other person shown in said judgment to be secondarily liable thereon and having the rights as by this chapter prescribed against the person or persons primarily liable, and the surety, endorser or other person so shown in the judgment to be secondarily liable, shall pay the said judgment or shall be compelled to pay an execution issued thereon and such fact shall appear to the satisfaction of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the said judgment is rendered and docketed, such judgment shall be canceled as to said surety, endorser or other person secondarily liable and shall ceased to be a lien upon his real estate and other property, but such cancellation shall not have the force and effect nor operate as a cancellation and discharge of the judgment as to any other person against whom the said judgment shall be rendered and the person so paying the said judgment shall have all the rights given to a surety who has been compelled to pay a judgment against the principal debtor and co-sureties which are given in this chapter, notwithstanding the cancellation of the said judgment as herein provided for. (1925, c. 38.)

(a) As used in this section, "surety" includes guarantors, accommodation makers, accommodation indorsers, or others who undertake liability on the obligation and for the accommodation of another.

(b) When any surety is sued by the holder of the obligation, the court, on motion of the surety may join the principal as an additional party defendant, provided the principal is found to be or can be made subject to the jurisdiction of the court. Upon such joinder the surety shall have all rights, defenses, counterclaims, and setoffs which would have been available to him if the principal and surety had been originally sued together. (1959, c. 1121.)

CASE NOTES

Defendant guarantors could not avail themselves of the rights and privileges afforded by this section where the principal filed bankruptcy and was subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States District Court for the Western District of North Carolina; the statute expressly states that the principal must be joined as a party and to do so requires the surety to show that the state courts have jurisdiction over the principal. Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. v. Johnston, 97 N.C. App. 575, 389 S.E.2d 429 (1990), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 254, 424 S.E.2d 918 (1993).

*Criminal Offenses.§ 27-54. Issuing receipt for goods not stored.

A warehouseman, or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouseman, who issues or aids in issuing a receipt knowing that the goods for which such receipt is issued have not been actually received by such warehouseman, or are not under his actual control at the time of issuing such receipt, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding five years or by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by both. (1917, c. 37, s. 50; C.S., s. 4090.)

§ 27-55. Issuing receipt with false statement.

A warehouseman, or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouseman, who fraudulently issues or aids in fraudulently issuing a receipt for goods knowing that it contains any false statement, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding one year or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both. (1917, c. 37, s. 51; C.S., s. 4091.)

§ 27-56. Issuing fraudulent duplicates.

A warehouseman, or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouseman, who issues or aids in issuing a duplicate or additional negotiable receipt for goods, knowing that a former negotiable receipt for the same goods or any part of them is outstanding and uncanceled, without plainly placing upon the face thereof the word "duplicate," except in the case of a lost or destroyed receipt after proceedings for delivery as heretofore provided in this chapter, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding five years or by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by both. (1917, c. 37, s. 52; C.S., s. 4092.)

§ 27-57. Failure to state in receipt the interest of warehouseman.

Where there are deposited with or held by a warehouseman goods of which he is owner, either solely or jointly or in common with others, such warehouseman, or any of his officers, agents, or servants who, knowing this ownership, issues or aids in issuing a negotiable receipt for such goods which does not state such ownership, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding one year or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both. (1917, c. 37, s. 53; C.S., s. 4093.)

§ 27-58. Delivering goods without obtaining receipt.

A warehouseman, or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouseman, who delivers goods out of the possession of such warehouseman, knowing that a negotiable receipt the negotiation of which would transfer the right to the possession of such goods is outstanding and uncanceled, without obtaining the possession of such receipt at or before the time of such delivery, except in the cases heretofore provided for in this chapter for the delivery of goods upon a lost receipt and for the sale of goods to satisfy the warehouseman's lien or because of their perishable or hazardous nature, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding one year or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both. (1917, c. 37, s. 54; C.S., s. 4094.)

Cross References. — As to punishment for unlawful disposition of property stored, see G.S. 66-40.

§ 27-59. Fraudulent deposit and negotiation.

Any person who deposits goods to which he has not title, or upon which there is a lien or mortgage, and who takes for such goods a negotiable receipt which he afterwards negotiates for value with intent to deceive and without disclosing his want of title or the existence of the lien or mortgage, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding one year or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both. (1917, c. 37, s. 55; C.S., s. 4095.)

Editor's Note. — This Chapter was enacted by Session Laws 1973, c. 1329, which repealed former Chapter 28, Administration, and redesignated former Chapter 28A, Estates of Missing Persons, as Chapter 28C. Where appropriate, historical citations to sections in repealed Chapter 28 have been added to similar sections in Chapter 28A.

Session Laws 1973, c. 1329, originally made effective July 1, 1975, was amended by Session Laws 1975, c. 19, s. 12, so as to make it effective as to estates of decedents dying on and after that date, and by Session Laws 1975, c. 118, so as to change the date to October 1, 1975.

Many of the cases cited under this Chapter were decided under corresponding sections of former Chapter 28.

ARTICLE 1.

Definitions and Other General Provisions.

§ 28A-1-1. Definitions.

As used in this Chapter, unless the context otherwise requires, the term:

- (1) "Collector" means any person authorized to take possession, custody, or control of the personal property of the decedent for the purpose of executing the duties outlined in G.S. 28A-11-3.
- (1a) "Devisee" means any person entitled to take real or personal property under the provisions of a valid, probated will.
- (2) "Foreign personal representative" means a personal representative appointed in another jurisdiction, including a personal representative appointed in another country.

- (3) "Heir" means any person entitled to take real or personal property upon intestacy under the provisions of Chapter 29 of the General Statutes.
- (4) "Mortgage" includes a deed of trust.
- (5) "Personal representative" includes both an executor and an administrator, but does not include a collector.
- (6) "Service" means delivery of the citation, summons, notice or other civil process to the person to be served by an officer authorized to serve process and, if such service cannot be obtained, then by the mailing of the citation, summons, notice or other civil process by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the last known address of the person to be served. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1981, c. 955, c. 4.)

Jurisdiction for Probate of Wills and Administration of Estates of Decedents.

§ 28A-2-1. Clerk of superior court.

The clerk of superior court of each county, ex officio judge of probate, shall have jurisdiction of the administration, settlement, and distribution of estates of decedents including, but not limited to, the following:

- (1) Probate of wills;
- (2) Granting of letters testamentary and of administration, or other proper letters of authority for the administration of estates. (R.C., c. 46, s. 1; C.C.P., s. 433; 1868-9, c. 113, s. 115; Code, s. 1374; Rev., s. 16; C.S., s. 1; 1931, c. 165; 1943, c. 543; 1951, c. 765; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

History of Clerk's Authority as Judge of Probate. — See In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Jurisdiction Statutory. — The jurisdiction of clerks of court with reference to the administration of estates of deceased persons is altogether statutory, and the clerk's special probate jurisdiction is separate and distinct from his general duties and jurisdiction as clerk. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Jurisdiction Distinct and Separate from General Duties. — Under this section the duties of the probate judge devolve upon the clerk of the superior court, and in such case he has a special jurisdiction which is distinct and separate from his general duties as clerk. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884); Helms v. Austin, 116 N.C. 751, 21 S.E. 556 (1895).

Jurisdiction Exclusive. — Jurisdiction to appoint an administrator of a deceased person, who has died intestate, and to issue letters for the administration of his estate is conferred by this section exclusively upon the clerk of the superior court of the county in which decedent was domiciled at or immediately previous to his death. Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Board of Comm'rs, 195 N.C. 678, 143 S.E. 252 (1928).

This section confers upon the clerk of the superior court exclusive and original jurisdiction of proceedings for the probate of wills. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950); Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

Sections 28A-2-1 through 28A-2-3, as did the former law, vest in the clerk of superior court exclusive jurisdiction of the probate of wills, administration, settlement and distribution of the decedents' estates, the granting of letters, testamentary and of administration, or other letters of authority. Unlike the former law, the jurisdiction of the clerk is no longer limited by such considerations as where the decedent died, left property or was domiciled. Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Except for situations in which the clerk is disqualified to act, G.S. 28A-2-3, the clerk's probate jurisdiction is original and exclusive, and a superior court judge may hear such cases only upon appeal from the clerk. Beck v. Beck, 36 N.C. App. 774, 245 S.E.2d 199 (1978).

In this State, the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction of the administration, settlement and distribution of estates except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act. In re Estate of Snipes, 45 N.C. App. 79, 262 S.E.2d 292 (1980).

Although G.S. 7A-241 provides that exclusive original jurisdiction in probate matters is vested in the "superior court division," this section specifies that the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction in the administration of decedents' estates except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

And Not Affected by Loss or Destruction of Will Before Probate. — The clerk of the superior court has exclusive original jurisdiction to take proofs of wills of persons dying domiciled within his county, and the jurisdiction of the clerk to take proof of a particular will is not affected by its loss or destruction before probate. Anderson v. Atkinson, 234 N.C. 271, 66 S.E.2d 886 (1951). See Anderson v. Atkinson, 235 N.C. 300, 69 S.E.2d 603 (1952); In re Will of Wood, 240 N.C. 134, 81 S.E.2d 127 (1954).

Nor by Later Discovery of Another Document. — Where the clerk of a county had authority, upon proper application and proof, to admit a document to probate as a will, through the exercise of such authority by the admission of the documents to probate, his jurisdiction over the estate becomes exclusive. The subsequent discovery and presentation for probate of another document, executed later, as the last will of the decedent, would not deprive that clerk of the exclusive jurisdiction previously so acquired. In re Estate of Davis, 277 N.C. 134, 176 S.E.2d 825 (1970).

Exclusive Jurisdiction to Appoint Administrators Lies with Clerk of Superior Court. — A superior court judge lacks jurisdiction to appoint an administrator, because the original and exclusive jurisdiction to appoint administrators lies with the clerk of superior court. Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Powers and Jurisdiction of Independent Tribunal. — The powers and jurisdiction exercised by the clerk pursuant to this section are not those of a servant or ministerial officer or exercised as and for the superior court, but those of an independent tribunal of original jurisdiction. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886), followed in In re Styers' Estate, 202 N.C. 715, 164 S.E. 123 (1932).

The clerk acts not as the servant or ministerial officer of the superior court or as and for the court, but as an independent tribunal of original jurisdiction. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

The clerk of the superior court is an independent tribunal of original jurisdiction in the exercise of his probate jurisdiction. In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947).

The authority to probate a will is vested in the clerk of the superior court, and in the exercise of his probate jurisdiction, the clerk is an independent tribunal of original jurisdiction. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Action of Clerk Stands as That of Court.

— The exercise of judicial powers by the “clerk of the court” is the exercise of them by the “court” through the clerk; and the action of the clerk stands as that of the court, if not excepted to and reversed or modified on appeal. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884).

Jurisdiction over Wrongful Death Proceeds.

— Although the trial court found that decedent’s wrongful death proceeds were not assets of the estate, the clerk retained authority to oversee the distribution of the proceeds as a result of its power to order an accounting of estate assets, to remove the defendant as the estate’s personal representative, to impose sanctions against defendant’s based upon alleged misconduct concerning the proceeds, and to order the proceeds submitted to the clerk or public administrator; although wrongful death actions may not yield assets for the estate, a personal representative’s authority to commence and settle these actions is “incident to the collection, preservation, liquidation [and] distribution of a decedent’s estate.” In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Summary Proceedings. — The proceedings of the clerk in respect to the exercise of his probate jurisdiction are summary in their nature. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

The word “jurisdiction” in this section is used in the sense of assigning original authority to the clerk. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev’d on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

And was not intended to change vesting of concurrent jurisdiction in clerk and superior court under § 7A-241. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev’d on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Derivative Jurisdiction of Judge. — In most instances the superior court judge’s probate jurisdiction is, in effect, that of an appellate court, because his jurisdiction is derivative and not concurrent. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Allocation of Jurisdiction Between Clerk and Judge. — Section 7A-241 does not say that concurrent jurisdiction in probate matters is vested in the clerk and the judge of the superior court. It says that probate jurisdiction is vested in the superior court division to be exercised by the superior court and the clerk according to the practice and procedure provided by law. The law, that is, the statutes specifying this practice and procedure, has allocated the jurisdiction between the clerk and the judge. By this section the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction of “the administration, settlement and distribution of estates of decedents” except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act under G.S. 28A-2-3. When the clerk is disqualified to exercise his jurisdiction, the judge has equal authority to perform the clerk’s probate duties and, in that sense, he exercises concurrent jurisdiction of probate matters. In all other instances, however, the judge’s probate jurisdiction is, in effect, that of an appellate court pursuant to G.S. 7A-251. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Section 7A-241 Supports Assignment of Original Authority. — The assignment of original authority of probate matters to the clerk in this section is supported by, and not contravened by, G.S. 7A-241. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev’d on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Section 1-276 [see now § 1-301.1 et seq.] Inapplicable on Appeal to Superior Court.

— Upon appeal from action taken by the clerk of the superior court, in the exercise of his probate jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of the superior court is derivative, and the provisions of G.S. 1-276 [see now G.S. 1-301.1 et seq.] are not applicable. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Procedure on Appeal from Order of Clerk.

— In an appeal from an order of the clerk in a probate matter, the superior court is not required to conduct a de novo hearing. Rather, when a finding of fact by the clerk of court is properly challenged by specific exception, the superior court judge will review those findings, and either affirm, reverse, or modify them. If he deems it advisable, he may submit the issue to a jury, which course he could not follow without hearing evidence. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Action for Breach of Duties, Negligence, and Fraud in Administration of Estate.

— In plaintiff’s action to recover for breach of fiduciary duties, negligence, and fraud arising from administration of her husband’s estate and a trust created under his will, dismissal for want of subject matter jurisdiction on the ground that the claims alleged should be brought initially before the clerk was improper, since the claims were “justiciable matters of a civil nature,” original general jurisdiction over which was vested in the trial division, and though the claims arose from administration of an estate, their resolution was not a part of the administration, settlement, or distribution thereof so as to make jurisdiction properly exercisable initially by the clerk; moreover, inclusion by plaintiff in her complaint of matters of which should have been brought initially before the clerk did not require dismissal for want of subject matter jurisdiction of the entire action. Ingle v. Allen, 53 N.C. App. 627, 281 S.E.2d 406 (1981); Ingle v. Allen, 69 N.C. App. 192, 317 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 757, 321 S.E.2d 135 (1984); Ingle v. Allen, 69 N.C. App. 192, 317 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 757, 321 S.E.2d 135 (1984).

Applied in In re Estate of Hodgins, 133 N.C. App. 650, 516 S.E.2d 174 (1999).

Cited in State ex rel. Pilard v. Berninger, 154 N.C. App. 45, 571 S.E.2d 836, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1407 (2002), cert. denied, 356 N.C. 694, 579 S.E.2d 100 (2003).

II. PROBATE OF WILLS.

Original Jurisdiction Vested in Clerk. — Original jurisdiction of proceedings to probate a will is vested in the clerk. In re Will of Belvin, 261 N.C. 275, 134 S.E.2d 225 (1964).

Probate May Not Be Denied on Ground Involving Construction. — The clerk has no right to exclude any part of a will from probate on any ground which involves the construction of the will where testamentary intent is disclosed. Ravenel v. Shipman, 271 N.C. 193, 155 S.E.2d 484 (1967).

Existence of Will Cannot Be Determined in Ordinary Civil Action. — The issue of whether an unprobated script is, or is not, a man's last will cannot be properly brought before the superior court for determination in an ordinary civil action. Anderson v. Atkinson, 234 N.C. 271, 66 S.E.2d 886 (1951). See Anderson v. Atkinson, 235 N.C. 300, 69 S.E.2d 603 (1952).

Unless Answer Denies Averment That Script Offered Is Decedent's Will. — Where the respondents filed answer denying the petitioner's averment that the script offered for probate was the last will and testament of the decedent, such denial raised an issue of devisavit vel non and necessitated transfer of the cause to the civil issue docket for trial by jury, in accordance with G.S. 1-273 [see now G.S. 1-301.1 et seq.]. This being so, jurisdiction to determine the whole matter in controversy, as well as the issue of devisavit vel non, passed to the superior court in term by authority of G.S. 1-276 [see now G.S. 1-301.1 et seq.]. In re Will of Wood, 240 N.C. 134, 81 S.E.2d 127 (1954).

Dissent to Will. — The right, time and manner, and effect of the filing and recording of a dissent to a will are all matters within the probate jurisdiction of the clerk. In re Estate of Snipes, 45 N.C. App. 79, 262 S.E.2d 292 (1980).

Exclusive original jurisdiction to determine the validity of a dissent by a surviving spouse to a will of a deceased spouse lies with the clerk of superior court. Greene v. Lynch, 51 N.C. App. 665, 277 S.E.2d 454 (1981).

Power to Set Aside Probate. — The clerk of the superior court has the power to set aside a probate of a will in common form in a proper case. This power can be exercised by the clerk where it is clearly made to appear that the adjudication and orders have been improvidently granted or that the court was imposed upon or misled as to the essential and true conditions existent in a given case. However, this power of the clerk does not extend to the setting aside of the probate of a will in common form upon grounds which should be raised by caveat. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Procedure Where Jurisdictional Requirements Lacking. — When jurisdictional requirements for probate are shown to be lacking, the clerk may revoke his order admitting the document to probate. In re Estate of Davis, 277 N.C. 134, 176 S.E.2d 825 (1970).

Motion to Set Aside Probate. — Since the clerk of the superior court of each county has original and exclusive jurisdiction of proceedings to probate a will, he is the tribunal to which a motion is properly made to set aside the probate of a purported will — or part thereof — for any inherent and fatal defect appearing upon the face of the instrument. Ravenel v. Shipman, 271 N.C. 193, 155 S.E.2d 484 (1967).

Clerk May Vacate Order Admitting Will to Probate. — The clerk of the superior court, in his probate jurisdiction, has the power to vacate a previous order admitting a will to probate in common form on motion aptly made, when it is clearly made to appear that the order of probate was improvidently granted, or that the court had been imposed upon and misled as to the essential and true conditions of the case. In re Smith's Will, 218 N.C. 161, 10 S.E.2d 676 (1940).

The burden of proof on a motion to vacate a probate is on the movants to establish sufficient grounds to set aside the probate. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

III. LETTERS TESTAMENTARY AND OF ADMINISTRATION.

Jurisdiction Invoked by Petition. — The jurisdiction of the clerk as probate judge is invoked by petition disclosing the requisite jurisdictional facts filed by some person entitled to qualify as executor or administrator. In re Estate of Pitchi, 231 N.C. 485, 57 S.E.2d 649 (1950).

When Jurisdiction Presumed. — Where it is admitted that the plaintiff was regularly appointed administrator, it will be presumed that the clerk acted within his jurisdiction. Vance v. Southern R.R., 138 N.C. 460, 50 S.E. 860 (1905).

Authority to Appoint Administrator Is Limited. — See In re Scarborough, 261 N.C. 565, 135 S.E.2d 529 (1964).

More Than One Appointment. — When letters of administration are once issued to a person who qualified, the powers of the clerk in that respect are exhausted and the subsequent appointment of another person, before the first appointment is revoked, is void. In re Bowman's Estate, 121 N.C. 373, 28 S.E. 404 (1897).

The burden of proof to show jurisdictional facts rests upon the person applying for letters. Reynolds v. Lloyd Cotton Mills, 177 N.C. 412, 99 S.E. 240 (1919).

May Adjudge Person Dead After Absence for Seven Years. — While the death of intestate must be established as a jurisdictional fact to empower the clerk of the superior court to issue letters of administration, the clerk may, upon evidence that a person has been absent from his domicile for seven years without being heard from by those who would be expected to hear from him, if living, adjudge that such person is dead and appoint an administrator of his estate. Carter v. Lilley, 227 N.C. 435, 42 S.E.2d 610 (1947).

Amendment to Substitute Proper Party Relates Back. — Under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 15(a) and (c) and G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17(a), a lack of letters of administration may be cured, and an objection to want of capacity to sue may be avoided by amendment or by substitution of the proper party at any time before hearing. Later appointments of this nature will relate back and validate the proceedings from the beginning regardless of the statute of limitations. McNamara v. Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp., 328 F. Supp. 1058 (E.D.N.C. 1971).

Where a complaint to recover damages under a state wrongful death act was timely filed by an ancillary administrator appointed by a state court without jurisdiction to do so, the complaint could be amended under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17(a) at a time when a new suit would be barred so as to allege the subsequent effective appointment of the same person as ancillary administrator by a state court having jurisdiction. McNamara v. Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp., 328 F. Supp. 1058 (E.D.N.C. 1971).

Petition for Authority to Operate Estate's Farm. — Although the clerks of the superior courts have no equity jurisdiction, they are given probate jurisdiction by this section, and in the exercise of their probate jurisdiction they may hear and rule on a petition of an executor for authorization to operate the estate's farms to preserve the property pending the determination of caveat proceedings. C.L. Hardy & Co. v. Turnage, 204 N.C. 538, 168 S.E. 823 (1933).

Removal of Executors and Administrators. — The clerks of superior courts have jurisdiction of proceedings for the removal of executors and administrators. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

Direct Attack on Validity of Appointment. — The validity of the appointment of an administrator may not be collaterally attacked in an action against such administrator, but may be directly attacked by any person in interest, including an administratrix of the decedent appointed in another state, by motion before the clerk of the superior court who made the appointment to vacate and set aside the letters of administration theretofore issued by such clerk. King v. Snyder, 269 N.C. 148, 152 S.E.2d 92 (1967).

Collateral Attack. — When the clerk under this section has general jurisdiction of the subject matter of the inquiry, a decree appointing an executor or administrator may not be collaterally attacked. Fann v. North Carolina R.R., 155 N.C. 136, 71 S.E. 81 (1911); Batchelor v. Overton, 158 N.C. 395, 74 S.E. 20 (1912); Tyer v. J.B. Blades Lumber Co., 188 N.C. 268, 124 S.E. 305 (1924). See Vance v. Southern R.R., 138 N.C. 460, 50 S.E. 860 (1905).

Where jurisdictional facts are lacking, a decree appointing an executor or administrator can be collaterally attacked. Reynolds v. Lloyd Cotton Mills, 177 N.C. 412, 99 S.E. 240 (1919). See Vance v. Southern R.R., 138 N.C. 460, 50 S.E. 860 (1905).

The facts very generally recognized as jurisdictional are stated in this section, and where, on application for letters of administration, these facts appear of record, the question of the qualification of the appointee cannot be collaterally assailed. Wharton v. New York Life Ins. Co., 178 N.C. 135, 100 S.E. 266 (1919).

The only exception to the rule that the question of the qualification of the appointee cannot be collaterally assailed where facts very generally recognized as jurisdictional appear of record is that it may be shown collaterally that the person for whom an administrator has been appointed is not in fact dead, but is still living. Hines v. Foundation Co., 196 N.C. 322, 145 S.E. 612 (1928).

Where the person for whom an administrator has been appointed is not in fact dead, but is still living, the order making the appointment is void, and it may be attacked collaterally. Holmes v. Wharton, 194 N.C. 470, 140 S.E. 93 (1927), citing Clark v. Carolina Homes, 189 N.C. 703, 128 S.E. 20 (1925).

A clerk has jurisdiction to appoint an administrator where the affidavit of the applicant presumes the death of the decedent from his absence of seven years and the lack of communication from him. The order and appointment can only be avoided by showing the person not to be in fact dead. Chamblee v. Security Nat'l

Bank, 211 N.C. 48, 188 S.E. 632 (1936).

Administrator Defending Wrongful Death Action Estopped to Deny Validity of Appointment. — An administrator appointed in this State who undertakes to defend an action for wrongful death by moving to set aside a default judgment and filing answer is thereafter estopped to deny the validity of his own appointment, and the court correctly denies his motion to dismiss the action for lack of jurisdiction of his person or the estate. The validity of his appointment is not before the court, and it is error for the court to find facts in regard thereto. King v. Snyder, 269 N.C. 148, 152 S.E.2d 92 (1967).

§ 28A-2-2. Assistant clerk of superior court.

An assistant clerk of superior court shall have jurisdiction as provided by G.S. 7A-102. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-2-3. Jurisdiction where clerk interested.

Whenever the clerk of superior court is a subscribing witness to a will offered for probate in his county or has an interest, direct or indirect, in an estate or trust within his jurisdiction, jurisdiction with respect thereto shall be vested in the senior resident superior court judge of his district, and shall extend to all things which the clerk of superior court might have done in the administration of such estate. (R.C., c. 46, s. 1; C.C.P., s. 433; 1868-9, c. 113, s. 115; Code, s. 1374; Rev., s. 16; C.S., s. 1; 1931, c. 165; 1943, c. 543; 1951, c. 765; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 1.)

Venue for Probate of Wills and Administration of Estates of Decedents.

§ 28A-3-1. Proper county.

The venue for the probate of a will and for all proceedings relating to the administration of the estate of a decedent shall be:

- (1) In the county in this State where the decedent had his domicile at the time of his death; or
- (2) If the decedent had no domicile in this State at the time of death, then in any county wherein the decedent left any property or assets or into which any property or assets belonging to this estate may have come. If there be more than one such county, that county in which proceedings are first commenced shall have priority of venue; or
- (3) If the decedent was a nonresident motorist who died in the State, then in any county in the State. (R.C., c. 46, s. 1; C.C.P., s. 433; 1868-9, c. 113, s. 115; Code, s. 1374; Rev., s. 16; C.S., s. 1; 1931, c. 165; 1943, c. 543; 1951, c. 765; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Domicile in State.
- III. No Domicile in State.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Citizenship of Beneficiaries Controls in Diversity Action. — In determining the presence of diversity of citizenship when state law requires that an action be prosecuted in the name of a resident administrator, the citizenship of the beneficiaries, rather than that of the administrator, is relevant. Miller v. Perry, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Venue of a proceeding in the nature of a creditor's supplemental proceeding under G.S. 1-307, in which in order to issue an execution on defendant's interest under his father's will, the trial judge was required to find only that defendant possessed some interest under his father's will, was governed by G.S. 1-307, and not by this section. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. C.P. Robinson Co., 319 N.C. 63, 352 S.E.2d 684 (1987).

Applied in Locklear v. Nixon, 129 N.C. App. 105, 497 S.E.2d 310 (1998).

Cited in In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

II. DOMICILE IN STATE.

The will of a resident of this State should be probated in the county of his domicile. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Grant in Any Other County Void. — Where decedent had a residence in this State, a grant in any county other than that in which he resided is absolutely void. Johnson v. Corpenning, 39 N.C. 216 (1845).

Domicile at death in county of clerk who undertakes probate is essential to jurisdiction. In re Estate of Davis, 277 N.C. 134, 176 S.E.2d 825 (1970).

Domicile. — See Reynolds v. Lloyd Cotton Mills, 177 N.C. 412, 99 S.E. 240 (1919), containing an excellent discussion of "domicile" as distinguished from "residence," "inhabiting," etc. See also In re Estate of Cullinan, 259 N.C. 626, 131 S.E.2d 316 (1963).

Change of County Lines. — The county referred to in this section is the county at the time of the death of the decedent, and not the one subsequently formed by a change of county lines. Hannon v. Southern Power Co., 173 N.C. 520, 92 S.E. 353 (1917).

Collateral Attack on Appointment. — An order appointing an administrator cannot be collaterally attacked on grounds that deceased was not domiciled in the county of the clerk.

Holmes v. Wharton, 194 N.C. 470, 140 S.E. 93 (1927).

III. NO DOMICILE IN STATE.

Assets Sufficient to Convey Jurisdiction. — If the assets are bona notabilia (chattels or goods of sufficient value to be accounted for), they are sufficient to convey jurisdiction to the clerk. Hyman v. Gaskins, 27 N.C. 267 (1844).

Will of Nonresident May Be Probated Where Property Situated. — When the will of a nonresident dying outside the State disposes of property in the State, the will may be offered for original probate before the clerk of the county in which the property is situated. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

The term "asset" includes intangibles. In re Edmundson, 273 N.C. 92, 159 S.E.2d 509 (1968).

The time and manner of bringing the assets into the jurisdiction are immaterial. Shields v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 119 N.C. 380, 25 S.E. 951 (1896).

Automobile Liability Insurance Policy Is Asset. — A policy of automobile liability insurance issued in the name of the deceased by an insurer qualified to do business in this State or otherwise subject to service of process is an asset so as to support the appointment of an ancillary administrator. In re Edmundson, 273 N.C. 92, 159 S.E.2d 509 (1968).

Cause of Action for Death by Wrongful Act as Sufficient Asset. — Where a nonresident is killed in this State, the cause of action for death by wrongful act is sufficient under this section as a basis for the grant of letters in the county where the injury and death occurred. Vance v. Southern R.R., 138 N.C. 460, 50 S.E. 860 (1905); Fann v. North Carolina R.R., 155 N.C. 136, 71 S.E. 81 (1911).

Where death occurred as a result of a tort committed in this State, the cause of action given by the statutes of this State was an asset within the meaning of this section. In re Scarborough, 261 N.C. 565, 135 S.E.2d 529 (1964).

Appointment of Administrator Authorized Although Only Asset Is Wrongful Death Claim. — See In re Scarborough, 261 N.C. 565, 135 S.E.2d 529 (1964).

Appointment of Ancillary Administrator. — The fact that a personal representative can obtain a judgment in personam on a cause of action for wrongful death which arose in another state is sufficient to authorize the clerk of the superior court to appoint an ancillary administrator. In re Scarborough, 261 N.C. 565, 135 S.E.2d 529 (1964).

§ 28A-3-2. Proceedings to determine venue.

(a) If proceedings are commenced in more than one county or if upon commencement of a proceeding a question arises as to the proper county of venue, or if for any other reason a delay arises in determining venue, then the matter shall be referred by the clerk of superior court before whom the question arises for a hearing before and determination by the senior resident superior court judge or any judge assigned to hold the superior courts of the district which includes the county where the proceedings were first commenced. The judge shall determine which is the proper county for administration of the estate and stay proceedings in all other counties. He shall make such orders as are necessary to transfer the entire proceedings to the proper county. The clerk of superior court of each county in which proceedings are stayed shall retain a true copy of the entire file and transmit the original to the clerk of superior court of such county as the judge directs.

(b) A proceeding shall be deemed commenced by the offering of a will for probate or by applying for letters of administration as provided by G.S. 28A-6-1 through 28A-6-5 or by applying for letters of collection as provided by G.S. 28A-11-1 through 28A-11-4 and the proceeding first legally commenced shall extend to all of the property or assets of the decedent in this State. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 19, s. 7.)

§ 28A-3-3. Procedure after determination of improper appointment.

Where a person has been improperly appointed, and a different person in another county is determined under G.S. 28A-3-2(a) to be the properly appointed personal representative, such improperly appointed personal representative shall surrender to the properly appointed personal representative all assets of the estate under his control. In addition such improperly appointed personal representative shall file an accounting with the clerk of superior court in the proper county according to the form prescribed for collectors by G.S. 28A-11-4. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-3-4. Liability of personal representative appointed in improper county.

When a personal representative has been appointed in an improper county, and a different person in another county is determined under G.S. 28A-3-2(a) to be the properly appointed personal representative, such improperly appointed personal representative shall not thereby incur personal liability for administrative acts performed prior to the transfer except as provided in G.S. 28A-13-10. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-3-5. Waiver of venue.

If questions as to priority of venue are not raised within three months after the issuance of letters testamentary or letters of administration to the personal representative, the validity of the proceeding shall not be affected by any error in venue. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Venue Challenge Precluded. — Caveators who failed to raise objections until over four months after the issuance of testamentary letters were precluded from challenging venue under this section. In re Estate of Hodgin, 133 N.C. App. 650, 516 S.E.2d 174 (1999).

ARTICLE 4.

*Qualification and Disqualification for Letters Testamentary and Letters of Administration.§ 28A-4-1. Order of persons qualified to serve.

(a) Letters Testamentary. — Letters testamentary shall be granted to the executor or executors named or designated in the will, or if no such person qualifies, to any substitute or successor executor named or designated in the will. If no person so named or designated qualifies, letters testamentary shall be granted to some other person nominated by a person upon whom the will expressly confers the authority to make such nomination. If none of the foregoing persons qualifies or if the clerk of superior court upon hearing finds that none of the foregoing persons is qualified in accordance with G.S. 28A-4-2, the clerk shall grant letters of administration in accordance with subsection (b).

(b) Letters of Administration. — Letters of administration shall be granted to persons who are qualified to serve, in the following order, unless the clerk of superior court in his discretion determines that the best interests of the estate otherwise require:

- (1) The surviving spouse of the decedent;
- (2) Any devisee of the testator;
- (3) Any heir of the decedent;
- (3a) Any next of kin, with a person who is of a closer kinship as computed pursuant to G.S. 104A-1 having priority;
- (4) Any creditor to whom the decedent became obligated prior to his death;
- (5) Any person of good character residing in the county who applies therefor; and
- (6) Any other person of good character not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2.

When applicants are equally entitled, letters shall be granted to the applicant who, in the judgment of the clerk of superior court, is most likely to administer the estate advantageously, or they may be granted to any two or more of such applicants. (R.C., c. 46, ss. 2, 3; C.C.P., s. 456; 1968-9, c. 113, s. 115; Code, s. 1376; Rev., s. 3; C.S., s. 6; 1949, c. 22; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1987, c. 357.)

the event the executor fails to apply to have the will proved, see G.S. 31-13.

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Letters Testamentary.
- III. Letters of Administration.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Applied in In re Estate of Bryant, 116 N.C. App. 329, 447 S.E.2d 468 (1994).

S.E.2d 581 (1980); Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981).

II. LETTERS TESTAMENTARY.

No conflict of interest is created by mere fact that executor also occupies status of creditor. Tyson v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 53 N.C. App. 189, 280 S.E.2d 478 (1981), modified, 305 N.C. 136, 286 S.E.2d 561 (1982).

III. LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION.

Right to administer on estate of an intestate is entirely statutory. In re Edwards' Estate, 234 N.C. 202, 66 S.E.2d 675 (1951).

Selection Among Persons of Equal Degree. — Where there are several persons entitled in equal degree to administer, the clerk may select the one who, in his discretion, is most fit. Garrison v. Cox, 95 N.C. 353 (1886).

Next of Kin. — As to right to administer of next of kin, under language of former statute, see Carthey v. Webb, 6 N.C. 268 (1813); Moore v. Moore, 12 N.C. 352 (1827); Stoker v. Kendall, 44 N.C. 242 (1853); Atkins v. McCormick, 49 N.C. 274 (1857); Little v. Berry, 94 N.C. 433 (1886); In re Saville, 156 N.C. 172, 72 S.E. 220 (1911); In re Edwards' Estate, 234 N.C. 202, 66 S.E.2d 675 (1951).

For purposes of this section, "next of kin" refers to the class of blood relatives of the decedent; thus, the court erred in determining that the term was synonymous with "heirs," as used in G.S. 41-6.1. In re Estate of Bryant, 116 N.C. App. 329, 447 S.E.2d 468 (1994).

Effect of Appointment Out of Order. — The appointment as administrator of a person other than the one designated by this section is not void, though the proper person has not renounced; but it may be set aside in favor of such proper person provided he has not waived his right to administer. Garrison v. Cox, 95 N.C. 353 (1886).

Correction of Error in Appointment. — Petitioner, an heir at law and beneficiary under will, had a higher preference of appointment than respondent, who was neither an heir nor a beneficiary, and as the respondent should not have been appointed administrator C.T.A. without notice to the petitioner, it was not error for the clerk to correct this error by removing the respondent as administrator C.T.A. The fact that petitioner may not have been qualified to serve as administrator C.T.A. under G.S. 28A-4-2(4) because she was a nonresident of this State who had not appointed a process agent was irrelevant. In re Estate of Cole, 80 N.C. App. 720, 343 S.E.2d 263 (1986).

Estoppel Against Widow. — Though the widow has a prior right to administration over a brother of the decedent, where it appears that at the time the letters were duly granted to the brother she had shown no disposition to set up her right before the clerk, the appointment of the brother will stand. Tyer v. J.B. Blades Lumber Co., 188 N.C. 268, 124 S.E. 305 (1924).

Assignee After Death Not a Creditor. — An assignment of debts of a person after his death does not make the assignee such a creditor as to entitle him to administer the estate of the deceased. Pearce v. Castrix, 53 N.C. 71 (1860).

Where a husband and wife enter into a separation agreement and thereafter become reconciled and renew their marital relations, the agreement is rescinded for every purpose, including the wife's right to share in husband's estate and her right to administer the estate, insofar as it remains executory. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Possessor of Insurance Policy. — The possession of a policy of life insurance authorizes the possessor to administer on the estate of the assured, a nonresident. Page v. Life Ins. Co., 131 N.C. 115, 42 S.E. 543 (1902). See Shields v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 119 N.C. 380, 25 S.E. 951 (1896).

Any or all of the marital rights under this section may be surrendered by a properly drawn separation agreement complying with the requirements of former G.S. 52-6. Lane v. Scarborough, 19 N.C. App. 32, 198 S.E.2d 45, rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

De Novo Hearing on Appeal. — Upon appeal from the order of the clerk of superior court the petitioners were entitled to a de novo hearing by the judge of superior court on both the right of respondent to qualify as administratrix and her right to share in the estate of her deceased husband. And the judge of superior court in the exercise of his inherent powers had the right to submit to the jury the one issue that would resolve both the right to qualify as administratrix, a probate matter, and the right to share in the decedent's estate, which is not a probate matter. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

§ 28A-4-2. Persons disqualified to serve as personal representative.

No person is qualified to serve as a personal representative who:

- (1) Is under 18 years of age;
- (2) Has been adjudged incompetent in a formal proceeding and remains under such disability;

- (3) Is a convicted felon, under the laws either of the United States or of any state or territory of the United States, or of the District of Columbia and whose citizenship has not been restored;
- (4) Is a nonresident of this State who has not appointed a resident agent to accept service of process in all actions or proceedings with respect to the estate, and caused such appointment to be filed with the court; or who is a resident of this State who has, subsequent to appointment as a personal representative, moved from this State without appointing such process agent;
- (5) Is a corporation not authorized to act as a personal representative in this State;
- (6) Repealed by Session Laws 1999-133, s. 1, effective January 1, 2000.
- (7) Has lost his rights as provided by Chapter 31A;
- (8) Is illiterate;
- (9) Is a person whom the clerk of superior court finds otherwise unsuitable; or
- (10) Is a person who has renounced either expressly or by implication as provided in G.S. 28A-5-1 and 28A-5-2. (C.C.P., s. 457; Code, ss. 1377, 1378, 2162; Rev., s. 5; C.S., s. 8; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1999-133, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Persons Under 18.
- III. Incompetents.
- IV. Nonresidents.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Testator has the right to name the person who shall administer his estate after his death, provided his designate is not disqualified by law. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Right of Person Named as Executor to Administer Estate. — The person testator names as executor has the right to administer the estate. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

When Right Ceases. — He can be deprived of that right only by his refusal or neglect to probate the will or to take out letters, or by his inability or unsuitableness to execute the trust. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Statutory specifications of disqualifications for service as a personal representative cannot be superseded by the broad general policy of the law which gives effect to the desires of a testator and sees that his intentions are carried out so far as they can be ascertained. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Personal Interests Antagonistic to Estate as Grounds for Disqualification. — When it appears that the personal interests of the prospective executor are so antagonistic to the interests of the estate and those entitled to its distribution that the same person cannot fairly represent both, the testator's nominee is unsuitable and disqualified as a matter of law. This is especially true where the conflict is one which the testator did not know or foresee. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Right to Nominate Depends upon the Right to Administer. — See Boynton v. Heartt, 158 N.C. 488, 74 S.E. 470 (1912).

Public administrator could not be removed at the instance of nonresidents who had no right of appointment as administrator in consequence of not having the right to administer upon the estate in this State. Boynton v. Heartt, 158 N.C. 488, 74 S.E. 470 (1912).

Correction of Error in Appointment. — Petitioner, an heir at law and beneficiary under will, had a higher preference of appointment than respondent, who was neither an heir nor a beneficiary, and as the respondent should not have been appointed administrator C.T.A. without notice to the petitioner, it was not error for the clerk to correct this error by removing the respondent as administrator C.T.A. The fact that petitioner may not have been qualified to serve as administrator C.T.A. under subdivision (4) of this section because she was a nonresident of this State who had not appointed a process agent was irrelevant. In re Estate of Cole, 80 N.C. App. 720, 343 S.E.2d 263 (1986).

Appointment of Replacement Representative. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion in appointing the public administrator, rather than the testamentary alternative, to finalize the estate after removing the personal representative for misconduct. In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Collateral Attack for Disregard of Statutory Provisions. — When, in disregard of provisions prohibiting the issuance of letters to persons adjudged incompetent, letters were issued to a foreign executor, this was a mere irregularity and could not be collaterally attacked in an action by the executor. Batchelor v. Overton, 158 N.C. 395, 74 S.E. 20 (1912).

Applied in Storey v. Hailey, 114 N.C. App. 173, 441 S.E.2d 602 (1994); In re Estate of Montgomery, 137 N.C. App. 564, 528 S.E.2d 618, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 422 (2000).

II. PERSONS UNDER 18.

A widow under 21 [now 18] is not eligible to appointment as administratrix. The court may, however, appoint an administrator during her minority and, on arriving at full age, grant her the administration; or it may give the office to her appointee. Wallis v. Wallis, 60 N.C. 78 (1863).

III. INCOMPETENTS.

Finding of Incompetency Based on Undisclosed and Unrecorded Information. — Where the record shows that the conclusion of the clerk as to the alleged incompetency of the petitioner rests upon undisclosed and unrecorded information obtained by the clerk from third persons outside of court in the absence of the petitioner and his counsel, who were not apprised of the identity of such third persons or accorded any opportunity to cross-examine or confute them, the refusal of the clerk to issue letters of administration to the petitioner is error. In re Edwards' Estate, 234 N.C. 202, 66 S.E.2d 675 (1951).

Illiteracy as Incompetency under Former Statute. — See Stephenson v. Stephenson, 49 N.C. 472 (1857).

IV. NONRESIDENTS.

Noncitizen Entitled to Federal Forum. — Diversity jurisdiction exists for the protection of the noncitizen who is obliged to sue or to be sued in the state of his adversary. It is for that reason that state statutes or decisions that require a noncitizen to appoint an in-state representative should not have the effect of depriving the noncitizen of the federal forum that Congress has provided him. Miller v. Perry, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Citizenship of Beneficiaries Controls in Diversity Action. — In determining the presence of diversity of citizenship when state law requires that an action be prosecuted in the name of a resident administrator, the citizenship of the beneficiaries, rather than that of the administrator, is relevant. Miller v. Perry, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

ARTICLE 5.

Renunciation by Personal Representative.

§ 28A-5-1. Renunciation by executor.

(a) Express Renunciation by Executor. — Any person named or designated as executor in a duly probated will may renounce the office by filing with the clerk of superior court a writing signed by such person, and acknowledged or proved to the satisfaction of the clerk.

(b) Implied Renunciation by Executor. — If any person named or designated as executor fails to qualify or to renounce within 30 days after the will had been admitted to probate, the clerk of superior court, on application of any other person named or designated as executor in the will or of any interested person, shall, or on his own motion may, issue a citation to the person who has failed to qualify or renounce to show cause why he should not be deemed to have renounced. If, upon service of the citation, he does not qualify or renounce or show cause within the time fixed in the citation, such period to be not less than 10 nor more than 30 days, an order must be entered by the clerk of superior court adjudging that he has renounced. If cause be shown, the clerk of superior court may grant to such person a reasonable extension of time within which to qualify or renounce.

(c) Procedure upon Renunciation. — Upon renunciation by a person named or designated as executor, letters shall be issued to some other person as provided in G.S. 28A-4-1. (C.C.P., ss. 450, 451; Code, ss. 2163, 2164; Rev., ss. 10, 13; C.S., ss. 13, 16; 1931, c. 183; 1953, c. 78, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Common-Law Rule. — See McIntyre v. Proctor, 145 N.C. 288, 59 S.E. 39 (1907). See Washington v. Blunt, 43 N.C. 253 (1852).

Executor may, by permission of the superior court, renounce all right to the executorship and withdraw from a suit. Sawyer v. Dozier, 27 N.C. 97 (1844).

Time of Renunciation. — A court of probate may accept a renunciation at any time before the executor intermeddled with the effects of his testator, even after he has proved the will. The same rule applies to an executor of an executor under a prior will. Mitchell v. Adams, 23 N.C. 298 (1840).

When Leave of Court Required. — After probate an executor cannot renounce at his own pleasure, and must do so by leave of the court. Mitchell v. Adams, 23 N.C. 298 (1840).

Letters Revoked for Cause Only. — The clerk should revoke letters testamentary, where the executor has entered upon performance of his duties, only by reason of some unfitness or unfaithfulness on the part of trustee, and never simply because the parties desire it. McIntyre v. Proctor, 145 N.C. 288, 59 S.E. 39 (1907).

Renunciation Must Appear of Record. — Renunciation of the executor must appear of record to enable the court to appoint an administrator with the will annexed. Springs v. Irwin, 28 N.C. 27 (1845).

Renunciation by Some of Several. — Where there are several persons of the same class entitled to administer, renunciation by some of them does not affect the rights of those not renouncing to administer. In re Jones' Estate, 177 N.C. 337, 98 S.E. 827 (1919).

Retraction of Renunciation. — A renouncing executor may retract his renunciation at any time before administration is granted, and then administer. Any intermeddling with the estate before qualifying is evidence of such retraction. Davis v. Inscoc, 84 N.C. 396 (1881).

Right of Reinstatement. — There are decisions that an executor who has renounced can, under some circumstances, come in and qualify. See Davis v. Inscoc, 84 N.C. 396 (1881); Wood v. Sparks, 18 N.C. 389 (1835). But there is no case in which he has renounced with the formalities of this statute and afterwards has qualified, certainly not after the lapse of 20 years. Ryder v. Oates, 173 N.C. 569, 92 S.E. 508 (1917).

Powers of Administrator c.t.a. — After renunciation by the executor, the administrator with the will annexed is competent to exercise the executor's powers under the will. Saunders v. Saunders, 108 N.C. 327, 12 S.E. 909 (1891).

Cited in In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

§ 28A-5-2. Renunciation of right to administer.

(a) Express Renunciation. — Any person entitled to apply for letters of administration may renounce the office by filing with the clerk of superior court a writing signed by such person, and acknowledged or proved to the satisfaction of the clerk.

(b) Implied Renunciation. —

- (1) If any person entitled to apply for letters of administration fails to apply therefor within 30 days from the date of death of the intestate, the clerk of superior court, on application of any interested person, shall, or on his own motion may, issue a citation to the person entitled to apply for letters of administration requiring him to show cause why he should not be deemed to have renounced. If, upon service of the citation, he does not apply for letters of administration and tender the required bond or show cause within the time shown in the citation, such period to be not less than 10 nor more than 30 days, an order must be entered by the clerk of the superior court adjudging that he has renounced; and the clerk of superior court shall issue letters to some other person as provided in G.S. 28A-4-1. If cause be shown the clerk of superior court may grant to such person a reasonable extension of time within which to apply and qualify, or renounce.

- (2) If no person entitled to administer applies for letters of administration within 90 days after the date of death of an intestate, then the clerk of superior court may, in his discretion, enter an order declaring all prior rights to apply for letters of administration to be renounced, and issue letters to some suitable person as provided in G.S. 28A-4-1.

(c) Nomination by Person Renouncing. — Any person who expressly renounces his prior right to apply for letters of administration may at the same time nominate in writing some other person not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2 to be named as personal representative, and such designated person shall be entitled to the same priority of right to apply for letters of administration as the person making the nomination. (R.C., c. 46, ss. 2, 3; C.C.P., ss. 456, 460(a); 1868-9, c. 113, s. 115; c. 203; Code, ss. 1376, 1380; Rev., ss. 3, 12; C.S., ss. 6, 15; 1949, c. 22; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to when a public administrator shall apply for letters, see G.S. 28A-12-4.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Applicable to Intestacy Only. — The provisions of this section contemplate cases of intestacy. Hence in cases of testacy where no executor is appointed in the will, the rights of the parties to administer are governed by G.S. 28A-4-1 without reference to the six months' (now 90-day) limitation contained in this section. In re Jones' Estate, 177 N.C. 337, 98 S.E. 827 (1919).

Right to Administer Not Absolute Nor Exclusive. — See Stoker v. Kendall, 44 N.C. 242 (1853).

Means of Quickening Procedure. — The true intent and meaning of this section is that the persons primarily entitled to administration may have six months (now 90 days) after the death of the intestate to assert their rights and comply with the law; and a party wishing to quicken their diligence within that time must do so by citation — he may not, by obtaining letters within six months (now 90 days), deprive the party primarily entitled to administration should such party apply for letters before the expiration of the six months' (now 90-day) period. Williams v. Neville, 108 N.C. 559, 13 S.E. 240 (1891).

Persons primarily entitled to administration shall assert their right and comply with the law within six months (now 90 days) after the death of the intestate, and a party interested, wishing to quicken their diligence within that time, must do so by citation as prescribed by statute, or if a person, not preferred, applied for administration within six months (now 90 days), he must produce the written renunciation of the person or persons having prior right. Royals v. Baggett, 257 N.C. 681, 127 S.E.2d 282 (1962).

Unreasonable Delay. — No one who has precedence in a claim for letters loses such rights by delay merely, but by unreasonable delay, which is a matter of law. Hughes v. Pipkin, 61 N.C. 4 (1866).

Any or all of the marital rights under this section may be surrendered by a properly drawn separation agreement complying with the requirements of former G.S. 52-6. Lane v. Scarborough, 19 N.C. App. 32, 198 S.E.2d 45, rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Renunciation Presumed After 90 Days. — After the expiration of six months (now 90 days) from the death of the decedent, those entitled to prior rights having failed to apply, all rights of preference may be treated as renounced, and a suitable person to administer upon the estate may be appointed. Hill v. Alspaugh, 72 N.C. 402 (1875).

Appointment Within 90 Days. — If the person entitled to apply for letters of administration, in answer to citation, names his appointee, and such person, after appointment, fails to qualify, then, though six months (now 90 days) have to expired, the clerk is authorized to appoint another. Williams v. Neville, 108 N.C. 559, 13 S.E. 240 (1891).

Effect of Appointment. — Where the clerk has appointed an administrator under this section, a debtor of the estate cannot maintain the position that the appointment of a public administrator was necessary to receive payment of the debt. Brooks v. E.H. Clement Co., 201 N.C. 768, 161 S.E. 403 (1931).

Appointment Not Revoked After 90

Days. — If the parties who have precedence to administer fail to apply within six months (now 90 days) from death of the deceased, an appointment by the clerk of a proper person after that period will not be revoked. Withrow v. DePriest, 119 N.C. 541, 26 S.E. 110 (1896).

Failure of Public Administrator to Apply Within Six Months (now 90 Days). — Though it is the duty of the public administrator to apply after six months (now 90 days), if, before his appointment at any time, even after six months (now 90 days), persons prior in rights to administer apply, they are entitled to appointment. In re Bailey's Will, 141 N.C. 193, 53 S.E. 844 (1906).

Cited in Ragan v. Hill, 337 N.C. 667, 447 S.E.2d 371 (1994).

ARTICLE 6.

Appointment of Personal Representative.

§ 28A-6-1. Application for letters; grant of letters.

(a) The application for letters of administration or letters testamentary shall be in the form of an affidavit sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, signed by the applicant or his attorney, which may be supported by other proof under oath in writing, all of which shall be recorded and filed by the clerk of superior court, and shall allege the following facts:

- (1) The name, and to the extent known, the domicile and the date and place of death of the decedent;
- (2) The legal residence and mailing address of the applicant;
- (3) The names, ages and mailing addresses of the decedent's heirs and devisees, including the names and mailing addresses of the guardians of those having court-appointed guardians, so far as all of these facts are known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained;
- (4) That the applicant is the person entitled to apply for letters, or that he applies after persons having prior right to apply are shown to have renounced under Article 5 of this Chapter, or that he applies subject to the provisions of G.S. 28A-6-2(1), and that he is not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2.
- (5) The nature and probable value of the decedent's property, both real and personal, and the location of such property, so far as all of these facts are known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained; and
- (6) If the decedent was not domiciled in this State at the time of his death, a schedule of his property located in this State, and the name and mailing address of his domiciliary personal representative, or if there is none, whether a proceeding to appoint one is pending.

(b) If it appears to the clerk of superior court that the application and supporting evidence comply with the requirements of subsection (a) and on the basis thereof he finds that the applicant is entitled to appointment, he shall issue letters of administration or letters testamentary to the applicant unless in his discretion he determines that the best interests of the estate would be served by delaying the appointment of a personal representative, in which case he may appoint a collector as provided in Article 11. (C.C.P., s. 461; Code, s. 1381; Rev., s. 26; C.S., s. 28; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Appointment Based on Legal Presumption of Death. — Upon an affidavit showing that a person had been absent for over seven years and had not been heard from by relatives or friends, the fact that at the time of the appointment it was contemplated that an action should be brought to determine any question that might arise contrary to the legal presumption of death does not invalidate the appointment or nullify the proof afforded by the jurisdictional affidavit. Chamblee v. Security Nat'l Bank, 211 N.C. 48, 188 S.E. 632 (1936), decided under prior law.

Administration of Living Person's Estate Is Void. — Grant of administration upon the estate of a living man and a decree for the sale of his lands are void for lack of jurisdiction. Springer v. Shavender, 118 N.C. 33, 23 S.E. 976 (1896), decided under prior law.

Disqualification. — Considering the legislative history and the purpose of G.S. 31A-1(a), "living in adultery" means a spouse engages in repeated acts of adultery within a reasonable period of time preceding the death of her spouse; therefore, "living in adultery" requires a showing of something more than "committing adultery," or a single act of adultery, and something less than "residing" in adultery, because the latter construction would permit spouses to engage in habitual adultery with those with whom they do not reside and nevertheless be qualified to administer their decedent spouse's estate under this section. In re Estate of Montgomery, 137 N.C. App. 564, 528 S.E.2d 618, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 422 (2000).

§ 28A-6-2. Letters issued without notice; exceptions.

Letters of administration or letters testamentary may be issued without notice, except:

- (1) When the applicant is not entitled to priority of appointment under G.S. 28A-4-1, all persons entitled to an equal or higher preference shall be given notice by citation as provided in G.S. 28A-5-2(b)(1), unless they have renounced in accordance with the provisions of Article 5 of this Chapter.
- (2) The clerk of superior court may in any case require that notice be given to such interested persons as he in his discretion may designate prior to the granting of letters. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Correction of Error in Appointment. — Petitioner, an heir at law and beneficiary under will, had a higher preference of appointment than respondent, who was neither an heir nor a beneficiary, and as the respondent should not have been appointed administrator C.T.A. without notice to the petitioner, it was not error for the clerk to correct this error by removing the respondent as administrator C.T.A. The fact that petitioner may not have been qualified to serve as administrator C.T.A. under G.S. 28A-4-2(4) because she was a nonresident of this State who had not appointed a process agent was irrelevant. In re Estate of Cole, 80 N.C. App. 720, 343 S.E.2d 263 (1986).

§ 28A-6-3. Appointment of successor to personal representative.

When the appointment of a sole or last surviving personal representative is terminated by death, resignation pursuant to Article 10 of this Chapter, or revocation pursuant to Article 9 of this Chapter, the clerk of superior court shall appoint another personal representative as provided by G.S. 28A-4-1 to act as his successor. When two or more personal representatives have qualified, and the appointment of one or more of them is terminated by death, resignation or revocation, leaving in office one or more personal representatives, the appointment of successors shall not be required unless:

- (1) The clerk of superior court determines, in his discretion, that it is in the best interest of the estate to appoint a successor or successors to such personal representative or personal representatives, or
- (2) In the case of executors, the will so provides. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 92; Code, s. 1521; Rev., s. 35; C.S., s. 32; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Clerk is required to immediately appoint some person to succeed in the administration of the estate, and it is immaterial so far as continuity of the succession is concerned whether the successor be administrator d.b.n., executor, administrator c.t.a., administrator c.t.a., d.b.n., or collector. Harrison v. Carter, 226 N.C. 36, 36 S.E.2d 700, 164 A.L.R. 697 (1946), decided under prior law.

Successor Cannot Be Appointed Until Vacancy Exists. — Since a person to whom letters testamentary have been issued has authority to represent the estate until his death, resignation or until he has been removed or the letters testamentary have been revoked in accordance with statutory procedure, the appointment by the clerk of an administrator c.t.a., d.b.n., upon petition of the residuary legatee alleging failure of the executor to account to the estate for rents and profits, is void, the clerk being without jurisdiction to make the appointment. Edwards v. McLawhorn, 218 N.C. 543, 11 S.E.2d 562 (1940), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-6-4. Right to contest appointment; procedure.

Prior to the issuance of letters, any interested person may, by written objection filed with the clerk of superior court, with notice to the applicant, contest the issuance of letters of administration or letters testamentary to such applicant. After an objection has been duly filed, the clerk of superior court shall conduct a hearing and determine whether letters shall issue to the applicant. Appeal may be taken from the order of the clerk as in a special proceeding. (C.C.P., s. 462; Code, s. 1382; Rev., s. 27; C.S., s. 29; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to the running of the statute of limitations when there is contest, see G.S. 1-24.

CASE NOTES

Right of interested persons to contest appointment of decedent's personal representative and the procedure for doing so under the former law, G.S. 28-30 and 28-32, remains substantially unchanged under the present law. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976), decided under prior law.

Title of Property Not Question of Fact. — A dispute as to the title of property of the decedent is not such an issue of fact as is contemplated by this section. In re Tapp's Es- tate, 114 N.C. 248, 19 S.E. 150 (1894), decided under prior law.

Collateral Attack after Letters Issued. — Once the letters are issued and appointment made, they cannot be collaterally attacked. Thus, in an action by the administrator against defendant for damages for killing the decedent negligently, the legality of his appointment on the ground of residence cannot be raised. Fann v. North Carolina R.R., 155 N.C. 136, 71 S.E. 81 (1911); Batchelor v. Overton, 158 N.C. 395, 74 S.E. 20 (1912), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-6-5. Letters not subject to collateral attack.

The validity of letters issued shall not be subject to collateral attack. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Once letters are issued and appointment made, they cannot be collaterally attacked. Thus, in an action by the administrator against defendant for damages for killing the decedent negligently, the legality of his appointment on the ground of residence cannot be raised. Fann v. North Carolina R.R., 155 N.C. 136, 71 S.E. 81 (1911); Batchelor v. Overton, 158 N.C. 395, 74 S.E. 20 (1912), decided under prior law.

ARTICLE 7.

*Oath.§ 28A-7-1. Oath required before letters issue.

Before letters testamentary, letters of administration or letters of collection are issued to any person, he shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation before the clerk of superior court, or before any other officer of any state or country authorized by the laws of North Carolina to administer oaths, that he will faithfully and honestly discharge the duties of his office. Such oath or affirmation shall be in the form prescribed in G.S. 11-11, and shall be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court. (C.C.P., ss. 467, 468; 1870-1, c. 93; Code, ss. 1387, 1388, 2169; Rev., s. 29; C.S., s. 39; 1923, c. 56; 1967, c. 41, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to form of oath, see G.S. 11-11.

ARTICLE 8.

*Bond.§ 28A-8-1. Bond required before letters issue; when bond not required.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), every personal representative, before letters are issued, shall give bond, conditioned as provided in G.S. 28A-8-2.

(b) No bond shall be required of:

- (1) A resident executor, unless the express terms of the will require him to give bond;
- (2) A nonresident executor (or a resident executor who moves from this State subsequent to his appointment) who has appointed a resident agent to accept service of process as provided in G.S. 28A-4-2(a) [28A-4-2(4)], when the express terms of the will excuse him from giving bond;
- (3) A nonresident executor, when there is a resident executor named who has qualified as coexecutor unless the express terms of the will require them to give bond, or the clerk of superior court finds that such bond is necessary for the protection of the estate; or
- (4) A personal representative appointed solely for the purpose of bringing an action for the wrongful death of the deceased until such time as the personal representative shall receive property into the estate of the deceased; or
- (5) A personal representative that is a national banking association having its principal place of business in this State or a State bank acting pursuant to G.S. 53-159;

- (6) A personal representative of an intestate who resides in the State of North Carolina when all of the heirs of the decedent are over 18 years of age and file with the clerk of superior court a written waiver instrument agreeing to relieve the personal representative from the necessity of giving bond; or
- (7) A personal representative where he receives all the property of the decedent;
- (8) An administrator with the will annexed who resides in the State of North Carolina when all of the devisees of the decedent are over 18 years of age and file with the clerk of superior court a written waiver instrument agreeing to relieve him of the necessity of giving bond. (C.C.P., ss. 467, 468; 1870-1, c. 93; Code, ss. 1387, 1388, 2169; Rev., s. 29; C.S., s. 39; 1923, c. 56; 1967, c. 41, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 3; 1977, c. 29; 1981, c. 428; c. 599, ss. 5, 6.)

§ 28A-8-1.1. Deposited money; exclusion in computing amount of bond.

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 28A-8-1, in any proceeding for the determination of the amount of bond to be required of the personal representative or testamentary trustee, whether at the time of appointment or subsequently, when it appears that the estate of the decedent or the testamentary trust includes money which has been or will be deposited in a bank or banks in this State, or money which has been or will be invested in an account or accounts in an insured savings and loan association or associations upon condition that such money will not be withdrawn except on authorization of the court, the court may, in its discretion, order such money so deposited or so invested and shall exclude such deposited money from the computation of the amount of such bond or reduce the amount of bond to be required in respect of such money to such an amount as it may deem reasonable.

The petitioner for letters testamentary, of administration, or of trusteeship may deliver to any such bank or association any such money in his possession, or may allow such bank to retain any such money already in its possession, or may allow such association to retain any such money already invested with it; and, in either event, the petitioner shall secure and file with the court a written receipt including the agreement of the bank or association that such money shall not be allowed to be withdrawn except on authorization of the court. In so receiving and retaining such money, the bank or association shall be protected to the same extent as though it had received the same from a person to whom letters testamentary, of administration, or of trusteeship had been issued.

The term "account in an insured savings and loan association" as used in this section means an account insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation or by a mutual deposit guaranty association authorized by Article 7A of Chapter 54 of the General Statutes of North Carolina.

The term "money" as used in this section means the principal of the decedent's estate and does not include the income earned by the principal of the decedent's estate which may be withdrawn without any authorization of the court. (1977, c. 870, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Article 7A of Chapter 54, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 282, s. 1. For present provisions as to savings and loan associations, see Chapter 54B.

§ 28A-8-2. Provisions of bond.

A bond given pursuant to this Article shall be:

- (1) Payable to the State to the use of all persons interested in the estate; and
- (2) Conditioned that the personal representative giving the bond shall faithfully execute the trust reposed in him and obey all lawful orders of the clerk of superior court or other court touching the administration of the estate committed to him; and
- (3) In an amount not less than:
 - a. One and one-fourth times the value of all personal property of the decedent when the bond is secured by a suretyship bond executed by a corporate surety company authorized by the Commissioner of Insurance to do business in this State, provided that the clerk of superior court, when the value of the personal property to be administered by the personal representative exceeds one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), may accept bond in an amount equal to the value of the personal property plus ten percent (10%) thereof; or
 - b. Double the value of all personal property of the decedent when the bond is secured by one of the methods provided in subdivision (4)b, (4)c or (4)d; such value of said personal property to be ascertained by the clerk of superior court by examination, on oath, of the applicant or of some other person determined by the clerk to be qualified to testify as to its value; and
- (4) Secured by one or more of the following:
 - a. Suretyship bond executed, at the expense of the estate, by a corporate surety company authorized by the Commissioner of Insurance to do business in this State;
 - b. Suretyship bond executed and justified upon oath before the clerk of superior court by two or more sufficient personal sureties each of whom shall reside in and own real estate in North Carolina and shall have assets with an aggregate value above encumbrances of not less than the amount of the penalty of the required bond;
 - c. A first mortgage or first deed of trust in form approved by the administrative officer of the courts on real estate located in North Carolina:
 1. Executed by the owner, and conditioned on the performance of the obligations of the bond, and
 2. Containing a power of sale which, in the case of a mortgage, is exercisable by the clerk of superior court upon a breach of any condition thereof, or, in the case of a deed of trust, is exercisable by the trustee after notice by the clerk of superior court that a breach of condition has occurred.The clerk of superior court shall not accept such mortgage or deed of trust until it shall have been properly registered in the county or counties in which the real estate is located, and the clerk of superior court is satisfied that the real estate subject to the mortgage or deed of trust is worth the amount to be secured thereby, and that the mortgage or deed of trust is a first charge on said real estate. No such mortgage or deed of trust shall be cancelled or surrendered until the approval of the final account, unless substitution is permitted as provided in G.S. 28A-8-3(d).
 - d. A deposit by the owner with the clerk of superior court of negotiable securities, of a kind permitted by law to be proper investments for fiduciaries exercising due care, having a fair market value determined by the clerk to be equal to the amount of the penalty of the bond. Such securities shall be properly endorsed, delivered to the clerk of superior court, and accompanied by a security agreement containing a power of sale authorizing the clerk of superior court to sell them in the event the person to whom letters are being issued commits a breach of any duty imposed upon him by law in respect of his office. Such securities shall not be surrendered by the clerk of superior court to the owner until the approval of the final account, unless substitution is permitted as provided in G.S. 28A-8-3(d). For the purposes of determining the value of the assets of the personal sureties in subdivision (4)b, or the value of the real estate in subdivision (4)c, or the value of the negotiable securities in subdivision (4)d, the clerk of superior court may require a certificate of the value of such property by one or more persons not interested in the estate determined by the clerk to be qualified to certify such value. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

When Bond Not Essential. — The execution of a bond, though incidental, is not an essential condition of an order admitting the plaintiff to prosecute an action as administrator. Hughes v. Hodges, 94 N.C. 56 (1886).

Bond Not Essential to Appointment Itself. — Giving of the bond is not essential to the efficiency of the act of appointment itself. Howerton v. Sexton, 104 N.C. 75, 10 S.E. 148 (1889). See Hoskins v. Miller, 13 N.C. 360 (1830); Spencer v. Cahoon, 15 N.C. 225 (1833); Spencer v. Cahoon, 18 N.C. 27 (1834); Garrison v. Cox, 95 N.C. 353 (1886).

The giving of the bond is not an essential of the act of appointment itself. In re Estate of Pitchi, 231 N.C. 485, 57 S.E.2d 649 (1950).

Failure to give a bond or the giving of an insufficient bond is only an irregularity, in no way affecting the validity of the appointment. The irregularity makes the letters of administration voidable only — a condition which may be cured by full compliance with the statute since the letters once issued are not subject to collateral attack. In re Estate of Pitchi, 231 N.C. 485, 57 S.E.2d 649 (1950).

Irregularity Cured by Giving Proper Bond. — Where, upon service of order to show cause why letters of administration should not be revoked for failure of the administrator to give bond, the administrator files bond with sufficient surety which is approved by the clerk, the irregularity is cured and the denial of the motion to vacate the letters of administration is not error. In re Estate of Pitchi, 231 N.C. 485, 57 S.E.2d 649 (1950).

Effect of Failure to Give Proper Bond. — The mere fact that the bond of the representative is not justified before or approved by the clerk does not render the appointment void, or necessarily voidable. The provisions of this section requiring bond are directory and not essential to the appointment. The only effect of noncompliance with these requirements is that the representative may be made to give the proper bond required. Garrison v. Cox, 95 N.C. 353 (1886).

Failure of Foreign Executor to Give Bond. — When a foreign executor was regularly appointed and qualified his failure to give the bond specified by this section is only an irregularity and cannot be collaterally attacked. Batchelor v. Overton, 158 N.C. 395, 74 S.E. 20 (1912).

Amount of Bond. — The framers of this section must have contemplated that the amount of bond should depend upon the application and examination of the principal named in it, unless the clerk preferred to examine another person. Upon the examination the clerk may value the property at a higher figure than he has previously valued it. Williams v. Neville, 108 N.C. 559, 13 S.E. 240 (1891).

Money Received Covered by Bond. — Money applied for by an administrator, and paid to him as such, is received under color of his office and is covered by his bond. Lafferty v. Young, 125 N.C. 296, 34 S.E. 444 (1899).

Good faith and the exercise of ordinary care and reasonable diligence are all that is required of executors and administrators, and covered by their bond. Moore v. Eure, 101 N.C. 11, 7 S.E. 471 (1888); Smith v. Patton, 131 N.C. 396, 42 S.E. 849 (1902).

Failure to account for and to pay an amount due by the administrator to the estate is a breach of the statutory bond. State ex rel. Dunn v. Dunn, 206 N.C. 373, 173 S.E. 900 (1934).

Action May Be Brought on Bond After Death or Removal of Administrator. —

Where an administrator, who has not fully administered the estate of his intestate has died or has been removed from his office, an action may be maintained against his personal representative or against him, as the case may be, and the surety on his bond, to recover the amount due by him to the estate of his intestate, by one who has been duly appointed and has duly qualified as administrator d.b.n. of his intestate. Tulburt v. Hollar, 102 N.C. 406, 9 S.E. 430 (1889).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Husband and Wife Constitute One Surety. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Robert G. Jarrett, 42 N.C.A.G. 259 (1973), rendered under former Chapter 28.

§ 28A-8-3. Modification of bond requirements.

(a) Increase of Bond or Security in Case of Inadequacy or Insufficiency. — The clerk of superior court may, on his own motion or upon verified application of any person interested in the estate, require the personal representative to give a new bond or to furnish additional security if he finds that the bond filed pursuant to this Article, or its security, is insufficient, inadequate in amount, or that any of the individual sureties has become or is about to become a nonresident or, in the case of a corporate surety, has withdrawn or is about to withdraw from doing business in this State. Before ordering the personal representative to give a new bond or furnish additional security, the clerk of superior court shall issue a citation requiring the personal representative, within 10 days after service thereof, to show cause why such action should not be taken. If the clerk of superior court finds that the bond filed or its security is insufficient or inadequate, he shall make an order requiring the personal representative to give a new bond or to furnish additional security within a reasonable time to be fixed in the order.

(b) Increase of Bond upon Sale of Real Estate. — When a personal representative makes application for an order to sell real estate, the provisions of G.S. 1-339.10 shall govern.

(c) Reduction of Bond. — On application of the personal representative the penalty of the bond may be reduced from time to time when the clerk of superior court finds that such reduction is clearly justified, but in no event shall the penalty of the bond be reduced below the amount required by G.S. 28A-8-2(3).

(d) Substitution of Security. — When a bond is secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on real estate as provided in G.S. 28A-8-2(4)c or a deposit of negotiable securities as provided in G.S. 28A-8-2(4)d, the clerk of superior court may, on application of the personal representative, order that such real estate or negotiable securities, or a part thereof, be released upon the substitution therefor of other security in compliance with G.S. 28A-8-2(4)a, (4)c, or (4)d. Such substitution may be allowed in conjunction with any other modification of bond requirements permitted by this section. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 89; Code, s. 1518; Rev., s. 32; C.S., s. 43; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Mortgage Instead of Bond. — An administrator who is also the heir of the intestate cannot satisfy the requirement of an additional bond or security by mortgaging lands of his intestate, as such lands are already liable for the debts. In re Sellars, 118 N.C. 573, 24 S.E. 430 (1896), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-8-4. Failure to give additional bond; letters revoked.

If any personal representative fails to give an additional bond or new bond or to furnish additional security as ordered by the clerk of superior court pursuant to the provisions of this Article, within the time specified in any such order, the clerk of superior court shall proceed as provided in G.S. 28A-9-2. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 91; Code, s. 1520; Rev., s. 34; C.S., s. 44; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Clerk Has Jurisdiction. — The clerks of the superior courts have jurisdiction of proceedings for the removal of executors and administrators. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886), decided under prior law.

judgment removing a public administrator for failure to renew his bond, without notice to show cause, is not only irregular but void. Trotter v. Mitchell, 115 N.C. 190, 20 S.E. 386 (1894), decided under prior law.

Notice to Show Cause Essential. — A

§ 28A-8-5. Rights of surety in danger of loss.

Any surety on the bond of a personal representative who is in danger of loss under his suretyship may file his petition on oath with the clerk of superior court setting forth the facts, and asking that such personal representative be removed from office, or that he be required to give security to indemnify the petitioner against apprehended loss, or that the petitioner be discharged as surety and be released from liability for any future breach of the bond. The clerk of superior court shall thereupon issue a citation to the personal representative, requiring him to answer the petition within 10 days after service thereof. If, upon the hearing, the clerk of superior court determines that the surety is entitled to relief, he may grant the same in such manner as to serve the best interest of the estate. In any event, however, the previous surety shall not be released from liability for any breach of duty by the personal representative occurring prior to the filing of bond with a new surety unless the new surety assumes liability for the earlier breaches. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 90; Code, s. 1519; Rev., s. 33; C.S., s. 41; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-8-6. Action against obligors on bond of personal representative.

Any person injured by the breach of any bond given by a personal representative or collector may institute a civil action against one or more of the obligors of the bond and recover such damages as he may have sustained. Any successor personal representative, or any other personal representative of the same decedent, may institute such action on behalf of the persons interested in the estate. Any such action against one or more of the obligors of the bond shall be brought in the name of the State of North Carolina and shall be instituted in the county in which letters were issued to the personal representative or collector, and the clerk of superior court shall give notice of the institution of the action in such manner as he may determine to all other persons shown by his records to be interested in the estate. The bond of the personal representative is not void after the first or any subsequent recovery thereon until the entire penalty is recovered. If the plaintiff fails to prevail, costs may be taxed against the person or persons for whose benefit the action on a personal representative's bond is prosecuted. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 87, 88; Code, ss. 1516, 1517; Rev., ss. 30, 31; C.S., ss. 40, 42; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Necessity for Administrator De Bonis Non to Sue. — The administrator de bonis non must first sue on the bond of a defaulting executor who preceded him, before he can obtain a license to sell the real estate for the payment of the debts. Carlton v. Byers, 70 N.C. 691 (1874), decided under prior law.

Where the preceding administrator is insolvent, his bond lost, and sureties unknown, the administrator de bonis non need not bring suit before he can obtain such license. Brittain v. Dickson, 104 N.C. 547, 10 S.E. 701 (1889), decided under prior law.

ARTICLE 9.

Revocation of Letters.

§ 28A-9-1. Revocation after hearing.

(a) Grounds. — Letters testamentary, letters of administration, or letters of collection may be revoked after hearing on any of the following grounds:

- (1) The person to whom they were issued was originally disqualified under the provisions of G.S. 28A-4-2 or has become disqualified since the issuance of letters.
- (2) The issuance of letters was obtained by false representation or mistake.
- (3) The person to whom they were issued has violated a fiduciary duty through default or misconduct in the execution of his office, other than acts specified in G.S. 28A-9-2.
- (4) The person to whom they were issued has a private interest, whether direct or indirect, that might tend to hinder or be adverse to a fair and proper administration. The relationship upon which the appointment was predicated shall not, in and of itself, constitute such an interest.

(b) Procedure. — When it appears to the clerk of superior court, on his own motion or upon verified complaint made to him by any person interested in the estate, that any of the grounds set forth in subsection (a) may exist with regard to any personal representative or collector within his jurisdiction, he shall issue citation requiring such personal representative or collector, within 10 days after service thereof, to show cause why his letters should not be revoked. On the return of such citation duly executed, the clerk of superior court shall set the date for a hearing. Notice of the time and date of the hearing shall be given to such persons and in such manner as the clerk of superior court shall determine. If at the hearing the clerk of superior court finds any one of the grounds set forth in subsection (a) to exist, he shall revoke the letters issued to such personal representative or collector. (C.C.P., s. 470; Code, s. 2171; Rev., s. 38; C.S., s. 31; 1921, c. 98; 1953, c. 795; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

- II. Disqualification.
- III. Default or Misconduct.
- IV. Private Interest.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

This section prescribes procedure for the removal of a particular person as administrator for causes specified therein; and, upon removal of such person, the clerk must immediately appoint some other person to succeed in the administration of the estate. In re Bane, 247 N.C. 562, 101 S.E.2d 369 (1958).

Section 1A-1, Rule 58 Inapplicable to Denial of Motion to Revoke. — Section 1A-1, Rule 58 has no application in case involving the denial of a motion made before the clerk of superior court pursuant to this section to revoke the letters testamentary of executor. In re Estate of Trull, 86 N.C. App. 361, 357 S.E.2d 437 (1987).

Purpose of Proceeding to Remove Executor or Administrator. — See In re Battle's Estate, 158 N.C. 388, 74 S.E. 23 (1912).

Power to Revoke Imports Power to Refuse. — The power vested in the clerk under this section to revoke letters for good cause carries with it the power to refuse to grant letters for cause for which a revocation would be justified. In re Will of Gulley, 186 N.C. 78, 118 S.E. 839 (1923).

Jurisdiction of Clerk. — The clerk has original and primary jurisdiction of a probate judge to revoke letters, subject to review upon appeal by either party. Murrill v. Sandlin, 86 N.C. 54 (1882); McMichael v. Proctor, 243 N.C. 479, 91 S.E.2d 231 (1956).

The clerk of superior court, as probate judge, has exclusive original jurisdiction to hear and decide a motion to remove an administrator for cause. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

The clerk of the superior court has jurisdiction to entertain verified petition for the removal of an administrator. In re Estate of Johnson, 232 N.C. 59, 59 S.E.2d 223 (1950).

Jurisdiction of Clerk over Wrongful Death Proceeds. — Although the trial court found that decedent's wrongful death proceeds were not assets of the estate, the clerk retained authority to oversee the distribution of the proceeds as a result of its power to order an accounting of estate assets, to remove the defendant as the estate's personal representative, to impose sanctions against her based upon alleged misconduct concerning the proceeds, and to order the proceeds submitted to the clerk or public administrator; although wrongful death actions may not yield assets for the estate, a personal representative's authority to commence and settle these actions is "incident to the collection, preservation, liquidation [and] distribution of a decedent's estate." In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Exercise of Discretion. — The exigencies of administration require the exercise of sound judgment, and this necessarily implies discretion in its supervision. Hence, the removal of administrators calls for the exercise of discretion by the clerk. Jones v. Palmer, 215 N.C. 696, 2 S.E.2d 850 (1939).

Discretion Reviewable on Appeal. — In revoking letters of administration under this section the clerk exercises a legal discretion which is reviewable on appeal. In re Galloway's Estate, 229 N.C. 547, 50 S.E.2d 563 (1948); In re Will of Taylor, 293 N.C. 511, 238 S.E.2d 774 (1977).

Revocation of Prior Appointment and Appointment of Widow's Nominee. — The appointment of one as administrator of an estate should be revoked upon renunciation of the widow, who has a prior right to administer the estate, and her nomination of another in her stead, and the clerk of the court has jurisdiction and should appoint on her request a fit and competent person nominated by her. In re Estate of Loflin, 224 N.C. 230, 29 S.E.2d 692 (1944).

Filling Vacancy Caused by Resignation. — Where, in proceedings for removal of an administrator, the administrator resigns, a vacancy occurs and the clerk has authority to appoint a successor. In re Estate of Johnson, 232 N.C. 59, 59 S.E.2d 223 (1950).

Filing of "Final Report" Does Not Create Vacancy. — The filing of a "final report" by an executor does not have the effect of removing him from office if in fact the estate has not been fully settled, and therefore the filing of the report does not create a vacancy and does not give the clerk authority to appoint an administrator c.t.a., d.b.n. Edwards v. McLawhorn, 218 N.C. 543, 11 S.E.2d 562 (1940).

Pleading and Procedure. — The application to remove an executor may be made by any person rightfully interested, by petition or motion in writing, or formal complaint, setting forth the grounds of application supported by affidavit. The allegations thus made may be met by a demurrer in a proper case, or by answer. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

Because hearings both to compel accountings and remove personal representative are instituted by notice rather than a formal civil complaint and summons, they are "special proceedings," for which beneficiaries are not required to commence a civil action. In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Necessity for Order to Show Cause. — The clerk cannot appoint a collector, when the will has been probated and executor qualified, and remove the executor, without a hearing based on notice to show cause why the executor should not be removed. In re Palmer's Will, 117 N.C. 133, 23 S.E. 104 (1895).

Clerk cannot remove a public administrator without notice to show cause why he should not be removed. Trotter v. Mitchell, 115 N.C. 190, 20 S.E. 386 (1894).

Finding Sufficient to Support Revocation. — Findings that an administrator had moved from the jurisdiction of this State and had interests antagonistic to the estate was sufficient to support the clerk's order revoking letters of administration. In re Sams' Estate, 236 N.C. 228, 72 S.E.2d 421 (1952).

Order of revocation of letters testamentary was justified where the clerk made a finding that executor had refused to pay widow her share from the sale of personal property, and that he had arbitrarily mixed and commingled funds of the estate with funds of the widow. In re Boyles' Estate, 243 N.C. 279, 90 S.E.2d 399 (1955).

Proceeding to remove an executor and a civil suit for damages are not the same cause of action. The proceeding to remove an executor is purely statutory, with probate jurisdiction vested in the clerk of superior court, and reviewable by a superior court judge on appeal. A civil suit for damages involves a full trial with the right to have factual issues resolved by a jury. Shelton v. Fairley, 72 N.C. App. 1, 323 S.E.2d 410 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

Statutory action to remove administrators or executors is not res judicata in any other proceeding which the parties are entitled to pursue. Shelton v. Fairley, 72 N.C. App. 1, 323 S.E.2d 410 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

A proceeding under this section is not res judicata in a civil action for damages. Shelton v. Fairley, 72 N.C. App. 1, 323 S.E.2d 410 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

Orders entered in a proceeding under this section, in which an executor must show cause why he should not be removed, do not constitute res judicata as to a later civil action for damages between the parties or collaterally estop the bringing of such an action. Shelton v. Fairley, 72 N.C. App. 1, 323 S.E.2d 410 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

An adjudication by the clerk that the administratrix theretofore appointed by him was not the widow of decedent is not res judicata in any other proceeding between the parties which respondent may be entitled to pursue. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Beneficiaries Seeking Removal Not Held to Election of Remedies. — Prejudice would result if, when beneficiaries sought to remove an executor, they were held to an election of remedies and could not later bring a civil action for damages. Such a policy would either chill exercise of the right to seek statutory removal of an executor or force beneficiaries prematurely to bring civil actions for damages. Shelton v. Fairley, 72 N.C. App. 1, 323 S.E.2d 410 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

Denial of Motion to Revoke "Entered" When Clerk Announced After Hearing He Would Deny It. — Clerk's order denying motion to revoke letters testamentary was "entered" when the clerk announced after hearing that he would deny the petition. The party aggrieved by the ruling, the petitioner, was present and even excepted to the order, had ten days thereafter to give notice of appeal pursuant to G.S. 1-272 [see now G.S. 1-301.1 et seq.]. In re Estate of Trull, 86 N.C. App. 361, 357 S.E.2d 437 (1987).

Verification Sufficient. — Signing of petition for revocation before a notary public under oath, petitioner having sworn that the matters stated in the petition upon her information and belief were true, constituted sufficient verification required by this section. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

"Special Proceeding." — The procedure for the revocation of the letters testamentary of an administratrix as set forth in this section is a "special proceeding," and the clerk had statutory authority to appoint the guardian ad litem. In re Estate of Sturman, 93 N.C. App. 473, 378 S.E.2d 204 (1989).

The minor heirs had a vested interest in who administered the estate of their deceased father and were entitled under this section to appeal the decision of the clerk on the revocation issue. This was sufficient to bring the matter within the purview of Rule 17 providing it was an "action or special proceeding." In re Estate of Sturman, 93 N.C. App. 473, 378 S.E.2d 204 (1989).

Applied in In re Estate of Montgomery, 137

N.C. App. 564, 528 S.E.2d 618, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 422 (2000); In re Estate of Monk, 146 N.C. App. 695, 554 S.E.2d 370, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1078 (2001), cert. denied, 355 N.C. 212, 559 S.E.2d 805 (2002).

Cited in In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977); Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981); In re Estate of Armfield, 113 N.C. App. 467, 439 S.E.2d 216 (1994).

II. DISQUALIFICATION.

“Legally Competent.” — As to definition of term “legally competent” under former statute, see In re Will of Covington, 252 N.C. 551, 114 S.E.2d 261 (1960).

III. DEFAULT OR MISCONDUCT.

Procedure to remove an executor or administrator for default or misconduct is by order issued by the clerk to the executor or administrator to show cause, and in such proceeding the respondent must be given notice and an opportunity to be heard, with right of appeal. Edwards v. McLawhorn, 218 N.C. 543, 11 S.E.2d 562 (1940).

Question Determinable by Clerk. — In a proceeding under this section for revocation of letters of administration, the question determinable by the clerk was solely whether the administrators have been guilty of default or misconduct in the due execution of their office, and the rights and liabilities of adverse parties in the estate could not be litigated in such proceeding. In re Galloway's Estate, 229 N.C. 547, 50 S.E.2d 563 (1948).

Failure to Discharge Duties as Ground of Removal. — Where the executor becomes bankrupt and is the owner of no property, and has neglected for six years to file an inventory or return of any sort, and has failed to convert the personal property into money, upon application of creditors he may be required to give bond or, in default, be removed. Barnes v. Brown, 79 N.C. 401 (1878).

As to removal for failure to make statement of account, see Armstrong v. Stowe, 77 N.C. 360 (1877).

Refusal to Disclose Information. — Refusal on the part of the executor named in the will to disclose information as to the amount and nature of personalty coming into his possession, and as to other matters relative to his fitness, is a ground for withholding or revoking letters testamentary and granting them to some other person. In re Will of Gulley, 186 N.C. 78, 118 S.E. 839 (1923).

Poverty of an executor is not of itself a reason for restraining him from administering the estate. There must be some maladministration or some danger of loss from his misconduct or negligence for which he will not be able to answer by reason of his insolvency. Wilkins v. Harris, 60 N.C. 592 (1864).

Poverty is not a ground to require the representative to give bond as an alternative of giving up his office. Fairbairn v. Fisher, 57 N.C. 390 (1859).

Insolvency in Lifetime of Testator. — An executor will not be removed for insolvency, if such was his condition in the lifetime of his testator and to the knowledge of the testator, when there is no evidence of waste or misapplication of funds. In re Knowles' Estate, 148 N.C. 461, 62 S.E. 549 (1908).

Where heirs at law of an estate were appointed administrators, an order of the clerk revoking the letters of administration upon consideration of evidence of their failure to account for rents and profits from the realty is based upon a confusion of their duties, obligations and liabilities as administrators and their rights and liabilities as heirs at law, and the cause will be remanded in order that the evidence may be considered in its true legal light. In re Galloway's Estate, 229 N.C. 547, 50 S.E.2d 563 (1948).

Failure of Nonresident Executrix to Appear as Process Agent. — The failure and refusal by a nonresident executrix to appoint a process agent was sufficient ground under this section for her removal. In re Brauff's Will, 247 N.C. 92, 100 S.E.2d 254 (1957).

Where decedent's daughter repeatedly requested that wrongful death action be brought, and offered to pay all expenses for it, but was confronted with alleged collusion and willful obstruction on the part of administratrix and attorney, and within the two-year statute of limitations period, filed action against administratrix, attorney and insurer alleging breach of fiduciary duties and collusion, her contributory negligence, if any, in failing to seek removal of administratrix, was not such as to warrant dismissal under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354 (1984).

Executor's acceptance of commissions based on an erroneous interpretation of a statute would not be misconduct requiring revocation of letters testamentary. Matthews v. Watkins, 91 N.C. App. 640, 373 S.E.2d 133 (1988), aff'd, 324 N.C. 541, 379 S.E.2d 857 (1989).

Statement of Belief in Affidavit Is Insufficient. — A statement in an affidavit for the removal of executor of a mere belief that he will misapply the funds is not sufficient for removal. The affidavit should state the facts or reasons upon which such belief is based. Neighbors v. Hamlin, 78 N.C. 42 (1878).

Allegations of Misconduct Held Sufficient. — Allegations that coexecutor failed to timely file estate accountings with the clerk's office, disregarding notices issued by the clerk that such accountings were due, that he paid himself approximately $32,900 from the estate for his commission and attorneys' fees without approval of the clerk and that this amount was in excess of any amount which he could legally be allowed for commissions and legal fees, and that through his default and misconduct he had violated his fiduciary duty as a coexecutor of the estate constituted sufficient grounds upon which executrix could petition for the revocation of coexecutor's letters under subdivision (a)(3) of this section. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

IV. PRIVATE INTEREST.

Interest in Property Which Is Liable for Estate Debt. — The finding that respondent-administrator c.t.a. and petitioner are tenants in common of certain real property of the estate which is liable for debts of the estate to the extent that the personal property is insufficient to pay such debts does not support the conclusion that respondent had a private interest that might tend to hinder or be adverse to a fair and proper administration of the estate. In re Will of Taylor, 32 N.C. App. 742, 234 S.E.2d 11, aff'd, 293 N.C. 511, 238 S.E.2d 774 (1977).

Joint Ownership with Decedent. — Where there is no evidence of bad faith or fraudulent concealment, a claim by the administrator that he owned jointly with the decedent a part of the personal estate of the latter is not such an adverse interest as to disqualify him in his office. Morgan v. Morgan, 156 N.C. 169, 72 S.E. 206 (1911).

§ 28A-9-2. Summary revocation.

(a) Grounds. — Letters testamentary, letters of administration, or letters of collection, shall be revoked by the clerk of superior court without hearing when:

- (1) After letters of administration or collection have been issued, a will is subsequently admitted to probate.
- (2) After letters testamentary have been issued:
 - a. The will is set aside, or
 - b. A subsequent testamentary paper revoking the appointment of the executor is admitted to probate.
- (3) Any personal representative or collector required to give a new bond or furnish additional security pursuant to G.S. 28A-8-3 fails to do so within the time ordered.
- (4) A nonresident personal representative refuses or fails to obey any citation, notice, or process served on him or his process agent.
- (5) A trustee in bankruptcy, liquidating agent, or receiver has been appointed for any personal representative or collector, or any personal representative or collector has executed an assignment for the benefit of creditors.
- (6) A personal representative has failed to file an inventory or an annual account with the clerk of superior court, as required by Article 20 and Article 21 of this Chapter, and proceedings to compel such filing pursuant to G.S. 28A-20-2 or 28A-21-4 cannot be had because service cannot be completed because the personal representative cannot be found.

(b) Procedure. — Upon the occurrence of any of the acts set forth in subsection (a), the clerk of superior court shall enter an order revoking the letters issued to such personal representative or collector and shall cause a copy of the order to be served on him or his process agent. (C.C.P., s. 469; Code, s. 2170; Rev., s. 37; C.S., s. 30; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 19, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

This section does not empower the clerk to set aside probate in common form upon proffer of proof of a later will. In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-9-3. Effect of revocation.

Upon entry of the order revoking his letters, the authority of the personal representative or collector shall cease. He shall surrender all assets of the estate under his control to his successor, or the remaining personal representative or collector or to the clerk of superior court; and shall file an accounting in the form prescribed by Article 21 of this Chapter. A personal representative or collector whose letters are revoked pursuant to G.S. 28A-9-2(a)(1) or 28A-9-2(a)(2) shall not thereby incur personal liability for administrative acts performed prior to revocation except as provided in G.S. 28A-13-10. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-9-4. Appeal; stay effected.

Any interested person may appeal from the order of the clerk of superior court granting or denying revocation. The procedure shall be the same as in a special proceeding. If the clerk of superior court has revoked the letters, such appeal shall stay the judgment and order of the clerk until the cause is heard and determined upon appeal. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

or letters of collection after hearing, see G.S. 28A-9-1.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Power of Clerk to Remove Executors, etc., Is Reviewable. — The powers of the clerk to remove executors and administrators, conferred by this section, are reviewable on appeal to the judge of the superior court of the county. Wright v. Ball, 200 N.C. 620, 158 S.E. 192 (1931).

It is in the province of the clerk to pass upon the matter of qualification of an executor, subject to the right of review by the superior court judge, and as to matters of law by the Supreme Court on appeal. In re Will of Gulley, 186 N.C. 78, 118 S.E. 839 (1923). See Tulburt v. Hollar, 102 N.C. 406, 9 S.E. 430 (1889).

Superior Court May Review Findings of Fact Challenged by Specific Exceptions. —

To say that the superior court has jurisdiction to hear a probate matter only upon an appeal from a final judgment entered below does not mean that the judge can review the record only to ascertain whether there have been errors of law. He also reviews any findings of fact which the appellant has properly challenged by specific exceptions. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Jurisdiction of Superior Court is Derivative. — It is sometimes said that, upon an appeal from an order of the clerk made in the performance of his duties as judge of probate, the jurisdiction of the judge of the superior court is derivative. Such derivative jurisdiction is construed to mean, inter alia (1) that the clerk of the superior court has the sole power in the first instance to determine whether a decedent died testate or intestate, and, if he died testate, whether the paper-writing offered for probate is his will; (2) that proceedings to repeal letters of administration must be commenced before the clerk who issued them in the first instance; and (3) that the judge of the superior court has no jurisdiction to appoint or remove an administrator or a guardian. In other words, jurisdiction in probate matters cannot be exercised by the judge of the superior court except upon appeal. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Hearing De Novo. — Where the clerk removes an administratrix upon his finding that she was not the widow of the deceased and therefore was not entitled to appointment as a matter of right, and an appeal is taken to the superior court from such order, the superior court, even though its jurisdiction is derivative, hears the matter de novo, and may review the finding of the clerk provided the appellant has properly challenged the finding by specific exception, and may hear evidence and even submit the controverted fact to the jury; but where there is no exception to the finding, the superior court may determine only whether the finding is supported by competent evidence, and if the order is so supported the superior court is without authority to vacate the clerk's judgment and order a jury trial upon the issue. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Superior Court May Retain Cause. — Where the superior court judge, upon appeal from the order of the clerk of the court removing executors or administrators of an estate, has exercised his discretion in retaining the cause in the superior court instead of remanding it to the clerk, the exercise of this discretion is not reviewable on appeal to the Supreme Court. Wright v. Ball, 200 N.C. 620, 158 S.E. 192 (1931).

§ 28A-9-5. Interlocutory orders.

Pending any proceeding or appeal with respect to revocation of letters, the clerk of superior court may enter such interlocutory orders as are necessary to preserve the assets of the estate. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 92; Code, s. 1521; Rev., s. 35; C.S., s. 32; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Order to Make Return and Settlement. — The removed administrator may be ordered to make immediate return and settlement of the estate in his hands. Until that is done he is within the jurisdiction of the court. In re Brinson, 73 N.C. 278 (1875), decided under prior law. See also, Taylor v. Biddle, 71 N.C. 1 (1874), where an administrator was removed and an administrator de bonis nom appointed, decided under prior law.

Order to Surrender Funds. — It is proper for the clerk to order the displaced representative to surrender the funds in his possession belonging to the estate. Battle v. Duncan, 90 N.C. 546 (1884), decided under prior law.

Cited in In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

§ 28A-9-6. Appointment of successor to personal representative or collector whose letters have been revoked; when not required.

Upon the revocation of letters issued to a sole or last surviving personal representative or collector, the clerk of superior court shall appoint another personal representative or collector as provided by G.S. 28A-4-1 to act as his successor. When two or more personal representatives or collectors have qualified, and the letters of one or more personal representatives or collectors are revoked, leaving in office one or more personal representatives or collectors, the appointment of successors shall not be required unless:

- (1) The clerk of superior court determines, in his discretion, that it is in the best interest of the estate to appoint a successor or successors to the personal representatives or collectors whose letters have been revoked, or
- (2) In the case of executors, the will so provides. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 92; Code, s. 1521; Rev., s. 35; C.S. 32; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Clerk is required to immediately appoint some person to succeed in the administration of the estate, and it is immaterial so far as continuity of the succession is concerned whether the successor be administrator d.b.n., executor, administrator c.t.a., administrator c.t.a., d.b.n., or collector, Harrison v. Carter, 226 N.C. 36, 36 S.E.2d 700, 164 A.L.R. 697 (1946), decided under prior law.

Successor Cannot Be Appointed until Vacancy Exists. — Since a person to whom letters testamentary have been issued has authority to represent the estate until his death, resignation or until he has been removed or the letters testamentary have been revoked in accordance with statutory procedure, the appointment by the clerk of an administrator c.t.a., d.b.n., upon petition of the residuary legatee alleging failure of the executor to account to the estate for rents and profits, is void, the clerk being without jurisdiction to make the appointment. Edwards v. McLawhorn, 218 N.C. 543, 11 S.E.2d 562 (1940), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-9-7. Rights and duties devolve on successor.

After the revocation of letters pursuant to this Article and upon the qualification and appointment of a successor, the substituted personal representative or collector shall succeed to all the powers stated in G.S. 28A-13-7. He shall be subject to all the duties, responsibilities and liabilities of the original personal representative or collector, other than liabilities arising out of the grounds for revocation. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 10.

Resignation.

§ 28A-10-1. Clerk's power to accept resignation.

The clerk of superior court in the county where a person has been appointed personal representative shall have the power to accept his resignation. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-10-2. Contents of petition; notice.

(a) When a personal representative desires to resign his office, he shall file a verified petition in the office of the clerk of the superior court, setting forth:

- (1) The facts relating to his appointment and qualifications;
- (2) The names and residences of all interested persons known to him;
- (3) A full statement of the reasons why the petitioner should be permitted to resign his office; and
- (4) A statement that he has filed with the clerk of superior court his accounts and a record of his conduct of the office.

(b) Notice of the petition for resignation, together with the date and time of the hearing thereon, shall be served upon all interested persons named in the petition in such manner as the clerk of superior court shall determine. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-10-3. Statement of account; record of conduct.

When the personal representative files his petition requesting permission to resign his office, he shall also file a verified statement of:

- (1) His accounts since his qualification, or if he has previously filed an account, a statement of his accounts since the date thereof;
- (2) The assets of the estate and their location;
- (3) The debts and liabilities of the estate;
- (4) All facts and circumstances known to him the disclosure of which is necessary for a full and fair assessment of his conduct of the office; and

- (5) All additional facts and circumstances known to him the disclosure of which is necessary for a full and fair understanding of all matters concerning the estate. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-10-4. Hearing; order.

The clerk of superior court shall conduct a hearing on the petition not sooner than 10 days nor later than 20 days after notice to interested persons pursuant to G.S. 28A-10-2(b). If the clerk of superior court finds all the accounts proper, including accounts subsequent to the filing of the petition, and determines that the resignation of the personal representative is in the best interest of the estate and can be allowed, the resignation may be approved subject to the provisions of G.S. 28A-10-5. Except in cases governed by G.S. 28A-10-8, he shall appoint a successor pursuant to G.S. 28A-4-1. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-10-5. When resignation becomes effective.

The resignation shall not become effective until:

- (1) A successor has been duly qualified, unless G.S. 28A-10-8 is applicable; and
- (2) The clerk of superior court is satisfied that the accounts of the personal representative are true and correct; and
- (3) The personal representative has accounted to his successor in full for all assets of the estate, or if pursuant to G.S. 28A-10-8 no successor is appointed, to the remaining personal representative or representatives, and his final account has been filed with and approved by the clerk of superior court. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Cited in Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

§ 28A-10-6. Appeal; stay effected.

Any interested person who has appeared at the hearing and objected to the order of the clerk of superior court granting or denying resignation may appeal therefrom. The procedure shall be the same as in a special proceeding. If the clerk of superior court has allowed the resignation, such appeal shall stay the order of the clerk until the cause is heard and determined upon appeal. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-10-7. Rights and duties devolve on successor.

Upon the qualification and appointment of a successor to a personal representative whose resignation has been allowed as provided in G.S. 28A-10-4, the substituted personal representative shall succeed to all the powers stated in G.S. 28A-13-7 and shall also be subject to all the duties, responsibilities, and liabilities stated in Article 13. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-10-8. When appointment of successor to personal representative who has resigned is not required.

When two or more personal representatives have qualified, and one or more personal representatives resign pursuant to this Article, leaving in office one or more personal representatives, the appointment of successors shall not be required unless:

- (1) The clerk of superior court determines, in his discretion, that it is in the best interest of the estate to appoint a successor or successors to the personal representative or representatives who have resigned, or
- (2) In the case of executors, the will so provides. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 11.

Collectors.

§ 28A-11-1. Appointment and qualifications of collectors.

When for any reason other than a situation provided for in Chapter 28B or Chapter 28C entitled "Estates of Absentees in Military Service" and "Estates of Missing Persons" a delay is encountered in the issuance of letters to a personal representative or when, in any case, the clerk of superior court finds that the best interest of the estate would be served by the appointment of a collector, he may issue letters of collection to any person or persons not disqualified to act as a personal representative under G.S. 28A-4-2. (R.C., c. 46, s. 9; C.C.P., s. 463; 1868-9, c. 113, s. 115; Code, s. 1383; Rev., s. 22; C.S., s. 24; 1924, c. 43; 1965, c. 815, s. 2; 1967, c. 24, s. 14; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

When Appointment Proper. — A collector is appointed only when there is no one in rightful charge of the estate, and this section is applicable only to cases where there are difficulties in limine disconnected with controversy or contest over the will, preventing the admission of the will to probate or the issuing of letters testamentary, e.g., protracted absence of witnesses, illness of the executor, etc., also where a caveat is entered at the time the will is offered to probate. In re Palmer's Will, 117 N.C. 133, 23 S.E. 104 (1895).

Appointee in Discretion of Clerk. — It is discretionary with the clerk to appoint as collector either the person named as executor in the writing purporting to be the will, or some other person. In re Little's Will, 187 N.C. 177, 121 S.E. 453 (1924).

Appointment for Purpose of Wrongful Death Action. — Pending the appointment and qualification of an administrator, or probate and filing of a will, a collector may be appointed in order that action for wrongful death may be instituted within the statutory time. Harrison v. Carter, 226 N.C. 36, 36 S.E.2d 700, 164 A.L.R. 697 (1946), citing In re Palmer's Will, 117 N.C. 133, 23 S.E. 104 (1895).

After Will Admitted to Probate. — After a will has been admitted to probate in common form and letters testamentary have been issued, the clerk cannot remove the executor and appoint a collector, without a hearing based on notice to show cause why the executor should not be removed. In re Palmer's Will, 117 N.C. 133, 23 S.E. 104 (1895).

§ 28A-11-2. Oath and bond.

Every collector shall take an oath as prescribed in G.S. 28A-7-1 and give bond as required in Article 8 of this Chapter for personal representatives. (C.C.P., s. 464; Code, s. 1384; Rev., s. 23; C.S., s. 25; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-11-3. Duties and powers of collectors.

(a) Every collector shall:

- (1) Take such possession, custody, or control of the personal property of the decedent as in the exercise of reasonable judgment he deems necessary to its preservation;
- (2) Publish notices to creditors as provided by Article 14 of this Chapter;

- (3) Collect claims payable to the estate;
- (4) Maintain and defend actions in behalf of the estate;
- (5) File inventories, accounts, and other reports in the same manner as is required of personal representatives;
- (6) Renew obligations of the decedent in the same manner as the personal representative is allowed to do under the provisions of Article 13 of this Chapter; and
- (7) Under the express direction and supervision of the clerk of superior court, possess, exercise and perform all other powers, duties and liabilities given to personal representatives by Article 13 of this Chapter. (R.C., c. 46, s. 6; C.C.P., s. 465; 1868-9, c. 113, s. 115; Code, s. 1385; Rev., s. 24; C.S., s. 26; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — This section contains no subsection (b).

CASE NOTES

No Power to Lease Land Under Former Statute. — See Lee v. Lee, 74 N.C. 70 (1876), decided under prior law. Cited in Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447 (1988).

§ 28A-11-4. When collectors' powers cease; settlement of accounts.

(a) When letters testamentary or letters of administration are issued, or when in any case the clerk of superior court terminates the appointment of the collector, the powers of the collector cease.

(b) Upon the termination of his appointment, the collector shall surrender to the personal representative or to the person otherwise entitled thereto or to the clerk all assets of the estate under this control and shall file with the clerk a verified statement of:

- (1) His accounts since his qualification, or if he has previously filed an account, a statement of his accounts since the date thereof;
- (2) The assets of the estate and their location;
- (3) The debts and liabilities of the estate;
- (4) All facts and circumstances known to him the disclosure of which is necessary for a full and fair assessment of his conduct of the office; and
- (5) All additional facts and circumstances known to him the disclosure of which is necessary for a full and fair understanding of all matters concerning the estate.

(c) The clerk of superior court shall examine the account of the collector and if he finds all of the accounts proper, he shall by order approve the account. (R.C., c. 46, s. 7; C.C.P., s. 466; 1868-9, c. 113, s. 115; Code, s. 1386; Rev., s. 25; C.S., s. 27; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Allowance of Counsel Fee. — A collector who resists the claim of the executor is not entitled to an allowance for counsel fees paid by him in such litigation, where the executor prevails in the litigation. Johnson v. Marcom, 121 N.C. 83, 28 S.E. 58 (1897), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-11-5. Compensation.

A collector shall be compensated in accordance with Article 23 of this Chapter. (1977, c. 814, s. 4.)

ARTICLE 12.

Public Administrator.

§ 28A-12-1. Appointment and term.

There shall be a public administrator in every county, appointed by the clerk of superior court, with the written approval of the senior resident superior court judge of the district in which the appointment is made, for a term of four years. (1868-9, c. 113; Code, s. 1389; Rev., s. 18; C.S., s. 17; 1925, c. 253; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Property Right. — The public administrator's office is a property right which cannot be divested without due process of law. Trotter v. Mitchell, 115 N.C. 190, 20 S.E. 386 (1894), decided under prior law.

Not an Office Within Constitutional Prohibition Against Holding More Than One Office. — A public administrator is not a holder of a public office within the constitutional prohibition against holding more than one office, and hence a quo warranto proceeding will not lie against him simply because he is also holding the office of recorder. State v. Smith, 145 N.C. 476, 59 S.E. 649 (1907), decided under prior law.

Mistake of Clerk as to Term. — The appointment of a public administrator is for the time specified in the section, and is not affected by a mistake of the clerk in stating in the appointment that it was for the unexpired term of his predecessor, or fixing the term of the new appointee for less period. Boynton v. Heartt, 158 N.C. 488, 74 S.E. 470 (1912), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-12-2. Oath of office.

