(b) Any person, firm or corporation who knowingly and willfully, without the authorization of a cable television system, distributes, sells, attempts to sell or possesses for sale in North Carolina any converter, decoder, device, or kit, that is designed to decode or descramble any encoded or scrambled signal transmitted by such cable television system, is guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor which may include a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00). The term "encoded or scrambled signal" shall include any signal or transmission that is not intended to produce an intelligible program or service without the aid of a decoder, descrambler, filter, trap or other electronic or mechanical device.

(c) Any cable television system may institute a civil action to enjoin and restrain any violation of this section, and in addition, such cable television system shall be entitled to civil damages in the following amounts:

(1) For each violation of subsection (a), three hundred dollars ($300.00) or three times the amount of actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff, whichever amount is greater.

(2) For each violation of subsection (b), one thousand dollars ($1,000) or three times the amount of actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff, whichever amount is greater.

(d) It is not a necessary prerequisite to a civil action instituted pursuant to this section that the plaintiff has suffered or will suffer actual damages.

(e) Proof that any equipment, cable, wire, decoder, converter or device of a cable television system was modified, removed, altered, tampered with or connected without the consent of such cable system in violation of this section shall be prima facie evidence that such action was taken knowingly and willfully by the person or persons in whose name the cable system's equipment, cable, wire, decoder, converter or device is installed or the person or persons regularly receiving the benefits of cable services resulting from such unauthorized modification, removal, alteration, tampering or connection.

(f) The receipt, decoding or converting of a signal from the air by the use of a satellite dish or antenna shall not constitute a violation of this section.

(g) Cable television systems may refuse to provide service to anyone who violates subsection (a) of this section whether or not the alleged violator has been prosecuted thereunder. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1185, s. 1; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1088, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 65; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

ARTICLE 21.

Forgery.

§ 14-119. Forgery of notes, checks, and other securities.

(a) If a person makes, forges, or counterfeits:

(1) Any bill, note, warrant, check, order, or similar instrument in imitation of, or purporting to be, a bill, note, warrant, check, order, or similar instrument of or on any financial institution or governmental unit, or any cashier or officer of such an institution or unit; or

(2) Any security purporting to be issued by, or on behalf of, any corporation, financial institution, or governmental unit, with the intent to injure or defraud any person, corporation, financial institution, or governmental unit, he shall be punished as a Class I felon.

(b) For purposes of this section:

(1) "Financial institution" means any mutual fund, money market fund, credit union, savings and loan association, bank, or similar institution.

(2) "Governmental unit" means the United States, any United States territory, any state of the United States, or any political subdivision of any state. (1819, c. 994, s. 1, P.R.; R.C., c. 34, s. 60; Code, s. 1030; Rev., s. 3419; C.S., s. 4293; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1983, c. 397, s. 1.)

II. FORGERY, GENERALLY.

The common-law definition of forgery obtains in this State, the statute not attempting to define it. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Forgery Defined. — Forgery, at common law, denotes a false making, a making malo animo, of any written instrument for the purpose of fraud and deceit. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57

Forgery may generally be defined as the false making or materially altering, with intent to defraud, of any writing, which, if genuine, might apparently be of legal efficacy, or the foundation of a legal liability. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Uttering Distinct from Forgery. — By virtue of § 14-120, uttering is an offense distinct from that of forgery, which is defined in this section. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Treadway, 27 N.C. App. 78, 217 S.E.2d 743 (1975).

Forgery of Money Order and Forgery of Endorsement Are Separate Offenses. — To convict of the felony of forging endorsements under the second sentence of § 14-120, it was not necessary to allege or to prove forgery of the face of money orders, which would have been separate felonies under this section. State v. Sutton, 14 N.C. App. 422, 188 S.E.2d 596 (1972).

Elements of Offense. — To constitute an indictable forgery, it is not alone sufficient that there be a writing, and that the writing be false; it must also be such as, if true, would be of some legal efficacy, real or apparent, since otherwise it has no legal tendency to defraud. Barnes v. Crawford, 115 N.C. 76, 20 S.E. 386 (1894).