The public administrator shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation in the form provided in G.S. 11-11 for administrators and in the manner provided in G.S. 28A-7-1; and the oath or affirmation so taken and subscribed shall be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 2, 5; Code, s. 1393; Rev., s. 19; C.S., s. 18; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to form of oath, see G.S. 11-11.

§ 28A-12-3. Qualification and bond.

(a) The public administrator shall qualify and give bond with regard to each estate administered by him as provided in Article 8 of this Chapter, at the expense of such estate.

(b) As an alternative to and in lieu of the bonding requirement provided in subsection (a), the administrator may, in the discretion of the clerk of superior court, enter into a single permanent bond, secured by any of the methods provided in G.S. 28A-8-2(4), payable to the State of North Carolina, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of his office and obedience to all lawful orders of the clerk of superior court or other court touching the administration of any estate committed to him. The amount of the permanent bond shall be determined by the clerk, based on the total value of all the estates administered by the public administrator, and may be increased or decreased from time to time as the clerk determines is necessary. The expense of the bond shall be borne by the estates administered by the administrator, as determined by the clerk. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 2, 3, 4; Code, ss. 1390, 1391, 1392; Rev., s. 320; 1915, c. 216; C.S., s. 19; 1941, c. 243; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1979, cc. 111, 726.)

CASE NOTES

Removal for Failure to Renew Bond. — A public administrator cannot be removed for failure to renew his bond without being notified to show cause. Trotter v. Mitchell, 115 N.C. 190, 20 S.E. 386 (1894), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-12-4. When public administrator shall apply for letters.

The public administrator shall apply for and may, with the approval of the clerk of superior court, obtain letters on the estates of decedents when:

- (1) It is brought to his attention that a period of six months has elapsed from the death of any decedent who has died owning property, and no letters testamentary, or letters of administration or collection, have been applied for or issued to any person; or
- (2) Any person without known heirs shall die intestate owning property; or
- (3) Any person entitled to apply for letters of administration shall, in writing, request the clerk to issue letters to the public administrator as provided in G.S. 28A-5-2(c). (1868-9, c. 113, s. 6; Code, s. 1394; Rev., s. 20; C.S., s. 20; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Public administrator acquires no rights or interest to administer an estate until he is qualified after the period allowed to the relatives to qualify in the order prescribed. In re Neal's Will, 182 N.C. 405, 109 S.E. 70 (1921).

Six Months Is Reasonable Time to Apply for Appointment of Administrator. — Six months after the death of testator is a reasonable time within which application should be made, in proper instances, for appointment of administrator c.t.a. In re Estate of Smith, 210 N.C. 622, 188 S.E. 202 (1936).

Prior Right of Others After Six Months. — While after the expiration of six months prior rights to administration may be deemed renounced and a public administrator appointed, yet even after six months, if he is not as yet appointed, persons of prior right to administration may be appointed in preference to him. In re Bailey's Will, 141 N.C. 193, 53 S.E. 844 (1906). See Hill v. Alsbaugh, 72 N.C. 402 (1875).

After the expiration of six months, should the public administrator fail to apply, the field is open to the clerk of the superior court to treat all right of preference as renounced and to appoint, in the exercise of his discretion, some suitable person to administer the estate. Brooks v. E.H. Clement Co., 201 N.C. 768, 161 S.E. 403 (1931).

§ 28A-12-5. Powers and duties.

(a) The public administrator shall have, in respect to the several estates in his hands, all the rights and powers and shall be subject to all the duties and liabilities of other personal representatives.

(b) After the expiration of the term of office of a public administrator or his resignation as public administrator, he shall continue, subject to the provisions of Articles 9 and 10 of this Chapter, to administer the several estates previously committed to him until he has fully administered the same, and his bonds shall continue in effect as to all such estates. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 7; 1876-7, c. 239; Code, s. 1395; Rev., s. 21; C.S., s. 21; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-12-6. Removal from office.

If letters of administration issued to the public administrator with respect to any estate are subsequently revoked on the grounds that they were obtained by false representation as provided in G.S. 28A-9-1(a)(2), or on the grounds as specified in G.S. 28A-9-1(a)(1), 28A-9-1(a)(3), 28A-9-2(a)(3), 28A-9-2(a)(5), or 28A-9-2(a)(6) or if he becomes a nonresident of the State, the clerk of superior court shall order the removal of the public administrator from office. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-12-7. Procedure after removal from office.

The clerk of superior court shall require of any public administrator who is removed from office pursuant to G.S. 28A-12-6 a complete accounting of all his activities as public administrator and for the property remaining under his control by reason of his appointment under this Article as administrator of any estate that has not been fully administered at the time of his removal. If it appears to the clerk of superior court that grounds exist for revocation of letters of administration issued with respect to any such estate, he shall proceed in accordance with the provisions of Article 9 of this Chapter. If letters of administration are revoked pursuant to such proceedings, the clerk of superior court shall issue letters of administration to the successor public administrator or to some other person not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-12-8. Compensation.

A public administrator shall be compensated in accordance with Article 23 of this Chapter. (1977, c. 814, s. 5.)

ARTICLE 13.

Representative's Powers, Duties and Liabilities.

§ 28A-13-1. Time of accrual of duties and powers.

The duties and powers of a personal representative commence upon his appointment. The powers of a personal representative relate back to give acts by the person appointed which are beneficial to the estate occurring prior to appointment the same effect as those occurring thereafter. Prior to appointment, a person named executor in a will may carry out written instructions of the decedent relating to his body, funeral and burial arrangements. A personal representative may ratify and accept acts on behalf of the estate done by others where the acts would have been proper for a personal representative. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Claim Brought by Foreign Personal Representative Before Qualifying Locally.

— Section 28A-26-6 neither addresses nor answers the question of what must happen procedurally to a claim brought by a foreign personal representative who locally qualifies after a claim brought by him is filed. Indeed, this section speaks more to this question. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Whether a claim brought by a foreign personal representative before he is locally qualified must be dismissed and reinstituted or whether this defect can be cured by supplemental pleading in which the claim as instituted is duly ratified by the personal representative after he is locally qualified are questions which must be answered by reference to the principle codified in this section and to rules of pleading as set out in G.S. 1A-1, Rules 15 and 17(a). Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C.

Testamentary directions for disposition of the testator's body must be treated as valid upon the death of the testator, and funeral directors who act upon the provision in good faith cannot later be held liable in tort because they acted before the will was probated. Dumouchelle v. Duke Univ., 69 N.C. App. 471, 317 S.E.2d 100 (1984).

A testamentary provision directing disposition of the testator's body must prevail over conflicting wishes of the testator's next-of-kin and the next-of-kin in such a case have no right to possession of the body for the purpose of selecting funeral arrangements and therefore they have no standing to sue for negligence for failure to carry out their instructions for disposal of testator's body. Dumouchelle v. Duke Univ., 69 N.C. App. 471, 317 S.E.2d 100 (1984).

§ 28A-13-2. General duties; relation to persons interested in estate.

A personal representative is a fiduciary who, in addition to the specific duties stated in this Chapter, is under a general duty to settle the estate of his decedent as expeditiously and with as little sacrifice of value as is reasonable under all of the circumstances. He shall use the authority and powers conferred upon him by this Chapter, by the terms of the will under which he is acting, by any order of court in proceedings to which he is party, and by the rules generally applicable to fiduciaries, for the best interests of all persons interested in the estate, and with due regard for their respective rights. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-13-3. Powers of a personal representative or fiduciary.

(a) Except as qualified by express limitations imposed in a will of the decedent or a court order, and subject to the provisions of G.S. 28A-13-6 respecting the powers of joint personal representatives, a personal representative has the power to perform in a reasonable and prudent manner every act which a reasonable and prudent man would perform incident to the collection, preservation, liquidation or distribution of a decedent's estate so as to accomplish the desired result of settling and distributing the decedent's estate in a safe, orderly, accurate and expeditious manner as provided by law, including but not limited to the powers specified in the following subdivisions:

- (1) To take possession, custody or control of the personal property of the decedent. If in the opinion of the personal representative his possession, custody or control of such property is not necessary for purposes of administration, such property may be left with or surrendered to the heir or devisee presumptively entitled thereto. He has the power to take possession, custody or control of the real property of the decedent if he determines such possession, custody or control is in the best interest of the administration of the estate. Prior to exercising such power over real property the procedure as set out in subsection G.S. 28A-13-3(c) shall be followed. If the personal representative determines that such possession, custody or control is not in the best interest of the administration of the estate such property may be left with or surrendered to the heir or devisee presumptively entitled thereto.
- (2) To retain assets owned by the decedent pending distribution or liquidation even though such assets may include items which are otherwise improper for investment of trust funds.
- (3) To receive assets from other fiduciaries or other sources.
- (4) To complete performance of contracts entered into by the decedent that continue as obligations of his estate, or to refuse to complete such contracts, as the personal representative may determine to be in the best interests of the estate, but such refusal shall not limit any cause of action which might have been maintained against decedent if he had refused to complete such contract. In respect to enforceable contracts by the decedent to convey an interest in land, the provisions of G.S. 28A-17-9 are controlling.
- (5) To deposit, as a fiduciary, funds of the estate in a bank, including a bank operated by the personal representative upon compliance with the provisions of G.S. 36A-63.
- (6) To make, as a fiduciary, any form of investment allowed by law to the State Treasurer under G.S. 147-69.1, with funds of the estate, when such are not needed to meet debts and expenses immediately payable and are not immediately distributable, including money received from the sale of other assets; or to enter into other short-term loan arrangements that may be appropriate for use by trustees or beneficiaries generally. Provided, that in addition to the types of investments hereby authorized, deposits in interest-bearing accounts of any credit union authorized to do business in this State, when such deposits are insured in the same manner as required by G.S. 147-69.1 for deposits in a savings and loan association, are hereby authorized.
- (7) To abandon or relinquish all rights in any property when, in the opinion of the personal representative acting reasonably and in good faith, it is valueless, or is so encumbered or is otherwise in such condition that it is of no benefit to the estate.
- (8) To vote shares of stock or other securities in person or by general or limited proxy, and to execute waivers, consents or objections with respect to such stock or securities.
- (9) To pay calls, assessments, and any other sums chargeable or accruing against or on account of securities.
- (10) To hold shares of stock or other securities in the name of a nominee, without mention of the estate in the instrument representing stock or other securities or in registration records of the issuer thereof; provided, that

- a. The estate records and all reports or accounts rendered by the personal representative clearly show the ownership of the stock or other securities by the personal representative and the facts regarding its holdings, and
- b. The nominee shall not have possession of the stock or other securities or access thereto except under the immediate supervision of the personal representative or when such securities are deposited by the personal representative in a clearing corporation as defined in G.S. 25-8-102.

Such personal representative shall be personally liable for any acts or omissions of such nominee in connection with such stock or other securities so held, as if such personal representative had done such acts or been guilty of such omissions.

- (11) To insure, at the expense of the estate, the assets of the estate in his possession, custody or control against damage or loss.
- (12) To borrow money for such periods of time and upon such terms and conditions as to rates, maturities, renewals, and security as the personal representative shall deem advisable, including the power of a corporate personal representative to borrow from its own banking department, for the purpose of paying debts, taxes, and other claims against the estate, and to mortgage, pledge or otherwise encumber such portion of the estate as may be required to secure such loan or loans. In respect to the borrowing of money on the security of the real property of the decedent, G.S. 28A-17-11 is controlling.
- (13) To renew obligations of the decedent for the payment of money.
- (14) To advance his own money for the protection of the estate, and for all expenses, losses and liabilities sustained in the administration of the estate or because of the holding or ownership of any estate assets. For such advances, with any interest, the personal representative shall have a lien on the assets of the estate as against a devisee or heir.
- (15) To compromise, adjust, arbitrate, sue on or defend, abandon, or otherwise deal with and settle claims in favor of or against the estate.
- (16) To pay taxes, assessments, his own compensation, and other expenses incident to the collection, care, administration and protection of the assets of the estate in his possession, custody or control.
- (17) To sell or exercise stock subscription or conversion rights; consent, directly or through a committee or other agent, to the reorganization, consolidation, merger, dissolution, or liquidation of a corporation or other business enterprise.
- (18) To allocate items of income or expense to either estate income or principal, as permitted or provided by law.
- (19) To employ persons, including attorneys, auditors, investment advisors, appraisers or agents to advise or assist him in the performance of his administrative duties.
- (20) To continue any business or venture in which the decedent was engaged at the date of his death, where such continuation is reasonably necessary or desirable to preserve the value, including goodwill, of the decedent's interest in such business. With respect to the use of the decedent's interest in a continuing partnership, the provisions of G.S. 59-71 and 59-72 qualify this power; and with respect to farming operations engaged in by the decedent at the time of his death, the provisions of G.S. 28A-13-4 qualify this power.
- (21) To incorporate or participate in the incorporation of any business or venture in which the decedent was engaged at the time of his death.

- (22) To provide for the exoneration of the personal representative from personal liability in any contract entered into on behalf of the estate.
 - (23) To maintain actions for the wrongful death of the decedent according to the provisions of Article 18 of this Chapter and to compromise or settle any such claims, whether in litigation or not. Unless all persons who would be entitled to receive any damages recovered under G.S. 28A-18-2(b)(4) are competent adults and have consented in writing, any such settlement shall be subject to the approval of a judge of the court or tribunal exercising jurisdiction over the action or a judge of the district or superior court in cases where no action has previously been filed. If the claim is brought under Article 31 of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes, the settlement is subject to the approval of the Industrial Commission in accordance with that Article. It shall be the duty of the personal representative in distributing the proceeds of such settlement in any instance to take into consideration and to make a fair allocation to those claimants for funeral, burial, hospital and medical expenses which would have been payable from damages which might have been recovered had a wrongful death action gone to judgment in favor of the plaintiff.
 - (24) To maintain any appropriate action or proceeding to recover possession of any property of the decedent, or to determine the title thereto; to recover damages for any injury done prior to the death of the decedent to any of his property; and to recover damages for any injury done subsequent to the death of the decedent to such property.
 - (25) To purchase at any public or private sale of any real or personal property belonging to the decedent's estate or securing an obligation of the estate as a fiduciary for the benefit of the estate when, in his opinion, it is necessary to prevent a loss to the estate.
 - (26) To sell or lease personal property of the estate in the manner prescribed by the provisions of Article 16 of this Chapter.
 - (27) To sell or lease real property of the estate in the manner prescribed by the provisions of Article 17 of this Chapter.
 - (28) To enter into agreements with taxing authorities to secure the benefit of the federal marital deduction pursuant to G.S. 28A-22-6.
 - (29) To pay or satisfy the debts and claims against the decedent's estate in the order and manner prescribed by Article 19 of this Chapter.
 - (30) To distribute any sum recovered for the wrongful death of the decedent according to the provisions of G.S. 28A-18-2; and to distribute all other assets available for distribution according to the provisions of this Chapter or as otherwise lawfully authorized.
 - (31) To exercise such additional lawful powers as are conferred upon him by the will.
 - (32) To execute and deliver all instruments which will accomplish or facilitate the exercise of the powers vested in the personal representative.
 - (33) To renounce in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 31B of the General Statutes.
- (a) Except as qualified by express limitations imposed in a will of the decedent, and subject to the provisions of G.S. 28A-13-6 respecting the powers of joint personal representatives, a personal representative shall have absolute discretion to make the election as to which items of the decedent's personal and household effects shall be excluded from the carry over basis provision of the federal income tax law and such election shall be conclusive and binding on all concerned.
- (b) Any question arising out of the powers conferred by subsections (a) and (a1) above shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of Article 18 of this Chapter.

(c) Prior to the personal representative exercising possession, custody or control over real property of the estate he shall petition the clerk of court to obtain an order authorizing such possession, custody or control. The petition shall include:

- (1) A description of the real property which is the subject of the petition;
- (2) The names, ages, and addresses, if known, of the devisees and heirs of the decedent;
- (3) A statement by the personal representative that he has determined that such possession, custody or control is in the best interest of the administration of the estate.

The devisees and heirs will be made parties to the proceeding by service of summons in the manner prescribed by law. If the clerk of court determines that it is in the best interest of the administration of the estate to authorize the personal representative to take possession, custody or control he shall grant an order authorizing that power. If a special proceeding has been instituted by the personal representative pursuant to G.S. 28A-15-1(c), the personal representative may petition for possession, custody, or control of any real property as a part of that proceeding and is not required to institute a separate special proceeding. CASE NOTES

Recovery of Realty by Administrator De Bonis Non, Cum Testamento Annexo. — Where an executor is entitled to the possession of the land, his successor, an administrator de bonis non, cum testamento annexo, is entitled to the same rights and remedies as his predecessor in office. Smathers v. Moody, 112 N.C. 791, 17 S.E. 532 (1893), decided under prior law.

Authority to Execute Lease. — A person who executes a lease as executor of an estate and represents to the lessee that he has authority to do so is not personally liable for a breach of the lease when an examination of the will on record would have revealed the executor did not have authority to execute the lease. Trull v. McIntyre, 48 N.C. App. 599, 269 S.E.2d 308, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 531, 273 S.E.2d 463 (1980).

No Conflict Between § 97-10.2(f)(1) and Subdivision (a)(23) of This Section. — Section 97-10.2(f)(1) addresses solely the distribution of proceeds of, inter alia, a wrongful death settlement, whereas subdivision (a)(23) of this section controls the manner in which a wrongful death action may be settled by an administrator. There is thus no conflict between the statutes, fairly and properly construed, and each remains effective in its respective area of application. Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 389 (1983).

Jurisdiction over Wrongful Death Proceeds. — Although the trial court found that decedent's wrongful death proceeds were not assets of the estate, the clerk retained authority to oversee the distribution of the proceeds as a result of its power to order an accounting of estate assets, to remove the defendant as the estate's personal representative, to impose sanctions against her based upon alleged misconduct concerning the proceeds, and to order the proceeds submitted to the clerk or public administrator; although wrongful death actions may not yield assets for the estate, a personal representative's authority to commence and settle these actions is "incident to the collection, preservation, liquidation [and] distribution of a decedent's estate." In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Subdivision (a)(23) of this section specifically addresses settlement of wrongful death claims and is thus controlling, even where an administrator's actions may also be characterized as abandonment of a claim by the estate within the more general language of subdivision (a)(15) of this section. Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 389 (1983).

Prior Settlement and Approval of Attorneys' Fees Not Bar to Malpractice Suit. — Settlement and approval of attorneys' fees in previous wrongful death action was not a bar to suit for attorney malpractice alleging negligence and breach of fiduciary duty; collateral estoppel was not applicable so as to support summary judgment in favor of defendants. Beckwith v. Llewellyn, 326 N.C. 569, 391 S.E.2d 189 (1990).

Personal representative has the authority, in accomplishing the expeditious settlement of a decedent's estate, to settle and compromise claims in favor of or against the estate, provided that he acts honestly, reasonably and prudently. Hunter v. Newsom, 121 N.C. App. 564, 468 S.E.2d 802 (1996).

In the determination of whether a deed of trust conveyed by the executor is a debt of the estate, the burden is on the party asserting the validity of the debt as an obligation of the estate to show that the executor acted within his authority as executor. Hunter v. Newsom, 121 N.C. App. 564, 468 S.E.2d 802 (1996).

§ 28A-13-4. Continuance of farming operations of deceased persons.

When any person dies while engaged in farming operations, his personal representative is authorized to continue such farming operations until the end of the current calendar year, and until all crops grown during that year are harvested. The net income from such farming operations shall be personal assets of the estate. Any indebtedness incurred in connection with such farming operations after the date of death shall be preferred over the claims of any heir, legatee, devisee, distributee, general or unsecured creditor of said estate. Nothing herein contained shall limit the powers of a personal representative under the terms of a will. (1935, c. 163; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-13-5. Personal representatives hold in joint tenancy.

Any estate or interest in property which becomes vested in two or more personal representatives shall be held by them in joint tenancy with the incident of survivorship. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 74; Code, s. 1502; Rev., s. 166; C.S., s. 172; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-13-6. Exercise of powers of joint personal representatives by one or more than one.

(a) As used in this section, the term "personal representatives" includes testamentary trustees.

(b) If a will expressly makes provision for the execution of any of the powers of personal representatives by all of them or by any one or more of them, the provisions of the will govern.

(c) If there is no governing provision in the will, personal representatives may, by written agreement signed by all of them and filed with and approved by the clerk of superior court of the county in which such personal representatives qualified, provide that any one or more of the following powers of personal representatives may be exercised by any designated one or more of them:

- (1) Open bank accounts and draw checks thereon;
- (2) Subject to the provisions of G.S. 105-24, enter any safe-deposit box of the deceased or any safe-deposit box rented by the personal representative or representatives;
- (3) Employ attorneys and accountants;
- (4) List property for taxes and prepare and file State, municipal and county tax returns;
- (5) Collect claims and debts due the estate and give receipts therefor;
- (6) Pay claims against and debts of the estate;
- (7) Compromise claims in favor of or against the estate;
- (8) Have custody of property of the estate.

(d) Subject to subsection (b) of this section, if two or more personal representatives own shares of corporate stock or other securities, their acts with respect to voting shall have the following effect:

- (1) If only one votes, in person or by proxy, his act binds all;
- (2) If more than one vote, in person or by proxy, the act of the majority so voting binds all;
- (3) If one or more vote, in person or by proxy, but the vote is evenly split on any particular matter, each fraction is entitled to vote the stock or other securities in question proportionately.

(e) Subject to the provisions of subsections (b), (c) and (d) of this section, all other acts and duties must be performed by both of the personal representatives if there are two, and by a majority of them if there are more than two. No personal representative who has not joined in exercising a power shall be liable for the consequences of such exercise, nor shall a dissenting personal representative be liable for the consequences of an act in which he joins at the direction of the majority of the personal representatives, if he expressed his dissent in writing to any other personal representative at or before the time of such joinder.

Editor's Note. — Section 105-24, referred to in subdivision (c)(2) above, has been repealed.

§ 28A-13-7. Powers and duties of successor personal representative.

A successor personal representative is one appointed to succeed a personal representative whose appointment has terminated by death, resignation or revocation. Unless a contrary intent clearly appears from the will, a successor personal representative has all the powers and duties, discretionary or otherwise, of the original personal representative. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-13-8. Powers and duties of administrator with will annexed.

When an administrator with the will annexed has been appointed, whether or not he is succeeding a previously appointed personal representative, he has the same powers and duties, discretionary or otherwise, as if he had been named executor in the will, unless a contrary intent clearly appears from the will. (C.C.P., s. 468; 1870-1, c. 93; Code, s. 1388; Rev., s. 319; C.S., s. 33; 1935, c. 386; 1949, c. 971; 1967, c. 41, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-13-9. Powers of surviving personal representative.

When one or more of those nominated as coexecutors in a will is not appointed, or when the appointment of one or more joint personal representatives is terminated, every power granted to such joint personal representatives may be exercised by the surviving representative or representatives; provided that nothing to the contrary appears in the will of a testate decedent. (C.C.P., s. 451; Code, s. 2164; Rev., s. 13; C.S., s. 16; 1931, c. 183; 1953, c. 78, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Sale by One of Joint Executors. — If one of the joint executors fails to qualify, a sale of lands by the one qualifying is sufficient to pass the estate, without its appearing that the other either has renounced the executorship or refused to join in the sale. Wood v. Sparks, 18 N.C. 389 (1835), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-13-10. Liability of personal representative.

(a) Property of Estate. — A personal representative shall be liable for and chargeable in his accounts with all of the estate of the decedent which comes into his possession at any time, including all the income therefrom; but he shall not be liable for any debts due to the decedent or other assets of the estate which remain uncollected without his fault. Except for commissions allowable by law, he shall not be entitled to any profits caused by an increase in values, nor be chargeable with loss by a decrease in value or destruction without his fault, of any part of the estate.

(b) Property Not a Part of Estate. — A personal representative shall be chargeable in his accounts with property not a part of the estate which comes into his possession at any time and shall be liable to the persons entitled thereto if:

(1) The property was received under a duty imposed on him by law in the capacity of personal representative; or

(2) He has commingled such property with the assets of the estate.

(c) Breach of Duty. — A personal representative shall be liable and chargeable in his accounts for any loss to the estate arising from his embezzlement or commingling of the estate with other property; for loss to the estate through self-dealing; for any loss to the estate from wrongful acts or omissions of his joint personal representatives which he could have prevented by the exercise of ordinary care; and for any loss to the estate arising from his failure to act in good faith and with such care, foresight and diligence as an ordinarily reasonable and prudent man would act with his own property under like circumstances. If the exercise of power concerning the estate is improper, the personal representative is liable for breach of fiduciary duty to interested persons for resulting damage or loss to the same extent as a trustee of an express trust. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Liability for Depreciation of Assets. — An executor, in performing those duties related to managing the estate's assets, acts as a trustee to beneficiaries of the estate. As such, the executor is liable for the depreciation of assets which an ordinarily prudent fiduciary would not have allowed to occur. Fortune v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 87 N.C. App. 1, 359 S.E.2d 801 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 146, 371 S.E.2d 483 (1988).

Wrongful Death Proceeds. — Although the trial court found that decedent's wrongful death proceeds were not assets of the estate, the clerk retained authority to oversee the distribution of the proceeds as a result of its power to order an accounting of estate assets, to remove the defendant as the estate's personal representative, to impose sanctions against her based upon alleged misconduct concerning the proceeds, and to order the proceeds submitted to the clerk or public administrator; although wrongful death actions may not yield assets for the estate, a personal representative's authority to commence and settle these actions is "incident to the collection, preservation, liquidation [and] distribution of a decedent's estate." In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

ARTICLE 14.

Notice to Creditors.

§ 28A-14-1. Notice for claims.

(a) Every personal representative and collector after the granting of letters shall notify all persons, firms and corporations having claims against the decedent to present the same to such personal representative or collector, on or before a day to be named in such notice, which day must be at least three months from the day of the first publication or posting of such notice. The notice shall set out a mailing address for the personal representative or collector. The notice shall be published once a week for four consecutive weeks in a newspaper qualified to publish legal advertisements, if any such newspaper is published in the county. If there is no newspaper published in the county, but there is a newspaper having general circulation in the county, then at the option of the personal representative, or collector, the notice shall be published once a week for four consecutive weeks in the newspaper having general circulation in the county and posted at the courthouse or the notice shall be posted at the courthouse and four other public places in the county. Personal representatives are not required to publish or mail notice to creditors if the only asset of the estate consists of a claim for damages arising from death by wrongful act. When any collector or personal representative of an estate has published or mailed the notice provided for by this section, no further publication or mailing shall be required by any other collector or personal representative.

(b) Prior to filing the proof of notice required by G.S. 28A-14-2, every personal representative and collector shall personally deliver or send by first class mail to the last known address a copy of the notice required by subsection (a) of this section to all persons, firms, and corporations having unsatisfied claims against the decedent who are actually known or can be reasonably ascertained by the personal representative or collector within 75 days after the granting of letters. Provided, however, no notice shall be required to be delivered or mailed with respect to any claim that is recognized as a valid claim by the personal representative or collector.

(c) The personal representative or collector may personally deliver or mail by first class mail a copy of the notice required by subsection (a) of this section to all creditors of the estate whose names and addresses can be ascertained with reasonable diligence. If the personal representative or collector in good faith believes that the notice required by subsection (b) of this section to a particular creditor is or may be required and gives notice based on that belief, the personal representative or collector is not liable to any person for giving the notice, whether or not the notice is actually required by subsection (b) of this section. If the personal representative or collector in good faith fails to give notice required by subsection (b) of this section, the personal representative or collector is not liable to any person for such failure. CASE NOTES

Time of Presenting Claims. — Before distribution of the estate, it is the duty of the administrator to pay the debts of the estate, provided such debts are presented within 12 months (now three months) next after publication under this section. As against claims presented after that period he will not be chargeable with any distribution he may have made in good faith. Mallard v. Patterson, 108 N.C. 255, 13 S.E. 93 (1891).

Action Following Tortfeasor's Death Not Time Barred. — Action filed on October 20, 2000, two days after qualification of deceased driver's personal representative, for personal injuries arising out of an automobile accident that occurred on June 27, 1997, was not barred by G.S. 1-52, where deceased died on November 7, 1997, at which time the three year limitations period had not yet expired, as under G.S. 28A-18-1 plaintiff's cause of action survived his death, and thus, pursuant to G.S. 1-22, plaintiff was permitted to commence a cause of action against deceased's personal representative, provided that either the action was brought within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3, or that notice of the claim upon which the action was based was presented to the personal representative within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3. The personal representative's failure to establish in the record that she complied with G.S. 28A-19-3(a) regarding general notice to creditors precluded her from relying upon the statute of limitations as a bar; moreover, under G.S. 28A-14-1(a), the absolute earliest "deadline" date which could have been specified by the personal representative in the general notice to creditors was January 18, 2001, three months from the day of the first publication or posting of such notice. Mabry v. Huneycutt, 149 N.C. App. 630, 562 S.E.2d 292, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 271 (2002).

Advertisement Essential to Bar Claims.

— The mere lapse of time does not bar the creditors' claims against the estate. Only where the advertisement provided under this section has been made does the statute of limitation begin to run. Love v. Ingram, 104 N.C. 600, 10 S.E. 77 (1889). But see Morrissey v. Hill, 142 N.C. 355, 55 S.E. 193 (1906), where it was held that this section was enacted more for the protection of the representative, and hence a claim would be barred independent of whether the advertisement provided by the section was published or not. To the same effect, see also Andres v. Powell, 97 N.C. 155, 2 S.E. 235 (1887).

Where the administrator neither avers nor proves that he gave the notice required by this section, the objection that the creditor has not shown that he ever presented his claim will not avail. Valentine v. Britton, 127 N.C. 57, 37 S.E. 74 (1900). See Love v. Ingram, 104 N.C. 600, 10

S.E. 77 (1889). But see Morissey v. Hill, 142 N.C. 355, 55 S.E. 193 (1906).

Notice Held Fatally Defective. — An executor's general notice to creditors published in a newspaper was fatally defective where it failed to name a day after which claims would be barred and failed to give notice that claims must be filed within six months (now three months) from the day of the first publication of the notice; therefore, the notice to creditors was ineffective to start the running of the statute of limitations of G.S. 28A-19-3(a) in bar of a claim against decedent's estate to recover for personal injuries received in an automobile accident. Anderson v. Gooding, 300 N.C. 170, 265 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

Claims Against the Estate for Decedent's Fraud Barred. — Where plaintiff's claims were based on fraud, and one participant in the fraud was dead, two statutes were applicable to their action, G.S. 1-52(9) requiring a claim be filed within three years of the discovery of the fraud, and this section requiring that a claim be filed within six months after the personal representative of the decedent first published the notice to creditors. Since this section more specifically deals with when a claim may be filed against an estate, this statute controlled, and would bar a cause of action even if the action had been filed within three years of discovery. Liner v. DiCresce, 905 F. Supp. 280 (M.D.N.C. 1994).

For the purpose of the discovery rule delaying the running of a limitation period, a subtle yet distinct difference in meaning between the words "arise" and "accrue" becomes evident: a cause of action for fraud accrues when the fraud is discovered. Because a participant in fraud died more than four years before action was filed, any alleged fraud committed by him must have arisen more than four years earlier, during his lifetime, and the North Carolina non-claim statute barred any claims filed more than six months after final creditor's notice, though sounding in fraud. Liner v. DiCresce, 905 F. Supp. 280 (M.D.N.C. 1994).

§ 28A-14-1.1. Validation of certain notices.

(a) Any notice to creditors published or posted under G.S. 28A-14-1 which did not, in the advertisement, name the day after which claims could not be presented is validated.

(b) This section applies to all notices published and posted between October 1, 1975, and January 1, 1991, except that it does not affect any pending litigation or any litigation instituted within 90 days of January 1, 1991. (1981, c. 96, ss. 1, 2; 1987, c. 277, s. 8; 1989, c. 390, s. 8; 1991, c. 489, s. 8.)

§ 28A-14-2. Proof of notice.

A copy of the notice directed by G.S. 28A-14-1(a) to be posted or published, together with an affidavit or affidavits of one of the persons authorized by G.S. 1-600(a) to make affidavits to the effect that such notice was posted or published in accordance with G.S. 28A-14-1(a), and an affidavit of the personal representative or collector, or the attorney for the personal representative or collector, to the effect that a copy of the notice was personally delivered or mailed to each creditor entitled to notice in accordance with G.S. 28A-14-1(b) shall be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court by the personal representative or collector at the time the inventory required by G.S. 28A-20-1 is filed. The copy of the notice, together with the affidavit or affidavits, shall be deemed a record of the court and a copy thereof, duly certified by the clerk of superior court, shall be received as prima facie evidence of the fact of publication or mailing in all the courts of this State. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 31; Code, s. 1423; Rev., s. 40; C.S., s. 46; 1951, c. 1005, s. 3; 1961, c. 26, s. 2; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1077, s. 2; 1989, c. 378, s. 2.)

Necessity of Proof. — When an administrator pleads to a bill the provision of law which prescribes the time of bringing suits against him, he is bound to show by proof that he advertised as required by the statute. Gilliam v. Willey, 54 N.C. 128 (1853), decided under prior law; Anderson v. Gooding, 300 N.C. 170, 265 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

§ 28A-14-3. Personal notice to creditor.

The personal representative or collector may cause the notice to be personally served on any creditor. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 32; Code, s. 1424; 1885, c. 96; Rev., s. 41; C.S., s. 47; 1961, c. 741, s. 2; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 446, s. 1; c. 798; 1979, c. 509, s. 2.)

Assets; Discovery of Assets.

§ 28A-15-1. Assets of the estate generally.

(a) All of the real and personal property, both legal and equitable, of a decedent shall be assets available for the discharge of debts and other claims against his estate in the absence of a statute expressly excluding any such property. Provided that before real property is selected the personal representative must determine that such selection is in the best interest of the administration of the estate.

(b) In determining what property of the estate shall be sold, leased, pledged, mortgaged or exchanged for the payment of the debts of the decedent and other claims against his estate, the personal representative shall select the assets which in his judgment are calculated to promote the best interests of the estate. In the selection of assets for this purpose, there shall be no necessary distinction between real and personal property, absent any contrary provision in the will.

(c) If it shall be determined by the personal representative that it is in the best interest of the administration of the estate to sell, lease, or mortgage any real estate or interest therein to obtain money for the payment of debts and other claims against the decedent's estate, the personal representative shall institute a special proceeding before the clerk of superior court for such purpose pursuant to Article 17 of this Chapter, except that no such proceeding shall be required for a sale made pursuant to authority given by will. A general provision granting authority to the personal representative to sell the testator's real property, or incorporation by reference of the provisions of G.S. 32-27(2) shall be sufficient to eliminate the necessity for a proceeding under Article 17. If a special proceeding has been instituted by the personal representative pursuant to G.S. 28A-13-3(c), the personal representative may petition for sale, lease, or mortgage of any real property as a part of that proceeding and is not required to institute a separate special proceeding.

(d) The crops of every deceased person, remaining ungathered at his death, shall, in all cases, belong to the personal representative or collector, as part of the personal assets of the decedent's estate; and shall not pass to the devisee by virtue of any devise of the land, unless such intent be manifest and specified in the will. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 14, 15; Code, ss. 1406, 1407; Rev., ss. 45, 47; C.S., ss. 52, 54; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 5; 1985, c. 426; 2001-413, s. 2.1; 2002-159, s. 9.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2002-180, s. 18.1, provides: "The General Statutes Commission is directed to study and report to the 2003 General Assembly on the question of the personal representative's authority to take possession of and dispose of real property of an estate without an order of the court. The study shall include the issues included in the provisions of House Bill 716, Second Edition, of the 2001 General Assembly, and an examination of the application of G.S. 28A-15-1, 28A-15-2, and 32-27(2). The report shall include any recommended legislation necessary to implement the Commission's recommendations."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2002-159, s. 9, effective October 11, 2002, substituted "sale, lease, or mortgage" for "possession, custody or control" in the last sentence of subsection (c).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

All the chattels of an intestate are assets, if the administrator by reasonable diligence might have possessed himself of them. Gray v. Swain, 9 N.C. 15 (1822).

Lands as Assets. — Land is not an asset until it is sold and the proceeds received by the personal representative. Fike v. Green, 64 N.C. 665 (1870); Edenton v. Wool, 65 N.C. 379 (1871); Hawkins v. Carpenter, 88 N.C. 403 (1883); Wilson v. Bynum, 92 N.C. 717 (1885).

Automobile Liability Policies as Assets. — Automobile liability policies are not expressly excluded by any statute from being included as an asset in an estate; they are therefore resources available for the satisfaction of claims against the estate arising from decedent's ownership and operation of an automobile while he was alive. Carethers v. Blair, 53 N.C. App. 233, 280 S.E.2d 467 (1981).

The direction from the testator that certain property in the estate not be applied to payment of estate liabilities cannot operate to prevent payment of debts, taxes and costs of administration which are justly owed. Combs v. Eller, 30 N.C. App. 30, 226 S.E.2d 197 (1976).

In the determination of whether a deed of trust conveyed by the executor is a debt of the estate, the burden is on the party asserting the validity of the debt as an obligation of the estate to show that the executor acted within his authority as executor. Hunter v. Newsom, 121 N.C. App. 564, 468 S.E.2d 802 (1996).

Rents Liable for Debts. — The rents on devised land may be subjected by the personal representative to the payment of the debts of deceased. Shell v. West, 130 N.C. 171, 41 S.E. 65 (1902).

Rent Accruing Before and After Death. — Rent due for the occupation of an equitable estate in land, in the lifetime of the cestui que trust, goes to his personal representative, that accruing after his death goes to his heirs. Fleming v. Chunn, 57 N.C. 422 (1859); Rogers v. McKenzie, 65 N.C. 218 (1871).

Warrant for Pension Is Not Asset. — A warrant for a pension issued after the death of the pensioner does not become a part of his assets, but must be returned to the State for cancellation. In re Smith, 130 N.C. 638, 41 S.E. 802 (1902).

Nor Is Recovery for Death by Wrongful Act. — The right to recover damages for wrongful death rests entirely on statute, and when a recovery is had therefor it is not a part of the personal assets of the deceased. Hood v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 162 N.C. 92, 77 S.E. 1094 (1913).

Damages for wrongful death when recovered are not assets of the estate available to creditors. Hines v. Foundation Co., 196 N.C. 322, 145 S.E. 612 (1928).

Ownership of Note upon Death of Joint Payee. — Promissory note payable only to testator and his wife did not become part of testator's estate but became the sole property of testator's wife upon his death; therefore, son would not inherit. Miller v. Miller, 117 N.C. App. 71, 450 S.E.2d 15 (1994).

Homestead Exemptions. — The personal exemptions in N.C. Const., Art. X exist only during the life of the "homesteader," and after his death pass to his personal representative, to be disposed of in due course of administration. Johnson v. Cross, 66 N.C. 167 (1872).

The principle of subsection (d) is declaratory of the common law. See Flynt v. Conrad, 61 N.C. 190 (1867).

Subsection (d) does not control the title to crops not planted at the time of the death of the testator or devisor. Manifestly, in the forum of common sense, a crop could not be a crop until the seeds were in the soil. The statute uses the expression, "crops . . . remaining ungathered at his death," etc. An ungathered crop is certainly not an unplanted crop. Carr v. Carr, 208 N.C. 246, 180 S.E. 82 (1935).

Upon the death of a cropper his personal representative is entitled to his share of the crop. Parker v. Brown, 136 N.C. 280, 48 S.E. 657 (1904). See Thomas v. Lines, 83 N.C. 191 (1880).

§ 28A-15-2. Title and possession of property.

(a) Personal Property. — Subsequent to the death of the decedent and prior to the appointment and qualification of the personal representative or collector, the title and the right of possession of personal property of the decedent is vested in his heirs; but upon the appointment and qualification of the personal representative or collector, the heirs shall be divested of such title and right of possession which shall be vested in the personal representative or collector relating back to the time of the decedent's death for purposes of administering the estate of the decedent. But, if in the opinion of the personal representative, his possession, custody and control of any item of personal property is not necessary for purposes of administration, such possession, custody and control may be left with or surrendered to the heir or devisee presumptively entitled thereto.

(b) Real Property. — The title to real property of a decedent is vested in his heirs as of the time of his death; but the title to real property of a decedent devised under a valid probated will becomes vested in the devisees and shall relate back to the decedent's death, subject to the provisions of G.S. 31-39. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2002-180, s. 18.1, provides: "The General Statutes Commission is directed to study and report to the 2003 General Assembly on the question of the personal representative's authority to take possession of and dispose of real property of an estate without an order of the court. The study shall include the issues included in the provisions of House Bill 716, Second Edition, of the 2001 General Assembly, and an examination of the application of G.S. 28A-15-1, 28A-15-2, and 32-27(2). The report shall include any recommended legislation necessary to implement the Commission's recommendations."

CASE NOTES

Vesting of Real Property in Heirs. — When a property owner dies intestate, the title to his real property vests immediately in his heirs. The decedent's personal representative has the power, upon petition to the clerk of superior court, to sell decedent's real property for payments of debts and other claims against the decedent's estate, but the proceeding is an adversary one, requiring that the heirs be made parties. If an heir is not joined, the order of sale is void as to him. Swindell v. Lewis, 82 N.C. App. 423, 346 S.E.2d 237 (1986).

Heirs of wife's deceased husband were necessary parties to equitable distribution action in which husband's administrator had been substituted as defendant, and they were properly added as parties defendant. Swindell v. Lewis, 82 N.C. App. 423, 346 S.E.2d 237 (1986).

Sale of Land under Discretionary Sale Clause in Will Is Invalid. — Since land is not a part of the estate, a sale by the executors for the reason that it would facilitate the settlement of the special proceeding for partition was not a valid exercise of a power of sale under a will, giving them power to sell such property of the testator as they in their discretion may determine proper. James v. James, 58 N.C. App. 371, 293 S.E.2d 655, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 742, 295 S.E.2d 759 (1982).

§ 28A-15-3. Nonexoneration of encumbered property.

When real or personal property subject to any lien or security interest, except judgment liens, is specifically devised, the devisee takes the property subject to the encumbrance and without a right to have other assets of the decedent applied to discharge the secured obligation, unless an express provision of the will confers such right of exoneration. A general testamentary direction to pay the debts of the decedent is not sufficient to confer such right. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on installment land contracts in North Carolina, see 3 Campbell L. Rev. 29 (1981).

§ 28A-15-4. Encumbered assets.

When any assets of the estate are encumbered by mortgage, pledge, lien or other security interest, the personal representative may pay the encumbrance or any part thereof, renew or extend any obligation secured by the encumbrance, or convey or transfer the encumbered assets to the creditor in satisfaction of his lien, in whole or in part, whether or not the holder of the encumbrance has filed a claim, if it appears to be for the best interest of the estate; provided that payment of an encumbrance shall not increase the share of the distributee entitled to the encumbered assets unless the distributee is entitled to exoneration by express provisions of the will. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-15-5. Order in which assets appropriated; abatement.

(a) General Rules. — In the absence of testamentary indication as to the order of abatement, or some other controlling statute, shares of devisees and of heirs abate, without any preference or priority as between real and personal property, in the following order:

- (1) Property not disposed of by the will;
- (2) Residuary devisees;
- (3) General devisees;
- (4) Specific devisees.

For purposes of abatement, a demonstrative devise of money or property payable out of or charged on a particular fund or other property is treated as a specific devise; but if the particular fund or property out of which the demonstrative devise is to be paid is nonexistent or insufficient at the death of the testator, the deficiency is to be payable out of the general estate of the decedent and is to be regarded as a general devise and must abate pro rata with other general devisees. Abatement within each classification is in proportion to the amounts of property each of the beneficiaries would have received, had full distribution of the property been made in accordance with the terms of the will.

(b) Abatement; Sales; Contribution. — When property which has been specifically devised is sold, leased, or mortgaged, or a security therein is created, by the personal representative, abatement shall be achieved by ratable adjustments in, or contributions from other interest in the remaining assets. The clerk of superior court shall, at the time of the hearing on the petition for final distribution, determine the amounts of the respective contributions and whether the same shall be made before distribution or shall constitute a lien on specific property which is distributed. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Bequest Not Adeemed by Sale During Testator's Incompetency. — Where the trial court found that testator specifically bequeathed his interest in livestock to his daughter, and subsequently became incompetent and did not regain his competency at any time before his death, and where his interest in livestock was sold by his trustees for $22,543.48, and those funds were included in the assets coming into the hands of the executor, and moreover, where there were sufficient assets in the estate to satisfy all of its obligations as well as all general, specific and demonstrative devises without any abatement of those devises, these findings were sufficient to support the court's conclusion that testator's specific testamentary gift of his interest in livestock to his daughter was not adeemed by the trustee's sale thereof during testator's incompetency before his death. In re Estate of Warren, 81 N.C. App. 634, 344 S.E.2d 795 (1986).

§ 28A-15-6. Federal income tax refunds — joint returns.

Upon the determination by the United States Treasury Department of an overpayment of income tax by a married couple filing a joint federal income tax return, one of whom has died since the filing of such return or where a joint federal income tax return is filed on behalf of a husband and wife, one of whom has died prior to the filing of the return, any refund of the tax by reason of such overpayment, if not in excess of five hundred dollars ($500.00), shall be the sole and separate property of the surviving spouse. In the event that both spouses are dead at the time such overpayment is determined, such refund, if not in excess of five hundred dollars ($500.00), shall be the sole and separate property of the estate of the spouse who died last and may be paid directly by the Treasury Department to the executor or administrator of such estate, or to the person entitled to the possession of the assets of a small estate pursuant to the provisions of Article 25 of this Chapter. (1955, c. 720; 1957, c. 986; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in Brantley v. Watson, 115 N.C. App. 393, 445 S.E.2d 53 (1994).

§ 28A-15-7. Federal income tax refunds — separate returns.

Upon the determination by the United States Treasury Department of an overpayment of income tax by any married person filing a separate return, any refund of the tax by reason of such overpayment, if not in excess of two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00), exclusive of interest, shall be the sole and separate property of the surviving spouse, and the United States Treasury Department may pay said sum directly to such surviving spouse, and such payment to the extent thereof shall operate as a complete acquittal and discharge of the United States Treasury Department. (1961, c. 643; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-15-8. State income tax returns.

Upon the determination by the Secretary of Revenue of North Carolina of an overpayment of income tax by any married person, any refund of the tax by reason of such overpayment, if not in excess of two hundred dollars ($200.00)

exclusive of interest, shall be the sole and separate property of the surviving spouse, and said Secretary of Revenue may pay said sum directly to such surviving spouse, and such payment to the extent thereof shall operate as a complete acquittal and discharge of the Secretary of Revenue. (1961, c. 735; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-15-9. Excess funds.

If the amount of any refund exceeds the sums specified in G.S. 28A-15-6, 28A-15-7 or 28A-15-8, the sums specified therein and one half of any additional sums shall be the sole and separate property of the surviving spouse. The remaining one half of such additional sums shall be the property of the estate of the decedent spouse. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-15-9.1. Phase II payments.

A Phase II payment as defined in G.S. 28A-21-3.1 shall be the property of the distributees paid in accordance with that section. (2003-295, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2003-295, s. 3, made this section effective July 4, 2003 and applicable to payments made on or after that date.

§ 28A-15-10. Assets of decedent's estate for limited purposes.

(a) When needed to satisfy claims against a decedent's estate, assets may be acquired by a personal representative or collector from the following sources:

- (1) Tentative trusts created by the decedent in savings accounts for other persons;
- (2) Gifts causa mortis made by the decedent;
- (3) Joint deposit accounts with right of survivorship created by decedent pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 41-2.1 or otherwise; and joint tenancies with right of survivorship created by decedent in corporate stocks or other investment securities.

Such assets shall be acquired solely for the purpose of satisfying such claims, however, and shall not be available for distribution to heirs or devisees.

(b) Where there are not sufficient personal and real assets of the decedent to satisfy all the debts and other claims against his estate, the personal representative shall have the right to sue for and recover any and all personal property or real property, or interest therein, which the decedent may in any manner have transferred or conveyed with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, and any personal property or real property, or interest therein, so recovered shall constitute assets of the estate in the hands of the personal representative for the payment of debts and other claims against the estate of the decedent. But if the alienee has sold the personal property or real property, or interest therein, so fraudulently acquired by him from the decedent to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the fraud, then such personal property or real property, or interest therein, may not be recovered from such bona fide purchaser but the fraudulent alienee shall be liable to the personal representative for the value of the personal property or real property, or interest therein, so acquired and disposed of to a bona fide purchaser. If the whole recovery from the fraudulent alienee shall not be necessary for the payment of the debts and other claims against the estate of the decedent, the surplus shall be returned to such fraudulent alienee or his assigns.

(c) Where there has been a recovery in an action for wrongful death, the same shall not be applied to the payment of debts and other claims against the estate of decedent or devisees, except as to the payment of reasonable burial and funeral expenses and reasonable hospital and medical expenses incident to the injury resulting in death and as limited and provided in G.S. 28-18-2 [G.S. 28A-18-2]. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to real property recovered from fraudulent alienee being subject to sale, see G.S. 28A-17-5.

CASE NOTES

Wrongful Death Proceeds. — Although the trial court found that decedent's wrongful death proceeds were not assets of the estate, the clerk retained authority to oversee the distribution of the proceeds as a result of its power to order an accounting of estate assets, to remove the defendant as the estate's personal representative, to impose sanctions against her based upon alleged misconduct concerning the proceeds, and to order the proceeds submitted to the clerk or public administrator; although wrongful death actions may not yield assets for the estate, a personal representative's authority to commence and settle these actions is "incident to the collection, preservation, liquidation [and] distribution of a decedent's estate." In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

§ 28A-15-11. Debt due from personal representative not discharged by appointment.

The appointment of any person as personal representative does not discharge any debt or demand due from such person to the decedent. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 40; Code, s. 1431; Rev., s. 51; C.S., s. 58; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Section Applies to Executor Whether He Acts or Not. — This section applies to an executor who acts as well as to one who does not act under the appointment. Moore v. Miller, 62 N.C. 359 (1868), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-15-12. Examination of persons or corporations believed to have possession of property of decedent.

(a) Whenever a personal representative or collector makes oath or affirmation before the clerk of superior court of the county where the party to be examined resides or does business that he has reasonable ground to believe, setting forth the grounds of his belief, that any person, firm or corporation has in his or its possession any property of any kind belonging to the estate of his decedent, the clerk shall issue a notice to be served upon the person or any member of the firm or officer, agent or employee of the firm or corporation designated in the affidavit, to appear before the clerk at his office at a time fixed in the notice, not less than three days after the issuance of the notice, and be examined under oath by the personal representative or collector or his attorney concerning the possession of such property. If upon examination the clerk of superior court finds that the person examined or the firm or corporation for which he works has in his or its possession any property belonging solely to the decedent, and fails to show any satisfactory reason for retaining possession of the property, the clerk shall issue an order requiring the person, firm or corporation forthwith to deliver the property to said personal representative or collector and may enforce compliance with the order by proceedings as for contempt of court: Provided, that in the case of a firm or corporation, whenever any person other than a partner or executive officer of such firm or corporation is examined, no such order shall be made until at least three days after service of notice upon a partner or executive officer of such firm or corporation to show cause why such order should not be made.

(b) Any person aggrieved by the order of the clerk of superior court may, within five days, appeal to the judge holding the next session of superior court of the county after the order is made or to the resident judge of the district, but as a condition precedent to his appeal he shall give a justified bond in a sum at least double the value of the property in question, conditioned upon the safe delivery of the property and the payment of damages for its detention, to the personal representative or collector in the event that the order of the clerk should be finally sustained. When the bond is executed and delivered to the court, no attachment as for contempt shall be served upon the appealing party and any contempt order theretofore issued shall be stayed; but if the appellant fails to have his appeal heard at the next session of superior court held in his county, or by the resident judge of the district within 30 days after giving notice, the appeal shall be deemed abandoned, and the stay of any contempt order theretofore issued shall terminate.

(c) The party against whom the final judgment is rendered shall be adjudged to pay the costs of the proceedings hereunder.

(d) The remedies provided in this section shall not be exclusive, but shall be in addition to any remedies which are now or may hereafter be provided. (1937, c. 209, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-15-13. Opening and inventory of decedent's safe-deposit box.

(a) Definitions. — The following definitions apply to this section:

(1) Institution. — Any entity or person having supervision or possession of a safe-deposit box to which a decedent had access.

- (1a) Deputy. — A person appointed in writing by a lessee or cotenant of a safe-deposit box as having right of access to the safe-deposit box without further authority or permission of the lessee or cotenant, in a manner and form designated by the institution.
- (2) Letter of authority. — Letters of administration, letters testamentary, an affidavit of collection of personal property, an order of summary administration, or a letter directed to the institution designating a person entitled to receive the contents of a safe-deposit box to which the decedent had access. The letter of authority must be signed by the clerk of superior court or by the clerk's representative.
- (3) Qualified person. — A person possessing a letter of authority or a person named as a deputy, lessee or cotenant of the safe-deposit box to which the decedent had access.
- (b) Presence of Clerk Required. — Any safe-deposit box to which a decedent had access shall be sealed by the institution having supervision or possession of the box. Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, the presence of the clerk of superior court of the county where the safe-deposit box is located or the presence of the clerk's representative is required before the box may be opened. The clerk or the clerk's representative shall open the safe-deposit box in the presence of the person possessing a key to the box and a representative of the institution having supervision or possession of the box. The clerk shall make an inventory of the contents of the box and furnish a copy to the institution and to the person possessing a key to the box.
- (c) Presence of Clerk Not Required. — The presence of the clerk of superior court or the clerk's representative is not required when the person requesting the opening of the decedent's safe-deposit box is a qualified person. In that event, the qualified person shall make an inventory of the contents of the box and furnish a copy to the institution and to the person possessing a key to the box if that person is someone other than the qualified person.
- (d) Testamentary Instrument in Box. — If the safe-deposit box contains any writing that appears to be a will, codicil, or any other instrument of a testamentary nature, then the clerk of superior court or the qualified person shall file the instrument in the office of the clerk of superior court.
- (e) Release of Contents. — Except as provided in subsection (d) for testamentary instruments, the institution shall not release any contents of the safe-deposit box to anyone other than a qualified person.
- (f) No Tax Waiver Required. — No tax waiver is required for the release of the contents of the decedent's safe-deposit box. (1998-212, s. 16.14(a); 2003-255, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2003-255, s. 1, effective June 26, 2003, inserted subdivision (a)(1a); and in subdivision (a)(3), inserted “deputy” following “person named as a.”

Sales or Leases of Personal Property.

§ 28A-16-1. Sales or leases without court order.

(a) A personal representative has the power to sell, at either a public or private sale, or to lease, personal property of the decedent without a court order.

(b) A personal representative who sells or leases personal property of the decedent without a court order is not required to file a special report or have the transaction confirmed by the clerk of superior court, or to follow any of the procedure set forth in Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes, entitled "Judicial Sales," but shall include in his next account, either annual or final, a record of the receipts and disbursements incident to the transaction. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 16; Code, s. 1408; Rev., s. 62; C.S., s. 66; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Purchaser Not Responsible for Application of Proceeds. — A purchaser of personalty from a personal representative does not, by virtue of the latter's absolute power to dispose of the personalty, have to see to the proper application of the purchase price. This is so although decedent has created a particular separate fund for the payment of his debts. But if the purchase be tainted with collusion, the purchaser will be held responsible for the proper application of the proceeds. Tyrrell v. Morris, 21 N.C. 559 (1837); Gray v. Armistead, 41 N.C. 74 (1849); Bradshaw v. Simpson, 41 N.C. 243 (1849); Cox v. First Nat'l Bank, 119 N.C. 302, 26 S.E. 22 (1896).

Where he receives the property in payment of the fiduciary's personal debt, the transaction is presumptively mala fide. Latham v. Moore, 59 N.C. 167 (1860).

§ 28A-16-2. Sales or leases by court order.

(a) All sales or leases of personal property of the decedent by a collector shall be made only upon order obtained, by motion, from the clerk of superior court.

(b) A personal representative may, if he so desires, request the clerk of superior court to issue to him an order to sell or lease personal property of the decedent.

(c) Sales or leases of personal property of the decedent held pursuant to court order shall be conducted as provided in Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes, entitled "Judicial Sales."

(d) A personal representative may, for his own benefit, purchase or lease personal property belonging to the decedent at a public sale conducted under an order of the clerk of superior court, if the transaction is reported to the clerk of superior court and confirmed by him. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 17; Code, s. 1409; Rev., s. 61; C.S., s. 67; 1949, c. 719, s. 2; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-16-3. Sales of household furnishings.

If the decedent is survived by a spouse, no sale or lease shall be made of the household furnishings in the usual dwelling house occupied by the surviving spouse at the time of the death of the deceased spouse, if such dwelling house was owned by the deceased spouse at the time of his or her death, until the expiration of the time limits set forth in G.S. 29-30(c) for the filing by the surviving spouse of an election in regard to the property of the decedent. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Sales, Leases or Mortgages of Real Property.

§ 28A-17-1. Sales of real property.

Pursuant to authority contained in G.S. 28A-15-1 the personal representative may, at any time, apply to the clerk of superior court of the county where the decedent's real property or some part thereof is situated, by petition, to sell such real property for the payment of debts and other claims against the decedent's estate. CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Proceeding to sell land under this section is a special proceeding before the clerk, who has original and exclusive jurisdiction of the matter. Baker v. Carter, 127 N.C. 92, 37 S.E. 81 (1900); Holcomb v. Hemric, 56 N.C. App. 688, 289 S.E.2d 620 (1982).

Unless Matter Involves Equities Over Which Superior Court Has Jurisdiction. — If equities are involved in the case upon which the superior court acquires jurisdiction of a part, it will determine the whole matter. Baker v. Carter, 127 N.C. 92, 37 S.E. 81 (1900); Holcomb v. Hemric, 56 N.C. App. 688, 289 S.E.2d 620 (1982).

Bill by United States to Subject Land to Payment of Judgment. — The federal district court had jurisdiction of a bill in equity by the United States to subject to payment of a judgment land situated in this State which had descended to the heirs of the judgment debtor, there being no personal assets. United States v. Minor, 254 F. 57 (4th Cir. 1918).

Presumption of Regularity. — The regularity of the proceedings under this section will be presumed. Wadford v. Davis, 192 N.C. 484, 135 S.E. 353 (1926).

Vesting of Real Property in Heirs. — When a property owner dies intestate, the title to his real property vests immediately in his heirs. The decedent's personal representative has the power, upon petition to the clerk of superior court, to sell decedent's real property for payments of debts and other claims against the decedent's estate, but the proceeding is an adversary one, requiring that the heirs be made parties. If an heir is not joined, the order of sale is void as to him. Swindell v. Lewis, 82 N.C. App. 423, 346 S.E.2d 237 (1986).

Who May Sell. — The personal representative is the proper party to sell the homestead of deceased for distribution. Tarboro v. Pender, 153 N.C. 427, 69 S.E. 425 (1910).

Nature of Representative's Authority. — The authority of the representative under this section is a naked power without title or interest in the estate. He is a mere agent of the court. Floyd v. Herrington, 64 N.C. 409 (1870).

Representative Could Be Compelled to Sell under Former Statute. — See Pelletier v. Saunders, 67 N.C. 261 (1872); Wilson v. Bynum, 92 N.C. 717 (1885); Clement v. Cozart, 109 N.C. 173, 13 S.E. 862 (1891); Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896); Yarborough v. Moore, 151 N.C. 116, 65 S.E. 763 (1909); Hobbs v. Cashwell, 152 N.C. 183, 67 S.E. 495 (1910); Flynn v. Rumley, 212 N.C. 25, 192 S.E. 868 (1937).

Amount of Realty Which May Be Sold. — This section authorizing the sale of the lands of a decedent is in derogation of the common law, and hence the courts will not deny to an administrator the discretion of selling less land than is ordered to be sold, if necessity should not arise for such sale; and, conversely, the administrator will be allowed to continue to sell lands embraced in the license so long as the necessity to raise assets exists. Sledge v. Elliott, 116 N.C. 712, 21 S.E. 797 (1895).

"At Any Time." — The phrase "at any time," which appeared in the first sentence of a former statute, presupposed an application without undue delay. Pelletier v. Saunders, 67 N.C. 261 (1872); Clement v. Cozart, 109 N.C. 173, 13 S.E. 862 (1891); Creech v. Wilder, 212 N.C. 162, 193 S.E. 281 (1937).

If personalty has been wasted by the representative, his successor must first resort to his bond before proceeding against the lands. Lilly v. Wooley, 94 N.C. 412 (1886); Clement v. Cozart, 107 N.C. 695, 12 S.E. 254 (1890).

But this does not apply where representative is insolvent, his bond lost, and sureties unknown. Brittain v. Dickson, 104 N.C. 547, 10 S.E. 701 (1889).

Lands Not Assets Until Sold. — Lands are not assets for the payment of the debts until they are sold and the proceeds received by the administrator. Wilson v. Bynum, 92 N.C. 717 (1885).

The heirs should be given the opportunity to resist and prevent the land from being applied to the payment of a debt which they allege was wrongfully obtained. Holcomb v. Hemric, 56 N.C. App. 688, 289 S.E.2d 620 (1982).

Claimant of Sole Seizin May Have Claim Adjudicated and Pay Debts to Prevent Sale. — While under this section an administrator is entitled to sell lands of the deceased to make assets to pay debts of the estate, when a person claims sole seizin under a contract to devise as against the heirs of intestate, such person is entitled to adjudication of her claim of sole seizin before a sale of the property to make assets is ordered, since she may elect to discharge the debts of the estate and the costs of administration to prevent a sale of the lands. Chambers v. Byers, 214 N.C. 373, 199 S.E. 398 (1938).

Creditor Attacking Debt as Fraudulent. — A judgment creditor of a devisee desiring to attack a debt set forth in the petition to sell land as being fraudulent must do so in the same proceedings, and not by independent action. Wadford v. Davis, 192 N.C. 484, 135 S.E. 353 (1926).

Homestead of a minor child of a testator cannot be sold during the minority of such child. Bruton v. McRea, 125 N.C. 206, 34 S.E. 397 (1899). See Hinsdale v. Williams, 75 N.C. 430 (1876).

Child who was made a party must have claimed homestead rights, otherwise he cannot subsequently claim as against the purchaser of the land. Dickens v. Long, 112 N.C. 311, 17 S.E. 150 (1893).

Allotment of Dower in Lands in Another County Invalid. — Deceased died seized of lands lying in two counties, and an administrator, appointed in the county of his residence, instituted proceedings in the other county to sell lands to make assets. The widow appeared therein asking that the lands be sold subject to dower and averring that she would later institute proceedings for the allotment of dower. Upon order of the clerk that the widow's dower be allotted and that the remaining lands be sold to make assets, a sheriff and jury from that county went into the county of deceased's residence and allotted dower by metes and bounds. It was held that the allotment was invalid, that the clerk of the other county was without authority to enter the order for the allotment of dower notwithstanding he had jurisdiction of the proceedings to sell lands to make assets, and might have ordered the lands sold subject to dower, and that the only provisions of this section giving the clerk jurisdiction in regard to dower in lands outside his county was where the widow consents that the lands be sold clear of dower and that a certain part of the proceeds of sale be set apart to her in commutation of dower. High v. Pearce, 220 N.C. 266, 17 S.E.2d 108 (1941).

Converting into Creditor's Suit. — When proceedings for the sale of land are instituted under this section by the representative, they cannot be converted into a creditor's suit. Brittain v. Dickson, 111 N.C. 529, 16 S.E. 326 (1892).

Effect of Judgment Quando. — See Wilson v. Bynum, 92 N.C. 717 (1885).

Cited in Montgomery v. Hinton, 45 N.C. App. 271, 262 S.E.2d 697 (1980); State v. Linney, 138 N.C. App. 169, 531 S.E.2d 245, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 538 (2000).

II. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Proper Parties. — In proceedings to sell land, heirs and devisees are necessary parties. Person v. Montgomery, 120 N.C. 111, 26 S.E. 645 (1897).

Sale Though Parties Not in Esse. — The application for sale may be made notwithstanding the existence of devisees to parties not in esse. Carraway v. Lassiter, 139 N.C. 145, 51 S.E. 968 (1905).

Heirs of wife's deceased husband were necessary parties to equitable distribution action in which husband's administrator had been substituted as defendant, and they were properly added as parties defendant. Swindell v. Lewis, 82 N.C. App. 423, 346 S.E.2d 237 (1986).

Notice to Creditors Unnecessary. — No notice to creditors is required to be given under this section. Thompson v. Cox, 53 N.C. 311 (1860).

Venue. — The proper venue to make the application provided by this section is in the county where the land or some part thereof is situated. Ellis v. Adderton, 88 N.C. 472 (1883).

It is in the county where the land or some part thereof lies, and not in the county where the decedent was domiciled and administration granted, that the application for sale must be filed, though formerly it could be filed in the county last referred to. Ellis v. Adderton, 88 N.C. 472 (1883).

Removal to Proper County. — A petition filed in the wrong county may, upon application, be removed to the proper county. See Falls of Neuse Mfg. Co. v. Brower, 105 N.C. 440, 11 S.E. 313 (1890).

Statute of Limitations Does Not Bar Right or Duty to Sell Realty. — As long as the estate remained unsettled, and real property of the decedent remained subject to sale, the administrator could unquestionably proceed by proper petition in the original proceeding to have the real property sold for the payment of outstanding debts and for the final settlement of the estate. No statute of limitations barred that right or the performance of that duty. Rocky Mount Sav. & Trust Co. v. McDearman, 213 N.C. 141, 195 S.E. 531 (1938).

As long as the estate remains unsettled, no statute of limitations bars the right and duty of the personal representative to sell lands to make assets to pay the debts of the estate. Gibbs v. Smith, 218 N.C. 382, 11 S.E.2d 140 (1940).

But a representative cannot sell land to pay debts barred. Robinson v. McDowell, 133 N.C. 182, 45 S.E. 545 (1903).

And heirs or devisees may plead statute of limitations or any other defense to an application for license to sell for payment of debts on which no judgment is obtained. Bever v. Park, 88 N.C. 456 (1883); Syme v. Riddle, 88 N.C. 463 (1883); Speer v. James, 94 N.C. 417 (1886); Proctor v. Proctor, 105 N.C. 222, 10 S.E. 1036 (1890); Person v. Montgomery, 120 N.C. 111, 26 S.E. 645 (1897).

Unless Judgment Has Been Obtained. —

If a judgment has been previously obtained for the debt the heirs or devisees are concluded thereby (except where fraud and collusion can be shown) and they cannot now plead any defense which could have been, but was not, pleaded by the representative. Long v. Oxford, 108 N.C. 280, 13 S.E. 112 (1891). See also Smith v. Brown, 101 N.C. 347, 7 S.E. 890 (1888); Brittain v. Dickson, 104 N.C. 547, 10 S.E. 701 (1889); Proctor v. Proctor, 105 N.C. 222, 10 S.E. 1036 (1890); Lassiter v. Upchurch, 107 N.C. 411, 12 S.E. 63 (1890); Woodlief v. Bragg, 108 N.C. 571, 13 S.E. 211 (1891). But see Tilley v. Bivins, 112 N.C. 348, 16 S.E. 759 (1893); Person v. Montgomery, 120 N.C. 111, 26 S.E. 645 (1897).

§ 28A-17-2. Contents of petition for sale.

The petition to sell real property shall include:

- (1) A description of the real property and interest therein sought to be sold;
- (2) The names, ages and addresses, if known, of the devisees and heirs of the decedent;
- (3) A statement that the personal representative has determined that it is in the best interest of the administration of the estate to sell the real property sought to be sold. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 43; Code, s. 1437; Rev., s. 77; C.S., s. 79; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-17-3. Petition for partition.

When it is alleged that the real property of the decedent sought to be sold consists in whole or in part of an undivided interest in real property, the personal representative of the decedent may include, in the petition to sell the real property for the payment of debts and other claims against the decedent's estate, a request for partition of the lands sought to be sold. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 42; Code, s. 1436; Rev., s. 68; C.S., s. 74; 1923, c. 55; 1935, s. 43; 1937, c. 70; 1943, c. 637; 1949, c. 719, s. 2; 1955, c. 302, s. 1; 1959, c. 879, s. 7; 1963, c. 291, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-17-4. Heirs and devisees necessary parties.

No order to sell real property shall be granted until the heirs and devisees of the decedent have been made parties to the proceeding by service of summons in the manner required by law. Upon such service, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for heirs and devisees who are unknown or whose addresses are unknown, and summons shall issue to him as such. The guardian ad litem shall file answer for such heirs and devisees and defend for them, and he shall be paid such sum as the court may fix, to be paid as costs of the proceeding. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 44; Code, s. 1438; Rev., s. 74; C.S., s. 80; Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 3, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 7.)

Cross References. — As to parties, see G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Vesting of Real Property in Heirs. — When a property owner dies intestate, the title to his real property vests immediately in his heirs. The decedent's personal representative has the power, upon petition to the clerk of superior court, to sell decedent's real property for payments of debts and other claims against the decedent's estate, but the proceeding is an adversary one, requiring that the heirs be made parties. If an heir is not joined, the order of sale is void as to him. Swindell v. Lewis, 82 N.C. App. 423, 346 S.E.2d 237 (1986).

Heirs at law of intestate are necessary parties to an action by an administrator to subject an interest in lands of his intestate to the payment of debts of the estate. In re Daniel's Estate, 225 N.C. 18, 33 S.E.2d 126 (1945).

Section Applies to Infants. — This section applies to making heirs and devisees parties, whether infants or adults. Perry v. Adams, 98 N.C. 167, 3 S.E. 729 (1887); Harrison v.

Harrison, 106 N.C. 282, 11 S.E. 356 (1890).

Heir Not Made Party May Attack Decree. — An heir who was not made a party, or served, may subsequently assail the validity of the decree and proceed against the purchaser. Dickens v. Long, 109 N.C. 165, 13 S.E. 841 (1891). See also Webb v. Atkinson, 122 N.C. 683, 29 S.E. 949 (1898).

As to Such Heir, Decree Is Void. — As to an heir not made a party or served, whether he be an adult or an infant, the decree is absolutely void, not merely voidable, and can be collaterally attacked. Nor would the fact that he had knowledge of the sale and took no steps to prevent it cure the lack of service. Harrison v. Harrison, 106 N.C. 282, 11 S.E. 356 (1890); Card v. Finch, 142 N.C. 140, 54 S.E. 1009 (1906).

Heirs of wife's deceased husband were necessary parties to equitable distribution action in which husband's administrator had been substituted as defendant, and they were properly added as parties defendant. Swindell v. Lewis, 82 N.C. App. 423, 346 S.E.2d 237 (1986).

§ 28A-17-5. Property subject to sale; conveyance by deceased in fraud of creditors.

The real property subject to sale under this Article shall include real property recovered from a fraudulent alienee pursuant to G.S. 28A-15-10(b). (1868-9, c. 113, s. 51; Code, s. 1446; Rev., s. 72; C.S., s. 77; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Salable Interest. — Every interest in real estate, whether legal or equitable, is subject to sale. Waugh v. Blevins, 68 N.C. 167 (1873); Mannix v. Ihrie, 76 N.C. 299 (1877).

Only Debtor's Interest Is Subject to Sale. — Under this section only the interest of the deceased debtor in land which he may have conveyed in fraud of creditors is subject to sale. Heck v. Williams, 79 N.C. 437 (1878); Egerton v. Jones, 107 N.C. 284, 12 S.E. 434 (1890).

Conveyance Must Be by Deceased. — Where A, being in embarrassed circumstances, purchased land from B, and caused B to convey to his (A's) son, it was held that the land could not be sold for the payment of A's debts. Rhem v. Tull, 35 N.C. 57 (1851).

Conveyance Must Be in Fraud of Creditors. — Under this section lands conveyed cannot be sold unless it can be shown that they were conveyed in fraud of creditors. McCaskill v. Graham, 121 N.C. 190, 28 S.E. 264 (1897).

Innocent Purchasers Protected. — Under this section an administrator cannot be compelled to sell property fraudulently conveyed but in the hands of an innocent purchaser. Harrington v. Hatton, 129 N.C. 146, 39 S.E. 780 (1901).

Conveyance to Wife and Children. — Property conveyed by the decedent to his wife and children without consideration in fraud of his creditors while insolvent may be recovered and sold by the administrator on behalf of the creditors. Webb v. Atkinson, 122 N.C. 683, 29 S.E. 949 (1898); Webb v. Atkinson, 124 N.C. 447, 32 S.E. 737 (1899).

Fraudulent Grantee's Rights as Creditor. — Where the wife is the fraudulent grantee and the creditor of her husband, in proceedings to set aside the conveyance to her, she is entitled to her pro rata claim out of the proceeds of the land the same as the other creditors are. Nadal v. Britton, 112 N.C. 180, 16 S.E. 915 (1893).

Burden of proof that the conveyance was fair and for a full consideration was upon the grantees, where the decedent, while insolvent, had conveyed real property to his wife and children. Webb v. Atkinson, 122 N.C. 683, 29 S.E. 949 (1898).

§ 28A-17-6. Adverse claimant to be heard; procedure.

When the real property sought to be sold, or any interest therein, is claimed by another person, such claimant may be made a party to the proceeding, and in any event may become a party upon his own motion. When an issue of law or fact is joined between the parties, the procedure shall be as prescribed for other special proceedings. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 46, 47; Code, ss. 1440, 1441; Rev., ss. 76, 78; C.S., ss. 81, 82; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Right to Be Heard as Party. — Any person who claims to be the owner of the land has the right to be made a party and to have an inquiry made as to his title. Gibson v. Pitts, 69 N.C. 155 (1873).

Where land is claimed by another, such claimant may be admitted to be heard as a party to a proceeding to sell lands of intestate to make assets to pay debts, or may be brought in as a party thereto. In re Daniel's Estate, 225 N.C. 18, 33 S.E.2d 126 (1945).

Claims of Undivided Interest. — One who claims an undivided interest in lands sought to be sold to pay debts, may be properly made a party to the proceedings. McKeel v. Holloman, 163 N.C. 132, 79 S.E. 445 (1913).

Failure to Determine Issue of Title. — Where the order of sale is granted without determining an issue of title raised under this section, the order is void, and the title of the purchaser with notice of such issue is voidable. Perry v. Peterson, 98 N.C. 63, 3 S.E. 834 (1887).

Issue of Law Submitted to Judge. — Where a demurrer is filed to the petition filed before the clerk, the issue of law thereby raised must, under this section, be certified to the judge at chambers. Then the judge must transmit his decision thereon to the clerk; it is error for him to direct an order of sale after overruling the demurrer. Jones v. Hemphill, 77 N.C. 42 (1887).

Procedure. — The rulings or decisions of the clerk must be transferred for trial to the next succeeding term of the superior court, if determinative issues arise on the pleadings; and if there be issues of law or material questions of fact decided by the clerk, they may be reviewed by the judge at term or in chambers on appeal properly taken. In passing upon these questions of fact, the court may act on the evidence already received, or may require the production of other evidence. Mills v. McDaniel, 161 N.C. 112, 76 S.E. 551 (1912).

§ 28A-17-7. Order granted if petition not denied; public or private sale; procedure for sale.

If, by default or admission, the allegations in the petition are not controverted, the clerk of superior court may summarily order a sale. The procedure for the sale shall be as is provided in Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes, entitled "Judicial Sales." If it is made to appear to the clerk by petition and by satisfactory proof that it will be for the best interest of the estate to sell by private sale, the clerk may authorize a private sale in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1-339.33 through 1-339.40. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 48; Code, s. 1443; Rev., s. 79; C.S., s. 83; 1949, c. 719, s. 2; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Powers of Clerk. — The clerk of the superior court, for the purpose of decreeing a sale in case provided by this section, represents and is the court, and has authority to exercise the discretionary powers conferred. Tillett v. Aydlett, 90 N.C. 551 (1884).

Unsigned Decree of Sale. — It is not essential to the validity of the decree that it should be signed. Sledge v. Elliott, 116 N.C.

712, 21 S.E. 797 (1895).

Decree Not Conclusive of Debts. — The decree of the sale is not conclusive of the debts recited by the personal representative in his application for the sale of the land. Latta v. Russ, 53 N.C. 111 (1860).

§ 28A-17-8. Under power in will, sales public or private.

Sales of real property made pursuant to authority given by will may be either public or private, unless the will otherwise directs, and may be on such terms as in the opinion of the personal representative are most advantageous to those interested in the decedent's estate. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 75; Code, s. 1503; Rev., s. 84; C.S., s. 89; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-17-9. Death of vendor under contract; representative to convey.

When any decedent has contracted to sell any real property and has given bond or other enforceable written contract to the purchaser to convey the same, his personal representative may execute and deliver a deed to such real property and such deed shall convey the title as fully as if it had been executed and delivered by the decedent. No deed shall be made unless the purchaser complies with the terms of the bond or other written contract. If the contract for conveyance requires the giving of a warranty deed, the deed given by the personal representative shall contain such warranties as required by the contract and the warranties shall be binding on the estate and not on the personal representative personally. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 65; 1874-5, c. 251; Code, s. 1492; Rev., s. 83; C.S., s. 91; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on installment land contracts in North Carolina, see 3 Campbell L. Rev. 29 (1981).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Remedy of Optionee Where Option Not Exercised Before Landowner's Death. — This section contemplates only contracts of conveyance of a bilateral nature. Hence where the owner of the land dies before the option given by him is exercised the representative has, under this section, no power to convey; and the optionee's remedy is against the heirs or the devisees. Mizell v. Dennis Simmons Lumber Co., 174 N.C. 68, 93 S.E. 436 (1917).

Section Not Applicable to Restore Lost Deeds. — This section does not apply to cases where a deed is executed in performance of the condition of the bond to convey, but is lost after the death of the vendor and before its registration. Hodges v. Hodges, 22 N.C. 72 (1838).

Registration and Payment Prerequisites. — Unless the contract for the sale is proved and registered and the purchase money is paid in full (now terms of bond or other written contract complied with), a deed made by the representative is inoperative. Taylor v. Hargrove, 101 N.C. 145, 7 S.E. 647 (1888).

Showing of Consideration. — The person claiming under the contract must show that there was a valuable consideration thereof, and such other circumstances as would be equivalent to a payment of that consideration. Lindsay v. Coble, 37 N.C. 602 (1843).

Deed executed by representative before contract for sale had been proven and registered, and the purchase money paid in full, was inoperative. Taylor v. Hargrove, 101 N.C. 145, 7 S.E. 647 (1888).

Warranty of Title. — This section empowers the representative to convey only such interest as the vendor could sell. Hence where the vendor contracts to sell his interest in the land, the representative cannot be expected to warrant the title of the land. Twitty v. Lovelace, 97 N.C. 54, 2 S.E. 661 (1887).

Equitable Defense Against Bond. — Where the representative in compliance with this section executes the deed to the purchaser, any equitable defense against the bond may be set up against such deed. McCraw v. Gwin, 42 N.C. 55 (1850).

Judgment Against Administrator Ineffectual Against Heir. — Under N.C. Const.,

Art. I, § 19, a judgment cannot bind a person unless he comes or is brought before the court in some way sanctioned by law and afforded an opportunity to be heard in defense of his rights. As an inexorable consequence of this constitutional provision, any judgment which may be rendered in an action against a decedent's administrator will be wholly ineffectual as against an heir of the decedent, who is not a party to such action, even though such action is predicated upon this section. Scott v. Jordan, 235 N.C. 244, 69 S.E.2d 557 (1952).

Heirs as Necessary Parties to Suit by Representative. — In an action brought by the personal representative of an obligor in a bond for title to subject the land to the payment of the purchase money, the heirs of the obligor are necessary parties. But if the bond is proved and registered and the section has been complied with, in proceedings for the sale of such land, the presence of the heirs is perhaps not necessary. Grubb v. Lookabill, 100 N.C. 267, 6 S.E. 390 (1888).

§ 28A-17-10. Title in personal representative for estate; he or successor to convey.

When real property is conveyed to a personal representative for the benefit of the estate he represents, he or any successor personal representative may sell and convey it upon such terms as he may deem just and for the advantage of the estate. The procedure shall be as is provided in Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes, entitled "Judicial Sales." If it is made to appear to the clerk of superior court by petition and by satisfactory proof that it will be for the best interest of the estate to sell by private sale, the clerk may authorize a private sale in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1-339.33 through 1-339.40. (1905, c. 342; Rev., s. 71; C.S., s. 92; 1949, c. 719, s. 2; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-17-11. Personal representative may lease or mortgage.

In lieu of asking for an order of sale of real property, the personal representative may request the clerk of superior court to issue to him an order to lease or to mortgage real property of the decedent. The clerk of superior court is authorized to issue an order to lease or mortgage on such terms as he deems to be in the best interest of the estate. (1913, c. 49, s. 1; C.S., s.75; 1927, c. 222, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Subrogation of Representative Who Personally Pays Debts. — Where an administrator, in good faith pending the mortgaging of property of the estate to pay debts, personally pays the debts of the estate, he is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the creditors whose debts he had paid, and upon the execution of the mortgage, upon order of court, is entitled to repay himself from the proceeds of the loan. Caffey v. Osborne, 210 N.C. 252, 186 S.E. 364 (1936), decided under prior law.

Cited in State v. Linney, 138 N.C. App. 169, 531 S.E.2d 245, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 538 (2000).

§ 28A-17-12. Sale, lease or mortgage of real property by heirs or devisees.

(a) If the first publication or posting of the general notice to creditors as provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1 occurs within two years after the death of the decedent:

- (1) All sales, leases or mortgages of real property by heirs or devisees of any resident or nonresident decedent made after the death of the decedent and before the first publication or posting of the general notice to creditors are void as to creditors and personal representatives; and

- (2) All sales, leases or mortgages of real property by heirs or devisees of any resident or nonresident decedent made after such first publication or posting and before approval of the final account shall be void as to creditors and personal representatives unless the personal representative joins in the sale, lease or mortgage.

(b) If the first publication or posting of the general notice to creditors as provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1 does not occur within two years after the death of the decedent, all sales, leases or mortgages of real property by heirs or devisees of any resident or nonresident decedent shall be valid as to creditors and personal representatives of the decedent. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1246, s. 1.)

§ 28A-17-13. Prior validating acts.

Chapter 70 of the Public Laws of 1923, Chapter 48 of the Public Laws of 1925, Chapter 146 of the Public Laws of 1931, and Chapters 31 and 381 of the Public Laws of 1935, all validating certain prior sales of real property by executors or administrators and heretofore codified as G.S. 28-100 through 28-104, shall remain in full force and effect, though no longer carried forward as part of the General Statutes. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 18.

Actions and Proceedings.

§ 28A-18-1. Survival of actions to and against personal representative.

(a) Upon the death of any person, all demands whatsoever, and rights to prosecute or defend any action or special proceeding, existing in favor of or against such person, except as provided in subsection (b) hereof, shall survive to and against the personal representative or collector of his estate.

(b) The following rights of action in favor of a decedent do not survive:

- (1) Causes of action for libel and for slander, except slander of title;
- (2) Causes of action for false imprisonment;
- (3) Causes of action where the relief sought could not be enjoyed, or granting it would be nugatory after death. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 63, 64; Code, ss. 1490, 1491; Rev., ss. 156, 157; 1915, c. 38; C.S., ss. 159, 162; 1965, c. 631; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.

II. Revival and Survival of Actions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Section Changes Common Law. — The rule of the common law that a personal right of action dies with the person has been changed by this section and former G.S. 1-74 (see now G.S. 1A-1, Rule 25), and, except in the instances specified in subsection (b), an action originally maintainable by or against a deceased person is now maintainable by or against his personal representative. Suskin v. Maryland Trust Co., 214 N.C. 347, 199 S.E. 276 (1938). See Mast v. Sapp, 140 N.C. 533, 53 S.E. 350 (1906).

The rule of the common law that a personal right of action dies with the person has been changed by former G.S. 1-74 (see now G.S. 1A-1, Rule 25) and this section. Paschal v. Autry, 256 N.C. 166, 123 S.E.2d 569 (1962).

This section clearly manifests a two-fold legislative purpose: (1) To declare what causes of action survive the death of the person in whose favor or against whom they have accrued; and (2) to designate the persons who may sue or be sued upon such surviving causes of action. McIntyre v. Josey, 239 N.C. 109, 79 S.E.2d 202 (1953); Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Limitation for Wrongful Death Action Based on Medical Malpractice Not Extended by § 1-15(c). — Section 1-15(c) would not apply to extend statute of limitations for plaintiff bringing action for wrongful death based on alleged acts of medical malpractice; plaintiff was required to bring her wrongful death claim within two years of deceased's death, pursuant to G.S. 1-53(4). King v. Cape Fear Mem. Hosp., 96 N.C. App. 338, 385 S.E.2d 812, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 265, 389 S.E.2d 114 (1990).

A viable fetus is a "person" under the Wrongful Death Act and the estate of such a person may bring an action for damages. Greer v. Parsons, 103 N.C. App. 463, 405 S.E.2d 921, aff'd, 331 N.C. 368, 416 S.E.2d 174 (1992).

Decedent's personal representative is the proper party plaintiff in a wrongful death action. Brendle v. General Tire & Rubber Co., 408 F.2d 116 (4th Cir. 1969).

Action by the personal representative of deceased stillborn child was not barred by the release executed by child's parents, as the release by its terms bound only themselves and their heirs and assigns as to their personal claims and did not purport to settle or affect a claim for the child's wrongful death, and since under North Carolina law the parents, though the child's next of kin, had no authority to either assert or settle a claim for the child's wrongful death; only the child's personal representative had that authority. Greer v. Parsons, 103 N.C. App. 463, 405 S.E.2d 921, aff'd, 331 N.C. 368, 416 S.E.2d 174 (1992).

Debt Due Decedent Can Be Collected Only by Administrator. — If a debt is due a decedent, it can be collected only by his administrator. Spivey v. Godfrey, 258 N.C. 676, 129 S.E.2d 253 (1963).

Since pending the administration of an estate title to personal property of an intestate vests in his administrator and not his heirs, it necessarily follows that the administrator, and not creditors or heirs, is the proper party to bring an action to collect a debt due the estate or to recover specific personal property. Spivey v. Godfrey, 258 N.C. 676, 129 S.E.2d 253 (1963).

Exceptions to Rule That Administrator Bring Suit. — To the general rule that the administrator must bring suit there are certain exceptions. If the administrator has refused to bring the action to collect the assets; if there is collusion between a debtor and a personal representative — particularly if the latter is insolvent; or, if some other peculiar circumstance warrants it, the creditors or heirs may bring the action which the personal representative should have brought. However, in such a case the administrator must be a party defendant. Spivey v. Godfrey, 258 N.C. 676, 129 S.E.2d 253 (1963).

Collector of the estate of a deceased tort-feasor can be sued in his representative capacity upon a cause of action under this section. McIntyre v. Josey, 239 N.C. 109, 79 S.E.2d 202 (1953).

Right to Retain Attorney. — Until a personal representative is appointed for an estate, no one has the right to retain an attorney to represent the estate. In re Alston, 10 N.C. App. 46, 177 S.E.2d 745 (1970), appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 725, 178 S.E.2d 830 (1971).

Removal of Personal Representative for Failure to Prosecute or Defend Action. — In a proper case, a personal representative may be removed for failure to prosecute or defend actions in behalf of the estate he represents, but clearly a request to sue and a refusal would be conditions precedent. Spivey v. Godfrey, 258 N.C. 676, 129 S.E.2d 253 (1963).

Suit by Heir to Collect His Share of Decedent's Funds in Hands of Third Party. — A suit by one of the heirs to collect his share of decedent's funds in the hands of a third person is no different from a suit by a creditor of the estate to collect a debt due it. In the absence of allegations bringing the suit within one of the exceptions, this has never been permitted. Spivey v. Godfrey, 258 N.C. 676, 129 S.E.2d 253 (1963).

Without alleging that the administrator has refused to bring suit or that there was collusion, one of six heirs of an intestate, by making his administrator a party defendant, may not maintain an action against another of the heirs for his distributive share of decedent's money which that other is wrongfully withholding. Spivey v. Godfrey, 258 N.C. 676, 129 S.E.2d 253 (1963).

Breach of a condition subsequent contained in a deed entitles the grantor during his life, or his heirs after his death, to bring suit for the land or to declare the estate forfeited, but does not entitle the administrator to bring such suit, this section not being applicable. Barkley v. Thomas, 220 N.C. 341, 17 S.E.2d 482 (1941).

Bank Deposit Vests in Personal Representative. — Where a bank was obligated in an unstated amount to its depositor, when he died, the relationship theretofore subsisting was that of debtor and creditor, and the title to said account vested in the depositor's personal representative for collection and administration. Monroe v. Dietenhoffer, 264 N.C. 538, 142 S.E.2d 135 (1965).

Action Properly Dismissed Against Defendants Who Were Merely Collectors by Affidavit. — Where plaintiff was required by this statute to bring his action against the collector or personal representative, his action was properly dismissed when he filed his action against defendants who were merely collectors by affidavit under G.S. 28A-25-1, since plaintiff failed to bring his action against the proper party or parties. Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Applied in Mazzocone v. Drummond, 42 N.C. App. 493, 256 S.E.2d 843 (1979); Keener v. Korn, 46 N.C. App. 214, 264 S.E.2d 829 (1980); Tinkham v. Hall, 47 N.C. II. REVIVAL AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS.

All Causes of Action Survive Except Those Specified in Subsection (b). — It appears that under this section all causes of action survive the death of the person in whose favor or against whom they have accrued, except the causes of action specified in subsection (b). McIntyre v. Josey, 239 N.C. 109, 79 S.E.2d 202 (1953).

Civil Action Based Upon Personal Injuries. — This section provides that a civil action based upon personal injuries survives the death of the plaintiff. Schronce v. Congiglio, 124 N.C. App. 216, 476 S.E.2d 366 (1996).

Cause of action which survives against successor personal representatives of an estate likewise survives in favor of successor personal representatives of the estate. Harrison v. Carter, 226 N.C. 36, 36 S.E.2d 700 (1946).

Revival and Survival of Action against Representative. — The general rule is that wherever an action can be revived against the representative, it will also survive against him. Butner v. Keelhn, 51 N.C. 60 (1858).

Action Not Time Barred. — Action filed on October 20, 2000, two days after qualification of deceased driver's personal representative, for personal injuries arising out of an automobile accident that occurred on June 27, 1997, was not barred by G.S. 1-52, where deceased died on November 7, 1997, at which time the three year limitations period had not yet expired, as under G.S. 28A-18-1 plaintiff's cause of action survived his death, and thus, pursuant to G.S. 1-22, plaintiff was permitted to commence a cause of action against deceased's personal representative, provided that either the action was brought within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3, or that notice of the claim upon which the action was based was presented to the personal representative within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3. The personal representative's failure to establish in the record that she complied with G.S. 28A-19-3(a) regarding general notice to creditors precluded her from relying upon the statute of limitations as a bar; moreover, under G.S. 28A-14-1(a), the absolute earliest "deadline" date which could have been specified by the personal representative in the general notice to creditors was January 18, 2001, three months from the day of the first publication or posting of such notice. Mabry v. Huneycutt, 149 N.C. App. 630, 562 S.E.2d 292, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 271 (2002).

This section does not revive the action against a distributee, but against the personal representative. Healey v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 48 F. Supp. 207 (M.D.N.C. 1942).

Action for Divorce Did Not Survive Husband's Death. — Trial court did not err in dismissing husband's action for divorce and wife's counterclaim for equitable distribution where husband died before decree of absolute divorce was granted. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 93 N.C. App. 740, 379 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 270, 384 S.E.2d 513 (1989).

A divorce judgment which has not been shown to be void may not be set aside following the death of one of the parties so as to reinstate the marital relationship; while a divorce decree which affects property rights of the parties may on timely motion be amended, altered, or modified, the trial court does not have the jurisdiction to change the adjudged marital status of the parties. Dunevant v. Dunevant, 142 N.C. App. 169, 542 S.E.2d 242, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 47 (2001).

Cause of Action for Tortious Injury to Personal Property. — Since it is not one of the causes of action enumerated in subsection (b), a cause of action for a tortious injury to personal property survives the death of either party. McIntyre v. Josey, 239 N.C. 109, 79 S.E.2d 202 (1953).

Action for Negligent Injury. — The fact that the injury in suit did not cause the death of the injured party, but that death resulted from another cause, does not prevent the survival of an action for negligent injury. Fuquay v. A. & W. Ry., 199 N.C. 499, 155 S.E. 167 (1930).

Action Under Tort Claims Act. — Recovery against the county board of education pursuant to the North Carolina Tort Claims Act did not bar plaintiff's claims against the individual bus driver who caused the wreck, or plaintiff's uninsured motorist/underinsured motorist (UM/UIM) carrier for damages in excess of the maximum recovery allowable under the Tort Claims Act. Oakley v. Thomas, 112 N.C. App. 130, 434 S.E.2d 663 (1993).

There is a surviving cause of action for predeath expenses and pain and suffering. Brendle v. General Tire & Rubber Co., 408 F.2d 116 (4th Cir. 1969).

An injured person's common-law right of action to recover damages for hospital and medical expenses and for pain and suffering caused by the negligence of another survives to the injured party's personal representative. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Right of a ward to sue his guardian for lack of diligence in the care of the estate survives to the ward's administrator. Kuykendall v. Proctor, 270 N.C. 510, 155 S.E.2d 293 (1967).

An action brought by the administrator of a ward's estate against the guardian to recover money lost because of lack of diligence by the guardian is not one for relief which could not be enjoyed, or the granting of which would be nugatory after death, so as to fall within the class specified in subdivision (3) of subsection (b). Kuykendall v. Proctor, 270 N.C. 510, 155 S.E.2d 293 (1967).

Action for Wrongful Cutting and Removal of Timber. — If a cause of action for damages for the wrongful cutting and removal of timber from realty belonging to the deceased, in whole or in part, accrued during his lifetime, the action for damages survives to his executors, and must be brought by his executors rather than by his heirs or devisees. However, if such an injury to the realty was committed after his death, the right of action belongs to his heirs or devisees. Paschal v. Autry, 256 N.C. 166, 123 S.E.2d 569 (1962).

Vindictive Damages. — Though the cause of action for trespass may survive against the representative of the trespasser, no vindictive damages may be recovered in such action. Riphey v. Miller, 33 N.C. 247 (1850).

§ 28A-18-2. Death by wrongful act of another; recovery not assets.

(a) When the death of a person is caused by a wrongful act, neglect or default of another, such as would, if the injured person had lived, have entitled him to an action for damages therefor, the person or corporation that would have been so liable, and his or their personal representatives or collectors, shall be liable to an action for damages, to be brought by the personal representative or collector of the decedent; and this notwithstanding the death, and although the wrongful act, neglect or default, causing the death, amounts in law to a felony. The personal representative or collector of the decedent who pursues an action under this section may pay from the assets of the estate the reasonable and necessary expenses, not including attorneys' fees, incurred in pursuing the action. At the termination of the action, any amount recovered shall be applied first to the reimbursement of the estate for the expenses incurred in pursuing the action, then to the payment of attorneys' fees, and shall then be distributed as provided in this section. The amount recovered in such action is not liable to be applied as assets, in the payment of debts or legacies, except as to burial expenses of the deceased, and reasonable hospital and medical expenses not exceeding four thousand five hundred dollars ($4,500) incident to the injury resulting in death, except that the amount applied for hospital and medical expenses shall not exceed fifty percent (50%) of the amount of damages recovered after deducting attorneys' fees, but shall be disposed of as provided in the Intestate Succession Act. All claims filed for such services shall be approved by the clerk of the superior court and any party adversely affected by any decision of said clerk as to said claim may appeal to the superior court in term time.

(b) Damages recoverable for death by wrongful act include:

- (1) Expenses for care, treatment and hospitalization incident to the injury resulting in death;
- (2) Compensation for pain and suffering of the decedent;
- (3) The reasonable funeral expenses of the decedent;
- (4) The present monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected;
 - a. Net income of the decedent,
 - b. Services, protection, care and assistance of the decedent, whether voluntary or obligatory, to the persons entitled to the damages recovered,
 - c. Society, companionship, comfort, guidance, kindly offices and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered;
- (5) Such punitive damages as the decedent could have recovered pursuant to Chapter 1D of the General Statutes had he survived, and punitive damages for wrongfully causing the death of the decedent through malice or willful or wanton conduct, as defined in G.S. 1D-5;
- (6) Nominal damages when the jury so finds.

(c) All evidence which reasonably tends to establish any of the elements of damages included in subsection (b), or otherwise reasonably tends to establish the present monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, is admissible in an action for damages for death by wrongful act.

(d) In all actions brought under this section the dying declarations of the deceased shall be admissible as provided for in G.S. 8-51.1. (R.C., c. 1, s. 10; c. 46, ss. 8, 9; 1868-9, c. 113, ss. 70-72, 115; Code, ss. 1498-1500; Rev., ss. 59, 60; 1919, c. 29; C.S., ss. 160, 161; 1933, c. 113; 1951, c. 246, s. 1; 1959, c. 879, s. 9; c. 1136; 1969, c. 215; 1973, c. 464, s. 2; c. 1329, s. 3; 1981, c. 468; 1985, c. 625; 1993, c. 299, s. 1; 1995, c. 514, s. 2; 1997-456, s. 7.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto. In addition, most of the cases below were decided prior to the 1993 amendment, which raised to $4,500 the limit on the amount recovered in a wrongful death action that is liable for the payment of hospital and medical expenses of the decedent.

Constitutionality. — Subdivision (b)(4) is not unconstitutionally vague and therefore violative of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

History of Subsection (b). — See Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section was to withdraw claims of this kind from the effect and operation of the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona, and to continue, as the basis of the claim of his estate, the wrongful injury to the person resulting in death. Mitchell v. Talley, 182 N.C. 683, 109 S.E. 882 (1921).

Section Creates New Cause of Action. — The cause of action for personal injuries ceases with the death of the injured party and the action under this section is not a survival of the former but an entirely new action. Harper v. Commissioners of Nash County, 123 N.C. 118, 31 S.E. 384 (1898); Bolick v. Southern R.R., 138 N.C. 370, 50 S.E. 689 (1905). See Taylor v. Cranberry Iron & Coal Co., 94 N.C. 525 (1886).

This section creates a new cause of action only in the sense that at common law the right did not survive to the personal representative. Mitchell v. Talley, 182 N.C. 683, 109 S.E. 882 (1921).

The wrongful death statute confers a new right of action with damages limited to fair and just compensation for the pecuniary injury resulting from death, recoverable by the personal representative for the benefit of the heirs. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946). See McCoy v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 229 N.C. 57, 47 S.E.2d 532 (1948).

The wrongful death statute confers a new right of action which did not exist before the statute and which at the death of an injured person accrued to the personal representative of the decedent for the benefit of a specific class of beneficiaries. Crawford v. Hudson, 3 N.C. App. 555, 165 S.E.2d 557 (1969), overruled on other grounds, Gibson v. Campbell, 28 N.C. App. 653, 222 S.E.2d 449 (1976).

No Such Right Existed at Common Law.

— The right of recovery for death by wrongful act did not exist at common law, and rests entirely upon this section. Broadnax v. Broadnax, 160 N.C. 432, 76 S.E. 216 (1912); Hinnant v. Tidewater Power Co., 189 N.C. 120, 126 S.E. 307 (1925), overruled on other grounds, 300 N.C. 300, 266 S.E.2d 821 (1980); Wilson v. Massagee, 224 N.C. 705, 32 S.E.2d 335 (1944); Webb v. Eggleston, 228 N.C. 574, 46 S.E.2d 700 (1948); Lewis v. North Carolina State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 228 N.C. 618, 46 S.E.2d 705 (1948); Bryant v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 248 N.C. 43, 102 S.E.2d 393 (1958); Horney v. Meredith Swimming Pool Co., 267 N.C. 521, 148 S.E.2d 554 (1966); Miller v. Perry, 307 F. Supp. 633 (E.D.N.C. 1969), rev'd on other grounds, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972); Skinner v. Whitley, 281 N.C. 476, 189 S.E.2d 230 (1972); Christenbury v. Hedrick, 32 N.C. App. 708, 234 S.E.2d 3 (1977).

No right of recovery for death by wrongful act existed at common law. Colyar v. Atlantic States Motor Lines, 231 N.C. 318, 56 S.E.2d 647 (1949).

The right to maintain an action for wrongful death is purely statutory. No such right existed at common law, and the provisions of this section authorizing the institution and maintenance of such an action are no more binding upon the courts than the provisions of this section which direct how the recovery in such action shall be distributed. Davenport v. Patrick, 227 N.C. 686, 44 S.E.2d 203 (1947).

Such Right Is Purely Statutory. — The right of action for wrongful death is purely statutory. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963); Young v. Marshburn, 10 N.C. App. 729, 180 S.E.2d 43, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 703, 181 S.E.2d 603 (1971); Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 47 N.C. App. 127, 266 S.E.2d 726 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982); Nelson v. United States, 541 F. Supp. 816 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

In North Carolina the action for wrongful death exists only by virtue of this section. In re Ives' Estate, 248 N.C. 176, 102 S.E.2d 807 (1958); Gay v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 394, 146 S.E.2d 425 (1966).

In North Carolina a right of action to recover damages for wrongful death is given by this section and in this jurisdiction the action for wrongful death exists only by virtue of these statutes. In re Miles' Estate, 262 N.C. 647, 138 S.E.2d 487 (1964).

Actions for wrongful death are creatures of statute. Reeves v. Hill, 272 N.C. 352, 158 S.E.2d 529 (1968).

The right of action for wrongful death exists only by virtue of this section, which defines the right of action, and the basis on which damages may be recovered. Stetson v. Easterling, 274 N.C. 152, 161 S.E.2d 531 (1968).

A wrongful death action is a creature of statute and may be brought only as the authorizing statutes permit. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Because the right to an action for wrongful death rests entirely upon this section, the Wrongful Death Act, it must be asserted in conformity therewith. Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 389 (1983).

Construction. — This section is not penal but remedial in its nature, and it should be given such construction as will effectuate the intention of the legislature in enacting it. Vance v. Southern R.R., 138 N.C. 460, 50 S.E. 860 (1905); Hall v. Southern R.R., 149 N.C. 108, 62 S.E. 899 (1908); Christenbury v. Hedrick, 32 N.C. App. 708, 234 S.E.2d 3 (1977).

Preemption. — Where decedent was killed in automobile accident, Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) preempted the operation of North Carolina's wrongful death statute to the extent that the state law precluded operation of the terms of the "Acts of Third Parties" clause in the plan requiring reimbursement to plan. McInnis v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 21 F.3d 586 (4th Cir. 1994).

No Simultaneous Constitutional Recovery. — The trial court properly dismissed the plaintiffs' constitutional claim against defendant/police officer pursuant to G.S. 1A-1-12(b)(6) where the plaintiffs had an adequate remedy at law, a wrongful death claim under this section which would compensate plaintiffs for the same alleged injuries. Estate of Fennell v. Stephenson, 37 N.C. App. 430, 528 S.E.2d 911, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 428 (2000).

Application of Section to Actions Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. — There is no federal statutory law governing the measure of damages in wrongful death actions brought pursuant to 42 USC G.S. 1983, and, therefore, 42 USC G.S. 1988 compels the use of the law of North Carolina; namely, this section. Bowling v. Oldham, 753 F. Supp. 588 (M.D.N.C. 1990).

The North Carolina wrongful death statute satisfies the two underlying policies of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, as it provides adequate relief for the estate of the deceased, and satisfies the policy of preventing abuses of power by state officials by the availability of punitive damages. Bowling v. Oldham, 753 F. Supp. 588 (M.D.N.C. 1990).

"Person" in former § 28-173 construed to mean one who has become recognized as a person by being born alive. See Cardwell v. Welch, 25 N.C. App. 390, 213 S.E.2d 382, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 464, 215 S.E.2d 623 (1975); Yow v. Nance, 29 N.C. App. 419, 224 S.E.2d 292, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 312, 225 S.E.2d 833 (1976). But see DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987), allowing recovery for the wrongful death of a viable but unborn child.

For case calling for legislative action under former § 28-173 if it was intended that wrongful death statute include unborn fetuses, see Cardwell v. Welch, 25 N.C. App. 390, 213 S.E.2d 382, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 464, 215 S.E.2d 623 (1975); Yow v. Nance, 29 N.C. App. 419, 224 S.E.2d 292, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 312, 225 S.E.2d 833 (1976). But see DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987), allowing recovery for the wrongful death of a viable but unborn child.

Municipalities Not Exempt from Section. — The plain, positive provisions of this section contain no basis for supposing that the Legislature intended to exempt municipalities therefrom. Jackson v. Housing Auth., 73 N.C. App. 363, 326 S.E.2d 295 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C.

259, 341 S.E.2d 523 (1986).

This section does not regard the family relation, and is not for the purpose of compensating the families of persons killed by accident. Russell v. Windsor Steamboat Co., 126 N.C. 961, 36 S.E. 191 (1900).

Right of Action a Property Right. — This section gives clear indication of the purpose of the legislature to impress upon the right of action the character of property as a part of the intestate's estate. Neill v. Wilson, 146 N.C. 242, 59 S.E. 674 (1907); In re Miles' Estate, 262 N.C. 647, 138 S.E.2d 487 (1964).

This section contemplates only one cause of action, and when the action is brought by the personal representative, the judgment is conclusive on other persons, and the right given by the statute is exhausted. Kendrick v. Cain, 272 N.C. 719, 159 S.E.2d 33 (1968).

Section Encompasses Loss of Consortium Claims. — The trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's claim brought in her individual capacity for loss of consortium based on the ground that the wrongful death statute encompasses loss of consortium claims, and any common law claim encompassed by the wrongful death statute should have been asserted under this section by the personal representative for the deceased. Keys v. Duke Univ., 112 N.C. App. 518, 435 S.E.2d 820 (1993).

The tort claim for "loss of consortium", no matter what damages may be recovered thereunder, is covered under the wrongful death statute, and plaintiff could not, therefore, bring an independent claim for loss of consortium in her action asserting a claim for wrongful death. Keys v. Duke Univ., 112 N.C. App. 518, 435 S.E.2d 820 (1993).

There is no separate cause of action in the parent to recover for loss of services of a minor child whose death occurs simultaneously with its injury. Gibson v. Campbell, 28 N.C. App. 653, 222 S.E.2d 449 (1976).

Suit by Parent in Individual Capacity for Expenses of Deceased Child Properly Dismissed. — Any common-law claim which is now encompassed by this section must be asserted under it, and accordingly it is proper to dismiss an action by the surviving mother of unemancipated minor children who died as a result of an automobile collision, in which action the mother sought recovery in her individual capacity of, inter alia, medical and funeral expenses incurred on behalf of the children. Boulton v. Onslow County Bd. of Educ., 58 N.C. App. 807, 295 S.E.2d 246 (1982).

Such Expenses Recoverable in Wrongful Death Suit. — Under common law a personal injury to minor child, proximately caused by negligence of another, gave rise to two distinct causes of action: one by the child for damages for the personal injury, and a second by the parent for, inter alia, expenses incurred for necessary medical treatment of the child. However, when the General Assembly legislates in respect to the subject matter of any common-law rule, the statute supplants the common law and becomes the public policy of this State. The General Assembly has provided that damages recoverable for death by wrongful act include, inter alia, expenses for care, treatment and hospitalization incident to the injury resulting in death and the reasonable funeral expenses of the decedent. Boulton v. Onslow County Bd. of Educ., 58 N.C. App. 807, 295 S.E.2d 246 (1982).

Where Deceased Is an Infant. — Under this section the administrator may sue for the death of an infant a few months old. Russell v. Windsor Steamboat Co., 126 N.C. 961, 36 S.E. 191 (1900); Davis v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 136 N.C. 115, 48 S.E. 591 (1904).

What Constitutes a Cause of Action. — It is entirely immaterial for the purpose of establishing a cause of action under the provisions of this section whether the act was wanton or cruel. Facts showing a legal duty and neglect thereof on the part of defendant with a resulting injury to the plaintiff are sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Catlett, 177 F. 71 (4th Cir. 1910).

No Action Available. — Where a police officer's actions in shooting and killing the decedent as he approached the officer while brandishing a knife were reasonable as a matter of law, they could not be negligent or wrongful as required to support an action under this section. Sigman v. Town of Chapel Hill, 161 F.3d 782 (4th Cir. 1998).

Plaintiff must show failure of defendant to exercise proper care in performance of some legal duty which the defendant owed plaintiff's testator under the circumstances in which they were placed, and that such negligent breach of duty was the proximate cause of injury which produced death — a cause that produced the result in continuous sequence, and without which it would not have occurred, and one from which any man of ordinary prudence could have foreseen that such result was probable under the existing facts. Tysinger v. Coble Dairy Prods., 225 N.C. 717, 36 S.E.2d 246 (1945); Rogers v. Green, 252 N.C. 214, 113 S.E.2d 364 (1960); Harris v. Wright, 268 N.C. 654, 151 S.E.2d 563 (1966).

Negligence Per Se. — Trial court did not err in admitting testimony that decedent did not have motorcycle endorsement at time of accident. Violation of G.S. 20-7 is negligence per se. Ward v. McDonald, 100 N.C. App. 359, 396 S.E.2d 337 (1990).

Negligence Alone Does Not Create Cause of Action. — Negligence alone, without pecuniary injury resulting from such death, does not create a cause of action. Gay v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 394, 146 S.E.2d 425 (1966);

Harris v. Wright, 268 N.C. 654, 151 S.E.2d 563 (1966); Stetson v. Easterling, 274 N.C. 152, 161 S.E.2d 531 (1968); Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Gross negligence is "something less than willful and wanton conduct," and includes "the absence of even slight care," "indifference to the rights and welfare of others," "negligence of an aggravated character." Cowan v. Brian Ctr. Mgt. Corp., 109 N.C. App. 443, 428 S.E.2d 263 (1993).

Child Not a "Trespasser." — Child who was electrocuted when he entered power company's cabinet containing high voltage wires located on property on which the company had an easement, who had permission of the landowners to play on the property, was not a trespasser as that term has been defined by our case law, and thus the power company was not entitled to have its legal duty reduced. Cole v. Duke Power Co., 81 N.C. App. 213, 344 S.E.2d 130, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 281, 347 S.E.2d 462 (1986).

Joinder of Action for Wrongful Death of Viable Fetus. — The action for wrongful death of a viable fetus must be joined with any action based on the same facts brought by the decedent's parents. DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987), reversing DiDonato v. Wortman, 80 N.C. App. 117, 341 S.E.2d 58 (1986).

Lack of Administrator for Fetus's Estate Not Grounds for Dismissal Where Clerk Unwilling to Issue Letters of Administration. — Cause of action for the wrongful death of the fetus was not subject to dismissal on grounds that it was not brought by the personal representative of the deceased as required by subsection (a), where the failure to bring this action in the name of the administrator of the estate was apparently due to the unwillingness of the clerk of court to issue letters of administration for a fetus's "estate." The existence of a cause of action for wrongful death is sufficient for the appointment of an administrator, and since a wrongful death action exists for a viable fetus, the clerk should have appointed an administrator to bring the action. Ledford v. Martin, 87 N.C. App. 279, 359 S.E.2d 505 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 473, 365 S.E.2d 1 (1988), overruled on other grounds, Johnson v. Ruark Obstetrics, 327 N.C. 283, 395 S.E.2d 85 (1990).

The right of action for wrongful death is limited to such as would, if the injured party had lived, have entitled him to an action for damages therefor. Stetson v. Easterling, 274 N.C. 152, 161 S.E.2d 531 (1968).

In determining whether any wrongful death action is maintainable, the Supreme Court has consistently analyzed the question in terms of whether the deceased, had he lived, would have had a claim against defendant for the injuries inflicted. If so, then the estate of the deceased may maintain an action for wrongful death; if not, then the action for wrongful death will not lie. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

The wrongful death action exists if and only if the decedent could have maintained an action for negligence or some other misconduct if the decedent had survived. Nelson v. United States, 541 F. Supp. 816 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

This section makes it a condition precedent to a right of action in a personal representative that the death of the intestate was caused by a wrongful act, neglect or default of the manufacturer "such as would, if the injured person had lived, have entitled him to an action for damages therefor." Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976).

The condition precedent, "such as would, if the injured person had lived, have entitled him to an action for damages therefor," to the maintenance of an action under this section does not, by its express terms, include a time limitation but, upon its face, relates to the nature of the "wrongful act, neglect or default" which caused the death and to the legal capacity of the decedent to sue therefor had he lived. Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976).

Theory of Liability Is Same as for Tortious Infliction of Personal Injury. — Although a wrongful death action may be a distinct cause of action from one for negligent infliction of personal injury, the theory or theories of liability and the operative facts from which liability arises are not different. Nelson v. United States, 541 F. Supp. 816 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

Apart from the measure of damages, recovery for wrongful death in North Carolina depends upon the same proof of actionable negligence or misconduct under the general rules of tort liability which would apply to an action strictly for personal injury. Nelson v. United States, 541 F. Supp. 816 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

No Action Where Decedent Fully Compensated before Death. — Where the injured party has received in his lifetime full compensation for the injury which resulted in his death, a right of action arising from the same injury will not lie after his death for further damages for the benefit of his estate. Edwards v. Interstate Chem. Co., 170 N.C. 551, 87 S.E. 635 (1916).

Killing in Georgia of North Carolina Resident. — The wrongful death statute of Georgia is not so dissimilar from this section in scope, meaning, and practical application as to deprive the trial courts of this State of jurisdiction to hear and determine a cause for the negligent killing in the state of Georgia of a resident of this State. Rodwell v. Camel City

Coach Co., 205 N.C. 292, 171 S.E. 100 (1933).

Right Must Be Asserted in Conformity with Section. — The right to maintain an action for damages for wrongful death must be asserted in conformity with this section. Webb v. Eggleston, 228 N.C. 574, 46 S.E.2d 700 (1948); Lewis v. Farm Bureau Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 243 N.C. 55, 89 S.E.2d 788 (1955).

Pleading Requirements. — While a request for damages based on a decedent's pain and suffering and hospital care could have been construed as invoking an action for survival, the plaintiff only intended to go forward with a wrongful death claim if the complaint stated a claim for wrongful death of the decedent and pled all the damages listed in G.S. 28A-18-2(b), with the exception of nominal damages, and there was no indication in the complaint that the damages were to be distributed to his estate as opposed to his heirs. Locust v. Pitt County Mem'l Hosp., 154 N.C. App. 103, 571 S.E.2d 668, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1410 (2002), cert. denied, 356 N.C. 673, 579 S.E.2d 272 (2003).

Where decedent's daughter repeatedly requested that wrongful death action be brought, and offered to pay all expenses for it, but was confronted with alleged collusion and willful obstruction on the part of administratrix and attorney, and within the two-year statute of limitations period, filed action against administratrix, attorney and insurer alleging breach of fiduciary duties and collusion, her contributory negligence, if any, in failing to seek removal of administratrix, was not such as to warrant dismissal under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354 (1984).

Failure to List Possible Wrongful Death Action as Estate Asset Held Malpractice. — Attorney who was retained by decedent's administratrix (sister of decedent's husband) owed a duty to decedent's natural daughter to use reasonable care in representing the estate, and daughter's allegation that he violated that duty by failing to list possible wrongful death action against decedent's husband as an asset of decedent's estate, by continuing to represent the estate after administratrix also became the representative of decedent's husband when he committed suicide, and by colluding with other defendants, stated a cause of action in tort for attorney malpractice. Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354 (1984).

This section controls over the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, G.S. 97-1 et seq. Byers v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 3 N.C. App. 139, 164 S.E.2d 535 (1968), aff'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 229, 166 S.E.2d 649 (1969).

Workers' Compensation Act does not create two causes of action, one for the employee's estate and the other for the employer and insurance carrier. The right to bring action for damages for wrongful death is conferred by this section. The compensation act merely governs the respective rights of the employee's estate, the employer and the insurance carrier to maintain an action for damages against third parties. Groce v. Rapidair, Inc., 305 F. Supp. 1238 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

No Conflict with § 97-10.2(f)(1)c. — There is no conflict in the language in this section which prohibits use of the wrongful death recovery to pay a debt of the decedent and the language in G.S. 97-10.2(f)(1)c which directs that a portion of the recovery be applied to the reimbursement of the employer for benefits paid under award of the Industrial Commission. Byers v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 3 N.C. App. 139, 164 S.E.2d 535 (1968), aff'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 229, 166 S.E.2d 649 (1969).

If an employee's action would be barred by the Workers' Compensation Act, then a wrongful death action brought by the employee's representative is also barred. McAllister v. Cone Mills Corp., 88 N.C. App. 577, 364 S.E.2d 186 (1988).

Complaint Barred by Workers' Compensation Act. — Wrongful death complaint alleging that defendant, decedent's employer, negligently required decedent to perform tasks which exposed decedent to known carcinogens, thereby causing decedent's cancer of the bladder and resulting death, came within the language of G.S. 97-53(13) and was barred by the Workers' Compensation Act. McAllister v. Cone Mills Corp., 88 N.C. App. 577, 364 S.E.2d 186 (1988).

Liability to the general public of a host for the torts of his intoxicated guest. See Chastain v. Litton Sys., 694 F.2d 957 (4th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 462 U.S. 1106, 103 S. Ct. 2454, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1334 (1983).

Employer's Liability for Death Caused by Employee Who Became Intoxicated at Company Party. — See Chastain v. Litton Sys., 694 F.2d 957 (4th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 462 U.S. 1106, 103 S. Ct. 2454, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1334 (1983).

Claim Against Provider of Alcohol Barred by Decedent's Negligence. — Plaintiff's wrongful death claim against a provider of alcohol alleging wilful and wanton negligence for serving the visibly intoxicated decedent alcohol after being requested to refrain from serving him was barred by the decedent's own actions in driving his vehicle while highly intoxicated. Sorrells v. M.Y.B. Hospitality Ventures, 332 N.C. 645, 423 S.E.2d 72 (1992).

Personal Representative Has Authority and Responsibility. — The personal representative who institutes a wrongful death action is not a mere figurehead or naked trustee but has authority as well as responsibility. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Hackney, 266 N.C. 17, 145 S.E.2d 352 (1965); Miller v. Perry, 307 F. Supp. 633 (E.D.N.C. 1969), rev'd on other grounds, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Authority to Compromise. — Ordinarily, an executor or administrator has the right to compromise any disputed or doubtful claim of his decedent provided he acts honestly and exercises the care of an ordinarily prudent person, and this rule is applicable to a purely statutory cause of action for wrongful death. McGill v. Bison Fast Freight, Inc., 245 N.C. 469, 96 S.E.2d 438 (1957).

An administrator has the right to compromise a disputed claim if he acts in good faith and exercises the care which an ordinarily sensible and prudent man would exercise in dealing with his own property under like circumstances. Forsyth County v. Barneycastle, 18 N.C. App. 513, 197 S.E.2d 576, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 752, 198 S.E.2d 722 (1973).

A covenant not to sue, procured by one tort-feasor, does not release the other from liability. Kendrick v. Cain, 272 N.C. 719, 159 S.E.2d 33 (1968).

But a release of one joint tort-feasor ordinarily releases them all. Kendrick v. Cain, 272 N.C. 719, 159 S.E.2d 33 (1968).

Action Not Maintained Since Children Could Not Have Recovered For Injuries If They Had Lived. — The cause of action for the children's wrongful death, where the children were killed by their mother and her boyfriend as they were fleeing from police shortly before the truck they were in was blown up during the course of a gun battle and high speed chase with police, could not be maintained because the children could not have recovered for their injuries if they had lived, and the first requisite of a wrongful death action in this State is that the decedent could have recovered for his injuries if he had lived. Lynch v. North Carolina Dep't of Justice, 93 N.C. App. 57, 376 S.E.2d 247 (1989).

Action Against Pharmacist. — While a pharmacist has no duty to advise absent knowledge of the circumstances, once a pharmacist is alerted to specific facts and he or she undertakes to advise a customer, the pharmacist then has a duty to advise correctly; therefore, where plaintiff alleged, among other things, that her decedent "sought out and was relying upon the skill, judgment and expertise of defendant with respect to the safety of taking the drug Indocin given the fact that plaintiff's intestate suffered the aforementioned medical condition," she stated a claim upon which relief could be granted. Ferguson v. Williams, 92 N.C. App. 336, 374 S.E.2d 438 (1988).

Action Against Physician Barred by Settlement with Original Tort-Feasors. — Where a plaintiff institutes an action to recover damages for the wrongful death of his intestate against persons alleged to be solely responsible for intestate's injuries and death, and thereafter the action is compromised by the entry of a consent judgment for a substantial sum, the judgment is a bar to the plaintiff's right to maintain a subsequent action for the wrongful death of his intestate against a physician or surgeon for negligent treatment of the original injuries, such treatment being known to plaintiff when the first suit was filed. Bell v. Hankins, 249 N.C. 199, 105 S.E.2d 642 (1958).

Writ of Attachment May Issue. — A writ of attachment will issue under G.S. 1-440.1 to enforce the right created by this section. Mitchell v. Talley, 182 N.C. 683, 109 S.E. 882 (1921).

Nonsuit. — In a civil action under this and the succeeding section to recover damages for alleged wrongful death, where issues of fact are raised which the jury alone may decide, it is error for the court to allow a motion for judgment as of nonsuit. Henson v. Wilson, 225 N.C. 417, 35 S.E.2d 245 (1945).

Nonsuit held proper in action for wrongful death resulting when intestate drove into the side of a train which had been standing at nighttime, blocking the crossing, for some 30 seconds prior to the injury, with its ground lights, its platform light, and cab lights burning. Morris v. Winston-Salem Southbound Ry., 265 N.C. 537, 144 S.E.2d 598 (1965).

The burden of proving actionable negligence in an action for damages for wrongful death grounded in negligence is, of course, on the party seeking recovery. But if the evidence, that offered by both plaintiff and defendant, construed in the light most favorable to the party with the burden of proof, is sufficient to make out a prima facie case of actionable negligence, a motion for nonsuit should be denied and the case submitted to the jury. Maynor v. Townsend, 2 N.C. App. 19, 162 S.E.2d 677 (1968).

Directed Verdict. — In an action for wrongful death, a directed verdict for the defendant on the ground of contributory negligence should be granted when, and only when, the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to plaintiff, establishes the contributory negligence of plaintiff's intestate so clearly that no other reasonable inference or conclusion may be drawn therefrom. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Citizenship of Beneficiaries Is Controlling for Diversity Purposes. — When a resident ancillary administrator is required to represent the interests of noncitizen beneficiaries by virtue of the laws of the state in which the claim arose, and his duties are as limited as those imposed upon him by this section, the citizenship of the beneficiaries is controlling for diversity purposes. Miller v. Perry, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

The citizenship of the administrator does not defeat diversity jurisdiction in an action under this section brought by a North Carolina ancillary administrator against North Carolina defendants to recover for the death of a nonresident for the benefit of nonresident distributees. Miller v. Perry, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Noncitizen Entitled to Federal Forum. — Diversity jurisdiction exists for the protection of the noncitizen who is obliged to sue or to be sued in the state of his adversary. It is for that reason that state statutes or decisions that require a noncitizen to appoint an in-state representative should not have the effect of depriving the noncitizen of the federal forum that Congress has provided him. Miller v. Perry, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Payment of Expenses of Suit from Assets of Estates. — With the 1985 amendment of subsection (a) of this section, the Legislature has chosen to allow reasonable and necessary expenses, excluding attorneys' fees, incurred in pursuing a wrongful death action to be paid from the assets of the deceased's estate. If there is any recovery from the wrongful death action, the recovery must first be applied to reimburse the estate for the expenses paid from its assets in pursuing the action. In re Estate of Proctor, 79 N.C. App. 646, 340 S.E.2d 138 (1986).

Prior to the 1985 amendment to subsection (a) of this section, there was no statutory authority for paying out of a decedent's estate the reasonable and necessary expenses incurred in pursuing a wrongful death action. Thus, on February 1, 1985, clerk properly denied petition seeking authorization of payment of litigation expenses out of decedent's estate, and superior court was correct in affirming the clerk's order. However, following the July 5, 1985 amendment there was nothing to prevent decedent's personal representatives from filing a new petition seeking to have those same expenses paid from the deceased's estate. In re Estate of Proctor, 79 N.C. App. 646, 340 S.E.2d 138 (1986).

Contributory negligence of decedent, who was operating his vehicle in an impaired condition in violation of G.S. 20-138.1, was a defense to a wrongful death claim under this section based on defendants' alleged negligence in selling alcohol to an intoxicated person. Clark v. Inn W., 89 N.C. App. 275, 365 S.E.2d 682, rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. App. 415, 379 S.E.2d 23 (1989).

Effect of Medicare. — The Wrongful Death Act's $1,500 limitation on a health care provider's right to recover a decedent's medical expenses is preempted by Medicare's secondary payer provisions. Cox v. Shalala, 112 F.3d 151 (4th Cir. 1997).

II. LIMITATION OF THE ACTION.

Two-year Limitation. — The period prescribed for the commencement of an action for wrongful death under this section is two years. High v. Broadnax, 271 N.C. 313, 156 S.E.2d 282 (1967), overruled on other grounds, Bockweg v. Anderson, 328 N.C. 436, 402 S.E.2d 627 (1991).

Former Time Limit Was Condition Precedent Rather than Statute of Limitation. — Up to the time of the amendments of 1951 to the former wrongful death statute and G.S. 1-53, it had consistently been held that the time limitation in this section was not a statute of limitations, but rather a condition precedent to maintenance of an action. The effect of the amendments was to remove from the Wrongful Death Act the time limitation and make the act subject to the statute of limitations of two years in G.S. 1-53. McCrater v. Stone & Webster Eng'r Corp., 248 N.C. 707, 104 S.E.2d 858 (1958).

Prior to the enactment of G.S. 1-53(4), and the 1951 amendment to the former wrongful death statute, the institution of an action for wrongful death within one year after such death was a condition precedent to maintaining the action. All other requirements of the section were also strictly construed. The amendment removed the time limitation as a condition annexed to the cause of action and made it a two-year statute of limitations. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963).

Since the enactment of the 1951 amendment to the former wrongful death statute, the time within which a wrongful death action may be commenced is not an integral part of the right of action or a condition precedent thereto but is an ordinary (two-year) statute of limitations under G.S. 1-53(4). Stamey v. Rutherfordton Elec. Membership Corp., 249 N.C. 90, 105 S.E.2d 282 (1958).

Section 1-53 and the former wrongful death statute were amended in 1951 so as to remove from the latter section the provision previously contained therein fixing the period of time in which an action for damages for wrongful death must be instituted and so as to make such action subject to the two-year statute of limitations set forth in G.S. 1-53. The effect of the amendment was to make the time limitation a statute of limitations and no longer a condition precedent to the right to bring and maintain the action. Kinlaw v. Norfolk S. Ry., 269 N.C. 110, 152 S.E.2d 329 (1967).

Delay Less Than Period Is Not Laches of Itself. — Mere delay of petitioner in commencing his action for damages for wrongful death, which does not amount to a bar of the statute of limitations, does not of itself constitute laches, where the delay has not worked an injury or prejudice or disadvantage to the administratrix c.t.a. of the estate, and the clerk has found no facts that petitioner's delay would work prejudice or injury to the estate of the deceased. In re Miles' Estate, 262 N.C. 647, 138 S.E.2d 487 (1964).

Action by Ancillary Administrator. — The fact that an action for wrongful death is brought by an ancillary administrator appointed in this State does not constitute the action accruing to a resident of this State within the meaning of the proviso to G.S. 1-21.

Broadfoot v. Everett, 270 N.C. 429, 154 S.E.2d 522 (1967).

Where a complaint to recover damages under a state wrongful death act was timely filed by an ancillary administrator appointed by a state court without jurisdiction to do so, the complaint could be amended under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17(a) at a time when a new suit would be barred so as to allege the subsequent effective appointment of the same person as ancillary administrator by a state court having jurisdiction. McNamara v. Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp., 328 F. Supp. 1058 (E.D.N.C. 1971).

Amendment Not Introducing New Cause of Action. — Where, in an action for wrongful death, the complaint discloses that the action was instituted within the statutory period, but plaintiff is thereafter permitted to amend the defective statement of his good cause of action by particularizing the acts of negligence complained of, the amendment does not introduce a new cause of action, and the cause is not barred by this section. Davis v. Rhodes, 231 N.C. 71, 56 S.E.2d 43 (1949).

Amendment or Substitution of Proper Party Relates Back. — Amendment or substitution of the proper party under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 15(a) and (c) and G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17(a), may be made at any time before hearing to cure a lack of letters of administration, and later appointments of this nature will relate back and validate the proceedings from the beginning regardless of the statute of limitations. McNamara v. Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp., 328 F. Supp. 1058 (E.D.N.C. 1971).

Action Commenced upon False Allegation of Appointment Cannot Be Validated Following Expiration of Statute of Limitations. — A party who has not been appointed as administratrix and has not offered herself for qualification may not, upon a false allegation that she has qualified as administratrix, commence an action for wrongful death and, following the expiration of the statute of limitations, validate that action by a subsequent appointment as administratrix. Reid v. Smith, 5 N.C. App. 646, 169 S.E.2d 14 (1969).

Collateral estoppel precluded plaintiffs from bringing a wrongful death action against police officer, where an earlier federal district court decision found that the defendant was entitled to qualified immunity regarding plaintiffs' federal constitutional claims because "a reasonable officer in the same situation as [defendant] could have found probable cause to believe that [the decedent] posed a deadly threat, and, therefore, that [defendant] would have been authorized to use deadly force to protect himself," thereby raising an issue identical to the issue raised in plaintiffs' wrongful death action, the standard of defendant's conduct under the circumstances. Estate of Fennell v. Stephenson, 37 N.C. App. 430, 528

But Action Commenced under Mistaken Belief of Appointment May Be Validated by Subsequent Appointment. — Where a widow institutes an action as administratrix, for damages for the wrongful death of her husband, under the mistaken belief that she had been duly appointed and had qualified as such, thereafter discovers her error and amends her petition so as to show that she was appointed administratrix after the expiration of the statute of limitations applicable to such action, the amended petition will relate back to the date of the filing of the petition, and the action will be deemed commenced within the time limited by statute. Reid v. Smith, 5 N.C. App. 646, 169 S.E.2d 14 (1969).

Widow's belated qualification as administratrix did not relate back to the date of the filing of the suit when no attempt was previously made to qualify as administrator in North Carolina. Johnson v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 22 N.C. App. 8, 205 S.E.2d 353 (1974).

III. PARTIES TO THE ACTION.

Decedent's personal representative is the proper party plaintiff in a wrongful death action. Brendle v. General Tire & Rubber Co., 408 F.2d 116 (4th Cir. 1969).

Suit Must Be Brought by Personal Representative. — The personal representative of the deceased, his executor or administrator, etc., can alone maintain an action for damages for his wrongful death under the provisions of this section. Hanes v. Southern Pub. Utils. Co., 191 N.C. 13, 131 S.E. 402 (1926). See Hood v. AT & T Co., 162 N.C. 70, 77 S.E. 1096 (1913); White v. Holding, 217 N.C. 329, 7 S.E.2d 825 (1940).

While any sum recovered is not a part of decedent's estate, such sum can only be recovered in the name of the personal representative, and must be distributed under laws of intestacy in this State. Harrison v. Carter, 226 N.C. 36, 36 S.E.2d 700 (1946), citing Neill v. Wilson, 146 N.C. 242, 59 S.E. 674 (1907); Hines v. Foundation Co., 196 N.C. 322, 145 S.E. 612 (1928).

Action for wrongful death may be brought only by the executor, administrator, or collector of the decedent. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Hackney, 266 N.C. 17, 145 S.E.2d 352 (1965); Miller v. Perry, 307 F. Supp. 633 (E.D.N.C. 1969), rev'd on other grounds, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972); Merchants Distrib., Inc. v. Hutchinson, 16 N.C. App. 655, 193 S.E.2d 436 (1972); Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973); Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

The right of action conferred by this section vests in the personal representative of the deceased. Horney v. Meredith Swimming Pool Co., 267 N.C. 521, 148 S.E.2d 554 (1966); Stetson v. Easterling, 274 N.C. 152, 161 S.E.2d 531 (1968); Miller v. Perry, 307 F. Supp. 633 (E.D.N.C. 1969), rev'd on other grounds, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Nobody other than the executor, administrator, or collector of an estate can maintain an action for wrongful death. Young v. Marshburn, 10 N.C. App. 729, 180 S.E.2d 43, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 703, 181 S.E.2d 603 (1971).

Under this section, the only person who can sue is the personal representative of the deceased. Journigan v. Little River Ice Co., 233 N.C. 180, 63 S.E.2d 183 (1951).

The right of action under this section is for the personal representative of the deceased only. The right of action for wrongful death, being conferred by statute at death, never belonged to the deceased. Miller v. Perry, 307 F. Supp. 633 (E.D.N.C. 1969), rev'd on other grounds, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Under the Wrongful Death Act, the administrator of an intestate, or the executor of one who dies testate, may institute an action for wrongful death; and he does so as the representative of the estate. Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 389 (1983).

In His Official Capacity. — The statute requires the suit to be brought by the administrator in his official and not in his private or individual capacity. He must sue as administrator. Hall v. Southern R.R., 146 N.C. 345, 59 S.E. 879 (1907).

The personal representative alone can maintain the action, and only in his official capacity. He sues in his own right and not en autre droit. McCoy v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 229 N.C. 57, 47 S.E.2d 532 (1948). See Christian v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 136 N.C. 321, 48 S.E. 743 (1904).

Widow, as such, has no right of action for death of her husband. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963).

Under this section an action cannot be maintained by a widow as such, but must be brought by the personal representative of the deceased. Bennett v. North Carolina R.R., 159 N.C. 345, 74 S.E. 883 (1912); Craig v. Suncrest Lumber Co., 189 N.C. 137, 126 S.E. 312 (1925).

Nor husband for wife's death. — A husband as such cannot sue for the wrongful death of his wife. Hood v. AT & T Co., 162 N.C. 70, 77 S.E. 1096 (1913).

Nor parent for death of child. — A father cannot maintain an action in his individual capacity for the death of his son. Killian v. Southern R.R., 128 N.C. 261, 38 S.E. 873 (1901).

Action by the personal representative of deceased stillborn child was not barred by the release executed by child's parents, as the release by its terms bound only themselves and their heirs and assigns as to their personal claims and did not purport to settle or affect a claim for the child's wrongful death, and since under North Carolina law the parents, though the child's next of kin, had no authority to either assert or settle a claim for the child's wrongful death; only the child's personal representative had that authority. Greer v. Parsons, 103 N.C. App. 463, 405 S.E.2d 921, aff'd, 331 N.C. 368, 416 S.E.2d 174 (1992).

A father cannot maintain an action in his individual capacity for the wrongful death of his daughter resulting from seduction. Scarlett v. Norwood, 115 N.C. 284, 20 S.E. 459 (1894).

Action by One Not Personal Representative Should Be Dismissed. — If an action for wrongful death is instituted by one other than the personal representative of a decedent, duly appointed in this State, it should be dismissed, and a separate and independent action instituted by such representative. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963); Merchants Distrib., Inc. v. Hutchinson, 16 N.C. App. 655, 193 S.E.2d 436 (1972).

If an action for wrongful death is instituted by one other than the personal representative of a decedent, duly appointed in this State, it should be dismissed. Young v. Marshburn, 10 N.C. App. 729, 180 S.E.2d 43, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 703, 181 S.E.2d 603 (1971).

And Court Has No Authority to Convert It to New Action by Admission of Party. — The court has no authority, over objection, to convert a pending action for wrongful death which cannot be maintained into a new and independent action by admitting a party who is solely interested as plaintiff. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963).

Action Commences from Time Personal Representative Joined. — Should the personal representative be permitted to become a party to an unauthorized action for wrongful death, the action is deemed to have been commenced only from the time he became a party. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963).

The real party in interest in an action under this section is not the administrator, but the beneficiary under the statute for whom the recovery is sought. Davenport v. Patrick, 227 N.C. 686, 44 S.E.2d 203 (1947); In re Ives' Estate, 248 N.C. 176, 102 S.E.2d 807 (1958).

Although an action for wrongful death must be brought by the personal representative of the deceased, the personal representative is not the real party in interest and the action does not accrue in his favor. Broadfoot v. Everett, 270 N.C. 429, 154 S.E.2d 522 (1967).

The personal representative of a decedent, as such, has no beneficial interest in a recovery and is therefore not the real party in interest.

Long v. Coble, 11 N.C. App. 624, 182 S.E.2d 234, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 246 (1971).

In a wrongful death action, the real parties in interest were the beneficiaries as defined in the Wrongful Death Act, who were the same persons who would have received property had the decedent died intestate; where a widow, who was the decedent's sole intestate beneficiary, had abandoned the decedent before his death, she was not entitled to a wrongful death recovery, and since the remaining beneficiaries did not succeed to a full 100 percent, but only received their original percentage, there were no beneficiaries to the wrongful death claim. Locust v. Pitt County Mem'l Hosp., 154 N.C. App. 103, 571 S.E.2d 668, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1410 (2002), cert. denied, 356 N.C. 673, 579 S.E.2d 272 (2003).

Necessity for Proof Where Plaintiff's Capacity Denied. — Nonsuit is properly entered in an action for wrongful death when plaintiff's allegation that she was duly qualified and acting administratrix of the deceased is denied in the answer and plaintiff offers no evidence in support of her allegation. Carr v. Lee, 249 N.C. 712, 107 S.E.2d 544 (1959).

False Allegation of Appointment Cannot Be Validated by Subsequent Appointment. — One who has never applied for letters of administration or who, having applied, has no reasonable grounds for believing that he had been duly appointed, cannot institute an action for wrongful death, or any other cause, upon a false allegation of appointment and thereafter validate that allegation by a subsequent appointment. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 638, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963); Reid v. Smith, 5 N.C. App. 646, 169 S.E.2d 14 (1969).

Amendment to Substitute Proper Party Allowed. — Under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 15(a) and (c), and G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17(a), a lack of letters of administration may be cured, and an objection to want of capacity to sue may be avoided by amendment or by substitution of the proper party at any time before hearing. McNamara v. Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp., 328 F. Supp. 1058 (E.D.N.C. 1971).

A cause of action under this section is sufficient for the appointment of an administrator. Vance v. Southern R.R., 138 N.C. 460, 50 S.E. 860 (1905).

As to appointment of ancillary administrator, see Merchants Distrib., Inc. v. Hutchinson, 16 N.C. App. 655, 193 S.E.2d 436 (1972).

Foreign administrator lacks capacity to sue in a wrongful death action in this State. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Where a deceased has left a will naming an executor, and disposing of all his property, the right of action for his wrongful death must be by the executor named. Hood v. AT & T Co., 162 N.C. 70, 77 S.E. 1096 (1913).

Complaint of Unqualified Administratrix Held Demurrable. — Where an action for wrongful death was instituted in this State by an unqualified administratrix, the defect could be taken advantage of by demurrer, since such plaintiff did not have legal capacity to sue and thus the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Monfils v. Hazlewood, 218 N.C. 215, 10 S.E.2d 673 (1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 684, 61 S. Ct. 612, 85 L. Ed. 1122 (1941).

Executor May Not Be Joined as Defendant. — In a wrongful death action, a motion by the plaintiff, who was the adopted daughter of the decedent, that the executor of the estate of the decedent be joined as a defendant was denied because the executor is not a proper party to be joined as a defendant in an action which he alone by statute is authorized to commence. Young v. Marshburn, 10 N.C. App. 729, 180 S.E.2d 43, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 703, 181 S.E.2d 603 (1971).

Action by Representative of Employee Covered by Workers' Compensation. — Although an administratrix of a deceased employee who has received compensation for the employee's death under the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act is thereby barred from prosecuting any other remedy for the injury, she may, under this section, pending the hearing before the Industrial Commission, institute an action against a third person whose negligent acts caused the death of the intestate, and where the insurance carrier has paid the compensation later awarded, it is subrogated to the rights of the employer and may maintain the action against such third person in the name of the administratrix. Phifer v. Berry, 202 N.C. 388, 163 S.E. 119 (1932).

Since the North Carolina Workers' Compensation Act expressly provides that the subrogated right of action against the third person tort-feasor in favor of the insurance carrier paying compensation for which the employer is liable must be maintained in the name of the injured employee or his personal representative, the act does not change or modify the requirement of this section that an action for wrongful death must be maintained by the administrator of the deceased, and the insurance carrier cannot maintain the action for wrongful death in its own name against the third person tort-feasor. Whitehead v. Branch, 220 N.C. 507, 17 S.E.2d 637 (1941). See also Brown v. Southern R.R., 202 N.C. 256, 162 S.E. 613 (1932).

The administrator of an employee within the Workers' Compensation Act cannot sue the employer for the wrongful death of the employee since the employee could not have sued the employer for his injury had he lived. Raftery v.

Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976).

Action by Child Born Alive. — Since the child must carry the burden of infirmity that results from another's tortious act, it is only natural justice that it, if born alive, be allowed to maintain an action on the ground of actionable negligence. Stetson v. Easterling, 274 N.C. 152, 161 S.E.2d 531 (1968).

Prenatal Death of Viable Child. — This section allows recovery for the death of a viable but unborn child. DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987), reversing DiDonato v. Wortman, 80 N.C. App. 117, 341 S.E.2d 58 (1986).

The Supreme Court's holding in DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489 (1987), permitting an action to recover for the destruction of a viable fetus en ventre sa mere, could be applied retroactively to an action commenced before DiDonato was decided. Johnson v. Ruark Obstetrics & Gynecology Assocs., 89 N.C. App. 154, 365 S.E.2d 909 (1988), aff'd, 327 N.C. 283, 395 S.E.2d 85 (1990).

The definition of "viability" intended by the Supreme Court in DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489 (1987), is simply the common law definition of fetal capability to live independently of the mother. Although there is apparently no clear medical consensus as to the specific gestational age at which this capability is currently achieved, a gestational range of 20 to 26 weeks has been suggested. However, the determination of a fetus's viability is a question of fact. Johnson v. Ruark Obstetrics & Gynecology Assocs., 89 N.C. App. 154, 365 S.E.2d 909 (1988), aff'd, 327 N.C. 283, 395 S.E.2d 85 (1990).

Action by Administrator of Unemancipated Child Against Parents. — An unemancipated child living with his parents may not maintain an action in tort against them, nor can the administrator of the child recover damages against them for the child's wrongful death, as this section gives a right of action for wrongful death only where the injured party, if he had lived, could have maintained such action. Goldsmith v. Samet, 201 N.C. 574, 160 S.E. 835 (1931); Lewis v. Farm Bureau Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 243 N.C. 55, 89 S.E.2d 788 (1955).

The administrator of an unemancipated minor child killed by the negligence of his parent has no cause of action against the parent for the wrongful death of his intestate. Capps v. Smith, 263 N.C. 120, 139 S.E.2d 19 (1964); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Hackney, 266 N.C. 17, 145 S.E.2d 352 (1965).

The right of action for wrongful death is limited to such as would, if the injured party had lived, have entitled him to an action for damages therefor. Hence, the administrator of an unemancipated child whose death is caused by the negligence of his parent has no cause of action against the parent for the wrongful death of the child because such child, if he had lived, would have had no cause of action against the parent on account of his injuries. Horney v. Meredith Swimming Pool Co., 267 N.C. 521, 148 S.E.2d 554 (1966).

The administrator of an unemancipated minor child may not bring an action against the administrator of its father for damages for the wrongful death of such child caused by the ordinary negligence of the deceased father. Skinner v. Whitley, 281 N.C. 476, 189 S.E.2d 230 (1972).

Same — Motor Vehicle Cases. — Except as G.S. 1-539.21 now provides, the administrator of an unemancipated minor child cannot bring an action for wrongful death against the child's negligent parent. Rafferty v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976).

The administrator of a deceased minor's estate may maintain an action on the dead child's behalf for wrongful death against the negligent parent-driver of the vehicle through this section and G.S. 1-539.21 which abolished parent-child immunity in motor vehicle cases. Carver v. Carver, 55 N.C. App. 716, 286 S.E.2d 799, cert. denied, 305 N.C. 584, 292 S.E.2d 569 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

It is not G.S. 1-539.21 standing alone which abrogates parental immunity in wrongful death actions arising out of the operation of motor vehicles; it is G.S. 1-539.21 and this section, read in pari materia, which bring about this result. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

As G.S. 1-539.21 has abolished the doctrine of parental immunity in personal injury and property damage cases arising out of a parent's operation of a motor vehicle, the doctrine is no longer a bar to wrongful death actions by the deceased child's estate which likewise arise out of a parent's operation of a motor vehicle. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

When parental immunity would not have barred a personal injury action brought by the deceased child had he lived, it likewise does not bar a wrongful death action brought by his estate. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Action by Representative of Parent Against Unemancipated Child. — Neither a parent nor his personal representative has an action for wrongful death against an unemancipated child or his representative. Horney v. Meredith Swimming Pool Co., 267 N.C. 521, 148 S.E.2d 554 (1966).

Action by Administrator of Wife Against Husband. — If a husband's negligence results in the death of his wife, her personal representative may maintain an action against him for her wrongful death. Cox v. Shaw, 263 N.C. 361, 139 S.E.2d 676 (1965).

If a wife's death is caused by the actionable negligence of her husband, this section creates and authorizes an action by her personal representative to recover for her wrongful death. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Hackney, 266 N.C. 17, 145 S.E.2d 352 (1965).

Since G.S. 52-5 provides that an injured wife has a cause of action against her husband for damages for personal injury, under the provisions of this section the administrator of her estate may maintain an action for wrongful death when she does not survive. Cummings v. Locklear, 12 N.C. App. 572, 183 S.E.2d 832, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

Action Against Estate of One Causing Wrongful Death. — Where a person is alleged to have caused the death of another by his wrongful act, neglect, or default, and suit has been brought against him and is pending at his death within one year after the wrongful death caused by him, an action will lie against the executor and administrator of the deceased defendant under the provisions of this section. Tonkins v. Cooper, 187 N.C. 570, 122 S.E. 294 (1924).

When the death of a person is caused by a wrongful act, neglect or default of another, such as would, if the injured party had lived, have entitled him to an action for damages therefor and the person that would have been so liable dies, or is killed at the same time, then the action for damages for wrongful death survives the death of the tort-feasor against his executor or administrator. In re Miles' Estate, 262 N.C. 647, 138 S.E.2d 487 (1964).

Right to Have Discharge of Tort-Feasor's Administratrix Set Aside. — An administrator who institutes action for the wrongful death of his intestate within the statutory time against the estate of the deceased tort-feasor is entitled to have the order of the clerk discharging the administratrix of the deceased tort-feasor set aside by motion in the cause upon showing a policy of liability insurance in the hands of the administratrix of the deceased tort-feasor available for the payment of the claim. In re Miles' Estate, 262 N.C. 647, 138 S.E.2d 487 (1964).

Joinder of Employer with Employee. — Where the death is caused by the negligence of an employee while acting within the scope of his authority the employer may be joined as a defendant under the doctrine of respondeat superior. Brown v. Southern R.R., 202 N.C. 256, 162 S.E. 613 (1932).

Joinder of Joint Tort-Feasor as Party Defendant. — One of several defendants, in an action for wrongful death arising out of a joint tort, may have still another joint tort-feasor brought in and made a party defendant for the purpose of enforcing contribution, although plaintiff's right of action against such other tort-feasor, originally subsisting, has been lost by the lapse of time. Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 223 N.C. 647, 27 S.E.2d 736 (1943).

Where plaintiff sues defendant under this section, alleging that her intestate was killed by his negligence, defendant may not join as a joint tort-feasor under former G.S. 1-240 a railway company by which the plaintiff's intestate was employed in interstate commerce. Wilson v. Massagee, 224 N.C. 705, 32 S.E.2d 335 (1944).

In a suit under the Federal Employers' Liability Act against defendant railroad, plaintiff was not permitted to join an additional defendant tort-feasor since there was no common legal right in the actions against the two. Bryant v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 248 N.C. 43, 102 S.E.2d 393 (1958).

Municipalities Not Exempt from Section. — The plain, positive provisions of this section contain no basis for supposing that the Legislature intended to exempt municipalities therefrom. Jackson v. Housing Auth., 73 N.C. App. 363, 326 S.E.2d 295 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 259, 341 S.E.2d 523 (1986).

A wrongful death action may be maintained against a municipal corporation. Jackson v. Housing Auth., 316 N.C. 259, 341 S.E.2d 523 (1986).

Actions Against County Employees. — Plaintiff's complaint, claiming that social services employees defendants' negligent failure to investigate claims of child abuse and neglect, coupled with their failure to remove her son from the custody of his abusive father caused her son's death, contained allegations pertaining only to the defendants' actions or inactions in their official capacities with county department of social services and that defendants were entitled to judgment based on governmental immunity. Whitaker v. Clark, 109 N.C. App. 379, 427 S.E.2d 142, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 795, 431 S.E.2d 31 (1993).

IV. DISTRIBUTION OF RECOVERY.

The North Carolina law is materially different from that of most states in that distribution is made, not to designated classes, but in accordance with the statute of distribution. McCoy v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 229 N.C. 57, 47 S.E.2d 532 (1948).

Section Governs Nature and Distribution of Recovery. — The nature and distribution of whatever recovery is obtained is governed by the provisions of this section. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Distribution as if Decedent Died Intestate. — In the enactment of this section, the legislature intended that the proceeds of a recovery, or settlement, in an action for wrongful death shall be distributed to the same persons, and in the same proportionate shares, as the personal property of the decedent, remaining after the payment of all debts and other claims and expenses of administration, would be distributed if the decedent died intestate. Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

Intestate Succession Act as Modified by Chapter 31A Intended. — When the legislature, in this section, provided that the proceeds of an action for wrongful death "shall be disposed of as provided in the Intestate Succession Act," and when it provided in G.S. 97-40 that the order of priority among claimants to death benefits payable under the Workers' Compensation Act "shall be governed by the general law applicable to the distribution of the personal estate of persons dying intestate," it had in mind the same law; i.e., the Intestate Succession Act as modified by Chapter 31A, entitled, "Acts Barring Property Rights." Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

Section 31A-2 must be deemed a part of the Intestate Succession Act and a modification of G.S. 29-15(3), as fully as if it had been written therein or specifically designated as an amendment thereto. Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

When Distribution in Accordance with Subsection (a) Not Appropriate. — Distribution of the recovery in accordance with subsection (a), although appropriate when the recovery is computed on the basis of the loss to the estate, is not appropriate when the recovery is based largely on losses suffered by particular beneficiaries. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Action Not Abated upon Death of Primary Beneficiary. — Although the Wrongful Death Act was amended drastically in some respects in 1969, there was absolutely no change in the basic portions allowing the action and providing for the disposition of the recovery. There is nothing in the amended statute which would, in any way, indicate any intent on the part of the legislature that a wrongful death action should abate upon the death of the primary beneficiary pending determination of the action. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 42 N.C. App. 582, 257 S.E.2d 471 (1979).

Recovery Held in Trust. — The administrator holds the amount recovered in trust for those that may be entitled thereto as distributees. Baker v. Raleigh & Gaston R.R., 91 N.C. 308 (1884); Avery v. Brantley, 191 N.C. 396, 131 S.E. 721 (1926); In re Ives' Estate, 248 N.C. 176, 102 S.E.2d 807 (1958).

In receiving funds paid in settlement of a wrongful death claim a personal representative of a decedent's estate is not acting for the estate but as the trustee for the beneficiaries under the law. In re Estate of Below, 12 N.C. App. 657, 184 S.E.2d 378 (1971).

A personal representative does not derive any right, title, or authority from his intestate, but he sustains more the relation of a trustee in respect to the fund he may recover for the benefit of those entitled eventually to receive it, and he will hold it when recovered actually in that capacity, though in his name as executor or administrator. In re Estate of Below, 12 N.C. App. 657, 184 S.E.2d 378 (1971).

Trier of fact must be apprised of those who are going to share in the recovery in ascertaining the amount of damages recoverable under subdivision (b)(4) of this section, for it is only the losses suffered by these persons as a result of decedent's death which may be taken into account in assessing these damages. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Existence of Beneficiaries Not Condition Precedent. — The existence of persons who would have been entitled to the recovery under former G.S. 28-149 (now see G.S. 29-1 et seq.) was not a condition precedent to the right to bring the action. The purpose of the section is to give the action irrespective of who may become beneficiaries of the recovery. Warner v. Western N.C.R.R., 94 N.C. 250 (1886). See Davenport v. Patrick, 227 N.C. 686, 44 S.E.2d 203 (1947); McCoy v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 229 N.C. 57, 47 S.E.2d 532 (1949), holding that evidence as to the number of children left is inadmissible.

Recovery, if negligence is proved, is by the decedent's personal representative and is not conditioned upon the decedent's leaving dependents or beneficiaries of his estate. Abernethy v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 373 F.2d 565 (4th Cir. 1967).

The right to sue granted by this statute is not conditioned upon who may be the ultimate beneficiary or beneficiaries of a recovery. Cummings v. Locklear, 12 N.C. App. 572, 183 S.E.2d 832, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

Complaint Need Not Allege That Intestate Left Heirs. — The damages when recovered are not to be simply distributed, but disposed of as provided in case of intestacy, and the complaint need not allege that the intestate left heirs. Warner v. Western N.C.R.R., 94 N.C. 250 (1886).

Children as Beneficiaries. — The fortuitous circumstance that those entitled to the recovery under the Intestate Succession Act happened to be the children rather than collateral kin of the decedent is not germane to the administrator's right of action. Cummings v.

Locklear, 12 N.C. App. 572, 183 S.E.2d 832, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

Evidence of the decedent's dependents or beneficiaries is irrelevant and inadmissible. Abernethy v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 373 F.2d 565 (4th Cir. 1967).

Certain liability is imposed for death, and that liability is exclusive. No other responsibility is left which springs from the occurrence upon which liability rests — death — and the effect of the compensation as a satisfaction of all other claims is in no way limited or impaired by the circumstances of the identity of the persons to whom it is paid or because in a given case no one survives to take advantage of the statute. Horney v. Meredith Swimming Pool Co., 267 N.C. 521, 148 S.E.2d 554 (1966).

When Rights of Distributees Fixed. — Under this section the rights of the distributees are fixed as of the time when the intestate died. Neill v. Wilson, 146 N.C. 242, 59 S.E. 674 (1907). See Davenport v. Patrick, 227 N.C. 686, 44 S.E.2d 203 (1947).

Two Rights of Action Recognized. — The right of an injured person to sue for personal injuries of any kind is entirely separate and distinct from the right of the personal representative to sue under authority of the wrongful death statute. Any damage sustained by such person during his lifetime is personal to that person and, if proximately caused by the wrongful act of another, could be recovered by him. If this right of action survived his death, the recovery would be an asset of his estate to be administered as any other personal property owned and possessed by decedent at the time of his death. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946).

While both the right of action for the recovery of consequential damages sustained between date of injury and date of death, and the right of action to recover damages resulting from such death, have as basis the same wrongful act, there is no overlapping of amounts recoverable. But such consequential damages as flow from the wrongful act would be recoverable by the personal representative; those sustained by the injured party during his lifetime, for benefit of his estate, and those resulting from his death, for benefit of his next of kin, determinable upon separate issues. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946).

Distribution of Federal Action Proceeds. — The proceeds from a federal court action instituted by the decedent's personal representative were for damages related to his wrongful death, not damages for pain and suffering unrelated to his death, and therefore should have been distributed according to the laws of intestate succession; although the funds were not characterized as wrongful death benefits in the settlement agreement, the federal court record supported such a characterization. In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Creditor Has No Claim against Wrongful Death Funds. — Where the funds obtained by compromise settlement are for damages recoverable for death by wrongful act, the plaintiff creditor has no enforceable claim against these funds or any portion of them. Forsyth County v. Barneycastle, 18 N.C. App. 513, 197 S.E.2d 576, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 752, 198 S.E.2d 722 (1973).

Recovery Not Assets of Deceased's Estate. — Damages for a wrongful death are not assets of the estate available to creditors, but are to be disposed of according to the statute of distribution. Hines v. Foundation Co., 196 N.C. 322, 145 S.E. 612 (1928).

Proceeds recovered in a wrongful death action do not constitute part of the estate of the deceased generally except for certain limited purposes. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

The provision that the recovery is not to be applied as assets in the payment of debts or legacies extends to creditors of the intestate and not to creditors of the distributees. Neill v. Wilson, 146 N.C. 242, 59 S.E. 674 (1907).

The right of action for wrongful death, being conferred by statute at death, never belonged to the deceased, and the recovery is not assets in the usual acceptance of the term. Lamm v. Lorbacher, 235 N.C. 728, 71 S.E.2d 49 (1952); In re Ives' Estate, 248 N.C. 176, 102 S.E.2d 807 (1958).

Proceeds recovered under the wrongful death statute are not a part of a decedent's estate, and in dealing with these funds neither the clerk nor the estate's personal representative is administering the estate of a decedent. In re Estate of Below, 12 N.C. App. 657, 184 S.E.2d 378 (1971).

The amount recovered is not a general asset of the estate, but the personal representative shall dispose of it as provided in this section and the Intestate Succession Act. Long v. Coble, 11 N.C. App. 624, 182 S.E.2d 234, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 246 (1971).

The recovery in an action for wrongful death created by and based on this section is not a general asset of the decedent's estate. It is not subject to the payment of his debt, nor could the decedent by will or otherwise have diverted any portion of such recovery from the persons who would be entitled thereto under the Intestate Succession Act. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

But Treated as Assets for Medical and Burial Expenses. — A cause of action for wrongful death, being conferred by statute at death, could never have belonged to the deceased. A recovery resulting from such cause of action is therefore not an asset of the deceased's estate, although by virtue of the specific provisions of this section it is treated as an asset with respect to burial expenses and certain hospital and medical costs. In re Estate of Below, 12 N.C. App. 657, 184 S.E.2d 378 (1971).

Amounts received in a wrongful death action are assets at least to the extent of funeral and limited medical expenses. Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354 (1984).

Formerly, Payment of Hospital and Medical Expenses Was Unauthorized. — See In re Peacock, 261 N.C. 749, 136 S.E.2d 91 (1964).

Now Such Payment Is Limited by This Section. — See In re Peacock, 261 N.C. 749, 136 S.E.2d 91 (1964).

Not Subject to Widow's Year's Support. — See Broadnax v. Broadnax, 160 N.C. 432, 76 S.E. 216 (1912).

Contributory Negligence of One Beneficiary. — In an action to recover for wrongful death of a 21½-year-old child, contributory negligence on the part of its mother is a bar to so much of the recovery as would accrue to her as a beneficiary of the child's estate, but negligence of the child's mother will not be imputed to the child's father, and is no bar to the recovery of the amount which would inure to his benefit as beneficiary of the child's estate. Pearson v. National Manufacture & Stores Corp., 219 N.C. 717, 14 S.E.2d 811 (1941).

Statutory Beneficiary Not Entitled to Share in Recovery for Death Caused by His Negligence. — In cases instituted to recover damages for wrongful death, no beneficiary under the statute for whom recovery is sought will be permitted to enrich himself by his own wrong. The right of a person otherwise entitled to receive the money paid for wrongful death, or to share in the distribution of such a sum paid, will be denied where the death of the decedent was caused by such person's negligence. In re Ives' Estate, 248 N.C. 176, 102 S.E.2d 807 (1958).

The court will look beyond the parties to the suit and prevent a beneficiary from obtaining any sum by way of recovery in a death by wrongful act where his own wrong had brought about the death. Miller v. Perry, 307 F. Supp. 633 (E.D.N.C. 1969), rev'd on other grounds, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir. 1972).

Where it is a husband's wrongful act which caused the death of his wife intestate, he may not share in a recovery. Should the jury return a verdict in favor of the administrator of her estate, the court will enter judgment for only two thirds of the amount of the verdict. Cummings v. Locklear, 12 N.C. App. 572, 183 S.E.2d 832, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

In an action by an administrator under the Wrongful Death Act, where a husband caused the death of his wife, the award must be reduced by the statutory share of the wrongdoer. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Lack, 476 F.2d 583 (4th Cir. 1973).

Intestate was killed in a collision while riding as a passenger in an automobile owned and driven by her son. Intestate's administrator and the son's insurer effected a settlement whereby the insurer paid the administrator a sum of money in consideration of the release by the administrator of all claims and demands against the son and the insurer arising out of the accident. There was no finding of fact that the son was negligent, or that he knew of the settlement, and the release stated that all parties released denied liability; however, the son, although he alleged in his answer that he was not negligent and that the accident was caused solely by the negligence of the driver of the other automobile did not allege that he had brought suit or made any claim or demand against such driver for damage to his automobile, and offered no evidence at the hearing. It was held that public policy would not permit the son to share in the amount paid in settlement by his insurer. In re Ives' Estate, 248 N.C. 176, 102 S.E.2d 807 (1958).

This result is not precluded by the "slayer statute," G.S. 31A-4, which excludes the wrongdoer from taking by declaring him to have constructively died prior to the deceased, since the slayer's exclusion by G.S. 31A-4 appears to apply only to inheritance from the decedent's "estate," while wrongful death awards have consistently been deemed not to pass through the personal estate of the deceased, but rather to arise out of a right of action belonging peculiarly to the personal representative for the benefit of the intestate successors. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Lack, 476 F.2d 583 (4th Cir. 1973).

Recovery Reduced by Liable Beneficiary's Share. — In wrongful death actions where recovery depends on establishing the liability of a party who is also a beneficiary of the decedent's estate, any recovery obtained shall be reduced by that party-beneficiary's pro rata share, and that party-beneficiary is precluded from participating in the recovery; but the action may be maintained on behalf of the other beneficiaries, if any. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Effect of Liability of Sole Beneficiary. — If recovery in a wrongful death action depends upon establishing the liability of a party who is the sole beneficiary of the decedent's estate, the action may not be maintained at all. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Nonnegligent Parent Allowed to Recover for Child's Death. — A wrongful death action could be maintained on behalf of deceased child's estate against defendant mother, but only father would be entitled to share in any recovery, since any recovery obtained would be grounded on the negligence of the mother. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Family Purpose Doctrine Did Not Bar Husband's Recovery Where Wife Negligent. — Husband was not barred by the family purpose doctrine from sharing in any recovery by his son's estate because of the negligence of his wife, the defendant in driving the husband's automobile. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Plaintiff father, having abandoned the deceased when the latter was a minor child, could not share in the proceeds of the settlement of the claim for wrongful death now in the hands of the administratrix. Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

Distribution When Deceased Was Non-resident. — Where a person was domiciled in another state and was killed in this State, and an administrator sues in this State, the funds recovered must be distributed under the laws of this State, though a prior administration had been taken out in the state of his domicile. Hartness v. Pharr, 133 N.C. 566, 45 S.E. 901 (1903). See Hall v. Southern R.R., 146 N.C. 345, 59 S.E. 879 (1907).

Allocation of Funds Received in Single Settlement for Wrongful Death and for Suffering Prior to Death. — See In re Peacock, 261 N.C. 749, 136 S.E.2d 91 (1964).

Recovery under Federal Employers' Liability Act. — In an action to recover damages under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, this State statute does not apply as to the distribution of the recovery. Horton v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 175 N.C. 472, 95 S.E. 883 (1918), appeal dismissed, 251 U.S. 566, 40 S. Ct. 180, 64 L. Ed. 417 (1920).

Attorneys' Fees. — The 1985 amendment to this section provides that an attorney who litigates a wrongful death claim may be paid for his services from the wrongful death proceeds. In re Lessard, 78 N.C. App. 196, 336 S.E.2d 712 (1985).

Attorney who neither initiated nor handled wrongful death claim and was appointed successor administrator only after wrongful death award had been made, but who expended considerable time in determining the correct distribution of wrongful death proceeds, could be compensated for his services from the wrongful death proceeds. In re Lessard, 78 N.C. App. 196, 336 S.E.2d 712 (1985).

"Costs" of an estate would not be payable from wrongful death proceeds. In re Lessard, 78 N.C. App. 196, 336 S.E.2d 712 (1985).

V. DAMAGES RECOVERABLE.

A. In General.

Purpose of damages in a wrongful death case is to restore the beneficiaries to the position they would have occupied had there been no death. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

Legislature Intended to Be as Full Compensation as Possible. — The General Assembly intended the wrongful death statute to as fully as possible compensate persons for the loss of their decedent. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

Basis for Damages Generally. — In this State the recovery in a wrongful death case is based largely on losses suffered by particular beneficiaries. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

This section allows the personal representative, on behalf of the statutory beneficiaries of the estate, to recover, inter alia, the present monetary value of the decedent to the beneficiaries. The measure is the worth of the decedent; how well off the beneficiaries are absent the decedent is immaterial. Harris v. United States, 121 F.R.D. 652 (W.D.N.C. 1988).

This section controls the measure of damages. Nelson v. United States, 541 F. Supp. 816 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

The action for wrongful death exists only by virtue of this section, and the statutory provision must govern not only the right of action but also the rule for determining the basis and extent of recovery of damages therefor. Lamm v. Lorbacher, 235 N.C. 728, 71 S.E.2d 49 (1952).

In North Carolina a right of action to recover damages for wrongful death is given by this section and in this jurisdiction the action for wrongful death exists only by virtue of these statutes. In re Miles' Estate, 262 N.C. 647, 138 S.E.2d 487 (1964).

Wrongful death damages are unlimited. Brendle v. General Tire & Rubber Co., 408 F.2d 116 (4th Cir. 1969).

Determination of Damages Recoverable under Subsection (b). — Damages recoverable under subsection (b) are not determined by ascertaining the net pecuniary loss suffered by the estate, but are determined by ascertaining the present monetary loss suffered by those persons entitled to receive the damages. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 16 N.C. App. 70, 191 S.E.2d 419 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Where the measure of damages in death cases is "loss to beneficiaries," rather than the "loss to estate," a beneficiary's right to recover the value of expected benefits is limited to his life expectancy. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 16 N.C. App. 70, 191 S.E.2d 419 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Question as to Economic Loss to Estate Not Error. — Where plaintiff's lawyer asked doctor "Do you have an opinion as to the present value of the economic loss to the estate?", defendant was correct in pointing out that recovery of damages under the statute is to the beneficiaries of the decedent and not to the decedent's estate; however, it was plain from the record that both doctor and the jury understood the correct measurement of damages under the wrongful death statute. Stutts v. Adair, 94 N.C. App. 227, 380 S.E.2d 411 (1989).

As to measure of damages under former statute, see Kesler v. Smith, 66 N.C. 154 (1872); Burton v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 82 N.C. 504 (1880), modified on rehearing, 84 N.C. 192 (1881); Bradley v. Ohio River & C.R.R., 122 N.C. 972, 30 S.E. 8 (1898); Russell v. Windsor Steamboat Co., 126 N.C. 961, 36 S.E. 191 (1900); Carter v. North Carolina R.R., 139 N.C. 499, 52 S.E. 642 (1905); Poe v. Raleigh & A. Air Line R.R., 141 N.C. 525, 54 S.E. 406 (1906); Purnell v. Rockingham R.R., 190 N.C. 573, 130 S.E. 313 (1925); Carpenter v. Asheville Power & Light Co., 191 N.C. 130, 131 S.E. 400 (1926); Hicks v. Love, 201 N.C. 773, 161 S.E. 394 (1931); Queen City Coach Co. v. Lee, 218 N.C. 320, 11 S.E.2d 341 (1940); Rea v. Simowitz, 226 N.C. 379, 38 S.E.2d 194 (1946); McCoy v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 229 N.C. 57, 47 S.E.2d 532 (1948); Hanks v. Norfolk & W.R.R., 230 N.C. 179, 52 S.E.2d 717 (1949); Martin v. Currie, 230 N.C. 511, 53 S.E.2d 447 (1949); United States v. Brooks, 176 F.2d 482 (4th Cir. 1949); Journigan v. Little River Ice Co., 233 N.C. 180, 63 S.E.2d 183 (1951); Lamm v. Lorbacher, 235 N.C. 728, 71 S.E.2d 49 (1952); Caudle v. Southern Ry., 242 N.C. 466, 88 S.E.2d 138 (1955); Bryant v. Woodlief, 252 N.C. 488, 114 S.E.2d 241 (1960); Scriven v. McDonald, 264 N.C. 727, 142 S.E.2d 585 (1965); Smith v. Mercer, 276 N.C. 329, 172 S.E.2d 489 (1970); Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973); Mosley v. United States, 538 F.2d 555 (4th Cir. 1976).

Recovery to Be One Compensation in Lump Sum. — This section contemplates that if plaintiff be entitled to recover at all, he is entitled to recover as damages one compensation in a lump sum. He is not entitled to recover the whole sum from each of the joint tortfeasors. Kendrick v. Cain, 272 N.C. 719, 159 S.E.2d 33 (1968).

Damages may not be assessed on the basis of sheer speculation, devoid of factual substantiation. Gay v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 394, 146 S.E.2d 425 (1966); Stetson v. Easterling, 274 N.C. 152, 161 S.E.2d 531 (1968).

But Some Speculation Is Necessary to Determine Damages. — In allowing recovery under this section, this State's courts have recognized that, by necessity, some speculation is necessary in determining damages. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

And Jury May Base Speculation on Facts. — Damages in any wrongful death action are to some extent uncertain and speculative. A jury may indulge in speculation in assessing damages where it is necessary and there are sufficient facts to support speculation. Gay v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 394, 146 S.E.2d 425 (1966); Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

Some Speculation Not Grounds for Refusing All Damages. — The fact that the full extent of the damages must be a matter of some speculation is not ground for refusing all damages. Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975); Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

Nor Is Absence of Yardstick for Ascertaining Monetary Recovery. — Monetary recovery cannot be denied simply because no yardstick for ascertaining the amount thereof has been provided. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

Negative Factors Held Relevant to Present Monetary Value. — Evidence regarding 19 year old decedent's low level of educational attainment, absence of regular employment, status of dependency on her parents, and history of alcohol and drug abuse was clearly relevant to a determination of her "present monetary value ... to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered," and the jury could conclude that these negative factors offset, to the extent found, what decedent's present monetary value would have been in their absence. Pearce v. Fletcher, 74 N.C. App. 543, 328 S.E.2d 889 (1985), upholding award of damages in the amount of $5,000.

Under Subsection (b)(4), only reasonably expected net income of decedent can be recovered. Victim's parents, his only survivors, could only recover the amount of his income that they reasonably might have received had he lived. State v. Smith, 90 N.C. App. 161, 368 S.E.2d 33 (1988), aff'd, 323 N.C. 703, 374 S.E.2d 866, cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1100, 109 S. Ct. 2453, 104 L. Ed. 2d 1007 (1989).

Trial Court Erred in Application of This Section. — Although the trial court properly used the wrongful death statute to compute the amount of restitution which defendant found guilty of misdemeanor death by vehicle should pay, it erred in its application of this section. State v. Smith, 90 N.C. App. 161, 368 S.E.2d 33 (1988), aff'd, 323 N.C. 703, 374 S.E.2d 866, cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1100, 109 S. Ct. 2453, 104 L. Ed. 2d 1007 (1989).

Certain increased medical expenses as well as funeral bills incident to the death of a 40 week-old fetus could only be recovered by the administrator of the fetal estate pursuant to an action under this section. Johnson v. Ruark Obstetrics & Gynecology Assocs., 89 N.C. App. 154, 365 S.E.2d 909 (1988), aff'd, 327 N.C. 283, 395 S.E.2d 85 (1990), rehearing denied, 327 N.C. 644, 399 S.E.2d 133 (1990).

Injured Person's Right of Action to Recover Damages Survives. — An injured person's common-law right of action in respect of damages he sustained during the interval between injury and death now survives to his personal representative. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Damages Sustained by Deceased in His Lifetime Recoverable under Former Statute. — See Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946).

Liability of Damages for Payment of Decedent's Debts. — It seems improbable that the General Assembly intended that recovery for items of damage within subsection (b)(1), (2) and (5) should be exempt from liability for the payment of the debts and legacies of the decedent. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

The value of the life before 21 as well as after 21 years of age was recoverable. Gurley v. Southern Power Co., 172 N.C. 690, 90 S.E. 943 (1916).

Wrongful Death of Child. — The meaning of damages, in the case of the wrongful death of a child is the same as in the case of an adult. The difficulty is in the application. Russell v. Windsor Steamboat Co., 126 N.C. 961, 36 S.E. 191 (1900). See Gurley v. Southern Power Co., 172 N.C. 690, 90 S.E. 943 (1916); Scriven v. McDonald, 264 N.C. 727, 142 S.E.2d 585 (1965).

The measure of damages for the death of a child is the same as for an adult, notwithstanding the difficulty of applying the rule is greatly increased in the case of an infant. Burton v. Croghan, 265 N.C. 392, 144 S.E.2d 147 (1965).

Hedonic damages are not recoverable under subdivision (b) of this section. Livingston v. United States, 817 F. Supp. 601 (E.D.N.C. 1993).

Burden of Proof under Former Statute. — See Scriven v. McDonald, 264 N.C. 727, 142 S.E.2d 585 (1965); Greene v. Nichols, 274 N.C. 18, 161 S.E.2d 521 (1968); Maynor v. Townsend, 2 N.C. App. 19, 162 S.E.2d 677 (1968); Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975).

Instructions as to Life Expectancy of Persons Entitled to Recovery. — Where there is evidence tending to show that persons entitled to receive the damages recovered have a shorter life expectancy than that of deceased, it is error for the court to fail to instruct the jury to consider the life expectancy of such persons in determining the amount of damages recoverable. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 16 N.C. App. 70, 191 S.E.2d 419 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Argument that defendant would be obligated to pay every single dollar of the damage award might be interpreted by the jury as meaning that defendant was not protected by automobile liability insurance, and such argument was unfair to the plaintiff and improper. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

Instruction That Damages Are Tax Exempt Is Erroneous. — It is reversible error for the trial court to instruct the jury that damages awarded in a wrongful death action are exempt from federal and state income taxes. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

And Inequitable. — It would be inequitable to give an income tax exemption instruction to the jury without allowing evidence relative to the effect that the exemption would have on the future tax liability of each of the particular beneficiaries, which would unduly complicate a wrongful death action, which is already complicated by statute. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

Question of Damages Is for Jury. — See Carter v. North Carolina R.R., 139 N.C. 499, 52 S.E. 642 (1905); Horton v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 175 N.C. 472, 95 S.E. 883 (1918), appeal dismissed, 251 U.S. 566, 40 S. Ct. 180, 64 L. Ed. 417 (1920); Carpenter v. Asheville Power & Light Co., 191 N.C. 130, 131 S.E. 400 (1926).

The assessment of damages must, to a large extent, be left to the good sense and fair judgment of the jury. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

The assessment of damages must, to a large extent, be left to the good sense and fair judgment of the jury — subject, of course, to the discretionary power of the judge to set its verdict aside when, in his opinion, equity and justice so require. Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975).

The jurors being "the sole judges of the facts" are necessarily the sole judges of whether they are "satisfied from the evidence and by its greater weight" that plaintiff sustained damages and, if so, whether there is evidence from which they can reasonably determine the approximate amount of the plaintiff's pecuniary loss. Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975).

Trial Court Should Submit to Jury Separate Issues for Compensatory and Punitive Damages. — In wrongful death action, trial court should submit to jury separate issues for compensatory and punitive damages when evidence supports submission of these issues. Jones v. McCaskill, 99 N.C. App. 764, 394 S.E.2d 254 (1990).

Double Recovery Not Permitted. — Because recovery for any diminishment in the quality of life of the survivors in a wrongful death case is already addressed in effect under subdivisions (b)(4)b and (b)(4)c, allowance of separate hedonic damages would result in double recovery. Livingston v. United States, 817 F. Supp. 601 (E.D.N.C. 1993).

Relevant Evidence. — Evidence pertaining to disease of plaintiff's decedent and the effect it had on his relationship with his parents had a tendency to prove the extent of damages, which were in controversy in wrongful death action. The evidence was therefore relevant and should have been admitted on that ground. Hales v. Thompson, 111 N.C. App. 350, 432 S.E.2d 388 (1993).

B. Pain and Suffering.

There is a surviving cause of action for predeath expenses and pain and suffering. Brendle v. General Tire & Rubber Co., 408 F.2d 116 (4th Cir. 1969).

However, Decedent Must Have Been Conscious. — In an action under the Federal Tort Claims Act arising out of a vehicular accident, the extent of the accident inflicted massive head injuries making it improbable that the decedent was conscious following the collision, and therefore ruling out recovery for post-accident pain and suffering. Livingston v. United States, 817 F. Supp. 601 (E.D.N.C. 1993).

Recovery for Pain and Suffering and for Medical Expenses. — Recovery for pain and suffering and for hospital and medical expenses relate to a single cause of action and should be submitted upon a single issue of damages. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946); In re Peacock, 261 N.C. 749, 136 S.E.2d 91 (1964).

Damages for the pain and suffering of a decedent fetus are recoverable if they can be reasonably established. DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987).

C. Burial Expenses.

Recovery of Burial Expenses. — A cause of action does not exist for the recovery of burial expenses in an action for wrongful death separate and apart from the right to recover for the wrongful death. The statute provides for the payment of burial expenses out of "the amount recovered in such action." Davenport v. Patrick, 227 N.C. 686, 44 S.E.2d 203 (1947); Crawford v. Hudson, 3 N.C. App. 555, 165 S.E.2d 557 (1969), overruled on other grounds, Gibson v.

Campbell, 28 N.C. App. 653, 222 S.E.2d 449 (1976).

Prenatal Death of Viable Child. — Medical and funeral expenses, as well as punitive and nominal damages, should be allowed in the case of a decedent fetus where appropriate. DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987).

D. Loss of Decedent's Income, Services, Society, etc.

The paragraphs of subdivision (b)(4) enumerate some of the factors to be considered in determining the present monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered. Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975).

Damages determinable in accordance with subdivision (b)(4) are quite different from damages determinable on the basis of the pecuniary injury suffered by the decedent's estate as the result of his death. Smith v. Mercer, 276 N.C. 329, 172 S.E.2d 489 (1970); Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 16 N.C. App. 70, 191 S.E.2d 419 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

No rule is prescribed for the measurement or ascertainment of the damages recoverable under subdivision (b)(4). It would be difficult, if not impossible, to formulate a rule of general application for the measurement of such damages. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

The present monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered will usually defy any precise mathematical computation. Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975); Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

Damages for any items under subdivision (b)(4), unless the decedent was a person of established earning capacity beyond his or her personal needs, involve in large measure speculative and intangible considerations. Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975).

Since the persons entitled to the damages recovered may have suffered substantial losses on account of the items of damage under subdivision (b)(4), it cannot be said that there can be no recovery for these items of damages because no yardstick for ascertaining the amount thereof has been provided. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Direct evidence of earnings is not essential, it being sufficient to present evidence of "health, age, industry, means and business."

Maynor v. Townsend, 2 N.C. App. 19, 162 S.E.2d 677 (1968).

It is not essential that direct evidence of the earnings of a deceased adult be offered in order for there to be recovery of damages. Evidence of his health, age, industry, means and business are competent to show loss. Reeves v. Hill, 272 N.C. 352, 158 S.E.2d 529 (1968).

Although it is not essential that direct, specific evidence be offered with reference to decedent's earning capacity, it is required that plaintiff offer some evidence tending to show that intestate was potentially capable of earning money in excess of that which would be required for her support. Greene v. Nichols, 274 N.C. 18, 161 S.E.2d 521 (1968).

But Direct Evidence of Intent to Give Is Essential. — The trial judge erred in submitting to the jury as an element of damages the amount of income plaintiffs could reasonably have expected from the deceased where the plaintiffs presented no direct evidence that their deceased daughters "had ever expressed an intent to provide any of [their] income to [their] parents"; although the evidence indicated that deceased daughters were brought up in a family and culture within which intra-family financial assistance was favored, absolutely no evidence tended to show that the two teenage girls, specifically, would grow up to follow this example. Bahl v. Talford, 138 N.C. App. 119, 530 S.E.2d 347, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 537 (2000).

Prenatal Death of Viable Child. — Lost income damages normally available under subdivision (b)(4)a cannot be recovered in an action for the wrongful death of a stillborn child. DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987).

Damages normally recovered under subdivision (b)(4)b and c, for loss of services, companionship, advice and the like, will not be available in an action for the wrongful death of a viable fetus. DiDonato v. Wortman, 320 N.C. 423, 358 S.E.2d 489, rehearing denied, 320 N.C. 799, 361 S.E.2d 73 (1987).

Loss of bloodline and denial of grandchildren are not grounds for recovery under this section. Livingston v. United States, 817 F. Supp. 601 (E.D.N.C. 1993).

Evidence of Earnings in Excess of Amount Needed to Support Decedent Required. — It is required that plaintiff offer some evidence tending to show that intestate was potentially capable of earning money in excess of that which would be required for her support. Maynor v. Townsend, 2 N.C. App. 19, 162 S.E.2d 677 (1968).

Showing of Actual Support of Parents Not Required. — Trial judge did not err by instructing the jury that it could award damages to decedent's parents for the loss of her net income; there is no reason to demand actual support of the parents as the sole ground for any recovery of lost income since such a requirement would run counter to the remedial purpose of the statute and to the evidentiary provisions of subsection (c). Stutts v. Adair, 94 N.C. App. 227, 380 S.E.2d 411 (1989).

Estimating Life Expectancy of Child. — In an action for the wrongful death of a child nine years of age the rule for measuring damages is that expectancy of life may be determined by the jury based upon the constitution, health and habits of the infant, and where the jury was so instructed, it was not error for the court in illustrating the rule to use the figures 50 and 20 in referring to life expectancy. Rea v. Simowitz, 226 N.C. 379, 38 S.E.2d 194 (1946).

Expert Testimony as to Monetary Value of Decedent. — An expert economist's testimony in a wrongful death action as to the present monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive damages under subsection (b) was properly admitted in evidence without the witness first having placed into evidence the statistics, formulae, calculations and economic assumptions used in arriving at his opinion. While the failure to elaborate on the witness' computations might have weakened the probative value of the testimony, it did not affect its admissibility. Rutherford v. Bass Air Conditioning Co., 38 N.C. App. 630, 248 S.E.2d 887 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 586, 254 S.E.2d 34 (1979).

The testimony of an expert who predicted economic loss based on available knowledge pertaining to decedent, including testimony of his work supervisors and testimony regarding the decedent's skills and wage data, as well as expert's own expertise and ability to project a person's likely economic status through the use of data available in his field provided a reasonable basis for the computation of damages, even though the result was, at best, only approximate. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

Expert testimony is practically the only evidence available to prove future earnings in a wrongful death action. Thorpe v. Wilson, 58 N.C. App. 292, 293 S.E.2d 675 (1982).

When Judge Must Set Verdict Aside. — In awarding damages for wrongful death the jury is not ordinarily required as a matter of law to award damages for all or any of the items specified in paragraphs a, b, and c of subdivision (b)(4). It is only when the jury has arbitrarily disregarded the law and the evidence that the judge must exercise his judicial discretion and set the verdict aside. Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975).

Damages for Lost Future Wages Not Allowed for Fisherman. — Self-employed commercial fisherman was a "person otherwise engaged in maritime trade" and thus was prevented from recovering nonpecuniary damages or damages for lost future earnings. In re Goose Creek Trawlers, Inc., 972 F. Supp. 946 (E.D.N.C. 1997).

No evidence was offered showing that the decedent, who died of accidental strangulation in a nursing home, was potentially capable of earning money in excess of that which would be required for her support, and the jury's award as to these damages, therefore, would necessarily be based on speculation and not supported by evidence; consequently, the trial court erred in instructing the jury that it could award damages for loss of the decedent's net income, pursuant to G.S. § 28A-18-2(b)(4), which required a new trial as to the issue of damages for the decedent's wrongful death. Estate of Hendrickson v. Genesis Health Venture, Inc., 151 N.C. App. 139, 565 S.E.2d 254, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 722 (2002), cert. denied, 356 N.C. 299, 570 S.E.2d 503 (2002).

E. Punitive Damages.

Three Categories of Conduct Affording Recovery. — By providing for recovery of punitive damages upon a showing of "maliciousness, wilful or wanton injury, or gross negligence" it appears that the General Assembly intended to establish three separate categories of conduct which would afford a recovery. Cole v. Duke Power Co., 81 N.C. App. 213, 344 S.E.2d 130, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 281, 347 S.E.2d 462 (1986).

Recovery for Gross Negligence Even Absent Wilful or Wanton Conduct. — This section allows recovery of punitive damages in wrongful death actions involving gross negligence even when no wilful or wanton conduct was involved. To establish gross negligence, the plaintiff must show negligence of an aggravated character. Henderson v. LeBauer, 101 N.C. App. 255, 399 S.E.2d 142 (1991).

Gross Negligence Authorizes Punitive Damages. — Although the term "gross negligence" is not defined in this section, based on prior case law the inclusion of gross negligence would authorize punitive damages in cases where the defendant's conduct was something less than wilful or wanton. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

This section specifically allows the award of punitive damages upon a showing of gross negligence. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982); Cole v. Duke Power Co., 81 N.C. App. 213, 344 S.E.2d 130, cert. denied, Sedberry v. Johnson, 62 N.C. App.

425, 302 S.E.2d 924 (1983).

"Gross negligence" does not constitute a lower standard of negligence than "wilful or wanton conduct" in the context of a wrongful death suit. Benton v. Hillcrest Foods, Inc., 136 N.C. App. 42, 524S.E.2d 53, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 1296 (1999).

Punitive Damages Not Recoverable from Wrongdoer's Personal Representative. — The general rule is that there can be no recovery for punitive damages against the personal representative of the deceased wrongdoer, however aggravated the circumstances may be. The sole purpose of the allowance of punitive damages is to punish the wrongdoer. The death of the wrongdoer precludes his being punished by the assessment of punitive damages. Thorpe v. Wilson, 58 N.C. App. 292, 293 S.E.2d 675 (1982).

Punitive damages are recoverable from municipalities in wrongful death cases on the same basis as from other tort-feasors. Jackson v. Housing Auth., 73 N.C. App. 363, 326 S.E.2d 295 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 259, 341 S.E.2d 523 (1986).

Reading portions of G.S. 12-3(6) into this section, the North Carolina Wrongful Death Act contains a statutory provision providing for the recovery of punitive damages from bodies politic, which includes municipal corporations. Jackson v. Housing Auth., 316 N.C. 259, 341 S.E.2d 523 (1986).

Recovery from Municipal Corporations. — This section, the North Carolina Wrongful Death Act, contains a statutory provision providing for the recovery of punitive damages from bodies politic, which includes municipal corporations. Jackson v. Housing Auth., 316 N.C. 259, 341 S.E.2d 523 (1986).

Evidence Meriting Submission of Punitive Damages. — In wrongful death case, plaintiff's evidence which tended to show numerous violations of the National Electric Safety Code and of defendant power company's own standards was sufficient to merit the submission of the issue of punitive damages to the jury. Beck v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 57 N.C. App. 373, 291 S.E.2d 897, aff'd, 307 N.C. 267, 297 S.E.2d 397 (1982).

When Directed Verdict Proper as to Claim for Punitive Damages. — In a wrongful death action arising out of negligence, a directed verdict may properly be granted against a plaintiff seeking punitive damages only where the evidence is insufficient as a matter of law to support a jury finding that the defendant wrongfully caused the death of the decedent in a malicious, wilful, wanton or grossly negligent manner. Boyd v. L.G. DeWitt Trucking Co., 103 N.C. App. 396, 405 S.E.2d 914, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 193, 412 S.E.2d 53 (1991).

Evidence Sufficient to Support Award of Punitive Damages. — Evidence of truck driver's driving record was sufficient for jury to find that trucker was an unsafe driver, that company for which he worked either knew or should have known of his danger to the rest of the driving public, and given the number and severity of his offense, was equally sufficient to support the jury's finding that company's negligent entrustment was wilful or wanton, so as to justify denial of defendants' motions for a directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on plaintiff's claim for punitive damages arising out of company's negligent entrustment. Boyd v. L.G. DeWitt Trucking Co., 103 N.C. App. 396, 405 S.E.2d 914, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 193, 412 S.E.2d 53 (1991).

Personal Representative's Claim Not Barred for Failure to Join with Parents. — Administratrix's claim for punitive damages for death of stillborn child was not barred merely because it was not joined with the settled claim of the parents; if defendants wished to allege that part of the moneys the parents received in settlement of their claims was for punitive damages, defendants would have a right to support that contention with evidence and have the jury consider it in evaluating the administratrix's claim for punitive damages. Greer v. Parsons, 103 N.C. App. 463, 405 S.E.2d 921, aff'd, 331 N.C. 368, 416 S.E.2d 174 (1992).

F. Nominal Damages.

Applicable Where No Pecuniary Loss Suffered. — Subdivision (b)(6) supplies a statutory basis which was lacking when previous cases were decided. Nominal damages and costs may now be recovered if the jury finds that the decedent's death was caused by the defendant's wrongful act but fails to find that such death caused pecuniary loss. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973); Lentz v. Gardin, 30 N.C. App. 379, 226 S.E.2d 839, remanded on other grounds, 294 N.C. 425, 241 S.E.2d 508 (1978).

Jury Not Required to Award Damages. — A jury will not be required to award damages when the evidence adduced does not establish to its satisfaction facts which will reasonably support an assessment. In such a situation, by subdivision (b)(6) the legislature authorized "nominal damages when the jury so finds." Brown v. Moore, 286 N.C. 664, 213 S.E.2d 342 (1975).

Nominal Damages Appropriate. — Where the jury found that plaintiff had been "damaged by the negligence of the defendant", that the plaintiff's intestate did not contribute to her own injuries, and that plaintiff established her cause of action for wrongful death, the trial court erred in refusing to enter an award of nominal damages. Porter v. Leneave, 119 N.C. App. 343, 458 S.E.2d 513 (1995).

VI. ADMISSION OF DYING DECLARATIONS.

This is a general statute changing the rule of evidence, in which no one has a vested interest and which the law-making power can extend, alter or repeal at will. Williams v. Randolph & C.R.R., 182 N.C. 267, 108 S.E. 915 (1921).

And this change is valid and constitutional. Tatham v. Andrews Mfg. Co., 180 N.C. 627, 105 S.E. 423 (1920).

What Declarations Permitted. — This section permits in evidence declarations of the act of killing and circumstances immediately attendant on the act, which constitute a part of the res gestae, uttered when the declarant was in actual danger of death, and made in full apprehension thereof, and when the death accordingly ensued. Tatham v. Andrews Mfg. Co., 180 N.C. 627, 105 S.E. 423 (1920).

As in criminal actions for homicide, the dying declarations of one whose wrongful death has been caused, to be admissible upon the trial of an action to recover damages for his wrongful death, must have been voluntarily made while the declarant was in extremis or under a sense of impending death, and must be confined to the act of killing and the attendant circumstances forming a part of the res gestae. Dellinger v. Elliott Bldg. Co., 187 N.C. 845, 123 S.E. 78 (1924).

Preliminary Facts Must Be Shown. — The dying declarations of a deceased person for whose death an action has been brought under this section are competent as evidence, provided the preliminary facts are made to appear. Southwell v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 189 N.C. 417, 127 S.E. 361 (1925).

Otherwise they are not admissible. Holmes v. Wharton, 194 N.C. 470, 140 S.E. 93 (1927).

Declarations Made Before Occurrence of Accident. — Where the declarant was fatally injured in an automobile accident, declarations made by him the night before and two days before undertaking the journey are not admissible as dying declarations. Gassaway v. Gassaway, 220 N.C. 694, 18 S.E.2d 120 (1942).

Testimony of Statement Held Inadmissible. — In a workers' compensation case, testimony of a statement by an officer shortly before his death from coronary occlusion that he "had had a time all the morning" arresting three men who resisted him, was incompetent as a dying declaration, not having been brought within the terms of this section. West v. North Carolina Dep't of Conservation & Dev., 229 N.C. 232, 49 S.E.2d 398 (1948).

§ 28A-18-3. To sue or defend in representative capacity.

All actions and proceedings brought by or against personal representatives or collectors upon any cause of action or right to which the estate of the decedent is the real party in interest, must be brought by or against them in their representative capacity. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 79; Code, s. 1507; Rev., s. 160; C.S., s. 164; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Right of Action for Wrongful Death Is Purely Statutory. — Because the right to an action for wrongful death rests entirely upon the Wrongful Death Act, it must be asserted in conformity therewith. Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 389 (1983).

Suit Must Be Brought by Personal Representative. — Under the Wrongful Death Act, G.S. 28A-18-2, the administrator of an intestate, or the executor of one who dies testate, may institute an action for wrongful death; and he does so as the representative of the estate. Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 389 (1983).

Application to Administrator De Bonis Non. — The provisions of this section apply to suits brought by administrator de bonis non, as well as to original administrator, and are mandatory. There is no middle ground. Rogers v. Gooch, 87 N.C. 442 (1882).

This section is silent as to any distinction between a resident and a foreign personal representative. Franklin v. Standard Cellulose Prods., Inc., 261 N.C. 626, 135 S.E.2d 655 (1964).

There is no statutory authority for a foreign executor or administrator to come into State courts and prosecute or defend an action in his representative capacity. Cannon v. Cannon, 228 N.C. 211, 45 S.E.2d 34 (1947); Brauff v. Commissioner of Revenue, 251 N.C. 452, 111 S.E.2d 620 (1959).

Action Against Nonresident Motorist's Personal Representatives Is Authorized as Exception. — An action authorized by former G.S. 1-105, as amended in 1953 to allow service of process upon the executor or administrator of a nonresident motorist, is an exception to the general rule stated in Cannon v. Cannon, 228 N.C. 211, 45 S.E.2d 34 (1947); Franklin v. Standard Cellulose Prods., Inc., 261 N.C. 626, 135 S.E.2d 655 (1964).

Action to collect note payable to decedent and maturing before his death must be instituted by the representative of his estate in his representative capacity. Cannon v. Cannon, 228 N.C. 211, 45 S.E.2d 34 (1947).

Heirs have no right to be made parties to an action on an account against a personal representative, although they allege collusion between the plaintiff and the representative. Byrd v. Byrd, 117 N.C. 523, 23 S.E. 324 (1895).

Applied in Tinkham v. Hall, 47 N.C. App. 651, 267 S.E.2d 588 (1980).

§ 28A-18-4. Service on or appearance of one binds all.

In actions against personal representatives or collectors, they are all to be considered as one person, representing the decedent; and if the summons is served on one or more, but not all, the plaintiff may proceed against those served, and if he recovers, judgment may be entered against all. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 81; Code, s. 1508; Rev., s. 161; C.S., s. 165; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-18-5. When creditors may sue on claim; execution in such action.

An action may be brought by a creditor against the personal representative or collector on a demand at any time after it is due, but no execution shall issue against the personal representative or collector on a judgment therein against him without leave of the court, upon notice of 20 days and upon proof that the defendant has refused to pay such judgment or its ratable part, and such judgment shall be a lien on the property of the estate of the decedent only from the time of such leave granted. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 82; Code, s. 1509; Rev., s. 162; C.S., s. 166; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Any Court May Entertain Suit to Establish Claim. — In construing this section, it was decided at a very early day after its enactment that any court having jurisdiction of the amount sued for could entertain the suit of the creditor so far as to establish his claim and give him judgment therefor. Heilig v. Foard, 64 N.C. 710 (1870); Vaughn v. Stephenson, 69 N.C. 212 (1873); Shields v. Payne, 80 N.C. 291 (1879); Hoover v. Berryhill, 84 N.C. 132 (1881).

Jurisdiction for Breach of Contract. — The superior court in term has, under this section, jurisdiction of an action by a creditor against an administrator for breach of a contract made by his interstate. Shields v. Payne, 80 N.C. 291 (1879).

What Court May Grant Leave to Issue Execution. — The court which, under this section, may grant leave to issue execution is the court which has jurisdiction of probate matters, and no other court. Vaughn v. Stephenson, 69 N.C. 212 (1873).

§ 28A-18-6. Service by publication on executor without bond.

Whenever process may issue against an executor who has not given bond, and the same cannot be served upon him by reason of his absence or concealment, service of such process may be made by publication in the manner prescribed in other civil actions. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 94; Code, s. 1523; Rev., s. 163; C.S., s. 167; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-18-7. Execution by successor in office.

Any personal representative or collector may have execution issued on any judgment recovered by any person who preceded him in the administration of the estate, or by the decedent, in the same cases and the same manner as the original plaintiff might have done. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 84; Code, s. 1513; Rev., s. 164; C.S., s. 168; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-18-8. Action to continue, though letters revoked.

In case the letters of a personal representative or collector are revoked, pending an action to which he is a party, the adverse party may, notwithstanding, continue the action against him in order to charge him personally. If such party does not elect so to do, within six months after notice of such revocation, the action may be continued against the successor of the personal representative or collector in the administration of the estate, in the same manner as in case of death. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 85; Code, s. 1514; Rev., s. 165; C.S., s. 169; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 19.

*Claims Against the Estate.§ 28A-19-1. Manner of presentation of claims.

(a) A claim against a decedent's estate must be in writing and state the amount or item claimed, or other relief sought, the basis for the claim, and the name and address of the claimant; and must be presented by one of the following methods:

- (1) By delivery in person or by mail to the personal representative, collector or clerk of superior court. Such claim will be deemed to have been presented from the time of such delivery.
- (2) By mailing, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, to the personal representative or collector at the address set out in the general notice to creditors. Such claim will be deemed to have been presented from the time when the return receipt is signed by the personal representative, collector, or his agent, or is refused by the personal representative, collector, or his agent.
- (3) By delivery to the clerk of court of the county in which the estate is pending, which notice shall be filed in the appropriate estate file and copy mailed first class by the clerk of superior court at the expense of the claimant to the personal representative, collector, or his agent. The claim will be deemed to have been presented from the time of delivery to the clerk of court.

(b) In an action commenced after the death of the decedent against his personal representative or collector as such, the commencement of the action in the court in which such personal representative or collector qualified will constitute the presentation of a claim and no further presentation is necessary. In an action filed in any other court such claim will be deemed to have been presented at the time of the completion of service of process on such personal representative or collector.

(c) In an action pending against the decedent at the time of his death, which action survives at law, the substitution of the personal representative or collector for the decedent or motion therefor will constitute the presentation of a claim and no further presentation is necessary. Such claim will be deemed to have been presented from the time of the substitution, or motion therefor. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 446, s. 1; 1985, c. 645, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

No Preemption by ERISA. — The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq., does not preempt this section and G.S. 28A-19-3 in action by plaintiffs who challenged the acts of several defendants involving the seizure of surplus assets from a retirement plan and the use of an annuity backed by junk bonds to increase to monetary amount of the surplus seized. Riley v. Murdock, 828 F. Supp. 1215 (E.D.N.C. 1993), aff'd, 83 F.3d 415 (4th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 964, 117 S. Ct. 387, 136 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1996).

Failure to Properly Present Claim. — Claimants' notice of claim against the decedent's estate was barred under G.S. 28A-19-3(a), where, among other things, the claimants failed to state the amount or item claimed, the particular basis for their claim, and the dates upon which services were rendered as was required under G.S. 28A-19-1(a). Holloman v. Harrelson, 149 N.C. App. 861, 561 S.E.2d 351, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 304 (2002), cert. dismissed, 355 N.C. 748, 565 S.E.2d 664 (2002), cert. denied, 355 N.C. 748, 565 S.E.2d 665 (2002).

§ 28A-19-2. Further information or affidavit of claim may be required.

(a) If the personal representative or collector so elects, he may demand any or all of the following prior to taking action on the claim:

- (1) If the claim is not yet due, that the date when it will become due be stated;
- (2) If the claim is contingent or unliquidated, that the nature of the uncertainty be stated;
- (3) If the claim is secured, that the security be described.

(b) Upon any claim being presented against the estate in the manner prescribed in G.S. 28A-19-1, the personal representative or collector may require the affidavit of the claimant or other satisfactory evidence that such claim is justly due, that no payments have been made thereon, and that there are no offsets against the same, to the knowledge of the claimant; or if any payments have been made, or any offsets exist that their nature and amount be shown by the evidence or stated in the affidavit. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 33; Code, s. 1425; Rev., s. 91; C.S., s. 98; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 446, s. 1.)

§ 28A-19-3. Limitations on presentation of claims.

(a) All claims against a decedent's estate which arose before the death of the decedent, except contingent claims based on any warranty made in connection with the conveyance of real estate and claims of the United States and tax claims of the State of North Carolina and subdivisions thereof, whether due or to become due, absolute or contingent, liquidated or unliquidated, secured or unsecured, founded on contract, tort, or other legal basis, which are not presented to the personal representative or collector pursuant to G.S. 28A-19-1 by the date specified in the general notice to creditors as provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1(a) or in those cases requiring the delivery or mailing of notice as provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1(b), within 90 days after the date of the delivery or mailing of the notice if the expiration of said 90-day period is later than the date specified in the general notice to creditors, are forever barred against the estate, the personal representative, the collector, the heirs, and the devisees of the decedent. Provided further, if the expiration of said 90-day period is later than the date specified in the general notice to creditors, the notice delivered or mailed to each creditor, if any, shall be accompanied by a statement which specifies the deadline for filing the claim of the affected creditor.

(b) All claims against a decedent's estate which arise at or after the death of the decedent, except claims of the United States and tax claims of the State of North Carolina and subdivisions thereof whether due or to become due, absolute or contingent, liquidated or unliquidated, secured or unsecured, founded on contract, tort, or other legal basis are forever barred against the estate, the personal representative, the collector, the heirs, and the devisees of the decedent unless presented to the personal representative or collector as follows:

- (1) With respect to any claim based on a contract with the personal representative or collector, within six months after the date on which performance by the personal representative or collector is due;
- (2) With respect to any claim other than a claim based on a contract with the personal representative or collector, within six months after the date on which the claim arises.

(c) Except as otherwise provided by subsection (f) of this section, no claim shall be barred by the statute of limitations which was not barred thereby at the time of the decedent's death, if the claim is presented within the period provided by subsection (a) hereof.

(d) All claims of creditors upon whom there has been personal service of notice as provided in G.S. 28A-14-3 are forever barred unless presented to the personal representative or collector within the time and manner set out in this Article.

(e) Except as otherwise provided by subsection (f) of this section, unless a claim has been presented pursuant to G.S. 28A-19-1 giving notice of an action or special proceeding pending against a decedent at the time of his death and surviving under G.S. 28A-18-1 within the time provided by subsection (a) of this section, no recovery may be had upon any judgment obtained in any such action or proceeding against the estate, the personal representative, the collector, the heirs, and the devisees of the decedent.

(f) All claims barrable under the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) hereof shall, in any event, be barred if the first publication or posting of the general notice to creditors as provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1 does not occur within three years after the death of the decedent.

(g) Nothing in this section affects or prevents any action or proceeding to enforce any mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, lien (including judgment lien), or other security interest upon any property of the decedent's estate, but no deficiency judgment will be allowed if the provisions of this section are not complied with.

(h) The word "claim" as used in this section does not apply to claims of heirs or devisees to their respective shares or interests in the decedent's estate in their capacity as such heirs or devisees.

(i) Nothing in this section shall bar:

- (1) Any claim alleging the liability of the decedent or personal representative; or
- (2) Any proceeding or action to establish the liability of the decedent or personal representative; or
- (3) The recovery on any judgment against the decedent or personal representative to the extent that the decedent or personal representative is protected by insurance coverage with respect to such claim, proceeding or judgment or where there is underinsured or uninsured motorist coverage that might extend to such claim, proceeding, or judgment. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 446, s. 1; 1979, c. 509, s. 1; 1989, c. 378, s. 3; c. 485, s. 65.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — This section is the type of statute that is commonly referred to as a "non-claim statute" and although similar to a statute of limitations, it serves a different purpose and operates independently of the statute of limitations that may also be applicable to a given claim. Ragan v. Hill, 337 N.C. 667, 447 S.E.2d 371 (1994).

Limitations on the filing of an action are applicable to statutes of limitations which restrict the assertion of legal rights to a specific time period in order to avoid stale claims, and a cause of action may be barred by this section, G.S. 1-52(5), or both of these statutes. Ragan v. Hill, 337 N.C. 667, 447 S.E.2d 371 (1994).

No Preemption by ERISA. — The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq., does not preempt G.S. 28A-19-1 and this section in action by plaintiffs who challenged the acts of several defendants involving the seizure of surplus assets from a retirement plan and the use of an annuity backed by junk bonds to increase to monetary amount of the surplus seized. Riley v. Murdock, 828 F. Supp. 1215 (E.D.N.C. 1993), aff'd, 83 F.3d 415 (4th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 964, 117 S. Ct. 387, 136 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1996).

Proof of Advertisement Required. — When an administrator or executor pleads subsection (a) of this section as a defense against claims presented against the estate, he must establish the fact that he did advertise as required by G.S. 28A-14-1. Failure of such proof causes failure of the defense. Anderson v. Gooding, 300 N.C. 170, 265 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

Filing of Claim in Court Not Required. — Section 28A-19-1 sets out the manner of presentation of claims including some circumstances under which the filing of an action in a court of law may constitute the presentation of a claim; however, this section does not require the filing of an action in a court of law. Ragan v. Hill, 337 N.C. 667, 447 S.E.2d 371 (1994).

Language of subsection (i) provides an exception to limitations only for claims where there is insurance under which a decedent was insured. Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 232 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Action Not Time Barred. — Action filed on October 20, 2000, two days after qualification of deceased driver's personal representative, for personal injuries arising out of an automobile accident that occurred on June 27, 1997, was not barred by G.S. 1-52, where deceased died on November 7, 1997, at which time the three year limitations period had not yet expired, as under G.S. 28A-18-1 plaintiff's cause of action survived his death, and thus, pursuant to G.S. 1-22, plaintiff was permitted to commence a cause of action against deceased's personal representative, provided that either the action was brought within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3, or that notice of the claim upon which the action was based was presented to the personal representative within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3. The personal representative's failure to establish in the record that she complied with G.S. 28A-19-3(a) regarding general notice to creditors precluded her from relying upon the statute of limitations as a bar; moreover, under G.S. 28A-14-1(a), the absolute earliest "deadline" date which could have been specified by the personal representative in the general notice to creditors was January 18, 2001, three months from the day of the first publication or posting of such notice. Mabry v. Huneycutt, 149 N.C. App. 630, 562 S.E.2d 292, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 271 (2002).

Recovery Limited After Six Months. — Automobile accident victim who filed suit more than six months after the accident was limited in his amount of recovery by the amount of the deceased defendant's automobile insurance. Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 232 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Claim Not Barred Where Personal Representative Was Not Appointed. — Plaintiffs' cause of action is not barred for failure to present the claim to the personal representative within the time prescribed by subsection (b) where no personal representative or collector had been appointed for the estate. Ragan v. Hill, 337 N.C. 667, 447 S.E.2d 371 (1994).

In light of North Carolina Supreme Court precedent, where no estate administrator had been appointed within the statute of limitations and there was insurance coverage that covered a victim's claim, the statute of limitations did not bar a victim's claim. Simpson v. McConnell, 156 N.C. App. 424, 576 S.E.2d 419, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 104 (2003).

Claim Not Barred If Personal Representative Appointed Before Limitations Period Expires. — If a personal representative is appointed to administer an estate before the expiration of the statute of limitations, G.S. 1-22 allows the time limit within which to file an action against the estate to be extended according to G.S. 28A-19-3. Shaw v. Mintz, 151 N.C. App. 82, 564 S.E.2d 593, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 674 (2002).

Extension of Statute of Limitations After Appointment of Personal Representative. — If a personal representative is appointed to administer an estate before the statute of limitations lapses, G.S. 1-22 will allow the time limit within which to file an action against the estate to be extended according to G.S. 28A-19-3. Wright v. Smith, 151 N.C. App. 121, 564 S.E.2d 613, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 681 (2002).

Under Subsection (i) Plaintiff Barred from Claim Greater Than Underinsurance Coverage. — Where, pursuant to subsection (i) of this section, all that plaintiff could recover from the underinsured decedent was the $25,000.00 coverage the decedent had under his policy with insurer, plaintiff, who was only legally entitled, by statute, to recover this amount, and nothing more, from decedent could not bring a claim for a greater amount against insurer under his underinsured motorist endorsement. Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 232 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Failure to Properly Present Claim. — Claimants' notice of claim against the decedent's estate was barred under G.S. 28A-19-3(a), where, among other things, the claimants failed to state the amount or item claimed, the particular basis for their claim, and the dates upon which the services were rendered as was required under G.S. 28A-19-1(a). Holloman v. Harrelson, 149 N.C. App. 861, 561 S.E.2d 351, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 304 (2002), cert. dismissed, 355 N.C. 748, 565 S.E.2d 664 (2002), cert. denied, 355 N.C. 748, 565 S.E.2d 665 (2002).

Notice to Creditors Held Fatally Defective. — An executor's general notice to creditors published in a newspaper was fatally defective where it failed to name a day after which claims would be barred and failed to give notice that claims must be filed within six months from the day of the first publication of the notice; therefore, the notice to creditors was ineffective to start the running of the six months' statute of limitations of subsection (a) of this section in bar of a claim against decedent's estate to recover for personal injuries received in an automobile accident. Anderson v. Gooding, 300 N.C. 170, 265 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

Wrongful Death Recovery Held Not Barred by Section. — The failure of a plaintiff to file a claim against a decedent's estate within the six months stipulated by this section does not bar recovery for wrongful death where plaintiff is seeking to collect damages out of an automobile liability insurance policy. Thorpe v. Wilson, 58 N.C. App. 292, 293 S.E.2d 675 (1982).

Garage and wrecker service owner, who had a valid lien incident to storage of defendant's vehicles pursuant to court order, could proceed against the property or the proceeds of its sale up to its value without filing the usual notice of claim under subsection (a) of this section, by virtue of subsection (g). Case v. Miller, 68 N.C. App. 729, 315 S.E.2d 737 (1984).

Claim for Compensation for Occupation of Property Not Barred Where Presented Within Period Under Section. — A landowner's claim for "reasonable compensation" for occupation of her property (G.S. 42-4), brought against one of the former co-tenants as administratrix of her husband's estate, was presented to the administratrix within the statutory period under this section and was therefore not barred by the three-year statute of limitations (G.S. 1-52(2)) as of the decedent's death. The landowner was allowed to sue the administratrix for rents not paid in the period of three years prior to the decedent's death, although the action itself was not brought until some six months after this date. Simon v. Mock, 75 N.C. App. 564, 331 S.E.2d 300 (1985).

Reopening of Estate After Six-Month Period. — The provision in G.S. 28A-23-5 prohibiting any claim which is already barred from being asserted in the reopened estate primarily refers to the limitations in this section on the presentation of claims. Thus, an estate may not ordinarily be reopened for the litigation of claims not brought within the six-month period, even in the absence of a bar by some other statute of limitations. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

Refusal of Clerk to Reopen Upheld. — In light of the public policy in favor of the expedited administration of estates, as evidenced by the six-month statute of limitations and other provisions of this Chapter, petitioner who alleged that the deceased had promised to devise a life estate to her had a heavy burden of justifying her failure to bring her suit within the six-month period provided for that purpose, or at the very least, within the greater than two-year period that the estate actually remained open. There was no error in the clerk's determination that this burden was not met. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

Recovery Limited to Extent of Decedent's Liability Insurance. — Trial court erred in denying the injured party's motion to amend the complaint because the injured party's error was a misnomer, the intended defendant (the executor) was served, and the amendment would not prejudice the executor; however, because the injured party did not present the claim to the estate in accordance with the non-claim statute, G.S. 28A-19-3, the injured party's recovery was limited to the extent of the decedent's liability insurance. Pierce v. Johnson, 154 N.C. App. 34, 571 S.E.2d 661, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1406 (2002).

§ 28A-19-4. Payment of claims and charges.

As soon as the personal representative or collector is possessed of sufficient means over and above the other costs of administration, he shall pay the year's allowances in the amounts and in the manner prescribed in G.S. 30-15 to 30-33. Prior to the date specified in the general notice to creditors as provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1, the personal representative or collector may pay such other claims and charges as he deems in the best interest of the estate if the total assets are sufficient to pay all claims and charges against the estate. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 446, s. 1.)

§ 28A-19-5. Contingent claims.