The essentials to the completion of the offense of forgery are: (a) The falsification of a paper, or the making of a false paper, of legal efficacy, "apparently capable of effecting a fraud;" (b) the fraudulent intent. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Three elements are necessary to constitute the offense of forgery: (1) There must be a false making or alteration of some instrument in writing; (2) there must be a fraudulent intent; and (3) the instrument must be apparently capable of effecting a fraud. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962); State v. Keller, 268 N.C. 522, 151 S.E.2d 56 (1968); State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Bauguess, 13 N.C. App. 457, 186 S.E.2d 185 (1972); State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980); State v. Seraphem, 90 N.C. App. 368, 368 S.E.2d 643 (1988).

Two essential elements of forgery are the false making of an instrument and the appearance of the instrument as genuine. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

Intent to defraud is an essential element of the crime of forgery. State v. Greene, 12 N.C. App. 687, 184 S.E.2d 523 (1971), appeal dismissed, 280 N.C. 303, 186 S.E.2d 177 (1972).

But It Is Not Essential That Anyone Actually Be Defrauded. — While an intent to defraud is an essential element of forgery, it is not essential that any person be actually defrauded, or that any act be done other than the fraudulent making or altering of the instrument. State v. White, 101 N.C. 770, 7 S.E. 715 (1888), aff'd, 132 U.S. 131, 10 S. Ct. 47, 33 L. Ed. 287 (1889); State v. Hall, 108 N.C. 776, 13 S.E. 189 (1891); State v. Williams, 291 N.C. 442, 230 S.E.2d 515 (1976).

Time is not of the essence in the crimes of forgery and uttering a forged check. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

Forging Signature of Another. — An instrument may be a forgery even though in itself it is not false in any particular, if there is a fraudulent intent that the signature should pass or be received as the genuine act of another person whose signing, only, could make the paper valid and effectual. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

A person without a bank account who signs his name to checks and presents them to the bank with intent that the signature should be taken as that of another of the same or similar name who has funds on deposit, and cashes the checks fraudulently and with knowledge that he was withdrawing from the bank the funds of such other person, is guilty of forgery. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

Real and Forged Signatures Need Not Be Identical. — An instrument is nonetheless a forgery where the signature is not identical with that of the person whose signature it is intended to simulate, if they are sufficiently similar for the doctrine of idem sonans to apply, and the insertion of a middle initial not in the signature simulated is not a fatal variance. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 231 N.C. 510, 57 S.E.2d 809, 15 A.L.R.2d 996 (1950).

The fact that the drawer of a check lacks authority is one characteristic which renders an instrument false. State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Presumption of Authority. — Where defendant signs the name of another person to an instrument, there is no presumption of want of authority; on the contrary, where it appears that accused signed the name of another to an instrument, it is presumed that he did so with authority. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962).

State Must Show Want of Authority. — If the purported maker is a real person and actually exists, the State is required to show not only that the signature in question is not genuine, but that it was made by defendant without authority. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980); State v. Shipman, 77 N.C. App. 650, 335 S.E.2d 912 (1985).

Constitutionality of Presumption of Forgery. — In a prosecution for forging and uttering forged checks, the trial court's instruction that when a person in possession of a forged check attempts to obtain money or advances upon it, a presumption is raised that the defendant either forged or consented to the forging of such check and, nothing else appearing, the defendant would be presumed guilty of forgery, described a mere permissive inference, which did not violate due process, since (1) there was a rational connection between the basic and elemental facts such that upon proof of the basic facts (possession of a forged check and attempting to obtain money from it), the elemental facts (either forged or consented to forging of such check) are more likely to exist, and (2) there was other evidence in the case which, taken together with the inference, was sufficient for a jury to find the elemental facts beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Roberts, 51 N.C. App. 221, 275 S.E.2d 536, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 318, 281 S.E.2d 657 (1981).

Refusal to Charge on Presumption of Authority. — In a prosecution for forgery and uttering forged checks, the trial court did not err in refusing to charge that when a defendant signs the name of another to an instrument it is presumed he did so with authority, where the defendant offered no evidence that he signed the checks with authority, but testified that he had never seen the checks. State v. Roberts, 51 N.C. App. 221, 275 S.E.2d 536, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 318, 281 S.E.2d 657 (1981).