If a contingent or unliquidated claim becomes absolute before the distribution of the estate of the decedent, it shall be paid in the same manner as absolute claims of the same class. In other cases the clerk of superior court may provide for the payment of contingent or unliquidated claims in any one of the following ways:

- (1) The creditor and the personal representative or collector may determine, by agreement, arbitration, or compromise, the value of the contingent or unliquidated claim, according to its probable present worth, and with the approval of the clerk of superior court, it may be allowed and paid in the same manner as an absolute claim.
- (2) The clerk of superior court may order the personal representative or collector to retain sufficient funds to pay the claim if and when the same becomes absolute, and order distribution of the balance of the estate.
- (3) The clerk of superior court may order distribution of the estate as though the contingent or unliquidated claim did not exist, but the heirs and devisees of the estate of the decedent are liable to the creditor to the extent of the estate received by them, if the contingent or unliquidated claim thereafter becomes absolute; and the court may require such heirs and devisees to give bond for the performance of their liability to the contingent or unliquidated creditor.
- (4) Such other method as the clerk of superior court may order. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-19-6. Order of payment of claims.

After payment of costs and expenses of administration, the claims against the estate of a decedent must be paid in the following order:

First class. Claims which by law have a specific lien on property to an amount not exceeding the value of such property.

Second class. Funeral expenses to the extent of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500). This limitation shall not include cemetery lot or gravestone. The preferential limitation herein granted shall be construed to be only a limit with respect to preference of payment and shall not be construed to be a limitation on reasonable funeral expenses which may be incurred; nor shall the preferential limitation of payment in the amount of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) be diminished by any Veterans Administration, social security or other federal governmental benefits awarded to the estate of the decedent or to his or her beneficiaries.

Third class. All dues, taxes, and other claims with preference under the laws of the United States.

Fourth class. All dues, taxes, and other claims with preference under the laws of the State of North Carolina and its subdivisions.

Fifth class. Judgments of any court of competent jurisdiction within the State, docketed and in force, to the extent to which they are a lien on the property of the decedent at his death.

Sixth class. Wages due to any employee employed by the decedent, which claim for wages shall not extend to a period of more than 12 months next preceding the death; or if such employee was employed for the year current at the decease, then from the time of such employment; for medical services within the 12 months preceding the decease; for drugs and all other medical supplies necessary for the treatment of such decedent during the last illness of such decedent, said period of last illness not to exceed 12 months.

Seventh class. All other claims. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 24; Code, s. 1416; Rev., s. 87; C.S., s. 93; 1941, c. 271; 1955, c. 641, s. 1; 1967, c. 1066; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1981, c. 383, ss. 1, 2; 1987, c. 286; 1995, c. 262, s. 8.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

The intention of the legislature is that the assets of a decedent shall be administered, as far as may be done, in one proceeding, upon proper safeguards, for the benefit of all the creditors. Atkinson v. Ricks, 140 N.C. 418, 53 S.E. 230 (1906).

Priorities Among Creditors Established. — This section was only designed to recognize priorities among the creditors of the deceased and to establish the order of payment between claimants who have valid debts against the deceased. It was never intended to create a liability which did not otherwise exist. Bowen v. Daugherty, 168 N.C. 242, 84 S.E. 265 (1915).

Recognizing priority of classes, this section provides for the administration of assets for the benefit of all the creditors, according to definite and established rules. Farmville Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Bourne, 205 N.C. 337, 171 S.E. 368 (1933).

Strict Construction. — This section, being in derogation of the equity of a pro rata distribution, should be strictly construed so as not to confer a priority over other creditors unless it is clearly called for. Baker v. Dawson, 131 N.C. 227, 42 S.E. 588 (1902); Park View Hosp. Ass'n v. People's Bank & Trust Co., 211 N.C. 244, 189 S.E. 766 (1937); Underwood v. Ward, 239 N.C. 513, 80 S.E.2d 267 (1954).

If decedent's estate is not sufficient to pay his debts in full, then they are to be paid in classes, with those of the last class, if and when reached, sharing ratably in what is left. Rigsbee v. Brogden, 209 N.C. 510, 184 S.E. 24 (1936).

Duty of Representative. — To carry out the order designated by this section is a duty of the representative. State v. Oliver, 104 N.C. 458, 10 S.E. 709 (1889).

Testator Cannot Change Statutory Priority. — A testator may not so dispose of his estate as to avoid the payment of his debts in accordance with the priorities fixed by this section. First Sec. Trust Co. v. Lentz, 196 N.C. 398, 145 S.E. 776 (1928).

Where debtor's lands are sold under order of court to make assets, proceeds remain real estate until all liens are discharged, and are to be applied to payment of liens in the order of their priority, and only the residue, if any, is payable to administrator as personal property to be distributed in the order provided by this section. Moore v. Jones, 226 N.C. 149, 36 S.E.2d 920 (1946), citing Murchison v. Williams, 71 N.C. 135 (1874). See Williams v. Johnson, 230 N.C. 338, 53 S.E.2d 277 (1949).

Creditor Must First Exhaust Security. — Upon the death of an obligor the administration laws step in and determine the settlement of his estate. These have heretofore been construed by the Supreme Court to favor the bankruptcy rule. Thus a secured creditor is required to exhaust his security and then prove his claim for any balance still remaining or unpaid. Rierson v. Hanson, 211 N.C. 203, 189 S.E. 502 (1937).

Holder of Secured Note Must Exhaust Security and Then File Claim for Balance. — The holder of a note executed or assumed by the deceased, and secured by a deed of trust or mortgage, must first exhaust the security and apply the same on the debt, and may then file a claim against the estate for the balance due, if any. But the holder of such note may not file claim and receive pro rata dividend on the basis of the full claim. Montsinger v. White, 240 N.C. 441, 82 S.E.2d 362 (1954).

Execution on a personal money judgment after the death of the debtor is barred. The holder of the judgment must look to the duly appointed administrator for payment of the judgment according to the priorities prescribed by this section. Henderson County v. Osteen, 28 N.C. App. 542, 221 S.E.2d 903 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 692, 235 S.E.2d 166 (1977).

Validity of Unrecorded Chattel Mortgage Not Affected. — This statutory provision does not bear upon whether an unrecorded chattel mortgage, valid as against the intestate, is to like extent valid against his estate. Coastal Sales Co. v. Weston, 245 N.C. 621, 97 S.E.2d 267 (1957).

This section creates no preference for payment on bank stock out of the assets of the estate of a deceased stockholder, and none results from the application of the pertinent principles of equity. Hood v. Darden, 206 N.C. 566, 174 S.E. 460 (1934).

Fees of a referee taxed against an administrator are not a preferred debt under this section. Cobb v. Rhea, 137 N.C. 295, 49 S.E. 161 (1904), petition to rehear dismissed, 140 N.C. 650, 52 S.E. 1038 (1905).

Where debtor's lands are sold under order of court to make assets, no part of the proceeds may be taxed with costs of administration. However, a referee's fee by G.S. 6-21 is taxable in the discretion of the court. Williams v. Johnson, 230 N.C. 338, 53 S.E.2d 277 (1949).

II. SPECIFIC LIENS ON PROPERTY.

The evident purpose of this section relating to debts of the first class is to benefit the estate, particularly the creditors thereof next in line for payment. Underwood v. Ward, 239 N.C. 513, 80 S.E.2d 267 (1954).

No Equity Preserved in Land in Which Estate Has No Interest. — Since the priority of the first class is limited to a situation where the value of the property equals or exceeds the amount of the specific lien thereon, the personal representative may preserve any equity for the benefit of other creditors and of beneficiaries. But where the estate and its creditors and beneficiaries have no right, title or interest in the real property on which the creditor has a specific lien, no equity can be preserved. Underwood v. Ward, 239 N.C. 513, 80 S.E.2d 267 (1954).

Notes Secured by Liens on Lands Held by Entireties. — Husband and wife were jointly and severally liable on notes secured by liens on lands held by them by entireties. Upon the death of the husband, the liability of his estate for one half the balance due on the notes at the time of his death is not a debt coming within the first class of priority, since even though the debt is secured by specific lien on the property, the property is not an asset of the estate. Underwood v. Ward, 239 N.C. 513, 80 S.E.2d 267 (1954).

A deed of trust executed to secure a debt which by laws had a specific lien on property, as provided by the first class, has priority over the payment of taxes provided for eo nomine in the third class. Farmville Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Bourne, 205 N.C. 337, 171 S.E. 368 (1933).

Judgment Lien Is Not "Specific Lien on Property". — The lien of a docketed judgment, which is eo nomine put in the fifth class, is not a "specific lien on property," unless made so by its terms, as to come within the first class mentioned in this section. Stewart v. Doar, 205 N.C. 37, 169 S.E. 804 (1933).

But Section Does Not Nullify Judgment Lien. — There is nothing in this section, or in any other provision of the law, that indicates intent to nullify the lien of a docketed judgment or to destroy any right acquired under the law prior to the death of the judgment debtor. Moore v. Jones, 226 N.C. 149, 36 S.E.2d 920 (1946).

Tax Liens Take Priority Over Estate Administration Costs. — The conflict between this section and G.S. 105-356 was resolved in favor of city and county/appellants who sought to recover back taxes and interest through a foreclosure proceeding on property, although the guardian ad litem and public administrator asserted that such foreclosure would cause the tax lien to take precedence over the costs of estate administration in violation of this section and would result in inequity should the sale fail to render sufficient funds to cover both taxes and costs. City of Durham v. Hicks, 135 N.C. App. 699, 522 S.E.2d 583, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 1227 (1999).

III. FUNERAL EXPENSES.

Funeral and Medical Expenses Are of Debtor Only. — The funeral and medical expenses referred to in the paragraphs designated "Second class" and "Sixth class" are those of the debtor, and not of his wife, child or tenants. Baker v. Dawson, 131 N.C. 227, 42 S.E. 588 (1902).

Husband's estate is liable for funeral expenses of his predeceased wife, in preference to the beneficiaries under his will. Bowen v. Daugherty, 168 N.C. 242, 84 S.E. 265 (1915).

Third Party Paying. — The provisions of the paragraph designated "Second class," inure to the benefit of one who after having paid such expenses as a matter of affection and duty wants to recover the same from the estate. Ray v. Honeycutt, 119 N.C. 510, 26 S.E. 127 (1896).

IV. DUES, TAXES, AND CLAIMS UNDER FEDERAL LAW.

Federal Estate Tax. — See Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Green, 236 N.C. 654, 73 S.E.2d 879 (1953); Tolson v. Young, 260 N.C. 506, 133 S.E.2d 135 (1963); Adams v. Adams, 261 N.C. 342, 134 S.E.2d 633 (1964).

V. DUES, TAXES, AND CLAIMS UNDER STATE LAW.

Tax Judgment under § 105-375 Does Not Affix Lien on Property. — As a judgment against the property of the listed taxpayer, directing the sale of the property to satisfy the tax lien, the tax judgment established under G.S. 105-375 is not a "debt" within the meaning of former G.S. 28-105, nor does it affix a lien to the taxpayer's property. Henderson County v. Osteen, 28 N.C. App. 542, 221 S.E.2d 903 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 692, 235 S.E.2d 166 (1977).

It represents a final order for the sale of the delinquent taxpayer's property. Henderson County v. Osteen, 28 N.C. App. 542, 221 S.E.2d 903 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 692, 235 S.E.2d 166 (1977).

Distinction Between Tax Judgment Strictly in Rem and in Personam Judgment. — See Henderson County v. Osteen, 28 N.C. App. 542, 221 S.E.2d 903 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 692, 235 S.E.2d 166 (1977).

Method of Collecting Taxes. — Former G.S. 105-412 indicated that the ordinary methods of collecting taxes by a sheriff do not apply to collection of taxes from a decedent's estate.

Sherrod v. Dawson, 154 N.C. 525, 70 S.E. 739 (1911).

Taxes Assessed against Life Tenant. — See Rigsbee v. Brogden, 209 N.C. 510, 184 S.E. 24 (1936).

Tax-Sale Certificate Is Not a Preferred Claim. — A tax-sale certificate in the hands of a remainderman, representing taxes paid by the remainderman during the lifetime of the life tenant, may not be proved as a preferred claim against the estate of the life tenant, since the remainderman's sole remedy upon the tax-sale certificate is by foreclosure under the provisions of former C.S., G.S. 8028 (see now G.S. 47-108.25). Rigsbee v. Brogden, 209 N.C. 510, 184 S.E. 24 (1936).

Former provisions that taxes should be paid by the personal representative in the third class of priority had no application to the statutory action to foreclose a tax-sale certificate. Guilford County v. Estates Admin., 213 N.C. 763, 197 S.E. 535 (1938).

Nor Are Assessments for Public Improvements. — See Rigsbee v. Brogden, 209 N.C. 510, 184 S.E. 24 (1936).

This section has no application to the payment of assessments made against land by a municipality for the purpose of improving streets. City of High Point v. Brown, 206 N.C. 664, 175 S.E. 169 (1934); Town of Saluda v. County of Polk, 207 N.C. 180, 176 S.E. 298 (1934).

Or to Charges for Water and Gas Connections. — Charges for water and gas connections, incurred during the lifetime of a life tenant and unpaid at his death, do not constitute a preferred claim against his estate as taxes assessed on the estate prior to his death, since in no event would such charges stand upon a higher plane than assessments for permanent improvements. Rigsbee v. Brogden, 209 N.C. 510, 184 S.E. 24 (1936).

VI. JUDGMENT LIENS.

Application of Fifth Class Provision to Funds in Administrator's Hands. — The provision of the paragraph designated "Fifth class" applies to funds in the administrator's hands. Matthews v. Peterson, 150 N.C. 134, 63 S.E. 721 (1909).

Judgments Paid Out of Personalty. — The paragraph designated "Fifth class" does not mean that the judgment shall be paid out of the realty of the decedent upon which it has become a lien. When a debtor dies, against whom there is a judgment docketed, his land descends to his heirs or vests in his devisees, and his personal property vests in his administrator or executor, just as if there were no judgment against him, and the whole estate is to be administered just as if there were no judgment, that is to say, the personal property must be sold, if necessary, and all the personal assets collected, and out of these personal assets all the debts must be paid, if there be enough to pay all docketed judgments as well as others. The reason for this mode of administration is that, although a lien on land exists, the judgment should be paid out of the personal estate, if any, in exoneration of the land for the benefit of the heir or devisee. Lee v. Eure, 82 N.C. 428 (1880).

Creditor Must File Claim. — If a judgment creditor wishes to share in the distribution of the personal estate of his deceased judgment debtor, and to protect himself against the running of the statute of limitations as against the debt (G.S. 1-22), he must file his claim with the personal representative of the deceased. Williams v. Johnson, 230 N.C. 338, 53 S.E.2d 277 (1949).

Extent of Lien. — If the real estate upon which the judgment is a lien is of less value than the amounts of the judgment, then the extent of the lien is the value of the land only. Jerkins v. Carter, 70 N.C. 500 (1874).

If the real estate upon which the judgment is a lien is of less value than the amount of the judgment, and a part of the lien has been paid out of the personalty (which is first liable for the payment) the extent of the lien is the difference between the value of the land and the amount paid out of the personalty. It is not the difference between the amount of the lien and the amount paid from the personalty. Murchison v. Williams, 71 N.C. 135 (1874).

When Priorities Determined. — The priorities among judgment creditors, which are dependent upon the date of their respective recordation, are to be determined as they existed at the death of the debtor, after which they remain unaffected by lapse of time until barred by the statute of limitations or by executions issued upon the judgments. Town of Tarboro v. Penders, 153 N.C. 427, 69 S.E. 425 (1910); Farmville Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Bourne, 205 N.C. 337, 171 S.E. 368 (1933).

Priority over Mortgage. — Where realty sold under order of court to make assets is subject to a docketed judgment and a subsequently recorded mortgage, the judgment must be satisfied in full before application of any part of the proceeds to the mortgage or to the payment of other debts. Moore v. Jones, 226 N.C. 149, 36 S.E.2d 920 (1946).

Statute of Limitations Not Affected. —

The fact that judgments docketed and in force, which have become a lien upon decedent's property at the date of his death, have priority over certain other claims, does not stop the running of the statute of limitations upon such judgments. Daniel v. Laughlin, 87 N.C. 433 (1882).

The expiration of the judgment lien terminates the authority of the representative to pay such lien. The judgment lien must be in force at the time of payment. Matthews v. Peterson, 150 N.C. 132, 63 S.E. 721 (1909).

Application of Proceeds under a Consent Judgment to Sell Lands. — Where a consent judgment provided that a commissioner be appointed to sell certain lands of a deceased person and pay the net proceeds to the administratrix of the deceased to pay the debts of his estate, the distribution of these proceeds was thereunder to be made under the provisions of this section, and a judgment ordering them to be paid to satisfy the lien of a judgment creditor on the lands of the estate, adjudging it a prior lien, was reversible error. First Nat'l Bank v. Mitchell, 191 N.C. 190, 131 S.E. 656 (1926).

VII. MEDICAL EXPENSES.

The words "medical services," include all services rendered to the deceased, because of his illness, upon the advice of his physician, which were reasonably necessary for his care and comfort and for his proper treatment by his physicians. Park View Hosp. Ass'n v. People's Bank & Trust Co., 211 N.C. 244, 189 S.E. 766 (1937).

Board of Graduate Nurses Included in Medical Services. — The board of graduate nurses, who attended the deceased while he was a patient in plaintiffs' hospital, was a claim included in the term "medical services" as used in this section. Park View Hosp. Ass'n v. People's Bank & Trust Co., 211 N.C. 244, 189 S.E. 766 (1937).

Termination of Old Age Assistance. — When old age assistance was terminated by death of the recipient, the county's claim against the recipient's estate under former G.S. 108-30.1 had to be satisfied out of the personal property in the estate to the extent it was sufficient to pay claims of the sixth class before resorting to the real property for satisfaction of the debt. Brunswick County v. Vitou, 6 N.C. App. 54, 169 S.E.2d 234 (1969).

CSC, 40 N.C.A.G. 30 (1970), issued under prior law.

§ 28A-19-7. Satisfaction of claims other than by payment.

Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary,

- (1) If a decedent was liable in person at the time of his death for the payment or satisfaction of any claim or the performance, satisfaction, or discharge of any liability or obligation, whether joint or several, primary or secondary, direct or contingent, or enforceable in any other manner or form whatsoever, or
- (2) If only the property of a decedent or some part thereof was liable at the time of his death for the payment or satisfaction of any claim or the performance, satisfaction, or discharge of any liability or obligation, whether joint or several, primary or secondary, direct or contingent, or enforceable in any other manner or form against the property of the decedent but not against him or his estate as a personal liability, and
- (3) If any person other than the personal representative of the decedent is willing to assume the liability of the decedent and of his estate or to receive or accept property of the decedent subject to such liability in cases where the decedent was not personally liable and the creditor, obligee, or other person for whose benefit such liability exists is willing to accept an agreement with that effect and to discharge the personal representative of the decedent and the estate of the decedent from the payment, satisfaction, or discharge of such liability, and
- (4) If such creditor, obligee, or other person for whose benefit such liability exists and the person assuming the liability or the person receiving or accepting property of the decedent subject to such liability shall execute, acknowledge, and deliver in the form and manner required for deeds conveying real property in North Carolina, an agreement between themselves as to such assumption of liability or the receipt or acceptance of property of the decedent subject to such liability which shall contain a release, as hereinafter defined, discharging the personal representative of the decedent and his estate from the payment, satisfaction, or discharge of the liability, and thereafter the said creditor, obligee, or other person for whose benefit such liability exists shall have no remedy for the enforcement thereof except against the person assuming it or against the property subject to it as provided in the said agreement; then upon the filing with the clerk of superior court having jurisdiction over the estate and the personal representative of one duplicate original of the said agreement, or of a certified copy thereof if it is a duly recorded instrument, the same shall be accepted in the same manner as a voucher showing payment or discharge of the said liability in the accounts of the personal representative of the decedent.

The word "person" as used in this section shall include one or more natural persons, corporations, partnerships, or entities having the power to own property or to make contracts in regard thereto. The word "release" as used in this section shall include a covenant not to sue in any case in which an unqualified release or discharge of one obligee would discharge another, and if the liability involved is a negotiable instrument or other instrument transferable to a holder in due course, such release shall not be effective unless notice thereof is endorsed on the instrument involved, dated, and signed by the creditor or the holder of the indebtedness or person for whose benefit the property is encumbered. (1965, c. 1149; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-19-8. Funeral expenses of decedent.

(a) Any person authorized under G.S. 130A-420 to dispose of a decedent's body may bind a decedent's estate for funeral expenses and related charges, including interest and finance charges, in accordance with this section, including the execution and delivery on behalf of the estate of any agreements, promissory notes, and other instruments relating to the estate. Whether or not a personal representative of the estate has been appointed at the time the expenses are incurred, funeral expenses of a decedent, together with interest or finance charges if financed by the funeral establishment or a third-party creditor, shall be considered as an obligation of the estate of the decedent and the decedent's estate shall be primarily liable for those expenses to the funeral establishment that provided the funeral service, to any third-party creditor that finances the payment of those expenses, or to any other person described in this section who has paid such expenses.

(b) The provisions of this section shall not affect the application of G.S. 28A-19-6 or G.S. 130A-420. (1969, c. 610, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1999-166, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section Does Not Limit Collection of Expenses Exclusively to an Estate. — This section does not limit collection of funeral expenses exclusively to the estate. Parrish Funeral Home v. Pittman, 104 N.C. App. 268, 409 S.E.2d 327 (1991).

Other Person's Promise to Pay Funeral Expenses. — Defendant's alleged promise to pay funeral expenses for his deceased father if the estate did not was a promise to pay the debt of another, which is void by law unless in writing. Parrish Funeral Home v. Pittman, 104 N.C. App. 268, 409 S.E.2d 327 (1991), holding, however, that as defendants did not specifically plead the statute of frauds, it was not available as a defense.

§ 28A-19-9. Gravestone authorized.

It is lawful for personal representatives to provide suitable gravestones to mark the graves of their testators or intestates, and to pay for the cost of erecting the same and the cost thereof shall be paid as funeral expenses and credited as such in final accounts. The costs thereof shall be in the sound discretion of the personal representative, having due regard to the value of the estate and to the interests of creditors and needs of the surviving spouse and the heirs and devisees of the estate. Where the personal representative desires to spend more than four hundred dollars ($400.00) for such purpose, and the will does not grant specific authority to the personal representative for such expenditures in excess of four hundred dollars ($400.00), he shall file his petition before the clerk of the court, and such order as will be made by the court shall specify the amount to be expended for such purpose. Provided, however, that if the net estate is of a value in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), the personal representative may, in his discretion, expend not more than eight hundred dollars ($800.00) for this purpose without securing the order of the court required herein. If the estate is of a value in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) and the personal representative desires to spend more than eight hundred dollars ($800.00) for such purpose, and the will does not grant specific authority for such expenditure he shall file his petition and secure the order of the court herein required before expending funds for such purpose. However, in no event may more than eight hundred dollars ($800.00) be accounted as gravestone marker cost to be credited as a funeral expense in the final accounts. (1905, c. 444; Rev., s. 102; C.S., s. 108; 1925, c. 4; 1941, c. 102; 1951, c. 373; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

This section was held inapplicable where executors, in obedience to testamentary instructions, expended more than $100 [now $400] for a gravestone without order of court, when the estate appeared to be solvent, though in fact it was insolvent. In re Estate of Bost, 211 N.C. 440, 190 S.E. 756 (1937), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-19-10. Perpetual care of cemetery lot.

It shall be lawful for a personal representative to provide for perpetual care for the lot upon which is located the grave of the testator or intestate, and the cost thereof shall be paid and credited as such in final accounts: Provided, that the provisions of this section shall be applicable to an interment made in a cemetery authorized by law to operate as a perpetual-care cemetery or association, and the cost thereof shall be in the sound discretion of the personal representative having due regard to the value of the estate and to the interest of the surviving spouse and the heirs and devisees of the estate. Provided, where the personal representative desires to spend more than two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00) for such purpose, and the will does not grant specific authority to the personal representative for such expenditure in excess of two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00), he shall file his petition before the clerk of the superior court and such order as will be made by the court shall specify the amount to be expended for such purpose. (1945, c. 756; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-19-11. Pleading statute of limitations.

When claims are not barred pursuant to G.S. 28A-19-3, it shall be within the discretion of the personal representative or collector acting in good faith to determine whether or not any applicable statute of limitations shall be pleaded to bar a claim which he believes to be just. His admission of such claim or his decision not to plead the statute in an action brought on the claim shall, in the absence of any showing of collusion or bad faith, be binding on all persons interested in the estate. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-19-12. Claims due representative not preferred.

No property or assets of the decedent shall be retained by the personal representative or collector in satisfaction of his own claim, in preference to others of the same class. Prior to payment of his own claim the personal representative shall receive written approval of the clerk of superior court. If the clerk does not approve the claim the personal representative may refer the claim as a disputed claim under the provisions of G.S. 28A-19-15. The provisions of G.S. 28A-19-1 and G.S. 28A-19-3 shall not apply to such claims and the personal representative may present his own claim at any time prior to the filing of his final account. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 28; Code, s. 1420; Rev., s. 89; C.S., s. 96; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1979, c. 525, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Attorneys' Fees and Commissions. — This section does not apply to the payment of attorneys' fees and commissions. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Claims by Personal Representative. — This section applies to "claims" against the estate, such as liens against property, funeral expenses, taxes, and judgments, where the claimant also happens to be the personal representative of the estate. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Cited in Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

§ 28A-19-13. No preference within class.

No personal representative or collector shall give to any claim any preference whatever, either by paying it out of its class or by paying thereon more than a pro rata proportion in its class. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 25, 26; Code, ss. 1417, 1418; Rev., s. 88; C.S., s. 94; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Prohibition embodied in this section is against the representative. Hence, a solvent person in his lifetime may by his will make preferences in favor of persons who would otherwise be postponed. But, as upon his death his effects and property vest in his representative who must pay the debts first, if the estate is insolvent the representative cannot assent to the payment of preferences before the payment of prior debts as prescribed in the preceding section. The result is that preferences made by an insolvent decedent are rendered ineffective for all purposes. See Moore v. Byers, 65 N.C. 240 (1871), decided under prior law.

Paying by Honest Mistake. — If the representative pays a debt belonging to an inferior class in preference to a superior debt, even though he does it through an honest mistake, he is chargeable for the same. Moyer v. Albritton, 42 N.C. 62 (1850), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-19-14. Claims not due rebated.

Claims owed by the estate but not yet due may be paid by the personal representative on a rebate of interest thereon for the time unexpired. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 27; Code, s. 1419; Rev., s. 90; C.S., s. 97; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-19-15. Disputed claim may be referred.

If the personal representative doubts the justness of any claim so presented, he may enter into an agreement, in writing, with the claimant, to refer the matter in controversy, whether the same be of a legal or equitable nature, to one or more disinterested persons, not exceeding three, whose proceedings shall be the same in all respects as if such reference had been ordered in an action. Such agreement to refer, and the award thereupon, shall be filed in the clerk's office where the letters were granted, and shall be a lawful voucher for the personal representative. The same may be impeached in any proceeding against the personal representative for fraud therein: Provided, that the right to refer claims under this section shall extend to claims in favor of the estate as well as those against the estate. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 34; 1872-3, c. 141; Code, s. 1426; Rev., s. 92; C.S., s. 99; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Purpose of Section. — This section was intended to create an expeditious and inexpensive mode by which controversies between executors, administrators or collectors and claimants against the estates of testators and intestates may be settled and determined. State v. Potter, 107 N.C. 415, 12 S.E. 55 (1890);

In re Reynolds' Estate, 221 N.C. 449, 20 S.E.2d 348 (1942).

Proceeding authorized by this section is based upon agreement of the parties. It is not an action, nor a consent reference under the Code. It lacks ordinary incidents of a special proceeding which is begun before the clerk. In re Reynolds' Estate, 221 N.C. 449, 20 S.E.2d 348 (1942).

Not Applicable to Creditor's Suit under

Former § 28-122. — The proceedings authorized by this section are between a creditor and the personal representative, and had no application to creditor's bill under former G.S. 28-122 instituted to take the administration into the hands of the court. Dunn v. Beaman, 126 N.C. 766, 36 S.E. 172 (1900).

Effect of Agreement to Arbitrate. — An agreement to arbitrate and to award under this section is competent evidence to prove the indebtedness of the estate. Such an agreement is, where there is no fraud or collusion, binding upon the heirs even though they were not parties to the proceedings. Lassiter v. Upchurch, 107 N.C. 411, 12 S.E. 63 (1890).

Finding of Arbitrators as Judgment. — The finding of arbitrators under this section is equivalent to a judgment, and the proceedings in which it is rendered can be impeached only for fraud or collusion. Lassiter v. Upchurch, 107 N.C. 411, 12 S.E. 63 (1890).

Under a fair interpretation of this section, the award of the referees, unless impeached for fraud and collusion, should have at least the effect of determining and putting an end to the controversy, if not the effect of a judgment in an action between the parties. In re Reynolds' Estate, 221 N.C. 449, 20 S.E.2d 348 (1942).

Who May Impeach Result. — Only those having a pecuniary interest in the estate may be heard to impeach the result for collusion or fraud. In re Reynolds' Estate, 221 N.C. 449, 20 S.E.2d 348 (1942).

Appeal. — Where a claimant and the personal representative voluntarily execute a written agreement referring the claim to disinterested persons under this section, the referees are not required to decide the matter according to law, and their report is conclusive and neither party is entitled to appeal therefrom upon exceptions, there being no provisions in this section for appeal, and the proceeding being neither a civil action nor a special proceeding nor a judicial order. In re Reynolds' Estate, 221 N.C. 449, 20 S.E.2d 348 (1942).

Vacation of Reference. — Where clerk appointed a referee to hear claims against the estate of a deceased under this section, and thereafter approved the report of the referee, but on appeal the superior court ruled that the clerk had no authority in the premises and this ruling was unchallenged, such ruling vacated the supposed reference, and ended the matter. In re Shutt, 214 N.C. 684, 200 S.E. 372 (1939).

Effect of Failure to Refer Claim. — Where a claim against an executor is rejected by him in writing and is not referred to in accordance with the provisions of this section, an action thereon is barred under G.S. 28A-19-16 if not brought within six months (now three months) after the rejection of the claim by the executor. Batts v. Batts, 198 N.C. 395, 151 S.E. 868 (1930).

Agreement to Refer Lacking. — Where the executor's letter to claimant merely stated that he "would suggest" that claimant "file a notice of hearing with the Clerk of Court" the language did not show that there was any agreement to refer the matter. In re Estate of Neisen, 114 N.C. App. 82, 440 S.E.2d 855 (1994), cert. denied, 336 N.C. 606, 447 S.E.2d 397 (1994).

§ 28A-19-16. Disputed claim not referred barred in three months.

If a claim is presented to and rejected by the personal representative or collector, and not referred as provided in G.S. 28A-19-15, the claimant must, within three months, after due notice in writing of such rejection, or after some part of the claim becomes due, commence an action for the recovery thereof, or be forever barred from maintaining an action thereon. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 35; Code, s. 1427; Rev., s. 93; 1913, c. 3, s.1; C.S., s. 100; 1961, c. 742; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

This statute provides the only procedure for the resolution of a rejected claim. In re Estate of Neisen, 114 N.C. App. 82, 440

S.E.2d 855 (1994), cert. denied, 336 N.C. 606, 447 S.E.2d 397 (1994).

The language of this section is positive and explicit, and the section must be enforced in accordance with the plain meaning of its terms. Morrissey v. Hill, 142 N.C. 355, 55 S.E.

193 (1906); Rutherford v. Harbison, 254 N.C. 236, 118 S.E.2d 540 (1961).

This section applies to creditors' claims against an estate and not to the interests of heirs. The cases construing this Article involve actions by creditors to recover debts. Moreover, G.S. 28A-19-3(h) expressly provides that the word "claim" as used in this Article "does not apply to claims of heirs or devisees to their respective shares or interests in the decedent's estate in their capacity as such heirs or devisees." Poteat v. Robinson, 90 N.C. App. 764, 370 S.E.2d 61 (1988).

Rejection of Claim Must Be Absolute and Unequivocal. — The rejection of a claim against an estate must be absolute and unequivocal in order to start the running of the six months (now three months) statute of limitation. Rutherford v. Harbison, 118 S.E.2d 540 (1961).

Claim barred under this section cannot be pleaded even by way of counterclaim, in an action by the representative against the claimant, and this regardless of the fact that the general notice provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1 had not been given. Morrissey v. Hill, 142 N.C. 355, 55 S.E. 193 (1906).

Husband's Claim for Funeral Expenses of Wife. — While G.S. 28A-19-6 classified funeral expenses as a debt of the estate, the amount due therefor cannot be regarded as a legacy in this State, and where a husband who has paid the funeral expenses of his wife makes claim therefor upon her executor, and the claim is rejected, and is not referred in accordance with G.S. 28A-19-15, an action on the claim is barred by failure to bring it within six months (now three months) from the time of rejection of the claim by the executor. Batts v. Batts, 198 N.C. 395, 151 S.E. 868 (1930).

A party asserting the right as assignee of an insurance policy to retain the proceeds thereof for obligations he contends were secured by the assignment is not barred, under this section, from asserting such right after the lapse of more than six months (now three months) as against the administrator of the deceased insured in the administrator's action to recover the funds, the defense not constituting a prosecution of a claim against the administrator which had been denied. Sellers v. First Nat'l Bank, 214 N.C. 300, 199 S.E. 266 (1938).

Three Calendar Months Not Equal to 90 Days. — Plaintiff had three calendar months, not 90 days, in which to file an action, thus the trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's cause of action based on the statute of limitations. Storey v. Hailey, 114 N.C. App. 173, 441 S.E.2d 602 (1994).

§ 28A-19-17. No lien by suit against representative.

No lien shall be created by the commencement of a suit against a personal representative or collector. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 41; Code, s. 1432; Rev., s. 95; C.S., s. 102; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-19-18. When costs against representative allowed.

No costs shall be recovered in any action against a personal representative or collector unless it appears that payment was unreasonably delayed or neglected, or that the defendant refused to refer the matter in controversy, in which case the court may award such costs against the defendant personally, or against the estate, as may be just. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 38; Code, s. 1429; Rev., s. 97; C.S., s. 103; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

The purpose of this section is to urge the representative to an early and prompt settlement of claims against the deceased, and to protect the estate, when proper diligence was used, from cost needlessly incurred by the creditors in prosecuting their claims. May v.

Darden, 83 N.C. 237 (1880).

Exception to §§ 6-18 to 6-20. — This section forms an exception to G.S. 6-18 to 6-20, which are general provisions as to cost. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 138 N.C. 205, 50 S.E. 630 (1905). See also Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1942).

Not Applicable When Funds Misapplied. — In proceedings to subject a representative to liability for misapplication of the funds, as distinguished from proceedings to recover a debt out of the estate, this section does not apply, and the representative is chargeable with the cost. Valentine v. Britton, 127 N.C. 57, 37 S.E. 74 (1900).

Unreasonable Delay or Neglect. — Where an action was brought within 52 days of the qualification of the administrator, it was held that payment had not been “unreasonably delayed or neglected” within the meaning of this section. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 138 N.C. 205, 50 S.E. 630 (1905). A fortiori the same rule was applied, in May v. Darden, 83 N.C. 237 (1880), when the suit was instituted 20 days after appointment. See also Morris v. Morris, 94 N.C. 613 (1886).

Land Chargeable with Cost. — In proceedings by the creditor to subject the land to the payment of debts, the land is subject to the payment of the cost, wherever the representative can be charged with the cost under the circumstances referred to in this section. Long v. Oxford, 108 N.C. 280, 13 S.E. 112 (1891).

Burden of Proof. — The burden is on the plaintiffs to show that they are entitled to recover costs under this section. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 138 N.C. 205, 50 S.E. 630 (1905).

Appeal. — Although the general rule is that an appeal lies from a judgment for cost only, there is an exception to this rule in favor of fiduciaries, inferred from this section. May v. Darden, 83 N.C. 237 (1880).

§ 28A-19-19. Claims for equitable distribution.

(a) The provisions of G.S. 28A-19-5 and G.S. 28A-19-7 shall not apply to claims for equitable distribution.

(b) The personal representative may enter into an agreement, in writing, with a claimant providing for distribution of marital or divisible property, or both, in a manner deemed by the personal representative and the claimant to be equitable. The agreement shall be filed in the clerk's office where the letters were granted and shall be a lawful voucher for the personal representative. The same may be impeached in any proceeding against the personal representative for fraud therein.

(c) Unless the claim for equitable distribution has been referred as provided in G.S. 28A-19-15, the claimant may at anytime, subject to the provisions of G.S. 28A-19-16, file an action with the district court for distribution of marital or divisible property in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 50-20. (2003-168, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 20.

Inventory.

§ 28A-20-1. Inventory within three months.

Every personal representative and collector, within three months after his qualification, shall return to the clerk, on oath, a just, true and perfect inventory of all the real and personal property of the deceased, which have come to his hands, or to the hands of any person for him, which inventory shall be signed by him and be recorded by the clerk. (R.C., c. 46, s. 16; 1868-9, c. 113, s. 8; Code, s. 1396; Rev., s. 42; C.S., s. 48; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

An inventory is but prima facie evidence to charge the executor with assets, so as to call on him for proof to rebut it. Hoover v. Miller, 51 N.C. 79 (1858).

An inventory is prima facie evidence of the solvency of persons owing debts to the estate and described in the inventory. It may be shown that the personal representative made errors in describing and noting the debts. And it seems that the inventory is not evidence against an administrator de bonis non. Grant v. Reese, 94 N.C. 720 (1886).

Statement of Doubtful Debts. — Where an executor returns an inventory of debts without stating that some of the debts are doubtful, he will be held responsible for them, unless he can show that there were setoffs against them, or that the debtors were insolvent. Graham v. Davidson, 22 N.C. 155 (1838).

Where the executor inventories debts as "doubtful," prima facie he will not be chargeable with them. Gay v. Grant, 101 N.C. 206, 8 S.E. 99 (1888), petition to rehear dismissed, 105 N.C. 478, 10 S.E. 891 (1890).

Return of Joint Executors. — Either one of joint executors making a joint return of inventory is answerable for what appears thereon, if it does not show what came to the hand of the other alone. Graham v. Davidson, 22 N.C. 155 (1838).

Transfer of Funds to Another Jurisdiction. — The inventory required by this section must be filed before the transfer of moneys to another jurisdiction. Grant v. Rogers, 94 N.C. 755 (1886).

Representative May Be Compelled to Account or File Inventory. — If the personal representative has failed to file his inventory or his accounts, he can be compelled to do so upon application to the clerk of the superior court. Atkinson v. Ricks, 140 N.C. 418, 53 S.E. 230 (1906).

Failure to Accurately State Value of Account May Constitute Perjury. — The trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to dismiss charge of perjury concerning 90-day inventory of estate, signed pursuant to this section, where defendant intentionally reported under oath that the "value" of checking account was $27,885, when in reality the checking account contained only $17,885 and the defendant had misappropriated $10,000 by depositing it into his law firm operating account. State v. Linney, 138 N.C. App. 169, 531 S.E.2d 245, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 538 (2000).

Failure to File May Bar Commissions. — Failure to file an inventory, coupled with acts of gross negligence and want of care in the management of the estate, was held to deprive the personal representative of his right to commissions. Grant v. Reese, 94 N.C. 720 (1886); Stonestreet v. Frost, 123 N.C. 640, 31 S.E. 836 (1899).

Or Be Grounds for Removal. — Where the executor failed to file the inventory required and was also guilty of other acts of mismanagement it was held that he could be required to give bond or be removed from his office. Barnes v. Brown, 79 N.C. 401 (1878).

§ 28A-20-2. Compelling the inventory.

(a) If the inventory specified in G.S. 28A-20-1 is not filed as prescribed, the clerk of superior court must issue an order requiring the personal representative or collector to file it within the time specified in the order, not less than 20 days, or to show cause why he should not be removed from office. If, after due service of the order, the personal representative or collector does not on or before the return day of the order file such inventory or obtain further time in which to file it, the clerk may remove him from office or may issue an attachment against him for a contempt and commit him until he files said inventory report.

(b) The personal representative or collector shall be personally liable for the costs of any proceeding incident to his failure to file the inventory required by G.S. 28A-20-1. Such costs shall be taxed against him by the clerk of superior court and may be collected by deduction from any commissions which may be found due the personal representative or collector upon final settlement of the estate. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 9; Code, s. 1397; Rev., s. 43; C.S., s. 49; 1929, c. 9, s. 1; 1933, c. 100; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Clerk's Original Jurisdiction. — Under this section the clerk has original jurisdiction to remove the representative for not filing the inventory required. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886), decided under prior law.

Clerk Has Power to Remove Independent of Statute. — The clerk has power of removal for the failure of the administrator to discharge the duties of his office as prescribed by law. And even without invoking the aid of statute the power of removal is inherent in the office at common law, and must of necessity be so to prevent a failure of justice. Taylor v. Biddle, 71 N.C. 1 (1874), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-20-3. Supplemental inventory.

(a) Whenever any property not included in the original inventory report becomes known to any personal representative or collector or whenever the personal representative or collector learns that the valuation or description of any property or interest therein indicated in the original inventory is erroneous or misleading, he shall prepare and file with the clerk of superior court a supplementary inventory in the same manner as prescribed for the original inventory. The clerk shall record the supplemental report with the original inventory.

(b) The making of the supplemental inventory shall be enforced in a manner specified in G.S. 28A-20-2. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 10; Code, s. 1398; Rev., s. 44; C.S., s. 50; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-20-4. Employment of appraisers.

A personal representative or collector may, but shall not be required to, employ qualified and disinterested appraisers to assist in ascertaining the fair market value as of the date of the decedent's death of any asset the value of which may be subject to reasonable doubt. Different persons may be employed to appraise different kinds of assets. The name and address of any appraiser shall be indicated in the inventory with the asset or assets he appraised. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 21.

Accounting.

§ 28A-21-1. Annual accounts.

Until the final account has been filed pursuant to G.S. 28A-21-2, the personal representative or collector shall, for so long as any of the property of the estate remains in his control, custody or possession, file annually in the office of the clerk of superior court an inventory and account, under oath, of the amount of property received by him, or invested by him, and the manner and nature of such investment, and his receipts and disbursements for the past year. Such accounts shall be due by the fifteenth day of the fourth month after the close of the fiscal year selected by the personal representative or collector, and annually thereafter. The election of a fiscal year shall be made by the personal representative or collector upon filing of the first annual account. In no event may a personal representative or collector select a fiscal year-end which is more than twelve months from the date of death of a decedent or, in the case of trust administration, the date of the opening of the trust. Any fiscal year selected may not be changed without the permission of the clerk of superior court.

The personal representative or collector shall produce vouchers for all payments or verified proof for all payments in lieu of vouchers. The clerk of superior court may examine, under oath, such accounting party, or any other person, concerning the receipts, disbursements or any other matter relating to the estate. He must carefully review and audit such account and, if he approves the account, he must endorse his approval thereon, which shall be prima facie evidence of correctness, and cause the same to be recorded. (C.C.P., s. 478; 1871-2, c. 46; Code, s. 1399; Rev., s. 99; C.S., s. 105; 1957, c. 783, s. 5; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 446, s. 1; 1981, c. 955, s. 1; 1987, c. 783, s. 1; 1991, c. 485, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

The word "account" as used in this section means "a statement in writing of debts and credits, or of receipts and payments; a list of items of debts and credits, with their respective dates." It does not include the idea of payment and settlement. State v. Dunn, 134 N.C. 663, 46 S.E. 949 (1904).

Report showing all debts paid except a mortgage indebtedness cannot constitute a final account, since the duties and obligations of administration continue until all debts are paid or all assets exhausted. Creech v. Wilder, 212 N.C. 162, 193 S.E. 281 (1937).

Duty of Clerk to Accept Executor's Annual Account. — Where property is devised or bequeathed by a will, upon certain trusts, and the testator does not appoint a trustee, it is the duty of the executor to carry out the provisions of the will. It was error for the clerk to refuse to accept an annual account tendered by the executor for a year more than two years after the executor qualified but during the life of the trust estate. In re Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 210 N.C. 385, 186 S.E. 510 (1936). Under § 28A-21-2, the personal representative must now file his final account within one year of his qualification or within six months after his receipt of the State inheritance tax release, whichever is later.

Meaning of "Auditing Accounts". — The provision as to auditing the accounts has reference to the duty of examining the accounts to see that the account of charges corresponds with the inventories, passing upon the vouchers, and striking a balance after allowing commissions. Heilig v. Foard, 64 N.C. 710 (1870).

Jurisdiction for Auditing Accounts Is Ex Parte. — The jurisdiction for auditing accounts conferred upon the clerk by this section is an ex parte jurisdiction of examining the accounts and vouchers of such persons, and does not conclude parties interested or affect suits inter partes upon the same matter. Heilig v. Foard, 64 N.C. 710 (1870); Grant v. Hughes, 94 N.C. 231 (1886); Bean v. Bean, 135 N.C. 92, 47 S.E. 232 (1904).

There is no requirement that a life tenant must account to the court or to a remainderman. Godfrey v. Patrick, 8 N.C. App. 510, 174 S.E.2d 674 (1970).

Account Necessary Before Transferring Funds to Another Jurisdiction. — The administrator in this State of the estate of a nonresident dying in his own state, before transferring the funds to the state of the domicile, must comply with the provisions of this section. Grant v. Rogers, 94 N.C. 755 (1886).

Recorded Account Is Competent Evidence in Collateral Suit. — The account required by this section must be recorded as required in G.S. 2-42 (see now G.S. 7A-109). Such account therefore is not hearsay but is competent evidence in a collateral suit. Braddy v. Pfaff, 210 N.C. 248, 186 S.E. 340 (1936).

Prima Facie Evidence Only. — The sworn account referred to in this section is only prima facie evidence. It is not conclusive as against any person adversely interested. The statute merely shifts the burden of proof. Allen v. Royster, 107 N.C. 278, 12 S.E. 134 (1890); In re Hege, 205 N.C. 625, 172 S.E. 345 (1934); Braddy v. Pfaff, 210 N.C. 248, 186 S.E. 340 (1936).

The representative himself is not estopped to impeach the account. Bean v. Bean, 135 N.C. 92, 47 S.E. 232 (1904).

Cited in Holt v. Lynch, 307 N.C. 234, 297 S.E.2d 594 (1982); Holt v. Lynch, 57 N.C. App. 532, 291 S.E.2d 920 (1982); In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

§ 28A-21-2. Final accounts.

(a) Unless the time for filing the final account has been extended by the clerk of superior court, the personal representative or collector must file the final account for settlement within one year after qualifying or within six months after receiving a State estate or inheritance tax release, whichever is later. If no estate or inheritance tax return was required to be filed for the estate, the personal representative or collector shall so certify in the final account filed with the clerk of superior court. Such certification shall list the amount and value of all of the decedent's property, and with respect to real estate, its particular location within or outside the State, including any property transferred by the decedent over which the decedent had retained any interest, or any property transferred within three years prior to the date of the decedent's death, and after being filed and accepted by the clerk of the superior court shall be prima facie evidence that such property is free of any State inheritance or State estate tax liability. The personal representative or collector shall produce vouchers for all payments or verified proof for all payments in lieu of vouchers. With the approval of the clerk of superior court, such account may be filed voluntarily at any time. In all cases, the accounting shall be reviewed, audited and recorded by the clerk of superior court in the manner prescribed in G.S. 28A-21-1.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (a), after the date specified in the general notice to creditors as provided for in G.S. 28A-14-1, if all of the debts and other claims against the estate of the decedent duly presented and legally owing have been paid in the case of a solvent estate or satisfied pro rata according to applicable statutes in the case of an insolvent estate, the personal representative or collector may file his final account to be reviewed, audited and recorded by the clerk of superior court. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as limiting the right of the surviving spouse or minor children to file for allowances under G.S. 30-15 through 30-18 and the right of a surviving spouse to file for property rights under G.S. 29-30. (C.C.P., s. 481; Code, s. 1402; Rev., s. 103; C.S., s. 109; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 637, s. 5; 1977, c. 446, s. 1; 1979, c. 801, s. 13; 1981, c. 955, s. 2; 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1221, s. 3; 1985, c. 82, s. 3; c. 656, s. 3.1; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 822, s. 3; 1989, c. 770, s. 9; 1999-337, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-337, s. 46, provides: "This act does not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by this act before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor does it affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal."

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Under this section the clerk of the superior court has jurisdiction. McNeill v. Hodges, 105 N.C. 52, 11 S.E. 265 (1890).

Formerly the probate court had jurisdiction to make the representative account. Rowland v. Thompson, 65 N.C. 110 (1871).

Auditing a Judicial Act. — The phrase "audit an account" means something more than the statement of an account by an unauthorized person. It means the act of a court. Hence the auditing under this section must be performed by the clerk, and not by one of his ministerial officers, for a clerk for his judicial functions can have no deputy. Rowland v. Thompson, 65 N.C. 110 (1871).

Filing of Final Account Does Not Discharge Executor. — The removal or discharge of an executor or administrator is not effected by the approval of his final account without a formal order of discharge. Joyner v. Wilson Mem. Hosp., 38 N.C. App. 720, 248 S.E.2d 881 (1978).

Filing of a "final report" by an executor does not have the effect of removing him from office if in fact the estate has not been fully settled, and therefore filing of such a report does not create a vacancy, and does not give the clerk authority to appoint an administrator c.t.a., d.b.n. Edwards v. McLawhorn, 218 N.C. 543, 11 S.E.2d 562 (1940).

Ex Parte Account Presumed Correct. — When ex parte accounts are filed under this section, they are, as a matter of law, to be taken as correct until shown to be erroneous. Turner v. Turner, 104 N.C. 566, 10 S.E. 606 (1889).

Ex Parte Proceeding Works No Estoppel. — The auditing by the clerk, whether under this or under G.S. 28A-21-1, is an ex parte proceeding, and does not work an estoppel upon the parties as a judgment in inter parte proceedings would. In this respect this section and the section just referred to are alike. Bean v. Bean, 135 N.C. 92, 47 S.E. 232 (1904).

Service of Process upon Executrix Prior to Formal Discharge. — Where the executrix had filed her final account but no formal orders of discharge were entered by the clerk of court, the executrix was still empowered to act and service of process upon her was proper in a medical malpractice action. Joyner v. Wilson Mem. Hosp., 38 N.C. App. 720, 248 S.E.2d 881 (1978).

Limitation of Action Against Representative under Former Statute. — See Edwards v. Lemmond, 136 N.C. 329, 48 S.E. 737 (1904).

Review of Order to File Final Account and Turn Over Assets. — Where the clerk orders an executor to file final account and turn over the assets of the trust estate to itself as trustee, which order is made as a matter of law upon the facts found and not as a matter of discretion, the order is reviewable by the superior court upon appeal. In re Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 210 N.C. 385, 186 S.E. 510 (1936).

Appeal from Audit. — This section, which directs that the probate judge (now the clerk) shall “audit” the account, implies that he shall pursue the usual course which has been found to be just and convenient in such cases. Consequently an appeal may not be had from the decision of the probate judge (now the clerk) upon every question collaterally arising in the course of his investigation, in view of the inconveniences incident to such practice peculiar to the common-law action of account, now superseded by the more expeditious proceedings in equity. Rowland v. Thompson, 64 N.C. 714 (1870).

Cited in Holt v. Lynch, 307 N.C. 234, 297 S.E.2d 594 (1982); Holt v. Lynch, 57 N.C. App. 532, 291 S.E.2d 920 (1982).

§ 28A-21-3. What accounts must contain.

Accounts filed with the clerk of superior court pursuant to G.S. 28A-21-1, signed and under oath, shall contain:

- (1) The period which the account covers and whether it is an annual accounting or a final accounting;
- (2) The amount and value of the property of the estate according to the inventory and appraisal or according to the next previous accounting, the amount of income and additional property received during the period being accounted for, and all gains from the sale of any property or otherwise;
- (3) All payments, charges, losses, and distributions;
- (4) The property on hand constituting the balance of the account, if any; and
- (5) Such other facts and information determined by the clerk to be necessary to an understanding of the account. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-21-3.1. Phase II tobacco grower and quota owner payments; list of Phase II distributees.

(a) The following definitions apply in this section:

- (1) “National Tobacco Grower Settlement Trust” means the trust established by tobacco companies to provide payments to tobacco growers and tobacco quota owners in 14 states for the purposes of ameliorating potential adverse economic consequences of likely reduction in demand, sales, and prices for tobacco as an agricultural product as a result of the Master Settlement Agreement incorporated in the consent decree entered in the action of State of North Carolina vs. Philip Morris, Incorporated, et al., 98 CVS 14377, in the General Court of Justice, Superior Court Division, Wake County, North Carolina.

- (2) "Phase II payment" means an amount certified by the North Carolina Phase II Tobacco Certification Entity, Inc., to be paid pursuant to the trust agreement establishing the National Tobacco Grower Settlement Trust.

(b) A personal representative or collector of the estate of a decedent who, during 1993 or any subsequent year, was a tobacco grower or a tobacco quota owner as defined in Section 4.01 of the trust agreement establishing the National Tobacco Grower Settlement Trust may file, along with a final account, a list of Phase II distributees for Phase II payments if all of the following conditions are met:

- (1) There are no unsatisfied creditors.
- (2) There are no unsatisfied general monetary bequests.
- (3) All assets other than any potential Phase II payments have been distributed.

(c) A list of Phase II distributees, signed under oath, must contain the following information:

- (1) The name and address of the personal representative or collector.
- (2) The name and social security number of the decedent.
- (3) The name and address, if known, of each devisee or heir entitled to receive Phase II payments and the percentage of Phase II payments to be received by each.

(d) The clerk of superior court must review the list of Phase II distributees to determine if the list of distributees and their shares of potential Phase II payments are in accordance with the will or, if there is no will, in accordance with the Intestate Succession Act. If the clerk accepts the list of Phase II distributees for filing, the clerk must endorse the clerk's approval thereon, which shall be prima facie evidence of correctness.

(e) Upon determination by the North Carolina Phase II Tobacco Certification Entity, Inc., that the estate of a decedent entitled to any Phase II payment covering a time period when the decedent was alive has been closed, the payment may be paid directly to those distributees and in those shares set forth on a list of Phase II distributees filed under this section without the estate's having to be reopened under G.S. 28A-23-5.

(f) The estate of a decedent who is entitled to any Phase II payment may be reopened, if necessary, in accordance with G.S. 28A-23-5 in order to file a list of Phase II distributees under this section.

(g) For purposes of this section, Phase II payments covering a time period when decedent was alive are deemed cash and shall not pass by virtue of any devise or inheritance of the decedent's real property. (2003-295, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2003-295, s. 3, made this section effective July 4, 2003 and applicable to payments made on or after that date.

§ 28A-21-4. Clerk may compel account.

If any personal representative or collector fails to account as directed in G.S. 28A-9-3, 28A-21-1 or 28A-21-2 or renders an unsatisfactory account, the clerk of superior court shall, upon his own motion or upon the request of one or more creditors of the decedent or other interested party, promptly order such personal representative or collector to render a full satisfactory account within 20 days after service of the order. If, after due service of the order, the personal representative or collector does not on or before the return day of the order file such account, or obtain further time in which to file it, the clerk may remove him from office or may issue an attachment against him for a contempt and commit him until he files said account. (C.C.P., s. 479; Code, s. 1400; Rev., s. 100; C.S., s. 106; 1933, c. 99; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Original Jurisdiction. — Under this section the clerk has original jurisdiction to remove. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

Jurisdiction over Wrongful Death Proceeds. — Although the trial court found that decedent's wrongful death proceeds were not assets of the estate, the clerk retained authority to oversee the distribution of the proceeds as a result of its power to order an accounting of estate assets, to remove the defendant as the estate's personal representative, to impose sanctions against her based upon alleged misconduct concerning the proceeds, and to order the proceeds submitted to the clerk or public administrator; although wrongful death actions may not yield assets for the estate, a personal representative's authority to commence and settle these actions is "incident to the collection, preservation, liquidation [and] distribution of a decedent's estate." In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Court which appointed fiduciary may, ex mero motu, compel a proper accounting by attachment for contempt. Lichtenfels v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 260 N.C. 146, 132 S.E.2d 360 (1963).

Or Accounting May Be Compelled by Special Proceedings or Civil Action. — An executor or administrator, as well as a trustee or successor trustee performing duties imposed upon the executors by a testamentary trust, may be compelled to account by special proceedings or civil action, or the court which appointed them may, ex mero motu, compel a proper accounting by attachment for contempt. Lichtenfels v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 260 N.C. 146, 132 S.E.2d 360 (1963).

Hearing to Compel Accounting. — Because hearings both to compel accountings and remove personal representative are instituted by notice rather than a formal civil complaint and summons, they are "special proceedings," for which beneficiaries are not required to commence a civil action. In re Estate of Parrish, 143 N.C. App. 244, 547 S.E.2d 74, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 272 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 69, 553 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

§ 28A-21-5. Vouchers presumptive evidence.

Vouchers, without other proof, are presumptive evidence of disbursement, unless impeached. If lost, the accounting party must, if required, make oath to that fact setting forth the manner of loss, and state the contents and purport of the voucher. (C.C.P., s. 480; Code, s. 1401; Rev., s. 101; C.S., s. 107; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Independent of this section receipts of living persons are not strictly legal evidence to show a full administration. Drake v. Drake, 82 N.C. 443 (1880).

Vouchers Are Presumptive Though Not

Primary Evidence. — While this section makes the vouchers presumptive proof, it by no means provides that they shall be primary evidence, and therefore actual payment may still be established in the same way as before the enactment of this section, when the receipts of living persons were not strictly legal evidence to show a full administration. Costen v.

McDowell, 107 N.C. 546, 12 S.E. 432 (1890). See Drake v. Drake, 82 N.C. 443 (1880).

What Vouchers Must Show. — This section makes vouchers presumptive evidence of disbursements actually made, but not of their nature and purpose and the necessity for them. To make such vouchers presumptive evidence, they should state with reasonable particularity their purpose, the particular account upon which they were made, the time, etc., so as to make it appear that the expenditure or disbursement was a proper one. McLean v. Breese, 109 N.C. 564, 13 S.E. 910 (1891).

Proof of Handwriting. — The handwriting of the person signing the voucher need be proven only when the voucher is relied on as presumptive evidence under this section. Costen v. McDowell, 107 N.C. 546, 12 S.E. 432 (1890).

ARTICLE 22.

Distribution.

§ 28A-22-1. Scheme of distribution; testate and intestate estates.

After the payment of costs of administration, taxes and other valid claims against the decedent's estate, the personal representative shall distribute the remaining assets of the estate in accordance with the terms of decedent's valid probated will or the provisions of Chapter 29 of the General Statutes or as otherwise lawfully authorized. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2002-180, c. 18.2, provides: "The General Statutes Commission may study and report to the 2003 General Assembly on the question of whether North Carolina should allow a method for the distribution of property coming to an estate after the estate is closed without the necessity of reopening the estate. As part of the study, the Commission may consider, among other things, the deed of distribution concept used in South Carolina as codified in the South Carolina General Statutes, Section 62-3-907, et seq., and other related statutes. The Commission may also consider recent statewide situations that have arisen from payments to closed estates arising from the Bailey and Smith/Shaver cases, and payments made to tobacco producers and allotment holders under Phase II of the Tobacco Master Settlement Agreement. The Commission may consult with the Estate Law Section of the North Carolina Bar Association and the Administrative Office of the Courts, in addition to any other interested persons. The report may include any recommended legislation necessary to implement the Commission's recommendations."

§ 28A-22-2. Shares of after-born and after-adopted children.

The share of an after-born or after-adopted child, as provided by G.S. 29-9 and 31-5.5, shall be allotted to him out of any undivided real or personal property, or out of both, if there is enough such undivided property for that purpose. If there is no undivided real or personal property, or if there is not enough, then the whole of the child's share, or the deficiency, shall be made up from the devised real or personal property, or from both. The portion contributed by a devisee shall bear the same ratio to his devise as the after-born or after-adopted child's share bears to the net estate. (1868-9, c. 113, ss. 108, 109; Code, ss. 1536, 1537; Rev., ss. 138, 139; C.S., ss. 141, 142; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

After-Born Child of Intestate Shares in Estate. — This statutory provision clearly assumes and contemplates that an after-born child of an intestate shares in the estate, both real and personal, of such intestate. Byerly v. Tolbert, 250 N.C. 27, 108 S.E.2d 29 (1959).

Child Born to Intestate's Widow More Than 280 Days After His Death. — When it is asserted on behalf of a child born of the woman to whom the intestate was married and with whom he was living at the time of his death that the intestate was her father, the fact that such child was born more than 10 lunar months or 280 days after the intestate's death, standing alone, does not preclude the child as a matter of law from receiving a child's share in the distribution of the intestate's personal estate, absent a statute so providing. Whether such child is the child of intestate is determinable as an issue of fact. Byerly v. Tolbert, 250 N.C. 27, 108 S.E.2d 29 (1959).

If, under all relevant circumstances, a child is born more than 10 lunar months or 280 days after the death of the intestate, the presumption is that the child was not en ventre sa mere when the intestate died. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, this presumption is determinative but this presumption may be rebutted by evidence tending to show that intestate was in fact the father of the child. Thus, when the issue is raised, the burden of proof rests upon such child to establish by the greater weight of the evidence that the intestate was the father. Byerly v. Tolbert, 250 N.C. 27, 108 S.E.2d 29 (1959).

As of What Time Contributions Made. — See Johnson v. Chapman, 54 N.C. 130 (1853).

Child Not en Ventre Sa Mere. — Before a child can be entitled to a distributive share under the statute of distribution, it must appear that he was either in being or en ventre sa mere at the time of the death of the intestate. Thus a half brother of the intestate born 10 and a half months after her death is not entitled to a distributive share, though born before distribution. Grant v. Bustin, 21 N.C. 77 (1835).

§ 28A-22-3. Special proceeding against unknown heirs of decedent before distribution of estate.

If there may be heirs, born or unborn, of the decedent, other than those known to the personal representative and whose names and residences are unknown, before distributing such estate the personal representative is authorized to institute a special proceeding before the clerk of superior court for the purpose of determining who are the heirs of the decedent. All unknown heirs of the decedent shall be made parties thereto and shall be served with summons by publication as provided by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4. Upon such service being had, the court shall appoint some discreet person to act as guardian ad litem for said unknown heirs and summons shall issue as to such guardian ad litem. Said guardian ad litem shall file answer on behalf of said unknown heirs and he may be paid for his services such sum as the court may fix, to be paid as other costs out of the estate. Upon the filing of the answer by said guardian ad litem all such unknown heirs shall be before the court for the purposes of the proceeding to the same extent as if each had been personally served with summons. Any judgment entered by the court in such proceeding shall be as binding upon said unknown heirs as if they were personally before the court and any payment or distribution made by the personal representative under orders of the court shall have the effect of fully discharging such personal representative and any sureties on his official bond to the full extent of such payment or distribution as ordered. (1957, c. 1248; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

The purpose of giving notice by publication is not only to alert the individuals named, but also their friends and acquaintances who may see the publication and give them actual notice. Bank of Wadesboro v. Jordan, 252 N.C.

419, 114 S.E.2d 82 (1960), decided under prior law.

Strict Compliance Required. — Service by publication is in derogation of the common law and strict compliance is required. Bank of Wadesboro v. Jordan, 252 N.C. 419, 114 S.E.2d 82 (1960), decided under prior law.

Heirs have a right to be heard before the court decrees they are precluded from sharing in the estate of decedent who dies intestate, and are entitled to such notice of the hearing as the law provides, which may be by proper publication in the event personal service cannot be had. Bank of Wadesboro v. Jordan, 252 N.C.

419, 114 S.E.2d 82 (1960), decided under prior law.

Sufficiency of Notice. — Notice merely to known and unknown heirs is insufficient if more definite identification is available. Bank of Wadesboro v. Jordan, 252 N.C. 419, 114 S.E.2d 82 (1960), decided under prior law.

§ 28A-22-4. Distribution to nonresident trustee only upon appointment of process agent.

(a) No assets of the estate of a decedent subject to administration in this State shall be delivered or transferred to a trustee of a testamentary trust or an inter vivos trust who is a nonresident of this State who has not appointed a resident agent for the service of civil process for actions or proceedings arising out of the administration of the trust with regard to such property.

(b) If property is delivered or transferred to a trustee in violation of this section, process may be served outside this State or by publication, as provided by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4, and the courts of this State shall have the same jurisdiction over the trustee as might have been obtained by service upon a properly appointed process agent. The provisions of this section with regard to jurisdiction shall be in addition to other means of obtaining jurisdiction permissible under the laws of this State. (1967, c. 947; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-22-5. Distribution of assets in kind in satisfaction of bequests and transfers in trust.

(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, whenever under any will or trust indenture the executor, trustee or other fiduciary is required to, or has an option to, satisfy a bequest or transfer in trust by a transfer of assets of the estate or trust in kind at the values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, the executor, trustee or other fiduciary shall, in the absence of contrary provisions in such will or trust indenture, be required to satisfy such bequest or transfer by the distribution of assets fairly representative of the appreciation or depreciation in the value of all property available for distribution in satisfaction of such bequest or transfer.

(b) The provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall not apply unless either:

- (1) The decedent's surviving spouse is the beneficiary of the bequest or trust transfer described in subsection (a) of this section or of the residue of the estate or trust; or
- (2) Any "skip person", as that term is defined in Chapter 13 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, is or may be a current or future beneficiary of the bequest or trust transfer described in subsection (a) of this section or of the residue of the estate or trust, and the value of the decedent's gross estate for federal tax purposes exceeds the value of the decedent's unused generation-skipping tax exemption available under Chapter 13 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended. (1965, c. 764, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1995, c. 235, s. 5.)

§ 28A-22-6. Agreements with taxing authorities to secure benefit of federal marital deduction.

The executor, trustee, or other fiduciary having discretionary powers under a will or trust indenture with respect to the selection of assets to be distributed in satisfaction of a bequest or transfer in trust to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse of a decedent shall be authorized to enter into agreements with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue of the United States of America, and other taxing authorities, requiring the fiduciary to exercise the fiduciary's discretion so that cash and other properties distributed in satisfaction of such bequest or transfer in trust will be fairly representative of the net appreciation or depreciation in value on the date, or dates, of distribution of all property then available for distribution in satisfaction of such bequest or transfer in trust. Any such fiduciary shall be authorized to enter into any other agreement not in conflict with the express terms of the will or trust indenture that may be necessary or advisable in order to secure for federal estate tax purposes the appropriate marital deduction available under the Internal Revenue Laws of the United States of America and to do and perform all acts incident to such purpose. (1965, c. 744; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-22-7. Distribution to parent or guardian of a minor.

- (a) If a devise or legacy of personal property to a person under the age of 18 has a total value of less than one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500), and the devisee or legatee is residing in the same household with a parent or a guardian appointed prior to the decedent's death, the personal representative may distribute to the parent or guardian the devise or legacy. However, such distribution shall only be made with the prior approval of the clerk of court who issued the letters testamentary or of administration.
- (b) If such distribution has been made the parent or guardian shall use the property solely for the education, maintenance and support of the devisee or legatee. However, the parent or guardian shall not be required to file an accounting with the clerk of court or to the personal representative, nor shall such distribution be cause for a delay in the filing of the personal representative's final account under the provisions of Article 21 of this Chapter.
- (c) This section establishes a procedure that is separate from the provisions of G.S. 33-69.1 and it is not the intention of this section to repeal in whole or in part the provisions of G.S. 33-69.1.
- (d) This section may also be applied to several devises or legacies of personal property to a single devisee or legatee having a combined total value of less than one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500). (1975, c. 813, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Section 33-69.1, referred to in this section, has been repealed. For the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, see now G.S. 33A-1 et seq.

§ 28A-22-8. Executor or trustee; discretion over distributions.

Unless otherwise restricted by the terms of the will or trust, an executor or trustee shall have absolute discretion to make distributions in cash or in specific property, real or personal, or an undivided interest therein or partly in cash or partly in such property, and to do so without regard to the income tax basis for federal tax purposes of specific property allocated to any beneficiary. (1977, c. 740.)

§ 28A-22-9. Distribution to known but unlocated devisees or heirs.

- (a) If there are known but unlocated devisees or heirs of property held by the personal representative, the personal representative may deliver the share of such devisee or heir to the clerk of superior court immediately prior to filing of the final account. If the devisee or heir is located after the final account has been filed, he may present a claim for the share to the clerk. If the clerk determines that the claimant is entitled to the share, he shall deliver the share to the devisee or claimant. If the clerk denies the claim, the claimant may take an appeal as in a special proceeding.

(b) The clerk shall hold the share without liability for profit or interest. If no claim has been presented within a period of one year after the filing of the final account, the clerk shall deliver the share to the State Treasurer as abandoned property.

(c) The clerk shall not be required to publish any notice to such devisee or heir and shall not be required to report such share to the State Treasurer. If the devisee or heir is located, the clerk shall inform the devisee or heir that he is entitled to file a claim with the State Treasurer for the share under the provisions of G.S. 116B-67. (1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1311, s. 2; 2002-62, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Section 116B-38(a), referred to in subsection (c) above, has been repealed. See now G.S. 116B-67(a), (b).

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2002-62, s. 1, effective October 1, 2002, in subsection (a), substituted "heirs of property held by their personal representative" for

"heirs"; in subsection (b), substituted "one year after the filing" for "five years after the filing"; and in subsection (c), substituted "G.S. 116B-67" for "G.S. 116B-38(a)."

§ 28A-22-10. Distribution of assets of inoperative trust.

When the facts at the time of distribution of property to a trust are such that the trust would be inoperative under the terms of the instrument creating the trust for any reason, including the death of a beneficiary, renunciation by a beneficiary, the exercise of a right to withdraw the property by a beneficiary, or the attainment of a stipulated age by a beneficiary, the personal representative or the trustee authorized or required to make the distribution of that property to the trust may distribute the property directly to the person or persons entitled to it under the terms of the instrument creating the trust without the interposition of the establishment of the trust. If only a portion of the trust would be inoperative, the property distributable to that portion of the trust may be distributed directly to the person or persons entitled to the property under the terms of the instrument creating the trust. (2001-413, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 23.

Settlement.

§ 28A-23-1. Settlement after final account filed.

When the personal representative or collector has paid or otherwise satisfied or provided for all claims against the estate, has distributed the remainder of the estate pursuant to G.S. 28A-22-1 and has filed his final account for settlement pursuant to G.S. 28A-21-2, if the clerk of superior court, after review of the personal representative's or collector's final account, approves the same, he shall enter an order discharging the personal representative or collector from further liability. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 446, s. 1.)

§ 28A-23-2. Payment into court of fund due minor.

When any personal representative or collector holds property due a minor without a guardian and desires to file his petition for settlement, he may deliver the property to the clerk of superior court who shall invest upon interest or otherwise manage said property for the use of the minor or the clerk may proceed to appoint a guardian for the minor pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 35A of the General Statutes and then may deliver the property of the minor to the guardian. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 97; Code, s. 1526; 1893, c. 317; Rev., s. 151; C.S., s. 153; 1965, c. 815, s. 3; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1987, c. 550, s. 17.)

Cross References. — As to the manner of investment of funds in the hands of clerks of court under color of their office, see G.S. 7A-112.

§ 28A-23-3. Commissions allowed personal representatives; representatives guilty of misconduct or default.

(a) Personal representatives, collectors or public administrators shall be entitled to commissions to be fixed in the discretion of the clerk of superior court not to exceed five percent (5%) upon the amounts of receipts, including the value of all personal property when received, and upon the expenditures made in accordance with law, which commissions shall be charged as a part of the costs of administration and, upon allowance, may be retained out of the assets of the estate against creditors and all other persons claiming an interest in the estate. Provided, however, when the gross value of an estate is two thousand dollars ($2,000) or less, the clerk of superior court is authorized and empowered to fix the commission to be received by the personal representative, collector or public administrator in an amount as he, in his discretion, deems just and adequate.

(b) In determining the amount of such commissions, both upon personal property received and upon expenditures made, the clerk of superior court shall consider the time, responsibility, trouble and skill involved in the management of the estate. Where real property is sold to pay debts or legacies, the commission shall be computed only on the proceeds actually applied in the payment of debts or legacies.

(c) The clerk of superior court may allow commissions from time to time during the course of the administration, but the total commissions allowed shall be determined on final settlement of the estate and shall not exceed the limit fixed in this section.

(d) Nothing in this section shall be construed:

- (1) To prevent the clerk of the superior court from allowing reasonable sums for necessary charges and disbursements incurred in the management of the estate; or
- (2) To allow commissions on distribution of the shares of heirs or on distribution of shares of devisees; or
- (3) To abridge the right of any party interested in the administration of a decedent's estate to appeal an order of the clerk of superior court to a judge of superior court.

(e) No personal representative, collector or public administrator, who has been guilty of such default or misconduct in the due execution of his office resulting in the revocation of his appointment under the provisions of G.S. 28A-9-1, shall be entitled to any commission under the provisions of this section.

(f) For the purpose of computing commissions whenever any portion of the dividends, interest, rents or other amounts payable to a personal representative, collector or public administrator is required by any law of the United States or other governmental unit to be withheld for income tax purposes by the person, corporation, organization or governmental unit paying the same, the amount so withheld shall be deemed to have been received and expended. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 95; 1869-70, c. 189; Code, s. 1524; Rev., s. 149; C.S., s. 157; 1941, c. 124; 1953, c. 855; 1959, c. 662; c. 879, s. 8; 1961, cc. 362, 575; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 814, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former Chapter 28 or law prior thereto.

Purpose of Subsection (b). — Subsection (b) of this section ensures that the personal representative's commission on a sale of real estate is limited to the amount that was actually needed for the payment of claims. This discourages personal representatives from selling land merely to increase their commissions. Matthews v. Watkins, 91 N.C. App. 640, 373 S.E.2d 133 (1988), aff'd, 324 N.C. 541, 379 S.E.2d 857 (1989).

Authority of Clerks of Court Where Representative Qualifies. — The clerk of the superior court where the personal representative qualifies has authority to fix the amount of fees to which an executor or administrator is entitled. Strickland v. Jackson, 259 N.C. 81, 130 S.E.2d 22 (1963).

Discretion of Clerk. — The allowance of commissions, by way of compensation, to an executor requires the exercise of judicial discretion and judgment by the clerk of the superior court. It is he who has original jurisdiction. If any interested party conceives that the allowance made by him is either inadequate or excessive, or is made under an erroneous conception of the law, he may appeal. But the Supreme Court, upon review of the compensation allowed, cannot perform the function of the clerk, for it has no original jurisdiction in such matters. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Waddell, 237 N.C. 342, 75 S.E.2d 151 (1953).

Commissions of an administrator of the estate of a decedent are to be fixed in the discretion of the clerk of superior court subject to the maximum provided by statute. This requires exercise of judicial discretion and judgment by the clerk, who has original jurisdiction in the matter. In re Green, 9 N.C. App. 326, 176 S.E.2d 19 (1970).

The allowance of a commission to an executor is a matter within the original jurisdiction of the clerk of the superior court and it is within his discretion to fix the amount, subject to the maximum provided by statute. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

An executor has no right to fix and determine compensation to be received by him. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

It is necessary for the executor to file a petition for commissions and fees along with the annual accountings to enable the clerk to determine the amount of the commission and attorneys' fees. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Section Controls in Absence of Testamentary Provision. — In the absence of an effective testamentary provision on the subject, the right of the personal representative of a decedent to compensation is controlled by this section. In re Ledbetter, 235 N.C. 642, 70 S.E.2d 667 (1952).

A testator may stipulate in his will the compensation to be paid the person appointed executor with power to settle his estate. When this is done the provisions of the will are binding on all interested parties. But an executor has no right to fix and determine the compensation to be received by him. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Waddell, 237 N.C. 342, 75 S.E.2d 151 (1953).

Ordinarily, where the will expressly stipulates the compensation to be allowed an executor, the executor, by qualifying, is deemed to have accepted a bargain and is bound thereby even though the will stipulates compensation in a sum less than the five percent maximum allowed by statute. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

Maximum Percentage Set by Will Controls. — Where the will does not fix or purport to fix the compensation to be paid testator's executor as compensation for services in settling his estate, but merely fixes the maximum percentage on receipts and disbursements at two and a half percent, it is the duty of the clerk to make an allowance to the executor subject to the maximum limitation stipulated in the will rather than the maximum fixed by this section. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Waddell, 237 N.C. 342, 75 S.E.2d 151 (1953).

The terms "receipts" and "expenditures," as used in this section, refer to the actual receipts and the actual expenditures of the personal representative. An administrator has no lawful claim to commissions on the credits or offsets deducted by a consent judgment from the indebtedness of his testate. This is so for the reason that the deductions were neither actually received nor actually expended by the administrator. In re Ledbetter, 235 N.C. 642, 70 S.E.2d 667 (1952).

Dower as an "Interest in the Estate." — Manifestly, a claim of dower is an "interest" in the estate. Hence the wording of this section lends direct support to a judgment giving priority to commissions due executors, reasonable attorneys' fees and costs. Parsons v. Leak, 204 N.C. 86, 167 S.E. 563 (1933).

Representative Must Discharge Duties. — The representative is not, under this section, entitled to commission at all events. He must have earned them by a just and reasonable discharge of his duties. It must appear that the "receipts and expenditures" referred to have been fairly made in the course of administration. The law will not allow compensation to one who disregards its commands. Grant v. Reese, 94 N.C. 720 (1886).

When Commissions and Charges Should Not Be Allowed. — The compensation is allowed to the representative in order to reward him not only for his time, labor and trouble but also for the responsibility incurred, and the fidelity with which he discharged the duties of his trust. It should not be allowed where due to his neglect the estate has suffered loss. Kelly v. Odum, 139 N.C. 278, 51 S.E. 953 (1905).

Same — Allowance of necessary charges and disbursements, such as counsel fees. See Kelly v. Odum, 139 N.C. 278, 51 S.E. 953 (1905); Johnson v. Marcom, 121 N.C. 83, 28 S.E. 58 (1897).

Commissions are allowed where one person is both administrator and guardian of distributee. Rose v. Bank of Wadesboro, 217 N.C. 600, 9 S.E.2d 2 (1940).

Commission on Both Receipts and Disbursements. — Commissions may be allowed to the representative on both receipts and disbursements, as separate acts. Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 126 N.C. 531, 36 S.E. 39 (1900).

Section Does Not Affect Powers of Clerk as to Fees of Commissioners. — This section does not divest the clerk of the superior court of the powers and duties expressly committed to him by the provisions of G.S. 1-408 with respect to the fees of commissioners appointed for the sale of land as provided therein. Welch v. Kearns, 259 N.C. 367, 130 S.E.2d 634 (1963).

Attorney as Executor. — When a lawyer voluntarily becomes executor he assumes the office cum onere, and the exercise by him of his professional skill in the management of the estate does not entitle him to counsel fees, but his compensation is limited to the five percent maximum allowed by this section. Lightner v. Boone, 221 N.C. 78, 19 S.E.2d 144 (1942).

Trustee May Purchase Special Skills. — Where special skills are required, a trustee is entitled to purchase such skills at the expense of the trust estate in order to accomplish the trust purpose. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

Where the trust income could best be applied to meet the charitable purposes through the advice of an advisory board assisted by a full-time director, and without such assistance the trust would be lacking in adequate direction the trial court correctly allowed the trustees to employ skilled assistance in the administration of the trust and to charge the reasonable cost for such assistance to trust income. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

Necessary Charges, Such as Counsel Fees, Allowed. — Besides commissions, the representative is allowed to retain his expenses for necessary charges and disbursements in the settlement of the estate. Among these necessary charges fees paid to counsel are embraced. Hester v. Hester, 38 N.C. 9 (1843); Love v. Love, 40 N.C. 201 (1848); Fairbairn v. Fisher, 58 N.C. 385 (1860).

A reasonable fee for legal advice and assistance in the management of a trust estate is allowable as a necessary expense of the trust estate. Tripp v. Tripp, 17 N.C. App. 64, 193 S.E.2d 366 (1972).

Payment of Commissions Held Proper. — Commissions to the executor of an estate could be paid on proceeds from the sale of real estate where the executor was required to sell the property under the terms of the will and the property was not sold to pay debts or legacies. Matthews v. Watkins, 91 N.C. App. 640, 373 S.E.2d 133 (1988), aff'd, 324 N.C. 541, 379 S.E.2d 857 (1989).

Advance Held Improper. — Because the clerk alone has the discretion to fix an executor's compensation and an attorneys' fee, coexecutor's advance to himself of the sum of $32,950.00 from the estate was improper. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Order for Commissions Final Judgment. — An order allowing commissions is a final judgment upon which an appeal may be taken.

Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 126 N.C. 531, 36 S.E. 39 (1900).

Appeal on Commission under Five Percent. — Notwithstanding the fact that the amount of commissions allowed in a given case has not exceeded five percent on the receipts and disbursements, the allowance is reviewable upon appeal for inadequacy or excessiveness. It cannot strictly be said that the lower court has exclusive discretion within the limit of five percent. Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 126 N.C. 531, 36 S.E. 39 (1900).

§ 28A-23-4. Counsel fees allowable to attorneys serving as representatives.

The clerk of superior court, in his discretion, is authorized and empowered to allow counsel fees to an attorney serving as a personal representative, collector or public administrator (in addition to the commissions allowed him as such representative, collector or public administrator) where such attorney in behalf of the estate he represents renders professional services, as an attorney, which are beyond the ordinary routine of administration and of a type which would reasonably justify the retention of legal counsel by any such representative, collector or public administrator not himself licensed to practice law. (1957, c. 375; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1977, c. 814, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Fees awarded under this section should be for actual services rendered and should not be based solely upon the size of the estate; nevertheless, the size of the estate provides a useful guideline and may be considered as a factor in determining whether legal services were necessary and the time expended justified. Matthews v. Watkins, 91 N.C. App. 640, 373 S.E.2d 133 (1988), aff'd, 324 N.C. 541, 379 S.E.2d 857 (1989).

tor's compensation and an attorneys' fee, coexecutor's advance to himself of the sum of $32,950.00 from the estate was improper. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

§ 28A-23-5. Reopening administration.

If, after an estate has been settled and the personal representative discharged, other property of the estate shall be discovered, or if it shall appear that any necessary act remains unperformed on the part of the personal representative, or for any other proper cause, the clerk of superior court, upon the petition of any person interested in the estate and without notice or upon such notice as he may direct, may order that said estate be reopened. He may reappoint the personal representative or appoint another personal representative to administer such property or perform such acts as may be deemed necessary. Unless the clerk of superior court shall otherwise order, the provisions of this Chapter as to an original administration shall apply to the proceedings had in the reopened administration; but no claim which is already barred can be asserted in the reopened administration. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

“Proper Cause” to Reopen. — The existence of a valid claim against an estate which is not time-barred may, in an appropriate case, constitute “proper cause” to reopen a closed estate in order to assert the claim. However, claims which are already barred may not be asserted in a reopened administration. Thus, without more, a claim which is barred by the statute of limitations may not constitute “proper cause” to reopen administration of a closed estate. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

Reopening of Estate After Six-Month Period. — The provision in this section prohibiting any claim which is already barred from being asserted in the reopened estate primarily refers to the limitations in G.S. 28A-19-3 on the presentation of claims. Thus, an estate may not ordinarily be reopened for the litigation of claims not brought within the six-month period, even in the absence of a bar by some other statute of limitations. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

Refusal of Clerk to Reopen Estate Upheld. — In light of the public policy in favor of the expedited administration of estates, as evidenced by the six-month statute of limitations and other provisions of this Chapter, petitioner who alleged that the deceased had promised to devise a life estate to her had a heavy burden of justifying her failure to bring her suit within the six-month period provided for that purpose, or at the very least, within the greater than two-year period that the estate actually remained open. There was no error in the clerk's determination that this burden was not met. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

ARTICLE 24.

Uniform Simultaneous Death Act.

§ 28A-24-1. Disposition of property where no sufficient evidence of survivorship.

Where the title to property or the devolution thereof depends upon priority of death and there is no sufficient evidence that the persons have died otherwise than simultaneously, the property of each person shall be disposed of as if he had survived, except as provided otherwise in this Article. (1947, c. 1016, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in McBryde v. Ferebee, 46 N.C. App. 116, 264 S.E.2d 129 (1980).

§ 28A-24-2. Beneficiaries of another person's disposition of property.

(a) Other than as provided in subsection (b) below, if property is so disposed of that the right of a beneficiary to succeed to any interest therein is conditional upon his surviving another person and both persons die, and there is no sufficient evidence that the two have died other than simultaneously, the beneficiary shall be deemed not to have survived.

(b) If property is so disposed of that it is to be distributed among such members of a class as survive another person and there is no sufficient evidence that one or more members of the class and such other person died other than simultaneously, each member of the class so dying will be deemed to have survived such other person.

(c) If property is so disposed of that its disposition depends upon the time of death of two or more beneficiaries designated to take alternatively by reason of survivorship and there is no sufficient evidence that such beneficiaries have died otherwise than simultaneously, the property thus disposed of shall be divided into as many equal portions as there are alternative beneficiaries who would have taken the whole property if they had survived and such portions shall be distributed respectively to each such beneficiary. (1947, c. 1016, s. 2; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-24-3. Joint tenants or tenants by the entirety.

(a) Where there is no sufficient evidence that two joint tenants or tenants by the entirety have died otherwise than simultaneously, the property shall be distributed one half as if one had survived and one half as if the other had survived. If there are more than two joint tenants and all of them have so died, the property thus distributed shall be in the proportion that one bears to the whole number of joint tenants.

(b) For the purpose of this section, the term "joint tenants" includes owners of property held under circumstances which entitled one or more to the whole of the property on the death of the other or others. (1947, c. 1016, s. 3; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-24-4. Insurance policies.

Where the insured and the beneficiary in a policy of life or accident insurance have died and there is no sufficient evidence that they have died otherwise than simultaneously, the proceeds of the policy shall be distributed as if the insured had survived the beneficiary. (1947, c. 1016, s. 4; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-24-5. Article does not apply if decedent provides otherwise.

This Article shall not apply in the case of wills, living trusts, deeds, contracts of insurance, or any other situation wherein provision has been made for distribution of property different from the provisions of this Article, or wherein provision has been made for a presumption as to survivorship which results in a distribution of property different from that herein provided. (1947, c. 1016, s. 6; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-24-6. Uniformity of interpretation.

This Article shall be so construed and interpreted as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law in those states which enact it. (1947, c. 1016, s. 7; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-24-7. Short title.

This Article may be cited as the Uniform Simultaneous Death Act. (1947, c. 1016, s. 8; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

*Small Estates.§ 28A-25-1. Collection of property by affidavit when decedent dies intestate.

(a) When a decedent dies intestate leaving personal property, less liens and encumbrances thereon, not exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in value, at any time after 30 days from the date of death, any person indebted to the decedent or having possession of tangible personal property or an instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock or chose in action belonging to the decedent shall make payment of the indebtedness or deliver the tangible personal property or an instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock or chose in action to a person claiming to be the public administrator appointed pursuant to G.S. 28A-12- 1, or an heir or creditor of the decedent, not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2, upon being presented a certified copy of an affidavit filed in accordance with subsection (b) and made by or on behalf of the heir or creditor or the public administrator stating:

- (1) The name and address of the affiant and the fact that he or she is the public administrator or an heir or creditor of the decedent;
- (2) The name of the decedent and his residence at time of death;
- (3) The date and place of death of the decedent;
- (4) That 30 days have elapsed since the death of the decedent;
- (5) That the value of all the personal property owned by the estate of the decedent, less liens and encumbrances thereon, does not exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000);
- (6) That no application or petition for appointment of a personal representative is pending or has been granted in any jurisdiction;
- (7) The names and addresses of those persons who are entitled, under the provisions of the Intestate Succession Act, to the personal property of the decedent and their relationship, if any, to the decedent; and
- (8) A description sufficient to identify each tract of real property owned by the decedent at the time of his death.

In those cases in which the affiant is the surviving spouse and sole heir of the decedent, not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2, the property described in this subsection that may be collected pursuant to this section may exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in value but shall not exceed twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) in value. In such cases, the affidavit shall state: (i) the name and address of the affiant and the fact that he or she is the surviving spouse and is entitled, under the provisions of the Intestate Succession Act, to all of the property of the decedent; (ii) that the value of all of the personal property owned by the estate of the decedent, less liens and encumbrances thereon, does not exceed twenty thousand dollars ($20,000); and (iii) the information required under subdivisions (2), (3), (4), (6), and (8) of this subsection.

(b) Prior to the recovery of any assets of the decedent, a copy of the affidavit described in subsection (a) shall be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county where the decedent had his domicile at the time of his death. The affidavit shall be filed by the clerk upon payment of the fee provided in G.S. 7A-307, shall be indexed in the index to estates, and a copy thereof shall be mailed by the clerk to the persons shown in the affidavit as entitled to the personal property.

(c) The presentation of an affidavit as provided in subsection (a) shall be sufficient to require the transfer to the affiant or his designee of the title and license to a motor vehicle registered in the name of the decedent owner; the ownership rights of a savings account or checking account in a bank in the name of the decedent owner; the ownership rights of a savings account or share certificate in a credit union, building and loan association, or savings and loan association in the name of the decedent owner; the ownership rights in any stock or security registered on the books of a corporation in the name of a decedent owner; or any other property or contract right owned by decedent at the time of his death. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 9; 1983, c. 65, s. 1; c. 713, s. 21; 1985, c. 651, s. 1; 1989, c. 407, s. 1; 1995, c. 262, s. 1.)

Action Properly Dismissed Against Defendants Who Were Merely Collectors by Affidavit. — Where plaintiff was required by this statute to bring his action against the collector or personal representative, his action was properly dismissed when he filed his action against defendants who were merely collectors by affidavit under this section, since plaintiff failed to bring his action against the proper party or parties. Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

§ 28A-25-1.1. Collection of property by affidavit when decedent dies testate.

(a) When a decedent dies testate leaving personal property, less liens and encumbrances thereon, not exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in value, at any time after 30 days from the date of death, any person indebted to the decedent or having possession of tangible personal property or an instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock or chose in action belonging to the decedent shall make payment of the indebtedness or deliver the tangible personal property or an instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock or chose in action to a person claiming to be the public administrator appointed pursuant to G.S. 28A-12-1, a person named or designated as executor in the will, devisee, heir or creditor, of the decedent, not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2, upon being presented a certified copy of an affidavit filed in accordance with subsection (b) and made by or on behalf of the heir, the person named or designated as executor in the will of the decedent, the creditor, the public administrator, or the devisee, stating:

- (1) The name and address of the affiant and the fact that he is the public administrator, a person named or designated as executor in the will, devisee, heir or creditor, of the decedent;
- (2) The name of the decedent and his residence at time of death;
- (3) The date and place of death of the decedent;
- (4) That 30 days have elapsed since the death of the decedent;
- (5) That the decedent died testate leaving personal property, less liens and encumbrances thereon, not exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in value;
- (6) That the decedent's will has been admitted to probate in the court of the proper county and a duly certified copy of the will has been recorded in each county in which is located any real property owned by the decedent at the time of his death;
- (7) That a certified copy of the decedent's will is attached to the affidavit;
- (8) That no application or petition for appointment of a personal representative is pending or has been granted in any jurisdiction;
- (9) The names and addresses of those persons who are entitled, under the provisions of the will, or if applicable, of the Intestate Succession Act, to the property of the decedent; and their relationship, if any, to the decedent; and
- (10) A description sufficient to identify each tract of real property owned by the decedent at the time of his death.

In those cases in which the affiant is the surviving spouse, is entitled to all of the property of the decedent, and is not disqualified under G.S. 28A-4-2, the property described in this subsection that may be collected pursuant to this section may exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in value but shall not exceed twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) in value. In such cases, the affidavit shall state: (i) the name and address of the affiant and the fact that he or she is the surviving spouse and is entitled, under the provisions of the decedent's will, or if applicable, of the Intestate Succession Act, to all of the property of the decedent; (ii) that the decedent died testate leaving personal property, less liens and encumbrances thereon, not exceeding twenty thousand dollars ($20,000); and (iii) the information required under subdivisions (2), (3), (4), (6), (7), (8), and (10) of this subsection.

(b) Prior to the recovery of any assets of the decedent, a copy of the affidavit described in subsection (a) shall be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county where the decedent had his domicile at the time of his death. The affidavit shall be filed by the clerk upon payment of the fee provided in G.S. 7A-307, shall be indexed in the index to estates, and a copy shall be mailed by the clerk to the persons shown in the affidavit as entitled to the property.

(c) The presentation of an affidavit as provided in subsection (a) shall be sufficient to require the transfer to the affiant or his designee of the title and license to a motor vehicle registered in the name of the decedent owner; the ownership rights of a savings account or checking account in a bank in the name of the decedent owner; the ownership rights of a savings account or share certificate in a credit union, building and loan association, or savings and loan association in the name of the decedent owner; the ownership rights in any stock or security registered on the books of a corporation in the name of a decedent owner; or any other property or contract right owned by decedent at the time of his death. (1985, c. 651, s. 2; 1987, c. 670, s. 1; 1989, c. 407, s. 2; 1995, c. 262, s. 2.)

§ 28A-25-2. Effect of affidavit.

The person paying, delivering, transferring or issuing personal property or the evidence thereof pursuant to an affidavit meeting the requirements of G.S. 28A-25-1(a) or G.S. 28A-25-1.1(a) is discharged and released to the same extent as if he dealt with a duly qualified personal representative of the decedent. He is not required to see to the application of the personal property or evidence thereof or to inquire into the truth of any statement in the affidavit. If any person to whom an affidavit is delivered refuses to pay, deliver, transfer, or issue any personal property or evidence thereof, it may be recovered or its payment, delivery, transfer, or issuance compelled upon proof of their right in an action brought for that purpose by or on behalf of the persons entitled thereto. The court costs and attorney's fee incident to the action shall be taxed against the person whose refusal to comply with the provisions of G.S. 28A-25-1(a) or G.S. 28A-25-1.1(a) made the action necessary. The heir or creditor to whom payment, delivery, transfer or issuance is made is answerable and accountable therefore to any duly qualified personal representative or collector of the decedent's estate or to any other person having an interest in the estate. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1985, c. 651, s. 3; 1987, c. 670, s. 2.)

§ 28A-25-3. Disbursement and distribution of property collected by affidavit.

(a) If there has been no personal representative or collector appointed by the clerk of superior court, the affiant who has collected personal property of the decedent by affidavit pursuant to G.S. 28A-25-1 or G.S. 28A-25-1.1 shall:

- (1) Disburse and distribute the same in the following order:
 - a. To the payment of the surviving spouse's year's allowance and the children's year's allowance assigned in accordance with G.S. 30-15 through G.S. 30-33;
 - b. To the payment of the debts and claims against the estate of the decedent in the order of priority set forth in G.S. 28A-19-6, or to the reimbursement of any person who has already made payment thereof;
 - c. To the distribution of the remainder of the personal property to the persons entitled thereto under the provisions of the will or of the Intestate Succession Act; and
 - (2) File an affidavit with the clerk of superior court that he has collected the personal property of the decedent and the manner in which he has disbursed and distributed the same. This final affidavit shall be filed within 90 days of the date of filing of the qualifying affidavit provided for in G.S. 28A-25-1 or G.S. 28A-25-1.1. If the affiant cannot file the final affidavit within 90 days, he shall file a report with the clerk within that time period stating his reasons. Upon determining that the affiant has good reason not to file the final affidavit within 90 days, the clerk may extend the time for filing up to one year from the date of filing the qualifying affidavit.
- (b) Nothing in this section shall be construed as changing the rule of G.S. 28A-15-1 and G.S. 28A-15-5 rendering both real and personal property, without preference or priority, available for the discharge of debts and other claims against the estate of the decedent. If it appears that it may be in the best interest of the estate to sell, lease, or mortgage any real property to obtain money for the payment of debts or other claims against the decedent's estate, the affiant shall petition the clerk of superior court for the appointment of a personal representative to conclude the administration of the decedent's estate pursuant to G.S. 28A-25-5. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1983, c. 711, s. 1; 1985, c. 651, s. 4; 1987, c. 670, s. 3; 1989, c. 407, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Action Properly Dismissed Against Defendants Who Were Merely Collectors by Affidavit. — Where plaintiff was required by this statute to bring his action against the collector or personal representative, his action was properly dismissed when he filed his action against defendants who were merely collectors by affidavit under G.S. 28A-25-1, since plaintiff failed to bring his action against the proper party or parties. Brace v. Strother, 90 N.C. App. 357, 368 S.E.2d 447, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 171, 373 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

§ 28A-25-4. Clerk may compel compliance.

If any affiant who has collected personal property of the decedent by affidavit pursuant to G.S. 28A-25-1 or G.S. 28A-25-1.1 shall fail to make distribution or file affidavit as required by G.S. 28A-25-3, the clerk of superior court may, upon his own motion or at the request of any interested person, issue an attachment against him for a contempt and commit him until he makes proper distribution and files the affidavit. In addition to or in lieu of filing this attachment, the clerk may require the affiant to post a bond conditioned as provided in G.S. 28A-8-2. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1983, c. 711, s. 2; 1985, c. 651, s. 5; 1987, c. 670, s. 4; 1989, c. 407, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Challenging Order Under This Section.

— Order of contempt and commitment entered against plaintiff-executor for failure to file account on estate and to appear and show cause was a valid court order pursuant to this section. In contesting this court order, plaintiff's proper course of action would have been to appeal the order itself. Instead, plaintiff attacked the order by seeking declaratory relief and the expunction of his records in a wholly separate action. The trial court had no authority to grant plaintiff the relief sought in that it had no power collaterally to vacate the order of contempt and commitment. Therefore, the trial court's dismissal of plaintiff's claim under Rules 12(b)(1) and (6) was proper. Little v. Bennington, 109 N.C. App. 482, 427 S.E.2d 887 (1993), pet. disc. review denied, 334 N.C. 164, 432 S.E.2d 362 (1993).

§ 28A-25-5. Subsequently appointed personal representative or collector.

Nothing in this Article shall preclude any interested person, including the affiant, from petitioning the clerk of superior court for the appointment of a personal representative or collector to conclude the administration of the decedent's estate. If such is done, the affiant who has been collected personal property by affidavit shall cease to do so, shall deliver all assets in his possession to the personal representative, and shall render a proper accounting to the personal representative or collector. A copy of the accounting shall also be filed with the clerk having jurisdiction over the personal representative or collector. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 10; 1985, c. 651, s. 6; 1987, c. 670, s. 5.)

§ 28A-25-6. Payment to clerk of money owed decedent.

(a) As an alternative to the small estate settlement procedures of this Article, any person indebted to a decedent may satisfy such indebtedness by paying the amount of the debt to the clerk of the superior court of the county of the domicile of the decedent:

- (1) If no administrator has been appointed, and
- (2) If the amount owed by such person does not exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000), and
- (3) If the sum tendered to the clerk would not make the aggregate sum which has come into the clerk's hands belonging to the decedent exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000).

(b) Such payments may not be made to the clerk if the total amount paid or tendered with respect to any one decedent would exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000), even though disbursements have been made so that the aggregate amount in the clerk's hands at any one time would not exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000).

(c) If the sum tendered pursuant to this section would make the aggregate sum coming into the clerk's hands with respect to any one decedent exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000) the clerk shall appoint an administrator, or the sum may be administered under the preceding sections of this Article.

(d) If it appears to the clerk after making a preliminary survey that disbursements pursuant to this section would not exhaust funds received pursuant to this section, he may, in his discretion, appoint an administrator, or the funds may be administered under the preceding sections of this Article.

(e) The receipt from the clerk of the superior court of a payment purporting to be made pursuant to this section is a full release to the debtor for the payment so made.

(f) If no administrator has been appointed, the clerk of superior court shall disburse the money received under this section for the following purposes and in the following order:

- (1) To pay the surviving spouse's year's allowance and children's year's allowance assigned in accordance with law;
- (2), (3) Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 383, s. 3.
- (4) All other claims shall be disbursed according to the order set out in G.S. 28A-19-6.

Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subsection, the clerk shall pay, out of funds provided the deceased pursuant to G.S. 111-18 and Part 3 of Article 2 of Chapter 108A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, any lawful claims for care provided by an adult care home to the deceased, incurred not more than 90 days prior to his death. After the death of a spouse who died intestate and after the disbursements have been made in accordance with this subsection, the balance in the clerk's hands belonging to the estate of the decedent shall be paid to the surviving spouse, and if there is no surviving spouse, the clerk shall pay it to the heirs in proportion to their respective interests.

(g) The clerk shall not be required to publish notice to creditors.

(h) Whenever an administrator is appointed after a clerk of superior court has received any money pursuant to this section, the clerk shall pay to the administrator all funds which have not been disbursed. The clerk shall receive no commissions for payments made to the administrator, and the administrator shall receive no commissions for receiving such payments. (1921, c. 93; Ex. Sess. 1921, c. 65; C.S., s. 65(a); Ex. Editor's Note. — This section combines former G.S. 28-68, 28-68.1, 28-68.2 and 28-68.3. The provisions of the former sections were rewritten, combined and transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1975, c. 344.

Session Laws 1995, c. 535, which amended this section, in s. 37 provides: "Rules adopted by the Department of Human Resources, the Medical Care Commission, and the Social Services Commission regulating domiciliary care homes prior to the effective date of this act remain in effect for adult care homes until amended or repealed."

CASE NOTES

This section provides the debtor a permissive right, and is in no wise mandatory upon him; such right as is given is alternative and not exclusive. In re Franks, 220 N.C. 176, 16 S.E.2d 831 (1941), decided under prior law.

Effect on Jurisdiction to Appoint Administrator. — This section does not have the effect of fixing the sum of $300 (now $5,000) as bona notabilia in determining jurisdiction of the clerk of the superior court to appoint an administrator for a person not domiciled in this State who dies leaving assets herein. ARTICLE 26.

*Foreign Personal Representatives and Ancillary Administration.§ 28A-26-1. Domiciliary and ancillary probate and administration.

The domiciliary, or original, administration of the estates of all decedents domiciled in North Carolina at the time of death shall be under the jurisdiction of this State and of a proper clerk of superior court in this State, and the original probate of all wills of such persons shall be in this State. Any administration of the estate and any probate of a will of such decedents outside North Carolina shall be ancillary only. All assets, except real estate (but including proceeds from the sale of real estate), subject to ancillary administration in a jurisdiction outside North Carolina shall, to the extent such assets are not necessary for the requirements of such ancillary administration, be transferred and delivered by the ancillary personal representative to the duly qualified personal representative in this State for administration and distribution by the domiciliary personal representative, and the domiciliary personal representative in this State shall have the duty of collecting all such assets from the ancillary personal representative. The receipt of the domiciliary personal representative shall fully acquit the ancillary personal representative with respect to the assets covered thereby. The domiciliary personal representative in North Carolina shall have the exclusive right and duty to pay all federal and North Carolina taxes owed by the estate of such decedent and to make proper distribution of all assets including those collected from the ancillary personal representative. (1963, c. 634; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-26-2. Payment of debt and delivery of property to domiciliary personal representative of a nonresident decedent without ancillary administration in this State.

(a) At any time after the expiration of 60 days from the death of a nonresident decedent, any resident of this State indebted to the estate of the nonresident decedent or having possession or control of personal property, or of an instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock or chose in action belonging to the estate of the nonresident decedent may pay the debt or deliver the personal property, or the instrument evidencing the debt, obligation, stock or chose in action, to the domiciliary personal representative of the nonresident decedent upon being presented with a certified or exemplified copy of his letters of appointment and an affidavit made by or on behalf of the domiciliary personal representative stating:

- (1) The date of the death of the nonresident decedent;
- (2) That to the best of his knowledge no administration, or application or petition therefor, is pending in this State;
- (3) That the domiciliary personal representative is entitled to payment or delivery.

(b) Payment or delivery made in good faith on the basis of the proof of appointment as domiciliary personal representative of a nonresident decedent and an affidavit meeting the requirements of subsection (a) constitutes a release to the same extent as if payment or delivery had been made to an ancillary personal representative.

(c) Payment or delivery under this section shall not be made if a resident creditor of the nonresident decedent has, by registered or certified mail, notified the resident debtor of the nonresident decedent or the resident having possession of the personal property belonging to the nonresident decedent that the debt should not be paid nor the property delivered to the domiciliary personal representative of the nonresident decedent. If no ancillary administrator qualifies within 90 days from the date of the notice, however, the resident debtor may pay the debt or deliver the property directly to the nonresident domiciliary personal representative as set forth in subsection (a) of this section. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 300, s. 11.)

§ 28A-26-3. Ancillary administration.

(a) Any domiciliary personal representative of a nonresident decedent upon the filing of a certified or exemplified copy of letters of appointment with the clerk of superior court who has venue under G.S. 28A-3-1 may be granted ancillary letters in this State notwithstanding that the domiciliary personal representative is a nonresident of this State or is a foreign corporation. If the domiciliary personal representative is a foreign corporation, it need not qualify under any other law of this State to authorize it to act as ancillary personal representative in the particular estate. If application is made for the issuance of ancillary letters to the domiciliary personal representative, the clerk of superior court shall give preference in appointment to the domiciliary personal representative unless the decedent shall have otherwise directed in a will.

(b) If, within 90 days after the death of the nonresident, or within 60 days after issue of domiciliary letters, should that be a shorter period, no application for ancillary letters has been made by a domiciliary personal representative, any person who could apply for issue of letters had the decedent been a resident may apply for issue of ancillary letters.

If it is known that there is a duly qualified domiciliary personal representative, the clerk of superior court shall send notice of such application, by registered mail, to that personal representative and to the appointing court. Such notice shall include a statement that, within 14 days after its mailing, the domiciliary personal representative may apply for the issue of ancillary letters with the preference specified in subsection (a) of this section; and that his failure to do so will be deemed a waiver, with the result that letters will be issued to another. Upon such failure, the clerk of superior court may issue ancillary letters in accordance with the provisions of Article 4 of this Chapter.

If the applicant and the clerk of superior court have no knowledge of the existence of a domiciliary personal representative, the clerk of superior court may proceed to issue ancillary letters. Subsequently, upon it becoming known that a domiciliary personal representative has been appointed, whether such appointment occurred before or after the issue of ancillary letters, the clerk of superior court shall notify the domiciliary personal representative, by registered mail, of the action taken by the clerk of superior court and the state of the ancillary administration. Such notice shall include a statement that at any time prior to approval of the ancillary personal representative's final account the domiciliary personal representative may appear in the proceedings for any purpose he may deem advisable; and that he may apply to be substituted as ancillary personal representative, but that such request will not be granted unless the clerk of superior court finds that such action will be for the best interests of North Carolina administration of the estate. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-26-4. Bonds.

(a) Subject to the exception in subsection (b), any personal representative, including a domiciliary personal representative, who is granted ancillary letters of administration in this State must satisfy the bond requirements prescribed in Article 8 of this Chapter.

(b) Where a citizen or subject of a foreign country, or of any other state or territory of the United States, by will sufficient according to the laws of this State, and duly probated and recorded in the proper county, devises to his executor, with power to sell and convey, real property situated in this State in trust for a person named in the will, the power being vested in the executor as such trustee, the executor may execute the power without giving bond in this State. (1911, c. 176; C.S., s. 37; Ex. Sess. 1920, c. 86; 1945, c. 652; 1957, c. 320; 1969, c. 1067, ss. 1, 2; 1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-26-5. Authority of domiciliary personal representative of a nonresident decedent.

The domiciliary personal representative of the nonresident decedent after qualifying as ancillary personal representative in this State is authorized to administer the North Carolina estate of the nonresident decedent in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-26-6. Jurisdiction.

(a) A domiciliary personal representative of a nonresident decedent may invoke the jurisdiction of the courts of this State after qualifying as ancillary personal representative in this State except that he may invoke such jurisdiction prior to qualification for the purpose of appealing from a decision of the clerk of superior court regarding a question of qualification.

(b) A domiciliary personal representative of a nonresident decedent submits to the jurisdiction of the courts of this State:

- (1) As provided in G.S. 1-75.4, or
- (2) By receiving payment of money or taking delivery of personal property under G.S. 28A-26-2; or
- (3) By acceptance of ancillary letters of administration in this State under G.S. 28A-26-3; or
- (4) By doing any act as personal representative in this State which if done as an individual would have given the State jurisdiction over him as an individual. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Claims Brought by Foreign Personal Representative Before Qualifying Locally.

— This section neither addresses nor answers the question of what must happen procedurally to a claim brought by a foreign personal representative who locally qualifies after the claim is filed. Indeed, G.S. 28A-13-1 speaks more to this question. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

This section does not mean that a claim filed by a foreign personal representative who has not yet locally qualified is a nullity ab initio requiring the institution of a new claim after qualification. At most, it is simply another way of saying that the foreign administrator must qualify locally before he has capacity to sue in North Carolina. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

§ 28A-26-7. Service on personal representative of a non-resident decedent.

A court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter and grounds for personal jurisdiction as provided in G.S. 28A-26-6 may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant by service of process in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j). (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

§ 28A-26-8. Duties of personal representative in an ancillary administration.

(a) All assets of estates of nonresident decedents being administered in this State are subject to all claims, allowances and charges existing or established against the estate of the decedent wherever existing or established.

(b) An adjudication of a claim rendered in any jurisdiction in favor of or against any personal representative of the estate of a nonresident decedent is binding on the ancillary personal representative in this State and on all parties to the litigation.

(c) Limitations on presentation of claims shall be governed by the provisions of this Chapter except that creditors residing in the domiciliary state barred by the statutes of that state may not file claims in an ancillary administration in this State.

(d) In the payment of claims by the ancillary administrator, the following rules shall apply:

- (1) If the value of the entire estate, wherever administered, equals or exceeds family exemptions and allowances, prior charges and claims against the entire estate, the claims allowed in this State shall be paid in full from assets in this State, if such assets are sufficient for the purpose.
- (2) If such total exemptions, allowances, charges and claims exceed the value of the entire estate, the claims allowed in this State shall be paid their proper percentage pro rata by class, if assets in this State are sufficient for the purpose.
- (3) If assets in this State are inadequate for either of the purposes stated in subdivisions (1) or (2) above, the claims allowed in this State shall be paid, pro rata by class, to the extent the local assets will permit.
- (4) If the value of the entire estate, wherever administered, is insufficient to pay all exemptions and allowances, prior charges and claims against the entire estate, the priority for order of payment established by the law of the domicile will prevail. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3; 1975, c. 19, ss. 10, 11.)

§ 28A-26-9. Remission of surplus assets by ancillary personal representative to domiciliary personal representative.

Unless a testator in a will otherwise directs, any assets (including proceeds from the sale of real estate) remaining after payment of claims against the estate of a nonresident decedent being administered by an ancillary personal representative other than the domiciliary personal representative shall be transferred and delivered to the domiciliary personal representative or, if none, to the court in the domicile of the decedent which has jurisdiction to administer the estate. (1973, c. 1329, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 27.

Apportionment of Federal Estate Tax.

§ 28A-27-1. Definitions.

For the purposes of this Article:

- (1) "Estate" means the gross estate of a decedent as determined for the purpose of the federal estate tax.
- (2) "Fiduciary" includes a personal representative and a trustee.
- (3) "Person" means any individual, partnership, association, joint stock company, corporation, governmental agency, including any multiples or combinations of the foregoing as, for example, individuals as joint tenants.
- (4) "Person interested in the estate" means any person, including a personal representative, guardian, or trustee, entitled to receive, or who has received, from a decedent while alive or by reason of the death of a decedent any property or interest therein included in the decedent's taxable estate.
- (5) "State" means any state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.
- (6) "Tax" means the net Federal Estate Tax due, after application of any available unified transfer tax credit, and interest and penalties imposed in addition to the tax. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to the applicability of the provisions of this Article, see G.S. 28A-27-9.

§ 28A-27-2. Apportionment.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this section, or in G.S. 28A-27-5, G.S. 28A-27-6, or G.S. 28A-27-8, the tax shall be apportioned among all persons interested in the estate in the proportion that the value of the interest of each person interested in the estate bears to the total value of the interests of all persons interested in the estate. The values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes shall be used for the purposes of this computation.

(b) In the event the decedent's will provides a method of apportionment of the tax different from the method provided in subsection (a) above, the method described in the will shall control. However, in the case of any will executed on or after October 1, 1986, a general direction in the will that taxes shall not be apportioned, whether or not referring to this Article, but shall be paid from the residuary portion of the estate shall not, unless specifically stated otherwise, apply to taxes imposed on assets which are includible in the valuation of the decedent's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes only by reason of Sections 2041, 2042 or 2044 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent tax law. In the case of an estate administered under any will executed on or after October 1, 1986, in the event that the estate tax computation involves assets described in the preceding sentence, unless specifically stated otherwise, apportionment shall be made against such assets and the tax so apportioned shall be recovered from the persons receiving such assets as provided in Sections 2206, 2207 or 2207A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent tax law. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1; 1987, c. 694, s. 1.)

§ 28A-27-3. Procedure for determining apportionment.

(a) The personal representative of a decedent shall determine the apportionment of the tax.

(b) If the personal representative finds that it is inequitable to apportion interest and penalties in the manner provided in this Article because such interest or penalties were imposed due to the fault of one or more persons interested in the estate he may direct apportionment thereon in the manner he finds equitable.

(c) The expenses reasonably incurred by the personal representative in connection with the apportionment of the tax shall be apportioned as provided for taxes under this Article. If the personal representative finds that it is inequitable to apportion the expenses because such expenses were incurred because of the fault of one or more persons interested in the estate he may direct other more equitable apportionment. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1.)

§ 28A-27-4. Uncollected tax.

The personal representative shall not be under any duty to institute any suit or proceeding to recover from any person interested in the estate the amount of the tax apportioned to the person until the expiration of the six months next following final determination of the tax. A personal representative who institutes the suit or proceeding within a reasonable time after the six months' period shall not be subject to any liability or surcharge because any portion of the tax apportioned to any person interested in the estate was collectable at a time following the death of the decedent but thereafter became uncollectable. If the personal representative cannot collect from any person interested in the estate the amount of the tax apportioned to the person, the amount not recoverable shall be apportioned among the other persons interested in the estate who are subject to apportionment. The apportionment shall be made in the proportion that the value of the interest of each remaining person interested in the estate bears to the total value of the interests of all remaining persons interested in the estate. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1.)

§ 28A-27-5. Exemptions, deductions, and credits.

(a) Any interest for which a deduction or exemption is allowed under the federal revenue laws in determining the value of the decedent's net taxable estate, such as property passing to or in trust for a surviving spouse and gifts or bequests for charitable, public, or similar purposes, shall not be included in the computation provided for in G.S. 28A-27-2 to the extent of the allowable deduction or exemption. When such an interest is subject to a prior present interest which is not allowable as a deduction or exemption, such present interest shall not be included in the computation provided for in this Article and no tax shall be apportioned to or paid from principal.

(b) Any credit for property previously taxed and any credit for gift taxes or death taxes of a foreign country paid by the decedent or his estate shall inure to the proportionate benefit of all persons liable to apportionment; provided, however, that if the tax which gives rise to such a credit has in fact been paid by a person interested in the estate, the benefit of such credit shall inure to that person paying the tax.

(c) Any credit for inheritance, succession, or estate taxes or taxes in the nature thereof in respect to property or interests includible in the estate shall inure to the benefit of the persons or interests chargeable with the payment thereof to the extent that, or in the proportion that, the credit reduces the tax.

(d) To the extent that property passing to or in trust for a surviving spouse or any charitable, public, or similar gift or bequest does not constitute an allowed deduction for purposes of the tax solely by reason of an inheritance tax or other death tax imposed upon and deductible from the property, the property shall not be included in the computation provided for in this Article, and to that extent no apportionment shall be made against the property. This section does not apply in any instance where the result will be to deprive the estate of a deduction otherwise allowable under Section 2053(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 of the United States or corresponding provisions of any subsequent tax law, relating to deduction for State death taxes on transfers for public charitable or religious uses. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1; 1987, c. 694, ss. 2, 3.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in Estate of Bradford v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2002-238, 2002 Tax Ct. Memo LEXIS 245 (Sept. 23, 2002).

§ 28A-27-6. No apportionment between temporary and remainder interests.

No interest in income and no estate for years or for life or other temporary interest in any property or fund is subject to apportionment as between the temporary interest and the remainder. The tax on the temporary interest and the tax, if any, on the remainder is chargeable against the corpus of the property or funds subject to the temporary interest and remainder. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1.)

§ 28A-27-7. Fiduciary's rights and duties.

(a) The personal representative may withhold from any property of the decedent in his possession, distributable to any person interested in the estate, the amount of the tax apportioned to his interest. If the property in possession of the personal representative and distributable to any person interested in the estate tax is insufficient to satisfy the proportionate amount of the tax determined to be due from the person, the personal representative may recover the deficiency from the person interested in the estate. If the property is not in the possession of the personal representative he may recover from any person interested in the estate the amount of the tax apportioned to the person in accordance with this Article.

(b) If property held by the fiduciary or other person is distributed prior to final apportionment of the tax, the personal representative may require the distributee to provide a bond or other security for the apportionment liability in the form and amount prescribed by the fiduciary, with the approval of the clerk of superior court having jurisdiction of the administration of the estate. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1.)

§ 28A-27-8. Difference with Federal Estate Tax Law.

If the liabilities of persons interested in the estate as prescribed by this Article differ from those which result under the Federal Estate Tax Law, the liabilities imposed by the federal law will control and the balance of this Article shall apply as if the resulting liabilities had been prescribed herein. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1.)

§ 28A-27-9. Effective date.

The provisions of this Article shall not apply to taxes due on account of the death of decedents dying prior to October 1, 1986. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 28.

Summary Administration.

§ 28A-28-1. Summary administration where spouse is sole beneficiary.

When a decedent dies testate or intestate leaving a surviving spouse as the sole devisee or heir, the surviving spouse may file a petition for summary administration with the clerk of superior court of the county where the decedent was domiciled at the time of death. This procedure is available if the decedent died partially testate, provided that the surviving spouse is the sole devisee under the will and the sole heir of the decedent's intestate property. This procedure is not available if the decedent's will provides that it is not available or if the devise to the surviving spouse is in trust rather than outright. (1995, c. 294, s. 1.)

Nondonative Transfers, and Honorary Trusts," see 74 N.C.L. Rev. 1783 (1996).

§ 28A-28-2. Petition.

(a) The petition shall be signed by the surviving spouse and verified to be accurate and complete to the best of the spouse's knowledge and belief and shall state as follows:

- (1) The name and address of the spouse and the fact that he or she is the surviving spouse of the decedent;
- (2) The name and domicile of the decedent at the time of death;
- (3) The date and place of death of the decedent;

- (4) The date and place of marriage of the spouse and the decedent;
- (5) A description sufficient to identify each tract of real property owned in whole or in part by the decedent at the time of death;
- (6) A description of the nature of the decedent's personal property and the location of such property, as far as these facts are known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained;
- (7) The probable value of the decedent's personal property, so far as the value is known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained;
- (8) That no application or petition for appointment of a personal representative is pending or has been granted in this State;
- (9) That the spouse is the sole devisee or sole heir, or both, of the decedent, and that there is no other devisee or heir; that the decedent's will, if any, does not prohibit summary administration; and that any property passing to the spouse under the will is not in trust;
- (10) The name and address of any executor or coexecutor named by the will and that, if the decedent died testate, a copy of the petition has been personally delivered or sent by first-class mail by the spouse to the last-known address of any executor or coexecutor named by the will, if different from the spouse;
- (11) That, to the extent of the value of the property received by the spouse under the will of the decedent or by intestate succession, the spouse assumes all liabilities of the decedent that were not discharged by reason of death and assumes liability for all taxes and valid claims against the decedent or the estate, as provided in G.S. 28A-28-6; and
- (12) If the decedent died testate, that the decedent's will has been admitted to probate in the court of the proper county; that a duly certified copy of the will has been recorded in each county in which is located any real property owned by the decedent at the time of death; and that a certified copy of the decedent's will is attached to the petition.

(b) The petition shall be filed by the clerk upon payment of the fee provided in G.S. 7A-307 and shall be indexed in the index to estates. (1995, c. 294, s. 1; c. 509, s. 135.2(a).)

§ 28A-28-3. Clerk's order.

If it appears to the clerk that the petition and supporting evidence, if any, comply with the requirements of G.S. 28A-28-2 and on the basis thereof the spouse is entitled to summary administration, the clerk shall enter an order to that effect and no further administration of the estate is necessary. Nothing in this section shall preclude a petition under the provisions of G.S. 28A-28-7(a) or the appointment of a personal representative or a collector under the provisions of Article 6 or Article 11 of this Chapter. (1995, c. 294, s. 1.)

§ 28A-28-4. Effect of order.

(a) The presentation of a certified copy of the order described in G.S. 28A-28-3 shall be sufficient to require the transfer to the spouse of any property or contract right owned by the decedent at the time of death, including but not limited to: (i) wages and salary; (ii) the title and license to a motor vehicle registered in the name of the decedent owner; (iii) the ownership rights of a savings account, checking account, or certificate of deposit in a bank in the name of the decedent owner; (iv) the ownership rights of a savings account, share certificate, or certificate of deposit in a credit union, building and loan association, or savings and loan association in the name of the decedent owner; and (v) the ownership rights in any stock or security registered on the books of a corporation in the name of the decedent owner.

(b) After the entry of the order described in G.S. 28A-28-3, the spouse may convey, lease, sell, or mortgage any real property devised to or inherited by the spouse from the decedent, at public or private sale, upon such terms as the spouse may determine. This section shall not limit any other powers the spouse may have over property devised to or inherited by the spouse from the decedent. The provisions of G.S. 28A-17-12 are not applicable to a conveyance, sale, lease, or mortgage under this subsection. (1995, c. 294, s. 1.)

§ 28A-28-5. Effect of payment.

The person paying, delivering, transferring, or issuing property or the evidence thereof pursuant to the order described in G.S. 28A-28-3 is discharged and released to the same extent as if the person dealt with a duly qualified personal representative of the decedent. The person is not required to see to the application of the property or evidence thereof or to inquire into the truth of any statement in the petition or order.

If any person to whom the order is presented refuses to pay, deliver, transfer, or issue any property or evidence thereof, the property may be recovered or its payment, delivery, transfer, or issuance may be compelled in an action brought for that purpose by the surviving spouse. The court costs and attorney's fee incident to the action shall be taxed against the person whose refusal to comply with the provisions of G.S. 28A-28-4 made the action necessary. (1995, c. 294, s. 1.)

§ 28A-28-6. Spouse's assumption of liabilities.

If the clerk grants the order for summary administration, the spouse shall be deemed to have assumed, to the extent of the value of the property received by the spouse under the will of the decedent or by intestate succession, all liabilities of the decedent that were not discharged by reason of death and liability for all taxes and valid claims against the decedent or the estate. The value of the property is the fair market value of the property on the date of death of the decedent less any liens or encumbrances on the property so received. The spouse may assert any defense, counterclaim, cross-claim, or setoff which would have been available to the decedent if the decedent had not died except for actions listed in G.S. 28A-18-1(b). A spouse shall not be deemed to have assumed any liabilities of the decedent that were discharged by reason of death. (1995, c. 294, s. 1.)

§ 28A-28-7. Right to petition for appointment of personal representative; discharge of spouse's liability.

(a) Nothing in this Article shall preclude any person qualified to serve as personal representative pursuant to G.S. 28A-4-1, including the surviving spouse, from petitioning the clerk of superior court for the appointment of a personal representative or collector to administer the decedent's estate. If a personal representative or collector is appointed, the spouse shall render a proper accounting to the personal representative or collector and file a copy of the accounting with the clerk. The spouse shall deliver assets of the decedent's estate, cash, or other property and shall be discharged of liability in accordance with the provisions of subsection (b) of this section.

(b) In the event that a personal representative or collector is appointed, the spouse shall be discharged of liability for the debts of the decedent as follows:

- (1) If the spouse delivers to the personal representative or collector all of the property received by the spouse in the identical form that it was received by the spouse, then the spouse will be discharged of all liability.

- (2) If the spouse does not deliver to the personal representative or collector all of the property in the identical form that it was received by the spouse, then the spouse shall be discharged of liability as follows:
- a. For property delivered to the personal representative or collector that is in the identical form that it was received by the spouse, the spouse is discharged to the extent of the fair market value of the property at the time of the decedent's death or the fair market value at the time the property was received by the personal representative or collector, whichever is greater.
 - b. For property delivered to the personal representative or collector that is not in the identical form that it was received by the spouse, the spouse is discharged to the extent of the fair market value of such property at the time it was delivered to the personal representative or collector. (1995, c. 294, s. 1.)

Chapter 28B.

Estates of Absentees in Military Service.

Sec.	Sec.
28B-1. Absentee in military service; definition.	28B-7. Resignation and removal.
28B-2. Action for receiver; jurisdiction; contents of complaint.	28B-8. Termination of receivership.
28B-3. Notice; hearing; guardian ad litem.	28B-9. Specific property valued at less than $5,000; summary procedure.
28B-4. Order of appointment.	28B-10. Specific property valued at more than $5,000; summary procedure.
28B-5. Bond; inventory; accounting.
28B-6. Powers and duties of receiver.

§ 28B-1. Absentee in military service; definition.

Any person serving in or with the armed forces of the United States, in or with the Red Cross, in or with the merchant marines, during any time when a state of hostilities exists between the United States and any other power, who has been reported or listed by the appropriate federal agency as missing in action or as a prisoner of war for a period of one year, shall be an "absentee in military service" within the meaning of this Chapter. (1973, c. 522, s. 1.)

§ 28B-2. Action for receiver; jurisdiction; contents of complaint.

(a) Whenever any absentee in military action as defined in this Chapter has an interest in any form of property in this State and has not provided an adequate power of attorney authorizing another to act in his behalf in regard to such property or interest, any person who would have an interest in the property or estate of the absentee in military service were such absentee in military service deceased, or any person who is dependent on such absentee in military service for his maintenance or support, may commence an action for the appointment of a receiver to care for the estate of the absentee in military service by filing a verified complaint in the superior court in the county of domicile of the absentee in military service or in any county where his property is situated.

(b) The complaint shall show the following:

- (1) The name, age, address, relationship of the person filing the complaint to the alleged absentee, and the interest of that person in the property of the absentee in military service or his dependency upon the absentee in military service for his maintenance and support.
- (2) The name, age, and address of all persons who would have an interest in the estate of the absentee in military service were he deceased and the name, age, and address of all persons dependent upon him for their maintenance and support.
- (3) The name, age, and last known address of the absentee in military service.
- (4) The date on which the absentee in military service was first reported as missing or captured by the appropriate federal agency, and, as far as is known, the circumstances surrounding his absence.
- (5) The necessity for and the reasons why a receiver should be appointed.
- (6) Whether or not the person alleged to be an absentee in military service has a will and the whereabouts of said will.
- (7) So far as known, a schedule of all his property within this State, including property in which he is co-owner with or without the right of survivorship. (1973, c. 522, s. 2.)

§ 28B-3. Notice; hearing; guardian ad litem.

(a) Notice of the hearing on the complaint to appoint a receiver shall be given to all persons named in the petition by registered mail or certified mail with return receipt requested.

(b) The judge shall hear evidence on the questions of whether the person alleged to be missing or captured is an absentee in military service as defined by G.S. 28B-1, on the question of the necessity for the appointment of a receiver, and on the question of who is entitled to appointment as the receiver.

(c) The court may in its discretion appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the alleged absentee in military service at the hearing. (1973, c. 522, s. 3.)

§ 28B-4. Order of appointment.

(a) If after the hearing, the court is satisfied that said person is, in fact, an absentee in military service as defined in G.S. 28B-1 and that it is necessary that a receiver be appointed, he shall appoint a receiver of the estate and property of said absentee in military service under the supervision and subject to the further orders of the court.

(b) In the appointment of a receiver, the court shall give due consideration to the appointment of the spouse or one of the next of kin of the absentee in military service if such spouse or next of kin is a fit and proper person and is qualified to act. (1973, c. 522, s. 4.)

§ 28B-5. Bond; inventory; accounting.

(a) Before receiving any property the judge shall require the receiver to qualify by giving bond in an amount and with surety approved by him.

(b) Within 30 days after the date of his appointment, the receiver shall file an inventory of all of the property of the absentee in military service taken in charge. Every year thereafter, within 30 days of the anniversary date of his appointment the receiver shall file a full and complete inventory and accounting with the clerk of superior court under oath, of the amount of property received by him, or invested by him, and the manner and nature of such investment, and his receipts and disbursements for the past year in the form of debit and credit. The clerk shall inspect and audit the inventory and accounting and if he approves the same he shall endorse his approval thereon, which shall be deemed prima facie evidence of correctness. If the clerk finds evidence of misconduct or default on the part of the receiver he shall report the same to the court. In such event, the procedures found in G.S. 28B-7(b) shall be followed. (1973, c. 522, s. 5.)

§ 28B-6. Powers and duties of receiver.

(a) Under the direction of a judge, the receiver shall administer the property of the absentee in military service as an equity receivership with the following powers:

- (1) To take custody and control of all property of the absentee in military service wherever situated.
- (2) To collect all debts due to the absentee in military service and pay all debts owed by him.
- (3) To bring and defend suits.
- (4) To pay insurance premiums.
- (5) With the approval of the judge in each instance, to continue to operate and manage any business enterprise, farm or farming operations, and to make necessary contracts with reference thereto.

- (6) With the approval of the judge in each instance, to renew notes and other obligations, obtain loans on life insurance policies, and pledge or mortgage property for loans necessary in carrying on or liquidating the affairs of such absentee in military service.
 - (7) With the approval of the judge in each instance, to institute proceedings to partition property owned by the absentee and another as joint tenants or tenants in common, with or without the right of survivorship; provided, in the case of property owned by the absentee in military service and spouse as tenants by the entirety, such proceedings may be instituted only if the spouse of the absentee in military service consents in writing to the partitioning, and, in the event of partitioning, one half of the property or proceeds shall belong to the spouse and one half shall belong to the receiver as property of the absentee in military service.
 - (8) With the approval of the judge in each instance, to sell, lease, invest, and reinvest any or all property, its income, or its proceeds.
 - (9) To pay over or apply the proceeds of mortgage and sales of such portion, or all of the property or the income thereof, as may be necessary for the maintenance and support of the dependents of the absentee in military service. If the income from the property of the absentee in military service is not sufficient to pay all of his debts and to provide for the maintenance and support of his dependents, the receiver may apply to the judge for an order to sell or mortgage so much of the real or personal property as may be necessary therefor. Such sale or mortgage shall be reported to the judge, and if approved and confirmed by the judge, the receiver shall execute the required conveyances or mortgages of such property to the purchaser or lender upon his complying with the terms of sale or mortgage.
- (b) The judge may, in his discretion, by written order, modify, add to, or subtract from the statutory powers granted in this section. (1973, c. 522, s. 6.)

§ 28B-7. Resignation and removal.

(a) A receiver appointed under authority of this Chapter may resign and his successor be appointed by complying with the provisions set forth in G.S. 36-9 through 36-18.2.

(b) If, after a receiver has been appointed, it is made to appear to the court upon the filing of a complaint or upon information received that the person appointed as receiver of the estate and property of the absentee in military service is legally incompetent, or that such person has been guilty of default or misconduct in due execution of his office, or that his appointment was obtained by false representation, or that such person has removed himself from this State, the court shall issue an order requiring such person to show cause why his appointment as a receiver should not be revoked. Upon the removal of a receiver of the estate or property of an absentee in military service, the court shall immediately appoint his successor. Pending any suit or proceeding between parties respecting such revocation, the clerk of superior court is authorized to make such interlocutory orders as may tend to better secure the estate and property of the absentee in military service. (1973, c. 522, s. 7.)

Editor's Note. — Sections 36-9 through 36-18.2, referred to in subsection (a) of this section, were repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 502, s.

1, effective January 1, 1978. For similar provisions, see now G.S. 36A-22 et seq.

§ 28B-8. Termination of receivership.

(a) At any time upon petition signed by the absentee in military service, or on petition of an attorney-in-fact acting under an adequate power of attorney granted by the absentee in military service, the court shall direct the termination of the receivership and the transfer of all property held thereunder to the absentee in military service or to the designated attorney-in-fact.

(b) If at any time subsequent to the appointment of a receiver it shall appear that the absentee in military service has died and an executor or administrator has been appointed for his estate, the court shall terminate the receivership, certify all proceedings under the receivership to the clerk of superior court, and transfer all property of the deceased absentee in military service held thereunder to such executor or administrator.

(c) When the need for a receivership terminates, the receiver shall promptly file a final inventory and accounting and his application for discharge with the court. If it appears to the court that the inventory and accounting are correct and that the receiver has made full and complete transfer of the assets of the absentee in military service as directed, the court may approve the inventory and accounting and discharge the receiver. If objections to the final inventory and accounting are filed, the court shall conduct a hearing under the same conditions for a hearing on objections to the annual accounting and inventory.

(d) Such discharge shall operate as a release from the duties of the receivership and as a bar to any suit against said receiver or his surety, unless such suit is commenced within one year from the date of discharge. (1973, c. 522, s. 8.)

§ 28B-9. Specific property valued at less than $5,000; summary procedure.

(a) If the spouse of any person defined as an absentee in military service by this Chapter, or his next of kin, if said absentee in military service has no spouse, shall wish to sell or transfer any property of the absentee in military service which has a gross value of less than five thousand dollars ($5,000), or shall require the consent of the absentee in military service in any matter regarding the children of the absentee in military service, or in any other matter in which the gross value of the subject matter is less than five thousand dollars ($5,000), such spouse may apply to the superior court for an order authorizing said sale, transfer, or consent without opening a full receivership proceeding as provided by this Chapter. Said application shall be made by petition on the following form, which form shall be made available to the applicant by the clerk of the superior court:

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
_____ COUNTY

IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE
SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION

In re: (absentee), PETITION FOR SUMMARY APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER NOW COMES, (name of petitioner), petitioner in this action, pursuant to G.S. _____, and requests the Court that he be appointed a receiver to sell/transfer (describe property) of the value of (value) because (give reasons). Petitioner is _____ years of age, resides at (address) in _____ County, North Carolina, and is the (relation) of (name of absentee) who has been (pow or mia) since (date of notification). The terms of the sale/transfer are (terms). Petitioner requires the consent of the absentee for the purpose of (give reasons).

(Signature) _____.

The above named, _____, being by me duly sworn, says the foregoing petition is true and correct to the best of his knowledge.

Notary Public

My commission expires _____

(b) The court shall, without hearing or notice, enter an order on said petition if it deems the relief requested in said petition necessary to protect the best interest of the absentee in military service or his dependents.

(c) Such order shall be prima facie evidence of the validity of the proceedings and the authority of the petitioner to make a conveyance or transfer property or to give the consent of the absentee in military service in any matter prescribed by subsection (a). (1973, c. 522, s. 9.)

§ 28B-10. Specific property valued at more than $5,000; summary procedure.

(a) If the spouse, or the next of kin if there is no spouse, of any person defined as an absentee in military service under this Chapter shall wish to sell, lease, or mortgage specific property having a gross value of five thousand dollars ($5,000) or more owned by the absentee in military service or in which the absentee has an interest, or take specific action with respect to any interest of the absentee in military service having a gross value of five thousand dollars ($5,000) or more, such spouse may file a complaint with the superior court for an order authorizing the action with respect to such property or interest.

(b) The complaint shall contain all of the information called for by G.S. 28B-2(b) and, in addition, shall contain a description of the specific property or interest and the disposition to be made of it.

(c) The court shall hear evidence on the question of whether the person alleged to be missing or captured is an absentee in military service as defined by G.S. 28B-1 and on the question of whether the action in question should be authorized. Any person interested in such proceedings may intervene with leave of the court.

(d) The court may in its discretion appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the alleged absentee in military service at the hearing.

(e) If, after hearing, the court is satisfied that the person alleged to be an absentee in military service is, in fact, an absentee in military service as defined in G.S. 28B-1, and that the action is in the best interest of the absentee in military service and his dependents, the court shall enter an order appointing the petitioner as receiver for the purposes of the specific action which is the subject of the complaint and authorizing the receiver to take the specific action requested in the complaint. The court shall require the receiver to account for the proceeds of the specific sale, the specific lease, or other specific action. The court may retain jurisdiction of the proceeding to make such further orders as it deems proper.

(f) Such order shall be prima facie evidence of the validity of the proceedings and the authority of the petitioner to take the specific action requested.

(g) Other property of the absentee in military service not the specific subject of the complaint is not affected in any manner by the filing of such complaint as provided for in this section. (1973, c. 522, s. 10.)

28C-11. Final finding and decree.
28C-12. Termination of receivership.

Editor's Note. — This Chapter was originally codified as Chapter 28A. It was transferred and redesignated Chapter 28C by Session Laws 1973, c. 1329, s. 2. The same 1973 act repealed former Chapter 28, Administration, and enacted present Chapter 28A, Administration of Decedents' Estates.

Session Laws 1973, c. 1329, originally made effective July 1, 1975, was amended by Session Laws 1975, c. 19, s. 12, so as to make it effective as to estates of decedents dying on and after that date, and by Session Laws 1975, c. 118, so as to change the date to October 1, 1975.

§ 28C-1. Death not presumed from seven years' absence; exposure to peril to be considered.

(a) Death Not to Be Presumed from Mere Absence. — In any action under this Chapter, where the death of a person and the date thereof, or either, is in issue the fact that he has been absent from his place of residence, unheard of for seven years, or for any other period, creates no presumption requiring the judge or the jury to find that he is now deceased. The issue shall be decided by the judge as one of fact upon the evidence.

(b) Exposure to Specific Peril to Be Considered. — If during such absence the person has been exposed to a specific peril of death, this fact shall be considered by the judge; or if there be a jury, shall be sufficient evidence to be submitted to the jury. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on estates of missing persons in North Carolina, see 44 N.C.L. Rev. 275 (1966).

§ 28C-2. Action for receiver; contents of complaint; parties.

(a) Action for Receiver to Be Instituted in the Superior Court. — If any person having an interest in any property in this State disappears and is absent from his place of residence and after diligent inquiry his whereabouts remains unknown to those persons most likely to know the same, for a period of 30 days or more, anyone who would be entitled to administer the estate of such absentee if he were deceased, or any interested person, may commence a civil action and file a duly verified complaint in the superior court of either the county of such absentee's domicile, or the county where any of his property is situated.

(b) Contents of the Complaint. — The complaint shall contain the following:

- (1) The name, age, occupation, and last known residence or address of such absentee;
- (2) The date and circumstances of his disappearance;
- (3) So far as known, a schedule of all his property within this State, including property in which he has an interest as tenant by the entirety, and other property in which he is co-owner with or without the right of survivorship;
- (4) The names and addresses of the person who would have an interest in the estate of such absentee if he were deceased;
- (5) The names and addresses of all persons known to the complainant to claim an interest in the absentee's property; and
- (6) A prayer, that ancillary to the principal action, a receiver be appointed by virtue of the provisions of this Chapter to take custody and control of such property of the absentee and to preserve and manage the same pending final disposition of the action as provided in G.S. 28C-11.

(c) Parties to the Action. — The absentee, all persons who would have an interest in the estate of such absentee if he were deceased, all persons known to claim an interest in the absentee's property, and all known insurers of the life of the absentee shall be made parties to the action. A guardian ad litem shall be appointed for the absentee, and shall file an answer in his behalf. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 522, s. 11; c. 1329, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on requirement of notice for appointment of guardians ad litem and next friends, see 48 N.C.L. Rev. 92 (1969).

§ 28C-3. Procedure on complaint.

Upon the filing of the complaint referred to in G.S. 28C-2, the judge may for cause shown appoint a temporary receiver to take charge of the property of the absentee to conserve it pending hearing on the complaint. Such temporary receiver shall qualify by giving bond in an amount and with surety approved by the judge and shall exercise only the powers specified by the judge. Within 30 days after the date of his appointment, he shall file an inventory of the property taken in charge. If a permanent receiver is appointed, the temporary receiver shall transfer and deliver to the permanent receiver all property in his custody and control, less such only as may be necessary to cover his expenses and compensation as allowed by the judge, and shall file his final account, and upon its approval be discharged. If the prayer for a permanent receiver is denied, the temporary receiver shall transfer and deliver to those entitled thereto all property in his custody and control less such only as may be necessary to cover his expenses and compensation as allowed by the judge, and shall file his final account, and upon its approval be discharged. If the prayer for a permanent receiver is denied the expenses and compensation of the temporary receiver may in the discretion of the judge be taxed as costs of the action to be paid by the complainant, but if the judge finds that the complaint was brought in good faith and upon reasonable grounds, he may charge such costs against the property of the absentee. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-4. Notice to interested persons.

Upon the filing of the inventory by the temporary receiver, the judge shall issue a notice reciting the substance of the complaint and the appointment and action of the temporary receiver. This notice shall be addressed to such absentee, to all persons who would have an interest in the estate of such absentee if he were deceased, to all persons alleged in the complaint to claim an interest in the absentee's property, and to all whom it may concern. It shall direct them to file in the court within a time fixed by the judge a written statement of the nature and extent of the interest claimed in the property, and to appear at a time and place named and show cause why a permanent receiver of the absentee's property should not be appointed to hold and dispose of the property under the provisions of this Chapter. The return day of the notice shall be not less than 30 nor more than 60 days after its date unless otherwise ordered by the judge. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-5. Service of notices.

All notices required under this Chapter shall be served on all parties to the action and on all other persons entitled to such notice in the manner now prescribed by Rules of Civil Procedure, and in addition thereto the absentee shall be served by publication once in each of four successive weeks in one or more newspapers in the county where the proceeding is pending, and one copy shall be posted in a conspicuous place upon each parcel of land shown in the temporary receiver's inventory, and one copy shall be sent by registered or certified mail with return receipt requested to the last known address of such absentee. The judge may in his discretion cause other and further notice to be given within or without the county. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2; 1981, c. 682, s. 8.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure, referred to in this section, are found in G.S. 1A-1.

§ 28C-6. Procedure after notice.

The absentee or any person entitled to notice as provided in G.S. 28C-4 may appear and show cause why a permanent receiver of the absentee's property should not be appointed to hold and dispose of the property under the provisions of this Chapter. The judge may, after the hearing, either dismiss the complaint and order that the property in the custody and control of the temporary receiver be returned to the persons entitled thereto or he may make a finding that the absentee disappeared as of a stated date and appoint a permanent receiver of the absentee's property. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-7. Property transferred to permanent receiver by order of judge; filing of inventory; recordation of order of transfer.

Upon the permanent receiver giving bond as required by G.S. 28C-16 and its approval by the judge, the judge shall order the temporary receiver to transfer and deliver to the permanent receiver custody and control of the absentee's property, and the permanent receiver shall file with the court an inventory of the property received by him. A copy of this order as it affects any real property shall be issued by the judge and delivered to the permanent receiver who shall cause the same to be recorded in the office of the register of deeds of each county wherein such real property is situated. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-8. Powers and duties of permanent receiver.

The permanent receiver shall under the direction of the judge administer the absentee's property as an equity receivership with the following powers:

- (1) To take custody and control of all property of the absentee wherever situated,
- (2) To collect all debts due to the absentee and to pay all debts owed by him,
- (3) To bring and defend suits,
- (4) To pay insurance premiums,
- (5) With the approval of the judge in each instance, to continue to operate and manage any business enterprise, farm or farming operations, and to make necessary contracts with reference thereto,
- (6) With the approval of the judge in each instance, to renew notes and other obligations, obtain loans on life insurance policies, and pledge or mortgage property for loans necessary in carrying on or liquidating the affairs of such absentee,
- (7) With the approval of the judge in each instance, to partition property owned by the absentee and another as joint tenants or tenants in common, with or without the right of survivorship; provided, in the case of property owned by the absentee and spouse as tenants by the entirety, such property may be partitioned only if the absentee's spouse consents in writing to the partitioning, and, in the event of partitioning, one half of the property or proceeds shall belong to the spouse and one half shall belong to the receiver as property of the absentee,
- (8) With the approval of the judge in each instance to sell, lease, invest and reinvest any or all property, its income, or its proceeds,
- (9) To pay over or apply the proceeds of loans and sales of such portion, or all of the property or the income thereof as may be necessary for the maintenance and support of the absentee's dependents; and if the income from the property of the absentee is not sufficient to pay all his debts and to provide for the maintenance and support of his dependents, the permanent receiver may apply to the judge for an order to sell or mortgage so much of the real or personal property as may be necessary therefor; each such sale or mortgage shall be reported to the judge, and if approved and confirmed by the judge, the receiver shall execute the required conveyances or mortgages of such property to the purchaser or lender upon his complying with the terms of sale or mortgage.

The judge may, in his discretion, by written order modify, add to or subtract from the statutory powers granted in this section. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-9. Search for absentee.

The judge shall by order direct the receiver to make a search for the absentee. The order shall specify the manner in which the search is to be conducted in order to insure that, in the light of the circumstances of the particular case, a diligent and reasonable effort be made to locate the absentee. The order may prescribe any methods of search deemed advisable by the judge, but must require, as a minimum, the following:

- (1) Inquiry of persons at the absentee's home, his last known residence, the place where he was last known to have been, and other places where information would likely be obtained or where the absentee would likely have gone;
- (2) Inquiry of relatives, friends and associates of the absentee, or other persons who should be most likely to hear from or of him;
- (3) Insertion of a notice in one or more appropriate papers, periodicals or other news media, requesting information from any person having knowledge of the absentee's whereabouts; and
- (4) Notification of local, state and national offices which should be most likely to know or learn of the absentee's whereabouts. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-10. Claims against absentee.

Immediately upon the appointment of a permanent receiver under this Chapter, the permanent receiver shall publish a notice addressed to all persons having claims against the absentee informing them of the action taken and requiring them to file their claims under oath with the permanent receiver. If any claimant fails to file his sworn claim within six months from the date of the first publication of such notice, the receiver may plead this fact in bar of his claim. Such notice shall be published in the same manner as that now prescribed by statute (G.S. 28-47) for claims against the estate of a decedent. Any party in interest may contest the validity of any claim before the judge, on due notice given to the permanent receiver and the person whose claim is contested. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Section 28-47, referred to as to advertisement of claims, see G.S. 28A-14-1. in the section above, was repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 1329, s. 1. For present provisions

§ 28C-11. Final finding and decree.

(a) At any time, during the receivership proceedings, upon application to the judge by any party in interest and presentation of satisfactory evidence of the absentee's death, the judge may make a final finding and decree that the absentee is dead; in which event the decree and transcript of all of the receivership proceedings shall be certified to the clerk of the superior court for any administration as may be required by law upon the estate of a decedent, and the judge shall proceed no further except for the purposes hereinafter set forth in G.S. 28C-12, subdivisions (1) and (4); or

(b) At any time during the receivership proceedings, upon application to the judge by any party in interest and presentation of satisfactory evidence of the absentee's existence and whereabouts, except as provided in G.S. 28C-20, the judge may be decree revoke his finding that he is an absentee, and the judge shall proceed no further except for the purposes hereinafter set forth in G.S. 28C-12, subdivisions (2) and (4); or

(c) After the lapse of five years from the date of the finding of disappearance provided for in G.S. 28C-6, if the absentee has not appeared and no finding and decree have been made in accordance with the provisions of either subsections (a) or (b) above, and subject to the provisions of G.S. 28C-14, the judge may proceed to take further evidence and thereafter make a final finding of such absence and enter a decree declaring that all interest of the absentee in his property, including property in which he has an interest as tenant by the entirety and other property in which he is co-owner with or without the right of survivorship, subject to the provisions of G.S. 28C-8(7), has ceased and devolved upon others by reason of his failure to appear and make claim. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-12. Termination of receivership.

Upon the entry of any final finding and decree as provided in G.S. 28C-11, the judge shall proceed to wind up the receivership and terminate the proceedings:

- (1) In the case of a decree under G.S. 28C-11, subsection (a), that the absentee is dead:
 - a. By satisfying all outstanding expenses and costs of the receivership, and
 - b. By then deducting for the insurance fund provided in G.S. 28C-19 a sum equal to five percent (5%) of the total value of the property remaining for distribution upon settlement of the absentee's estate, including amounts paid to the estate from policies of insurance on the absentee's life, and
 - c. By then certifying the proceedings to the clerk of the superior court subject to an order by the judge administering the receivership, or
- (2) In the case of a decree under G.S. 28C-11, subsection (b), revoking the finding that the missing person is an absentee:
 - a. By satisfying all outstanding expenses and costs of the receivership, and
 - b. By then returning his remaining property to him and rendering an accounting for that property not returned; or
- (3) In the case of a decree under G.S. 28C-11, subsection (c), declaring that all interest of the absentee in his property has ceased:
 - a. By satisfying all outstanding expenses and costs of the receivership, and
 - b. By then satisfying all outstanding taxes, other debts and charges, and
 - c. By then deducting for the insurance fund provided in G.S. 28C-19 a sum equal to five percent (5%) of the total value of the property remaining, including amounts paid to the receivership estate from policies of insurance on the absentee's life, and
 - d. By transferring or distributing the remaining property as provided in G.S. 28C-13; and
- (4) In all three cases by requiring the receiver's account, and upon its approval, discharging him and his bondsmen and entering a final decree terminating the receivership. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-13. Distribution of property of absentee.

The property remaining for distribution in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 28C-12, subdivision (3)d shall be transferred or distributed by the receiver and in accordance with the judge's decree to those persons who would be entitled thereto under the applicable laws of intestate succession as though the absentee died intestate on the day five years after the date of his disappearance as determined by the judge in his final finding and decree; or, if the absentee leaves a document which, had he died, might have been admissible to probate as his will, the judge administering the receivership shall cause citations to issue to all persons entitled to notice upon the probate of wills in solemn form and determine whether the will would have been admitted to probate, and, if it shall be so determined, the transfer and distribution shall be according to the provisions of the document as of the date of the decree under G.S. 28C-12, subdivision (3)d, subject, however, to the right of the spouse of such absentee, or others, to claim whatever property they would have been entitled by law to claim in derogation of the terms of the will as if the absentee had actually died testate on the date five years after the date of his disappearance as determined by the judge in his final finding and decree. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-14. Additional limitations on accounting, distribution or making claim by absentee.

If, at the time of the hearing in G.S. 28C-6 wherein a permanent receiver is appointed by the judge after a finding of disappearance as of a stated date, the date of disappearance so found is more than four years prior to the date of such hearing, the time limited for accounting for or fixed for transferring or distributing the property or its proceeds, or for barring actions by or on behalf of the absentee relative thereto, shall be not less than two years after the date of the appointment of the permanent receiver instead of the five years provided in G.S. 28C-11(c).

Provided, however, that the time limited for accounting for or fixed for transferring and distributing any additional property or its proceeds within the State coming into the custody and control of the permanent receiver during such two-year period, or for barring actions by or on behalf of the absentee relative thereto, shall be not more than one year after the expiration of said two-year period. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-15. When claim of absentee barred.

No action shall be brought by an absentee to recover any portion of the property which is the subject of this proceeding after a final finding and decree as provided for in G.S. 28C-11(a) or 28C-11(c). (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-16. Laws of administration of estates applicable.

Except as otherwise provided in this Chapter, the laws of this State applicable to administration of decedents' estates as to the amount and type of bond, inventories, reports, priority of creditors, compensation and court costs shall govern receivers appointed under this Chapter. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-17. Appointment of public administrator as receiver for estate of less than $1,000.

Whenever a receiver is to be appointed under this Chapter, and it is found by the judge that the fair value of the estate involved is less than one thousand dollars ($1,000), the judge shall appoint the public administrator as such receiver, if there be one for the county. In case such public administrator is appointed, he shall act as receiver under his official bond as public administrator which shall be liable for any default, and no other bond shall be required. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-18. Payment of insurance policies.

(a) At the time of the distribution under G.S. 28C-13 the judge may direct the payment of any sums as they become due on any policies of insurance upon the life of the absentee, to the proper parties as their interest may appear.

(b) If the insurer refuses payment, the judge, upon the finding of appropriate supplemental pleadings in the pending action, shall determine all issues arising upon the pleadings, provided that all issues of fact shall be tried by a jury, unless trial by jury is waived.

(c) Where the required survival of a beneficiary is not established the provisions of this Chapter shall apply as if the proceeds of the insurance were a part of the estate of the absentee, unless the absentee retained no interest in the policy.

(d) If in any proceeding under subsection (b) it is determined that the absentee is not dead and the policy provides for a surrender value, the receiver or an otherwise entitled beneficiary acting through the receiver, may demand the payment of the surrender value or obtain a policy loan. The receiver's receipt for such payment of surrender value shall be a release to the insurer of all claims under the policy. The receiver shall pay over to such beneficiary any money so received, first reserving only an amount allowed by the judge as costs of the proceedings under this section and that amount required by G.S. 28C-12(3)b. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-19. Absentee Insurance Fund.

(a) In each case of termination of the receivership, as provided in G.S. 28C-12, subdivisions (1) and (3), the judge shall set aside the sum therein named for the Absentee Insurance Fund and direct its payment by the receiver to the Treasurer of the State, who shall be liable therefor upon his official bond as for other moneys received by him in his official capacity.

(b) The Treasurer shall retain, invest and reinvest all funds thus paid in a separate account entitled the "Absentee Insurance Fund," and add thereto as received the interest or other earnings.

(c) If at any time thereafter, a person declared an absentee whose estate has been distributed under a final finding and decree made as provided in G.S. 28C-13 shall personally appear before the Treasurer and make claim for reimbursement from such fund, the superior court may in an action commenced in the Superior Court of Wake County by such person against the Treasurer, enter a judgment ordering payment to the claimant of such part of the accumulated fund from all sources as in its opinion is found to be fair, adequate and reasonable under the circumstances, taking into account the disposition made of his property, the reasons for his absence, and any other relevant matters.

(d) An action for compensation from the Absentee Insurance Fund shall be begun within three years from the time of the absentee's return. In cases of infancy or other disability recognized by law, persons under such disability shall have one year after the removal of such disability within which to begin the action.

(e) The Treasurer of the State shall from time to time prescribe the rate to be charged for the "Absentee Insurance Fund" under G.S. 28C-12, subdivisions (1) and (3) on the basis of actuarial experience. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-20. Provisions applicable to person held incommunicado in foreign country.

As to a person who is known to be held incommunicado in a foreign country, G.S. 28C-1 through 28C-8 and 28C-10 may be applied as though such person were an absentee within the meaning of this Chapter, and if his whereabouts becomes unknown, the other provisions of this Chapter may be applied by such amendments to the pending proceeding as may be required. This section shall not apply to personnel serving in or with the armed forces, the merchant marine, or the Red Cross during a period of hostilities between the United States and some other power who are listed by the appropriate federal agency as prisoners of war or as missing in action. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 522, s. 12; c. 1329, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to estates of prisoners of war and persons declared missing in action, see Chapter 28B, G.S. 28B-1 et seq.

§ 28C-21. When agents' acts binding on estate of absentee.

Acts of an agent of an absentee, carried out in good faith, prior to the appointment of a receiver under this Chapter, shall be binding on the estate of such absentee if said acts were within the scope of the agent's real or apparent authority. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

§ 28C-22. Provisions of Chapter severable.

If any provisions of this Chapter or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect other provisions or applications of this Chapter which can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this Chapter are declared to be severable. (1965, c. 815, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 2.)

ARTICLE 1.

General Provisions.

§ 29-1. Short title.

This Chapter shall be known and may be cited as the Intestate Succession Act. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1959, c. 879, s. 1 inserted this present Chapter numbered 29 and entitled "Intestate Succession" to replace former Chapter 29 entitled "Descents." By the same act G.S. 28-149, with regard to order of distribution, was repealed and other related statutory provisions were repealed or amended to conform with the new Intestate Succession Law. Section 15 of the 1959 act provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1960, and shall be applicable only to estates of persons dying on or after July 1, 1960."

Some of the cases cited in the notes to the sections of this Chapter construe similar provisions of the former Chapter.

Section 4.1 of Session Laws 1963, c. 1209, provides that from and after the certification of the constitutional amendment to G.S. 6 of Art.

X (see now N.C. Const. Art. X, G.S. 4) which was proposed by c. 1209, wherever the word "spouse" appears in the General Statutes with reference to testate or intestate successions, it shall apply alike to both husband and wife. The approval of the amendment by vote of the people was certified by the Governor on February 6, 1964.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under prior law.

Purpose of Chapter. — Taken as a whole, this Chapter conveys an intent by the legislature to write a reasonable will for those residents who have not done so. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Descents are regulated by statute in this State. Edwards v. Yearby, 168 N.C. 663, 85 S.E. 19 (1915); University of N.C. v. Markham, 174 N.C. 338, 93 S.E. 845 (1917).

English Canons of Descent Formerly Followed. — The English canons of descent remained in force in North Carolina until 1784. Because certain provisions seemed repugnant to republican principles, the legislature was led to make the changes which distinguish this section from the English act. Clement v. Cauble, 55 N.C. 82 (1854).

Legislative Intent as to Effect of Adoption. — The General Assembly, on its own motion and also in response to judicial decisions, has, with every amendment and every rewrite of G.S. 48-23, evidenced its intent that by adoption the child adopted becomes legally a child of its new parents, and the adoption makes him legally a stranger to the bloodline of his natural parents. Crumpton v. Crumpton, 28

N.C. App. 358, 221 S.E.2d 390 (1976), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 97, 281 S.E.2d 1 (1981).

Wrongful Death Beneficiaries Determined as of Time of Death. — The persons who, under the Intestate Succession Act, are entitled to the recovery in a wrongful death action are to be determined as of the time of the decedent's death. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Hackney, 266 N.C. 17, 145 S.E.2d 352 (1965).

Proof of the death of a person raises a presumption that such person died intestate. Collins v. R.L. Coleman & Co., 262 N.C. 478, 137 S.E.2d 803 (1964).

§ 29-2. Definitions.

As used in this Chapter, unless the context otherwise requires, the term:

- (1) "Advancement" means an irrevocable inter vivos gift of property, made by an intestate donor to any person who would be his heir or one of his heirs upon his death, and intended by the intestate donor to enable the donee to anticipate his inheritance to the extent of the gift; except that no gift to a spouse shall be considered an advancement unless so designated by the intestate donor in a writing signed by the donor at the time of the gift.
- (2) "Estate" means all the property of a decedent, including but not limited to:
 - a. An estate for the life of another; and

- b. All future interests in property not terminable by the death of the owner thereof, including all reversions, remainders, executory interests, rights of entry and possibilities of reverter, subject, however, to all limitations and conditions imposed upon such future interests.
- (3) "Heir" means any person entitled to take real or personal property upon intestacy under the provisions of this Chapter.
- (4) "Lineal descendants" of a person means all children of such person and successive generations of children of such children.
- (5) "Net estate" means the estate of a decedent, exclusive of family allowances, costs of administration, and all lawful claims against the estate.
- (6) "Share," when used to describe the share of a net estate or property which any person is entitled to take, includes both the fractional share of the personal property and the undivided fractional interest in the real property, which the person is entitled to take. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1961, c. 958, s. 1.)

II. ADVANCEMENT.

Whether a gift is an advancement depends on the intention of the parent at the time the gift is made. Parrish v. Adams, 10 N.C. App. 700, 179 S.E.2d 880 (1971).

Knowledge That Conveyance Represents an Advancement Estops Claim to Any Other Lands. — Where a child accepts a deed with knowledge that the lands conveyed therein represent an advancement of his full share of the parents' realty, he is estopped to claim any other lands owned by the parents at the time of their deaths. Parrish v. Adams, 10 N.C. App. 700, 179 S.E.2d 880 (1971).

III. ESTATE.

"Estate" Defined. — Estate of a decedent includes all property owned by decedent which she may direct to her legatees and devisees under will and which would pass to her heirs and next of kin under laws of intestacy if she died without will. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

The distinction between a vested and a contingent remainder is the capacity to take upon the termination of the preceding estate. Strickland v. Jackson, 259 N.C. 81, 130 S.E.2d 22 (1963).

Where those who are to take in remainder cannot be determined until the happening of a stated event, the remainder is contingent. Strickland v. Jackson, 259 N.C. 81, 130 S.E.2d 22 (1963).

Estate Tail Distinguishable from Life Estate with Remainder. — Inasmuch as an estate tail is an estate of inheritance which descends to particular heirs, it is distinguishable from a life estate with remainder. Strickland v. Jackson, 259 N.C. 81, 130 S.E.2d 22 (1963).

IV. NET ESTATE.

Computation of Net Estate. — To ascertain "net estate" under subdivision (5) it is necessary to subtract from the value of the gross estate, "family allowances, costs of administration, and all lawful claims against the estate." Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Federal Estate Tax Is "Lawful Claim." — The federal estate tax is one of the "lawful claims" against testator's estate, and the widow's intestate share of the estate is to be computed after its deduction. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Legacies Not Excluded in Determining Net Estate. — The phrase "all lawful claims against the estate," as used in subdivision (5), does not include either specific legacies or general legacies for specific amounts. If it did, the net estate in many instances would be so deleted by their payment that it would be insufficient to provide the widow with the same share of her husband's real and personal property as if he died intestate. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

As Legacies or Distributive Shares Are Not "Lawful Claims." — In the use of the phrase "lawful claims against the estate" in subdivision (5), the legislature was not referring to claims of beneficiaries created either by the will or the statute of descents and distributions. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

Property Owned as Tenants by the Entirety. — The value of real property owned by couple as tenants by the entirety should not be included in testatrix's net estate for purposes of the dissent statute. In re Estate of Francis, 94 N.C. App. 744, 381 S.E.2d 484, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 708, 388 S.E.2d 456 (1989).

Residue of Net Estate after Distribution to Dissenting Widow. — When the dissenting widow was entitled to one half of the deceased spouse's net estate as defined in subdivision (5) of this section, former G.S. 30-3(c) said that the residue of the testator's net estate for distribution to other devisees and legatees was as defined in this section. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

V. SHARE.

Definition of "Share" Applies to Share of Net Estate. — The definition contained in subdivision (6) is intended to apply when "share" is used "to describe the share of a net estate or property," e.g., a share under G.S. 29-14, which "includes ... the undivided fractional interest in the real property." Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

VI. HEIRS.

Technical Construction of Term "Heirs." — Absent words expressing testatrix' contrary intent, the court would construe the word "heirs" in will in the technical sense. Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

Consideration of Laws in Effect at Time of Death. — In construing a will with a remainder interest to a class of the testatrix' "heirs," the courts look to the intestacy laws in effect at the testatrix' death to determine who the "heirs" are and the shares which they are entitled to take, unless the language of the will reveals a contrary intent. Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

For discussion of construction of the phrase "to my nearest (relatives) heirs" in the remainder clause of a devise by testatrix who died in May, 1962, see Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

VII. LINEAL DESCENDANTS.

Children Distinguished from Others. — The phrase "lineal descendants" generally applies not to distinguish between children of various marriages or out of wedlock, but to distinguish children from other collateral descendants, e.g., nieces and nephews. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

Illegitimate and Adopted Children Included. — The term "lineal descendants" would include even illegitimate children of a deceased female, under G.S. 29-19(a), and clearly includes adopted children, under G.S. 29-17. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

Children Adopted by Wife's Second Husband. — Children born to wife and her first husband became lineal descendants of her second husband upon his adoption of them because they became in law his children. In re Estate of Edwards, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913, rehearing denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

VIII. COSTS OF ADMINISTRATION.

Costs of administration, as used in subdivision (5) of this section, means those ordinary, usual, and necessary expenses of administering a decedent's estate; a will caveat and its expense is neither of these, for a will caveat is a claim that the will involved is invalid, and its expense is a cost of court taxable against either party, or apportioned among the parties, in the discretion of the court. In re Estate of Ward, 97 N.C. App. 660, 389 S.E.2d 441 (1990).

§ 29-3. Certain distinctions as to intestate succession abolished.

In the determination of those persons who take upon intestate succession there is no distinction:

- (1) Between real and personal property, or
- (2) Between ancestral and nonancestral property, or
- (3) Between relations of the whole blood and those of the half blood. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Distinctions Abolished Only for Purposes of Determining Succession. — This section abolishes the distinction between real and personal property only in the determination of those persons who take upon intestate succession. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

Applied in In re Johnston, 16 N.C. App. 38, 190 S.E.2d 879 (1972).

§ 29-4. Curtesy and dower abolished.

The estates of curtesy and dower are hereby abolished. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

§ 29-5. Computation of next of kin.

Degrees of kinship shall be computed as provided in G.S. 104A-1. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to meaning of "next of kin," see G.S. 41-6.1.

§ 29-6. Lineal succession unlimited.

There shall be no limitation on the right of succession by lineal descendants of an intestate. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

§ 29-7. Collateral succession limited.

There shall be no right of succession by collateral kin who are more than five degrees of kinship removed from an intestate; provided that if there is no collateral relative within the five degrees of kinship referred to herein, then collateral succession shall be unlimited to prevent any property from escheating. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1977 law on wills, trusts and estates, see 56 N.C.L. Rev. 1152 (1978).

For note discussing the limitation on collateral inheritance in North Carolina, see 14 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1085 (1978).

CASE NOTES

Rights of collateral succession are limited to the descendants of the intestate's parents or grandparents. This section limits such succession to those persons who are within five degrees of kinship to the intestate, and the effect of the proviso engrafted upon this section is to provide for unlimited succession by collateral kinsmen descended from the intestate's parents or grandparents in the event there are no collateral kinsmen of the fifth degree in such lines of descent. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

The limitation upon collateral succession to heirs within five degrees of kinship to the intestate contained in this section is a limitation upon succession by heirs descended from parents or grandparents of the intestate. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Escheats Not Eliminated by Proviso of this Section. — This section at most imposes a limitation upon intestate succession, as defined in G.S. 29-15, and by its proviso restates the existing effect of G.S. 29-15, i.e., that collateral descent shall be unlimited when it is within the parentela of an intestate's parents or grandparents. Thus, in enacting this section, the legislature did not intend to eliminate escheats. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Effect of Section as to Escheat under § 29-12. — This section has no application to escheat under G.S. 29-12 unless the common ancestor of the collateral kin and the decedent is a parent or grandparent of the decedent. In such an event the main clause in this section operates to exclude a collateral kinsman of a sixth or higher degree from succeeding to the estate, even though he is a lineal descendent of the decedent's parents or grandparents. The proviso in this section, in order to prevent the escheat of the decedent's estate, provides for unlimited succession by collateral kinsmen who are descendants of the decedent's parents or grandparents when there is no such collateral kinsman within the fifth degree. Newlin v. Gill, 32 N.C. App. 392, 232 S.E.2d 213, aff'd, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

§ 29-8. Partial intestacy.

If part but not all of the estate of a decedent is validly disposed of by his will, the part not disposed of by such will shall descend and be distributed as intestate property. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section Codifies Common Law. — This section, which was adopted in 1959, was a codification of the common law. Ferguson v. Croom, 73 N.C. App. 316, 326 S.E.2d 373 (1985).

Section Adopts Majority Rule. — The rule adopted by this section is also in accordance with the rule followed by a majority of the sister states. Ferguson v. Croom, 73 N.C. App. 316, 326 S.E.2d 373 (1985).

This section creates a mandatory plan for disposing of a decedent's property which does not pass by will. It directs that the property pass by intestate succession without regard to the intent expressed by a testator in a will. Ferguson v. Croom, 73 N.C. App. 316, 326 S.E.2d 373 (1985).

Presumption against partial intestacy is merely a rule of construction and cannot have the effect of transferring property in the face of contrary provisions in the will. The presumption must yield when outweighed by manifest and unequivocal intent. McKinney v. Mosteller, 321 N.C. 730, 365 S.E.2d 612 (1988).

Illustrative Case. — Where, as gleaned from will itself, the intent of the testator was that the residue of his estate was to pass to named beneficiaries under the residuary clause of the will only if testator's wife survived him, and she did not, the residue would pass to his heirs at law in accordance with the laws of intestacy as enacted by the legislature. McKinney v. Mosteller, 321 N.C. 730, 365 S.E.2d 612 (1988).

Where decedent did not provide a testamentary disposition of four parcels of land, either specifically or through a residuary clause, the land did not pass under decedent's will, but instead qualified as a partial intestacy. Tarlton v. Stidham, 122 N.C. 77, 469 S.E.2d 38 (1996).

§ 29-9. Inheritance by unborn infant.

Lineal descendants and other relatives of an intestate born within 10 lunar months after the death of the intestate, shall inherit as if they had been born in the lifetime of the intestate and had survived him. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

For note on the wrongful death of a viable fetus, see 23 Wake Forest L. Rev. 849 (1988).

CASE NOTES

Child Born after 10 Months. — If a child is born more than 10 lunar months or 280 days after the death of the intestate, the presumption is that the child was not en ventre sa mere when the intestate died, but this presumption may be rebutted by evidence tending to show that he was in fact the father of the child. Byerly v. Tolbert, 250 N.C. 27, 108 S.E.2d 29 (1959), decided under former Rule 7 of old § 29-1. See also Britton v. Miller, 63 N.C. 268 (1869); In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643.

§ 29-10. Renunciation.

Renunciation of an intestate share shall be as provided for in Chapter 31B of the General Statutes. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1961, c. 958, s. 2; 1975, c. 371, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

A renunciation is not a grant of legal title by the renouncer. It merely triggers a set of statutorily defined legal rights which ultimately determine ownership. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under this section as it read prior to October 1, 1975.

A renunciation relates back to the death of the testator or intestate. The renouncer never actually holds legal title to the property. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under this section as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A parol trust may not be engrafted upon a renounced interest. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under this section as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

Action Seeking Constructive Trust. — Plaintiff, who sought to assert that defendant unduly influenced his decision to sign a "Petition to Renounce" his interest in will, could maintain an action seeking the declaration of a constructive trust. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under this section as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

Collateral Attack. — The legality of plaintiff's renunciation under this section as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975, was a matter before the clerk, who, having exclusive original jurisdiction of the administration of testatrix's estate, allowed plaintiff's "Petition to Renounce." As a party to the original action, plaintiff could not later collaterally attack it. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under this section as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

§ 29-11. Aliens.

Unless otherwise provided by law, it shall be no bar to intestate succession by any person, that he, or any person through whom he traces his inheritance, is or has been an alien. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

§ 29-12. Escheats.

If there is no person entitled to take under G.S. 29-14 or G.S. 29-15, or if in case of an illegitimate intestate, there is no one entitled to take under G.S. 29-21 or G.S. 29-22 the net estate shall escheat as provided in G.S. 116B-2. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1961, c. 83; 1973, c. 1446, s. 7; 1999-456, s. 1; 1999-460, s. 8.)

For note discussing the limitation on collateral inheritance in North Carolina, see 14 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1085 (1978).

CASE NOTES

There is a distinction between derelict property and escheated property. An escheat occurs when the property owner dies intestate and without relatives descended from a common parent or grandparent. North Carolina State Treas. v. City of Asheville, 61 N.C. App. 140, 300 S.E.2d 283 (1983).

Presumption That Distant Relatives Not Included in Will. — Underlying this provision for escheat of the estate in the absence of certain relatives is a logical presumption that the intestate would not have included distant relatives in his will. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Effect of § 29-7 as to Escheat under This Section. — Section 29-7 has no application to escheat under this section unless the common ancestor of the collateral kin and the decedent is a parent or grandparent of the decedent. In such an event the main clause in G.S. 29-7 operates to exclude a collateral kinsman of a sixth or higher degree from succeeding to the estate, even though he is a lineal descendent of the decedent's parents or grandparents. The proviso in G.S. 29-7 in order to prevent the escheat of the decedent's estate provides for unlimited succession by collateral kinsmen who are descendants of the decedent's parents or grandparents when there is no such collateral kinsman within the fifth degree. Newlin v. Gill, 32 N.C. App. 392, 232 S.E.2d 213, aff'd, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Section 29-7 at most imposes a limitation upon intestate succession, as defined in G.S. 29-15, and by its proviso restates the existing effect of G.S. 29-15, i.e., that collateral descent shall be unlimited when it is within the parentela of an intestate's parents or grandparents. Thus, in enacting G.S. 29-7, the legislature did not intend to eliminate escheats. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Unrefunded ticket proceeds is neither abandoned nor derelict property. By purchasing a ticket to a concert, the ticket holder enters into a contract with the auditorium and the performer. If the contract is not performed, he or she may rescind the agreement and demand a refund, but is not compelled to do so. Nor must the auditorium operator or performer refund the purchase price absent a demand. If that were the case, the ticket holder would be unjustly enriched in retaining both money and memento. The auditorium is not a trustee of the unrefunded proceeds of the ticket sale; the auditorium is simply a party to an unperformed contract. North Carolina State Treas. v. City of Asheville, 61 N.C. App. 140, 300 S.E.2d 283 (1983).

ARTICLE 2.

Shares of Persons Who Take upon Intestacy.

§ 29-13. Descent and distribution upon intestacy.

All the estate of a person dying intestate shall descend and be distributed, subject to the payment of costs of administration and other lawful claims against the estate, and subject to the payment of State inheritance or estate taxes, as provided in this Chapter. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1999-337, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-337, s. 46, provides: "This act does not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by this act before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor does it affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal."

CASE NOTES

The power of the legislature to determine who shall take the property of a person dying subsequent to the effective date of a legislative act cannot be doubted. Johnson v. Blackwelder, 267 N.C. 209, 148 S.E.2d 30 (1966).

Law at Time of Death Governs. — It is well settled that an estate must be distributed among heirs and distributees according to the law as it exists at the time of the death of the ancestor. Johnson v. Blackwelder, 267 N.C. 209, 148 S.E.2d 30 (1966).

Even Though Decedent Became Incompetent to Make Will Before Law Changed.

— Where it was alleged that an intestate became mentally incapable of making a will prior to ratification of the Intestate Succession Act on June 10, 1959, and that such mental incapacity continued until his death, and it was contended that the intestate's personal estate should be distributed in accordance with the Intestate Succession Law as it existed on June 9, 1959, it was held that this contention assumes: Before he became mentally incapable of making a will, the intestate had knowledge of and was pleased with the statutes of descent and distribution; if he had made a will, he would have disposed of his estate as provided by the statutes then in effect; he would have been displeased with the provisions of the 1959 act; and, but for his mental incapacity, would have made a will disposing of his estate as provided by the statutes in effect prior to ratification of the 1959 act. Such successive assumptions underlying the contention are unwarranted. They relate to matters that lie wholly within the realm of speculation. The intestate had no vested right in the statutes of descent and distribution in effect prior to the ratification of the 1959 act. He was charged with knowledge that these statutes were subject to change by the General Assembly. Johnson v. Blackwelder, 267 N.C. 209, 148 S.E.2d 30 (1966).

Determinative fact is that the intestate made no will. Hence, his estate "shall descend and be distributed" in accordance with the statutes in effect on the date of his death, namely, this Chapter. Johnson v. Blackwelder, 267 N.C. 209, 148 S.E.2d 30 (1966).

Wife's right to dissent from her husband's will depends on whether she is entitled to take a widow's share of his estate under this section and G.S. 29-14. Sloop v. Sloop, 24 N.C. App. 295, 210 S.E.2d 262 (1974).

Wife Waived Right to Dissent from Will. — Where, by the terms of a deed of separation a wife released her right to take a widow's share of her husband's estate, she thereby waived her right to dissent from his will. Sloop v. Sloop, 24 N.C. App. 295, 210 S.E.2d 262 (1974).

Any or all of the marital rights under this section may be surrendered by a properly drawn separation agreement complying with the requirements of former G.S. 52-6. Lane v. Scarborough, 19 N.C. App. 32, 198 S.E.2d 45, rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Intent to Release Share Implicit in Separation Agreement. — Where the intention of each party to the marriage to release his or her share in the estate of the other is implicit in the express provisions of their separation agreement, their situation and purpose at the time the instrument was executed, the law will imply release of rights under this section and specifically enforce the agreement. Lane v. Scarborough, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Provisions in a separation agreement that each would thereafter acquire, hold, and dispose of property as though unmarried and that each renounced the right to administer upon the estate of the other refuted the contention that one spouse intended to retain any rights in the other's estate. Lane v. Scarborough, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Wife May Be Administratrix Where Marital Relations Resumed. — Where, after the execution of a separation agreement and consent judgment between husband and wife, the wife returned to the marital home which she and her husband shared before the separation; thereafter the commissioners named in the consent judgment to sell the couple's joint property for division were instructed not to do so; the husband paid the wife's attorney for representing her in the litigation between them; and from the time the wife returned to the marital home until her husband's death, the husband and wife lived continuously in their marital residence, the wife was entitled to qualify as administratrix of the estate of her husband and share in his estate as his widow without prejudice by reason of the separation agreement and consent judgment. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

§ 29-14. Share of surviving spouse.

(a) Real Property. — The share of the surviving spouse in the real property is:

- (1) If the intestate is survived by only one child or by any lineal descendant of only one deceased child, a one-half undivided interest in the real property;
- (2) If the intestate is survived by two or more children, or by one child and any lineal descendant of one or more deceased children or by lineal descendants of two or more deceased children, a one-third undivided interest in the real property;
- (3) If the intestate is not survived by a child, children or any lineal descendant of a deceased child or children, but is survived by one or more parents, a one-half undivided interest in the real property;
- (4) If the intestate is not survived by a child, children or any lineal descendant of a deceased child or children, or by a parent, all the real property.

(b) Personal Property. — The share of the surviving spouse in the personal property is:

- (1) If the intestate is survived by only one child or by any lineal descendant of only one deceased child, and the net personal property does not exceed thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) in value, all of the personal property; if the net personal property exceeds thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) in value, the sum of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) plus one half of the balance of the personal property;
- (2) If the intestate is survived by two or more children, or by one child and any lineal descendant of one or more deceased children, or by lineal descendants of two or more deceased children, and the net personal property does not exceed thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) in value, all of the personal property; if the net personal property exceeds thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) in value, the sum of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) plus one third of the balance of the personal property;
- (3) If the intestate is not survived by a child, children, or any lineal descendant of a deceased child or children, but is survived by one or more parents, and the net personal property does not exceed fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) in value, all of the personal property; if the net personal property exceeds fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) in value, the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) plus one half of the balance of the personal property;
- (4) If the intestate is not survived by a child, children, or any lineal descendant of a deceased child or children, or by a parent, all of the personal property.

(c) When an equitable distribution of property is awarded to the surviving spouse pursuant to G.S. 50-20 subsequent to the death of the decedent, the share of the surviving spouse determined under subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall be first determined as though no property had been awarded to the surviving spouse pursuant to G.S. 50-20 subsequent to the death of the decedent, and then reduced by the net value of the marital estate awarded to the surviving spouse pursuant to G.S. 50-20 subsequent to the death of the decedent. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1979, c. 186, s. 1; 1981, c. 69; 1995, c. 262, s. 3; 2001-364, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

This section defines the share of the surviving spouse of an intestate. Tolson v. Young, 260 N.C. 506, 133 S.E.2d 135 (1963); Peoples Oil Co. v. Richardson, 271 N.C. 696, 157 S.E.2d 369 (1967).

Words Describing Relationships Bear Ordinary Meanings. — In carefully naming the persons who take in cases of intestacy using words describing family relationships such as "parents," "brothers," "sisters," "grandparents," "aunts" and "uncles," the legislature intended that these words bear their ordinary and usual meaning. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

And Cannot Be Expanded. — The words "brother," "parent" and "grandparent" cannot be expanded to include other relationships such as "great-grandfather" or "great uncle." Therefore, the maxim, "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius" (the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another) tends to exclude collateral kin who are not in the parentela of the intestate's parents or grandparents. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Definition of "Share" in § 29-2(6) Applies. — The definition contained in G.S. 29-2(6) is intended to apply when "share" is used "to describe the share of a net estate or property," e.g., a share under this section which thus "includes . . . the undivided fractional interest in the real property." Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

The intestate share does not include the value of property passing by survivorship (which includes property owned as tenants by the entirety), joint accounts with right of survivorship, and insurance payable to the surviving spouse. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969).

Estate Does Not Include Property Conveyed Away Prior to Death. — For purposes of this section a wife's husband's estate would not include property which he had conveyed away prior to his death, even though she had not joined in the conveyance. Heller v. Heller, 7 N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969).

A deed by plaintiff's husband, which was executed while he and plaintiff were living together and which conveyed his separate real property to his children by a prior marriage, was effective to convey title to the children free from any claims of plaintiff. Heller v. Heller, 7

N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969).

Insofar as concerns any rights which the spouse of a married person might acquire by virtue of the provisions of this section, the General Assembly has prescribed no regulation or limitations relating to the conveyance during lifetime by such married person of his or her separate real or personal property. Heller v. Heller, 7 N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969).

Present Right of Possession Not Conferred. — A wife is not a real party in interest so as to interpose as a defense or counterclaim, in an action in ejectment instituted by her husband's grantee, that her husband had fraudulently conveyed the lands without her joinder in order to deprive her of the possession thereof, since this section, defining the share of the surviving spouse of an intestate, and G.S. 29-30, providing for a life estate at the election of the surviving spouse, do not give her a present right of possession. Peoples Oil Co. v. Richardson, 271 N.C. 696, 157 S.E.2d 369 (1967).

Surviving Wife and Child Each Take Undivided One Half of Lands. — Upon the death of an intestate, title to his lands immediately vests in his wife and child under this section, each taking a one-half undivided interest in fee. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Share of Second or Successive Spouse. — Former G.S. 30-3(b), which provided that a second or successive spouse who dissented from the will of his deceased spouse should take only one half the amount provided by the Intestate Succession Act for the surviving spouse if the testator had surviving him lineal descendants by a former marriage but there were not surviving lineal descendants by the second or successive marriage, was not arbitrarily discriminatory and capricious so as to be violative of the due process provisions of the federal and State Constitutions. Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Absence of Lineal Descendants. — There being no lineal descendants, under this section the surviving widow is entitled to "all the net estate" of an intestate. Johnson v. Blackwelder, 267 N.C. 209, 148 S.E.2d 30 (1966).

Where decedent was not survived by a child, children, or any lineal decedent of a deceased child or children, or by a parent, surviving spouse was proper recipient of remainder interest in four parcels of land that passed as partial intestacy. Tarleton v. Stidham, 122 N.C. App. 77, 469 S.E.2d 38 (1996).

Wife's right to dissent from her husband's will depends on whether she is entitled to take a widow's share of his estate under G.S. 29-13 and this section. Sloop v. Sloop, 24 N.C. App. 295, 210 S.E.2d 262 (1974).

Wife Waived Right to Dissent from Will.

— Where by the terms of a deed of separation a wife released her right to take a widow's share of her husband's estate, she thereby waived her right to dissent from his will. Sloop v. Sloop, 24 N.C. App. 295, 210 S.E.2d 262 (1974).

Distribution of Estate When Surviving Spouse Dissents from Will. — When a surviving spouse dissents from a will, the intestate share should be allocated so as to cause the least possible disruption of the decedent's plan for the distribution of his estate. In partitioning testatrix's property, her will should be given consideration, and insofar as possible the beneficiaries of the will should receive the property testatrix intended for them to receive. In re Estate of Etheridge, 33 N.C. App. 585, 235 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 253, 237 S.E.2d 535 (1977).

This section does not purport to give a dissenting spouse the right to select the particular property he or she will receive in opposition to the dominant intent expressed in a will. The dominant intent expressed in the will is still controlling so long as it can be carried out and leave the dissenting spouse with the prescribed interest in value in the estate. In re Estate of Etheridge, 33 N.C. App. 585, 235 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 253, 237 S.E.2d 535 (1977).

Wrongful Death Action. — In a wrongful death action, the real parties in interest were the beneficiaries as defined in the Wrongful Death Act, who were the same persons who would have received property had the decedent died intestate; where the decedent was not survived by a child, children, or any lineal descendant of a deceased child or children, or by a parent, the decedent's spouse received all of the wrongful death proceeds, and where the widow was not entitled to a wrongful death recovery, the remaining beneficiaries did not succeed to a full 100 percent, but only received their original percentage, so there were no beneficiaries to the wrongful death claim. Locust v. Pitt County Mem'l Hosp., 154 N.C. App. 103, 571 S.E.2d 668, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1410 (2002), cert. denied, 356 N.C. 673, 579 S.E.2d 272 (2003).

Wrongful Act Bars Husband from Share of Wrongful Death Recovery. — Where it is a husband's wrongful act which caused the death of his wife intestate, he may not share in a recovery from an action for wrongful death.

Should the jury return a verdict in favor of the administrator of her estate, the court will enter judgment for only two thirds of the amount of the verdict. Cummings v. Locklear, 12 N.C. App. 572, 183 S.E.2d 832, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

In an action by an administrator under the Wrongful Death Act, G.S. 28A-18-2, where husband caused the death of his wife, the award must be reduced by the statutory share of the wrongdoer. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Lack, 476 F.2d 583 (4th Cir. 1973).

This result is not precluded by the "slayer statute," G.S. 31A-4, which excludes the wrongdoer from taking by declaring him to have constructively died prior to the deceased, since the slayer's exclusion by G.S. 31A-4 appears to apply only to inheritance from the decedent's "estate," while wrongful death awards have consistently been deemed not to pass through the personal estate of the deceased, but rather to arise out of a right of action belonging peculiarly to the personal representative for the benefit of the intestate successors. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Lack, 476 F.2d 583 (4th Cir. 1973).

Any or all of the marital rights under this section may be surrendered by a properly drawn separation agreement complying with the requirements of former G.S. 52-6. Lane v. Scarborough, 19 N.C. App. 32, 198 S.E.2d 45, rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Remarriage Restores All Rights and Privileges. — When a married couple enters into a separation agreement, later divorces, and then remarries, each party to the marriage regains all rights and privileges incident to marriage unless there is evidence to the contrary. Batten v. Batten, 125 N.C. App. 685, 482 S.E.2d 18 (1997).

Intent to Release Share Implicit in Separation Agreement. — Where the intention of each party to the marriage to release his or her share in the estate of the other is implicit in the express provisions of their separation agreement, their situation and purpose at the time the instrument was executed, the law will imply release of rights under this section and specifically enforce the agreement. Lane v. Scarborough, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Provisions in a separation agreement that each would thereafter acquire, hold, and dispose of property as though unmarried and that each renounced the right to administer upon the estate of the other refuted the contention that one spouse intended to retain any rights in the other's estate. Lane v. Scarborough, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Wife May Be Administratrix Where Marital Relations Resumed. — Where, after the execution of a separation agreement and consent judgment between husband and wife, the wife returned to the marital home which she and her husband shared before the separation; thereafter the commissioners named in the consent judgment to sell the couple's joint property for division were instructed not to do so; the husband paid the wife's attorney for representing her in the litigation between them; and from the time the wife returned to the marital home until her husband's death, the husband and wife lived continuously in their marital residence, the wife was entitled to qualify as administratrix of the estate of her husband and share in his estate as his widow without prejudice by reason of the separation agreement and consent judgment. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

§ 29-15. Shares of others than surviving spouse.

Those persons surviving the intestate, other than the surviving spouse, shall take that share of the net estate not distributable to the surviving spouse, or the entire net estate if there is no surviving spouse, as follows:

- (1) If the intestate is survived by only one child or by only one lineal descendant of only one deceased child, that person shall take the entire net estate or share, but if the intestate is survived by two or more lineal descendants of only one deceased child, they shall take as provided in G.S. 29-16; or
- (2) If the intestate is survived by two or more children or by one child and any lineal descendant of one or more deceased children, or by lineal descendants of two or more deceased children, they shall take as provided in G.S. 29-16; or
- (3) If the intestate is not survived by a child, children or any lineal descendant of a deceased child or children, but is survived by both parents, they shall take in equal shares, or if either parent is dead, the surviving parent shall take the entire share; or
- (4) If the intestate is not survived by such children or lineal descendants or by a parent, the brothers and sisters of the intestate, and the lineal descendants of any deceased brothers or sisters, shall take as provided in G.S. 29-16; or
- (5) If there is no one entitled to take under the preceding subdivisions of this section or under G.S. 29-14,
 - a. The paternal grandparents shall take one half of the net estate in equal shares, or, if either is dead, the survivor shall take the entire one half of the net estate, and if neither paternal grandparent survives, then the paternal uncles and aunts of the intestate and the lineal descendants of deceased paternal uncles and aunts shall take said one half as provided in G.S. 29-16; and
 - b. The maternal grandparents shall take the other one half in equal shares, or if either is dead, the survivor shall take the entire one half of the net estate, and if neither maternal grandparent survives, then the maternal uncles and aunts of the intestate and the lineal descendants of deceased maternal uncles and aunts shall take one half as provided in G.S. 29-16; but

- c. If there is no grandparent and no uncle or aunt, or lineal descendant of a deceased uncle or aunt, on the paternal side, then those of the maternal side who otherwise would be entitled to take one half as hereinbefore provided in this subdivision shall take the whole; or
- d. If there is no grandparent and no uncle or aunt, or lineal descendant of a deceased uncle or aunt, on the maternal side, then those on the paternal side who otherwise would be entitled to take one half as hereinbefore provided in this subdivision shall take the whole. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Words Describing Relationships Bear Ordinary Meanings. — In carefully naming the persons who take in cases of intestacy using words describing family relationships such as "parents," "brothers," "sisters," "grandparents," "aunts" and "uncles," the legislature intended that these words bear their ordinary and usual meaning. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

And Cannot Be Expanded. — The words "brother," "parent" and "grandparent" cannot be expanded to include other relationships such as "great-grandfather" or "great uncle." Therefore, the maxim "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius" (the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another) tends to exclude collateral kin who are not in the parentela of the intestate's parents or grandparents. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Section 31A-2 Modifies Subdivision (3) of This Section. — Section 31A-2, which specifies acts barring rights of parents to intestate succession in child's estate and to administer child's estate, must be deemed a part of the Intestate Succession Act and a modification of subdivision (3) of this section, as fully as if it had been written therein or specifically designated as an amendment thereto. Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

When a gift is made to a class of "heirs," the intestacy laws govern not only the identification of the "heirs," but also the shares to which they are entitled. Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

Per Capita Distribution. — This chapter calls for a per capita distribution of the decedent's real and personal property to all surviving persons in the same degree of relationship to the decedent. The distribution scheme is commonly referred to as "per capita at each generation." Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

Wrongful Death Action. — In a wrongful death action, the real parties in interest were the beneficiaries as defined in the Wrongful Death Act, who were the same persons who would have received property had the decedent died intestate; where a widow, who was the decedent's sole intestate beneficiary, had abandoned the decedent before his death, she was not entitled to a wrongful death recovery, and since the remaining beneficiaries did not succeed to a full 100 percent, but only received their original percentage, there were no beneficiaries to the wrongful death claim. Locust v. Pitt County Mem'l Hosp., 154 N.C. App. 103, 571 S.E.2d 668, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1410 (2002), cert. denied, 356 N.C. 673, 579 S.E.2d 272 (2003).

Plaintiff father, having abandoned the deceased when the latter was a minor child, could not share in the proceeds of the settlement of the claim for wrongful death now in the hands of the administratrix. Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

ARTICLE 3.

Distribution among Classes.

§ 29-16. Distribution among classes.

(a) Children and Their Lineal Descendants. — If the intestate is survived by lineal descendants, their respective shares in the property which they are entitled to take under G.S. 29-15 of this Chapter shall be determined in the following manner:

- (1) Children. — To determine the share of each surviving child, divide the property by the number of surviving children plus the number of deceased children who have left lineal descendants surviving the intestate.
- (2) Grandchildren. — To determine the share of each surviving grandchild by a deceased child of the intestate in the property not taken under the preceding subdivision of this subsection, divide that property by the number of such surviving grandchildren plus the number of deceased grandchildren who have left lineal descendants surviving the intestate.
- (3) Great-Grandchildren. — To determine the share of each surviving great-grandchild by a deceased grandchild of the intestate in the property not taken under the preceding subdivisions of this subsection, divide that property by the number of such surviving great-grandchildren plus the number of deceased great-grandchildren who have left lineal descendants surviving the intestate.
- (4) Great-Great-Grandchildren. — To determine the share of each surviving great-great-grandchild by a deceased great-grandchild of the intestate in the property not taken under the preceding subdivisions of this subsection, divide that property by the number of such surviving great-great-grandchildren plus the number of deceased great-great-grandchildren who have left lineal descendants surviving the intestate.
- (5) Other Lineal Descendants of Children. — Divide, according to the formula established in the preceding subdivisions of this subsection, any property not taken under such preceding subdivisions, among the lineal descendants of the children of the intestate not already participating.

(b) Brothers and Sisters and Their Lineal Descendants. — If the intestate is survived by brothers and sisters or the lineal descendants of deceased brothers and sisters, their respective shares in the property which they are entitled to take under G.S. 29-15 of this Chapter shall be determined in the following manner:

- (1) Brothers and Sisters. — To determine the share of each surviving brother and sister, divide the property by the number of surviving brothers and sisters plus the number of deceased brothers and sisters who have left lineal descendants surviving the intestate within the fifth degree of kinship to the intestate.
 - (2) Nephews and Nieces. — To determine the share of each surviving nephew or niece by a deceased brother or sister of the intestate in the property not taken under the preceding subdivision of this subsection, divide that property by the number of such surviving nephews or nieces plus the number of deceased nephews and nieces who have left lineal descendants surviving the intestate within the fifth degree of kinship to the intestate.
 - (3) Grandnephews and Grandnieces. — To determine the share of each surviving grandnephew or grandniece by a deceased nephew or niece of the intestate in the property not taken under the preceding subdivisions of this subsection, divide that property by the number of such surviving grandnephews and grandnieces plus the number of deceased grandnephews and grandnieces who have left children surviving the intestate.
 - (4) Great-Grandnephews and Great-Grandnieces. — To determine the share of each surviving child of a deceased grandnephew or grandniece of the intestate, divide equally among the great-grandnephews and great-grandnieces of the intestate any property not taken under the preceding subdivisions of this subsection.
 - (5) Grandparents and Others. — If there is no one within the fifth degree of kinship to the intestate entitled to take the property under the preceding subdivisions of this subsection, then the intestate's property shall go to those entitled to take under G.S. 29-15(5).
- (c) Uncles and Aunts and Their Lineal Descendants. — If the intestate is survived by uncles and aunts or the lineal descendants of deceased uncles and aunts, their respective shares in the property which they are entitled to take under G.S. 29-15 shall be determined in the following manner:
- (1) Uncles and Aunts. — To determine the share of each surviving uncle and aunt, divide the property by the number of surviving uncles and aunts plus the number of deceased uncles and aunts who have left children or grandchildren surviving the intestate.
 - (2) Children of Uncles and Aunts. — To determine the share of each surviving child of a deceased uncle or aunt of the intestate in the property not taken under the preceding subdivision of this subsection, divide that property by the number of surviving children of deceased uncles and aunts plus the number of deceased children of deceased uncles and aunts who have left children surviving the intestate.
 - (3) Grandchildren of Uncles and Aunts. — To determine the share of each surviving child of a deceased child of a deceased uncle or aunt of the intestate, divide equally among the grandchildren of uncles or aunts of the intestate any property not taken under the preceding subdivisions of this subsection. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1979, c. 107, ss. 2, 3.)

CASE NOTES

When a gift is made to a class of "heirs," the intestacy laws govern not only the identification of the "heirs," but also the shares to which they are entitled. Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

Per Capita Distribution. — This chapter calls for a per capita distribution of the decedent's real and personal property to all surviving persons in the same degree of relationship to the decedent. The distribution scheme is commonly referred to as "per capita at each generation." Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

There is no logical reason for the Court of Appeals to favor a per capita distribution over a per stirpes distribution absent the intent of the testatrix as ascertained from the four corners of the will. Lewis v. Ecklin, 110 N.C. App. 73, 428 S.E.2d 855 (1993).

Not Function of Administrator to Partition Real Estate. — It is the duty of the administrator to make distribution of the surplus of his intestate's personal property among those entitled thereto, but it is not his function to partition the real estate of his decedent among the heirs. King v. Neese, 233 N.C. 132, 63 S.E.2d 123 (1951), decided under former § 28-149.

ARTICLE 4.

Adopted Children.

§ 29-17. Succession by, through and from adopted children.

(a) A child, adopted in accordance with Chapter 48 of the General Statutes or in accordance with the applicable law of any other jurisdiction, and the heirs of such child, are entitled by succession to any property by, through and from his adoptive parents and their heirs the same as if he were the natural legitimate child of the adoptive parents.

(b) An adopted child is not entitled by succession to any property, by, through, or from his natural parents or their heirs, except as provided in subsection (e) of this section.

(c) The adoptive parents and the heirs of the adoptive parents are entitled by succession to any property, by, through and from an adopted child the same as if the adopted child were the natural legitimate child of the adoptive parents.

(d) The natural parents and the heirs of the natural parents are not entitled by succession to any property, by, through or from an adopted child, except as provided in subsection (e) of this section.

(e) If a natural parent has previously married, is married to, or shall marry an adoptive parent, the adopted child is considered the child of such natural parent for all purposes of intestate succession. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

ments," see 50 N.C.L. Rev. 21 (1971).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under prior law.

North Carolina recognizes the doctrine of equitable adoption. Lankford v. Wright, 347 N.C. 115, 489 S.E.2d 604 (1997).

Equitable adoption, does not confer the incidents of formal statutory adoption; rather, it merely confers rights of inheritance upon the foster child in the event of intestacy of the foster parents. Lankford v. Wright, 347 N.C. 115, 489 S.E.2d 604 (1997).

The term "lineal descendants" is defined at G.S. 29-2(4) as "all children of such person"; this would include even illegitimate children of a deceased female, under G.S. 29-19(a), and clearly includes adopted children, under this section. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

The purpose of subsection (e) of this section is to make it clear that the relationship of parent and child is not severed when the child is adopted by the spouse of the biological parent. In re Estate of Edwards, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913, rehearing denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

Rights of Adopted Child Same as for Natural Child. — The legislature has provided that an adopted child from the date of its adoption shall have the same property rights as a natural born child from the date of its birth. Headen v. Jackson, 255 N.C. 157, 120 S.E.2d 598 (1961), decided under former § 28-149, old § 29-1 and § 48-23.

Any provision of law which prevented an adopted child from sharing in property, by descent or distribution in the same manner and to the same extent as a natural born child, was swept away by the repealing clause in chapter 813, Session Laws of 1955. Headen v. Jackson, 255 N.C. 157, 120 S.E.2d 598 (1961).

An adopted child shall be entitled to inherit property by, through, and from his adoptive parents as if he were born the legitimate child of the adoptive parents. Greenlee v. Quinn, 255 N.C. 601, 122 S.E.2d 409 (1961).

Right of an adopted child to inherit vests as of death of her adoptive parent, and therefore where the parent died prior to the effective date of an act creating a new rule of descent and of distribution the act is not applicable. Wilson v. Anderson, 232 N.C. 521, 61 S.E.2d 447 (1950).

Inheritance from Brother of Adopting Parent. — Under the provisions of Session Laws 1955, c. 813, s. 6, an adopted child was entitled to inherit property from the brother of the adopting parent, notwithstanding that the decree of adoption was entered prior to the passage of the statute, the legislature having the power to determine who shall take the property of a person dying subsequent to the effective date of a legislative act. Bennett v. Cain, 248 N.C. 428, 103 S.E.2d 510 (1958).

Section Has No Bearing upon Whether Adopted Child Takes under Will. — The statutes relating to the right of adopted children to take as distributees and heirs have no bearing upon whether an adopted child takes under a will, except insofar as they establish and define the parent and child relationship between the adoptive parents and the adopted child. Bradford v. Johnson, 237 N.C. 572, 75 S.E.2d 632 (1953), decided under former § 28-149 and old § 29-1.

Biological Parent Need Not Join in Spouse's Petition for Adoption of Children. — Subsection (e) of this section and G.S. 48-7(d) were enacted, not to retain adopted children's status as "lineal descendants" by the former marriage, but instead to provide that the parent-child relationship between adopted children and their biological parent is not severed by the parent's spouse's adoption of her children from a former marriage. Since the relationship remains intact in this limited situation, it is not necessary for such a biological parent to become a co-petitioner in her husband's adoption of her legitimate children of a former marriage. This biological parent, however, must consent to the adoption, as must any biological parent who does not come within the ambit of G.S. 48-6. In re Estate of Edwards, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913, rehearing denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

Wife's failure to "join" in her husband's petition for the adoption of her two minor children by a previous marriage in no way affected her relationship with the children and was immaterial to a determination of her husband's distributive share under former G.S. 30-3(b). In re Estate of Edwards, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913, rehearing denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

ARTICLE 5.

Legitimated Children.

§ 29-18. Succession by, through and from legitimated children.

A child born an illegitimate who shall have been legitimated in accordance with G.S. 49-10 or 49-12 or in accordance with the applicable law of any other jurisdiction, and the heirs of such child, are entitled by succession to property by, through and from his father and mother and their heirs the same as if born in lawful wedlock; and if he dies intestate, his property shall descend and be distributed as if he had been born in lawful wedlock. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Right to Inherit by, through and from Parents. — A legitimated child shall have the same right to inherit by, through, and from his father and mother as if such child had been born in lawful wedlock. Greenlee v. Quinn, 255 N.C. 601, 122 S.E.2d 409 (1961).

Right to Inherit from Collaterals. — The legislature intended to confer upon the legitimated child the same right to inherit from collateral relations as it would have had had it been born in lawful wedlock. Greenlee v. Quinn, 255 N.C. 601, 122 S.E.2d 409 (1961).

ARTICLE 6.

Illegitimate Children.

§ 29-19. Succession by, through and from illegitimate children.

(a) For purposes of intestate succession, an illegitimate child shall be treated as if he were the legitimate child of his mother, so that he and his lineal descendants are entitled to take by, through and from his mother and his other maternal kindred, both descendants and collaterals, and they are entitled to take from him.

(b) For purposes of intestate succession, an illegitimate child shall be entitled to take by, through and from:

- (1) Any person who has been finally adjudged to be the father of such child pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 49-1 through 49-9 or the provisions of G.S. 49-14 through 49-16;
- (2) Any person who has acknowledged himself during his own lifetime and the child's lifetime to be the father of such child in a written instrument executed or acknowledged before a certifying officer named in G.S. 52-10(b) and filed during his own lifetime and the child's lifetime in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county where either he or the child resides.

Notwithstanding the above provisions, no person shall be entitled to take hereunder unless he has given written notice of the basis of his claim to the personal representative of the putative father within six months after the date of the first publication or posting of the general notice to creditors.

(c) Any person described under subdivision (b)(1) or (2) above and his lineal and collateral kin shall be entitled to inherit by, through and from the illegitimate child.

(d) Any person who acknowledges himself to be the father of an illegitimate child in his duly probated last will shall be deemed to have intended that such child be treated as expressly provided for in said will or, in the absence of any express provision, the same as a legitimate child. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1973, c. 1062, s. 1; 1975, c. 54, s. 1; 1977, c. 375, s. 6; c. 591; c. 757, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Statute Does Not Violate Equal Protection or Due Process Clauses. — This section and the statutes in pari materia are substantially related to the lawful State interests. They are intended to promote, and are not in violation of the equal protection and due process clauses. Mitchell v. Freuler, 297 N.C. 206, 254 S.E.2d 762 (1979); Herndon v. Robinson, 57 N.C. App. 318, 291 S.E.2d 305, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 557, 294 S.E.2d 223 (1982).

This section and G.S. 49-10 through 49-12 and 49-14 through 49-16, construed together, do not violate the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution. Mitchell v. Freuler, 297 N.C. 206, 254 S.E.2d 762 (1979).

The statutory scheme established by this section and the other statutes referred to herein (G.S. 49-14 through 49-16 and former G.S. 52-6(c)) does not discriminate against illegitimate children in such manner as to violate the Equal Protection Clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Outlaw v. Planters Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 41 N.C. App. 571, 255 S.E.2d 189 (1979).

In General. — Illegitimate children may inherit from their putative fathers if they have been legitimated by one of the methods established in G.S. 49-10 through 49-14, or if paternity has been established in an action for criminal nonsupport. Helms v. Young-Woodard, 104 N.C. App. 746, 411 S.E.2d 184 (1991), cert. denied, 331 N.C. 117, 414 S.E.2d 756, 506 U.S. 829, 113 S. Ct. 91, 121 L. Ed. 2d 53 (1992).

Subdivision (b)(1) is constitutional on its face. Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981).

Application of subdivision (b)(1) to decedent's estate was not unconstitutional on grounds that decedent was not represented by counsel when he was adjudged the father of plaintiff's illegitimate children. Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981).

Different Treatment of Mother and Father Not Unconstitutional. — While this section classifies the illegitimate's mother and her heirs and the putative father and his heirs differently by placing the additional requirement on the father to establish his paternity by one of the statutorily prescribed methods before he is permitted to inherit, this classification is substantially related to permissible State interests. This section does not violate the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV in this regard. Estate of Stern v. Stern, 66 N.C. App. 507, 311 S.E.2d 909 (1984), appeal dismissed, 471 U.S. 1011, 105 S. Ct. 2010, 85 L. Ed. 2d 294 (1985).

Interest of State in Inheritance Rights of Illegitimate Children. — By specifying the manner and time in which an illegitimate may establish his paternity, this State has sought (1) to mitigate the hardships created by former law (which permitted illegitimates to inherit only from the mother and from each other); (2) to equalize insofar as practical the inheritance rights of legitimate and illegitimate children; and, (3) at the same time to safeguard the just and orderly disposition of a decedent's property and the dependability of titles passing under intestate laws. Mitchell v. Freuler, 297 N.C. 206, 254 S.E.2d 762 (1979).

This section and the other statutes referred to herein (G.S. 49-14 through 49-16), insofar as they provide that an illegitimate child may inherit from its father only if paternity has been acknowledged in writing or finally adjudged in the lifetime of the father and otherwise in accord with those applicable statutes, establish a statutory scheme which bears an evident and substantial relation to the permissible and important interest of the State in providing for the just and orderly disposition of property at death. Outlaw v. Planters Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 41 N.C. App. 571, 255 S.E.2d 189 (1979).

Interest of State in Inheritance by Father from Illegitimate Child. — The requirement imposed on the father of an illegitimate who would inherit from his illegitimate child is substantially related to the important State interests that this section is intended to promote. Estate of Stern v. Stern, 66 N.C. App. 507, 311 S.E.2d 909 (1984).

Birth certification amendment application form did not meet requirements of subsection (b) where it contained no statement by the putative father or anyone else that he was the father of the child, and even if his signature in the blank space involved could be construed to be an unambiguous acknowledgment of paternity, he did not swear to it before any official authorized to administer oaths. In re Will of Bunch, 86 N.C. App. 463, 358 S.E.2d 118 (1987).

The term "lineal descendants" is defined at G.S. 29-2(4) as "all children of such person"; this would include even illegitimate children of a deceased female, under subsection (a) of this section, and clearly includes adopted children, pursuant to G.S. 29-17. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39

(1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

Right to Inherit Established upon Adjudication of Paternity. — Once plaintiffs satisfied the notice requirement of this section, and showed that decedent had been adjudged their father under G.S. 49-1 through 49-9, their right to inherit was established as a matter of law; it did not depend upon a declaration in a court order or judgment. Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981).

A putative father and his kindred are only entitled to inherit from an illegitimate child if paternity has been established by one of the methods prescribed in G.S. 29-19(b). In re Estate of Morris, 123 N.C. App. 264, 472 S.E.2d 786 (1996).

Acknowledgment Not Filed. — Where petitioner acknowledged his paternity before a notary public and executed the "Affidavit Of Parentage For Child Born Out Of Wedlock" but never filed the acknowledgment with the clerk of court, he did not fulfill all the requirements under G.S. 29-19(b). In re Estate of Morris, 123 N.C. App. 264, 472 S.E.2d 786 (1996).

Compliance with Section Essential. — Where there has been no compliance with this section, illegitimate child has no right to inherit from deceased putative father. Hayes v. Dixon, 83 N.C. App. 52, 348 S.E.2d 609 (1986), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 319 N.C. 224, 353 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 824, 108 S. Ct. 88, 98 L. Ed. 2d 50 (1987).

Plea of Guilty in Bastardy Action as Basis for Inheritance by Child. — An illegitimate child may inherit, through intestate succession, from the estate of a father who acknowledged paternity to the child by pleading guilty in a criminal bastardy action. Sanders v. Brantley, 71 N.C. App. 797, 323 S.E.2d 426 (1984).

Notice under Subsection (b) as Condition Precedent. — The requirement of subsection (b) that illegitimate children give written notice of their claims of inheritance to the personal representatives of their putative fathers' estates within six months after the first publication or posting of general notice to creditors is a condition precedent to an illegitimate child's right to receive a distribution from the estate of a father who meets the description in subdivision (1) or (2) of subsection (b). Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981).

Form of Notice. — Subsection (b) does not specify any particular form the notice required of illegitimate children must take. Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981).

Plaintiffs' verified complaint seeking revocation of defendant's letters, which fully alleged the basis of their claim of entitlement to inherit from decedent and was received by defendant, as personal representative of the estate, within the statutory period for notice, satisfied the notice requirement of subsection (b) of this section. Estate of Lucas v. Jarrett, 55 N.C. App. 185, 284 S.E.2d 711 (1981).

The formalities of subdivision (b)(2) of this section serve a dual purpose. — As a method for establishing paternity, a written instrument acknowledging paternity, executed and filed with the clerk of superior court, assures the requisite degree of certainty. The formalities further assure that the decedent intended that the illegitimate child share in his estate, much in the same way that a father intentionally excludes legitimate children as beneficiaries under his will. Herndon v. Robinson, 57 N.C. App. 318, 291 S.E.2d 305, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 557, 294 S.E.2d 223 (1982).

Documents Inadequate under Subdivision (b)(2). — Plaintiff's proof of numerous written documents, signed by his putative father, which clearly acknowledged paternity, did not rise to the dignity of constructive compliance with subdivision (b)(2) of this section, where the documents were offered for purposes other than to establish paternity as contemplated under subdivision (b)(2). Herndon v. Robinson, 57 N.C. App. 318, 291 S.E.2d 305, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 557, 294 S.E.2d 223 (1982).

Action by Father Required to Include Illegitimate Child. — Just as a father must act to exclude a legitimate child from sharing in his estate, he must also act to include an illegitimate child. The distinction is an important one. Herndon v. Robinson, 57 N.C. App. 318, 291 S.E.2d 305, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 557, 294 S.E.2d 223 (1982).

Applicability of Subsection (d). — Subsection (d) of this section is clear in its meaning and applies only when the child is taking under a will from the putative father and not when the putative father or his heirs are attempting to inherit from the child under the intestacy statutes. Estate of Stern v. Stern, 66 N.C. App. 507, 311 S.E.2d 909 (1984).

No Inheritance from Father Prior to 1973 Amendment. — See Jolly v. Queen, 264 N.C. 711, 142 S.E.2d 592 (1965).

This section confers upon illegitimate children same rights enjoyed by legitimate children under laws of intestate succession once there is proper adjudication or acknowledgment of paternity. Notification of the personal representative within six months of published notice to creditors does not establish or define the illegitimate child's right, but merely sets a time limitation for an illegitimate child to seek its enforcement. Jefferys v. Tolin, 90 N.C. App. 233, 368 S.E.2d 201 (1988).

Subsection (b) is Statute of Limitation.

— The six-month limitation period in subsection (b), relating to notice of the claim of an illegitimate child to take from father's estate, is a statute of limitation which is subject to being tolled under the provisions of G.S. 1-17. Jefferys v. Toblin, 90 N.C. App. 233, 368 S.E.2d 201 (1988).

Former Law. — See Flintham v. Holder, 16 N.C. 345 (1829); Fairly v. Priest, 56 N.C. 383 (1857); McBryde v. Patterson, 78 N.C. 412 (1878); Bettis v. Avery, 140 N.C. 184, 52 S.E. 584 (1905); Ashe v. Camp Mfg. Co., 154 N.C. 241, 70 S.E. 295 (1911); Brown v. Brown, 168 N.C. 4, 84 S.E. 25 (1915); Wilson v. Wilson, 189

§ 29-20. Descent and distribution upon intestacy of illegitimate children.