Signing Fictitious Name. — If the name signed to a negotiable instrument or other instrument requiring a signature is fictitious, of necessity, the name must have been affixed by one without authority, and if a person signs a fictitious name to such instrument with the purpose and intent to defraud, the instrument being sufficient in form to import legal liability, an indictable forgery is committed. State v. Phillips, 256 N.C. 445, 124 S.E.2d 146 (1962); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980); State v. Shipman, 77 N.C. App. 650, 335 S.E.2d 912 (1985).

Proof of Fictitious Name. — In a prosecution for forgery it was not necessary for the State to prove that the name "B. Hansely" signed by defendant to three checks was that of a fictitious person or a real person, since the evidence showed that the instrument was executed without authority, as neither "B. Hansely" nor the name of defendant appeared on the signature card of the S & M Paint Company account, upon which the checks in question were written; moreover, proof that no person bearing the name signed to a check has any right to draw on the party to whom it is directed is prima facie evidence that the name is fictitious. State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence that defendant signed the name of another in endorsing a check payable to such other person and negotiating it, that such other person had not authorized anyone to sign his name on the check, and that such person was not owed the amount of the check, was held sufficient to overrule nonsuit in a prosecution for violation of this section and § 14-120. State v. Coleman, 253 N.C. 799, 117 S.E.2d 742 (1961).

Evidence that two checks had been forged and that defendant cashed them was sufficient circumstantial evidence for the jury to find that defendant forged the checks, even without eyewitness testimony that defendant wrote the checks and without expert testimony that his handwriting was on the checks. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

III. EVIDENCE.

There is no requirement that the check upon which an endorsement was allegedly forged be in evidence. State v. Nicholson, 78 N.C. App. 398, 337 S.E.2d 654 (1985).

Evidence of Former Acts. — Upon an indictment for uttering forged money, knowing it to be forged, evidence may be received of former acts and transactions which tend to bring home the scienter to the defendant, notwithstanding such evidence may fix upon him other charges beside that on which he is tried. State v. Twitty, 9 N.C. 248 (1822).

In a prosecution for forgery and issuing a forged instrument under this section and § 14-120, evidence that defendant had theretofore forged checks other than those specified in the indictment may be competent on the question of intent. State v. Painter, 265 N.C. 277, 144 S.E.2d 6 (1965).

Evidence of Related Offenses. — In a prosecution of defendant for conspiracy to commit forgery and conspiracy to utter forged instruments, the trial court did not err in admitting testimony by a State's witness that defendant had been involved in the commission of an offense other than the ones for which he was being tried, since the other offense was a break-in during which a check writer and checks were taken from a cabinet shop, and this was a part of the overall scheme which embraced the related offenses for which defendant was being tried and tended to connect him with those offenses; therefore, defendant himself opened the door to such testimony by inquiring further into charges pending against the State's witness. State v. Pruitt, 301 N.C. 683, 273 S.E.2d 264 (1981).

Teller's Identification of Defendant. — In a prosecution of defendant for uttering a forged check, the trial court properly admitted a bank teller's identification of defendant from a photographic display, since the procedure was not so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. State v. McCullough, 50 N.C. App. 184, 272 S.E.2d 613 (1980).

Signing Name Other Than Name on Signature Authorization Card. — Where checks were drawn on a name other than the sole name on the signature authorization card of the checking account, there was evidence that the checks were falsely made. See State v. Seraphem, 90 N.C. App. 368, 368 S.E.2d 643 (1988).

IV. INDICTMENT.

Indictment Must Set Forth All Essential Elements. — Even though the offense of forgery is charged in statutory language in the bill of indictment, in order to be a valid bill of indictment it is necessary that the statutory words be supplemented by other allegations which so plainly, intelligibly and explicitly set forth every essential element of the offense as to leave no doubt in the mind of the accused and the court as to the offense intended to be charged. State v. Cross, 5 N.C. App. 217, 167 S.E.2d 868 (1969).

Alleged Alteration Should Be Indicated. — Where the alteration of a genuine instrument is charged, an indictment for forgery must clearly set forth the alteration alleged, with the proper allegations showing alteration of a material part of the instrument. Thus, in an indictment for forgery effected by interpolating words in a genuine instrument, as by raising the amount of a note, the added words should be quoted and their position in the instrument shown, so that it may appear how they affect its meaning. State v. Cross, 5 N.C. App. 217, 167 S.E.2d 868 (1969).