All the estate of a person dying illegitimate and intestate shall descend and be distributed, subject to the payment of costs of administration and other lawful claims against the estate, and subject to the payment of State inheritance or estate taxes, as provided in this Article. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1999-337, s. 6.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-337, s. 46, provides: "This act does not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by this act before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor does it affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal."

§ 29-21. Share of surviving spouse.

The share of the surviving spouse of an illegitimate intestate shall be the same as provided in G.S. 29-14 for the surviving spouse of a legitimate person. In determining whether the illegitimate intestate is survived by one or more parents as provided in G.S. 29-14(3), any person identified as the father under G.S. 29-19(b)(1) or (b)(2) shall be regarded as a parent. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1977, c. 757, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Section 29-14(3), referred to in this section, has been rewritten. For provisions as to illegitimate intestates who are survived by one or more parents, see now G.S. 29-14(a)(3) and 29-14(b)(3).

CASE NOTES

Words Describing Relationships Bear Ordinary Meanings. — In carefully naming the persons who take in cases of intestacy using words describing family relationships such as "parents," "brothers," "sisters," "grandparents," "aunts" and "uncles," the legislature intended that these words bear their ordinary and usual meaning. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

And Cannot Be Expanded. — The words "brother," "parent" and "grandparent" cannot be expanded to include other relationships such as "great-grandfather" or "great uncle." Therefore, the maxim, "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius" (the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another) tends to exclude collateral kin who are not in the parentela of the intestate's parents or grandparents. Newlin v. Gill, 293 N.C. 348, 237 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Cited in Heller v. Heller, 7 N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969).

§ 29-22. Shares of others than the surviving spouse.

Those persons surviving the illegitimate intestate, other than the surviving spouse, shall take that share of the net estate provided in G.S. 29-15. In determining whether the illegitimate intestate is survived by one or more parents or their collateral kindred as provided in G.S. 29-15, any person identified as the father under G.S. 29-19(b)(1) or (b)(2) shall be regarded as a parent. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1977, c. 757, s. 2.)

ARTICLE 7.

Advancements.

§ 29-23. In general.

If a person dies intestate as to all his estate, property which he gave in his lifetime as an advancement shall be counted toward the advancee’s intestate share, and to the extent that it does not exceed such intestate share, shall be taken into account in computing the estate to be distributed. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1980 property law, see 59 N.C.L. Rev. 1209 (1981).

CASE NOTES

A child must account for advancements in order to share by inheritance or by distribution in the real estate and personal property owned by the parent at death, and therefore it must be ascertained that the parent left property before the question of advancements can arise. Atkinson v. Bennett, 242 N.C. 456, 88 S.E.2d 76 (1955), decided under former Rule 2 of old § 29-1.

§ 29-24. Presumption of gift.

A gratuitous inter vivos transfer is presumed to be an absolute gift and not an advancement unless shown to be an advancement. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Right to Change Advancement into Gift.

— While a parent cannot change into an advancement that which was intended as a gift at the time of delivery, there is no apparent reason why a parent cannot by deed change into a gift that which was at the time of delivery intended as an advancement. Atkinson v. Bennett, 242 N.C. 456, 88 S.E.2d 76 (1955), decided under former Rule 2 of old § 29-1.

Effect of Previous Advancement on Conveyance by Deed. — Where more than a year after an alleged advancement, the parent executes a deed conveying all of her property in equal division between two of the children, without providing for advancements previously made, the asserted advancement to one of them should not be taken into account in the division of the property conveyed by the deed. Atkinson v. Bennett, 242 N.C. 456, 88 S.E.2d 76 (1955), decided under former Rule 2 of old § 29-1.

Applied in Lassiter v. Lassiter, 15 N.C. App. 588, 190 S.E.2d 283 (1972).

§ 29-25. Effect of advancement.

If the amount of the advancement equals or exceeds the intestate share of the advance, he shall be excluded from any further portion in the distribution of the estate, but he shall not be required to refund any part of such advancement; and if the amount of the advancement is less than his share, he shall be entitled to such additional amount as will give him his full share of the intestate donor's estate. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — The proviso to former Rule 2 of old G.S. 29-1 was enacted to establish a perfect equality in the division of the intestate's whole estate, real and personal, amongst an intestate's children, excepting only, that no property given by a parent to a child is in any case to be taken away. King v. Neese, 233 N.C. 132, 63 S.E.2d 123 (1951). See Atkinson v. Bennett, 242 N.C. 456, 88 S.E.2d 76 (1955).

§ 29-26. Valuation.

The value of the property given as an advancement shall be determined as of the time when the advancee came into possession or enjoyment, or at the time of the death of the intestate, whichever first occurs. However, if the value of the property, so advanced, is stated by the intestate donor in a writing signed by him and designating the gift as an advancement, such value shall be deemed the value of the advancement. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

§ 29-27. Death of advancee before intestate donor.

If the advancee dies before the intestate donor leaving a lineal heir or heirs who take by intestate succession from the intestate donor, the advancement shall be taken into account in the same manner as if it had been made directly to such heir or heirs, but the value shall be determined as of the time the original advancee came into possession or enjoyment, or when the heir or heirs came into possession or enjoyment or at the time of the death of the intestate donor, whichever first occurs. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1961, c. 958, s. 3.)

§ 29-28. Inventory.

If any person who has, in the lifetime of an intestate donor, received a part of the donor's property, refuses, upon order of the clerk of superior court of the county in which the administrator or collector qualifies, to give an inventory on oath, setting forth therein to the best of his knowledge and belief the particulars of the transfer of such property, he shall be considered to have received his full share of the donor's estate, and shall not be entitled to receive any further part or share. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

§ 29-29. Release by advancee.

If the advancee acknowledges to the intestate donor by a signed writing that he has been advanced his full share of the intestate donor's estate, both he and those claiming through him shall be excluded from any further participation in the intestate donor's estate. (1959, c. 879, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 8.

Election to Take Life Interest in Lieu of Intestate Share.

§ 29-30. Election of surviving spouse to take life interest in lieu of intestate share provided.

(a) In lieu of the intestate share provided in G.S. 29-14 or G.S. 29-21, or of the elective share provided in G.S. 30-3.1, the surviving spouse of an intestate or the surviving spouse who has petitioned for an elective share shall be entitled to take as his or her intestate share or elective share a life estate in one third in value of all the real estate of which the deceased spouse was seised and possessed of an estate of inheritance at any time during coverture, except that real estate as to which the surviving spouse:

- (1) Has waived his or her rights by joining with the other spouse in a conveyance thereof, or
- (2) Has release or quitclaimed his or her interest therein in accordance with G.S. 52-10, or
- (3) Was not required by law to join in conveyance thereof in order to bar the elective life estate, or
- (4) Is otherwise not legally entitled to the election provided in this section.

(b) Regardless of the value thereof and despite the fact that a life estate therein might exceed the fractional limitation provided for in subsection (a), the life estate provided for in subsection (a) shall at the election of the surviving spouse include a life estate in the usual dwelling house occupied by the surviving spouse at the time of the death of the deceased spouse if such dwelling house were owned by the deceased spouse at the time of his or her death, together with the outbuildings, improvements and easements thereunto belonging or appertaining, and lands upon which situated and reasonably necessary to the use and enjoyment thereof, as well as a fee simple ownership in the household furnishings therein.

(c) The election provided for in subsection (a) shall be made by the filing of a notice thereof with the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the administration of the estate is pending, or, if no administration is pending, then with the clerk of the superior court of any county in which the administration of the estate could be commenced. Such election shall be made:

- (1) At any time within one month after the expiration of the time fixed for the filing of the petition for elective share under Article 1A of Chapter 30, or

- (2) In case of intestacy, then within 12 months after the death of the deceased spouse if letters of administration are not issued within that period, or
 - (3) If letters of administration are issued within 12 months after the date of the death of the deceased spouse, then within one month after the expiration of the time limited for filing claims against the estate, or
 - (4) If litigation that affects the share of the surviving spouse in the estate is pending, then within such reasonable time as may be allowed by written order of the clerk of the superior court.
- (c1) The notice of election shall:
- (1) Be directed to the clerk with whom filed;
 - (2) State that the surviving spouse making the same elects to take under this section rather than under the provisions of G.S. 29-14, 29-21, or 30-3.1, as applicable;
 - (3) Set forth the names of all heirs, devisees, legatees, personal representatives and all other persons in possession of or claiming an estate or an interest in the property described in subsection (a); and
 - (4) Request the allotment of the life estate provided for in subsection (a).
- (c2) The notice of election may be in person, or by attorney authorized in a writing executed and duly acknowledged by the surviving spouse and attested by at least one witness. If the surviving spouse is a minor or an incompetent, the notice of election may be executed and filed by a general guardian or by the guardian of the person or estate of the minor or incompetent spouse. If the minor or incompetent spouse has no guardian, the notice of election may be executed and filed by a next friend appointed by the clerk. The notice of election, whether in person or by attorney, shall be filed as a record of the court, and a summons together with a copy of the notice shall be served upon each of the interested persons named in the notice of election.
- (d) In case of election to take a life estate in lieu of an intestate share or elective share, as provided in either G.S. 29-14, 29-21, or 30-3.3(a), the clerk of superior court, with whom the notice of election has been filed, shall summon and appoint a jury of three disinterested persons who being first duly sworn shall promptly allot and set apart to the surviving spouse the life estate provided for in subsection (a) and make a final report of such action to the clerk.
- (e) The final report shall be filed by the jury not more than 60 days after the summoning and appointment thereof, shall be signed by all jurors, and shall describe by metes and bounds the real estate in which the surviving spouse shall have been allotted and set aside a life estate. It shall be filed as a record of court and a certified copy thereof shall be filed and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of each county in which any part of the real property of the deceased spouse, affected by the allotment, is located.
- (f) In the election and procedure to have the life estate allotted and set apart provided for in this section, the rules of procedure relating to partition proceedings shall apply except insofar as the same would be inconsistent with the provisions of this section.
- (g) Neither the household furnishings in the dwelling house nor the life estates taken by election under this section shall be subject to the payment of debts due from the estate of the deceased spouse, except those debts secured by such property as follows:
- (1) By a mortgage or deed of trust in which the surviving spouse has waived his or her rights by joining with the other spouse in the making thereof; or
 - (2) By a purchase money mortgage or deed of trust, or by a conditional sales contract of personal property in which title is retained by the vendor, made prior to or during the marriage; or

- (3) By a mortgage or deed of trust made prior to the marriage; or
- (4) By a mortgage or deed of trust constituting a lien on the property at the time of its acquisition by the deceased spouse either before or during the marriage.

(h) If no election is made in the manner and within the time provided for in subsection (c) the surviving spouse shall be conclusively deemed to have waived his or her right to elect to take under the provisions of this section, and any interest which the surviving spouse may have had in the real estate of the deceased spouse by virtue of this section shall terminate. (1959, c. 879, s. 1; 1961, c. 958, ss. 4-8; 1965, c. 848; 1997-456, s. 27; 2000-178, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Pending Litigation.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section Preserves Benefits of Dower and Curtesy. — Dower, as such, has been abolished in North Carolina, but this section preserves to a surviving spouse the benefits of the former rights of dower and curtesy. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965); Heller v. Heller, 7 N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969); Taylor v. Bailey, 49 N.C. App. 216, 271 S.E.2d 296 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 726, 274 S.E.2d 235 (1981).

This section has the practical effect of providing the benefits of dower to the surviving spouse, at her election. Peoples Oil Co. v. Richardson, 271 N.C. 696, 157 S.E.2d 369 (1967).

To protect the rights of dower or curtesy, the General Assembly has prescribed regulations and limitations on the right of a married person to convey his or her real property free from the elective life estate provided for his or her spouse by this section. Heller v. Heller, 7 N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969).

This section limits the right of a married person to convey his or her real property free from the elective life estate provided by this section. Taylor v. Bailey, 49 N.C. App. 216, 271 S.E.2d 296 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 726, 274 S.E.2d 235 (1981).

Purpose. — The reason for granting the surviving spouse an election or choice is to prevent such spouse from being rendered penniless and turned out of doors by reason of a small net estate or an insolvent estate. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

A surviving spouse is given this election so as not to be rendered penniless and would elect this option when the estate is small or insolvent. Taylor v. Bailey, 49 N.C. App. 216, 271 S.E.2d 296 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 726, 274 S.E.2d 235 (1981).

Present Right of Possession Not Conferred. — A wife is not a real party in interest so as to interpose as a defense or counterclaim in an action in ejectment instituted by her husband's grantee that her husband had fraudulently conveyed the lands without her joinder in order to deprive her of the possession thereof, since G.S. 29-14, defining the share of the surviving spouse of an intestate, and this section, providing for a life estate at the election of the surviving spouse, do not give her a present right of possession. Peoples Oil Co. v. Richardson, 271 N.C. 696, 157 S.E.2d 369 (1967).

Effect of Inchoate Dower Interest. — An inchoate dower interest is not an estate in land nor a vested interest, but, nevertheless, it acts as an encumbrance upon real property. Taylor v. Bailey, 49 N.C. App. 216, 271 S.E.2d 296 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 726, 274 S.E.2d 235 (1981).

Different Time Limits Are Fixed to Give Surviving Spouse Opportunity to Decide. — The reason different time limits are fixed for making the election, under the different circumstances, as set out in subsection (c), subdivisions (1), (2), (3) and (4), is to give the surviving spouse ample opportunity to make a decision as to which choice is most beneficial. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Not Subject to Ordinary Debts of Estate. — The life estate, which the surviving spouse elects, is not subject to the payment of the ordinary debts due from the estate of the deceased spouse. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Thus, Spouse Would Elect Life Estate Where Estate Is Insolvent. — A surviving spouse would certainly elect to take a life estate where it would require a sale of all of the property of deceased's estate to pay the debts. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Inchoate Right to Dower May Be Protected by Redemption from Tax Sale. — A wife who claims in property an inchoate right to dower is possessed of such an interest that she clearly has the right to protect such interest by redeeming such property from a tax sale. Samet v. United States, 242 F. Supp. 214 (M.D.N.C. 1965).

Any or all of the marital rights under this section may be surrendered by a properly drawn separation agreement complying with the requirements of former G.S. 52-6. Lane v. Scarborough, 19 N.C. App. 32, 198 S.E.2d 45, rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

Where seller's wife refused to release her dower interest in the subject property, buyer is entitled to specific performance on the contract to convey the property, with an abatement in the purchase price for the value of defendant's wife's dower interest and for rents and profits for the period he was denied possession. Taylor v. Bailey, 49 N.C. App. 216, 271 S.E.2d 296 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 726, 274 S.E.2d 235 (1981).

Separately Conveyed Property Subject to Life Estate. — Where a married person conveys separate property without permission or joinder of their spouse and the non-owner spouse survives the owner spouse, the conveyed property is subject to the non-owner spouse's elective life estate. Melvin v. Mills-Melvin, 126 N.C. App. 543, 486 S.E.2d 84 (1997).

Applied in Lucas v. Felder, 261 N.C. 169, 134 S.E.2d 154 (1964).

Cited in Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 34, 143 S.E.2d 311 (1965); McLeod v. McLeod, 266 N.C. 144, 146 S.E.2d 65 (1966).

II. PENDING LITIGATION.

Subdivision (c)(4) Authorizes Fixing of Time for Election Where Litigation Is Pending. — Subdivision (c)(4) contemplates that the outcome of the litigation may well determine whether the surviving spouse will elect to take a life estate. Therefore, it authorizes the surviving spouse, if such litigation is pending, to request of the clerk a written order allowing a reasonable time within which the notice of election and the proceedings pursuant thereto may be filed and instituted. Upon such request, it becomes the duty of the clerk forthwith to make a written order fixing a time within which an election may be filed in accordance with subsection (c). Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

"Share" under Subdivision (c)(4) Means Any Share Spouse Is Entitled to. — As used in subdivision (c)(4), "share" means such share in the estate (not necessarily the net estate or property) as the surviving spouse shall be entitled to take by any provision of this Chapter. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Any Litigation Affecting Spouse's Choice Affects Such Share. — Any litigation which may substantially and materially affect the choice the surviving spouse is entitled to make "affects the share of the surviving spouse in the estate" under subdivision (c)(4). Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Such as Suit on Disputed Claim Large Enough to Render Estate Insolvent. — If there is a disputed claim which, if allowed, would render the estate insolvent or nearly so, and which, if disallowed, would leave a large net estate, the outcome of the suit on the claim would affect the share of the surviving spouse and might well determine the matter of election, though the subject of the litigation is a mere debt and not the title to land. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Or Suit to Set Aside Deed from Son to Surviving Spouse of His Interest in Estate. — Where, before the time limit for making an election, as provided in subdivision (c)(3), had expired, a son instituted litigation to set aside a deed to his mother of his interest in his deceased father's lands, on the ground that she had defrauded him, the outcome of the litigation would affect her choice or election, i.e., her share of the estate. The pendency of the litigation extended her time for making the election. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Action by Widow Not “Pending” Litigation. — An action by the widow, commenced after time for election had expired, to declare void a deed executed by her husband which conveyed the husband's separate realty to his children of a prior marriage, does not constitute “pending” litigation within the meaning of subdivision (c)(4) of this section. Heller v. Heller, 7 N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969).

Time Allowed Should Be Reasonable Time after Litigation Ends. — The time allowed under subdivision (c)(4) should be such time after the termination of the pending litigation as to the clerk, in the exercise of his sound discretion, seems reasonable under the circumstances. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

And 20 Days Is Not Unreasonable. — Twenty days allowed under subdivision (c)(4) by the clerk for filing notice of election and issuing of summons is not unreasonable. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

The order fixing the time limit under subdivision (c)(4) must be made forthwith upon the ex parte request of the surviving spouse. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Such Order Is Only Ministerial. — The written order under subdivision (c)(4) is only ministerial, it merely fixes the time limit, and it is not an adjudication of any issues or questions of law which may be raised in the proceeding between the surviving spouse and other interested parties. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Rights of Parties Are Not Determined Until Later. — The rights of the parties are determined after notice of election has been filed pursuant to the order fixing the time limit, summons served and the pleadings are in. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Procedure Is in Accordance with Rules Relating to Partition. — Proceedings determining the rights of the parties and allotting the life estate are in accordance with the rules of procedure relating to partition of lands as far as practicable. Smith v. Smith, 265 N.C. 18, 143 S.E.2d 300 (1965).

Dissent from Will.

§§ 30-1 through 30-3: Repealed by Session Laws 2000-178, s. 1, effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date.

Cross References. — As to right of elective share, see G.S. 30-3.1 et seq.

ARTICLE 1A.

*Elective Share.§ 30-3.1. Right of elective share.

(a) Elective Share. — The surviving spouse of a decedent who dies domiciled in this State has a right to claim an elective share¹, which means an amount equal to (i) the applicable share of the Total Net Assets, as defined in G.S. 30-3.2(4), less (ii) the value of Property Passing to Surviving Spouse, as defined in G.S. 30-3.3(a). The applicable share of the Total Net Assets is as follows:

- (1) If the decedent is not survived by any lineal descendants, one-half of the Total Net Assets.
- (2) If the decedent is survived by one child, or lineal descendants of one deceased child, one-half of the Total Net Assets.
- (3) If the decedent is survived by two or more children, or by one or more children and the lineal descendants of one or more deceased children, or by the lineal descendants of two or more deceased children, one-third of the Total Net Assets.

(b) Reduction of Applicable Share. — In those cases in which the surviving spouse is a second or successive spouse, and the decedent has one or more lineal descendants surviving by a prior marriage but there are no lineal descendants surviving by the surviving spouse, the applicable share as determined in subsection (a) of this section shall be reduced by one-half.

(c) Death Taxes. — Death taxes shall be taken into account as a claim against the estate in determining Total Net Assets only to the extent that the assets received by the surviving spouse do not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction pursuant to section 2056 of the Code or similar provisions under the laws of any other applicable taxing jurisdiction. The amount of such claims shall equal the difference between the amount of such death taxes as finally determined and the amount such death taxes would have been if all assets received by the surviving spouse had qualified for the federal estate tax marital deduction pursuant to section 2056 of the Code and similar provisions under the laws of any other applicable taxing jurisdictions. (2000-178, s. 2; 2003-296, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to intestate succession, see G.S. 29-1 et seq. As to abolition of dower and curtesy, see G.S. 29-4. For provision that a decedent's half of community property is not subject to the surviving spouse's right to petition for an elective share, see G.S. 31C-3.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2000-178, ss. 1 and 2, effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date, repeal G.S. 30-1 to 30-3, relating to the surviving spouse's right to dissent from his or her deceased spouse's will, and enact this article, relating to the right to claim an elective share. Case notes from repealed G.S. 30-1 to 30-3 have been placed under G.S. 30-3.1 to 30-3.6, as appropriate.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2003-296, s. 1, effective January 1, 2004, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date, in subsection (a), substituted "G.S. 30-3.2(4)" for "G.S. 30-3.2(c)"; and in subsection (c), deleted "such taxes are increased because" following "only to the extent that" in the first sentence, and added the second sentence.

I. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

A. In General.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former G.S. 30-1 to 30-3 and corresponding prior provisions, relating to the right to dissent.

Constitutionality of Former Provisions.

— The provisions of, former G.S. 30-1, 30-2, and 30-3, insofar as they gave a husband a right in certain cases to dissent from his deceased wife's will, and to take a specified share of his deceased wife's real and personal property, violated the former provisions of N.C. Const., Art. X, G.S. 6 (see now N.C. Const., Art. X, G.S. 4), since they diminished a married woman's estate disposed of by her will, and restricted and abridged her constitutional power to dispose of her property by will as if she were unmarried. Dudley v. Staton, 257 N.C. 572, 126 S.E.2d 590 (1962), commented on in 41 N.C.L. Rev. 311 (1963).

Former G.S. 30-1, 30-2, and 30-3, insofar as they gave a husband the right in certain instances to dissent from his deceased wife's will and take a specified share of her estate, were unconstitutional under former N.C. Const., Art. X, G.S. 6 (see now N.C. Const., Art. X, G.S. 4), to the extent that they diminished pro tanto a devise of her separate estate in accordance with a will executed by her. But the adoption by the voters of the amendment to former N.C. Const., Art. X, G.S. 6 (see now N.C. Const., Art. X, G.S. 4), restored, subject to the qualifications set forth in Session Laws 1963, c. 1209, the right of the husband to dissent from the will of his wife. Fullam v. Brock, 271 N.C. 145, 155 S.E.2d 737 (1967); Fullam v. Brock, 271 N.C. 145, 155 S.E.2d 737 (1967).

Former G.S. 30-3(b), which provided that a second or successive spouse who dissented from the will of his deceased spouse should take only one half the amount provided by the Intestate Succession Act, G.S. 29-1 et seq., for the surviving spouse if the testator had surviving him lineal descendants by a former marriage but there were no surviving lineal descendants by the second or successive marriage, was not arbitrarily discriminatory and capricious so as to be violative of the due process provisions of the federal and State Constitutions. Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

The provisions of § 1-254 did not confer subject matter jurisdiction on the court to hear the plaintiffs' challenge to the defendant's right to dissent; because former G.S. 30-1(c) and G.S. 1-254 govern mutually exclusive subject matter, each must be construed separately; although both an action contesting a surviving spouse's right of dissent and an action construing a will in part involve estate valuations (the dissent action involving valuation of the entire estate and the declaratory judgment action involving valuation of the testamentary estate), the actions are still fundamentally different in nature. Ripley v. Day, 139 N.C. App. 630, 534 S.E.2d 620, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 992 (2000).

Former § 30-1(c) and § 1-254 govern mutually exclusive subject matter and cannot be construed in pari materia. Ripley v. Day, 141 N.C. App. 546, 539 S.E.2d 384, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1414 (2000), cert denied, 353 N.C. 380, 547 S.E.2d 415 (2001).

Former statute had no application in cases of intestacy. Vinson v. Chappell, 3 N.C. App. 348, 164 S.E.2d 631 (1968), aff'd, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

It was only when a spouse died testate that former G.S. 30-1 et seq. became applicable. Vinson v. Chappell, 3 N.C. App. 348, 164 S.E.2d 631 (1968), aff'd, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Purpose of Statute. — The apparent purpose of former G.S. 30-1 to deny a surviving spouse a share of the testator's "net estate" when he or she had been adequately provided for by property passing outside the probate estate. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Right Conferred by Statute. — The right of a husband or wife to dissent from the will of his spouse was conferred by statute and could be under former G.S. 30-1 exercised at the time and in the manner fixed by statute. Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Husband and Wife Have Same Rights. — Session Laws 1963, c. 1209 was enacted to abrogate the effect of the decision in Dudley v. Staton, 257 N.C. 572, 126 S.E.2d 590 (1962), and to make the rights of husbands and wives the same in each other's separate property. Fullam v. Brock, 271 N.C. 145, 155 S.E.2d 737 (1967).

Assignment of Reason Not Required. — The surviving spouse in the exercise of the right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1 was not required to assign any reason therefor. In re Estate of Cox, 32 N.C. App. 765, 233 S.E.2d 926, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 729, 235 S.E.2d 783 (1977).

The right of a widow to dissent from the will pursuant to former G.S. 30-1 was given by law, and she could exercise such right within the time fixed by statute without assigning any reason therefor. Union Nat'l Bank v. Easterby, 236 N.C. 599, 73 S.E.2d 541 (1952); In re Estate of Kirkman, 38 N.C. App. 515, 248 S.E.2d 438 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 584, 254 S.E.2d 31 (1979).

Former § 30-1 conferred no right of dower or year's support; these rights existed independently. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

Rights Analogous to Former Right of Dower. — The rights devolving after the allocation by the commissioners of the spouse's share after a dissent (claim of elective share) is analogous to the rights which devolved upon a widow in the allocation of her dower before its abolishment. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 41 N.C. App. 44, 255 S.E.2d 729 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 735, 267 S.E.2d 660 (1980).

Limitation on Right. — Right to dissent under former provisions was limited to those cases in which provisions under the will, when added to the value of property passing outside the will as a result of the testator's death, (1) were less than the intestate share, or (2) were less than one half of the net estate if neither lineal descendant nor parent survived. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Stone, 263 N.C. 384, 139 S.E.2d 573 (1965).

Right Not an Obligation. — The right to dissent was not an obligation to dissent. Moreover, it was a common principle of law that a surviving spouse had to elect between taking under a will and dissenting from the will, and the election of one precluded the other. Tarlton v. Stidham, 122 N.C. App. 77, 469 S.E.2d 38 (1996).

Right Not Contingent. — Although under prior law the right to take property after dissenting from a will must be established, it was not a contingent right. Tighe v. Michal, 41 N.C. App. 15, 254 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

Testator Presumed to Have Known of Surviving Spouse's Right. — In making a will a husband is presumed to have knowledge of and to have taken into consideration the statutory right of his widow under former G.S. 30-1 to dissent from the will. Keesler v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 256 N.C. 12, 122 S.E.2d 807 (1961); Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

And a testator can prevent his will from being upset by giving his surviving spouse the minimum provision required by statute, which may be satisfied in whole or in part by a life estate or life income interest. In re Estate of Finch, 97 N.C. App. 489, 389 S.E.2d 126 (1990).

Election Required under Prior Statutes. — Under prior statutes, surviving spouse had to elect between taking under a will and dissenting from the will. The spouse could not do both; the election of one precludes the other. Hill v. Smith, 51 N.C. App. 670, 277 S.E.2d 542, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 543, 281 S.E.2d 392 (1981).

Dissenting Widow Could Not Assert Any Benefits under Will. — Widow's dissent from her husband's will under former G.S. 30-1 et seq. was a rejection of it as far as her rights were concerned, and having elected to treat it as a nullity, she could not assert any benefits thereunder, even in regard to direction in the will for the payment of estate taxes. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Green, 236 N.C. 654, 73 S.E.2d 879 (1953), commented on in 31 N.C.L. Rev. 491 (1953).

The act of qualifying as administratrix c.t.a. did not constitute an election to take under the will so as to bar the statutory right of dissent under prior statutes, when at the time of qualification as administratrix c.t.a., the widow was 69 years old, had not communicated with her deceased husband for 18 years, was not accomplished in business affairs on the administration of estates and did not have the assistance of legal counsel. Hurdle v. Sawyer, 46 N.C. App. 814, 266 S.E.2d 404 (1980).

Effect of Dissent on Provisions of Will. — A widow having dissented from her husband's will under former G.S. 30-1 et seq. was entitled to exactly the same share in his estate she would have received if he had died intestate. So far as her property rights in her husband's estate were concerned there was no will. In all other respects the will remained and the executors were controlled by its terms. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Green, 236 N.C. 654, 73 S.E.2d 879 (1953), commented on in 31 N.C.L. Rev. 491 (1953).

Dissent Held to Bar Other Actions. — Plaintiff's dissent to her husband's will, under former G.S. 30-1, which was subject only to an essentially ministerial act by the clerk of court in approving a valuation agreement, precluded her from maintaining an action for construction of the will or claiming property passing under the residuary clause of the will. Taylor v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

Effect on Remainder. — Widow's dissent from will under former G.S. 30-1 et seq. was held to terminate her life estate thereunder and accelerate the vesting of remainder. Union Nat'l Bank v. Easterby, 236 N.C. 599, 73 S.E.2d 541 (1952).

Dissent of surviving spouse, so far as remaindermen are concerned, is equivalent to her death. Keesler v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 256 N.C. 12, 122 S.E.2d 807 (1961).

Separate Agreement with Remaindermen. — The fact that widow's unconditional dissent from will under former G.S. 30-3.1 and election to take her statutory rights was based upon separate agreement with the vested remaindermen that they pay her a specified sum, did not affect the validity of the dissent, the dissent being valid unless she was induced to dissent in ignorance of her rights to her prejudice. Union Nat'l Bank v. Easterby, 236 N.C. 599, 73 S.E.2d 541 (1952).

Personal Representative Who Was Surviving Spouse Need Not Resign While Right Is Determined. — The personal representative need not resign from that position during the time the right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1 was being determined. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Stone, 263 N.C. 384, 139 S.E.2d 573 (1965).

And Failure to Resign Is Not Waiver of Right. — The failure of the surviving spouse to resign as personal representative during the time the right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1 was determined could not constitute a waiver of the right. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Stone, 263 N.C. 384, 139 S.E.2d 573 (1965).

Right of Widow Who Offered Will and Was Appointed Executrix. — Under prior statutes, widow who offered a will for probate and qualified as executrix thereunder, and entered upon the duties of her office, or knowingly took property thereunder, could not afterwards be allowed to resign and dissent from said will, unless it appeared that such widow was at the time mentally and physically disqualified from attending to the business in hand or having any intelligent concept of what she was about.

Joyce v. Joyce, 260 N.C. 757, 133 S.E.2d 675 (1963).

As to decisions under former law, see also Cheshire v. McCoy, 52 N.C. 376 (1860); Jones v. Gerock, 59 N.C. 190 (1861); Hinton v. Hinton, 61 N.C. 410 (1868); Ramsour v. Ramsour, 63 N.C. 231 (1869); Hinton v. Hinton, 68 N.C. 100 (1873); Arrington v. Dorten, 77 N.C. 367 (1877); Yorkly v. Stinson, 97 N.C. 236, 1 S.E. 452 (1887); Horton v. Lee, 99 N.C. 227, 5 S.E. 404 (1888); Hollomon v. Hollomon, 125 N.C. 29, 34 S.E. 99 (1899); Richardson v. Justice, 125 N.C. 409, 34 S.E. 441 (1899); Trustees of Baptist Female Univ. v. Borden, 132 N.C. 476, 44 S.E. 47 (1903); Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 86, 45 S.E. 465 (1903); Lee v. Giles, 161 N.C. 541, 77 S.E. 852 (1913); Atlantic Trust & Banking Co. v. Stone, 176 N.C. 270, 97 S.E. 8 (1918); In re Smith's Estate, 226 N.C. 169, 37 S.E.2d 127 (1946).

B. Lineal Descendants.

The term "lineal descendants" is defined at G.S. 29-2(4) as "all children of such person"; this would include even illegitimate children of a deceased female, under G.S. 29-19(a), and clearly includes adopted children, pursuant to G.S. 29-17. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

The phrase "lineal descendants" is generally applied not to distinguish between children of various marriages or out of wedlock, but to distinguish children from other collateral descendants, e.g., nieces and nephews. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

Adopted Children as Lineal Descendants. — Natural children of one spouse born during a previous marriage, if adopted by second spouse with the consent of their surviving natural parent, would be considered lineal descendants by the second marriage for the purposes of former G.S. 30-3(b), which determined a dissenting spouse's share. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

Applying G.S. 48-23(1), children adopted must be treated legally as having been born at the time of the order of adoption; accordingly, children in question were as a matter of law born of decedent's second marriage, and were "lineal descendants by the second marriage" within the intended meaning of former G.S. 30-3(b). In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

The natural children of a testatrix, born of a previous marriage and duly adopted by her second husband, would be considered to be her lineal descendants by the second marriage for purposes of determining the second spouse's distributive share upon his dissent from the testatrix's will pursuant to former G.S. 30-3(b). In re Estate of Edwards, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913, rehearing denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

More Testamentary Freedom Allowed to Spouse with Lineal Descendants by First Marriage Only. — The real effect of former G.S. 30-3 was to allow a spouse who left a child or other lineal descendant by a previous marriage but none by the spouse who survived him more testamentary freedom than he would have had otherwise. It was not for the Court of Appeals to "second guess" the General Assembly on the wisdom of this distinction. The court believed the statute was enacted in good faith and it created a classification based upon real distinctions which were not unreasonable. Vinson v. Chappell, 3 N.C. App. 348, 164 S.E.2d 631 (1968), aff'd, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Establishment of Right When Spouse and Lineal Descendant Survive. — Under prior statutes where the testator was survived by his spouse and a lineal descendant, the right of the surviving spouse to dissent was established by the determination and comparison of two figures: (1) the aggregate value of property passing under the will and outside the will to the surviving spouse; and (2) the intestate share of the surviving spouse. Phillips v. Phillips, 34 N.C. App. 428, 238 S.E.2d 790 (1977), 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

C. Second or Successive Spouse.

Intent of the legislature in enacting former G.S. 30-3(b) was to enable a person who had a child or lineal descendant by a former marriage to make greater provision for such child or lineal descendant. Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

While the legislative purpose of former G.S. 30-3(b) was not entirely clear, it was apparently passed to protect a testator's children by a former marriage against a "fortune-hunting" second or successive spouse. In re Estate of Edwards, 77 N.C. App. 302, 335 S.E.2d 39 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913 (1986).

Former G.S. 30-3(b) was enacted for the protection of a testator's children by a former spouse, on the assumption that a second or successive spouse would not feel as compelled to provide for the stepchildren upon testator's death as would the testator in his will. In re Estate of Edwards, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913, rehearing denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

When Former § 30-3(b) was Applicable. — Former G.S. 30-3(b) was applicable when the decedent was survived by a child or lineal descendant of a former marriage, even if the decedent's will left nothing to such child or lineal descendant. Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Former G.S. 30-3(b) applied to limit the share of a surviving spouse to one half the intestate share only when (1) a married person died testate survived by his spouse, (2) the surviving spouse, being entitled under former G.S. 30-1 to do so, dissented, (3) the surviving spouse was a "second or successive spouse," (4) no lineal descendants by the second or successive marriage survived the testator, and (5) the testator was survived by lineal descendants by his former marriage. Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Facts Not Considered as to Applicability of Former § 30-3(b). — Whether former G.S. 30-3(b) applied did not depend at all upon such considerations as: (1) the comparative durations of the first and second marriage; (2) whether the former marriage was terminated by death or by divorce; (3) the age(s) of the child or children of the former marriage at the time of the second or successive marriage; and (4) the age(s) of the child or children of the former marriage and their financial status at the time of the death of the decedent. Vinson v. Chappell, 275 N.C. 234, 166 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Wife's failure to "join" in her husband's petition for adoption of her two minor children by a previous marriage in no way affected her relationship with the children and was immaterial to a determination of her husband's distributive share under former G.S. 30-3(b). In re Estate of Edwards, 316 N.C. 698, 343 S.E.2d 913, rehearing denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

The right of a "second or successive spouse" to dissent under former G.S. 30-1 was determined by former G.S. 30-1(a)(1) without reference to former G.S. 30-3(b). Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

D. Federal Estate Tax.

Estimate of federal estate tax required by former G.S. 30-1(a) was not an estimate of the actual tax which would be paid on the estate, but rather, an estimate of the tax which would be paid if plaintiff received the share of the "net estate" specified by former G.S. 30-1(a)(1), including any marital deduction the estate would receive as a result of her taking that share. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

For purposes of determining whether a surviving spouse could dissent under former G.S. 30-1, it was an estimation of the federal estate tax which had to be deducted in approximating the "net estate." Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Interest and penalties on federal estate tax were not to be considered when computing the “net estate” for the purpose of determining whether a surviving spouse could dissent under former G.S. 30-1. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

When Dissenting Widow Takes Share Free of Federal Estate Tax. — Under former G.S. 30-1, et seq., the only instance where a surviving wife was allowed to take her distributive share free and clear of the federal estate tax would occur when her husband died testate, leaving no lineal descendants or parents surviving him, and she dissented from his will. Tolson v. Young, 260 N.C. 506, 133 S.E.2d 135 (1963); Adams v. Adams, 261 N.C. 342, 134 S.E.2d 633 (1964).

When Share Taken after Federal Estate Taxes. — Under former G.S. 30-1 et seq., childless widow who dissented from the will of her husband who was survived also by one or more lineal descendants by a former marriage would take her statutory share of the estate computed after the deduction of the federal estate taxes. Tolson v. Young, 260 N.C. 506, 133 S.E.2d 135 (1963).

§ 30-3.2. Definitions.

The following definitions apply in this Article:

- (1) “Code” means the Internal Revenue Code in effect at the time of the decedent’s death.
- (2) “Death taxes” means any estate, inheritance, succession, and similar taxes imposed by any taxing authority, reduced by any applicable credits against those taxes.
- (3) “Nonadverse trustee” means:
 - a. Any person who does not possess a substantial beneficial interest in the trust that would be adversely affected by the exercise or nonexercise of the power that the individual trustee possesses respecting the trust;
 - b. Any person subject to a power of removal by the surviving spouse with or without cause; or
 - c. Any company authorized to engage in trust business under the laws of this State, or that otherwise meets the requirements to engage in trust business under the laws of this State.
- (4) “Total Net Assets” means, after the payment or provision for payment of the decedent’s funeral expenses, year’s allowances to persons other than to the surviving spouse, debts, claims other than an equitable distribution of property awarded to the surviving spouse pursuant to G.S. 50-20 subsequent to the death of the decedent, and administration expenses, the sum of the following:
 - a. All property to which the decedent had legal and equitable title immediately prior to death;
 - b. All property received by the decedent’s personal representative by reason of the decedent’s death, other than wrongful death proceeds;
 - c. One-half of the value of any property held by the decedent and the surviving spouse as tenants by the entirety, or as joint tenants with rights of survivorship;
 - d. The entire value of any interest in property held by the decedent and another person, other than the surviving spouse, as joint tenants with right of survivorship, except to the extent that contribution can be proven by clear and convincing evidence;
 - e. The value of any property which would be included in the taxable estate of the decedent pursuant to sections 2033, 2035, 2036, 2037, 2038, 2039, or 2040 of the Code.
 - f. Any gifts of property made by the decedent to donees other than the surviving spouse within six months of the decedent’s death, excluding:
 1. Any gifts within the annual exclusion provisions of section 2503 of the Code;

2. Any gifts to which the surviving spouse consented. A signing of a deed, or income or gift tax return reporting such gift shall be considered consent; and
3. Any gifts made prior to marriage;
- g. Any proceeds of any individual retirement account, pension or profit-sharing plan, or any private or governmental retirement plan or annuity of which the decedent controlled the designation of beneficiary, excluding any benefits under the federal social security system;
- h. Any other Property Passing to Surviving Spouse under G.S. 30-3.3; and
- i. In case of overlapping application of the same property under more than one provision, the property shall be included only once under the provision yielding the greatest value. (2000-140, s. 92; 2000-178, s. 2; 2001-364, s. 4; 2001-487, s. 16; 2003-296, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2003-296, s. 2, effective January 1, 2004, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date, rewrote subdivision (3); and in subdivision (4)f, substituted “gifts” for “donative transfers.”

§ 30-3.3. Property passing to surviving spouse.

(a) Property Passing to Surviving Spouse. — For purposes of this Article, “Property Passing to Surviving Spouse” means the sum of the following:

- (1) One-half of the value of any interest in property held by the decedent and the surviving spouse as tenants by the entirety or as joint tenants with rights of survivorship;
- (2) The value of any interest in property (outright or in trust, including any interest subject to a general power of appointment held by the surviving spouse, as defined in section 2041 of the Code) devised by the decedent to the surviving spouse, or which passes to the surviving spouse by intestacy, or by beneficiary designation, or by exercise of or in default of the exercise of the decedent’s testamentary general or limited power of appointment, or by operation of law or otherwise by reason of the decedent’s death, excluding any benefits under the federal social security system;
- (3) Any year’s allowance awarded to the surviving spouse;
- (4) The value of any property renounced by the surviving spouse;
- (5) The value of the surviving spouse’s interest, outright or in trust, in any life insurance proceeds on the life of the decedent;
- (6) The value of any interest in property, outright or in trust, transferred from the decedent to the surviving spouse during the lifetime of decedent for which (i) a gift tax return is timely filed reporting such gift, or (ii) the surviving spouse signs a statement acknowledging such a gift. For purposes of this subdivision, any gift to the surviving spouse by the decedent of the decedent’s interest in any property held by the decedent and the surviving spouse as tenants by the entirety or as joint tenants with right of survivorship shall be valued at one-half of the entire value of that interest in property at the time the gift is made;
- (7) Notwithstanding any other provision of law related to valuing a partial interest in property, the entire fair market value of any property held in trust for the exclusive benefit of the surviving spouse during the surviving spouse's lifetime, if the terms of the trust meet the following requirements:

- a. During the lifetime of the surviving spouse, the trust is controlled by one or more Nonadverse Trustees;
- b. The trustee is required to distribute to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse either (i) the entire net income of the trust at least annually; or (ii) the income of the trust in such amounts and at such times as the trustee, in its discretion, determines necessary for the health, maintenance, and support of the surviving spouse;
- c. The trustee is required to distribute to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse out of the principal of the trust such amounts and at such times as the trustee, in its discretion, determines necessary for the health, maintenance, and support of the surviving spouse; and

In exercising discretion, the trustee may be authorized or required to take into consideration all other income, assets, and other means of support as are available to the surviving spouse; and

- (8) The net value of the marital estate awarded to the surviving spouse pursuant to G.S. 50-20 subsequent to the death of the decedent.

(b) Death Taxes. — The value of Property Passing to Surviving Spouse shall be reduced by any death taxes that are a charge against or apportioned against the surviving spouse on property interests included in Property Passing to Surviving Spouse.

(c) No Duplication. — In case of overlapping application of the same property under more than one provision, the property shall be included only once, under the provision yielding the greatest value. (2000-178, s. 2; 2001-364, s. 5; 2003-296, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2003-296, s. 3, effective January 1, 2004, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date, rewrote subdivision (a)(7).

ment, "Death and the Partnership Principle: Interpreting Recent Abatement Amendments to North Carolina's Equitable Distribution Act," see 80 N.C.L. Rev. 1089 (2002).

CASE NOTES

I. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former G.S. 30-1 to 30-3 and corresponding prior provisions, relating to the right to dissent.

Chapter 29 Governs Intestate Share. — The determination of a surviving spouse's intestate share is governed in the first instance by the "Intestate Succession Act," Chapter 29, G.S. 29-1 et seq. Phillips v. Phillips, 34 N.C. App. 428, 238 S.E.2d 790 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

"Intestate share," as used in former G.S. 30-1, means the amount of real and personal property that the surviving spouse would receive under the provisions of Chapter 29, G.S. 29-1 et seq., known as the Intestate Succession Act, if her husband had died intestate. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969); Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

The term "intestate share," as used in former § 30-1(a)(1), was clear and unambiguous. The fact that the legislature provided one criterion for determining whether the right to dissent existed and another for determining the consequences of the dissent created no ambiguity. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

And Would Not Be Defined with References to Consequences of Dissent. — The 1975 amendment which added subdivision (a)(3) of former G.S. 30-1, cases where the surviving spouse is a second or successive spouse and the testator has surviving him lineal descendants by a former marriage and there are no lineal descendants surviving him by the second or successive marriage, did not manifest that the General Assembly's intent that the term "intestate share" in subdivision (a)(1) of the section be defined with reference to the consequences of the dissent. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Year's Allowance Not Part of Intestate Share. — The year's allowance for the surviving spouse under the provisions of G.S. 30-15 is not a part of the "intestate share" passing to a surviving spouse under the provisions of Chapter 29, G.S. 29-1 et seq., known as the Intestate Succession Act. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969).

Nor Is Entirety Property, Insurance, or Joint Accounts with Survivorship. — "Intestate share" does not include any property received by the surviving spouse as a tenant by entirety, or from insurance contracts, or from joint accounts with right of survivorship. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969).

§ 30-3.4. Procedure for determining the elective share.

(a) Exercisable Only During Lifetime. — The right of the surviving spouse to file a claim for an elective share must be exercised during the lifetime of the surviving spouse, by the surviving spouse, the surviving spouse's agent under a power of attorney, or the guardian of the surviving spouse's estate. If a surviving spouse dies before the claim for an elective share has been settled, the surviving spouse's personal representative shall succeed to the surviving spouse's rights to an elective share.

(b) Time Limitations. — A claim for an elective share must be made within six months after the issuance of letters testamentary or letters of administration in connection with the will or intestate proceeding with respect to which the surviving spouse claims the elective share by (i) filing a petition with the clerk of superior court of the county in which the primary administration of the decedent's estate lies, and (ii) mailing or delivering a copy of that petition to the personal representative of the decedent's estate. A surviving spouse's incapacity shall not toll the six-month period of limitations.

(c) Time for Hearing. — Unless waived by the personal representative and the surviving spouse, the clerk shall set the matter for hearing no earlier than two months and no later than six months after the filing of the petition. However, the clerk may extend the time of hearing as the clerk sees fit. The surviving spouse shall give notice of the hearing to the personal representative, and to any person described in G.S. 30-3.5 who may be required to contribute toward the satisfaction of the elective share.

(d) Preparation of Tax Form. — In every case in which a petition to determine an elective share has been filed, and within two months of the filing of the petition, the personal representative shall prepare and submit to the clerk a proposed Form 706, federal estate tax return, for the estate, regardless of whether that form is required to be filed with the Internal Revenue Service. The clerk may extend the time for submission of the proposed Form 706 as the clerk sees fit.

(e) Valuation. — The valuation of interests in property for purposes of G.S. 30-3.2 and G.S. 30-3.3 shall be determined as follows:

- (1) Basic principles. — Each interest shall be valued at its fair market value, reduced by all liens, claims, or encumbrances against the interest. For interests passing at the decedent's death, valuation shall be as of the date of death, and for interests transferred during the decedent's lifetime, valuation shall be as of the date of transfer.
- (2) Valuation of partial and contingent interests in property. — The valuation of interests in property, outright or in trust, which are limited to commence or terminate upon the death of one or more persons, upon the expiration of a period of time, or upon the occurrence of one or more contingencies, shall be determined by computations based upon the mortuary and annuity tables set forth in G.S. 8-46 and G.S. 8-47, and upon the basis of six percent (6%) of the gross value of the underlying property in which those interests are limited. However, in valuing interests passing to the surviving spouse, the following special rules apply:

- a. An interest described in G.S. 30-3.3(a)(7) that shall be valued as if the underlying property or interest passed outright to the surviving spouse unencumbered by any trust;
- b. To the extent that the interest is dependent upon the occurrence of any contingency that is not subject to the control of the surviving spouse and that is not subject to valuation by reference to the mortuary and annuity tables set forth in G.S. 8-46 and G.S. 8-47, the contingency will be conclusively presumed to result in the lowest possible value passing to the surviving spouse. However, a life estate or income interest that will terminate only upon the earlier of the surviving spouse's death or remarriage will be valued without regard to the possibility of termination upon remarriage; and
- c. To the extent that the valuation of an interest is dependent upon the life expectancy of the surviving spouse, that life expectancy shall be conclusively presumed to be no less than 10 years, regardless of the actual attained age of the surviving spouse at the decedent's death.

(3) Determination of fair market value. — The fair market value of each asset comprising Total Net Assets shall be determined as follows:

- a. Probate assets and assets passing to spouse. — The value of each probate asset and Property Passing to Surviving Spouse, other than assets held in trust, shall be established by the good faith agreement of the surviving spouse and the personal representative, unless either (i) the surviving spouse is the personal representative, or (ii) the clerk determines that the personal representative may not be able to represent the estate adversely to the surviving spouse.
- b. Trust assets. — The value of each trust asset shall be established by good faith agreement of the surviving spouse and the trustee, unless either (i) the surviving spouse is the trustee, or (ii) the clerk determines that the trustee may not be able to represent the trust adversely to the surviving spouse.
- c. Other assets. — The value of any other asset shall be established by the good faith agreement of the surviving spouse and each person described in G.S. 30-3.5 who may be required to contribute toward the satisfaction of the elective share because of that person's interest in the asset, unless the clerk determines that valuation under sub-subdivision d. of this subdivision is more appropriate.
- d. Use of disinterested persons. — If the value of any asset is not established by agreement, the clerk shall appoint one or more qualified and disinterested persons to determine a value of each asset. That determination of the value of an asset shall be final for the exclusive purposes of this Article.

(f) Findings and Conclusions. — After notice and hearing, the clerk shall determine whether or not the surviving spouse is entitled to an elective share, and if so, the clerk shall then determine the elective share and shall order the personal representative to transfer that amount to the surviving spouse. The clerk's order shall recite specific findings of fact and conclusions of law in arriving at the decedent's Total Net Assets, Property Passing to Surviving Spouse, and the elective share.

(g) Appeals. — Any party in interest may appeal from the decision of the clerk to the superior court. If an appeal is taken from the decision of the clerk, that appeal shall have the effect of staying the judgment and order of the clerk until the cause is heard and determined by the superior court upon the appeal taken. Upon an appeal taken from the clerk to the superior court, the judge may review the findings of fact by the clerk and may find the facts or take other evidence, but the facts found by the judge shall be final and conclusive upon any appeal to the Appellate Division. (2000-178, s. 2; 2003-296, s. 4.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2003-296, s. 4, effective January 1, 2004, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date, in subsection (b), inserted “in connection with the will or intestate proceeding with respect to which the surviving spouse claims the effective share” following “letters of administration”; and rewrote subdivision (e)(2)a.

I. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

A. In General.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former G.S. 30-1 to 30-3 and corresponding prior provisions, relating to the right to dissent.

Legislative Policy. — Former G.S. 30-2(b), relating to how and by whom dissent could be given, was an expression of legislative policy which the Court of Appeals would not vitiate. In re Estate of Burleson, 24 N.C. App. 136, 210 S.E.2d 114 (1974).

The legislature has created a two-step process to be used when a surviving spouse attempts to dissent from a deceased spouse's will (claim an elective share): the first step is to determine if the surviving spouse has the right to dissent (to claim an elective share), and the second step is to determine the consequences. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990); Funk v. Masten, 121 N.C. App. 364, 465 S.E.2d 322 (1996).

Widow Required to Comply with Statute. — Although a will gave a widow nothing, she was nevertheless required to comply with former section. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Willis, 257 N.C. 59, 125 S.E.2d 359 (1962).

Dissent signed by a subscribing witness did not comply with former § 30-2(b). In re Estate of Burleson, 24 N.C. App. 136, 210 S.E.2d 114 (1974).

To hold that the signature by a subscribing witness satisfied the acknowledgment required by former G.S. 30-2(b) would constitute judicial repeal of the 1959 amendment of that section, which provided for acknowledgment of dissents. In re Estate of Burleson, 24 N.C. App. 136, 210 S.E.2d 114 (1974).

The guardian of an incompetent widow was authorized to file a dissent by him from his wife's will under former G.S. 30-2. Fullam v. Brock, 271 N.C. 145, 155 S.E.2d 737 (1967).

Filing Creates Vested Right. — The timely and correct filing of a proper dissent under former G.S. 30-1 et seq. constituted an exercise of the right to dissent and created a vested property right in the dissenting spouse. Tighe v. Michal, 41 N.C. App. 15, 254 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

The dissenting spouse, upon filing dissent to the will under former G.S. 30-1 et seq., became vested, eo instanti, as of the date of the testator's death, with title to the intestate share of the testator's realty which was allowed by the statutes providing therefor. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 41 N.C. App. 44, 255 S.E.2d 729 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 735, 267 S.E.2d 660 (1980).

Prompt Determination of Right. — The legislature intended for the right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1 et seq. to be determined as quickly as possible after the dissent was filed. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Sufficiency of Marital Trust. — Where under the terms of a trust established for his wife by the testator, the trustee was required to fund the trust with assets which would give wife a life income the value of which (when added to the value of other assets passing to wife under and outside the will) would be equal to her intestate share, and there were no allegations or evidence that the assets of the estate were insufficient to meet this requirement, the marital trust established for wife was not insufficient, as a matter of law, to defeat her right of dissent under former law. In re Estate of Finch, 97 N.C. App. 489, 389 S.E.2d 126 (1990).

Surviving Spouse Held to Have No Right to Dissent. — Under prior statutes, where surviving spouse under will received all of his deceased wife's personal property and, outside the will, received real property owned by the entreties, which was all the real property, he had no right to dissent, because he received everything that he would have received had his wife died without a will. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Notice to Executor of Intentions of Dissenting Spouse. — The giving of notice of dissent to the clerk of superior court under former G.S. 30-2(a) was sufficient to alert the executor with respect to the intentions of the dissenting spouse and afford him ample opportunity to prepare for a hearing on the question of the spouse's statutory right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1. In re Estate of Kirkman, 38 N.C. App. 515, 248 S.E.2d 438 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 584, 254 S.E.2d 31 (1979).

Duty of Clerk to Record Filing. — While former G.S. 30-2 merely required filing of dissent, it was the duty of the clerk to record the dissent when filed. Philbrick v. Young, 255 N.C. 737, 122 S.E.2d 725 (1961).

Effect of Recording. — Recording creates the presumption that the instrument was the act of the widow done in the time and manner required by law. Philbrick v. Young, 255 N.C. 737, 122 S.E.2d 725 (1961).

B. Time Limitations.

Former § 30-2 was a statute of limitation, not an enabling statute. The period provided a widow to dissent from her husband's will was not a condition precedent to that right, but merely limited the time in which she could resort to the courts to enforce it. Whitted v. Wade, 247 N.C. 81, 100 S.E.2d 263 (1957); Taylor v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

Former G.S. 30-2 was a statute of limitations. It extinguished no right, but limited the time in which a widow could enforce the right the law gave her to participate in her husband's estate. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Willis, 257 N.C. 59, 125 S.E.2d 359 (1962).

Filing Procedure Not Determinative of Right. — The filing procedure prescribed by former G.S. 30-3.4(a) was merely a limitation on the time within which a surviving spouse had to note her dissent of record. It was not conditioned upon or determinative of the right to dissent, which might not be established until some later date. 292 N.C. 729, 235 S.E.2d 783 (1977); Phillips v. Phillips, 34 N.C. App. 428, 238 S.E.2d 790 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Effect of Failure to File Within Time Specified. — Failure to dissent under former G.S. 30-2 within the time specified did not extinguish the right, it simply barred the action therefor. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

Time as to When Right Would Arise. — Although a surviving spouse's right to dissent under prior statutes could not be established until a mathematical computation of the value of the deceased spouse's estate was made, the right to dissent generally arose as of the date of the death of the deceased spouse or it never arose. Tighe v. Michal, 41 N.C. App. 15, 254 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

The right time, manner and effect of filing and recording a dissent to a will under former G.S. 30-1 were all matters within the probate jurisdiction of the clerk of superior court. In re Estate of Outen, 77 N.C. App. 818, 336 S.E.2d 436 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

To establish the right to dissent, under former G.S. 30-1, a spouse had to make a timely filing, and to show an entitlement to that right. In re Estate of Outen, 77 N.C. App. 818, 336 S.E.2d 436 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

Time Limitations of Six Months. — Former G.S. 30-1 allowed a surviving spouse six months from the probate of the will within which to dissent. Joyce v. Joyce, 260 N.C. 757, 133 S.E.2d 675 (1963).

Time Is to Enable Surviving Spouse to Reach Intelligent Conclusion. — Time is allowed by statute to enable the surviving spouse to make an examination into the value of the estate, the debts and liabilities, and for her to come to an intelligent conclusion as to the course she should pursue under all the circumstances that surround her. Joyce v. Joyce, 260 N.C. 757, 133 S.E.2d 675 (1963).

Statute Tolloed by Disability. — The six-month period of limitation in former G.S. 30-2 for dissenting from a will in probate was a statute of limitations which could be tolled by G.S. 1-17 for a disability. In re Estate of Owens, 117 N.C. App. 118, 450 S.E.2d 2 (1994).

Appointment of Guardian after Six Months. — Where no guardian for an insane widow was appointed within six months after her husband's will was proved, but one was subsequently appointed and he filed a dissent on her behalf on the day he was appointed, the widow was not barred by the statute of limitations in former G.S. 30-2, but could bring the action through a guardian as within three years after the disability was removed pursuant to G.S. 1-17. Whitted v. Wade, 247 N.C. 81, 100 S.E.2d 263 (1957).

Statute Ran Against Insane Widow from Appointment of Guardian. — The statute of limitation provided in former G.S. 30-2 began to run against an insane widow's right to dissent from the date a guardian was appointed. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Willis, 257 N.C. 59, 125 S.E.2d 359 (1962).

Although an insane widow received nothing in the will of her husband, the failure of her guardian to dissent for her within six months of his qualification barred her right of dissent under former G.S. 30-2 at the end of that period. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Willis, 257 N.C. 59, 125 S.E.2d 359 (1962).

When Dissent Timely. — Under former G.S. 30-2, so long as the dissent was filed within six months after the issuance of letters testamentary, or extended pursuant to former G.S. 30-2(a), it was timely, regardless of whether the appraisal had been conducted. In re Estate of Cox, 32 N.C. App. 765, 233 S.E.2d 926, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 729, 235 S.E.2d 783 (1977).

Spouse Must File Within Time Limit Although Right Not Finally Established. — A surviving spouse could and, in fact, had to file her dissent under former G.S. 30-1 within the statutory time period even though her right to dissent was not finally established until after the statutory time period had expired due to the necessity of ascertaining "net estate." Phillips v. Phillips, 34 N.C. App. 428, 238 S.E.2d 790 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

C. Valuation.

Constitutionality of Methods of Determining Values. — The values which must be determined under the statutory procedure can be reasonably ascertained by the use of aids such as tax tables and expert witnesses, and the procedure is not constitutionally invalid. The procedure set forth in former statute did not approach that level of arbitrary governmental action necessary to support a claim of denial of due process. In re Estate of Kirkman, 38 N.C. App. 515, 248 S.E.2d 438 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 584, 254 S.E.2d 31 (1979).

Contributions by Surviving Spouse Excluded. — The plain meaning of former G.S. 30-1 completely excluded any property or interest in property to the extent that the surviving spouse gave, donated, contributed, or paid for it. Funk v. Masten, 126 N.C. App. 529, 485 S.E.2d 890 (1997).

Purposes for Which Established Value Binding under Former Statute. — Any determination and establishment of value made as provided in former G.S. 30-1 was binding only for the purposes of determining whether there was a right of dissent. In re Kirkman, 302 N.C. 164, 273 S.E.2d 712 (1981).

Method for Determining Different Benefits. — Former G.S. 30-1(c) provided a method by which to determine the value of benefits under the will and the benefits in case of intestacy. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Stone, 263 N.C. 384, 139 S.E.2d 573 (1965).

Right Mathematically Determined by

Value of Property. — Former G.S. 30-1 provided that when values were determined as set out therein, they would be final for determining the right of dissent and should be used exclusively for this purpose. No doubt when this legislation was enacted it was contemplated that the right to dissent would be thus mathematically established. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969).

Under former § 30-1, if A equalled the aggregate value of provisions under the will for the benefit of the surviving spouse and B equalled the value of property or interests in property passing in any manner outside the will to the surviving spouse as a result of the death of the testator, and C equalled the net estate of the decedent, then the surviving spouse was entitled to dissent from his wife's will if $A + B$ was less than one-half of C; that is, if $A + B < 1/2(C)$. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Under former G.S. 30-1, statutory scheme contemplated that the surviving spouse's right of dissent would be established by a mathematical computation. Taylor v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

And Right Could Not Be Established Until Property Is Determined and Valued. — In the absence of a determination and valuation of the property passing to the surviving spouse under the will and outside the will as of the date of the death of the deceased spouse as provided by former G.S. 30-1, there could be no proper determination of whether the right to dissent had been established. When the property involved is determined and valued as provided by statute, then the right of dissent can be determined mathematically. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969).

Where the record was bare of any recitation of values necessary to determine if plaintiff could indeed dissent from decedent's will under former G.S. 30-1, and contained no findings or conclusions as to plaintiff's right to dissent, the issue was not ripe for resolution and was nonjusticiable. Funk v. Masten, 121 N.C. App. 364, 465 S.E.2d 322 (1996).

Property Determined and Valued as of Date of Testator's Death. — Former statute, which permitted dissent in certain instances, also required that the property involved be determined and valued as of the date of death of the testator. The procedure was mandatory. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969).

Determination Made from Net, Not Gross, Estate. — Former G.S. 30-1(c) did not require the intestate share to be determined, for purposes of establishing the right to dissent, from decedent's gross estate valued as of the date of his death rather than from net estate. Phillips v. Phillips, 34 N.C. App. 428, 238 S.E.2d 790 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 296

N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

In establishing the right of a surviving spouse to dissent pursuant to former G.S. 30-1(a)(1), the determination of intestate share would be based on the value of the decedent's net estate, as provided in Chapter 29, G.S. 29-1 et seq. Phillips v. Phillips, 34 N.C. App. 428, 238 S.E.2d 790 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Computation of Net Estate. — To ascertain "net estate" under G.S. 29-2(5), it is necessary to subtract from the value of the gross estate, "family allowances, costs of administration, and all lawful claims against the estate." Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Since the intestate share of any surviving spouse, or other heir, is ordinarily a percentage of the decedent's net estate, for purposes of former G.S. 30-1, the amount of the net estate had to be determined within limits which would permit the court to ascertain with substantial accuracy whether the value of the intestate share of the surviving spouse was less or greater than the value of the property passing to her in and outside the will. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Value Seldom Determined with Complete Accuracy Prior to Final Account. — Prior to the time the personal representative files his final account, it will seldom, if ever, be possible to determine with complete accuracy the value of the testator's net estate and the intestate share of the surviving spouse. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Estimating Value of Net Estate. — Under former G.S. 30-1, the right to dissent was to be determined by the clerk whenever, in his judgment, the value of the "net estate" could be estimated with reasonable accuracy, rather than such time as the actual value of the net estate could be ascertained, i.e., at the time of distribution. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Property Owned as Tenants by Entirety. — Under former G.S. 30-1, the value of real property owned by couple as tenants by the entirety was not to be included in testatrix's net estate. In re Estate of Francis, 94 N.C. App. 744, 381 S.E.2d 484, rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Real property held as tenants by the entirety could not be included in net estate for purposes of determining right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

For purposes of former G.S. 30-1, real property owned by the entireties was included in the value of property passing to surviving spouse outside the will as a result of the death of the testator. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Funds held by testator-spouse in joint tenancy with right of survivorship with third party established pursuant to G.S. 41-2.1(a) did not become part of testator-spouse's net estate for purposes of former G.S. 30-1. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Listing Survivorship Accounts on 90-Day Inventory Did Not Make Those Accounts Part of Net Estate. — Fact that executrix listed one-half of funds in survivorship accounts on 90-day inventory to comply with G.S. 41-2.1(b)(3) and (b)(4) did not make the funds part of the net estate for purposes of determining her right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Bank Account Held as Joint Tenants. — Where testatrix retained complete control over the assets of the bank account held by herself and her husband as joint tenants with right of survivorship until the moment of her death, public policy expressed in the former dissent statutes would be served by including in the net estate for purposes of the dissent statute the value of the bank accounts. In re Estate of Francis, 94 N.C. App. 744, 381 S.E.2d 484, rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Property Given or Paid for by Surviving Spouse. — The plain meaning of former G.S. 30-1 completely excluded any property or interest in property to the extent that the surviving spouse gave, donated, contributed, or paid for it. Once the property was excluded, no other valuation as to that specific property could be made. Funk v. Masten, 126 N.C. App. 529, 485 S.E.2d 890 (1997).

Property Held as Tenants by Entirety and Paid for by Surviving Spouse. — For purposes of calculating the surviving spouse's right to dissent (right to claim an elective share), none of the value of the property owned as tenants by the entirety could be included in the value of property passing outside the will to the surviving spouse when the surviving spouse contributed the total purchase price of the property. Funk v. Masten, 126 N.C. App. 529, 485 S.E.2d 890 (1997).

Federal estate tax was a "lawful claim" against testator's estate, for purposes of former G.S. 30-1 and the widow's intestate share of the estate was to be computed after its deduction. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Variance between Valuations and Ultimate Distributive Share. — The language of former G.S. 30-1(c), which established a valuation procedure for the purpose of establishing the right of dissent and mandated that the value so determined be used exclusively for that purpose, indicated that the General Assembly anticipated a variance between this valuation and the ultimate distributive share.

Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Clerk's Approval of Valuation Required.

— To establish her entitlement to the right of dissent under former G.S. 30-1, surviving spouse was required to obtain the clerk's approval of the value of the property passing to her under and outside her husband's will as of the date of his death. Greene v. Lynch, 51 N.C. App. 665, 277 S.E.2d 454 (1981).

Agreement as to Valuation. — Under former G.S. 30-1, absent a showing that the parties failed to act in an arm's length manner, or that the rights of creditors of the estate would be adversely affected thereby, it was proper for the clerk ought to abide by an agreement as to the valuation of the estate and the testate and intestate shares thereof. Taylor v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

Agreement Between Personal Representative and Dissenting Spouse as to Net

Estate. — Where the testator's personal representative and the dissenting spouse, dealing at arm's length, were able to agree upon the value of the "net estate," the clerk or the court would ordinarily abide by this agreement in determining the right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1. Phillips v. Phillips, 296 N.C. 590, 252 S.E.2d 761 (1979).

Compliance with Statute. — Where plaintiff filed a dissent to her late husband's will, pursuant to former G.S. 30-1, and the administrator with the will annexed and the other devisees under the will implicitly assented to the wife's valuation of the estate and her testate and intestate shares thereof by conceding her right to dissent from the will, the parties complied with the provisions of former G.S. 30-1(c) with respect to an agreement as to valuation except for procuring the approval of the clerk of their valuation. Taylor v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

§ 30-3.5. Recovery of assets by personal representative.

(a) Recovery of Assets. — The personal representative is entitled to recover proportionately from all persons, other than the surviving spouse, receiving or in possession of any of the decedent's Total Net Assets a sufficient amount to enable the personal representative to pay the elective share. The apportionment shall be made in the proportion that the value of the interest of each person receiving or in possession of any of Total Net Assets bears to Total Net Assets, excluding any Property Passing to Surviving Spouse. The only persons subject to contribution to make up the elective share are (i) original recipients of property comprising the decedent's Total Net Assets, and subsequent gratuitous inter vivos donees or persons claiming by testate or intestate succession to the extent those persons have the property or its proceeds on or after the date of decedent's death, and (ii) a fiduciary, as to the property under the fiduciary's control at or after the time a fiduciary receives notice that a surviving spouse has claimed an elective share. A fiduciary shall not be considered to have notice until it receives notice at its address as shown in the decedent's estate papers in the clerk's office or, if there are no such papers or no such address is shown in those papers, at the fiduciary's residence or the office of its registered agent.

The personal representative may withhold from any property of the decedent in his possession, distributable to any person subject to apportionment, the amount of the elective share apportioned to such person. If the property in possession of the personal representative and distributable to any person subject to apportionment is insufficient to satisfy the proportionate amount of the elective share determined to be due from that person, the personal representative may recover the deficiency from that person. If the property is not in possession of the personal representative, the personal representative may recover from the person the amount of the elective share apportioned to that person in accordance with this Article. If the personal representative cannot reasonably collect from any person subject to apportionment the amount of the elective share apportioned to that person, the amount not reasonably recoverable shall, with the approval of the clerk, be apportioned among the other persons who are subject to apportionment. The apportionment shall be made in the proportion that the value of the interest of each remaining person bears to the total value of the interests of all remaining persons.

(b) Standstill Order. — After the filing of the petition demanding an elective share, either the personal representative or surviving spouse may request the clerk to issue an order that any recipients not dispose of any of the decedent's Total Net Assets pending the hearing. The decision to issue such an order shall be in the discretion of the clerk.

(c) Satisfaction of Liability. — A person receiving or in possession of any of the decedent's Total Net Assets may pay his proportionate elective share liability with respect to that property by any of the following methods:

- (1) Conveyance of the property included in the decedent's Total Net Assets;
- (2) Payment of the value of his liability in cash or, upon agreement of the surviving spouse, other property; or
- (3) Partial conveyance and partial payment under subdivisions (1) and (2) of this subsection, provided the value conveyed and paid is equal to his liability.

(d) Expenses. — The expenses reasonably incurred by the personal representative in connection with the appraisal or recovery of assets shall be apportioned as provided for the elective share under this Article. If the personal representative finds that it is inequitable to apportion the expenses because those expenses were incurred because of the fault of one or more persons subject to apportionment, the personal representative may direct other more equitable apportionment, with the approval of the clerk.

(e) Bond. — If property held by the personal representative is distributed prior to final apportionment of the elective share, the personal representative may require the distributee to provide a bond or other security for the apportionment liability in the form and amount prescribed by the personal representative, with the approval of the clerk. (2000-178, s. 2.)

I. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former G.S. 30-1 to 30-3 and corresponding prior provisions, relating to the right to dissent.

Allocation so as to Cause Least Disruption of Decedent's Plan. — When a surviving spouse dissented from a will under former G.S. 30-1 et seq., the intestate share was to be allocated so as to cause the least possible disruption of the decedent's plan for the distribution of his estate. Insofar as possible the beneficiaries of the will were to receive the property testatrix intended for them to receive. In re Estate of Etheridge, 33 N.C. App. 585, 235 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 253, 237 S.E.2d 535 (1977).

Property from Which General Legacies Come as Asset. — When the property from which general legacies must come provides income, it is a general asset of the estate subject to the payment of debts and disposition under the terms of the will; hence, under former G.S. 30-1 et seq., where a widow dissented, it would be proportionately distributed to her under the applicable statute. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

§ 30-3.6. Waiver of rights.

(a) The right of a surviving spouse to claim an elective share may be waived, wholly or partially, before or after marriage, with or without consideration, by a written waiver signed by the surviving spouse.

(b) A waiver is not enforceable if the surviving spouse proves that:

- (1) The waiver was not executed voluntarily; or
- (2) The surviving spouse was not provided a fair and reasonable disclosure of the property and financial obligations of the decedent, unless the surviving spouse waived, in writing, the right to that disclosure.

(c) A written waiver that would have been effective to waive a spouse's right to dissent in estates of decedents dying on or before December 31, 2000, under Article 1 of Chapter 30 of the General Statutes is effective to waive that spouse's right of elective share under this Article for estates of decedent's dying on or after January 1, 2001. (2000-178, s. 2; 2003-296, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2003-296, s. 5, effective July 4, 2003, added subsection (c).

I. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former G.S. 30-1 to 30-3 and corresponding prior provisions, relating to the right to dissent.

Family settlement agreements are favored by the law; however, such an agreement is invalid unless all who receive under the will join in the agreement. In re Estate of Outen, 77 N.C. App. 818, 336 S.E.2d 436 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

Alleged agreement between widow and estate was not a "family settlement agreement," where it was never executed by all of the beneficiaries under the will. In re Estate of Outen, 77 N.C. App. 818, 336 S.E.2d 436 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

Release of Right Held Effective. — Although husband's release did not enumerate the statutory right to dissent under former G.S. 30-1, where it did release "all rights or claims of curtesy, inheritance, descent, and distribution and all other rights or claims growing out of the marital relationship between the parties ... [and] all rights in the estate of the said wife, real, personal and mixed, now owned or hereafter acquired by her," this full and final settlement of such rights encompassed the unenumerated statutory right of dissent under former statute. In re Estate of Tucci, 94 N.C. App. 428, 380 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied as to additional issues, 325 N.C. 271, 384 S.E.2d 514 (1989), aff'd, 326 N.C. 359, 388 S.E.2d 768 (1990).

Release Held Not Rescinded by Resumption of Cohabitation. — Where husband and wife's combined separation agreement and property settlement expressly provided that in the event of resumption of cohabitation by the parties the separation agreement and property settlement would remain in full force and effect, and there was no other evidence of rescission, the couple's reconciliation prior to the wife's death did not imply a rescission of husband's release of his right to dissent under former section. In re Estate of Tucci, 94 N.C. App. 428, 380 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied as to additional issues, 325 N.C. 271, 384 S.E.2d 514 (1989), aff'd, 326 N.C. 359, 388 S.E.2d 768 (1990).

ARTICLE 4.

Year's Allowance.

Part 1. Nature of Allowance.

§ 30-15. When spouse entitled to allowance.

Every surviving spouse of an intestate or of a testator, whether or not he has petitioned for an elective share, shall, unless he has forfeited his right thereto, as provided by law, be entitled, out of the personal property of the deceased spouse, to an allowance of the value of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) for his support for one year after the death of the deceased spouse. Such allowance shall be exempt from any lien, by judgment or execution, acquired against the property of the deceased spouse, and shall, in cases of testacy, be charged against the share of the surviving spouse. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 81; 1871-2, c. 193, s. 44; 1880, c. 42; Code, s. 2116; 1889, c. 499, s. 2; Rev., s. 3091; C.S., s. 4108; 1953, c. 913, s. 1; 1961, c. 316, s. 1; c. 749, s. 1; 1969, c. 14; 1981, c. 413, s. 1; 1995, c. 262, s. 4; 2000-178, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Purely Statutory Right. — The right of a widow to a year's support is purely statutory. Broadnax v. Broadnax, 160 N.C. 432, 76 S.E. 216 (1912). See Drewry v. Raleigh Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 173 N.C. 664, 92 S.E. 593 (1917); Jones v. Callahan, 242 N.C. 566, 89 S.E.2d 111 (1955); Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

If the wife dies intestate, the husband has the same right as a widow. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

Under this section as rewritten, for the first time in our law a husband may be entitled to a year's allowance. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

Allowance Is Not "Intestate Share". — The year's allowance for the surviving spouse under the provisions of this section is not a part of the "intestate share" passing to a surviving spouse under the provisions of Chapter 29 of the General Statutes, known as the Intestate Succession Act. In re Estate of Connor, 5 N.C. App. 228, 168 S.E.2d 245 (1969).

A widow who has dissented from her husband's will takes her year's allowance in addition to her statutory share in his estate. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

The phrase "and shall, in cases of testacy, be charged against the share of the surviving spouse," refers only to the share of a widow who takes in accordance with the will and has not dissented from it. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Melvin, 259 N.C. 255, 130 S.E.2d 387 (1963).

Priority over Creditors. — The widow is given her right to a year's support against all general creditors, but no better title to the property assigned her than her husband had. She is entitled to her year's allowance in preference to the special lien acquired by an execution bearing teste prior to the husband's death. In regard to other liens and equities, she takes the property in the same manner and plight in which her husband held it. Williams v. Jones, 95 N.C. 504 (1886).

Widow's priority extends over funeral expenses and costs of administration. Denton v. Tyson, 118 N.C. 542, 24 S.E. 116 (1896).

Mortgage Registered after Husband's Death. — Where a husband mortgaged a horse, but the mortgage was not registered until after his death, and prior to its registration the horse was assigned to the widow as a part of her year's support, it was held that the widow took the property subject to the mortgage lien. Williams v. Jones, 95 N.C. 504 (1886); Coastal Sales Co. v. Weston, 245 N.C. 621, 97 S.E.2d 267 (1957).

Will Cannot Deprive Surviving Spouse of Allowance. — The General Assembly did not intend that if the testator left a will under the terms of which the surviving spouse received nothing from his personal property, that the spouse was deprived of an allowance. In re Estate of Brown, 40 N.C. App. 61, 251 S.E.2d 905 (1979).

The General Assembly did not intend that if the deceased left a will under the terms of which the surviving spouse received only what she would have received by law as her own property, that the surviving spouse is deprived of an allowance from the deceased's personal property. In re Estate of Brown, 40 N.C. App. 61, 251 S.E.2d 905 (1979).

Where the decedent left a will under the terms of which his surviving spouse did not receive any legacy from his personal property, she could take her allowance out of his personal property, which would not include the proceeds from an insurance policy or her share of a joint bank account. In re Estate of Brown, 40 N.C. App. 61, 251 S.E.2d 905 (1979).

Proceeds from Joint Bank Account Are Not Personal Property of Decedent. — Proceeds from a joint bank account were paid to a surviving spouse under the terms of the contract setting up the account, and were her property and not the "personal property of the deceased spouse." In re Estate of Brown, 40 N.C. App. 61, 251 S.E.2d 905 (1979).

Proceeds from Insurance Policy Are Not Personal Property of Decedent. — Proceeds from an insurance policy were paid to a surviving spouse in accordance with her rights under the insurance contract, and was not the "personal property of the deceased spouse." In re Estate of Brown, 40 N.C. App. 61, 251 S.E.2d 905 (1979).

Award under Will as Estoppel. — Where the widow and the executor by mutual consent selected three men to lay off to the widow her year's support, provided for her in the husband's will, which was done, and both parties assented to the report in writing, it was held that the widow in the absence of fraud and undue influence was estopped by the award and cannot maintain a proceeding under this section. Flippin v. Flippin, 117 N.C. 376, 23 S.E. 321 (1895).

Antenuptial Contract as a Bar. — A widow is barred from recovering a year's support by an antenuptial contract relinquishing all claim to any property of her husband. Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 86, 45 S.E. 465 (1903); In re Estate of Cline, 103 N.C. App. 83, 404 S.E.2d 178 (1991).

The portion of a judgment awarding widow a year's allowance and life estate in the marital home was vacated, and the portion of the judgment awarding plaintiff spousal support during deceased husband's incompetency up to the date of his death was affirmed, where prior to marriage, husband and wife entered into an agreement whereby each reciprocally released, renounced and quitclaimed any interest acquired by virtue of the marriage in and to any real or personal property then owned or thereafter acquired, and specifically renounced and disclaimed any right to inherit or participate in the distribution of any real and personal property of the other spouse. In re Estate of Cline, 103 N.C. App. 83, 404 S.E.2d 178 (1991).

Any or all of the marital rights under this section may be surrendered by a properly drawn separation agreement complying with the requirements of former G.S. 52-6. Lane v. Scarborough, 19 N.C. App. 32, 198 S.E.2d 45, rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 407, 200 S.E.2d 622 (1973).

When Husband Dies a Citizen of Another State. — It has been held that the widow of a man who dies a citizen of another state is not entitled to a year's support out of the assets of the decedent in this State, and the fact that she became a citizen of this State after her husband's death is immaterial, since her relations to the estate and her right to share in it are fixed at the intestate's death, and by the laws of his domicile. Simpson v. Cureton, 97 N.C. 112, 2 S.E. 668 (1887). See Medley v. Dunlap, 90 N.C. 527 (1884).

A widow whose husband died domiciled in another state is entitled to her year's support in this State in which there is a fund due her husband, if the widow is a bona fide resident in the State. The reason given for this ruling is that the fiction of personal property being considered as belonging to the domicile of the owner applies only to the distribution of the assets of the one deceased, and has no application to payment of debts, legacies, costs of administration, etc. Jones v. Layne, 144 N.C. 600, 57 S.E. 372 (1907). See also Moye v. May, 43 N.C. 131 (1851), petition to rehear dismissed, 54 N.C. 84 (1853); Kimball v. Deming, 27 N.C. 418 (1845); In re Hayes, 112 N.C. 76, 16 S.E. 904 (1893).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Widow Who Moved to State after Husband's Death Not Entitled to Allowance. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable

Fred Proffitt, Clerk of Superior Court, Yancey County, 40 N.C.A.G. 35 (1969).

§ 30-16. Duty of personal representative, magistrate, or clerk to assign allowance.

It shall be the duty of every administrator, collector, or executor of a will, on application in writing, signed by the surviving spouse, at any time within one year after the death of the deceased spouse, to assign to the surviving spouse the year's allowance as provided in this Article.

If there shall be no administration, or if the personal representative shall fail or refuse to apply to a magistrate or clerk of court, as provided in G.S. 30-20, for 10 days after the surviving spouse has filed the aforesaid application, or if the surviving spouse is the personal representative, the surviving spouse may make application to the magistrate or clerk, and it shall be the duty of the magistrate or clerk to proceed in the same manner as though the application had been made by the personal representative.

Where any personal property of the deceased spouse shall be located outside the township or county where the deceased spouse resided at the time of his death, the personal representative or the surviving spouse may apply to any magistrate or to any clerk of court of any township or county where such personal property is located, and it shall be the duty of such magistrate or clerk to assign the year's allowance as if the deceased spouse had resided and died in that township. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 12; 1870-1, c. 263; Code, ss. 2120, 2122; 1889, cc. 496, 531; 1891, c. 13; Rev., ss. 3096, 3098; C.S., ss. 4113, 4115; 1961, c. 749, s. 2; 1971, c. 528, s. 21; 1997-310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Widow's Allowance Is Terminable. — The administrator is only under a duty to assign the year's allowance upon written application of the widow, signed by her, and within one year from the decedent's death and if these requirements are not met, there is no duty to assign the allowance; therefore, it is terminable. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. United States, 234 F. Supp. 897 (M.D.N.C. 1964).

Therefore Not Part of Marital Deduction for Estate Tax Purposes. — The widow's year's allowance being terminable is not part of the marital deduction for estate tax purposes. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. United States, 234 F. Supp. 897 (M.D.N.C. 1964).

Next Friend as Representative of Minor Widow. — In dissenting from her husband's will and applying for a year's allowance, the widow, being a minor without guardian, may be represented by a next friend, duly appointed. Hollomon v. Hollomon, 125 N.C. 29, 34 S.E. 99 (1899).

§ 30-17. When children entitled to an allowance.

Whenever any parent dies leaving any child under the age of 18 years, including an adopted child or a child with whom the widow may be pregnant at the death of her husband, or a child who is less than 22 years of age and is a full-time student in any educational institution, or a child under 21 years of age who has been declared mentally incompetent, or a child under 21 years of age who is totally disabled, or any other person under the age of 18 years residing with the deceased parent at the time of death to whom the deceased parent or the surviving parent stood in loco parentis, every such child shall be entitled, besides its share of the estate of such deceased parent, to an allowance of two thousand dollars ($2,000) for its support for the year next ensuing the death of such parent, less, however, the value of any articles consumed by said child since the death of said parent. Such allowance shall be exempt from any lien by judgment or execution against the property of such parent. The personal representative of the deceased parent, within one year after the parent's death, shall assign to every such child the allowance herein provided for; but if there is no personal representative or if he fails or refuses to act within 10 days after written request by a guardian or next friend on behalf of such child, the allowance may be assigned by a magistrate or clerk of court upon application of said guardian or next friend.

If the child resides with the widow of the deceased parent at the time such allowance is paid, the allowance shall be paid to said widow for the benefit of said child. If the child resides with its surviving parent who is other than the widow of the deceased parent, such allowance shall be paid to said surviving parent for the use and benefit of such child, regardless of whether the deceased died testate or intestate or whether the widow dissented from the will. Provided, however, the allowance shall not be available to an illegitimate child of a deceased father, unless such deceased father shall have recognized the paternity of such illegitimate child by deed, will or other paper-writing. If the child does not reside with a parent when the allowance is paid, it shall be paid to its general guardian, if any, and if none, to the clerk of the superior court who shall receive and disburse same for the benefit of such child. (1889, c. 496; Rev., s. 3094; C.S., s. 4111; 1939, c. 396; 1953, c. 913, s. 2; 1961, c. 316, s. 2; c. 749, s. 3; 1969, c. 269; 1971, c. 528, s. 22; 1973, c. 1411; 1975, c. 259; 1981, c. 413, s. 2; c. 599, s. 7; 1995, c. 262, s. 5; 1997-310, s. 2.)

Section Has Reference Only to Estate of Intestate or to Where Widow Dissents. — This section, by its terms, its history, and when considered with the other provisions of this Article, has reference only to the estate of an intestate or at most to an estate where the widow dissents from the will. Jones v. Callahan, 242 N.C. 566, 89 S.E.2d 111 (1955).

Part 2. Assigned by Magistrate or Clerk.

§ 30-19. Value of property ascertained.

The value of the personal property assigned to the surviving spouse and children shall be ascertained by a magistrate or the clerk of court of the county in which administration was granted or the will probated. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 13; Code, s. 2121; Rev., s. 3097; C.S., s. 4114; 1961, c. 749, s. 5; 1971, c. 528, s. 22; 1989, c. 11, s. 1; 1997-310, s. 3.)

§ 30-20. Procedure for assignment.

Upon the application of the surviving spouse, a child by his guardian or next friend, or the personal representative of the deceased, the clerk of superior court of the county in which the deceased resided may assign the inquiry to a magistrate of the county. The clerk of court, or magistrate upon assignment, shall ascertain the person or persons entitled to an allowance according to the provisions of this Article, and determine the money or other personal property of the estate, and pay over to or assign to the surviving spouse and to the children, if any, so much thereof as they shall be entitled to as provided in this Article. Any deficiencies shall be made up from any of the personal property of the deceased, and if the personal property of the estate shall be insufficient to satisfy such allowance, the clerk of the superior court shall enter judgment against the personal representative for the amount of such deficiency, to be paid when a sufficiency of such assets shall come into his hands. (1870-1, c. 263; Code, s. 2122; 1891, c. 13; 1899, c. 531; Rev., s. 3098; C.S., s. 4115; 1961, c. 749, s. 6; 1971, c. 528, s. 23; 1989, c. 11, s. 2; 1997-310, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Assignment Does Not Preclude Increase of Allowance. — The assignment of a year's provision under this section does not serve to preclude the widow's right to an increase thereof under G.S. 30-26 et seq. Mann v. Mann, 173 N.C. 20, 91 S.E. 355 (1917).

§ 30-21. Report of clerk or magistrate.

The clerk of court, or magistrate upon assignment, shall make and sign three lists of the money or other personal property assigned to each person, stating their quantity and value, and the deficiency to be paid by the personal representative. Where the allowance is to the surviving spouse, one of these lists shall be delivered to him. Where the allowance is to a child, one of these lists shall be delivered to the surviving parent with whom the child is living; or to the child's guardian or next friend if the child is not living with said surviving parent; or to the child if said child is not living with the surviving parent and has no guardian or next friend. One list shall be delivered to the personal representative. One list shall be returned by the magistrate or clerk, within 20 days after the assignment, to the superior court of the county in which administration was granted or the will probated, and the clerk shall file and record the same, together with any judgment entered pursuant to G.S. 30-20. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 15; Code, s. 2123; Rev., s. 3099; C.S., s. 4116; 1961, c. 749, s. 7; 1971, c. 528, s. 24; 1989, c. 11, s. 3; 1997-310, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Filing of List Mandatory. — The filing and recording of the list of articles (now money or other personal property) allotted to the widow, as her year's support, as required by this section, is essential to its validity, and to the vesting in her of the property or debt allotted to the widow. Kiff v. Kiff, 95 N.C. 71 (1886).

Reasonable Certainty Required. — The allotment to the widow must be made with such reasonable certainty, in regard to the thing allotted, as to indicate what property was intended by the commissioners, otherwise the allotment will be void. Under this principle the item, "labor for 3½ years, $173," was held void. Kiff v. Kiff, 95 N.C. 71 (1886).

§ 30-22: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 528, s. 25.

§ 30-23. Right of appeal.

The personal representative, or the surviving spouse, or child by his guardian or next friend, or any creditor, legatee or heir of the deceased, may appeal from the finding of the magistrate or clerk of court to the superior court of the county, and, within 10 days after the assignment, cite the adverse party to appear before such court on a certain day, not less than five nor exceeding 10 days after the service of the citation. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 16; Code, s. 2124; 1897, c. 442; Rev., s. 3100; C.S., s. 4117; 1961, c. 749, s. 9; 1989, c. 11, s. 4; 1997-310, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Findings Supported by Evidence Not Reviewed. — The findings of the judge in the special proceedings for the allotment of the year's support will not be reviewed on appeal where there is evidence to support such findings. Drewry v. Raleigh Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 173 N.C. 664, 92 S.E. 593 (1917).

Applied in In re Godwin, 17 N.C. App. 365, 194 S.E.2d 204 (1973).

Cited in In re Trogon, 330 N.C. 143, 409 S.E.2d 897 (1991).

§ 30-24. Hearing on appeal.

At or before the day named, the appellant shall file with the clerk a copy of the assignment and a statement of his exceptions thereto, and the issues thereby raised shall be decided de novo. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 17; Code, s. 2125; Rev., s. 3101; C.S., s. 4118; 1989, c. 11, s. 5; 1997-310, s. 3.)

§ 30-25. Personal representative entitled to credit.

Upon the settlement of the accounts of the personal representative, he shall be credited with the articles assigned, and the value of the deficiency assessed as aforesaid, if the same shall have been paid, unless the allowance be impeached for fraud or gross negligence in him. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 18; Code, s. 2126; Rev., s. 3102; C.S., s. 4119; 1997, c. 310, s. 3.)

§ 30-26. When above allowance is in full.

If the estate of a deceased be insolvent, or if his personal estate does not exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000), the allowances for the year's support of the surviving spouse and the children shall not, in any case, exceed the value prescribed in G.S. 30-15 and G.S. 30-17; and the allowances made to them as above prescribed shall preclude them from any further allowances. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 19; Code, s. 2127; Rev., s. 3103; C.S., s. 4120; 1961, c. 749, s. 10; 1981, c. 413, s. 3; 1995, c. 262, s. 6; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 17; 1997-310, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Assignment Does Not Bar Increased Allowance. — The assignment of an allowance to a widow under G.S. 30-20 is not a bar to a subsequent petition for an increased allowance. The very language of the statute plainly indicates that the widow may have a further allowance in addition to the first, if the estate exceeds $2,000. Mann v. Mann, 173 N.C. 20, 91 S.E. 355 (1917).

Part 3. Assigned in Superior Court.

§ 30-27. Surviving spouse or child may apply to superior court.

It shall not, however, be obligatory on a surviving spouse or child to have the support assigned as above prescribed. Without application to the personal representative, the surviving spouse, or the child through his guardian or next friend, may at any time within one year after the decedent's death, apply to the superior court of the county in which administration was granted or the will probated to have a year's support assigned. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 20; Code, s. 2128; Rev., s. 3104; C.S., s. 4121; 1961, c. 749, s. 11.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1978 property law, see 57 N.C.L. Rev. 1103 (1979).

CASE NOTES

Approval of Allowance Less Than Maximum under § 30-31. — Where the superior court found a sum which a widow has agreed to accept to be reasonable and proper, though less than her maximum allowance would have been if calculated under G.S. 30-31, this section gives the court the jurisdiction to make the allowance agreed upon. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Waddell, 234 N.C. 454, 67 S.E.2d 651 (1951).

Irrelevant Allegations in Answer. — Upon petition for allotment of a widow's year's allowance, allegations in the answer to the effect that the widow did not need an allotment for her support, that deceased's will evidenced a desire that the widow should receive no part of the estate, and that defendants were the aged and infirm parents of deceased dependent upon the estate left them by the will, are irrelevant to the issues and could not be shown in evidence, and were properly stricken upon motion, since even the reading of the pleadings would be highly prejudicial to petitioner. Edwards v. Edwards, 230 N.C. 176, 52 S.E.2d 281 (1949).

§ 30-28. Nature of proceeding; parties.

The application shall be by summons, as is prescribed for special proceedings, in which the personal representative of the deceased, if there be one other than the plaintiff, the largest known creditor, or legatee, or some distributee of the deceased, living in the county, shall be made defendant, and the proceedings shall be as prescribed for special proceedings between parties. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 21; Code, s. 2129; Rev., s. 3105; C.S., s. 4122.)

§ 30-29. What complaint must show.

In the complaint the plaintiff shall set forth, besides the facts entitling plaintiff to a year's support and the value of the support claimed, the further facts that the estate of the decedent is not insolvent, and that the personal estate of which he died possessed exceeded ten thousand dollars ($10,000), and also whether or not an allowance has been made to plaintiff and the nature and value thereof. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 22; Code, s. 2130; Rev., s. 3106; C.S., s. 4123; 1961, c. 749, s. 12; 1981, c. 413, s. 4; 1995, c. 262, s. 7.)

§ 30-30. Judgment and order for commissioners.

If the material allegations of the complaint be found true, the judgment shall be that plaintiff is entitled to the relief sought; and the court shall thereupon issue an order to the sheriff or other proper officer of the county, commanding him to summon a magistrate and two persons qualified to act as jurors, who shall determine the money or other personal property of the estate and assign to the plaintiff a sufficiency thereof for plaintiff's support for one year from the decedent's death. Any deficiency shall be made up from any of the personal property of the deceased, and if the personal property of the estate shall be insufficient for such support, the clerk of the superior court shall enter judgment against the personal representative for the amount of such deficiency, to be paid when a sufficiency of such assets shall come into his hands. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 23; Code, s. 2131; Rev., s. 3107; C.S., s. 4124; 1961, c. 749, s. 13; 1971, c. 528, s. 26.)

§ 30-31. Duty of commissioners; amount of allowance.

The said commissioners shall be sworn by the magistrate and shall proceed as prescribed in this Chapter, except that they may assign to the plaintiff a value sufficient for the support of plaintiff according to the estate and condition of the decedent and without regard to the limitations set forth in this Chapter; but the value allowed shall be fixed with due consideration for other persons entitled to allowances for year's support from the decedent's estate; and the total value of all allowances shall not in any case exceed the one half of the average annual net income of the deceased for three years next preceding his death. This report shall be returned by the magistrate to the court. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 24; Code, s. 2132; Rev., s. 3108; C.S., s. 4125; 1971, c. 528, s. 27.)

CASE NOTES

Meaning of Annual Net Income. — The provision of this section that the allowance shall not exceed "the one half of the [average] annual net income of the deceased for three years next preceding his death" means the one half of one year's net income, determined by the average annual income for the three years next preceding the decease, and not one half of the sum total of the annual net income for the three-year period. Holland v. Henson, 189 N.C.

742, 128 S.E. 145 (1925).

"Net income" in this section is not "adjusted gross income," but rather is to be computed after deducting all federal and state income taxes attributable to the income received by the decedent during the three years preceding his death. Pritchard v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 38 N.C. App. 489, 248 S.E.2d 467 (1978).

Net income in this section means "take home pay" or "after-tax income," because this is the only income that is "netted," that is truly available for family support purposes in a real sense, as any employee whose earnings are subject to withholding can testify. Pritchard v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 38 N.C. App. 489, 248 S.E.2d 467 (1978).

Sufficient Allowance to Maintain Standard of Living. — This section is designed to permit the allowance to the surviving spouse of a solvent decedent of an amount sufficient to maintain for a period that standard of living to which he or she had been accustomed, thereby avoiding the hardship which an immediate and drastic reduction in income would entail. Pritchard v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 38 N.C. App. 489, 248 S.E.2d 467 (1978).

The purpose of the larger allowance authorized by this Part appears to be to provide the surviving spouse of a solvent decedent with a level of support commensurate with the support which he or she would have had from the deceased spouse during the first year after the spouse's death had the death not occurred. Pritchard v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 38 N.C. App. 489, 248 S.E.2d 467 (1978).

The legislature by this section intended the widow to receive an allotment not exceeding one half of the income which would probably have been actually received by and available to her deceased husband for the support of his family, had he lived an additional year. Pritchard v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 38 N.C. App. 489, 248 S.E.2d 467 (1978).

Allowance May Be Less Than Prescribed

Maximum. — The formula in this section serves only to calculate the maximum allowance which may be assigned and does not represent an amount which must be assigned. The only requirement laid down by this section is that the allowance be, within the maximum limit specified, "a value sufficient for the support of plaintiff according to the estate and condition of the decedent." In some cases, this amount could be considerably less than the statutorily prescribed maximum. Pritchard v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 38 N.C. App. 489, 248 S.E.2d 467 (1978).

Approval of Allowance Less Than Maximum. — Where the superior court found a sum which a widow has agreed to accept to be reasonable and proper, though less than her maximum allowance would have been if calculated under this section, G.S. 30-27 gives the court the jurisdiction to make the allowance agreed upon. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Waddell, 234 N.C. 454, 67 S.E.2d 651 (1951).

Allowance Sustained Where Discretion Not Abused. — Where the estate of the deceased husband is large and in good condition, and he received a net annual income for three years prior to his death of over $38,500, an allowance of $12,500 for a year's support to his widow with minor son, less the value of the household furniture, is not an abuse of the superior court's discretion which the Supreme Court will review. Drewry v. Raleigh Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 173 N.C. 664, 92 S.E. 593 (1917).

§ 30-32. Exceptions to the report.

The personal representative, or any creditor, distributee or legatee of the deceased, within 10 days after the return of the report, may file exceptions thereto. The plaintiff shall be notified thereof and cited to appear before the court on a certain day, within 20 and not less than 10 days after service of the notice, and answer the same; the case shall thereafter be proceeded in, heard and decided as provided in special proceedings between parties. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 25; Code, s. 2133; Rev., s. 3109; C.S., s. 4126; 1947, c. 484, s. 1.)

§ 30-33. Confirmation of report; execution.

If the report shall be confirmed, the court shall so declare, and execution shall issue to enforce the judgment as in like cases. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 26; Code, s. 2134; Rev., s. 3110; C.S., s. 4127.)

CASE NOTES

Law in this State presumes that every person has sufficient mental capacity to make a valid will, and those persons contesting the will have the burden of proving that the testator lacked the required mental capacity. In re Will of Womack, 53 N.C. App. 221, 280 S.E.2d 494, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 391, 285 S.E.2d 837 (1981).

What Constitutes Sufficient Mental Capacity. — A person has sufficient testamentary capacity within the meaning of the law if he comprehends the natural objects of his bounty, understands the kind, nature, and extent of his property, knows the manner in which he desires his act to take effect, and realizes the effect his act will have upon his estate. In re Will of Womack, 53 N.C. App. 221, 280 S.E.2d 494, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 391, 285 S.E.2d 837 (1981).

Burden of Proving Lack of Mental Ca-capacity. — Wherever one alleges that the maker of a will did not have sufficient mental capacity to make it, then the burden is upon such person to satisfy the jury by the greater weight of the evidence of the truth of his contention and to overcome the presumption of sanity after the formal execution has been established. In re Pridgen's Will, 249 N.C. 509, 107 S.E.2d 160 (1959).

Mere ignorance of a technical statute relating to wills does not evidence a lack of testamentary capacity. In re Will of Farr, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970).

Instruction as to Mental Capacity. — When the court in its charge stated the rule to measure mental capacity in this language: "It is your duty in passing on the mental capacity of M.W. Pridgen to determine with reference to the will in controversy whether when he signed same he had such mental capacity as enabled him to understand the provisions contained in the paper, the extent of the same, and to know that he was giving the property therein bequeathed or devised to the person named therein and that he desired her to have it as written in the paper, to know his relatives and to know and realize that it was his free will and desire that his relatives should not have any property of his other than in the manner devised, or that devised," it was in substance if not verbatim the rule as stated in numerous decisions by the Supreme Court. In re Pridgen's Will, 249 N.C. 509, 107 S.E.2d 160 (1959).

Insane delusion must be distinguished from prejudice, hate, bad judgment, ill will, and any number of other conditions which might be associated with sanity. To be sufficient to invalidate the will, the delusion must have no foundation in fact and must be the product of the testator's diseased or deranged mind. However, to justify the setting aside of a will on the ground that the testatrix was possessed of an insane delusion, it must also be shown that the insane delusion was actually operative in the production of the will. In re Will of Maynard, 64 N.C. App. 211, 307 S.E.2d 416 (1983).

Partial Insanity and Insane Delusion Invalidate Will. — Generally, partial insanity will invalidate a will which is the direct offspring thereof, and a will which is the product of an insane delusion is also invalid for want of testamentary capacity. In re Will of Maynard, 64 N.C. App. 211, 307 S.E.2d 416 (1983).

Insane Delusion as to One of Essentials of Testamentary Capacity. — If a person has sufficient mental ability to make a will but is subject to an insane delusion, i.e., monomania, as to one of the essential requirements of testamentary capacity, the will would not be valid. For example, if the testator has an insane delusion as to the objects of his bounty, it would invalidate his will. In re Will of Maynard, 64 N.C. App. 211, 307 S.E.2d 416 (1983).

Primary object in interpreting a will is to give effect to the intention of the testator. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Presumption Against Intestacy. — It is a long-standing policy of the State of North Carolina to construe a will with the presumption that the testator did not intend to die intestate with respect to any part of his property. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Under earlier prior law it was held that an infant between 21 and 18 could dispose of personal estate by will. Williams' Legatees v. Heirs at Law, 44 N.C. 271 (1853).

As to will executed in another state under prior law, see in In re Reynolds, 206 N.C. 276, 173 S.E. 789 (1934).

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below construe former G.S. 31-3.

Instrument Executed Without Proper Formalities Is Void. — An instrument which is testamentary in effect but does not follow the prescribed formalities for the proper execution of a will is void. Baxter v. Jones, 14 N.C. App. 296, 188 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 621, 190 S.E.2d 465 (1972).

Compliance with Statutory Requirements. — See Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956). See also Little v. Lockman, 49 N.C. 494 (1857); Peace v. Edwards, 170 N.C. 64, 86 S.E. 807 (1915); Wescott v. First & Citizens Nat'l Bank, 227 N.C. 39, 40 S.E.2d 461 (1946); In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948).

Necessity of Animus Testandi. — The distinguishing feature of all genuine testamentary instruments, whatever their form, is that the paper-writing must appear to be written animus testandi. It is essential that it should appear from the character of the instrument, and the circumstances under which it is made, that the testator intended it should operate as his will, or as a codicil to it. In re Perry, 193 N.C. 397, 137 S.E. 145 (1927).

For a memorandum written and signed by the testator to take effect as his will, it must, among other requisites, show that it was made animus testandi, and where the other formalities have been observed, a "pack" of letters containing a note in his favor, with the indorsement written thereon, and signed by him, a long time prior to his death, "I want S.W. have this pack," will not operate either as a valid holograph will or codicil. In re Perry, 193 N.C. 397, 137 S.E. 145 (1927).

Where the animus testandi appears as doubtful the question is for the jury. In re

Will of Harrison, 183 N.C. 457, 111 S.E. 867 (1922).

Otherwise Where Animus Testandi Conclusively Presumed. — Where propounders introduce ample evidence that the paper-writing was in the handwriting of deceased and there is no evidence to the contrary, and the paper-writing is dispositive on its face and unequivocally shows the intention of deceased that it should operate as his will, the animus testandi is conclusively presumed, and it is error for the court to submit the question of such intention to the jury over the objection of propounders. In re Rowland's Will, 206 N.C. 456, 174 S.E. 284 (1934).

Codicil to a Will. — In North Carolina, a codicil to a will must be executed with the same formalities as the will. Consequently, a testamentary instrument that fails to follow the prescribed formalities is void. Leggett v. Rose, 776 F. Supp. 229 (E.D.N.C. 1991).

Writing Drafted from Dictations after Testator's Death. — A paper-writing drafted by an attorney from a stenographer's notes taken from dictation of deceased as to the disposition of her property after death, unsigned and unwitnessed, is not admissible as a last will and testament. Kennedy v. Douglas, 151 N.C. 336, 66 S.E. 216 (1909).

An agreement to adopt a minor and make her his heir, made between the person desiring to adopt the minor and the minor's parents, as the respective parties to the agreement, indicates that the instrument is not intended as a will. Chambers v. Byers, 214 N.C. 373, 199 S.E. 398 (1938).

As to devisability of possibility of reverter before condition broken, see Church v. Young, 130 N.C. 8, 40 S.E. 691 (1902).

§ 31-3.2. Kinds of wills.

(a) Personal property may be bequeathed and real property may be devised by

- (1) An attested written will which complies with the requirements of G.S. 31-3.3, or
- (2) A holographic will which complies with the requirements of G.S. 31-3.4.

(b) Personal property may also be bequeathed by a nuncupative will which complies with the requirements of G.S. 31-3.5. (1953, c. 1098, s. 2.)

§ 31-3.3. Attested written will.

(a) An attested written will is a written will signed by the testator and attested by at least two competent witnesses as provided by this section.

(b) The testator must, with intent to sign the will, do so by signing the will himself or by having someone else in the testator's presence and at his direction sign the testator's name thereon.

(c) The testator must signify to the attesting witnesses that the instrument is his instrument by signing it in their presence or by acknowledging to them his signature previously affixed thereto, either of which may be done before the attesting witnesses separately.

(d) The attesting witnesses must sign the will in the presence of the testator but need not sign in the presence of each other. (1953, c. 1098, s. 2.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below construe former G.S. 31-3.

For a will to be admitted to probate, G.S. 31-18.1(a)(1) requires that the will meet the requirements of this section and that two of the attesting witnesses testify before the court. In re Will of Everhart, 88 N.C. App. 572, 364 S.E.2d 173, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 112, 367 S.E.2d 910 (1988).

In order to prove formal execution of a will by subscribing witnesses, as required by this section, it must appear that the will was signed by the testator or some other person in his presence and by his direction, and subscribed in his presence by at least two witnesses and when the testator does not sign the will in the presence of the witnesses, the signature should be acknowledged by him. In re Will of Franks, 231 N.C. 252, 56 S.E.2d 668 (1949). See In re Morrow's Will, 234 N.C. 365, 67 S.E.2d 279 (1951).