Tendency to Prejudice Rights of Another Must Be Shown. — The false instrument must be such as does, or may, tend to prejudice the right of another, and such tendency must be apparent to the court, either from the face of the writing itself, or from it, accompanied by the averment of extraneous facts, that show the tendency to injure. If the forged writing itself shows such tendency, then it will be sufficient to set it forth in the indictment, alleging the false and fraudulent intent; but where such tendency does not so appear, the extraneous facts, necessary to make it apparent, must be averred. This is essential, so as to enable the court to see in the record, that the indictment charges a complete offense. State v. Treadway, 27 N.C. App. 78, 217 S.E.2d 743 (1975).

Allegation of Existence of Bank Which Issued Note. — In an indictment concerning the making, passing, etc., of counterfeit bank notes, if the note alleged to have been passed be of a bank not within the State, the indictment should aver that such a bank exists as that by which the counterfeit note purports to have been issued. State v. Twitty, 9 N.C. 248 (1822).

V. INSTRUCTIONS.

An instruction including the requirement that there be a false making encompasses the requirement that the instrument be drawn by one who lacks authority. State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975); State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

An instruction that executing a check on a bank account by signing a name not authorized by the signature card would be a false making of a check is a proper charge on the element that the instrument be false. State v. Dunbar, 47 N.C. App. 623, 267 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

The sentence "the check appeared to be genuine" in a jury instruction adequately states the third element of forgery, that the check as made was apparently capable of defrauding. State v. Monds, 36 N.C. App. 510, 245 S.E.2d 369, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 556, 248 S.E.2d 733 (1978).

VI. SENTENCING.

Violation as Felony. — A contention that the punishment for forging and uttering a check in violation of this section and § 14-120, by analogy to § 14-72, should be limited to the punishment imposed for a misdemeanor is untenable, since a violation of each section is a felony and the court has no power to amend an act of the General Assembly. State v. Davis, 267 N.C. 126, 147 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

Sentences Within Prescribed Limits. — Where the sentences imposed on defendant's plea of guilty, understandingly and voluntarily made, are within the limits prescribed by this section and § 14-120, such sentences cannot be considered cruel or unusual in the constitutional sense. State v. Newell, 268 N.C. 300, 150 S.E.2d 405 (1966).

A sentence of five years' imprisonment imposed upon defendant's plea of guilty to the charge of forging a check in the amount of $45.00 was within the maximum authorized by this section. State v. Bolder, 8 N.C. App. 343, 174 S.E.2d 139 (1970).

§ 14-120. Uttering forged paper or instrument containing a forged endorsement.

If any person, directly or indirectly, whether for the sake of gain or with intent to defraud or injure any other person, shall utter or publish any such false, forged or counterfeited instrument as is mentioned in G.S. 14-119, or shall pass or deliver, or attempt to pass or deliver, any of them to another person (knowing the same to be falsely forged or counterfeited) the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. If any person, directly or indirectly, whether for the sake of gain or with intent to defraud or injure any other person, shall falsely make, forge or counterfeit any endorsement on any instrument described in the preceding section, whether such instrument be genuine or false, or shall knowingly utter or publish any such instrument containing a false, forged or counterfeited endorsement or, knowing the same to be falsely endorsed, shall pass or deliver or attempt to pass or deliver any such instrument containing a forged endorsement to another person, the person so offending shall be guilty of a Class I felony. (1819, c. 994, s. 2, P.R.; R.C., c. 34, s. 61; Code, s. 1031; Rev., s. 3427; 1909, c. 666; C.S., s. 4294; 1961, c. 94; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1983, c. 397, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 1185; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Cross References. — For structured sentencing provisions effective October 1, 1994, see § 15A-1340.10 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Section 90-108(a)(10) Distinguished. — This section is distinguishable from § 90-108(a)(10), as this section specifically states that a person violates the statute if he publishes or utters a forged instrument "knowing the same to be falsely forged or counterfeited," and no such language appears in § 90-108(a)(10). State v. Baynard, 79 N.C. App. 559, 339 S.E.2d 810 (1986).

Elements of the Offense. — The mere offer of the false instrument with fraudulent intent constitutes an uttering or publishing, the essence of the offense being, as in the case of forgery, the fraudulent intent regardless of its successful consummation. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Seraphem, 90 N.C. App. 368, 368 S.E.2d 643 (1988).