In order to be a valid written will with witnesses, the same should be signed by the testator or some other person in his presence and by his direction, or the signature should be acknowledged by the testator, and subscribed in his presence by at least two witnesses. Watson v. Hinson, 162 N.C. 72, 77 S.E. 1089 (1913).

A codicil must be executed with the same formality as the will. Paul v. Davenport, 217 N.C. 154, 7 S.E.2d 352 (1940); In re Will of King, 80 N.C. App. 471, 342 S.E.2d 394, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 43 (1986).

Testimony Showing Formal Execution of Will. — Testimony of one subscribing witness to the effect that he signed the instrument at the request of testator simultaneously with the testator, and testimony of the other that when he signed same it had already been signed by testator, together with testimony that testator stated to the witnesses that the instrument was his will and requested them to sign same, was held sufficient to show formal execution of the will and to support the charge of the court hereon. In re Will of Franks, 231 N.C. 252, 56 S.E.2d 668 (1949).

Conformance with Statutory Requirements Is Prima Facie Proof. — In a caveat proceeding, proof of the formal execution of an attested will in conformity with the statutory requirements establishes prima facie that the offered document is the will of the testator and is sufficient to allow the jury to find that the document is the will of the testator. In re Will of Cooley, 66 N.C. App. 411, 311 S.E.2d 613 (1984).

Order of Signing and Attestation. — Some authorities hold that everything required to be done by the testator in the execution of a will shall precede in point of time the subscription by the attesting witness, and that if the signature of the latter precede the signing by the testator the will is void. Until the testator has signed, there is no will and nothing to attest. There are eminent authorities, however, which hold that where the signing of the testator and of the witnesses took place at the same time and constituted one transaction, it is immaterial who signed first. In re Baldwin, 146 N.C. 25, 59 S.E. 163 (1907).

Distinction Between Signing and Subscribing. — The authorities make a distinction between statutes requiring instruments to be signed and those requiring them to be subscribed, holding with practical unanimity in reference to the first class, that it is not necessary for the name to appear on any particular part of the instrument, if written with the intent to become bound; and, as to the second class, that the name must be at the end of the instrument. Peace v. Edwards, 170 N.C. 64, 86 S.E. 807 (1915); In re Williams' Will, 234 N.C.

228, 66 S.E.2d 902 (1951), commented on in 30 N.C.L. Rev. 201 (1952).

Undated Will. — The testator's signature to the will is required though it is not required that the paper-writing be subscribed or dated. Therefore an undated will, when the name of the testator, in his own handwriting, appears in the body thereof, has the same legal effect as those bearing dates and subscribed by the testator. Peace v. Edwards, 170 N.C. 64, 86 S.E. 807 (1915).

Where Only One of Inconsistent Wills Dated. — Where the decedent has left several paper-writings purporting to be his last will, containing the opening declaration, as to each, that the testator made the same as his "last will and testament," but only one of them bears date and his name subscribed thereto, and each of them making a disposition of his property different from the other, the undated and unsubscribed wills have the same legal effect as the one dated and subscribed, though the testator had indorsed under his signature, thereon, the words "last will"; and in the absence of proof as to which of the wills was the last one, the legal effect is intestacy. Peace v. Edwards, 170 N.C. 64, 86 S.E. 807 (1915), construing former § 31-3.

Applied in In re Crawford's Will, 246 N.C. 322, 98 S.E.2d 29 (1957); In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

II. SIGNING BY OR FOR TESTATOR.

Signing in Presence of Witnesses Not Necessary. — It is not necessary that testator sign his will in the presence of the attesting witnesses, but if he does not do so he must acknowledge his signature either by acts or conduct. In re Will of Franks, 231 N.C. 252, 56 S.E.2d 668 (1949).

It is not required that testator sign the will in the presence of the attesting witnesses. In re Will of Etheridge, 229 N.C. 280, 49 S.E.2d 480 (1948).

This section does not require the testator to manually sign his will in the presence of the subscribing witnesses, and the validity of the written instrument in this respect will be upheld if the testator produces the will itself, and acknowledges and identifies it and his signature thereto, at the time the witnesses subscribe their names as such. Watson v. Hinson, 162 N.C. 72, 77 S.E. 1089 (1913); In re Fuller's Will, 189 N.C. 509, 127 S.E. 549 (1925).

Name of Testator May Be Signed by Another. — That the name of the testator may be signed to the paper-writing by some other person in his presence and by his direction is expressly authorized by the statute. In re Williams' Will, 234 N.C. 228, 66 S.E.2d 902 (1951), commented on in 30 N.C.L. Rev. 201 (1952).

Signature Made for Testatrix in Her Presence. — An instruction that it was not required that the will should be manually signed by the alleged testatrix if her name was signed thereto by someone in her presence, by her direction, or if such a signature was acknowledged by her as her signature to the instrument presented as her last will, was held correct. In re Will of Johnson, 182 N.C. 522, 109 S.E. 373 (1921).

Assistance to Physically Weak Testator. — Where the testator signified by a nod of his head that the paper writing read to him was his will, and although the testator was severely physically incapacitated, he was mentally alert and able to make known any objection he might have had to the minister signing his name to the will, and this he failed to do; indeed, he placed his hand upon the pen while the minister made his mark, this evidence gives rise to an inference to be resolved by the jury as to whether the will was duly executed according to law. In re Will of Knowles, 11 N.C. App. 155, 180 S.E.2d 394 (1971).

Assistance by Attorney. — Attorney's assisting testator to form his mark and signing testator's name legibly beside each mark did not disqualify him as a witness. In re Will of Jarvis, 334 N.C. 140, 430 S.E.2d 922 (1993).

Evidence that testator made his mark on codicil in the presence of the witnesses indicates that the instrument was his, and is sufficient to imply a request that they attest his signature. In re Will of King, 80 N.C. App. 471, 342 S.E.2d 394, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 43 (1986).

The North Carolina statutes have never required a testator to subscribe his signature to his will. Yount v. Yount, 258 N.C. 236, 128 S.E.2d 613 (1962).

Where a will is written on two or more separate sheets, the statute does not require that they be physically attached or that the signature of the testator appear on each sheet. It is sufficient if the signature of the testator appears in any part of the will. In re Roberts' Will, 251 N.C. 708, 112 S.E.2d 505 (1960); In re Sessoms' Will, 254 N.C. 369, 119 S.E.2d 193 (1961).

III. ATTESTATION BY WITNESSES.

Attestation in Presence of Testator Is Essential. — It is essential that the will be subscribed in the presence of the testator by at least two witnesses. In re Thomas, 111 N.C. 409, 16 S.E. 226 (1892).

If the subscribing witnesses signed a will in a room adjacent to the room in which testator was lying in bed, but the testator was in a position where he did see or could have seen them subscribe their names, the attestation was in compliance with law. In re Pridgen's Will, 249 N.C. 509, 107 S.E.2d 160 (1959).

Witnesses Need Not Sign in Presence of Each Other. — See In re Will of Franks, 231 N.C. 252, 56 S.E.2d 668 (1949). See also Watson v. Hinson, 162 N.C. 72, 77 S.E. 1089 (1913); In re Will of Johnson, 182 N.C. 522, 109 S.E. 373 (1921).

Witnesses are not required to sign in the presence of each other; only in the presence of the testator. In re Long's Will, 257 N.C. 598, 126 S.E.2d 313 (1962).

Where the judge told the jury that if the signatures of the witnesses "were subscribed thereto at the request of the testator and in his presence and in the presence of each other" they would answer the issue of execution of the will "Yes," this was error, and a new trial was required even though all the evidence tended to show that the witnesses did sign in the presence of each other. In re Long's Will, 257 N.C. 598, 126 S.E.2d 313 (1962).

Where witness who signed the will in a location different from the other two witnesses testified and stated in her affidavit that she was a witness to the testator's mark at the request of the testator, who declared the document to be his will, the trial court did not err in finding that witness was an attesting witness. Brickhouse v. Brickhouse, 110 N.C. App. 560, 430 S.E.2d 446 (1993).

The attestation by witnesses must be on the sheet of paper containing the testator's signature, or else upon some paper physically connected with that sheet. In re Baldwin, 146 N.C. 25, 59 S.E. 163 (1907).

Signing of Copy. — When a witness who had properly signed as such, no other witness signing, had the will copied upon different paper in the absence of the testator, signed the copy, left it at the home of the testator with the original, who afterwards procured the due attestation and signature of the other witness on the copy, both of which were found among the papers of the testator after his death, but the original was destroyed, the copy is not valid as a will, and evidence that the first draft was identical with the copy is incompetent, the first witness having signed before the testator, and not in his presence, there being no physical connection between the original and copy, and not upon the same paper as that of the signature of the testator. In re Baldwin, 146 N.C. 25, 59 S.E. 163 (1907).

Whether Attestation Impliedly Requested Is Question for Jury. — It is for the jury to determine whether the testatrix impliedly requested the attesting witnesses to attest the will, an implied request being sufficient to submit the question to the jury. In re Kelly's Will, 206 N.C. 551, 174 S.E. 453 (1934).

Attestation Sufficient Despite Wavering in Testimony. — Evidence tending to show that one of the subscribing witnesses signed the will as such in the presence of testatrix and the other subscribing witness warrants the jury in finding that the witness' subscription met the requirements of this section, notwithstanding that the witness wavered somewhat in her testimony. In re Redding's Will, 216 N.C. 497, 5 S.E.2d 544 (1939).

Instrument Held Not Validly Witnessed. — Where a witness subscribes his name to an instrument during the afternoon, and the purported testatrix signs the instrument the following night, but not in the presence of the witness, the signing of the instrument by the parties cannot be construed as one and the same transaction, and the instrument is not validly witnessed and attested by him, and, upon proof that the instrument was properly subscribed by one other witness, a peremptory instruction in favor of caveators is without error for want of proof that the instrument was subscribed by two witnesses. In re McDonald's Will, 219 N.C. 209, 13 S.E.2d 239 (1941).

§ 31-3.4. Holographic will.

(a) A holographic will is a will

- (1) Written entirely in the handwriting of the testator but when all the words appearing on a paper in the handwriting of the testator are sufficient to constitute a valid holographic will, the fact that other words or printed matter appear thereon not in the handwriting of the testator, and not affecting the meaning of the words in such handwriting, shall not affect the validity of the will, and
- (2) Subscribed by the testator, or with his name written in or on the will in his own handwriting, and

- (3) Found after the testator's death among his valuable papers or effects, or in a safe-deposit box or other safe place where it was deposited by him or under his authority, or in the possession or custody of some person with whom, or some firm or corporation with which, it was deposited by him or under his authority for safekeeping.

(b) No attesting witness to a holographic will is required. (1953, c. 1098, s. 2; 1955, c. 73, s. 1.)

- III. Signature.
- IV. Found Among Valuable Papers, etc.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below construe former G.S. 31-3.

Legislative History of Section. — See In re Will of Gilkey, 256 N.C. 415, 124 S.E.2d 155 (1962).

It is not required that a holographic will be dated or the place of its execution stated therein. Pounds v. Litaker, 235 N.C. 746, 71 S.E.2d 39 (1952).

A paper-writing in the handwriting of testatrix, duly proven by three credible witnesses, signed by testatrix and found among her valuable papers after her death, which paper-writing contains dispositive words sufficient to dispose of the estate, is valid as a holograph will under this section and G.S. 31-18.2, and it is not necessary that the writing be dated or show the place of execution. In re Parson's Will, 207 N.C. 584, 178 S.E. 78 (1935), citing In re Will of Lowrance, 199 N.C. 782, 155 S.E. 876 (1930).

Words Not in Handwriting of Testator. — Every word of a holographic will must be in the handwriting of testator, and while words printed on the paper will not invalidate the instrument but will be treated as surplusage if such printed words are not essential to the written words, printed words or letters may not be used to supply any essential part of the instrument. Pounds v. Litaker, 235 N.C. 746, 71 S.E.2d 39 (1952).

When all the words appearing on a paper in the handwriting of the deceased person are sufficient to constitute a last will and testament, the mere fact that other words appear thereon, not in such handwriting, but not essential to the meaning of the words in such handwriting, cannot be held to defeat the intention of the deceased, otherwise clearly expressed, that such paper-writing is and shall be her last will and testament. In re Will of Lowrance, 199 N.C. 782, 155 S.E. 876 (1930); In re Parson's Will, 207 N.C. 584, 178 S.E. 78 (1935), wherein the unessential words had been printed on the paper before the testator used it.

Attestation Does Not Invalidate Holographic Will. — The fact of there being a signature of one subscribing witness to a will of land does not prevent it from being proved as a holographic will; and it is no objection to the probate of a script as a holograph will that it has one subscribing witness, and was intended by the decedent to be proved by subscribing witnesses, which intent was frustrated by the fact that the second attesting witness was incompetent. Hill v. Bell, 61 N.C. 122 (1867).

Note Held to Be Codicil. — A note payable to the deceased, found with his holographic will in a box with his other valuable papers after his death, and endorsed thereon in the handwriting of the deceased and over his signature to his wife to take effect after his death, when proved as G.S. 31-18.2 requires, is to be construed as a codicil to his will, and it is not necessary to such construction that it be physically attached to the holographic will. In re Will of Thompson, 196 N.C. 271, 145 S.E. 393 (1928).

Margin Notes. — Additional words found on a holographic will, which were written in a different pen, were not sufficient to entitle caveators challenging the will to a directed verdict, and the jury was allowed to determine the will's authorship. In re Allen, 148 N.C. App. 526, 559 S.E.2d 556, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 33 (2002).

Letter as Will. — A letter written by the deceased to his brother, signed by him "Brother Alex," just before the deceased had gone to a hospital for treatment, saying "Brother Richard, take good care of yourself and stay with William at the store. I am going to the hospital on account of not feeling well. I hope God nothing happens, but if it does, everything is yours. Got some money in the bank, but don't know how much we owe on house . . . I hope in a few days I will come back," etc., indicates the writer's present intention to dispose of his property, and is provable as his holograph will. Wise v. Short, 181 N.C. 320, 107 S.E. 134 (1921).

Letters written by a member of armed forces which are not offered or proven in the manner or form prescribed are ineffectual as a testamentary disposition of property. Wescott v. First & Citizens Nat'l Bank, 227 N.C. 39, 40 S.E.2d 461 (1946).

In Alston v. Davis, 118 N.C. 202, 24 S.E. 15 (1896), a brother in Texas wrote to his sister in North Carolina that if he got sick or died in Texas he wanted her to have his farm. He simply mailed her the letter. Subsequently he died in Texas and his sister undertook to probate the letter as a holographic will in this State. The question arose whether it had been deposited "with someone for safekeeping"; the court held that this constituted depositing with someone for safekeeping and that the will should be probated. In view of the fact that a testamentary disposition must be accompanied with animus testandi, the decision seems to be clearly unsound, inasmuch as the letter in question discloses no such intention. This conclusion is supported by later decisions of the court which in express terms refuses to follow the doctrine of Alston v. Davis. See Spencer v. Spencer, 163 N.C. 83, 79 S.E. 291 (1913).

It is believed that if the writer of the letter indicates clearly that by mailing it to the addressee he intends to deposit it as a will, the letter would be admitted to probate as such. See In re Ledford's Will, 176 N.C. 610, 12 N.C.L. Rev. 199, 97 S.E. 482, 97 S.E. 482 (1918).

Applied in as to former G.S. 31-3, in In re Gatling's Will, 234 N.C. 561, 68 S.E.2d 301 (1951); In re Bartlett's Will, 235 N.C. 489, 70 S.E.2d 482 (1952); In re Crawford's Will, 246 N.C. 322, 98 S.E.2d 29 (1957).

Cited in In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970); In re Will of Lamparter, 348 N.C. 45, 497 S.E.2d 692 (1998).

II. TESTAMENTARY INTENT.

Evidence of Testamentary Intent Is Necessary. — Before any instrument can be probated as a testamentary disposition there must be evidence that it was written animo testandi, or with testamentary intent. In re Will of Mucci, 287 N.C. 26, 213 S.E.2d 207 (1975).

An instrument may not be probated as a testamentary disposition unless there is evidence that it was written with testamentary intent, that is, that the maker intended that the paper itself should operate as a will or codicil to take effect upon his death. Stephens v. McPherson, 88 N.C. App. 251, 362 S.E.2d 826 (1987).

The maker must intend at the time of making that the paper itself operate as a will, or codicil; an intent to make some foreign testamentary disposition is not sufficient. In re Will of Mucci, 287 N.C. 26, 213 S.E.2d 207 (1975).

Or Instrument May Not Be Admitted to Probate. — If there is nothing on the face of the holograph from which a testamentary intent may be inferred or evidence is lacking that the instrument was found among the deceased's valuable papers or placed by him in the possession of some other person for safekeeping, the instrument may not, as a matter of law, be admitted to probate. In re Will of Mucci, 287 N.C. 26, 213 S.E.2d 207 (1975).

Where Testamentary Intent Must Appear. — With regard to holographic instruments, the necessary animus testandi must appear not only from the instrument itself and the circumstances under which it was made, but also from the fact that the instrument was found among the deceased's valuable papers after his death or in the possession of some person with whom the deceased had deposited it for safekeeping. In re Will of Mucci, 287 N.C. 26, 213 S.E.2d 207 (1975); Stephens v. McPherson, 88 N.C. App. 251, 362 S.E.2d 826 (1987).

When Intent Issue Is for Jury. — Where a holographic instrument on its face is equivocal on the question of whether it was written with testamentary intent and there is evidence that the instrument was found among the valuable papers of the deceased the animus testandi issue is for the jury and parol evidence relevant to the issue may be properly admitted. In re Will of Mucci, 287 N.C. 26, 213 S.E.2d 207 (1975).

III. SIGNATURE.

It is necessary that the testator's name be inserted in his own handwriting in some part of the instrument. Pounds v. Litaker, 235 N.C. 746, 71 S.E.2d 39 (1952).

Name in Body of Will Sufficient Signature. — It is well settled that if the name of the testator appears in his handwriting in the body of the will this is a signing within the meaning of the statute. Hall v. Misenheimer, 137 N.C. 183, 49 S.E. 104, 107 Am. St. R. 474 (1904); Richards v. W.M. Ritter Lumber Co., 158 N.C. 54, 73 S.E. 485 (1911), modified on rehearing, 159 N.C. 455, 74 S.E. 1016 (1912); Boger v. Cedar Cove Lumber Co., 165 N.C. 557, 81 S.E. 784, 1917D Ann. Cas. 116 (1914); Burriss v.

Starr, 165 N.C. 657, 81 S.E. 929, 1914D Ann. Cas. 71 (1914); Peace v. Edwards, 170 N.C. 64, 86 S.E. 807 (1915).

Under this section, a paper-writing in the testator's handwriting, dispositive on its face, with the name of the testator inserted therein his own handwriting followed by the words "this being my will" is sufficient in form to constitute a holographic will. In re Rowland, 202 N.C. 373, 162 S.E. 897 (1932).

Engraved Monogram of Testatrix Not Construed as Signature. — An engraved monogram of a testatrix, appearing on the instrument offered for probate in solemn form as a holographic will, may not be considered as a part thereof. The monogram is not in her handwriting and may not be construed to be her signature. Pounds v. Litaker, 235 N.C. 746, 71 S.E.2d 39 (1952).

Signature Need Not Be Witnessed. — It is not necessary that the testator's signature be witnessed if the requirements for a holographic will are established. In re Will of Gilkey, 256 N.C. 415, 124 S.E.2d 155 (1962).

IV. FOUND AMONG VALUABLE PAPERS, ETC.

Location of Holographic Will. — The statute requires that a paper-writing sufficient to pass as a holographic will must be found, after the death of the testator, in one of five different places: (1) among the testator's valuable papers; (2) among the testator's valuable effects; (3) in a safe-deposit box; (4) in a safe place where it was deposited by the testator or under his authority; or (5) in the possession of a person or firm with whom it was deposited by the testator or under his authority for safekeeping. In re Will of Church, 121 N.C. App. 506, 466 S.E.2d 297 (1996).

Purpose of Requirement That Paper Be Found Among Valuable Papers. — The requirement of this section that the writing be found after death among testator's valuable papers was to show the author's evaluation of the document, important because lodged with important documents, to become effective upon death because left there by the author, thereby establishing the necessary animus testandi. In re Will of Gilkey, 256 N.C. 415, 124 S.E.2d 155 (1962).

What Constitutes Valuable Papers. — Valuable papers consist of such as are regarded by a decedent as worthy of preservation, and therefore in his estimation, of some value. Much depends upon the condition and business and habits of the decedent in respect to keeping his valuable papers. Winstead v. Bowman, 68 N.C. 170 (1873).

The requirements of this section that a paper-writing sufficient to pass as a holograph will must be found after the death of the testator among his valuable papers and (now "or") effects must be liberally construed, and where it is found among the deceased's papers and effects evidently regarded by him as his most valuable papers, and are in fact valuable, under circumstances showing his intention that that will should take effect as being so found, it is sufficient. In re Will of Groce, 196 N.C. 373, 145 S.E. 689 (1928). See also Hughes v. Smith, 64 N.C. 493 (1870); In re Williams' Will, 215 N.C. 259, 1 S.E.2d 857 (1939).

If a document had been placed among the author's valuable papers without his knowledge and consent, it would have no validity as a will even though found among the papers after the author's death. In re Will of Gilkey, 256 N.C. 415, 124 S.E.2d 155 (1962).

Writing Found in Drawer with Deeds and Other Papers. — Where the proof showed that the script propounded as a holograph will was found in a small drawer of a bookcase, in the room which the alleged testator occupied at his death, with his deeds and other papers, it was held to be such a finding "among the valuable papers of the decedent" as will, in connection with the other evidence required by the statute in respect to handwriting, authorize its probate. Cornelius v. Brawley, 109 N.C. 542, 14 S.E. 78 (1891).

Writing Found with Other Papers. — Finding a holographic will in a wooden bowl on the testator's kitchen counter did not entitle caveators to a directed verdict because other documents of a financial nature were found in the same place, and the testator was a man of limited education. In re Allen, 148 N.C. App. 526, 559 S.E.2d 556, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 33 (2002).

Deposit among Unopened Mail. — A bona fide controversy existed as to whether a holographic document was found among the valuable papers and effects of the testatrix, where the document was discovered among some unopened mail on a sofa at the testatrix's home, in a small room which was used as an office. Lenoir Rhyne College v. Thorne, 13 N.C. App. 27, 185 S.E.2d 303 (1971), cert. denied, 280 N.C. 721, 186 S.E.2d 924 (1972).

A paper-writing found after testator's death in the pockets of the clothes he was wearing, with large sums of money and other papers of value was held to be effective as his will. In re Will of Groce, 196 N.C. 373, 145 S.E. 689 (1928).

Stored in Separate Pocketbooks. — Where testator stored valuable belongings in her pocketbooks, which she kept in her bedroom, one pocketbook on the inside of her bedroom door contained insurance papers, the deed to her home and a bank book, and the handwritten document was in another pocketbook, also in her bedroom, in an envelope labelled "This is my Will", the evidence supported the trial court's finding that the handwriting was found in a "safe place." In re Will of Church, 121 N.C. App. 506, 466 S.E.2d 297 (1996).

Need Not Be Found among Most Valuable Papers. — The phrase "among the valuable papers and [now 'or'] effects," etc., used in this section does not necessarily and without exception mean among the most valuable papers, etc. So the fact that decedent kept valuable papers in a tin box in a bank which were intrinsically more valuable than papers kept in a trunk where the will was found would not prevent the latter from being a depository within the meaning of the section. Winstead v. Bowman, 68 N.C. 170 (1873).

Deposit among Useless Papers and Rubbish. — In Little v. Lockman, 49 N.C. 495 (1857), the script propounded was found in the drawer of a bureau, among some useless papers and rubbish, and there were valuable papers and effects kept in another drawer of the same bureau. Under such circumstances the court properly held that the script was not found in such a place of deposit as was contemplated by the statute. Hughes v. Smith, 64 N.C. 493 (1870).

Evidence of Finding Among Valuables. — That a holograph script was seen among the valuable papers and effects of the decedent eight months before his death is no evidence that it was found there at or after his death. Adams v. Clark, 53 N.C. 56 (1860).

Evidence that the will of the deceased, wholly written and signed by her, was found among her valuable papers after her death, in a desk where she kept her business papers and papers she desired to keep for their sentimental value, and that it was transferred after her death, together with the other papers, to her trunk where they were found, was held sufficient, under the circumstances of the case. In re Will of Westfeldt, 188 N.C. 702, 125 S.E. 531 (1924).

Evidence as to whether the document in question was found among the valuable papers and effects of the deceased or in a safe place where it was deposited by her, in satisfaction of subdivision (a)(3) of this section, was sufficient to support the jury's determination that it was a valid holographic will. Stephens v. McPherson, 88 N.C. App. 251, 362 S.E.2d 826 (1987).

Jury to Determine Intention in Depositing with Valuables. — It was entirely proper in the judge to leave it to the jury to determine whether, from all the circumstances, they believed that the paper-writing was deposited by the deceased among his valuable papers with the intention that it should be his will. Simms v. Simms, 27 N.C. 684 (1845); Hill v. Bell, 61 N.C. 122 (1867).

Deposit in a Trunk Left with a Friend for Safekeeping. — The placing of a holographic will in a trunk, left for safekeeping with a friend, and having it in the larger part of the valuable papers and money of the deceased, will satisfy the requirements of the statute upon the point of deposit. Hill v. Bell, 61 N.C. 122 (1867).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Sufficient Signature. — Where the handwriting of a testator in a holographic will can be proved and there are no defects in other respects, it is sufficient signature for the testator in a holographic will to sign or write his name in his own handwriting in the body of the will. See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Robert Miller, Clerk, Superior Court, Stokes County, 40 N.C.A.G. 36 (1969).

§ 31-3.5. Nuncupative will.

A nuncupative will is a will

- (1) Made orally by a person who is in his last sickness or in imminent peril of death and who does not survive such sickness or imminent peril, and
- (2) Declared to be his will before two competent witnesses simultaneously present at the making thereof and specially requested by him to bear witness thereto. (1953, c. 1098, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

"Last Sickness." — Where genuine issues of fact existed as to whether decedent reasonably believed he was in the last stage of a chronic disease and whether he was actually in his "last sickness," summary judgment was inappropriate. In re Will of Krantz, 135 N.C. App. 354, 520 S.E.2d 96 (1999).

§ 31-3.6. Seal not required.

A seal is not necessary to the validity of a will. (1953, c. 1098, s. 2.)

§ 31-4. Execution of power of appointment by will.

No appointment, made by will in the exercise of any power, shall be valid unless the same be executed in the manner by law required for the execution of wills; and every will, executed in such manner, shall, so far as respects the execution and attestation thereof, be a valid execution of a power of appointment by will, notwithstanding it shall have been expressly required that a will made in exercise of such power should be executed with some additional or other form of execution or solemnity. (1844, c. 88, s. 9; R.C., c. 119, s. 4; Code, s. 2139; Rev., s. 3114; C.S., s. 4132.)

Appointment—Does a General Residuary Clause Fulfill a Specific Reference Requirement?," see 65 N.C.L. Rev. 1475 (1987).

CASE NOTES

A provision calling for reference to a power of appointment does not concern the "execution and attestation" of a will within the meaning of this section. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Fleming, 77 N.C. App. 568, 335 S.E.2d 515 (1985).

In order to exercise a power of appointment calling for specific reference to the power before the power may be exercised, some reference to the power must be made. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Fleming, 77 N.C. App. 568, 335 S.E.2d 515 (1985).

ARTICLE 2.

Revocation of Will.

§ 31-5: Rewritten and renumbered as G.S. 31-5.1 by Session Laws 1953, c. 1098, s. 3.

§ 31-5.1. Revocation of written will.

A written will, or any part thereof, may be revoked only

- (1) By a subsequent written will or codicil or other revocatory writing executed in the manner provided herein for the execution of written wills, or
- (2) By being burnt, torn, canceled, obliterated, or destroyed, with the intent and for the purpose of revoking it, by the testator himself or by another person in his presence and by his direction. (1784, c. 204, s. 14; 1819, c. 1004, ss. 1, 2; 1840, c. 62; R.C., c. 119, s. 22; Code, s. 2176; Rev., s. 3115; C.S., s. 4133; 1945, c. 140; 1953, c. 1098, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Subsequent Will or Codicil.
- III. Physical Destruction.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below construe former G.S. 31-5.

One lacking testamentary capacity is not competent to revoke a prior will. The same degree of mental capacity is necessary to revoke a will as to make one. In re Shute's Will, 251 N.C. 697, 111 S.E.2d 851 (1960).

Revocation of Holographic Will. — It seems clear that a holographic will may be revoked just as an attested will may, i.e., (1) by burning, tearing, canceling or obliterating or (2) by another will, which may be holographic or attested, provided only that the statutory requirements in each case are complied with. No witnesses are necessary on the holographic revocation. See 14 L.R.A. (n.s.) 968 (1908) and 112 Am. St. R. 822, 2 N.C.L. Rev. 110.

Effect of Disposal of Articles Already Bequeathed. — A bequest of personal property in a trunk which contained the holographic will and other valuable papers of the deceased, after removing certain articles specifically bequeathed to others, is not a revocation of her will by the testatrix. In re Foy, 193 N.C. 494, 137 S.E. 427 (1927).

Revocation by Parol Prior to Former § 31-5. — See Giles v. Giles, 1 N.C. 377 (1801), decided prior to the enactment of former § 31-5, where it is held that a will of real estate in writing may be revoked by parol if the words of revocation denote a present intention to revoke.

Revival by Parol Declaration. — A revocation of a will of real estate carried completely into effect cannot be revived by any subsequent declaration by parol. Giles v. Giles, 1 N.C. 377 (1801).

Issue of Revocation Is for Jury. — Probate is an in rem action and the issue of revocation raised by caveat is for determination by the jury, and the court may not grant a motion for directed verdict. In re Will of Hodgins, 10 N.C. App. 492, 179 S.E.2d 126 (1971).

But the trial judge does have authority to set aside the verdict in his discretion when the verdict is against the greater weight of the evidence. In re Will of Hodgins, 10 N.C. App. 492, 179 S.E.2d 126 (1971).

Instruction Held without Error. — See In re Gatling's Will, 234 N.C. 561, 68 S.E.2d 301 (1951).

Applied in Mansour v. Rabil, 277 N.C. 364, 177 S.E.2d 849 (1970).

Cited in In re Will of Burton, 267 N.C. 729,

II. SUBSEQUENT WILL OR CODICIL.

Revocatory Paper Must Be a Testamentary Paper. — Where the writing offered as operating a revocation of the will of the testator contains none of the elements of a testamentary paper, it cannot be helped by evidence aliunde, and hence has no revocatory effect. Davis v. King, 89 N.C. 441 (1883).

Presumption as to Second Will. — A will may be revoked by a subsequent instrument executed solely for that purpose, or by a subsequent will containing a revoking clause or provisions inconsistent with those of the previous will, or by any of the other methods prescribed by law; but the mere fact that a second will was made, although it purports to be the last, does not create a presumption that it revokes or is inconsistent with one of a prior date. Where testator devised a certain part of his lands to L, and by a later will gave his effects to his brothers and sisters, the two wills were not inconsistent and the latter did not revoke the former. In re Wolfe's Will, 185 N.C. 563, 117 S.E. 804 (1923).

Revocation by Codicil Not Containing Express Words of Revocation. — In the absence of express words of revocation, it is a rule of construction that for a codicil to revoke any part of a will its provisions must be so inconsistent with those of the will as to exclude any other legitimate inference than that the testator had changed his intentions. Yount v. Yount, 258 N.C. 236, 128 S.E.2d 613 (1962).

Evidence of the preparation of a later dispositive instrument, without evidence that it was ever executed according to the formalities necessary to make it a valid will and without evidence that it contained any words of revocation or provisions contrary to a prior will, duly executed, is insufficient evidence of revocation of the will to justify the submission of the question of revocation to the jury. In re Crawford's Will, 246 N.C. 322, 98 S.E.2d 29 (1957).

To establish the revocation of a will by a subsequent writing it is necessary to prove the revocation in the manner required to establish the validity of the paper-writing originally offered for probate. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Separation Agreement As Renunciation.

— Where a husband executes a will devising and bequeathing all his property to his wife, the spouses thereafter enter a separation agreement in which each “waives and renounces all rights ... under any previously executed will of the other,” and the husband subsequently dies without having revoked or modified his will, the separation agreement constitutes a valid renunciation which adeems the devise and bequest to the wife. Sedberry v. Johnson, 62 N.C. App. 425, 302 S.E.2d 924 (1983), cert. denied, 309 N.C. 322, 307 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Where caveators could not produce the revocatory writing, and where the decedent’s attorney could not recall writing the will, the trial court erred in granting the caveators summary judgment on the ground that the will revoked an earlier will that had excluded the caveators as beneficiaries. In re Will of McCauley, 356 N.C. 91, 565 S.E.2d 88, 2002 N.C. LEXIS 550 (2002).

Trial court properly found insufficient evidence to support caveator’s request for a jury instruction on revocation because there was no case precedent where a later-dated letter making no specific reference to a prior will, but merely declaring that the testator had “not written a will,” was considered to be a revocation of a prior will. In re Estate of Lowe, 156 N.C. App. 616, 577 S.E.2d 315, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 189 (2003).

III. PHYSICAL DESTRUCTION.Defacing, Cancellation or Obliteration Alone Insufficient to Show Revocation.

— A paper-writing duly executed as a last will and testament was not revoked, in whole or in part, by defacing, cancellation, or obliteration, unless the testatrix defaced or obliterated the paper-writing, or some portion or portions thereof with the intent thereby to revoke it in whole or in part. Defacement or obliteration, even though shown to be made by testatrix, is not, alone, sufficient to show revocation. In re Will of Hodgins, 10 N.C. App. 492, 179 S.E.2d 126 (1971).

Material Alteration by Cancellation Necessary. — In order for there to be a revocation of a will, in whole or in part, under the provisions of this section there must not only exist the intent of the testator to cancel, but there must be the physical act of cancellation; and while it is not required that the words should be entirely effaced where the cancellation is in part, so as to make the same illegible, the portion erased must be of such significance as to effect a material alteration in the meaning of the will or the clause of the will that is challenged on the issue. In re Love’s Will, 186 N.C. 714, 120 S.E. 479 (1923).

Same — Primary Controlling Clause Unaltered, Effect. — Where the primary or controlling clause of a will remains unaltered by the obliteration by the testator of words therein and the unobliterated words remaining are sufficient to carry the designated property to the devisee, it will not amount to a revocation within the intent and meaning of this section; nor will the obliteration of the name of another beneficiary be sufficient as to him, when it appears that the intent of the revocation by the testator was dependent upon the successful revocation of a principal devise wherein the erasures were insufficient to effectuate a legal cancellation. In re Love’s Will, 186 N.C. 714, 120 S.E. 479 (1923).

Interlineations and Annotations Held Insufficient to Show Revocation. — Where testator, in his own handwriting, makes certain interlineations and annotations upon his will, which had been properly executed, and marks through certain words of the will, and it appears that such alterations are insufficient to constitute a holographic will and were made with the intent of altering the will at some future date in accordance with the notations, but that such alterations were not made with the intent to revoke the will in whole or in part, such interlineations and annotations are insufficient to show a revocation of the will, intent to revoke being essential to revocation by defacement or obliteration of the will by testator under this section. In re Will of Roediger, 209 N.C. 470, 184 S.E. 74 (1936).

Presumption of Revocation Where Will Cannot Be Found. — It being shown that a will was once in existence and last heard of in possession of the testator, but could not be found after his death, a presumption arises that it was destroyed by his consent with intent to cancel it. Such presumption is not conclusive, but it imposes upon the person asserting the will the burden of proving that it was not so destroyed, or that the testator was not of sound mind at the time of such presumed destruction. Scoggins v. Turner, 98 N.C. 135, 3 S.E. 719 (1887).

§ 31-5.2. Revocation of nuncupative will.

A nuncupative will or any part thereof may be revoked

(1) By a subsequent nuncupative will, or

- (2) By a subsequent written will or codicil or other revocatory writing executed in the manner provided herein for the execution of written wills. (1953, c. 1098, s. 4.)

§ 31-5.3. Will not revoked by marriage; dissent from will made prior to marriage.

A will is not revoked by a subsequent marriage of the maker; and the surviving spouse may petition for an elective share when there is a will made prior to the marriage in the same manner, upon the same conditions, and to the same extent, as a surviving spouse may petition for an elective share when there is a will made subsequent to marriage. (1844, c. 88, s. 10; R.C., c. 119, s. 23; Code, s. 2177; Rev., s. 3116; C.S., s. 4134; 1947, c. 110; 1953, c. 1098, s. 5; 1967, c. 128; 2000-178, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Will Revoked under Prior Provisions Not Revived by 1967 Revision. — Where testator's will made in January 1963 was revoked under former provisions under this section by his marriage in November 1963, the will was not revived by the 1967 revision of this section providing that no will should be revoked by any change in the marital status of the maker. In re Probate of Will of Mitchell, 285 N.C. 77, 203 S.E.2d 48 (1974).

§ 31-5.4. Revocation by divorce or annulment; revival.

Dissolution of marriage by absolute divorce or annulment after making a will does not revoke the will of any testator but, unless otherwise specifically provided in the will, it revokes all provisions in the will in favor of the testator's former spouse or purported former spouse, including, but not by way of limitation, any provision conferring a general or special power of appointment on the former spouse or purported former spouse and any appointment of the former spouse or purported former spouse as executor, trustee, conservator, or guardian. If provisions are revoked solely by this section, they are revived by the testator's remarriage to the former spouse or purported former spouse. (1953, c. 1098, s. 6; 1977, c. 74, s. 3; 1991, c. 587, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

"Divorce" Is Used in General and Comprehensive Sense. — In enacting this section the General Assembly used the word "divorce" in its general and comprehensive sense, that is, as denoting a judgment or decree by which a marriage is dissolved or annulled, rather than in its limited and technical sense. Ivery v. Ivery, 258 N.C. 721, 129 S.E.2d 457 (1963).

§ 31-5.5. After-born or after-adopted child; illegitimate child; effect on will.

(a) A will shall not be revoked by the subsequent birth of a child to the testator, or by the subsequent adoption of a child by the testator, or by the subsequent entitlement of an after-born illegitimate child to take as an heir of the testator pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 29-19(b), but any after-born, after-adopted or entitled after-born illegitimate child shall have the right to share in the testator's estate to the same extent he would have shared if the testator had died intestate unless:

- (1) The testator made some provision in the will for the child, whether adequate or not;
- (2) It is apparent from the will itself that the testator intentionally did not make specific provision therein for the child;
- (3) The testator had children living when the will was executed, and none of the testator's children actually take under the will;
- (4) The surviving spouse receives all of the estate under the will; or
- (5) The testator made provision for the child that takes effect upon the death of the testator, whether adequate or not.

(b) The provisions of G.S. 28A-22-2 shall be construed as being applicable to after-adopted children and to after-born children, whether legitimate or entitled illegitimate.

(c) The terms "after-born," "after-adopted" and "entitled after-born" as used in this section refer to children born, adopted or entitled subsequent to the execution of the will. (1868-9, c. 113, s. 62; Code, s. 2145; Rev., s. 3145; C.S., s. 4169; 1953, c. 1098, s. 7; 1955, c. 541; 1973, c. 1062, s. 2; 1985, c. 689, s. 9; 1995, c. 161, s. 1; 1997-456, s. 55.8.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below construe former G.S. 31-45.

For rules under common law and civil law, see Christian v. Carter, 193 N.C. 537, 137 S.E. 596 (1927).

A testator is not required to mention by name or make some provision for a child in order to disinherit that child under North Carolina law, even if the child is born or adopted after the will is made. Ladd v. Estate of Kellenberger, 314 N.C. 477, 334 S.E.2d 751 (1985).

After-Born Child Takes Share Unless Provided for or Intentionally Excluded. — A child born after a will is executed takes as in case of intestacy, unless (1) provision is made for it in the will, or (2) it appears from the will itself that the testator's failure to make provision was intentional. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. McKee, 260 N.C. 416, 132 S.E.2d 762 (1963).

Will Is Only Source of Intent to Exclude.

— The court is limited to the will as the source from which intent to exclude must appear. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. McKee, 260 N.C. 416, 132 S.E.2d 762 (1963).

Intent to Exclude Is Not Shown by Will Ignoring All Children. — Where after-born children, in fact all children, are ignored in a will, the court cannot say the will discloses an intent to exclude after-born children. It is limited to the will as the source from which intent to exclude must appear. Since such intent does not appear from the will, the after-born children of the testator take as in case of their father's intestacy. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. McKee, 260 N.C. 416, 132 S.E.2d 762 (1963).

Entire Will Is Not Revoked. — While after-born children not provided for in the will of their deceased parent may claim by inheritance their part of the estate, under this section, it does not amount to revocation of the entire will.

Fawcett v. Fawcett, 191 N.C. 679, 132 S.E. 796 (1926).

After-Born Child of Intestate Shares in Estate. — This statutory provision clearly assumes and contemplates that an after-born child of an intestate shares in the estate, both real and personal, of such intestate. Byerly v. Tolbert, 250 N.C. 27, 108 S.E.2d 29 (1959).

A posthumous child was provided for under her father's will, though no direct, specific provision was made, where by the residuary clause the will made substantial provision for a class to which the posthumous child was a member. Sheppard v. Kennedy, 242 N.C. 529, 88 S.E.2d 760 (1955).

Child Born after Execution of Will but before Execution of Codicil. — A codicil operates as a republication of the original will and makes it speak as of the date of the execution of the codicil insofar as it is not altered or revoked by the codicil, and therefore a child born after the execution of the will, but before the execution of the codicil, is not entitled to such share in the estate as though testator had died intestate, it being apparent that testator intentionally did not make specific provision for such child. Young v. Williams, 253 N.C. 281, 116 S.E.2d 778 (1960).

No Intention to Direct Parent to Make Provision for Child. — Former G.S. 31-45 was construed as not intending to control a parent as to the provision he should make for his child, but was to apply when by inadvertence or mistake the after-born child had not been provided for. Unless the omission was intentional, or provision was made for the child, either under the will or some settlement or provision ultra, the after-born child took his share, and the statute applied where there were one or more children. Flanner v. Flanner, 160 N.C. 126, 75 S.E. 936 (1912).

Adequacy of Provision for After-Born Child. — While the courts will not inquire into the adequacy of provision made for a child born after the execution of the will within the purport of this section such provision must be of reasonable substance and value in praesenti. Williamson v. Williamson, 232 N.C. 54, 59 S.E.2d 214 (1950).

As long as a testator makes some provision in the will for an after-born child, whether adequate or not, the child has no right to take an intestate share of the testator's estate, and a class gift constituted a provision for an afterborn child, even though the gift was contingent. Mason v. Stanimer, 102 N.C. App. 673, 403 S.E.2d 605 (1991).

"Making Provision" under Former § 31-45. — See Meares v. Meares, 26 N.C. 192 (1843); King v. Davis, 91 N.C. 142 (1884); Thomason v. Julian, 133 N.C. 309, 45 S.E. 636 (1903). See also Rawls v. Durham Realty & Ins. Co., 189 N.C. 368, 127 S.E. 254 (1925); Nicholson v. Nicholson, 190 N.C. 122, 129 S.E. 148 (1925).

Procurement of Insurance. — Testator had two children, one born before and one after the execution of his will. No testamentary provision was made for either child, but testator, after the birth of the second child, procured a policy of life and accident insurance on his life, making both the children beneficiaries therein. It was held that the procurement of the policy was not such a provision for the after-born child as to prevent such child from participating in his father's property as heir and distributee. Williamson v. Williamson, 232 N.C. 54, 59 S.E.2d 214 (1950).

Knowledge of Testator as to Child En ventre Sa Mere Immaterial. — The beneficial provisions of this section are not affected by the presumptive knowledge of the father, from the condition of his wife, that at the time he made the will he must have anticipated the birth, but upon the fact that the child was born thereafter. It is the subsequent birth, not the father's knowledge, which effects the partial revocation. Christian v. Carter, 193 N.C. 537, 137 S.E. 596 (1927).

Applicability of Former § 31-45 to Adopted Children or Illegitimate Children. — See King v. Davis, 91 N.C. 142 (1884); Fawcett v. Fawcett, 191 N.C. 679, 132 S.E. 796 (1926); Sorrell v. Sorrell, 193 N.C. 439, 137 S.E. 306 (1927). See also 12 N.C.L. Rev. 402 (1934).

§ 31-5.6. No revocation by subsequent conveyance.

No conveyance or other act made or done subsequently to the execution of a will of, or relating to, any real or personal estate therein comprised, except an act by which such will shall be duly revoked, shall prevent the operation of the will with respect to any estate or interest in such real or personal estate as the testator shall have power to dispose of by will at the time of his death. (1844, c. 88, s. 2; R.C. c. 119, s. 25; Code, s. 2179; Rev., s. 3118; C.S., s. 4136; 1953, c. 1098, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases decided below were decided under former G.S. 31-8.

Conveyance, etc., Not to Affect Provisions of Will. — No conveyance or act done after the execution of a will, unless it amounts to a revocation, will affect its provisions. Wood v. Cherry, 73 N.C. 110 (1875).

Parol evidence is incompetent to fasten upon a devise of land a constructive or implied trust in favor of another. Former G.S. 31-8 was enacted in view of the decision in Cook v. Redman, 37 N.C. 623 (1843), in which such a trust was upheld. Chappell v. White, 146 N.C.

§ 31-5.7. Specific provisions for revocation exclusive; effect of changes in circumstances.

No will can be revoked in whole or in part by any act of the testator or by a change in his circumstances or condition except as provided by G.S. 31-5.1 through 31-5.6 inclusive. (1953, c. 1098, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Mental Incompetency Does Not Revoke Will. — The fact that a testator became mentally incompetent to manage his business affairs or to understand the extent of his holdings, even if the mental condition continued to his death would not revoke his will in whole or in part. Abbott v. Abbott, 269 N.C. 579, 153 S.E.2d 39 (1967).

§ 31-5.8. Revival of revoked will.

No will or any part thereof that has been in any manner revoked can, except as provided in G.S. 31-5.4, be revived otherwise than by a reexecution thereof, or by the execution of another will in which the revoked will or part thereof is incorporated by reference. Witnesses to Will.

§ 31-8.1. Who may witness.

Any person competent to be a witness generally in this State may act as a witness to a will. (1953, c. 1098, s. 15.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, “Abolishing the Attestation Requirement for Wills,” see 68 N.C.L. Rev. 541 (1990).

§ 31-9. Executor competent witness.

No person, on account of being an executor of a will, shall be incompetent to be admitted a witness to prove the execution of such will, or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof. (R.C., c. 119, s. 9; Code, s. 2146; Rev., s. 3119; C.S., s. 4137.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — This section was intended to give the benefit of an executor’s testimony to every person who should be interested, either in the establishment, or defeat of a paper-writing propounded as a will. Pannell v. Scoggin, 53 N.C. 408 (1861).

May Be Examined for Both Parties. — Under this section one named as executor in a receipt, propounded as a will, though named as plaintiff in an issue devisavit vel non, may be examined as a witness for the caveator as well as for the propounder. Pannell v. Scoggin, 53 N.C. 408 (1861).

Competent Even if Subscribing Witness or Interest Later Acquired. — An executor or administrator cum testamento annexo, who is also a subscribing witness to a will, is competent to testify to the execution thereof; and the same rule applies to one who was competent at the time of the making of the will, but subsequently acquired an interest therein. Vester v. Collins, 101 N.C. 114, 7 S.E. 687 (1888).

§ 31-10. Beneficiary competent witness; when interest rendered void.

(a) A witness to an attested written or a nuncupative will, to whom or to whose spouse a beneficial interest in property, or a power of appointment with respect thereto, is given by the will, is nevertheless a competent witness to the will and is competent to prove the execution or validity thereof. However, if there are not at least two other witnesses to the will who are disinterested, the interested witness and his spouse and anyone claiming under him shall take nothing under the will, and so far only as their interests are concerned the will is void.

(b) A beneficiary under a holographic will may testify to such competent, relevant and material facts as tend to establish such holographic will as a valid will without rendering void the benefits to be received by him thereunder. (R.C., c. 119, s. 10; Code, s. 2147; Rev., s. 3120; C.S., s. 4138; 1953, c. 1098, s. 11; 1955, c. 73, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Devise, etc., to Attesting Witness Only Void. — This section avoids only the devise or bequest to the attesting witness and to his and her wife or husband and privies, and leaves the other dispositions made of the testator's property in unimpaired force and operation. Vester v. Collins, 101 N.C. 114, 7 S.E. 687 (1888).

Interest of One Who Signs, But Not as Witness, Not Avoided. — One who signs his name on a will in the place where subscribing witnesses usually sign, is not deprived of benefits conferred upon him by the will, if he, in fact, did not sign as a subscribing witness. Boone v. Lewis, 103 N.C. 40, 9 S.E. 644 (1889).

Devisee May Testify to Finding Script Among Valuable Papers. — The widow and devisee of the testator is a competent witness to prove the fact that the script propounded was found among the valuable papers of the deceased. Cornelius v. Brawley, 109 N.C. 542, 14 S.E. 78 (1891).

Competency of Witness Is Question of Law. — If a witness to a will is interested as a legatee thereunder, he is a competent witness to prove the will, the effect being to deprive him of the legacy and it is error in the judge to submit the competency of a witness as a question of fact for the jury. The competency of a witness is a question for the court, to be raised when he offers to testify, and to be determined by the court. McLean v. Elliott, 72 N.C. 70 (1875).

Beneficiaries Under Contested Will Generally Are Not Competent. — The legislature, in enacting subsection (b), did not intend to alter the long standing rule that beneficiaries under a contested will are not competent witnesses to testify as to oral communications with the deceased which tend to answer the ultimate question for the jury in such cases. In re Will of Lamparter, 348 N.C. 45, 497 S.E.2d 692 (1998).

Exception to Dead Man's Statute. — With regard to a holographic will, an exception to the Dead Man's Statute has evolved which allows beneficiaries to testify as to the three material elements of a will: the testator's handwriting, the testator's signature; and what the testator considered to be his place for keeping valuable papers. In re Will of Lamparter, 348 N.C. 45, 497 S.E.2d 692 (1998).

Application of Section to Holographic Wills Prior to 1955 Amendment. — See Hampton v. Hardin, 88 N.C. 592 (1883), overruled by McEwan v. Brown, 176 N.C. 249, 97 S.E. 20 (1918); In re Will of Westfeldt, 188 N.C. 702, 125 S.E. 531 (1924).

§ 31-10.1. Corporate trustee not disqualified by witnessing of will by stockholder.

A corporation named as a trustee in a will is not disqualified to act as trustee by reason of the fact that a person owning stock in the corporation signed the will as a witness. (1949, c. 44.)

ARTICLE 4.

Depository for Wills.

§ 31-11. Depositories in offices of clerks of superior court where living persons may file wills.

The clerk of the superior court in each county of North Carolina shall be required to keep a receptacle or depository in which any person who desires to do so may file his or her will for safekeeping; and the clerk shall, upon written request of the testator, or the duly authorized agent or attorney for the testator, permit said will or testament to be withdrawn from said depository or receptacle at any time prior to the death of the testator: Provided, that the contents of said will shall not be made public or open to the inspection of anyone other than the testator or his duly authorized agent until such time as the said will shall be offered for probate. (1937, c. 435, s. 1; 1971, c. 528, s. 28.)

CASE NOTES

Testator Entitled to Inspect Will. — In a proceeding by petitioner to inquire into the mental state of respondent, his aged uncle, and to have a trustee appointed for him, the petitioner testified in substance that he was only interested in the welfare of respondent. It was held that respondent was entitled to examine his own will which had been deposited in a sealed envelope with the court clerk for the purpose of showing that petitioner was the principal devisee under the will. In re Gamble, 244 N.C. 149, 93 S.E.2d 66 (1956).

Without Written Request. — Provision of this section requiring written request of testator for permission to withdraw will from depository or receptacle does not apply to his request for inspection of will. In re Gamble, 244 N.C. 149, 93 S.E.2d 66 (1956).

§§ 31-11.1 through 31-11.5: Reserved for future codification purposes.

ARTICLE 4A.

Self-Proved Wills.

§ 31-11.6. How attested wills may be made self-proved.

(a) Any will may be simultaneously executed, attested, and made self-proved, by acknowledgment thereof by the testator and affidavits of the witnesses, each made before an officer authorized to administer oaths under the laws of the state where execution occurs and evidenced by the officer's certificate, under official seal, in substantially the following form:

"I, _____, the testator, sign my name to this instrument this _____ day of _____, _____, and being first duly sworn, do hereby declare to the undersigned authority that I sign and execute this instrument as my last will and that I sign it willingly (or willingly direct another to sign for me), that I execute it as my free and voluntary act for the purposes therein expressed, and that I am eighteen years of age or older, of sound mind, and under no constraint or undue influence.

Testator

We _____, _____, the witnesses, sign our names to this instrument, being first duly sworn, and do hereby declare to the undersigned authority that the testator signs and executes this instrument as his last will and that he signs it willingly (or willingly directs another to sign for him), and that each of us, in the presence and hearing of the testator, hereby signs this will as witness to the testator's signing, and to the best of our knowledge the testator is eighteen years of age or older, of sound mind, and under no constraint or undue influence.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 795, which enacted this Article, provides, in s. 3, that: "This act shall apply to any attested written will in existence on or executed after the effective date of this act [Oct. 1, 1977]."

Session Laws 1979, c. 536, which, effective

Oct. 1, 1979, designated the former provisions of the section as subsections (b) and (c) and added subsection (a), and in subsection (b), the amendment substituted "any time subsequent to its execution" for "the time of its execution or at any subsequent date" near the beginning of the introductory paragraph, provided in s. 2, effective May 9, 1979, that: "The execution of an acknowledgment of a will by a testator, and of the affidavits of witnesses, made before an officer authorized to administer oaths under the laws of this State and evidenced by the officer's certificate substantially in the form set out in G.S. 31-11.6 during the period between October 1, 1977 and October 1, 1979 shall be considered to be a valid execution and attestation of a written will even though the will was not signed and attested under the provisions of G.S. 31-3.3 separately from the execution of the acknowledgment by the testator and the affidavits of the witnesses. Such wills may be probated in accordance with G.S. 31-18.1(a)(4)."

Session Laws 1981, c. 599, which substituted "Any" for "In addition to the procedures for the execution of a will set out in G.S. 31-3.3, any" at the beginning of subsection (a), provided, in s. 9, that: "The execution of an acknowledgment of a will by a testator, and of the affidavits of witnesses, made before an officer authorized to administer oaths under the laws of this State and evidenced by the officer's certificate substantially in the form set out in G.S. 31-11.6 if done during the period between October 1, 1979, and the effective date of this act [October 1, 1979], shall be considered to be a valid execution and attestation of a written will regardless of whether or not the will was signed and attested under the provisions of G.S. 31-3.3 separately from the execution of the acknowledgment by the testator and the affidavits of the witnesses. Such wills may be probated in accordance with G.S. 31-18.1(a)(4)."

Session Laws 1981, c. 599, s. 21, provided that the act would not affect pending litigation.

CASE NOTES

Witness' Failure to Remember Witnessing Will. — Where the caveators could not produce the revocatory writing, and where one witness did not remember witnessing the will, the trial court erred in granting the caveators summary judgment on the ground that the will revoked an earlier will that had excluded the caveators as beneficiaries. In re Will of McCauley, 356 N.C. 91, 565 S.E.2d 88, 2002 N.C. LEXIS 550 (2002).

ARTICLE 5.

Probate of Will.

§ 31-12. Executor may apply for probate.

Any executor named in a will may, at any time after the death of the testator, apply to the clerk of the superior court, having jurisdiction, to have the same admitted to probate. Such will shall not be valid or effective to pass real estate or personal property as against innocent purchasers for value and without notice, unless it is probated or offered for probate within two years after the death of the testator or devisor or prior to the time of approval of the final account of a duly appointed administrator of the estate of the deceased, whichever time is earlier. If such will is fraudulently suppressed, stolen or destroyed, or has been lost, and an action or proceeding shall be commenced within two years from the death of the testator or devisor to obtain said will or establish the same as provided by law, then the limitation herein set out shall only begin to run from the termination of said action or proceeding, but not otherwise. (C.C.P., s. 439; Code, s. 2151; Rev., s. 3122; 1919, c. 15; C.S., s. 4139; 1921, c. 99; 1923, c. 14; 1953, c. 920, s. 2; 1975, c. 300, s. 13.)

CASE NOTES

This section and § 31-15 require the probate of a will, by implication at least. Wells v. Odum, 207 N.C. 226, 176 S.E. 563 (1934).

The word "probate" when used in reference to a document purporting to be a will means the judicial process by which a court of competent jurisdiction in a duly constituted proceeding tests the validity of the instrument before the court, and ascertains whether or not it is the last will of the deceased. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963); In re Lamb, 303 N.C. 452, 279 S.E.2d 781 (1981).

It is the duty of a person named as executor to apply to the court having jurisdiction to have the writing probated. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Jurisdiction of Clerk. — This section confers upon the clerk of the superior court exclusive and original jurisdiction of proceedings for the probate of wills. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950); Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

The clerk of the superior court has exclusive and original jurisdiction over the probate of wills. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Title Descends to Heirs Subject to Being Divested. — The title of the land descends to the heirs of the testator, subject to being divested in favor of the devisee, when the will is duly admitted to probate. Floyd v. Herring, 64 N.C. 409 (1870).

Citation to those in interest is not necessary to the probate of a will in common form, the proceeding being ex parte, and when probated the paper-writing is valid and operative as a will and may not be attacked collaterally. In re Rowland, 202 N.C. 373, 162 S.E. 897 (1932). See In re Will of Etheridge, 231 N.C. 502, 57 S.E.2d 768 (1950).

The probate of a will in common form without citation to those in interest "to see the proceedings," is an ex parte proceeding and not binding on caveators upon the issue of devisavit vel non raised in their direct attack upon the validity of the will, and the admission in evidence in the caveat proceedings of the order of probate constitutes reversible error. Wells v. Odum, 205 N.C. 110, 170 S.E. 145 (1933). See also In re Will of Etheridge, 231 N.C. 502, 57 S.E.2d 768 (1950).

Appointment Is Reviewable. — The power, conferred by this section, to appoint administrators is reviewable by the judge of the superior court of the county. In re Estate of Wright, 200 N.C. 620, 158 S.E. 192 (1931).

Limitation on Probate under Former Law. — See McCormick v. Jernigan, 110 N.C. 406, 14 S.E. 971 (1892); Steadman v. Steadman, 143 N.C. 345, 55 S.E. 784 (1906).

Primary object in interpreting a will is to give effect to the intention of the testator. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Presumption Against Intestacy. — It is a long-standing policy of the State of North Carolina to construe a will with the presumption that the testator did not intend to die intestate with respect to any part of his property. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

§ 31-13. Executor failing, beneficiary may apply.

If no executor apply to have the will proved within 60 days after the death of the testator, any devisee or legatee named in the will, or any other person interested in the estate, may make such application, upon 10 days' notice thereof to the executor. (C.C.P., s. 440; Code, s. 2152; Rev., s. 3123; C.S., s. 4140.)

Cross References. — As to who may apply for letters of administration in case of intestacy, see G.S. 28A-4-1 and 28A-4-2.

CASE NOTES

“Persons Interested in the Estate.” — It is obvious from this section that the classification of a “person interested in the estate” includes persons who are neither devisees nor legatees. It is broad enough to include even a person whose interest in the estate is in opposition to the will. In re Estate of Davis, 277 N.C. 134, 176 S.E.2d 825 (1970).

The designation of a person who exhibited a document for probate as “one of the executors therein named,” though inaccurate, is not an affirmative showing that he was not a “person interested in the estate” and, therefore, does not show affirmatively that the document was presented for probate by a person not authorized by this section to do so. In re Estate of Davis, 277 N.C. 134, 176 S.E.2d 825 (1970).

Death of Only Executor Named in Will before Testator. — Where the only executor named in the will has died before the testator, this section does not require another person “interested in the estate” to wait 60 days before applying to the clerk for the probate of the will. In re Estate of Davis, 277 N.C. 134, 176 S.E.2d 825 (1970).

Notice to Executor in Probating a Codicil. — Where an executor has probated and qualified under the will, it is equally necessary to give the statutory notice before offering for probate a separate paper-writing as a codicil. Spencer v. Spencer, 163 N.C. 83, 79 S.E. 291 (1913).

Presenting for Probate Merely to Secure Adjudication of Invalidity. — This section permits a person interested in the estate of a supposed testator to present an alleged will for probate merely for the purpose of obtaining an adjudication of its invalidity. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950); In re Lamb, 303 N.C. 452, 279 S.E.2d 781 (1981).

This section empowers any person interested in the estate of a decedent to make application to have a script purporting to be the will of such decedent “proved,” i.e., tested in respect to its validity as a testamentary instrument. It is obvious that the clause “any ... person interested in the estate” includes a person who will share in the estate under the law governing intestacy in case a script which purports to be the will of the deceased is adjudged invalid as a testamentary document. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950).

§ 31-14. Clerk to notify legatees and devisees of probate of wills.

The clerks of the superior court of the State are hereby required and directed to notify by mail, all legatees and devisees whose addresses are known, designated in wills filed for probate in their respective counties. All expense incident to such notification shall be deemed a proper charge in the administration of the respective estates. (1933, c. 133.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on section, see 11 N.C.L. Rev. 263 (1933).

§ 31-15. Clerk may compel production of will.

Every clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction, on application by affidavit setting forth the facts, shall, by summons, compel any person in the State, having in possession the last will of any decedent, to exhibit the same in his court for probate; and whoever being duly summoned refuses, in contempt of the court, to produce such will, or (the same having been parted with by him) refuses to inform the court on oath where such will is, or in what manner he has disposed of it, shall, by order of the clerk of the superior court, be committed to the jail of the county, there to remain without bail till such will be produced or accounted for, and due submission made for the contempt. (C.C.P., s. 442; Code, s. 2154; Rev., s. 3124; C.S., s. 4141.)

lem of after-discovered wills, see 47 N.C.L. Rev. 723 (1969).

CASE NOTES

It is the policy of the law that wills should be probated, and that the rights of the parties in cases of dispute should be openly arrived at according to the orderly process of law. In re Pendergrass' Will, 251 N.C. 737, 112 S.E.2d 562 (1960).

Enforcement of Right to Dispose of Property. — The legislature, when it granted the right to dispose of property at death, provided for the enforcement of that right under this section. In re Will of Covington, 252 N.C. 546, 114 S.E.2d 257 (1960).

Compelling Production of Fraudulently Withheld Will. — A petition before the clerk of the superior court alleging that the respondents were in possession of a later will than that probated in another county, and that the petitioner was withholding this will for fraudulent purposes, etc., is a proceeding under this section to compel the production of a will. Williams v. Bailey, 177 N.C. 37, 97 S.E. 721 (1919).

Issue of Wrong Venue No Excuse. — Where the clerk of the court of G county issued a notice to the respondent, who had the will of the deceased in his possession, to exhibit the same for probate, it was the duty of the respondent to obey the summons, and he could have raised in his answer the question of whether the will should be probated in G or L county. In re Scarborough's Will, 139 N.C. 423, 51 S.E. 931 (1905).

Impossibility to Comply with Order as Excuse. — An order of the clerk of the court of G county which adjudges the respondent guilty of contempt and that he be committed to jail, until such will was produced, was properly reversed on appeal where it appears that the respondent cannot comply with the condition upon which he might be discharged, because the clerk of L county now has custody of the will and has refused to surrender it to the respondent. In re Scarborough's Will, 139 N.C. 423, 51 S.E. 931 (1905).

Allowance of Reasonable Expenses. — Where the law imposes a duty upon a person, or group of persons, with respect to probating and establishing the validity of a will, in the performance of such duty, in good faith, reasonable expenses thereby incurred should be allowed and paid out of the fund or property which is the subject of the litigation. Wells v. Odum, 207 N.C. 226, 176 S.E. 563 (1934).

Scope of Proceedings on Attachment for Contempt. — In a proceeding to attach the respondent for contempt in not producing for probate a will, the question whether the will should be probated in G or L county is not presented and cannot be passed upon. In re Scarborough's Will, 139 N.C. 423, 51 S.E. 931 (1905).

Motion to Dismiss Proceedings. — Where a rule issued under this section in proceedings to compel the production of a will should be discharged, a motion by the respondents to dismiss the proceedings will be treated as a motion to discharge them. Williams v. Bailey, 177 N.C. 37, 97 S.E. 721 (1919).

Discharge of Respondents on Failure of Petitioners to Pursue Proceedings. — Where the respondents in proceedings to compel the production of a will appear before the clerk at the time set for the hearing, and in writing under oath fully deny the charges made, and the petitioners neither file reply, offer evidence, nor request an examination, no issues are raised requiring the matter to be transferred to the trial docket, and the rule against the respondents should be discharged at the petitioner's cost. Williams v. Bailey, 177 N.C. 37, 97 S.E. 721 (1919).

Applied in In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

§ 31-16. What shown on application for probate.

On application to the clerk of the superior court, he must ascertain by affidavit of the applicant —

- (1) That such applicant is the executor, devisee or legatee named in the will, or is some other person interested in the estate, and how so interested.
- (2) The value and nature of the testator's property, as near as can be ascertained.
- (3) The names and residences of all parties entitled to the testator's property, if known, or that the same on diligent inquiry cannot be discovered; which of the parties in interest are minors, and whether with or without guardians, and the names and residences of such guardians, if known.

Such affidavit shall be recorded with the will and the certificate of probate thereof, if the same is admitted to probate. (C.C.P., s. 441; Code, s. 2153; Rev., s. 3125; C.S., s. 4142.)

§ 31-17. Proof and examination in writing.

Every clerk of the superior court shall take in writing the proofs and examinations of the witnesses touching the execution of a will, and he shall embody the substance of such proofs and examinations, in case the will is admitted to probate, in his certificate of the probate thereof, which certificate must be recorded with the will. The proofs and examinations as taken must be filed in the office. (C.C.P., s. 437; Code, s. 2149; Rev., s. 3126; C.S., s. 4143.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on the necessity for proof of due execution of a will, see 3 Wake Forest Intra. L. Rev. 12 (1967).

CASE NOTES

Compliance with this section is essential to a valid probate. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Presumption of Valid Probate and Recordation. — The requirements of this section did not obtain in the probate of a will in the old practice before the court of pleas and quarter sessions; and where the records show that a will sought to be set aside for improper probate, valid on its face, has been transcribed upon the records of that court, it is presumed to have been duly admitted to probate and properly transcribed upon the record, the burden being upon the caveator to show to the contrary. Poplin v. Hatley, 170 N.C. 163, 86 S.E. 1028 (1915).

Conclusiveness of Certificate as to Validity. — Probate of a will by the clerk of the superior court is a judicial act, and his certificate is conclusive evidence of the validity of the will, until vacated on appeal, or declared void by a competent tribunal in a proceeding instituted for that purpose. It cannot be vacated in a collateral manner. Mayo v. Jones, 78 N.C. 402 (1878); McClure v. Spivey, 123 N.C. 678, 31 S.E. 857 (1898).

Testimony of Witnesses Must Be Embodied in Clerk's Certificate. — It is the duty of the clerk taking probate of a will to embody the substance of the testimony of witnesses in his certificate of probate to be recorded with the will. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Foreign Records Conforming to Section Sufficient. — Where a nonresident testator devises land in this State, and the record of the foreign court of probate, duly certified, contains the certificate of probate, which refers to the certified examinations of the witnesses, in accordance with the requirements of this section, the whole forming one transaction, the exemplification of which and of the will being duly recorded in the county where the land lies, the will is sufficiently proved and passes the property. Roscoe v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 42, 32 S.E. 389 (1899).

Former Practice. — Formerly the court of pleas and quarter sessions had jurisdiction of the probate of wills, and there was at that time no provision in the statute requiring the taking of the proofs in writing or for recording the probate. The practice was to exhibit the will before the court and offer the proofs of execution, and for an entry to be made upon the minutes of the adjudication, and the clerk, acting upon the authority of the court, then recorded the will upon the will book. In most instances he also recorded a memorandum of the proceedings before the court, but this was not done in all cases. Poplin v. Hatley, 170 N.C. 163, 86 S.E. 1028 (1915).

Applied in In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947).

§ 31-18: Rewritten and renumbered as G.S. 31-18.1 to 31-18.3 by Session Laws 1953, c. 1098, s. 12.

§ 31-18.1. Manner of probate of attested written will.

(a) An attested written will, executed as provided by G.S. 31-3.3, may be probated in the following manner:

- (1) Upon the testimony of at least two of the attesting witnesses; or
- (2) If the testimony of only one attesting witness is available, then
 - a. Upon the testimony of such witness, and
 - b. Upon proof of the handwriting of at least one of the attesting witnesses who is dead or whose testimony is otherwise unavailable, and
 - c. Upon proof of the handwriting of the testator, unless he signed by his mark, and
 - d. Upon proof of such other circumstances as will satisfy the clerk of the superior court as to the genuineness and due execution of the will; or
- (3) If the testimony of none of the attesting witnesses is available, then
 - a. Upon proof of the handwriting of at least two of the attesting witnesses whose testimony is unavailable, and
 - b. Upon compliance with paragraphs c and d of subsection (a)(2) of this section; or
- (4) Upon a showing that the will has been made self-proved in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 31-11.6.

(b) Due execution of a will may be established, where the evidence required by subsection (a) is unavoidably lacking or inadequate, by testimony of other competent witnesses as to the requisite facts.

(c) The testimony of a witness is unavailable within the meaning of this section when the witness is dead, out of the State, not to be found within the State, insane or otherwise incompetent, physically unable to testify or refuses to testify. (1953, c. 1098, s. 12; 1977, c. 795, s. 2; 1979, c. 107, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below construe former G.S. 31-18.

Compliance with Statute Required. — In order that a paper-writing, designed as a testamentary disposition of property, may effectuate this purpose it must have been executed and proven in strict compliance with the statutory requirements. In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948). See Wescott v. First & Citizens Nat'l Bank, 227 N.C. 39, 40 S.E.2d 461 (1946). See also Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

Evidence Must Show Subscribing in Presence of Testator. — Under G.S. 31-3.3 and this section, it is essential, not only that the document shall be subscribed in the presence of the testator by at least two witnesses, but that the evidence upon which the will is admitted to probate must show that fact. In re Thomas, 111 N.C. 409, 16 S.E. 226 (1892).

Proof Required When Only One Witness Available. — An attested will may be probated on the testimony of two of the attesting witnesses, but if the testimony of only one attesting witness is available, then upon the testimony of such witness with proof of the handwriting of at least one of the attesting witnesses who is dead or whose testimony is otherwise unavailable, and proof of the handwriting of the testator, unless he signed by his mark, and proof of such other circumstances as will satisfy the clerk of the superior court as to the genuineness and due execution of the will. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

The statute seems to require that, when the will purports to be signed by the testator himself and only one of the subscribing witnesses is alive and competent, some evidence should be introduced as to the handwriting of the testator or the genuineness of the signature. Watson v. Hinson, 162 N.C. 72, 77 S.E. 1089 (1913).

It is not required, in order to have a valid probate, that the surviving witness should testify that he saw the other witness subscribe his name to the instrument. Watson v. Hinson, 162 N.C. 72, 77 S.E. 1089 (1913).

For a will to be admitted to probate, subdivision (a)(1) of this section requires that the will meet the requirements of G.S. 31-3.3 and that two of the attesting witnesses testify before the court. In re Will of Everhart, 88 N.C. App. 572, 364 S.E.2d 173, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 112, 367 S.E.2d 910 (1988).

No Requirement That Witness Be Able to See Will. — Subdivision (a)(1) of this section requires only that an attested will be probated "upon the testimony of at least two of the attesting witnesses." It does not require that the witness be able to see the will and the signatures on it at the time of the caveat proceeding in order that he may give testimony to prove it. In re Will of Weston, 38 N.C. App. 564, 248 S.E.2d 359 (1978).

A witness who had become blind by the time of the caveat proceeding, but who had full use of his ocular capacity at the time the testator executed the document and at the time it was probated in common form did not come within any of the definitions of "unavailable" in subsection (c) of this section. In re Will of Weston, 38 N.C. App. 564, 248 S.E.2d 359 (1978).

Whether or not the witness by virtue of his blindness at the time of the caveat proceeding was "unavailable," was a question of law to be decided by the judge. In re Will of Weston, 38 N.C. App. 564, 248 S.E.2d 359 (1978).

Proof De Novo on Issue of Devisavit Vel Non. — The authorities seem to hold that in the trial of an issue of devisavit vel non, on caveat duly entered, the proof as to the formal execution of the will shall be made de novo. Watson v. Hinson, 162 N.C. 72, 77 S.E. 1089 (1913), citing In re Hedgepeth's Will, 150 N.C. 245, 63 S.E. 1025 (1909).

§ 31-18.2. Manner of probate of holographic will.

A holographic will may be probated only in the following manner:

- (1) Upon the testimony of at least three competent witnesses that they believe that the will is written entirely in the handwriting of the person whose will it purports to be, and that the name of the testator as written in or on, or subscribed to, the will is in the handwriting of the person whose will it purports to be; and
- (2) Upon the testimony of one witness who may, but need not be, one of the witnesses referred to in subdivision (1) of this section to a statement of facts showing that the will was found after the testator's death as required by G.S. 31-3.4. (1953, c. 1098, s. 12.)

Cross References. — As to requirements for valid holographic will, see G.S. 31-3.4.

CASE NOTES

Indicia of Holographic Will Held Sufficient. — Where caveators presented testimony that holographic writings were found among papers which included the titles to testator's car and house trailer, copies of property deeds, health insurance papers, and cancelled bank notes, further testimony that testator duly executed his signature on the writings before a notary public, and the testimony of three witnesses who testified they were familiar with both the handwriting and signature of the testator and that they believed the subject writings and signatures to be in testator's own hand, caveators presented sufficient indicia of a holographic will under section 31-3.4 and they satisfied the requirements of this section;

therefore, propounders' motion for directed verdict was properly denied. In re Will of Penley, 95 N.C. App. 655, 383 S.E.2d 385, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 48, 389 S.E.2d 93 (1990).

Engraved Monogram of Testatrix Not Construed as Signature. — An engraved monogram of a testatrix, appearing on the instrument offered for probate in solemn form as a holographic will, may not be considered as a part thereof. The monogram is not in her handwriting and may not be construed to be her signature. Pounds v. Litaker, 235 N.C. 746, 71 S.E.2d 39 (1952).

This section requires twofold testimony from three witnesses concerning handwriting of the purported testator: (1) That the will is written entirely in his handwriting, and (2) that his name appearing in or on, or subscribed to, the will is in his handwriting. In re Will of Loftin, 24 N.C. App. 435, 210 S.E.2d 897, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 169 (1975).

When Witness Is Competent to Give Opinion. — When a witness swears that he is "well acquainted" with a decedent's handwriting, and is not asked on cross-examination how he became familiar with it, he is prima facie competent. In re Will of Loftin, 24 N.C. App. 435, 210 S.E.2d 897, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 169 (1975).

Where a witness was not asked, and he did not testify, whether he had acquired knowledge of decedent's handwriting or whether he was familiar with it, the witness was not competent to give an opinion as to handwriting, and his testimony did not satisfy the statutory requirements. In re Will of Loftin, 24 N.C. App. 435, 210 S.E.2d 897, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 169 (1975).

Presumption of Competency Rebutted.

— See In re Will of Loftin, 24 N.C. App. 435, 210 S.E.2d 897, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 169 (1975).

Handwriting Goes to Jury on Testimony of Three Witnesses. — Testimony of three witnesses that the paper-writing propounded as the holographic will of decedent was in his handwriting takes the case to the jury as to this requirement, notwithstanding conflicting testimony of caveator. In re Williams' Will, 215 N.C. 259, 1 S.E.2d 857 (1939).

In an action to probate a destroyed holographic will, the propounder must show that the instrument in the handwriting of the deceased and signed by him once existed and was destroyed under circumstances that would defeat an inference of revocation. Upon failure of such proof, there is a failure of the proof of the res and a nonsuit is proper. Hewett v. Murray, 218 N.C. 569, 11 S.E.2d 867 (1940).

§ 31-18.3. Manner of probate of nuncupative will.

(a) No nuncupative will may be probated later than six months from the time it was made unless it was reduced to writing within 10 days after it was made.

(b) Before a nuncupative will may be probated

- (1) Written notice must be given to the surviving spouse, if any, and to the next of kin, by the clerk of the court in which it is to be probated, notifying them that the will has been offered for probate and that they may, if they desire, oppose the probate thereof, or
- (2) When the surviving spouse or next of kin are not known or when for any other reason such notice cannot be given, a notice to the same effect must be published not less than once a week for four consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in the county where the will is offered for probate, or if no newspaper is published in the county, then in some newspaper having general circulation therein.

(c) A nuncupative will may be probated only in the following manner:

- (1) Upon the testimony of at least two competent witnesses who establish the terms of such will and who state that they were simultaneously present at the making thereof, that the testator declared he was then making his will, and that they were then and there specially requested by him to bear witness thereto; and
- (2) Upon the testimony of one competent witness, who may but need not be one of the witnesses referred to in subdivision (1) of this subsection, that the will was made in the testator's last illness or while he was in imminent peril of death, and that he did not survive such sickness or imminent peril, but it is not necessary that all such facts be proved by the testimony of the same witness. (1953, c. 1098, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below construe the provisions of former G.S. 31-18 which related to nuncupative wills.

Similarity to English Statute of Frauds.

— Statutory provisions in relation to nuncupative wills have existed in this State since 1784, and they originally were substantially the same as those in the English Statute of Frauds, 29 Car. II, ch. 3, G.S. 19, 20. These provisions have always been strictly construed and enforced by the courts, both in this State and in England. Smith v. Smith, 63 N.C. 637 (1869).

The purpose of the statute is not to prevent the examination of the witnesses of the will, after such lapse of six months, on the trial of the issue devisavit vel non in the course of a contest of it, but it is to require that they shall not be allowed to prove it in the first instance, when it is first presented for probate after that time, unless it shall have been put in writing within 10 days next after the making thereof. In re Haygood's Will, 101 N.C. 574, 8 S.E. 222 (1888).

Strict Compliance Necessary. — The requisites of this statutory provision must be strictly complied with and observed, in all material respects, in order to prevent opportunity for fraudulent practices on the part of such persons as would be disposed to obtain undue advantage of persons in their last sickness as to the final disposition of their property; and also to prevent mischiefs that might arise from the ignorance, misapprehension or dishonest purposes of persons called upon to be the witnesses of such wills. The purpose of such requisites is to prevent the fabrication of such wills; they are necessary, and it is essential to observe them strictly. Brown v. Brown, 6 N.C. 350 (1818); Rankin v. Rankin, 31 N.C. 156 (1848); Webster v. Webster, 50 N.C. 95 (1857); Haden v. Bradshaw, 60 N.C. 259 (1864); Smith v. Smith, 63 N.C. 637 (1869); Bundrick v. Haygood, 106 N.C. 468, 11 S.E. 423 (1890); Long v. Foust, 109 N.C. 114, 13 S.E. 889 (1891).

The testator must state his wishes in the presence of two witnesses and specially require them to bear witness thereto in order to constitute a valid nuncupative will. Kennedy v. Douglas, 151 N.C. 336, 66 S.E. 216 (1909).

Where a woman in her last illness, without expressing any purpose to make a will said she wanted to give to her sister certain articles of personal property, and called her to her bedside and gave them to her, in the presence of two other persons but did not call them, or either of them, to witness the transaction, it was held that this did not constitute a nuncupative will. Bundrick v. Haygood, 106 N.C. 468, 11 S.E. 423 (1890).

Designation of Witnesses by Name Not Necessary.

— It is sufficient that the testator saw the witnesses and charged them to bear witness to his will, and they did so, and it is not a good objection that he failed to designate them particularly by name. That he required them, each, all of them, to bear witness, was what the section requires. The purpose is that the testator shall require two witnesses at least to take notice and bear witness that he makes his will. He must require and direct a competent person, and that person must be able to testify that he was one of the persons — the witnesses — so required, and that he did take notice and bear witness. Long v. Foust, 109 N.C. 114, 13 S.E. 889 (1891).

Sufficiency of Showing. — Under this section, it is sufficient to show, on the question of the testator's requesting that the witness "bear witness" to the will, that believing himself to be in extremis, he told the witness during his last illness that he wanted to make a will, who, at his request, called in another and while they were at his bedside, testator gave specific directions for the disposition of his personal property; and though he had therefore expressed his wish to make a written will, and had failed in his effort to do so, the matters sought to be established as the nuncupative will were declared at a time when he was apprehensive that he would become unable to talk, and about four days before his death. In re Garland's Will, 160 N.C. 555, 76 S.E. 486 (1912).

Where a person, being in extremis, and conscious of it, sent for a friend with whom he had often talked on the subject of a will and told him what disposition he wanted to make of his property, and then such friend replied that if he wanted to do anything of that kind he had better have some other person in the room, and thereupon the speaker went out and brought in another person, and in the presence of the sick man repeated the proposed disposition of the property, to which the latter assented, it was held, to be a sufficient rogatio testium to satisfy the requirements of a nuncupative will. Smith v. Smith, 63 N.C. 637 (1869).

Citation or Publication Within Limitation of Six Months. — After the contents of the will are established within the time and in the manner prescribed by this section it cannot be admitted to probate until the citation or publication, and the probate based thereon shall be completed within six months from the making of the alleged will. The limitation of six months refers only to the proof and establishment of the contents, and that only where it is not reduced to writing within 10 days of its making. In re Haygood's Will, 101 N.C. 574, 8 S.E. 222 (1888).

Will Not to Be Proved until Citation Made. — It will be observed that it is not required that the will shall not be proved by the witnesses until the citation and notice provided for shall be made, but it shall not be proved — that is, proved in the sense of admitting it to probate at once — until citation shall be made, the purpose being to give the widow and next of kin opportunity to contest the will — the proof thereof by the witnesses thereof — if they shall see fit to do so. In re Haygood's Will, 101 N.C. 574, 8 S.E. 222 (1888).

Will Reduced to Writing May Be Proved Before or After Six Months. — A just interpretation of the provision relative to the proof of a nuncupative will is, that if such will shall be put in writing within 10 days next after it was made, it may be proved by the witnesses thereof either before or after the lapse of six months next after the making thereof, because the will being in writing with the sanction of the witnesses, their recollection so as to what it was is helped and strengthened thereby, and they could the better be trusted to testify as to the making of the same, and what it was in its detail, at any time within a reasonable period. In re Haygood's Will, 101 N.C. 574, 8 S.E. 222 (1888).

Writing Dictated to One Witness but Execution Postponed. — A paper-writing which the deceased had therefore dictated but postponed executing from time to time and which he finally declared to be his will without reading it, at a time he was in his last sickness not expecting to recover and physically unable to execute it, is invalid as a nuncupative will: (1) His intent that it should be a written will is evidenced by his conduct; (2) the dictation was not in law "during his last sickness." Kennedy v. Douglas, 151 N.C. 336, 66 S.E. 216 (1909).

The declaration of a testator made in the presence of two witnesses that a paper-writing contained the disposition he desired made of his property and that he desired its provisions carried out, without reading or having the paper read at the time, but relying upon the assertion of a person then present that it contained his wishes as dictated by him several months before, is invalid as a nuncupative will: (1) The dictation was made to one witness alone; (2) there was no sufficient declaration then and there of the testator's wishes in the presence of two witnesses from which they could reduce their recollection to writing within 10 days. Kennedy v. Douglas, 151 N.C. 336, 66 S.E. 216 (1909).

§ 31-18.4. Probate of wills of members of the armed forces.

In addition to the methods already provided in existing statutes therefor, a will executed by a person while in the armed forces of the United States or the merchant marine, shall be admitted to probate (whether there were subscribing witnesses thereto or not, if they, or either of them, is out of the State at the time said will is offered for probate) upon the oath of at least three credible witnesses that the signature to said will is in the handwriting of the person whose will it purports to be. Such will so proven shall be effective to devise real property as well as to bequeath personal estate of all kinds. This section shall not apply to cases pending in courts and at issue on the date of its ratification. (1919, c. 216; C.S., s. 4151; Ex. Sess. 1921, c. 39; 1943, c. 218; 1945, c. 81; 1953, c. 1098, s. 13.)

§ 31-19. Probate conclusive until vacated; substitution of consolidated bank as executor or trustee under will.

Such record and probate is conclusive in evidence of the validity of the will, until it is vacated on appeal or declared void by a competent tribunal. Provided, that whenever in a will so probated or recorded a bank or trust company shall be named executor and/or trustee and shall have at the time of such probate and recording become absorbed by or consolidated with another bank or trust company or shall have sold and transferred all its assets and liabilities to another bank or trust company doing business in North Carolina, such latter bank or trust company shall be deemed substituted for and shall have all the rights and powers of the former bank or trust company. (C.C.P., s. 438; Code, s. 2150; Rev., s. 3128; C.S., s. 4145; 1929, c. 150; 1941, c. 79.)

CASE NOTES

This section is restricted to a decree of probate regular on its face, and does not apply where on the face of the decree of probate it affirmatively shows that the will was not probated as required by mandatory applicable statutes for the probate of wills. Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956); Jones v. Warren, 274 N.C. 166, 161 S.E.2d 467 (1968).

Probated will constitutes a muniment of title unassailable except in a direct proceeding. Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129 (1945); In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948); Hargrave v. Gardner, 264 N.C. 117, 141 S.E.2d 36 (1965).

Under this section a will probated and recorded in accordance with the applicable statute constitutes a muniment of title. Jones v. Warren, 274 N.C. 166, 161 S.E.2d 467 (1968).

Conclusively Valid Until Declared Void. — When executed, proven and recorded in manner and form as prescribed, a paper-writing designed as a testamentary disposition of property is given conclusive legal effect as the last will and testament of the decedent, subject only to be vacated on appeal or declared void by a court of competent jurisdiction in a proceeding instituted for that purpose. Until so set aside it is presumed to be the will of the testator. In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948).

Probate of a will by the clerk of the superior court is a judicial act, and his certificate is conclusive evidence of the validity of the will, until vacated on appeal, or declared void by a competent tribunal in a proceeding instituted for that purpose. It cannot be vacated in a collateral manner. Mayo v. Jones, 78 N.C. 402 (1878); McClure v. Spivey, 123 N.C. 678, 31 S.E. 857 (1898).

A will probated in common form before the clerk of the superior court is conclusively valid until declared void by a competent tribunal, and may be offered in evidence in proceedings to caveat the will. Holt v. Ziglar, 163 N.C. 390, 79 S.E. 805 (1913). See In re Beauchamp's Will, 146 N.C. 254, 59 S.E. 687 (1907).

Under this section the order of the clerk admitting a paper-writing to probate constitutes conclusive evidence that the paper-writing is the valid will of the decedent until it is declared void by a competent tribunal on an issue of devisavit vel non in a caveat proceeding. Holt v. Holt, 232 N.C. 497, 61 S.E.2d 448 (1950); Hargrave v. Gardner, 264 N.C. 117, 141 S.E.2d 36 (1965); Johnson v. Stevenson, 269 N.C. 200, 152 S.E.2d 214 (1967).

Once a paper-writing has been probated as a will, every part of it stands until set aside by the appropriate tribunal. Ravenel v. Shipman, 271 N.C. 193, 155 S.E.2d 484 (1967).

Where the clerk of the superior court probates a will in common form and records it properly, the record and probate are conclusive as to the validity of the will until vacated on appeal or declared void by a competent tribunal. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Until set aside in a direct attack, a will is conclusively presumed to be the will of the testator. In re Will of Cooper, 196 N.C. 418, 145 S.E. 782 (1928).

Cannot Be Attacked Collaterally. — Where a will has been admitted to probate a party claiming property disposed of by it to another cannot, in an action to recover the same, be permitted to attack the will on the ground of the lack of testamentary capacity of the testatrix, and evidence offered for that purpose is properly excluded. Varner v. Johnston, 112 N.C. 570, 17 S.E. 483 (1893).

A will probated in common form is not subject to collateral attack, but is binding or conclusive until set aside in a direct proceeding. Mills v. Mills, 195 N.C. 595, 143 S.E. 130 (1928).

Under this section, a will probated and recorded in accordance with the applicable statute may not be collaterally attacked. Jones v. Warren, 274 N.C. 166, 161 S.E.2d 467 (1968).

Same — Even for Fraud. — A will which has been duly probated in common form may not be collaterally attacked even for fraud. Crowell v. Bradsher, 203 N.C. 492, 166 S.E. 331 (1932).

The probate of a will in common form is conclusive as to the validity of the instrument until set aside in a caveat proceeding duly instituted, and while the beneficiaries under the will may be held trustees ex maleficio for extrinsic fraud which interferes with the right to caveat the instrument, the probate may not be collaterally attacked for intrinsic fraud constituting grounds for attack of the instrument by caveat proceedings when there is nothing to show that plaintiff's right to attack by caveat was interfered with in any manner. Johnson v. Stevenson, 269 N.C. 200, 152 S.E.2d 214 (1967).

Same — Offer of Subsequent Will. — Where a paper-writing has been duly probated in common form, offer of proof of a will alleged to have been subsequently executed by the testatrix is a collateral attack, and the clerk is without jurisdiction to set aside the probate upon such proof. In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948).

An order of the clerk adjudging a will to be fully proved in common form is not "conclusive in evidence of the validity of the will" under this section, on the issue of devisavit vel non, raised by a caveat filed thereto. Wells v. Odum, 205 N.C. 110, 170 S.E. 145 (1933); In re Will of Etheridge, 231 N.C. 502, 57 S.E.2d 768 (1950).

Clerk May Revoke Probate. — Where the clerk of the superior court has probated as a will a document which has not been executed in accordance with the statutory requirements for probate or which shows on its face that it was not intended as a testamentary disposition of the author's property, or when other jurisdictional requirements for probate are shown to be lacking, the clerk may revoke his probate. Ravenel v. Shipman, 271 N.C. 193, 155 S.E.2d 484 (1967).

The probate of a will may be set aside upon motion after notice where it is clearly made to appear that the court was imposed upon or misled, but otherwise the probate is conclusive and cannot be collaterally attacked, and the paper-writing stands as the last will and testament until declared void in a direct proceeding in the nature of a caveat under G.S. 31-32. In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948).

Clerk May Not Set Aside Probate on Grounds Determinable by Caveat. — While the clerk of the superior court in proper instances may set aside a probate in common form, he may not do so on grounds which are properly determinable by caveat. In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947).

The burden of proof on a motion to vacate a probate is on the movants to establish sufficient grounds to set aside the probate. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Effect of Order of Clerk. — An order of the clerk adjudging paper-writing to be fully proved in common form is not "conclusive in evidence of the validity of the will," under this section, on the issue of devisavit vel non, but as between the probated instrument and the prior purported wills, the former stands until "declared void by a competent tribunal." In re Neal's Will, 227 N.C. 136, 41 S.E.2d 90 (1947).

Rents and profits of lands devised belonged to beneficiaries and their ancestors until the probate was set aside and the will adjudged void. Hinton v. Whitehurst, 214 N.C. 99, 198 S.E. 579 (1938).

When Devisees Entitled to Rents and Profits until Probate Set Aside. — Where there is no evidence tending to show that at any time prior to the institution of the caveat proceeding, the defendants, or their ancestors, had any knowledge or intimation that the plaintiffs would attack the validity of the will and there is no evidence tending to show that any of the devisees in said will procured its execution by undue or fraudulent influence, the defendants and their ancestors were entitled to the rents and profits of the lands devised to them until the probate was set aside and the will adjudged void. Whitehurst v. Hinton, 209 N.C. 392, 184 S.E. 66 (1936).

Effect of Revocation of Probate upon Administration. — The revocation of the probate in common form did not have the effect of annulling the administration properly granted. Floyd v. Herring, 64 N.C. 409 (1870).

Title of Innocent Purchasers Not Affected by Judgment Setting Aside Will. — Where the devisees named in a will, which has been duly probated in common form, sell and dispose of part of the lands devised to innocent purchasers for value without notice, and thereafter caveat proceedings are instituted and the will set aside, the heirs at law, by operation of the judgment setting aside the will, become tenants in common in the lands not disposed of, but the title conveyed by the devisees named in the paper-writing to purchasers for value without notice, or knowledge of facts from which a purpose to file caveat proceedings could be intimated, is not affected, the probate in common form being conclusive evidence of the validity of the will until it is attacked by caveat proceedings duly instituted. Whitehurst v. Hinton, 209 N.C. 392, 184 S.E. 66 (1936).

§ 31-20. Wills filed in clerk's office.

All original wills shall remain in the clerk's office, among the records of the court where the same shall be proved, and to such wills any person may have access, as to the other records. If said will contains a devise of real estate, outside said county where said will is probated, then a copy of the said will, together with the probate of the same, certified under the hand and seal of the clerk of the superior court of said county may be recorded in the book of wills and filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of any county in the State in which said land is situated with the same effect as to passing the title to said real estate as if said will had originally been probated and filed in said county and the clerk of the superior court of said last-mentioned county had had jurisdiction to probate the same. (1777, c. 115, s. 59; R.C., c. 119, s. 19; Code, s. 2173; Rev., s. 3129; 1921, c. 108, s. 1; C.S., s. 4146.)

CASE NOTES

Will Taken from Record as Evidence of Testator's Handwriting. — An original will taken from the records of the court is competent, without further proof of its execution, as a basis of comparison in determining the genuineness of the handwriting of testator to the instrument in controversy. Croom v. Sugg, 110 N.C. 259, 14 S.E. 748 (1892).

§ 31-21. Validation of wills heretofore certified and recorded.

All wills which have prior to March 9, 1921, been certified and recorded in the office of the clerk of the superior court of any county, substantially following the provisions of G.S. 31-20 are hereby validated and approved as to the conveyance and transfer of any title to real estate as contained therein, to the same extent as if said wills had originally been probated and filed in said county, and the clerk of the superior court of said county had had jurisdiction to probate the same, provided the probates and witnesses to the said wills are sufficient and according to law. (1921, c. 108, s. 2; C.S., s. 4146(a).)

CASE NOTES

Statute Not Retroactive. — Public Laws 1921, c. 108 (G.S. 31-20 and this section), does not control rights which accrued prior to its enactment. Hence, when an original will probated in 1910 is invalidated by judicial decree, a certified copy thereof recorded in another county becomes void and one who purchases with notice of the caveat cannot convey any title thereunder, either before or after notice of its invalidity has been filed in the county where the certified copy has been recorded. The only purpose of such certified copy was to give notice of the source of title. Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129 (1945).

§ 31-22. Certified copy of will proved in another state or country.

When a will, made by a citizen of this State, is proved and allowed in some other state or country, and the original will cannot be removed from its place of legal deposit in such other state or country, for probate in this State, the clerk of the superior court of the county where the testator had his last usual residence or has any property, upon a duly certified copy or exemplification of such will being exhibited to him for probate, shall take every order and proceeding for proving, allowing and recording such copy as by law might be taken upon the production of the original. (1802, c. 623; R.C., c. 44, s. 9; C.C.P., s. 445; Code, s. 2157; Rev., s. 3130; C.S., s. 4147.)

CASE NOTES

When a resident of this State dies outside the State and his will is probated in another state, a duly certified copy of the will so probated may be offered for original probate in this State, and its validity as a testamentary disposition of property established in the same manner as if the original had been offered for probate here. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Defective Certificate of Clerk. — The certificate of probate of a will executed in another state, disposing of real estate in this State, is defective where it does not show affirmatively that the will was executed according to the laws of this State. Raleigh & W. Ry. v. Glendon & Gulf Mining & Mfg. Co., 113 N.C. 241, 18 S.E. 208 (1893).

§ 31-24. Examination of witnesses by affidavit.

(a) The examination of witnesses to a will may be taken and subscribed in the form of an affidavit before a notary public or other person who is authorized to administer oaths in the jurisdiction where the examination is held.

(b) A photographic copy of the original will certified to be a true and exact copy thereof by the clerk of superior court of the county in which the will is to be probated may be used in the examination of the witnesses in the procedures set out in subsection (a); provided, the said clerk has in his possession the original will at the time of examination of the witnesses.

(c) Affidavits taken in accordance with subsection (a) shall be transmitted by the person taking the affidavit to the clerk of superior court of the county in which the will is to be probated.

(d) Testimony submitted in accordance with subsection (a) is competent in regard to all requirements of G.S. 31-3.3 and to establish that a will was executed in compliance with the requirements of G.S. 31-3.3.

(e) Nothing in this section is to limit or otherwise affect the authority of a clerk of superior court in the exercise of his authority as judge of probate under G.S. 28A-2-1 to:

- (1) Issue subpoenas under G.S. 7A-103; or
- (2) Order the taking of depositions of witnesses. (1917, c. 183; C.S., s. 4149; 1933, c. 114; 1957, c. 587, ss. 1, 1A; 1979, c. 226, s. 1; 1987, c. 78, s. 2.)

§ 31-26: Renumbered as G.S. 31-18.4 by Session Laws 1953, c. 1098, s. 13.

§ 31-27. Certified copy of will of nonresident recorded.

(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b), if the will of a citizen or subject of another state or country is probated in accordance with the laws of that jurisdiction and a duly certified copy of the will and the probate proceedings are produced before a clerk of superior court of any county wherein the testator had property, the copy of the will shall be probated as if it were the original. If the jurisdiction is within the United States, the copy of the will and the probate proceedings shall be certified by the clerk of the court wherein the will was probated. If the jurisdiction is outside the United States, the copy of the will and probate proceedings shall be certified by any ambassador, minister, consul or commercial agent of the United States under his official seal.

(b) For a copy of a will probated under the provisions of subsection (a) to be valid to pass title to or otherwise dispose of real estate in this State, the execution of said will according to the laws of this State must appear affirmatively, to the satisfaction of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which such will is offered for probate, from the testimony of a witness or witnesses to such will, or from findings of fact or recitals in the order of probate, or otherwise in such certified copy of the will and probate proceedings.

(c) If the execution of the will in accordance with the laws of this State does not appear as required by subsection (b), the clerk before whom the copy is exhibited shall have power to take proof as prescribed in G.S. 31-24, and the will may be adjudged duly proved, and if so proved, the will shall be recorded as herein provided.

(d) Any copy of a will of a nonresident heretofore allowed, filed and recorded in this State in compliance with the foregoing shall be valid to pass title to or otherwise dispose of real estate in this State. (C.C.P., s. 444; 1883, c. 144; Code, s. 2156; 1885, c. 393; Rev., s. 3133; C.S., s. 4152; 1941, c. 381; 1965, c. 995; 1987, c. 78, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Probate on Exemplified Copy of Will and Foreign Probate Proceedings — Effect. — Instead of offering a will of a nonresident dying outside the State and disposing of property in the State for original probate in this State, the interested parties may have it probated in the state in which the testator was domiciled. When probated according to the laws of that state, an exemplified copy of the will and the probate proceedings may be brought to this State and probated here. Such a will, unless probated in accordance with the laws of this State, is not sufficient to dispose of real property in this State. It has no efficacy for any purpose in this State until probated here, but when probated here on the exemplified copy, it suffices to pass title to personalty and the right to enforce claims which testator could assert against citizens or properties in this State, even though not executed or proven as required by the laws of this State. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Orderly Arrangement of Pages of Exemplification. — Where the will has been admitted to probate in the court having jurisdiction to admit wills and testaments to probate, even though the pages of the manuscript exemplified copy are not orderly arranged, the will will be admitted to probate and record in this State, under the provisions of this section. Roscoe v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 42, 32 S.E.

389 (1899); John L. Roper Lumber Co. v. Hudson, 153 N.C. 96, 68 S.E. 1065 (1910).

Authentication by Clerk of Court and Not Register of Deeds. — It is necessary to the registration of a copy of a will in this State that the copy or exemplification of the will be duly certified and authenticated by the clerk of the court in which it has been proved or allowed, and if it has been allowed to be registered here under the certificate and seal of the register of deeds in another state it is ineffectual as evidence in a claimant's chain of title. Riley v. Carter, 158 N.C. 484, 74 S.E. 463 (1912).

Appearance and Examination of Attesting Witness Not Necessary. — Under the provisions of this section, it is not required that a will executed and admitted to probate in another state be also probated in this State by the appearance and examination of the attesting witnesses in order to pass title to property here when a copy or exemplification thereof duly certified and authenticated by the clerk of the court in which it had been proven and allowed shall be allowed, filed and recorded in the proper county in this State. The doctrine of Hunter v. Kelly, 92 N.C. 285 (1885), is no more the law. Vaught v. Williams, 177 N.C. 77, 97 S.E. 737 (1919).

Due Record and Certificate of Foreign Probate — Effect. — Where a nonresident testator devises land in this State, and the record of foreign court of probate, duly certified, contains the certificate of probate, which refers to the certified examinations of the witnesses, in accordance with the requirements of G.S. 31-17, the whole forming one transaction, the exemplification of which and of the will being duly recorded in the county where the land lies, the will is sufficiently proved and passes the property. Roscoe v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 42, 32 S.E. 389 (1899).

A will, duly proven and allowed in New York according to this section, when it appears that an exemplified copy thereof so showing has been recorded here in the county where the land lies, is admissible in evidence in the courts of this State, as a link in a chain of title. Vance v. Guy, 223 N.C. 409, 27 S.E.2d 117 (1943).

Mere Allowance, Filing, and Recordation of Foreign Order of Probate Is Insufficient. — A caveat may not be entered to the recordation of an exemplification or authenticated copy of a will and foreign order of probate that has been allowed, filed, and recorded in the office of the clerk, but can only be entered to the probate of such will. In re Will of Lamb, 303 N.C. 452, 279 S.E.2d 781 (1981).

Dissent Proceedings. — The will of a

South Carolina testator was duly probated there and his widow filed a valid dissent thereto. An authenticated copy of the will to be recorded here, under this section, should include as a muniment of title, the proceedings in dissent as same appear of record in the probate court in the county in which the will was probated. Coble v. Coble, 227 N.C. 547, 42 S.E.2d 898 (1947).

Subscription by Two Witnesses Must Appear from Certificate. — Where a certified copy from another state has been recorded, the fact of subscribing by at least two witnesses must appear affirmatively "in the certificate probate or exemplification of the will." The mere recitation in the attestation clause is not affirmative evidence. Raleigh & W. Ry. v. Glendon & Gulf Mining & Mfg. Co., 113 N.C. 241, 18 S.E. 208 (1893).

Applied in Whitten v. Peace, 188 N.C. 298, 124 S.E. 571 (1924); In re Will of Chatman, 228 N.C. 246, 45 S.E.2d 356 (1947); In re Brauff's Will, 247 N.C. 92, 100 S.E.2d 254 (1957); Brickhouse v. Brickhouse, 104 N.C. App. 69, 407 S.E.2d 607 (1991).

§ 31-28. Probates validated where proof taken by commissioner or another clerk.

In all cases of the probate of any will made prior to March 8, 1899, in common form before any clerk of the superior courts of this State, where the testimony of the subscribing witnesses has been taken in the State or out of it by any commissioner appointed by said clerk or taken by any other clerk of the superior court in any other county of this State, and the will admitted to probate upon such testimony, the proceedings are validated. (1899, c. 680; Rev., s. 3134; C.S., s. 4153.)

§ 31-29. Probates in another state before 1860 validated.

In all cases where any will devises land in this State, and the original will was duly admitted to probate in some other state prior to the year 1860, and a certified copy of such will and the probate thereof has been admitted to probate and record in any county in this State, and it in any way appears from such recorded copy that there were two subscribing witnesses to such will, and its execution was proved by the examination of such witnesses when the original was admitted to probate, such will shall be held and considered, and is hereby declared to be, good and valid for the purpose of passing title to the lands devised thereby, situated in this State, as fully and completely as if the original will had been duly executed and admitted to probate and recorded in this State in accordance with the laws of this State. (1913, c. 93, s. 1; C.S., s. 4155.)

§ 31-30. Validation of wills recorded without probate by subscribing witnesses.

In all cases where wills and testaments were executed prior to the first day of January, 1875, and which appear as recorded in the record of last wills and testaments to have had two or more witnesses thereto, and such last wills and testaments were admitted to probate and recorded in the record of wills in the proper county in this State prior to the first day of January, 1888, without having been duly proven as provided by law, and such wills were presented to the clerk of the superior court in any county in this State where the makers of said wills owned property, and where the makers of such wills lived and died, and were by such clerks recorded in the record of wills for his county, said wills and testaments or exemplified copies or certified true copies thereof, so recorded, if otherwise sufficient, shall have the effect to pass the title to real or personal property, or both, therein devised and bequeathed, to the same extent and as completely as if the execution thereof had been duly proven by the two subscribing witnesses thereto in the manner provided by law of this State. Nothing herein shall be construed to prevent such wills from being impeached for fraud. (1921, c. 66; C.S., s. 4157(a); 1997-81, s. 3.)

§ 31-31. Validation of wills admitted on oath of one subscribing witness.

In all cases where last wills and testaments which appear as recorded in the record of last wills and testaments to have had two witnesses thereto and such last wills and testaments were admitted to probate and recorded in the record of wills in the proper county in this State prior to the first day of January, 1890, upon the oath and examination of one of the witnesses, such proof being taken in writing and recorded, and the certificate of probate of the clerk of the court states that such a will is proven by one of the subscribing witnesses thereto and the handwriting of the other subscribing witness being a nonresident is proven under oath, and such a will and certificate has been recorded in the record of wills of the proper county, such probate is hereby validated as fully as if the proof of the handwriting of the nonresident witness had been taken in regular form in writing and recorded. (1929, c. 41, ss. 1, 2.)

CASE NOTES

Presumption That Proper Will Was Revoked. — Trial court erred by permitting the beneficiaries of the decedent's first will to proceed in a caveat proceeding against the decedent's second will after a prima facie showing of the validity of the second will without first rebutting the presumption that they lacked standing to caveat attendant to their production of a mere copy of the first will, as the presumption then existed that the decedent had revoked the first will. In re Will of Barnes, — N.C. App. —, 579 S.E.2d 585, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 643 (2003).

§ 31-31.1. Validation of probates of wills when witnesses examined before notary public; acts of deputy clerks validated.

Whenever any last will and testament has been probated, based upon the examination of the subscribing witness or the subscribing witnesses, taken before a notary public in the county in which the will is probated, or taken before a notary public of any other county, it is hereby in all respects validated and shall be sufficient to pass the title to all real and personal property purported to be transferred thereby.

All acts heretofore performed by deputy clerks of the superior court in taking acknowledgments, examining witnesses and probate of any wills, deeds and other instruments required or permitted by law to be recorded, are hereby validated. Nothing herein contained shall affect pending litigation. (1945, c. 822; 1973, c. 445; 1977, c. 734, s. 1; 1979, c. 226, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 226, which reenacted this section without change, provided, in s. 3, that nothing in the act would affect pending litigation and provided, in s. 4, that: "Section 2 of this act shall apply only to those acts performed on or before the effective date of this act." The act was ratified March 29, 1979, and made effective on ratification.

§ 31-31.2. Validation of wills when recorded without order of probate or registration upon oath and examination of subscribing witness or witnesses.

Whenever any last will and testament has been duly presented to the clerk of the superior court, and the said will together with the oath and examination of the subscribing witness or witnesses thereto taken before a notary public in the county in which the will is probated, or taken before a notary public of any other county, or before the clerk of the superior court of said county, or any other county, is duly recorded in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the said county, without a formal order of probate or registration, such will, if executed in accordance with the laws of this State, is hereby validated with respect to the probate and registration thereof and shall be sufficient to pass title to all real and personal property purported to be transferred thereby to the same extent that the said will would have done so if there had been a formal order of probate and registration. This section shall apply only to wills presented to the clerk of the superior court and recorded prior to the first day of January, 1943. (1951, c. 725.)

ARTICLE 6.

Caveat to Will.

§ 31-32. When and by whom caveat filed.

At the time of application for probate of any will, and the probate thereof in common form, or at any time within three years thereafter, any person entitled under such will, or interested in the estate, may appear in person or by attorney before the clerk of the superior court and enter a caveat to the probate of such will: Provided, that if any person entitled to file a caveat be within the age of 18 years, or insane, or imprisoned, then such person may file a caveat within three years after the removal of such disability.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the first paragraph of this section, as to persons not under disability, a caveat to the probate of a will probated in common form prior to May 1, 1951, must be filed within seven years of the date of probate or within three years from May 1, 1951, whichever period of time is shorter. (C.C.P., s. 446; Code, s. 2158; Rev., s. 3135; 1907, c. 862; C.S., s. 4158; 1925, c. 81; 1951, c. 496, ss. 1, 2; 1971, c. 1231, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Interested Persons.
- III. Time Limit.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The purpose of a caveat is to determine whether the paper-writing purporting to be a will is in fact the last will and testament of the person for whom it is propounded. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Filing of a caveat is the customary and statutory procedure for an attack upon the testamentary value of a paper-writing which has been admitted by the clerk of superior court to probate in common form. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Questions as to the construction of a will may be brought in a declaratory judgment action; however, there are limitations to the use of a declaratory judgment action. Thus, a caveat proceeding and not declaratory judgment was appropriate to determine the validity of document. Rogel v. Johnson, 114 N.C. App. 239, 441 S.E.2d 558, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 609, 447 S.E.2d 401 (1994).

Statute Gives Right and Outlines Procedure. — In this jurisdiction the right to contest a will by caveat is given by statute; and the procedure to be followed is outlined in the statute conferring the right. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948).

Section Strictly Construed. — This section permitting caveats is in derogation of the common law and must be strictly construed. In re Will of Winborne, 231 N.C. 463, 57 S.E.2d 795 (1950).

Superior Court Acquires No Jurisdiction When Purported Caveat Is Fatally Defective from Inception. — Although it is often stated that, when a caveat is filed superior court acquires jurisdiction of whole matter in controversy, such a pronouncement does not alter affirmative statutory requirement that caveat proceedings can only be instituted by due filing of cause before clerk of superior court. When purported caveat is fatally defective from its inception, superior court acquires no jurisdiction over cause. Casstevens v. Wagoner, 99 N.C. App. 337, 392 S.E.2d 776 (1990).

Issue Is Devisavit Vel Non. — Often the issue devisavit vel non is subdivided, according to the angle or nature of the attack, into ancillary issues, the most common of which are those relating to undue influence and testamentary capacity; but every caveat to a will leads to the simple inquiry devisavit vel non, and the rules of procedure are framed with reference to that feature. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948).

The Contest Is a Special Proceeding In Rem. — The contest of a will by caveat is not an ordinary civil action, but a special proceeding in rem leading to the establishment of the will as a testamentary act under the issue devisavit vel non. The in rem nature of the proceeding dominates the investigation, and in many important respects the parties litigant have little of the usual control over the course of trial on the issue. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948). See In re Will of Westfeldt, 188 N.C. 702, 125 S.E. 531 (1924).

A caveat is an in rem proceeding, perhaps more strictly so regarded than any other proceeding with which the courts deal. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Upon the filing of the caveat, the proceeding is transferred to the civil issue docket for trial before a jury. Upon this transfer, notice is given to all interested persons of the challenge, giving them an opportunity to enter and participate in the proceedings to the end that the court may determine whether the decedent left a will and, if so, whether any of the scripts before the court is the will. The proceeding is in rem, in which the court pronounces its judgment as to whether the res, i.e., the script itself, is the will of the deceased. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965).

The rules peculiar to a caveat stem from the in rem nature of the proceeding. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

A proceeding to contest a will is begun by filing a caveat or objection to probate with the clerk of the superior court, who thereupon transfers the proceeding to the civil issue docket of the superior court to the end that the issue of devisavit vel non may be tried in term by a jury. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950), commented on in 29 N.C.L. Rev. 331 (1951).

Contest of Probate Begun by Caveat. — The proceedings in the matter of the probate of a will is summary and in rem, and the contest of the probate is begun by a caveat under this section. In re Haygood's Will, 101 N.C. 574, 8 S.E. 222 (1888).

When Proceeding in Nature of Caveat Necessary. — Where there is no allegation that the probate of the will was otherwise than in strict accord with the statute, and there is no suggestion that the court was imposed upon or misled, the validity of the will may be attacked only by direct proceeding in the nature of a caveat under this section. In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948), citing In re Little's Will, 187 N.C. 177, 121 S.E. 453 (1924).

It is only by a caveat or proceeding in that nature that the validity of a properly probated will, and one without inherent or fatal defect appearing on its face, may be brought in question. In re Will of Spinks, 7 N.C. App. 417, 173 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

The attack upon a will offered for probate must be direct and by caveat. A collateral attack is not permitted. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965); Johnson v. Stevenson, 269 N.C. 200, 152 S.E.2d 214 (1967).

When a paper-writing purporting to be a will is presented to the judge of probate, he takes proof with respect to its execution. If found in order the script is admitted to probate in common form as a will. Thus far the proceeding is ex parte. It stands as the testator's will, and his only will, until challenged and reversed in a proper proceeding before a competent tribunal. The challenge must be by caveat and be heard in the superior court. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965).

Direct Attack by Caveat Held Adequate Remedy. — Where the grounds on which plaintiff sought to establish a constructive trust in property disposed of by her parents' will were equally available as grounds for direct attack on the will by caveat, this right of direct attack by caveat gave plaintiff a full and complete remedy at law, and she was not entitled to equitable relief. Johnson v. Stevenson, 269 N.C. 200, 152 S.E.2d 214 (1967).

Offering Another Will in Another Proceeding Is Collateral Attack. — Offering another will for probate in another proceeding is a collateral and not a direct attack. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965).

But Any Material Script May Be Presented in Caveat Proceeding. — In a caveat proceeding any interested person may present to the court any script which is material to the issue whether there is a will, and if so, what it is. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965).

Thus, Another Purported Will Should Be Offered in Caveat Proceeding. — Any other script purporting to be the decedent's will should be offered and its validity determined in the caveat proceeding. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965); In re Will of Burton, 267 N.C. 729, 148 S.E.2d 862 (1966).

Clerk of Superior Court Has Exclusive and Original Jurisdiction. — Upon the clerk of the superior court the statutes of this State confer exclusive and original jurisdiction of proceedings for probate of wills. By this it is meant that the clerk of the superior court has the sole power in the first instance to determine whether a decedent died testate or intestate, and if he died testate, whether the script in dispute is his will. Walters v. Baptist Children's Home of N.C., Inc., 251 N.C. 369, 111 S.E.2d 707 (1959).

But when a caveat is filed the superior court acquires jurisdiction of the whole matter in controversy. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965); In re Will of Burton, 267 N.C. 729, 148 S.E.2d 862 (1966).

Scope of Subject Matter Jurisdiction. — Caveat filed by decedent's heirs challenging the validity of the will and codicil whereby decedent left her assets to a university barred a later complaint filed by the heirs to the extent the later filed complaint addressed the same issues as alleged in the caveat. Baars v. Campbell Univ., Inc., 148 N.C. App. 408, 558 S.E.2d 871, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 30 (2002), cert. denied, 355 N.C. 490, 563 S.E.2d 563 (2002).

Probate in Common Form Is Valid until Set Aside. — The probate of a will in common form is valid until set aside. In re Beauchamp's Will, 146 N.C. 254, 59 S.E. 687 (1907).

When a will is probated in solemn form it cannot be caveated a second time unless or until the verdict and judgment probating the will in solemn form is set aside upon a motion in the original cause; therefore, the will, if it was first probated in common form, still stands as the last will and testament until declared void in a direct proceeding in the nature of a caveat. In re Will of Burton, 267 N.C. 729, 148 S.E.2d 862 (1966).

And Good Faith Claimants Are Protected until Probate Attacked. — All persons who claim in good faith under a will which has been duly probated in common form as provided by statute are protected by its provisions, until the probate is attacked by a caveat proceeding instituted as provided by this section. Whitehurst v. Hinton, 209 N.C. 392, 184 S.E. 66 (1936).

Nonsuit Cannot Be Taken. — Once the will is propounded for probate in solemn form the proceeding must go on until the issue devisavit vel non is appropriately answered; and no nonsuit can be taken by the propounders or by the caveators. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948). See In re Will of Westfeldt, 188 N.C. 702, 125 S.E. 531 (1924); In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947).

Because the caveat proceeding is in rem, the proceeding must go on until the issue devisavit vel non is appropriately answered; nonsuit cannot be taken by the propounders or the caveators. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Propounder Functions as Plaintiff. — It is the propounder, and not the caveator, who functions as a plaintiff in a caveat proceeding. In re Will of Parker, 76 N.C. App. 594, 334 S.E.2d 97, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 859 (1985).

An attack upon the validity of a will must be direct and in the form of a caveat. In re Will of Hester, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 300, 362 S.E.2d 780 (1987).

The trial court may not exclude from the caveat proceeding consideration of any script offered by an interested party which is relevant to the issue devisavit vel non. However, it does not mandate that the issues relating to all scripts be considered simultaneously. In re Will of Hester, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 300, 362 S.E.2d 780 (1987).

Burden of Proof. — Although a caveat proceeding is an in rem proceeding without a plaintiff and a defendant as such, it is the propounder who has the initial burden of proof, namely, to prove that the instrument in question was executed with the proper formalities required by law. Once this has been established, the burden shifts to the caveator to show that the execution of the will was procured by undue influence. In re Will of Parker, 76 N.C. App. 594, 334 S.E.2d 97, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 859 (1985).

Burden of Proof Satisfied. — In a caveat proceeding the propounders satisfied their burden of showing that there was no genuine issue of fact in controversy and that they were entitled to judgment as a matter of law when they submitted caveator's release and renunciation in support of their motion for summary judgment. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976).

Filing of Caveat as Ground for Modification of Will. — Mere fact that a caveat has been filed, standing alone, is not sufficient ground for modification of the dispositive provisions of a will; the outcome of the litigation must be in doubt to such extent that it is advisable for persons affected to accept the proposed modifications rather than run the risk of the more serious consequences that would result from an adverse verdict. Holt v. Holt, 304 N.C. 137, 282 S.E.2d 784 (1981).

Heirs Not Cited under § 31-33. — The heirs at law of a deceased testator whose will is duly probated and who have no knowledge of proceedings to caveat the will, and who were not cited under the provisions of G.S. 31-33, are not estopped to file a second caveat to the paper-writing, nor bound by the former judgment therein sustaining the validity of the paper-writing propounded. Mills v. Mills, 195 N.C. 595, 143 S.E. 130 (1928).

Where plaintiffs attempted to initiate purported caveat proceedings directly in superior court as part of attack on validity of a deed, trial court had no subject matter jurisdiction to determine will's validity. Casstevens v. Wagoner, 99 N.C. App. 337, 392 S.E.2d 776 (1990).

Mere Allowance, Filing, and Recordation of Foreign Order of Probate Is Insufficient. — A caveat may not be entered to the recordation of an exemplification or authenticated copy of a will and foreign order of probate that has been allowed, filed, and recorded in the office of the clerk, but can only be entered to the probate of such will. In re Will of Lamb, 303 N.C. 452, 279 S.E.2d 781 (1981).

Applied in In re Will of Roediger, 209 N.C. 470, 184 S.E. 74 (1936); In re Will of Peacock, 18 N.C. App. 554, 197 S.E.2d 254 (1973); In re Will of Joyner, 35 N.C. App. 666, 242 S.E.2d 213 (1978); Lash ex rel. Wilson v. Lash, 107 N.C. App. 755, 421 S.E.2d 615 (1992).

II. INTERESTED PERSONS.

This section affords protection to any interested persons who do not receive notice. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

This section permits a person in interest to file a caveat to an alleged will offered for probate, and to contest the validity of such alleged will before it has been admitted to probate. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950), commented on in 29 N.C.L. Rev. 331; Walters v. Baptist Children's Home of N.C., Inc., 251 N.C. 369, 111 S.E.2d 707 (1959); In re Will of Lamb, 303 N.C. 452, 279 S.E.2d 781 (1981).

Any interested person may challenge the will and contest its validity by filing a caveat setting forth the grounds of the challenge. In re Will of Charles, 263 N.C. 411, 139 S.E.2d 588 (1965).

Where a will is probated in common form any interested party may appear and enter a caveat. In re Hedgepeth's Will, 150 N.C. 245, 63 S.E. 1025 (1909); In re Thompson's Will, 178 N.C. 540, 101 S.E. 107 (1919); Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129 (1945).

Any person who has such a direct, immediate, and legally ascertained pecuniary interest in the devolution of the testator's estate as would be impaired or defeated by the probate of the will, or be benefited by setting aside the will, is "a person interested." In re Thompson's Will, 178 N.C. 540, 101 S.E. 107 (1919).

The general rule is that a contestant under this section must have some pecuniary or ben-official interest in the estate that is detrimentally affected by the will. In re Will of Calhoun, 47 N.C. App. 472, 267 S.E.2d 385, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 90, 273 S.E.2d 311 (1980).

A caveat to a will may be filed only by persons "entitled under such will or interested in the estate." And G.S. 31-33, directing the issue of citations, "to all devisee, legatees, or other parties in interest," does not enlarge the definition of interest given in this section. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948).

The right to interfere in a question of probate belongs to a party in interest, which must mean some person whose rights will be affected by the probate of the instrument to the prejudice of the party. In re Thompson's Will, 178 N.C. 540, 101 S.E. 107 (1919). See Armstrong v. Baker, 31 N.C. 109 (1848).

The right to contest the validity of a writing offered for probate or probated in common form is, by this section, limited to "any person entitled under such will or interested in the estate." In re Will of Belvin, 261 N.C. 275, 134 S.E.2d 225 (1964).

Person Interested Against Will May Both Apply for Probate and File Caveat. — The probate powers of the judiciary afford a complete remedy to a person interested against an alleged will in instances where those interested for the alleged will do not propound it for probate. He may invoke such remedy by the simple expedient of simultaneously applying to the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction to have the script probated or proved, i.e., tested, and filing a caveat asking that it be declared invalid as a testamentary instrument. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950), commented on in 29 N.C.L. Rev. 331.

It is immaterial whether those appearing and protesting call themselves interveners, objectors or caveators if they place themselves in opposition to the propounders. By a caveat legal rights are put in stake. In re Will of Rowland, 202 N.C. 373, 162 S.E. 897 (1932); In re Will of Puett, 229 N.C. 8, 47 S.E.2d 488 (1948).

It takes only one interested person to caveat a will under this section, and it becomes the duty of the clerk thereupon to bring in interested persons under G.S. 31-33. When they come in they may align themselves as they will. Bailey v. McLain, 215 N.C. 150, 1 S.E.2d 372 (1939), discussed in 18 N.C.L. Rev. 76.

Purchasers from Heirs May File Caveat. — The purchasers of land from the heirs of the deceased owner "are interested in the estate" within the intent and meaning of this section. In re Thompson's Will, 178 N.C. 540, 101 S.E. 107 (1919).

Beneficiaries under Alleged Prior Will Are Interested. — Caveators who allege they are beneficiaries under a prior will of deceased made at a time when he possessed mental capacity are, if the facts be as alleged, interested in the estate. In re Will of Belvin, 261 N.C. 275, 134 S.E.2d 225 (1964).

Beneficiaries under a prior paper-writing are persons interested within the purview of this section and are entitled to file a caveat to a subsequent instrument probated in common form, notwithstanding they are not heirs of the deceased and are not named as beneficiaries in the writing they seek to nullify. Sigmund Sternberger Found. v. Tannenbaum, 273 N.C. 658, 161 S.E.2d 116 (1968).

Beneficiaries Under Alleged Prior Will Failed to Overcome Presumption of the Revocation of the Prior Will. — Trial court erred by permitting the beneficiaries of the decedent's first will to proceed in a caveat proceeding against the decedent's second will without first rebutting the presumption that they lacked standing to caveat attendant to their production of a mere copy of the first will, as the presumption then existed that the decedent had revoked the first will. In re Will of Barnes, — N.C. App. —, 579 S.E.2d 585, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 643 (2003).

Executor. — A named executor is not a person interested in the event of the caveat proceeding within the meaning of the dead man's statute. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Membership in Congregation. — Membership in a church congregation, albeit distinguished membership, is too tenuous an interest to come within the meaning of the dead man's statute. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

III. TIME LIMIT.

Purpose. — By this section, the legislature recognized that it is against the sound public policy to allow probate of wills and settlements of property rights thereunder to be left open to uncertainties for an indefinite length of time. In re Will of Johnson, 182 N.C. 522, 109 S.E. 373 (1921).

Time Limitation Is Substantive. — The time limitation contained in this section has been held to be a "substantive" limitation on the right of action. In re Evans, 46 N.C. App. 72, 264 S.E.2d 387 (1980).

When Probate May Be Caveated. — The probate of a will in common form, being an ex parte proceeding on application of the propounder, may be caveated at the time of application for probate or at any time within seven (now three) years thereafter by "any person entitled under such will, or interested in the estate." In re Ellis' Will, 235 N.C. 27, 69 S.E.2d 25 (1952).

Prior to the 1907 amendment there was no express period of limitation upon the right to file a caveat to the probate of a will, but it was judicially recognized that the right might be lost by unreasonable delay. Gray v. Maer, 20 N.C. 41 (1838); Etheridge v. Corprew, 48 N.C. 14 (1855); In re Beauchamp's Will, 146 N.C. 254, 59 S.E. 687 (1907); In re Hedgepeth's Will, 150 N.C. 245, 63 S.E. 1025 (1909); In re Dupree, 163 N.C. 256, 79 S.E. 611 (1913); In re Bateman's Will, 168 N.C. 234, 84 S.E. 272 (1915); In re Witherington's Will, 186 N.C. 152, 119 S.E. 11 (1923).

Only Extrinsic Fraud Tolls Period of Limitation. — The general rule is that when a statute creating the right to contest a will and imposing a limitation of time therefor is construed as affixing an inseparable condition to the exercise of the right, that period so limited will not be tolled by fraud other than extrinsic fraud which would vitiate the probate proceeding. In re Evans, 46 N.C. App. 72, 264 S.E.2d 387 (1980).

A contest not timely instituted based on other than extrinsic fraud is wholly barred although by reason of the wrongful conduct of the propounder, the contestants were not apprised of the situation soon enough to comply with the limitation requirement. In re Evans, 46 N.C. App. 72, 264 S.E.2d 387 (1980).

Intrinsic and Extrinsic Fraud Distinguished. — The question of fraud in obtaining the execution of a will, undue influence, forgery, and the like may be submitted to the probate court in a direct attack on the will by caveat. Fraud of this nature is intrinsic fraud. Extrinsic fraud, on the other hand, relates to the manner in which the judgment is procured. It must relate to matters not in issue and prevent a real contest in the trial. In re Evans, 46 N.C. App. 72, 264 S.E.2d 387 (1980).

Question of Whether Cause Barred as Matter of Law. — While ordinarily whether a cause is barred by the apposite statute of limitations is a mixed question of law and fact, where the facts are admitted or established, the question of the bar of the applicable statute pleaded becomes a question of law, and when such facts disclose that the action is barred the court may sustain the plea and dismiss the action. In re Evans, 46 N.C. App. 72, 264 S.E.2d 387 (1980).

Condition Not Subject to Waiver. — The requirement that caveat proceedings be instituted within seven (now three) years from the probate of the will in common form is a condition attached to the right to file caveat and may not be waived by the parties. In re Will of Winborne, 231 N.C. 463, 57 S.E.2d 795 (1950).

Attack on Will for Vagueness and Uncertainty. — A will is not subject to caveat or collateral attack 27 years after it has been probated in common form; but if the will is void for vagueness and uncertainty it is a nullity and may be attacked directly or collaterally or treated as ineffective, anywhere at any time. Burchett v. Mason, 233 N.C. 306, 63 S.E.2d 634 (1951).

Caveat in Spite of Outstanding Life Estate. — One who is authorized by law to caveat a will is not required to await the falling-in of an outstanding life estate, and such time is not excluded from the computation of period limited in which a caveat to a will may be filed. In re Will of Witherington, 186 N.C. 152, 119 S.E. 11 (1923).

Application to Clerk within Time No Excuse for Delay. — Where parties seeking to caveat a will have forfeited their right to do so by unreasonable delay and acquiescence, the mere fact that they had applied several times when their rights would have been allowed, and the clerk declined and refused to entertain the application because the parties failed to give a proper bond as required by law, does not affect the result, for no caveat is properly constituted until the statutory requirements are met; and if it had been so constituted, the absence of notice issued in reasonable time works a discontinuance. In re Dupree, 163 N.C. 256, 79 S.E. 611 (1913).

Married Women. — Since the enactment of statutes fully emancipating a feme covert from her disabilities, the provisions of this section barring the right to caveat a will after seven years (now three years) with certain exceptions, apply equally to her. In re Will of Witherington, 186 N.C. 152, 119 S.E. 11 (1923).

§ 31-33. Bond given and cause transferred to trial docket.

When a caveator shall have given bond with surety approved by the clerk, in the sum of two hundred dollars ($200.00), payable to the propounder of the will, conditioned upon the payment of all costs which shall be adjudged against such caveator in the superior court or when a caveator shall have deposited money or given a mortgage in lieu of such bond, or shall have filed affidavits and satisfied the clerk of his inability to give such bond or otherwise secure such costs, the clerk shall transfer the cause to the superior court for trial. Such caveator shall cause notice of the caveat proceeding to be given to all devisees, legatees, or other persons in interest in the manner provided for service of process by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j) and (k). The notice shall advise such devisees, legatees, or other persons in interest, of the session of superior court to which the proceeding has been transferred and shall call upon them to appear and make themselves proper parties to the proceeding if they so choose. At the session of court to which such proceeding is transferred, or as soon thereafter as motion to that effect shall be made by the propounder, and before trial, the judge shall require any of the devisees, legatees or other persons in interest so cited, either those who make themselves parties with the caveators or whose interests appear to him antagonistic to that of the propounders of the will, to align themselves and to file bond within such time as he shall direct and before trial. Upon the failure of any party to file such bond, the judge shall dismiss that party from the proceeding but that party shall be bound by the proceeding. (C.C.P., s. 447; Code, s. 2159; 1899, c. 13; 1901, c. 748; Rev., s. 3136; 1909, c. 74; C.S., s. 4159; 1947, c. 781; 1971, c. 528, s. 29; 1973, c. 458.)

CASE NOTES

Court Had No Jurisdiction to Determine Will's Validity Where Plaintiff's Attempt to Initiate Caveat Was Part of Attack on Deed. — Where plaintiffs attempted to initiate purported caveat proceedings directly in superior court as part of attack on validity of a deed, trial court had no subject matter jurisdiction to determine question of will's validity. Casstevens v. Wagoner, 99 N.C. App. 337, 392 S.E.2d 776 (1990).

Although it is often stated that, when a caveat is filed superior court acquires jurisdiction of whole matter in controversy, such a pronouncement does not alter affirmative statutory requirement that caveat proceedings can only be instituted by due filing of cause before clerk of superior court. When a purported caveat is fatally defective from its inception, superior court acquires no jurisdiction over cause. Casstevens v. Wagoner, 99 N.C. App. 337, 392 S.E.2d 776 (1990).

Clerk's Findings Not Binding When Issue of Fact Raised. — Interested parties in a proceeding before a clerk of the Superior Court to probate a will in solemn form are not bound by the findings of the clerk where an issue of fact is raised by the parties. In re Will of Ellis, 235 N.C. 27, 69 S.E.2d 25 (1952).

Proceedings Transferred to Civil Issue Docket. — Where a caveat to a will is duly filed, with the required bond, etc., it is required of the clerk to transfer the proceedings to the civil issue docket for trial of the issue of devisavit vel non, and all further steps are stayed in the matter until its final adjudication, except such as may be necessary for the preservation of the estate. In re Little's Will, 187 N.C. 177, 121 S.E. 453 (1924).

When a caveat is filed, the clerk of superior court transfers the proceeding to the civil issue docket of the superior court, to the end that the issue devisavit vel non may be tried by a jury. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

For Trial by Jury. — When an issue of devisavit vel non is raised by caveat it is tried in the superior court by a jury. In re Will of Chisman, 175 N.C. 420, 95 S.E. 769 (1918); In re Rowland, 202 N.C. 373, 162 S.E. 897 (1932); In re Bartlett's Will, 235 N.C. 489, 70 S.E.2d 482 (1952).

When a caveat is filed and bond given, the clerk does not take testimony, he submits no issue to the jury, but immediately transfers the cause to the superior court in term, which submits to a jury issues necessary to determine the validity of the instrument asserted to be the will of deceased. In re Will of Belvin, 261 N.C. 275, 134 S.E.2d 225 (1964).

Which Cannot Be Waived. — Upon the proper filing of a caveat the cause must be transferred to the civil issue docket where the proceeding is in rem for trial by jury, and neither party may waive jury trial, consent that the court hear the evidence and find the determinative facts or have nonsuit entered at his instance. In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947). See In re Will of Roediger, 209 N.C. 470, 184 S.E. 74 (1936).

Upon such trial the propounder carries the burden of proof to establish the formal execution of the will. This he must do by proving the will per testes in solemn form. In re Will of Chisman, 175 N.C. 420, 95 S.E. 769 (1918); In re Rowland, 202 N.C. 373, 162 S.E. 897 (1932).

Upon the filing of a caveat to a will probated in common form the propounder must prove the will per testes in solemn form, and the burden is upon him to show (1) the formal execution as prescribed by statute; (2) the contents, if the original was not produced; (3) the loss of the original will or that it had not been destroyed by the testator or with his consent or procurement. In re Hedgepeth's Will, 150 N.C. 245, 63 S.E. 1025 (1909).

Compliance with this section in respect to bond for costs is prerequisite to the institution of a caveat proceeding, and the mere filing of the caveat without compliance with the statute constitutes no valid attack upon the will and is insufficient to authorize the clerk to issue the required citations to bring interested parties into court. In re Will of Winborne, 231 N.C. 463, 57 S.E.2d 795 (1950).

Where caveat is filed without compliance with this section relating to bond, there is no valid caveat, and after the expiration of seven (now three) years the right to file caveat ceases to exist and may not be revived by the giving of a cash bond under an extension of time granted by the court after the expiration of the statutory period. In re Will of Winborne, 231 N.C. 463, 57 S.E.2d 795 (1950).

Caveat filed without compliance with bond requirement under this section is not a valid attack upon the will. In re Will of Parker, 76 N.C. App. 594, 334 S.E.2d 97, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 859 (1985).

Heirs-at-Law Should Have Been Dismissed for Failing to File a Bond After Notice of Caveat Proceeding Was Received. — Trial judge should have dismissed the heirs-at-law from a caveat proceeding for not filing a bond after they received notice of the proceeding. In re Will of Barnes, — N.C. App. —, 579 S.E.2d 585, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 643 (2003).

A check deposited with the clerk to be held in lieu of bond is insufficient to meet the requirements of this section. In re Will of Winborne, 231 N.C. 463, 57 S.E.2d 795 (1950).

Bringing in Interested Persons. — In this State it takes only one interested person to caveat a will under G.S. 31-32 and it becomes the duty of the clerk, under this section, to bring in interested persons. When they come in they may align themselves as they will. Bailey v. McLain, 215 N.C. 150, 1 S.E.2d 372 (1939).

The persons interested are not cited as parties to the proceeding but merely as interested persons to view proceedings and participate if they elect to do so, although no doubt the court, when properly and timely advised, would cause citation to issue to anyone designated by statute as interested who has been omitted. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948).

In a caveat proceeding, neither the grantees in deeds executed by testator prior to his death nor the persons to whom such grantees have conveyed the property, either before or after testator's death, nor the heirs at law of deceased grantees are necessary parties to the determination of the issue of devisavit vel non when such persons are not beneficiaries under the will nor heirs of testator, and therefore, even if it be conceded they are proper parties, the trial judge, in the exercise of his discretion, is under no legal obligation to order citations to bring them in. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948).

Who Are Necessary Parties. — Persons who qualify as persons interested in the estate are not necessarily equivalent to necessary parties. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Discretion of Court as to Necessary Parties. — The decision whether certain persons are necessary parties to the caveat proceeding is within the court's discretion. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Persons who will share in the estate under the law governing intestacy in case a script which purports to be the will of the deceased is adjudged invalid are proper persons to receive notice and participate in the proceedings within the meaning of this section. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Beneficiaries Under Previous Will. — Where caveators alleged that probated will was invalid on grounds of undue influence and lack of mental capacity and that they were beneficiaries under a will made at a time when the testator possessed mental capacity, if the facts were as caveators alleged, they were interested in the estate. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

Heirs at law who have no knowledge of a caveat proceeding and who were not cited under this section are not estopped to file a second caveat, nor are they bound by the former judgment sustaining the validity of the script. In re Will of Hester, 84 N.C. App. 585, 353 S.E.2d 643, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801 (1987).

When Personal Representative of Executrix Not Necessary Party. — Where the executrix has fully administered the estate and filed her final account prior to the filing of a caveat, and has died pending the caveat proceeding, it is not necessary that the court appoint a personal representative for the deceased executrix nor an administrator d.b.n. for the estate of the testator so that they may be made parties to the proceeding. In re Will of Brock, 229 N.C. 482, 50 S.E.2d 555 (1948).

§ 31-34. Prosecution bond required in actions to contest wills.

When any action is instituted to contest a will the clerk of the superior court will require the prosecution bond required in other civil actions: Provided, however, that provisions for bringing suit in forma pauperis shall also apply to the provisions of this section. (1937, c. 383.)

Legal Periodicals. — As to purpose of section, see 15 N.C.L. Rev. 352 (1937).

CASE NOTES

This section is not applicable to a caveator. Therefore, a prosecution bond cannot be required of a caveator in an action to contest a will. In re Will of Parker, 76 N.C. App. 594, 334 S.E.2d 97, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 859 (1985).

§ 31-35. Affidavit of witness as evidence.

Whenever the subscribing witness to any will shall die, or be insane or mentally incompetent, or be absent beyond the State, it shall be competent upon any issue of devisavit vel non to give in evidence the affidavits and proofs taken by the clerk upon admitting the will to probate in common form, and such affidavit and proceedings before the clerk shall be prima facie evidence of the due and legal execution of said will. (1899, c. 680, s. 2; Rev., s. 3121; C.S., s. 4160; 1947, c. 781.)

Legal Periodicals. — For brief comment on the 1947 amendment, see 25 N.C.L. Rev. 478 (1947).

§ 31-36. Caveat suspends proceedings under will.

Where a caveat is entered and bond given, the clerk of the superior court shall forthwith issue an order to any personal representative, having the estate in charge, to suspend all further proceedings in relation to the estate, except the preservation of the property and the collection of debts and payment of all taxes and debts that are a lien upon the property of the decedent, as may be allowed by order of the clerk of the superior court, until a decision of the issue is had. (C.C.P., s. 448; Code, s. 2160; Rev., s. 3137; C.S., s. 4161; 1927, c. 119.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — This section is manifestly intended, in cases to which it is applicable, to dispense with the necessity of appointing an administrator pendente lite, and confers very similar forms upon the executor, and more especially when he has entered upon the duties of his office before the caveat is entered. Syme v. Broughton, 86 N.C. 153 (1882).

The prosecution of the action in order to collect the debts is evidently sanctioned by the statute and in furtherance of the purpose of its enactment. Hughes v. Hodges, 94 N.C. 56 (1886).

Effect of Caveat upon Rights and Duties of Representative. — The filing of a caveat suspends further proceedings in the administration of the estate, but does not deprive the executor or executrix of the right to the possession of the assets of the estate. Elledge v. Hawkins, 208 N.C. 757, 182 S.E. 468 (1935).

The executor is not divested of all his representative powers; nor is the first probate vacated absolutely when the issue touching the will is made up to be tried; nor is there a necessity meanwhile for the appointment of an administrator pendente lite. The function of the executor is suspended only until the controversy is ended, and he is still required to take care of the estate in his hands and may proceed in the collection of debts due the deceased. Randolph v. Hughes, 89 N.C. 428 (1883); In re Palmer, 117 N.C. 133, 23 S.E. 104 (1895).

In the observance of the mandate to preserve the property the executor may operate and manage the property in the exercise of that degree of care, diligence and honesty which he would exercise in the management of his own property, or he may institute a civil action in which all persons having an interest are made parties and request the court in its equity jurisdiction to authorize such operation, or he may apply to the clerk in his probate jurisdiction for such authorization. C.L. Hardy & Co. v. Turnage, 204 N.C. 538, 168 S.E. 823 (1933).

Preservation of Estate Pending Final Determination of Issue. — Under the provisions of this section, the executor is charged with the preservation of the estate pending final determination of the issue raised by the caveat, unless and until he be removed, and it is error for the court to appoint commissioners to handle the estate. In re Tatum's Will, 233 N.C. 723, 65 S.E.2d 351 (1951).

Suspension does not prevent the administrator from suing and being sued. Hargrave v. Gardner, 264 N.C. 117, 141 S.E.2d 36 (1965).

Thus, administrator has authority to defend an action against the estate for collection of an alleged debt. Hargrave v. Gardner, 264 N.C. 117, 141 S.E.2d 36 (1965).

May Be Sued and Sell Land; May Not Pay Legacies. — An executor, or administrator c.t.a., after the will is proved in common form, may be sued, and by leave of court may sell property to pay debts, but cannot pay legacies or exercise other special powers given in the will, where issues upon a caveat are pending; the right to execute the will is suspended until the determination of the suit. Syme v. Broughton, 86 N.C. 153 (1882).

Office of Representative Continued. — The proper construction of this section is that after probate is granted in common form and there is an executor who acts or an administrator with the will annexed appointed, his office is intended to be continued during a controversy about the will, and he has all the power and is subjected to all the liabilities of an administrator or an executor, except that his right to dispose of the estate according to the provisions of the will is suspended until the final determination of the suit. In re Palmer, 117 N.C. 133, 23 S.E. 104 (1895).

Effect of Absence of Order to Suspend Proceeding. — In the absence of an order to suspend further proceedings upon the filing of a caveat, as provided by this section, the acts of the executor in filing a petition or proceeding with the sale of the land were not void nor were the rights of purchasers affected. Carraway v. Lassiter, 139 N.C. 145, 51 S.E. 968 (1905).

The clerk of a superior court cannot enter an order vacating the probate of a will after a caveat has been filed and the cause transferred to the civil issue docket of the superior court for trial in term. In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947). See note to § 31-19.

Where the clerk of the superior court has admitted to probate in common form a purported will and two purported codicils as the last will and testament of a deceased, and caveat has been properly filed as to the second codicil and the cause transferred to the civil issue docket, the clerk may not thereafter upon motion expunge from his records the entire probate proceedings and reprobate the purported will and second codicil on the ground that the second codicil revoked the first. In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947).

Error Held Not Cured by Affirmance of Order. — Where a clerk is without jurisdiction to make an order in probate proceedings, by reason of the filing of a caveat and the transfer of the cause to the civil issue docket, the error in making the order is not cured by the order of the resident judge of the superior court who heard the motion on appeal and affirmed the order, for the jurisdiction of the superior court in such a case is derivative, and G.S. 1-276 [see now G.S. 1-301.1 et seq.] does not apply. In re Will of Hine, 228 N.C. 405, 45 S.E.2d 526 (1947).

§ 31-37. Superior court clerks to enter notice of caveat on will book; final judgment also to be entered.

Wherever a caveat is filed with the clerk of the superior court of any county in the State to any last will and testament which has been admitted to probate in said office, it shall be the duty of such clerk, and he is hereby directed to give notice of the filing of such caveat by making an entry upon the page of the will book where such last will and testament is recorded, evidencing that such caveat has been filed and giving the date of such filing. When such caveat and proceedings resulting therefrom shall have resulted in final judgment with respect to such will, the clerk of the court shall make a further entry upon the page of the will book where such last will and testament is recorded to the effect that final judgment has been entered, either sustaining or setting aside such will. (1929, c. 81.)

§ 31-37.1. Parties may enter into a settlement agreement.

Prior to an entry of judgment by the superior court in a caveat proceeding, the parties may enter into a settlement agreement, whereupon judgment may be entered by the court, without a verdict by a jury, in accordance with the terms of the settlement agreement, either sustaining or setting aside the contested will. (1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 949, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 7.

Construction of Will.

§ 31-38. Devise presumed to be in fee.

When real estate shall be devised to any person, the same shall be held and construed to be a devise in fee simple, unless such devise shall, in plain and express words, show, or it shall be plainly intended by the will, or some part thereof, that the testator intended to convey an estate of less dignity. (1784, c. 204, s. 12; R.C., c. 119, s. 26; Code, s. 2180; Rev., s. 3138; C.S., s. 4162.)

- III. Illustrative Cases.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section Changes Common-Law Rule. — The common-law rule that a devise without words of perpetuity or limitation conveyed a life estate only unless there is a manifest intention to convey the fee has been changed by this section. Henderson v. Western Carolina Power Co., 200 N.C. 443, 157 S.E. 425 (1931).

This section merely changed the common-law rule that a devise without words of perpetuity or limitation conveyed a life estate only. Thompson v. Ward, 36 N.C. App. 593, 244 S.E.2d 485, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 556, 248 S.E.2d 735 (1978).

The purpose of this section was to change the common-law rule that a devise of lands without words of perpetuity conveyed a life estate only unless there was a manifest intention to convey the fee. Morris v. Morris, 246 N.C. 314, 98 S.E.2d 298 (1957); Clark v. Connor, 253 N.C. 515, 117 S.E.2d 465 (1960).

And it is similar to § 39-1 pertaining to deeds. Hence, what has been held in applying the rule of construction as to wills is pertinent in applying the rule of construction as to deeds. Artis v. Artis, 228 N.C. 754, 47 S.E.2d 228 (1948). See Vickers v. Leigh, 104 N.C. 248, 10 S.E. 308 (1889).

Section Applies to Real and Personal Property. — The provisions of this section apply to the disposition by will of both personal and real property. Worsley v. Worsley, 260 N.C. 259, 132 S.E.2d 579 (1963); YWCA v. Morgan, 281 N.C. 485, 189 S.E.2d 169 (1972).

The presumption created by this section by its own terms may be overcome by a showing that the will plainly intended to convey an estate of less dignity. Adcock v. Perry, 305 N.C. 625, 290 S.E.2d 608 (1982).

Where testator, after devising his wife a life estate in his realty with remainder over to his children, bequeathed his wife "all or so much of my personal property ... as she may desire to have and to use or dispose of during her lifetime," and directed that all personal property not so sold or disposed of should be divided among his children, the residuary legatees, it was held that the expressed intent of the testator negated the statutory presumption that he gave his personal estate unconditionally to his wife. Worsley v. Worsley, 260 N.C. 259, 132 S.E.2d 579 (1963).

The presumption established by this section that a devise of land shall be construed in fee, etc., gives way to the intent of the testator as gathered from the proper construction of the instrument as a related whole. Roberts v. Saunders, 192 N.C. 191, 134 S.E. 451 (1926).

A general devise of realty does not pass the fee when it clearly appears from the will that the testator intended to convey an estate of less dignity. Hampton v. West, 212 N.C. 315, 193 S.E. 290 (1937); Strickland v. Johnson, 213 N.C. 581, 197 S.E. 193 (1938).

The rule that a devise of the "use of" property is the equivalent of a devise in fee ... has no application when a will shows an intent to pass an interest that is less than a fee. Cassada v. Cassada, 103 N.C. App. 129, 404 S.E.2d 491, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 786, 408 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

Unrestricted Devise Passes Fee. — It has been uniformly held, since the passage of this statute in 1784, that an unrestricted devise of real estate passes the fee. Roane v. Robinson, 189 N.C. 628, 127 S.E. 626 (1925); Barbee v. Thompson, 194 N.C. 411, 139 S.E. 838 (1927); Bell v. Gillam, 200 N.C. 411, 157 S.E. 60 (1931); Stephens v. Clark, 211 N.C. 84, 189 S.E. 191 (1937); Strickland v. Johnson, 213 N.C. 581, 197 S.E. 193 (1938).

An unrestricted devise of realty, nothing else appearing, constitutes a devise in fee. Elder v. Johnston, 227 N.C. 592, 42 S.E.2d 904 (1947).

An unrestricted or indefinite devise of real property is regarded as a devise in fee simple. Adcock v. Perry, 52 N.C. App. 724, 279 S.E.2d 871 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 305 N.C. 625, 290 S.E.2d 608 (1982).

A devise generally or indefinitely with power of disposition creates a fee. But a devise for life with power of disposition creates a life estate only. Hardee v. Rivers, 228 N.C. 66, 44 S.E.2d 476 (1947).

Unless a will contains plain and express language, showing that the testator did not intend to devise a fee, the devise will be construed as one in fee simple. Basnight v. Dill, 256 N.C. 474, 124 S.E.2d 159 (1962); Adcock v. Perry, 52 N.C. App. 724, 279 S.E.2d 871 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 305 N.C. 625, 290 S.E.2d 608 (1982).

No technical words of conveyance are required in wills. Alston v. Davis, 118 N.C. 202, 24 S.E. 15 (1896); Keith v. Scales, 124 N.C. 497, 32 S.E. 809 (1899).

Words of Perpetuity Not Required to Create Fee. — Since this section no words of perpetuity are required and a devise without them will carry the fee unless it appears from the will the testator intended to convey an estate less than the fee. Morris v. Morris, 246 N.C. 314, 98 S.E.2d 298 (1957).

Applied in Morris v. Waggoner, 209 N.C. 183, 183 S.E. 353 (1936); Blackwood v. Blackwood, 237 N.C. 726, 76 S.E.2d 122 (1953); Walters v. Baptist Children's Home of N.C., Inc., 251 N.C. 369, 111 S.E.2d 707 (1959); Poindexter v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 258 N.C. 371, 128 S.E.2d 867 (1963); Keener v. Korn, 46 N.C. App. 214, 264 S.E.2d 829 (1980).

Tayloe*, 219 N.C. 363, 13 S.E.2d 609 (1941); Perry v. Bassenger, 219 N.C. 838, 15 S.E.2d 365 (1941); Elmore v. Austin, 232 N.C. 13, 59 S.E.2d 205 (1950); Wells v. Day, 88 N.C. App. 101, 362 S.E.2d 587 (1987).

II. RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

Intention of Testator. — The rule is elementary that the intention of the testator is the polar star which is to guide in the interpretation of all wills, and, when ascertained, effect will be given to it unless it violates some rule of law, or is contrary to public policy. In ascertaining this intention the language used, and the sense in which it is used by the testator is the primary source of information, as it is the expressed intention of the testator which is sought. Clark v. Connor, 253 N.C. 515, 117 S.E.2d 465 (1960); Wing v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 301 N.C. 456, 272 S.E.2d 90 (1980).

The testator's intent gathered from the entire will controls its interpretation. This rule applies to the construction of this section when it appears that the testator devised certain lands without the words of inheritance, and that his intent, gathered from a separate item of the will, was to create a defeasible estate in the first taker, contingent upon his dying at any time, whether before or after the death of the testator, leaving issue surviving him. Rees v. Williams, 165 N.C. 201, 81 S.E. 286 (1914).

The cardinal principle to be followed when construing a will is to give effect to the general intent of the testator as that intent appears from a consideration of the entire instrument. Adcock v. Perry, 52 N.C. App. 724, 279 S.E.2d 871 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 305 N.C. 625, 290 S.E.2d 608 (1982).

The intent of the testatrix is her will and must be carried out unless some rule of law forbids it. In re Will of Wilson, 260 N.C. 482, 133 S.E.2d 189 (1963).

The basic rule of construction, and the refrain of every opinion which seeks to comprehend a testamentary plan, is that the intent of the testator is the polar star that must guide the courts in the interpretation of a will. In re Will of Wilson, 260 N.C. 482, 133 S.E.2d 189 (1963).

The rule, that an unrestricted or general devise of real property, to which is affixed, either specifically or by implication, an unlimited power of disposition in the first taker, conveys the fee and a subsequent clause in the will purporting to dispose of what remains at his death is not allowed to defeat the devise nor limit it to a life estate, as well as all rules of construction, must yield to the paramount intent of the testator as gathered from the four corners of the will. Quickel v. Quickel, 261 N.C. 696, 136 S.E.2d 52 (1964).

Primary object in interpreting a will is to give effect to the intention of the testator. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Presumption Against Intestacy. — It is a long-standing policy of the State of North Carolina to construe a will with the presumption that the testator did not intend to die intestate with respect to any part of his property. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Consideration of Will as Whole. — The intent of the testator must be ascertained from a consideration of the will as a whole and not merely from consideration of specific items or phrases of the will in isolation. Adcock v. Perry, 52 N.C. App. 724, 279 S.E.2d 871 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 305 N.C. 625, 290 S.E.2d 608 (1982).

Ordinary Words. — Generally, ordinary words are to be given their usual and ordinary meaning, and technical words are presumed to have been used in a technical sense. Clark v. Connor, 253 N.C. 515, 117 S.E.2d 465 (1960).

Words with Well-Defined Legal Significance. — If words or phrases are used which have a well-defined legal significance, established by a line of judicial decisions, they will be presumed to have been used in that sense, in the absence of evidence of a contrary intent. Clark v. Connor, 253 N.C. 515, 117 S.E.2d 465 (1960).

Isolated Clauses or Sentences. — Isolated clauses or sentences are not to be considered by themselves, but the will is to be considered as a whole, and its different clauses and provisions examined and compared, so as to ascertain the general plan and purpose of the testator, if there be one. Clark v. Connor, 253 N.C. 515, 117 S.E.2d 465 (1960).

Prior Decisions. — Little or no aid can be derived by a court in construing a will from prior decisions in other will cases. It is not sufficient that the same words in substance or even literally have been construed in other cases. It often happens that the same identical words require very different constructions according to context and the peculiar circumstances of each case. Clark v. Connor, 253 N.C. 515, 117 S.E.2d 465 (1960).

General Interest Prevails over a Particular Interest. — The provisions of this section, while laying down a rule of construction, still leave the question of the intention of the testator open for construction, and where there is a particular and a general paramount interest apparent in the same will, and they clash, the general interest must prevail. Leeper v. Neagle, 94 N.C. 338 (1886).

III. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Devise of Use of Property. — Where testatrix only devised the "use of" the property so long as the beneficiaries "wish to live there," she "in plain and express words" showed an intent to devise less than the fee. While the courts have held that the devise of the "use of" property is the equivalent of a devise in fee, the rule has no application, when the will shows an intent to pass an interest that is less than a fee. Thompson v. Ward, 36 N.C. App. 593, 244

S.E.2d 485, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 556, 248 S.E.2d 735 (1978).

Gift of Personalty with Full Power to Use Is Absolute. — Where there is no residuary clause in the will and no limitation over so far as the personal property is concerned, a gift of personal property for life to the primary object of testator's bounty, with power to use "in any way that she may desire" is generally construed to be an absolute gift of the property. Worsley v. Worsley, 260 N.C. 259, 132 S.E.2d 579 (1963).

Testator devised to his daughters, B and M, all of his real estate after the death of his widow, and also to his daughter T an equal life interest therein with B and M, "or so long as the said T may remain a widow." Upon the death of the testator's widow, B and M took in remainder a fee simple estate, the intent of the testator being to provide for T, who remained unmarried and is now deceased, during her widowhood. Barbee v. Thompson, 194 N.C. 411, 139 S.E. 838 (1927).

The clause "I give, devise and bequeath" to named devisee, described realty, standing alone, constitutes a devise in fee simple. Buckner v. Hawkins, 230 N.C. 99, 52 S.E.2d 16 (1949).

The words "give, devise and bequeath," used by a testatrix in devising her property to a husband and wife as tenants by the entireties, in light of the provisions of this section, gave them a fee simple title to the devised property. Basnight v. Dill, 256 N.C. 474, 124 S.E.2d 159 (1962).

A devise of real estate to devisees "to do as they like with it," with subsequent provision that after their death whatever property is left should go to testatrix' niece, vests the fee simple in the beneficiaries first named. Taylor v. Taylor, 228 N.C. 275, 45 S.E.2d 368 (1947).

A devise generally to one person with limitation over to another of "whatever is left" at the death of the first taker is regarded as a devise in fee simple. Taylor v. Taylor, 228 N.C. 275, 45 S.E.2d 368 (1947), citing Patrick v. Morehead, 85 N.C. 62, 39 Am. Rep. 684 (1881); Carroll v. Herring, 180 N.C. 369, 104 S.E. 892 (1920).

"Cash." — The word "cash" is not such a technical one that it will have the same definite and precise meaning in all circumstances. Barnes v. Evans, 102 N.C. App. 428, 402 S.E.2d 164 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 111, 413 S.E.2d 797 (1992).

The word "cash" as used in a will includes bank accounts, both checking and savings and includes certificates of deposit. Barnes v. Evans, 102 N.C. App. 428, 402 S.E.2d 164 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 111, 413 S.E.2d 797 (1992).

Use of the words "other cash," as used in a will, will not be interpreted by resorting to a narrow, technical definition or interpretation. Courts must look for the meaning of these words according to the subject treated and the context in which they were used. The intention of the testator is the polar star which must guide the courts in the interpretation of wills. Barnes v. Evans, 102 N.C. App. 428, 402 S.E.2d 164 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 111, 413 S.E.2d 797 (1992).

"Remaining cash and bonds" included certificates of deposit. Barnes v. Evans, 102 N.C. App. 428, 402 S.E.2d 164 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 111, 413 S.E.2d 797 (1992).

Devise with Full Power of Disposal. — A devise to a husband with full power of disposal, but on certain conditions any part undisposed of by him to go to a nephew, vests a fee simple in the husband. Roane v. Robinson, 189 N.C. 628, 127 S.E. 626 (1925); Heefner v. Thornton, 216 N.C. 702, 6 S.E.2d 506 (1940).

A devise of real estate to testator's son for his own use and benefit with the expressed intent that it should vest in him absolutely with full right to dispose of it, with limitation over should he die without children surviving, if not disposed of by him during his life, gives the devisee a fee simple title. Lineberger v. Phillips, 198 N.C. 661, 153 S.E. 118 (1930).

A will devising to wife all of testator's property, with full power to manage, control, sell and dispose of it at her discretion, also provided that it was the testator's will and desire that she should devise whatever property she had not thus disposed of during her natural life, or the proceeds thereof, to the person who had been the "kindest to us in aiding and comforting us in our old age." It was held that the wife acquired a fee simple title. Weaver v. Kirby, 186 N.C. 387, 119 S.E. 564 (1923).

Devise with Limited Power of Disposal. — A general devise to testator's wife with subsequent items providing that one half the estate "remaining" at her death should go to his adopted son in fee, and the other half, in the event the wife did not dispose of the residue of the estate by will, to go to the children of L, is held to show an intent to convey an estate of less dignity than a fee simple to testator's wife, rebutting the presumption that the general devise to the wife should be construed to be in fee, the power of disposition of part of the estate, at least, being limited to disposition by will, and the widow does not have the power to convey the entire estate by deed in fee simple. Hampton v. West, 212 N.C. 315, 193 S.E. 290 (1937).

Devise with Power of Disposition Neither Expressed Nor Implied. — Where the gift to the first taker is in language sufficient, standing alone, to pass a fee simple estate, but no absolute power of disposition is expressed or necessarily implied, the gift is a life estate, provided from other clauses of the will it appears that, at the death of the first taker, testator intends and directs a limitation over to another or others. Andrews v. Andrews, 253 N.C. 139, 116 S.E.2d 436 (1960).

Devise for Life with Remainder to Heirs.

— When a devise is to a named person for life with remainder after his death to “his heirs” or “his bodily heirs” or the “heirs of his body,” nothing else appearing, the devisee becomes seized of a fee simple estate upon the death of the testator subject to any prior life estate created by the will. Hammer v. Brantley, 244 N.C. 71, 92 S.E.2d 424 (1956).

Devise Vesting Fee in Children. — A devise of land with provision that the rents should be used by testator’s wife and children until they should become of age, and that the lands should be divided among them all upon the children coming of age or upon the prior death of the widow, with further provision that they should have no right to sell the lands except to each other, was held upon the death of the widow, to vest in fee simple in the children. Langston v. Wooten, 232 N.C. 124, 59 S.E.2d 605 (1950).

A devise to testator’s wife of all of this estate absolutely as he held it himself, declaring that she should not be considered as holding it in trust “technically so called, to be enforced by the judge or decree of any court other than her own conscience, judgment, and affection shall prompt her to so regard it,” was in fee absolute. Fellowes v. Durfey, 163 N.C. 305, 79 S.E. 621 (1913).

Devise of Proceeds of Land. — Under this section the fee generally passes upon a devise of the proceeds of land when an intention to separate the income from the principal is not expressed, or where the devise is general and the devisee is given the power of disposition, or a limitation over is made of such part as may not be disposed of by the first taker. Hambright v. Carroll, 204 N.C. 496, 168 S.E. 817 (1933).

Devise with Power of Appointment. — A devise to A, and to such persons as he shall appoint, vests the absolute property in A, without an appointment. But if it be to him for life and after his death to such person as he shall appoint, he must make an appointment in order to entitle that person to anything. The express life estate to him repels the implication of a fee simple for himself. Levy v. Griffis, 65 N.C. 236 (1871).

A devise to a trustee in trust for the sole and separate use of a married woman with a power given to her of appointing the estate in fee by deed or will, will vest the trust in her in fee under this section. Levy v. Griffis, 65 N.C. 236 (1871).

Estate Tail Converted into Fee Simple.

— There was a devise of lands to wife of testator for life, and at her death or remarriage to their two children, by name, for their natural lives for the heirs of their bodies. It was held that, after the death of the widow, the devise was not a trust created in the children as trustees for the “heirs of their bodies,” and there being no expression in the will to show an intent to create an estate of less degree than fee, it constituted an estate tail, converted by our statute into a fee simple. Washburn v. Biggerstaff, 195 N.C. 624, 143 S.E. 210 (1928).

There testatrix stated she “wanted” the land in question to go to her brother and at his death to his three sons and his named grandson, with further provision that at their deaths testatrix “wanted” the land to go to their “children & so on,” the brother took a life estate with remainder to his children and the named grandson in fee under the rule in Shelley’s Case, since it is apparent that testatrix used the word “children” in the sense of an indefinite line of succession and created an estate tail converted into a fee by G.S. 41-1. In re Will of Wilson, 260 N.C. 482, 133 S.E.2d 189 (1963).

Fee Simple Defeasible upon Condition.

— Where testator devises realty to grandson, and in the event of death of the latter without children, then the land to descend to other grandchildren, such devise vests a fee simple estate in the first devisee, defeasible only on condition that he dies without leaving heirs of his body. Whitfield v. Garriss, 131 N.C. 148, 42 S.E. 568 (1902); Whitfield v. Garriss, 134 N.C. 24, 45 S.E. 904 (1903).

An estate “loaned” to testator’s daughter R during her natural life and at her death “I lend all of the” designated land “to the lawful heirs of her body, and to the lawful begotten heirs of their bodies if any,” standing alone, would convey the fee simple title, but with the further expression, “in case she should die leaving no lawful issue of her body then I give all the above described land to my son J, and his lawful heirs,” the estate is defeasible in the event of the death of R “leaving no lawful issue of her body.” Jarman v. Day, 179 N.C. 318, 102 S.E. 402 (1920).

Language Insufficient to Show Intent to Pass Less Than Fee Simple Estate. — See Mangum v. Wilson, 235 N.C. 353, 70 S.E.2d 19 (1952).

A devise of all testator’s property, employing the words “give, devise, and bequeath” and expressing testator’s desire that the estates devised and bequeathed be held intact as nearly as practicable, by marriage contract if the devisees married, and at the death of the devisees be divided among nephews and nieces, vested an absolute fee simple title in the named devisees. Humphrey v. Faison, 247 N.C. 127, 100 S.E.2d 524 (1957).

The language “provided, that if she own the property or any part thereof at her death, the same shall descend to the children born of her body, or the heirs of such children” did not show the intestator's intention to convey a life estate. An unrestricted or general devise of real property, to which is affixed, either specifically or by implication, an unlimited power of disposition in the first taker, conveys the fee and a subsequent clause purporting to dispose of what remains at his death is not allowed to defeat the devise or limit it to a life estate. Leonard v. Dillard, 87 N.C. App. 79, 359 S.E.2d 497 (1987); See Osborne v. Hodgin, 98 N.C. App. 111, 389 S.E.2d 629 (1990).

Language Showing Intention to Give Estate in Residuary Devisee of Less Dignity Than Fee Simple. — See Woodard v. Clark, 234 N.C. 215, 66 S.E.2d 888 (1951).

Where an estate is reduced from a life estate to a dower interest, in the event of remarriage, it is a manifest indication of the testator's purpose to devise his wife an estate of less dignity than a fee simple. Worsley v. Worsley, 260 N.C. 259, 132 S.E.2d 579 (1963).

Vested Remainder to Be Divested upon Condition. — Under a devise of lands to K "his lifetime, then to go to" G and M, "and if they should die without leaving bodily heirs, then to go to the Flow Heirs," it was held that, after the falling-in of the life estate, G and M take the fee in the remainder defeasible upon their dying without leaving "bodily heirs," in which event it would go to the ultimate devisees, upon the principles of a shifting use operating by way of an executory devise. Kirkman v. Smith, 174 N.C. 603, 94 S.E. 423 (1917).

For precatory words in a will to be regarded as creating a trust in lands devised, the intention of the testator to that effect must clearly appear by interpretation of the instrument, for otherwise these words must be given the ordinary significance of those of that character. Springs v. Springs, 182 N.C. 484, 109 S.E. 839 (1921).

Where the testator, after bequeathing or devising property to a person, expresses a wish or desire as to its use or disposition, such expression will not be construed to create a trust in the legatee or devisee unless it clearly appears from the instrument as a whole that testator so intended since the devise or bequest will be deemed absolute in the absence of a clearly expressed intention to convey an estate of less dignity, but precatory words will create a trust when it appears from the instrument as a whole that the testator so intended, provided testator has pointed out with sufficient clearness and certainty both the subject matter and objects of the intended trust. Brinn v. Brinn, 213 N.C. 282, 195 S.E. 793 (1938).

Subsequent Expressions Not Affecting Devise of Fee. — Where a testator devises all of his estate to his wife, clearly and unmistakably in fee, a different intent may not be inferred from subsequent expressions used in the will. Fellowes v. Durfey, 163 N.C. 305, 79 S.E. 621 (1913).

In the absence of a contrary intent expressed in the will an unrestricted or indefinite devise of real property is a devise in fee simple, and a subsequent clause expressing a wish, desire or even direction for the disposition of what remains at the death of the devisee will not be allowed to defeat the devise nor limit it to a life estate. Taylor v. Taylor, 228 N.C. 275, 45 S.E.2d 368 (1947).

Where real estate is devised in fee, or personally bequeathed unconditionally, a subsequent clause in the will expressing a wish, desire, or direction for its disposition after the death of the devisee or legatee will not defeat the devise or bequest, nor limit it to a life estate. Worsley v. Worsley, 260 N.C. 259, 132 S.E.2d 579 (1963).

An unrestricted or general devise of real property, to which is affixed, either specifically or by implication, an unlimited power of disposition in the first taker, conveys the fee, and a subsequent clause in the will purporting to dispose of what remains at his death is not allowed to defeat the devise nor limit it to a life estate. Quickel v. Quickel, 261 N.C. 696, 136 S.E.2d 52 (1964).

An unrestricted devise followed by a provision that in the event the devisee died intestate, testator wished such devisee's share to descend to her children, vests the fee in the devisee, the precatory words being repugnant to the estate previously devised and sufficient to limit or divest it. Croom v. Cornelius, 219 N.C. 761, 14 S.E.2d 799 (1941).

Devise for "Use and Benefit without Let or Hindrance". — Where testator left property in trust with power in his wife to demand that trustee turn over property to her "for her own use and benefit without let or hindrance," upon such demand and compliance therewith, the wife takes and can convey a fee simple, notwithstanding a further provision in the will that a third person should take a life estate in property remaining in the hands of trustees at the wife's death. O'Quinn v. Crane, 189 N.C. 97, 126 S.E. 174 (1925).

Devise to Trustee Granting No Beneficial Interest. — The rule that a devise of real estate shall be construed to be in fee simple is inapplicable where the testamentary words negative the idea of the investiture of title in fee, or for life, or the granting of any other beneficial interest to the devisee, and express the intent, rather, to impose upon him duties as executor and trustee of an active trust, with directions as to the use of the property and as to how the income shall be applied during his life and after his death. Stephens v. Clark, 211 N.C. 84, 189 S.E. 191 (1937).

The construction required by this statute may not be invoked where no estate in fee is attempted to be devised and where the plain intent is not to grant an estate, but to impose a trust and direct the collection of rent for application to a specific purpose. Stephens v. Clark, 211 N.C. 84, 189 S.E. 191 (1937), citing Young v. Young, 68 N.C. 309 (1873); Witherington v. Herring, 140 N.C. 495, 53 S.E. 303, 6 Ann. Cas. 188 (1906); Fellowes v. Durfey, 163 N.C. 305, 79 S.E. 621 (1913).

Devise Creating Life Estate. — A devise for life with power of disposition creates a life estate only. Chewning v. Mason, 158 N.C. 578, 74 S.E. 357 (1912); Tillett v. Nixon, 180 N.C. 195, 104 S.E. 352 (1920); Alexander v. Alexander, 210 N.C. 281, 186 S.E. 319 (1936).

The estate devised being specifically limited to the life of the devisee, the power of disposition does not enlarge the estate devised or convert it into a fee. Hardee v. Rivers, 228 N.C. 66, 44 S.E.2d 476 (1947).

Testator devised to his wife all of his "estate real and personal," and by a later paragraph all of the rest of his property "as above stated" during her widowhood, and should she remarry her dower "according to law." It was held that only a life estate was given to his widow, the statutory presumption of a fee simple title being inoperative. Roberts v. Saunders, 192 N.C. 191, 134 S.E. 451 (1926).

Decedent's unrestricted devise of certain property to plaintiff in Item 2 was a devise in fee simple and the later devise of the property to defendants in Item 7 did not limit plaintiff's estate to a life estate. Coble v. Patterson, 114 N.C. App. 447, 442 S.E.2d 119 (1994).

Void Restraint on Alienation. — Where a restraint on alienation was declared void, the devise was unrestricted and vested the fee in the devisee. Williams v. McPherson, 216 N.C. 565, 5 S.E.2d 830 (1939).

§ 31-39. Probate necessary to pass title; recordation in county where land lies; rights of innocent purchasers.

No will shall be effectual to pass real or personal estate unless it shall have been duly proved and allowed in the probate court of the proper county, and a duly certified copy thereof shall be recorded in the office of the superior court clerk of the county wherein the land is situate, and the probate of a will devising real estate shall be conclusive as to the execution thereof against the heirs and devisees of the testator, whenever the probate thereof under the like circumstances, would be conclusive against the next of kin and legatees of the testator: Provided, that the probate and registration of any will shall not affect the rights of innocent purchasers for value from the heirs at law of the testator when such purchase is made more than two years after the death of such testator or when such purchase is made after the filing of the final account by the duly authorized administrator of the decedent and the approval thereof by the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction of the estate. Such conveyances, if made before the expiration of the time required by this section to have elapsed in order for same to be valid against the heirs and devisees of the testator, shall, upon the expiration of such time, become good and valid to the same effect as if made after the expiration of such time, unless in the meantime a proceeding shall have been instituted in the proper court to probate the will of the testator. (1784, c. 225, s. 6; R.C., c. 119, s. 20; Code, s. 2174; Rev., s. 3139; 1915, c. 219; C.S., s. 4163; 1953, c. 920, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Probate an Indispensable Prerequisite. — The probate of a will in the proper court is an indispensable prerequisite to its validity as a conveyance of real or personal estate. Osborne v. Leak, 89 N.C. 433 (1883); Paul v. Davenport, 217 N.C. 154, 7 S.E.2d 352 (1940).

Effect of Unprobated Will. — Where the probate shows on its face that the paper-writing has never been validly proven and probated as a holographic will, it is ineffective to pass real or personal property. Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

An unprobated will is not muniment of title; it cannot be established as a will in a collateral proceeding; it conveys no title to property until it is probated and recorded. Hargrave v. Gardner, 264 N.C. 117, 141 S.E.2d 36 (1965).

Will Ineffectual as Transfer of Title or Cloud Thereon during Lifetime of Testator. — A paper-writing making testamentary disposition of property is without legal significance either as a transfer of title or as a cloud thereon during the lifetime of the person executing it, since a will takes effect only upon the death of the testator and the probate of the instrument. Vandiford v. Vandiford, 241 N.C. 42, 84 S.E.2d 278 (1954).

Section Not Retroactive. — This section requiring copies of wills to be recorded in the county where the devised lands are situate, is prospective and refers only to wills proved after November 1, 1883. Curles v. Smith, 91 N.C. 172 (1884).

The 1915 amendment was prospective in effect, and the former right of devisees to have unlimited time to probate a will was not effected except from the effective date of the amendment. Barnhardt v. Morrison, 178 N.C. 563, 101 S.E. 218 (1919).

Prior to the 1915 amendment there was no limitation as to the time when a will could be probated and recorded, the ordinary registration acts having no application to a will. The will became effective from the death of the testator, ordinarily passing the title to devisees from that date against all dispositions or conveyances from the heirs to the contrary. Barnhardt v. Morrison, 178 N.C. 563, 101 S.E. 218 (1919). See Cooley v. Lee, 170 N.C. 18, 86 S.E. 720 (1915).

The amendment fixed the time at two years within which a will must be probated and recorded in order to affect the rights of innocent purchasers for value from the heirs at law, and this limitation is exclusively within the authority of the legislature to make. Barnhardt v. Morrison, 178 N.C. 563, 101 S.E. 218 (1919).

Devised property vests in devisee at time will is probated, subject to liens of deeds of trust. Cable v. Hardin Oil Co., 10 N.C. App. 569, 179 S.E.2d 829, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 521, 180 S.E.2d 863 (1971).

Hence, devisee owns equity of redemption in the property. Cable v. Hardin Oil Co., 10 N.C. App. 569, 179 S.E.2d 829, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 521, 180 S.E.2d 863 (1971).

Where, subsequent to the execution of the will, the property is subjected to the liens of various deeds of trust, these added encumbrances do not prevent the equity of redemption, which was retained by the testatrix, from passing under the will. Cable v. Hardin Oil Co., 10 N.C. App. 569, 179 S.E.2d 829, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 521, 180 S.E.2d 863 (1971).

Ownership under will is not made dependent upon the certified copy directed to be recorded in the county where the land lies. The only purpose of the certified copy is to give information to abstractors and to direct their attention to the source of title. Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129, 159 A.L.R. 380 (1945).

Section 47-18, the ordinary registration act, has no application to wills. Cooley v. Lee, 170 N.C. 18, 86 S.E. 720 (1915). See Barnhardt v. Morrison, 178 N.C. 563, 101 S.E. 218 (1919).

The trial court correctly denied plaintiff's request for jury instructions to the effect that making a will passes no legal title where there was neither allegation nor evidence that any title to any property, real or personal, passed pursuant to any will. Craig v. Calloway, 68 N.C. App. 143, 314 S.E.2d 823 (1984).

Will Should Have Been Approved Where Caveators Lacked Standing to Challenge the Will. — Trial court erred by permitting the beneficiaries of the decedent's first will to proceed in a caveat proceeding against the decedent's second will without first rebutting the presumption that they lacked standing to caveat attendant to their production of a mere copy of the first will, as the presumption then existed that the decedent had revoked the first will; accordingly, the propounders of the second will were entitled to judgment. In re Will of Barnes, — N.C. App. —, 579 S.E.2d 585, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 643 (2003).

Applied in Jones v. Warren, 274 N.C. 166, 161 S.E.2d 467 (1968).

§ 31-40. What property passes by will.

Any testator, by his will duly executed, may devise, bequeath, or dispose of all real and personal estate which he shall be entitled to at the time of his death, and which, if not so devised, bequeathed, or disposed of, would descend or devolve upon his heirs at law, or upon his executor or administrator; and the power hereby given shall extend to all contingent, executory, or other future interest in any real or personal estate, whether the testator may or may not be the person or one of the persons in whom the same may become vested, or whether he may be entitled thereto under the instrument by which the same was created, or under any disposition thereof by deed or will; and also to all rights of entry for conditions broken, whether any such condition has or has not been broken at the testator's death, all other rights of entry, and possibilities of reverter; and also to such of the same estates, interests, and rights respectively, and other real and personal estate, as the testator may be entitled to at the time of his death, notwithstanding that he may become entitled to the same subsequently to the execution of his will. (1844, c. 88, s. 1; R.C., c. 119, s. 5; Code, s. 2140; Rev., s. 3140; C.S., s. 4164; 1973, c. 1446, s. 15.)

CASE NOTES

A conveyance of "all the property I possess," where there is no apparent motive for making an exception, conveys all property the party owned. Hollowell v. Manly, 179 N.C. 262, 102 S.E. 386 (1920).

Construction of "and also to all rights of entry for conditions broken," etc., prior to 1973 amendment. — See Church v. Young, 130 N.C. 8, 40 S.E. 691 (1902).

Where a will is susceptible to two reasonable constructions, one disposing of all of the testator's property, and the other leaving part of the property undisposed of, the former construction will be adopted and the latter rejected, there being a presumption against partial intestacy. Holmes v. York, 203 N.C. 709, 166 S.E. 889 (1932); Wing v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 301 N.C. 456, 272 S.E.2d 90 (1980).

Items of will disposing of real estate not owned by testator were held valid to the extent that they disposed of real and personal property owned by the testator. Taylor v. Taylor, 243 N.C. 726, 92 S.E.2d 136 (1956).

§ 31-41. Will relates to death of testator.

Every will shall be construed, with reference to the real and personal estate comprised therein, to speak and take effect as if it had been executed immediately before the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will. (1844, c. 88, s. 3; R.C., c. 119, s. 16; Code, s. 2141; Rev., s. 3141; C.S., s. 4165.)

CASE NOTES

This section has no retroactive effect, and does not apply to wills made prior to its enactment, though the testator dies subsequent to its enactment. Such wills, with reference to the property they devise, speak as of the date of their execution, and not as of the date of testator's death under the rule of construction promulgated by this section. Williamson v. Williamson, 58 N.C. 142 (1859).

Section Relates to Subject Matter and Not to Objects of Will. — This section, making the will speak from the death of the testator, relates to the subject matter of disposition only, and does not in any manner interfere with the construction in regard to the objects of the gift. Robbins v. Windley, 56 N.C. 286 (1857);

Hines v. Mercer, 125 N.C. 71, 34 S.E. 106 (1899); Thomas v. Thomas, 258 N.C. 590, 129 S.E.2d 239 (1963).

General rule is that a will speaks as of the date of the death of the testator, and any property acquired after the making of a will, by reversion or otherwise, is subject to its terms. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 225 N.C. 375, 35 S.E.2d 231 (1945).

The general rule seems to be established that where a testator uses general terms, as "all of my estate" or "all of my lands or real estate," then the devise will speak at the date of his death. Hines v. Mercer, 125 N.C. 71, 34 S.E. 106 (1899).

A will takes effect and speaks as of the date of the testator's death. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. McKee, 260 N.C. 416, 132 S.E.2d 762 (1963).

Construed as If Executed Immediately Prior to Death. — As to the property devised or bequeathed, the will is construed as if executed immediately prior to the testator's death. Peele v. Finch, 284 N.C. 375, 200 S.E.2d 635 (1973).

And in Light of Circumstances at Time It Was Made. — While the dispositive provisions of a will speak as of the death of the testator, in ascertaining testator's intent the will must be considered in the light of the conditions and circumstances existing at the time it was made. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Green, 239 N.C. 612, 80 S.E.2d 771 (1954).

Will Relates Back to Death When Probated and Recorded. — Once a will is admitted to probate and recorded by the clerk, it relates back to the death of the testator. Hargrave v. Gardner, 264 N.C. 117, 141 S.E.2d 36 (1965).

Exception to General Rule. — Ordinarily a will will be construed as though executed immediately prior to testator's death, and it is only when the will describes a specific subject of gift with sufficient particularity to show that an object in existence at the date of the execution of the will was intended that the general rule is excluded. Tyer v. Meadows, 215 N.C. 733, 3 S.E.2d 264 (1939).

Although this section ordinarily requires that a will be construed as though executed immediately prior to the testator's death, this section will not be applied in a blind or mechanical manner and that other appropriate factors may be considered. Tighe v. Michal, 41 N.C. App. 15, 254 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

Where the testator refers to a specific subject of gift, with sufficient particularity in the description of the specific subject of it, showing that an object in existence at the date of his will was intended, referring to the existing state of things at the date of the will and not at his death, then the operation of the general rule is excluded. The death is a prospective event, but the date of the will refers to actual conditions. Hines v. Mercer, 125 N.C. 71, 34 S.E. 106 (1899).

Effect of Mental Incompetence on Testamentary Capacity. — A will generally reflects the testator's testamentary intent as of the date of his death. When a person becomes mentally incompetent, however, that person ceases to be able to form testamentary intent. In such cases, it would defy reason to hold that a testator's will reflected his testamentary intent as of the date of his death, even though it had been legally determined that the testator was incapable of forming a testamentary intent for many years prior to that date. Tighe v. Michal, 41 N.C. App. 15, 254 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

Construction of Will as to Identity of Devisee or Legatee. — As to the identity of the devisee or legatee, a will is to be construed, nothing else appearing, in the light of circumstances known to the testator at the time of its actual execution. Peele v. Finch, 284 N.C. 375, 200 S.E.2d 635 (1973); Palmer v. Ketner, 29 N.C. App. 187, 223 S.E.2d 913 (1976).

Devise of "the Whole of My Lands" Passes After-Acquired Property. — A devise of "the whole of my lands" to devisees, includes land acquired by the testator after the publication of his will when no intention to the contrary appears. A subsequent clause in the will, directing "my other property of every kind not before mentioned to be sold," refers to other personal property. Edwards v. Warren, 90 N.C. 604 (1884).

Date on Will Immaterial. — When a writing purporting to be a will has been duly probated and thereby determined to be the last will of the deceased, it is effective as of the moment of testator's death, and the date appearing on the instrument then becomes immaterial. In re Marks' Will, 259 N.C. 326, 130 S.E.2d 673 (1963).

Devise of Interest in Another's Estate. — Inasmuch as a will speaks as of the time of testator's death, a devise by O of her "undivided interest and property in the estate of the late G.C." passes no such part of the distributive share in such estate as has been collected and received by O, for, immediately upon its payment to O, it became her property and ceased to be a part of the estate of G.C. Aydlett v. Small, 115 N.C. 1, 20 S.E. 163 (1894).

Designation of Quantity of Land Does not Prevent Operation of Rule. — Where a testator devised his lands south of a certain line, "containing by estimation two hundred acres," and subsequently he purchased other lands south of the line, the reference to the number of acres did not prevent the latter lands being included in the devise. Brown v. Hamilton, 135 N.C. 10, 47 S.E. 128 (1904).

Agreement to Sell Made Before Testator's Death. — Devise in will was not adeemed because of agreement to sell made before death when at the time of the testator's death, he retained legal title to the real estate. Morrison v. Grandy, 115 N.C. App. 170, 443 S.E.2d 751 (1994).

Land under Contract of Purchase after Execution of Will. — In re Champion, 45 N.C. 246 (1853), the devise was to testator's wife: Item 1: "All my real estate, consisting of several lots in Shelby," etc., and in Item 2: "All of my personal estate of whatever nature." After the date of the will he contracted to purchase another tract, but had not paid for it at his death. It was held that his rights in the unpaid for land passed to his wife, on the ground that looking at the whole instrument, the intention to give the whole estate to his wife was manifest. Hines v. Mercer, 125 N.C. 71, 34 S.E. 106 (1899).

Specific Bequest of Stock Did Not Include Accretion from Stock Split. — A specific bequest of common stock took effect as if the bequest were made immediately before the testator's death, and consequently the bequest did not include accretions resulting from a stock split occurring subsequent to the execution of the will and prior to testator's death. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Carpenter, 12 N.C. App. 19, 182 S.E.2d 3 (1971), aff'd, 280 N.C. 705, 187 S.E.2d 5 (1972).

Or Accretion from Recapitalization. — Where testator owned 900 shares of the stock of a corporation at the time he executed a will bequeathing 10 shares of the stock to his employee, and, as a result of a recapitalization, the 900 shares were retired and 250,000 shares of new stock were issued to testator in lieu thereof prior to testator's death, the employee was entitled to receive under the will only 10 shares of the stock as it existed at testator's death without accretions resulting from the recapitalization. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Carpenter, 280 N.C. 705, 187 S.E.2d 5 (1972).

Applied in Gatling v. Gatling, 239 N.C. 215, 79 S.E.2d 466 (1954); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Andrews, 264 N.C. 531, 142 S.E.2d 182 (1965).

Cited in Wright v. Wright, 198 N.C. 754, 153 S.E. 321 (1930); Vandiford v. Vandiford, 241 N.C. 42, 84 S.E.2d 278 (1954).

§ 31-42. Failure of devises by lapse or otherwise; renunciation.

(a) Unless the will indicates a contrary intent, if a devisee predeceases the testator, whether before or after the execution of the will, and if the devisee is a grandparent of or a descendant of a grandparent of the testator, then the issue of the predeceased devisee shall take in place of the deceased devisee. The devisee's issue shall take the deceased devisee's share in the same manner that the issue would take as heirs of the deceased devisee under the intestacy provisions in effect at the time of the testator's death. The provisions of this section apply whether the devise is to an individual, to a class, or is a residuary devise. In the case of the class devise, the issue shall take whatever share the deceased devisee would have taken had the devisee survived the testator; in the event the deceased class member leaves no issue, the devisee's share shall devolve upon the members of the class who survived the testator and the issue of any deceased members taking by substitution.

(b) Unless the will indicates a contrary intent, if the provisions of subsection (a) of this section do not apply to a devise to a devisee who predeceases the testator, or if a devise otherwise fails, the property shall pass to the residuary devisee or devisees in proportion to their share of the residue. If the devise is a residuary devise, it shall augment the shares of the other residuary devisees, including the shares of any substitute takers under subsection (a) of this section. If there are no residuary devisees, then the property shall pass by intestacy.

(c) Renunciation of a devise is as provided for in Chapter 31B of the General Statutes.

(d) As used in this section, "devisee" means any person entitled to take real or personal property under the provisions of a will. (1844, c. 88, s. 4; R.C., c. 119, s. 7; Code, s. 2142; Rev., s. 3142; 1919, c. 28; C.S., s. 4166; 1951, c. 762, s. 1; 1953, c. 1084; 1965, c. 938, s. 1; 1975, c. 371, s. 3; 1979, c. 525, s. 5; 1987, c. 86, ss. 1, 2; 1989, c. 244; 1999-145, s. 1; 2001-83, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Property Passing Under Residuary Clause.
- III. Devise or Legacy to Testator's Slayer.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under this section as it appeared prior to the 1951 amendment and former G.S. 31-42.1 and 31-42.2.

Original Section a Copy of English Statute. — This section, as enacted in 1844 was a copy of the English statute upon the same subject. Holton v. Jones, 133 N.C. 399, 45 S.E. 765 (1903).

This section is not ambiguous. The intention of the General Assembly in its enactment of this section is expressed in language which leaves no room for judicial construction. The distinction found in the common law for purposes of devolution is recognized and preserved. Farnell v. Dongan, 207 N.C. 611, 178 S.E. 77 (1935); Beach v. Gladstone, 207 N.C. 876, 178 S.E. 546 (1935).

This section applies to all wills and provides means by which property is to be distributed in the event of failure of devises and legacies by lapse or otherwise. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

This section is applicable to wills of persons dying on or after July 1, 1965. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969) (decided under prior law).

Prior to the 1965 amendment, in a situation where testator gave the residue of his estate to A, B, and C, and A predeceased testator leaving no issue entitled to the property under the antilapse statute. A's share would pass to the heirs of testator as intestate property. After the 1965 amendment the application thereof would result in A's share continuing as a part of the residue for division among the other residuary legatees and devisees. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969) (decided under prior law).

Subsection (a) applies to residuary devises or bequests. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969) (decided under prior law).

Anti-lapse statute did not apply to case regarding distribution of proceeds from annuity contract. Hager v. Lincoln Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 126 N.C. App. 349, 484 S.E.2d 828 (1997).

Legislative Intent. — The legislature did not intend that the issue of a devisee or legatee meeting the conditions of subsection (a) could be substituted for that devisee or legatee as to a specific devise or bequest and not allowed to be similarly substituted if the same devisee or legatee were named as one of the residuary devisees or legatees. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969) (decided under prior law).

Construction. — Subsection (a) of this section is designed and intended to prevent the lapse of a devise or bequest, whether it be specific or residuary, in a situation where the devisee or legatee, who would have taken had he survived the testator, predeceases testator survived by issue who survive the testator and who would have been heirs of testator had there been no will. If this situation does not exist, then the devise or legacy lapses and passes under the provisions of subdivision (c)(1) under the residuary or by intestacy, if there be no residuary. If lapse of a residuary devise or legacy cannot be prevented by application of subsection (a), then under subdivision (c)(2) it continues a part of the residue and passes to the other residuary legatees or devisees, if any. If none, it passes as if testator had died intestate with respect thereto. That this construction manifests the intent of the legislature is further evidenced by the clear language of the statute itself. Subdivision (c)(2) is applicable, with respect to residuary devises or legacies, only where subsection (a) is not applicable. It would follow, that if the legislature had intended to exclude residuary devises and legacies from the operation of subsection (a), it would have specifically limited the section to specific legacies and devises, omitted subdivision (2) from the provisions of subsection (c), and treated residuary devises and legacies in a separate provision of the statute unrelated to any other section. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969); Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 62 N.C. App. 506, 303 S.E.2d 415 (1983), aff'd, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195 (1985) (decided under prior law).

Limitation Over Held to Lapse. — Where testatrix left property in trust to her son for life with remainder over to his issue, and in the event the son should leave no issue, to testatrix's brothers and sisters, and all except one of testatrix's brothers and sisters predeceased her, and the sister who survived her died during the lifetime of the son, the limitation over to the brothers and sisters of testatrix lapsed, since the children of the brothers and sisters of testatrix who predeceased testatrix did not qualify under this section, and no transmittable estate vested in the sister of testatrix who died during the lifetime of testatrix's son.

Poindexter v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 258 N.C. 371, 128 S.E.2d 867 (1963).

Intent to Prevent Lapse. — Should the testator desire to prevent lapse, he must express his intent that the gift not lapse or must provide for substitution of another devisee to receive the gift. In re Hubner, 106 N.C. App. 204, 416 S.E.2d 401, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 148, 419 S.E.2d 572 (1992).

Had testator intended the anti-lapse statute not to apply, he could have very easily shown such contrary intent, and it was not for the court to do that for him. Early v. Bowen, 116 N.C. App. 206, 447 S.E.2d 167, 1994 N.C. App. LEXIS 906 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 611, 454 S.E.2d 249 (1995), cert. denied, 456 S.E.2d 519 (1995).

Trial court improperly applied the anti-lapse statute, G.S. 31-42(a), to devise in a will to a son who predeceased the testatrix, because an article in the will specifically provided that any lapsed devisees were to pass in the testatrix's residuary estate. Colombo v. Stevenson, 150 N.C. App. 163, 563 S.E.2d 591, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 365 (2002), aff'd, 357 N.C. 157, 579 S.E.2d 269 (2003).

Decedent's failure to execute a will devising his interest in farmland to his son, which decedent promised to do in a separation agreement, caused his interest in that land to pass to the second wife, and not the minor grandchild after the son predeceased the decedent; accordingly, the trial court should not have granted summary judgment to the estate representative and the second wife because the minor grandchild had an action for specific performance of the agreement, even though he was not named in it, since the property upon the death of the decedent would have passed to the minor grandchild pursuant to G.S. 31-42. Tyndall-Taylor v. Tyndall, — N.C. App. —, 580 S.E.2d 58, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 926 (2003).

Intestacy Not Favored. — No one supposes that he has failed in his intention to dispose of all of his property by his will, and the courts should endeavor to make out such an intention and to uphold the testamentary plan, so that the testator may not, as to some of his estate, have died intestate. Faison v. Middleton, 171 N.C. 170, 88 S.E. 141 (1916).

Legacy Not Lapsed by Fact That Legatee Predeceased Testator. — A judgment that a legacy did not lapse by reason of fact that legatee predeceased testator was affirmed, it appearing that legatee would have been distributee of testator had she survived him. Beach v. Gladstone, 207 N.C. 876, 178 S.E. 546 (1935).

Lapse Would Cause Impermissible Rewriting of the Will. — To conclude from the survivor language of testator's will that his intent was to favor the children of the brother who lived longest over the children of the brother who died first was an impermissible rewriting of the will rather than a construction of what was contained within the four corners of the document. Early v. Bowen, 116 N.C. App. 206, 447 S.E.2d 167, 1994 N.C. App. LEXIS 906 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 611, 454 S.E.2d 249 (1995), cert. denied, 456 S.E.2d 519 (1995).

Who Are Distributees. — A distributee is a person who has the right under the statute of distribution to a share in the surplus estate of an intestate; one entitled to take a share of an estate of a decedent, under the statute of distribution; one to whom something has to be distributed in the division of an estate; a person upon whom personal property devolves by act of law in cases of intestacy. The determinative criterion is the right to share in the distribution of the personal estate of the intestate. Those who take by succession the estate of a person who dies intestate are named and defined in G.S. 28-149 (now G.S. 29-1 et seq.). Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Shelton, 229 N.C. 150, 48 S.E.2d 41 (1948).

Must Be Determined as of Date of Death of Testatrix. — Who would have been distributees of the estate had the testatrix died intestate must be determined as of the date of her death and not as of the date of the execution of her will. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Shelton, 229 N.C. 150, 48 S.E.2d 41 (1948).

Wife Surviving Testator Not Heir at Law but Distributee. — Where the owner of real and personal property executed a will devising and bequeathing all his property, both real and personal, to his wife, the collateral heirs at law of the testator are entitled to the real property, the devise to the wife having lapsed by reason of her prior death, and the provisions of this section, not applying to prevent such lapse of the devise, since the wife would not have been an heir at law of testator had she survived him, but the children of the wife by a prior marriage are entitled to the personalty, since the wife would have been a distributee of the personal estate of her husband had she survived him, and this section providing that in such case the legacy should not lapse, but should go to the surviving issue of the legatee, the statute clearly recognizing the distinction between real and personal property for the purposes of devolution. Farnell v. Dongan, 207 N.C. 611, 178 S.E. 77 (1935).

Where a wife dies leaving her husband but no issue he is her sole distributee, and her collateral kin are not entitled to share in the estate and are not "distributees." Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Shelton, 229 N.C. 150, 48 S.E.2d 41 (1948).

Standing of Adopted Child. — Where a parent by adoption is named a legatee in the will of her mother, but dies prior to the death of her mother, the adopted child takes the personalty bequeathed his mother by adoption under this section, even though the adoption was subsequent to the execution of the will, since under the provisions of G.S. 48-23 the adopted child has the same standing as though he had been born to his adoptive parent at the time of the adoption. Headen v. Jackson, 255 N.C. 157, 120 S.E.2d 598 (1961).

Devise Void for Vagueness of Description. — Where a testator attempted to devise to named devisees separate tracts of land described simply as, first, “my home and 30 acres of land surrounding the same,” second, “12 acres of my Plantation located in the Northwest corner of same,” and third, “12 acres on the East side of my Plantation,” a fourth item which attempted to devise the “remainder of my real estate” constituted an attempted specific devise of a particular tract, rather than a general residuary clause, and, the first three items being void for vagueness of description, the fourth item was also void. Taylor v. Taylor, 45 N.C. App. 449, 263 S.E.2d 351, rev’d on other grounds, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

A renunciation is not a grant of legal title by the renouncer. It merely triggers a set of statutorily defined legal rights which ultimately determine ownership. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A renunciation relates back to the death of the testator or intestate. The renouncer never actually holds legal title to the property. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A parol trust may not be engrafted upon a renounced interest. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

Action Seeking Constructive Trust. — Plaintiff, who sought to assert that defendant unduly influenced his decision to sign a “Petition to Renounce” his interest in will, could maintain an action seeking the declaration of a constructive trust. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

Taylor*, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980); North Carolina Nat’l Bank v. Apple, 95 N.C. App. 606, 383 S.E.2d 438 (1989).

II. PROPERTY PASSING UNDER RESIDUARY CLAUSE.

Residuary Clause Comprises All Property Not Otherwise Provided for. — It was intended by this section that the property passing by residuary clause of a will should comprise all the estate owned by the testator at time of his death not otherwise specifically devised or provided for, and should include any described in a devise which may have lapsed, or become void or incapable of taking effect. Renn v. Williams, 233 N.C. 490, 64 S.E.2d 437 (1951).

Construction of Residuary Clause in General. — In a residuary gift large enough in its language to comprehend residue, the question is, not what is included, but what is excluded; and one must find words sufficiently large, definite and distinct to enable him to say that some item is excluded, so that what hitherto has purported to be the residuary gift is reduced to the level of a specific gift, and ceases to be a residuary gift. Faison v. Middleton, 171 N.C. 170, 88 S.E. 141 (1916).

No particular mode of expression is needed to constitute a residuary clause. All that is required is an adequate indication that a particular clause was intended to dispose of property which was not otherwise disposed of by the will. Betts v. Parrish, 312 N.C. 47, 320 S.E.2d 662 (1984).

Construction to Prevent Intestacy. — A residuary clause in a will should be construed so as to prevent an intestacy as to any part of the testator’s estate, unless there is an apparent intent to the contrary, plainly and unequivocally expressed in the writing. Faison v. Middleton, 171 N.C. 170, 88 S.E. 141 (1916).

It is a general rule always to construe a residuary clause so as to prevent an intestacy as regards any part of the testator’s estate, unless there is an apparent intention to the contrary. Betts v. Parrish, 312 N.C. 47, 320 S.E.2d 662 (1984).

When the language of the will is definite and clear, the presumption that the will must be construed to prevent partial intestacy is generally not employed. If the language is unambiguous, then there is no need to resort to a construction of the will, and the expression of the testator must be given effect. Betts v. Parrish, 312 N.C. 47, 320 S.E.2d 662 (1984).

Applicability of Former Subdivision (c)(1)a. — Where it was clear from the residuary clause itself or other parts of the will, that the testator had in fact a contrary intention, namely, that the residue should not be general, and that things given away should not fall into the residue, subdivision (c)(1)a did not apply. Betts v. Parrish, 312 N.C. 47, 320 S.E.2d 662

(1984) (decided under prior law).

Applicability of Former Subdivision (c)(2). — Former subdivision (c)(2) of this section was applicable only where there were other residuary devisees or legatees named in the will who survived the testator. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969) (decided under prior law).

Subject Matter of Void Legacy Included in Residuary Legacy. — A legacy which is void under the terms of G.S. 31-10, which makes those legacies whose beneficiaries were attesting witnesses to the will void, passes under the residuary clause of the will. Renn v. Williams, 233 N.C. 490, 64 S.E.2d 437 (1951).

Rule as to Residuary Clause Applies Only in Absence of Contrary Intention. — A lapsed devise of lands will not fall within the residuary clause of a will, under this section, where a contrary intent appears from the construction of a will itself; and where the testator has specifically devised his lands, making ample provisions for his widow, and gives her, in the residuary clause, "all other property not herein specified," and the use of the word "property," with the expression "not herein specified," shows the testator's intent that a lapsed devise of the realty should not fall within the residuary clause, but will go to the testator's next of kin instead of those of the widow or her devisees under her will. Howell v. Mehegan, 174 N.C. 64, 93 S.W. 438 (1917).

And if the will expresses an intent that a legacy shall not lapse in the event the legatee predeceases testatrix, the statutory provision for lapse does not apply. This intent need not be stated in exact terms, but is to be ascertained from the four corners of the will. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Shelton, 229 N.C. 150, 48 S.E.2d 41 (1948), wherein will showed no intent that legacy should not lapse upon prior death of legatee.

No particular mode of expression is necessary to constitute a residuary clause in a will, and while the words "rest," "residue," or "remainder" are commonly used for the purpose, naturally placed at the end of the dispositive portion of the will, all that is required is an adequate designation of what has not been otherwise disposed of; and the fact that a provision so operating is not spoken of in the will as the residuary clause is immaterial. Faison v. Middleton, 171 N.C. 170, 88 S.E. 141 (1916); Barnacascel v. Spivey, 11 N.C. App. 269, 181 S.E.2d 151 (1971).

And It Is Dependent upon the Intention of the Testator. — Whether a clause is a residuary clause is not dependent upon any particular form of expression but upon the intention of the testator, and where a will provides that after the termination of a life estate that the whole estate should be reduced to cash and, after payment of certain specific bequests, distributed among a specific class, where the legacy of one of the class lapses by the death of the legatee prior to the testator's death, the amount of such legacy is thrown into the fund for distribution among the class named, and it does not go to the next of kin of the legatee. Stevenson v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 202 N.C. 92, 161 S.E. 728 (1932).

"Residuary Devisee." — Residuary devisee is defined as the person named in a will, who is to take all the real property remaining over and above the other devises. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969).

"Residuary Legatee." — Residuary legatee is defined as the person to whom a testator bequeaths the residue of his personal estate, after the payment of such other legacies as are specifically mentioned in the will. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969).

"The Other Residuary Devisees or Legatees, If Any." — This section, by use of the words "the other residuary devisees or legatees, if any," refers to those residuary devisees or legatees named in the will and not to "such issue of the devisee or legatee as survive testator" who may have been substituted under subsection (a) of this section. Bear v. Bear, 3 N.C. App. 498, 165 S.E.2d 518 (1969) (decided under prior law).

Heirs who partake of a devise pursuant to this section are entitled to a share of a lapsed residuary gift; if the predecessor would have taken a share of a lapsed residuary gift, then the qualified issue may also have participated in this lapsed gift. In re Will of Hubner, 105 N.C. App. 599, 414 S.E.2d 369 (1992).

Language disposing of property "not expressly disposed of by other provisions of the will" was a residuary clause and the decision concerning the taking of the lapsed share was controlled by In re Will of Huber, 106 N.C. App. 204, 416 S.E.2d 401 (1992). Moore v. Stern, 122 N.C. App. 270, 468 S.E.2d 607 (1996).

"All of the Residue" Embraces Personality and Realty. — General words in a residuary clause of a will, "all of the residue," etc., embrace every species of property, whether real or personal, owned by the testator at his death, unless restricted by the context. Faison v. Middleton, 171 N.C. 170, 88 S.E. 141 (1916).

Devise Passing under Residuary Clause. — It is settled law in this jurisdiction, by reason of the provisions of this section, that where a contrary intent does not appear in a will, ordinarily a lapsed, void or rejected devise will pass under an effective residuary clause. Featherstone v. Pass, 232 N.C. 349, 60 S.E.2d 236 (1950).

Devise of Lapsed Residuary Gift. — Heirs who partake of a devise pursuant to the anti-lapse statute are entitled to a share of a lapsed residuary gift. In re Hubner, 106 N.C. App. 204, 416 S.E.2d 401, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 148, 419 S.E.2d 572 (1992).

Where residuary legatees would have taken a share of a lapsed gift had they survived, their daughters, who were qualified issue, could take the entire share to which residuary legatees would have taken had they survived. In re Hubner, 106 N.C. App. 204, 416 S.E.2d 401, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 148, 419 S.E.2d 572 (1992).

Devise Not Passing under Residuary Clause. — Testator devised certain property to his sister for life, remainder to the county to be used as a charitable hospital, with further provision that if the property should not be so used, the county should forfeit the right of possession and title, and the property pass to testator's heirs at law. It was held that upon the renunciation by the county after the death of the life tenant, the remainder passes to testator's heirs in accordance with the expressed intent of testator, leaving no interest to pass under the subsequent residuary clause of the will. Featherstone v. Pass, 232 N.C. 349, 60 S.E.2d 236 (1950).

Effect of Failure to Name Devisee. — There was a devise of land "to my ..." without naming the devisee, followed by a residuary clause of the will, "that all of the residue of my estate be sold, and if there should be any surplus over the payment of debts and expenses, that such surplus be equally divided and paid over" to certain named persons. It was held, that the failure to name the devisee brings the devise within the terms of the statute as to void devises, or those incapable of taking effect, and the property devised will go to the residuary legatees, and not to the heirs at law. Faison v. Middleton, 171 N.C. 170, 88 S.E. 141 (1916).

Devise Failing for Misdescription. — A general residuary bequest carries lapsed and void legacies, and property which is the subject of a devise which fails by reason of a misdescription. Faison v. Middleton, 171 N.C. 170, 88 S.E. 141 (1916).

Subject Matter of Void Legacy Included in Residuary Legacy. — Under the provisions of this section, the property which is the subject matter of a void legacy, is included within the residuary legacy provided by the will, and should be delivered by the executor to the residuary legatees. Wilmington Sav. & Trust Co. v. Cowan, 208 N.C. 236, 180 S.E. 87 (1935).

Lapse of Shares of Some of Residuary Legatees. — Where the testator has named several beneficiaries in a residuary clause, and it appears upon the face of the will that several of these names have been run through with a pen, and the intention of the testator to revoke has been established, the beneficiaries whose names have been thus erased take nothing, and the whole estate, under the residuary clause, goes to the others therein named together with such legacies as may have lapsed. Barfield v. Carr, 169 N.C. 574, 86 S.E. 498 (1915).

III. DEVISE OR LEGACY TO TESTATOR'S SLAYER.

Subsection (a) Rather Than Subdivision (c)(2) Applies. — If the court were to hold that subdivision (c)(2) of this section applies merely because the slayer does not, in fact, predecease the slain, the court would be ignoring the legislative scheme intended by the statutory presumption of the slayer's death. Moreover, subsection (c) expressly states that that subsection applies only if subsection (a) is not applicable, thus making subsection (a) the dominant or controlling statute. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Presumption in § 31A-4(3) Equivalent to Actual Death. — It was the intent of the General Assembly that the presumption in G.S. 31A-4(3) be equivalent to actual death for all purposes of determining the disposition of property of the testator. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Distributed in Accord with Subsection (a). — Because of the failure of a slayer's legacy, the property that would have gone to him under the will had he not been convicted of killing the testator must be distributed in accord with subsection (a). Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Where slayer's two children are alive and would have been heirs of testator had he died intestate, slayer's failed legacy must pass by substitution to them in accordance with subsection (a). Because of the conclusive presumption in G.S. 31A-4(3) that the slayer predeceased the testator, subsection (a), not subdivision (c)(2), applies. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

§ 31-43. General gift by will an execution of power of appointment.

A general devise of the real estate of the testator, or of his real estate in any place or in the occupation of any person mentioned in the will, or otherwise described in a general manner, shall be construed to include any real estate, or any real estate to which such description shall extend, as the case may be, which he may have power to appoint in any manner he may think proper; and shall operate as an execution of such power, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will; and in like manner a bequest of the personal estate of the testator, or any bequest of personal property, described in a general manner, shall be construed to include any personal estate, or any personal estate to which such description shall extend, as the case may be, which he may have power to appoint in any manner he may think proper, and shall operate as an execution of such power, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will. (1844, c. 88, s. 5; R.C., c. 119, s. 8; Code, s. 2143; Rev., s. 3143; C.S., s. 4167.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — It has been suggested that this section was passed to guard against the inadvertence of a life tenant with a general power of appointment. Accustomed throughout his life to treating the land as if it were his in fee, he might overlook making a specific appointment of the particular property and attempt to dispose of it by a general devise. In such event, if he owned other property which would pass under the devise, the power remained unexecuted and his devisees lost the property by his default. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 267 N.C. 173, 148 S.E.2d 41 (1966); First Citizens' Bank & Trust Co. v. Fleming, 77 N.C. App. 568, 335 S.E.2d 515 (1985).

This section is identical with § 27 of the English Wills Act of 1837 (7 Wm. IV & 1 Vict. ch. 26). Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 267 N.C. 173, 148 S.E.2d 41 (1966).

Which Is Held Applicable Only to General Powers. — Construing the Wills Act of 1837, the English courts have held that G.S. 27, which is identical with this section, is applicable only to general powers of appointment. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 267 N.C. 173, 148 S.E.2d 41 (1966).

As Is This Section. — The effect of this section is that a general devise or bequest shall be construed to include any real or personal property which the testator may have power to appoint in any manner he may think proper and shall operate as an execution of such power unless a contrary intention appears in the will.

A power to appoint in any manner the donee may think proper is a power upon which no restrictions are imposed — a general power. This section thus applies only to general powers of appointment. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 267 N.C. 173, 148 S.E.2d 41 (1966).

The case of Johnston v. Knight, 117 N.C. 122, 23 S.E. 92 (1895), merely applied the rule that where the donee of a power, general or special, clearly manifests an intention to execute it, effect will be given to his intent. It did not extend the applications of this section to special powers. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 267 N.C. 173, 148 S.E.2d 41 (1966).

Hence, Special Power Is Not Executed by General Devise Not Showing Such Intent. — A general devise by a testator to his wife cannot be construed to include trust property over which he had a special or limited power of appointment, where his will discloses no intent to execute the power, since this section applies only to general powers. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 267 N.C. 173, 148 S.E.2d 41 (1966).

Conveyance in General Terms. — Whether a conveyance of property in general terms or by general description constitutes a valid exercise of a power of appointment is governed by this section in respect to the exercise of such power by will. Schaeffer v. Haseltine, 228 N.C. 484, 46 S.E.2d 463 (1948).

Intent Manifested by Entire Will. — Where the execution by will of a power is not exercised in express terms by reference to the power or the subject, a construction must be given by looking to the whole instrument and giving effect to the intent therein manifested. Johnston v. Knight, 117 N.C. 122, 23 S.E. 92 (1895); Walsh v. Friedman, 219 N.C. 151, 13 S.E.2d 250 (1941).

In order to exercise a power of appointment calling for specific reference to the power before the power may be exercised, some reference to the power must be made. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Fleming, 77 N.C. App. 568, 335 S.E.2d 515 (1985).

Residuary Devise Executes Power Unless Contrary Intention Shown. — Unless there is something to show a contrary intention on the part of a testator, a general residuary devise will operate as an execution of a power to dispose of property by will. Johnston v. Knight, 117 N.C. 122, 23 S.E. 92 (1895); Walsh v. Friedman, 219 N.C. 151, 13 S.E.2d 250 (1941).

Where the donee of a power to dispose of property by will to certain persons devises the property to such persons by a residuary clause, without referring to the power, the devise will be considered an intentional and not an accidental exercise of the power. Johnston v. Knight, 117 N.C. 122, 23 S.E. 92 (1895).

This section creates a statutory presumption in favor of exercise of a power of appointment by a residuary clause, and on its face bars any other result unless an intention contrary to exercise can be inferred from the will. Planters Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. United States, 425 F. Supp. 1179 (E.D.N.C. 1977).

A power of appointment upon which no restrictions are imposed is exercised by a residuary clause. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Fleming, 77 N.C. App. 568, 335 S.E.2d 515 (1985).

Valid Exercise of Power. — Will held a valid exercise of power of appointment under this section, there being nothing in the will to indicate any contrary intent. Schaeffer v. Haseltine, 228 N.C. 484, 46 S.E.2d 463 (1948).

§ 31-45: Rewritten and renumbered as G.S. 31-5.5 by Session Laws 1953, c. 1098, s. 7.

§ 31-46. Validity of will; which laws govern.

A will is valid if it meets the requirements of the applicable provisions of law in effect in this State either at the time of its execution or at the time of the death of the testator. (1953, c. 1098, s. 14.)

ARTICLE 8.

Devise or Bequest to Trustee of an Existing Trust.

§ 31-47. Devise or bequest to trustee of an existing trust.

A devise or bequest in a will duly executed pursuant to the provisions of this Chapter may be made in form or substance to the trustee of any trust, including an existing testamentary trust, if established in writing prior to the execution of such will. Such devise or bequest shall not be invalid because the trust is amendable or revocable or both by the settlor or any other person or persons; nor because the trust instrument or any amendment thereto was not executed in the manner required for wills, nor because the trust was amended after execution of the will. Unless the will provides otherwise, such devise or bequest shall operate to dispose of property under the terms of the trust as they appear in writing at the testator's death and the property shall not be deemed held under a testamentary trust. An entire revocation of the trust prior to the testator's death shall invalidate the devise or bequest. (1955, c. 388; 1957, c. 783, s. 1; 1975, c. 161.)