Uttering a forged instrument consists in offering to another the forged instrument with the knowledge of the falsity of the writing and with intent to defraud. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Jackson, 19 N.C. App. 749, 200 S.E.2d 199 (1973).

The essential elements of the crime of uttering a forged check are (1) the offer of a forged check to another, (2) with knowledge that the check is false, and (3) with the intent to defraud or injure another. State v. Hill, 31 N.C. App. 248, 229 S.E.2d 810 (1976); State v. Thompson, 62 N.C. App. 585, 303 S.E.2d 85 (1983).

Uttering is accomplished either when an individual passes or delivers a forged instrument or attempts to pass or deliver a forged instrument. State v. Kirkpatrick, 343 N.C. 285, 470 S.E.2d 54 (1996).

Pecuniary Gain. — It is error for a trial court to consider pecuniary gain as a factor in aggravation of a sentence for feloniously uttering a check, since pecuniary gain is inherent in the offense of felonious uttering. State v. Thompson, 62 N.C. App. 585, 303 S.E.2d 85 (1983).

To convict a defendant of uttering a check with a forged endorsement, the State is required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that (1) defendant passed a check, (2) such check contained an endorsement which was forged, (3) defendant knew that such endorsement was forged and (4) defendant acted for the sake of gain or with the intent to defraud or injure any other person. State v. Forte, 80 N.C. 701, 343 S.E.2d 261, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 735, 345 S.E.2d 400 (1986).

Time is not of the essence in the crimes of forgery and uttering a forged check. State v. Prince, 49 N.C. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

"Directly or Indirectly." — A check filled out by the payee at the direction of the drawer falls within the meaning of the words "directly or indirectly" as used in this section. State v. Cranfield, 238 N.C. 110, 76 S.E.2d 353 (1953).

Delivering to Agent. — It is putting spurious paper into circulation, and not defrauding the individual who takes it, that the state has in view. Hence, upon a similar statute, it was held that delivering a forged note to an agent, that he might dispose of it in buying goods, was a passing within the act. State v. Harris, 27 N.C. 287 (1844).

Uttering Distinct from Forgery. — By virtue of this section, uttering is an offense distinct from that of forgery which is defined in § 14-119. State v. Greenlee, 272 N.C. 651, 159 S.E.2d 22 (1968); State v. Treadway, 27 N.C. App. 78, 217 S.E.2d 743 (1975).

Forgery of Money Order and Forgery of Endorsement Are Separate Offenses. — To convict of the felony of forging endorsements under the second sentence of this section, it was not necessary to allege or prove forgery of the face of money orders, which would have been separate felonies under § 14-119. State v. Sutton, 14 N.C. App. 422, 188 S.E.2d 596 (1972).

Evidence of Former Acts. — In a prosecution for forgery and issuing a forged instrument under this section and § 14-119, evidence that defendant had theretofore forged checks other than those specified in the indictment may be competent on the question of intent. State v. Painter, 265 N.C. 277, 144 S.E.2d 6 (1965).

Evidence of Related Offenses. — In a prosecution of defendant for conspiracy to commit forgery, and conspiracy to utter forged instruments, the trial court did not err in admitting testimony by a State's witness that defendant had been involved in the commission of an offense other than the ones for which he was being tried, since the other offense was a break-in during which a check writer and checks were taken from a cabinet shop, and this was a part of the overall scheme which embraced the related offenses for which defendant was being tried and tended to connect him with those offenses; therefore, defendant himself opened the door to such testimony by inquiring further into charges pending against the State's witness. State v. Pruitt, 301 N.C. 683, 273 S.E.2d 264 (1981).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Direct evidence was sufficient to go to the jury for its consideration of whether defendant possessed the requisite knowledge that the endorsement on a check which he passed was forged, where the jury could reasonably infer from established facts that defendant removed check from file, endorsed the check himself or had someone else do it, and presented the check with knowledge of the forged endorsement. State v. Forte, 80 N.C. App. 701, 343 S.E.2d 261, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 735, 345 S.E.2d 400 (1986).

State presented substantial circumstantial evidence that the defendant knew she possessed and uttered forged instruments; central to the State's case were the conflicting stories which the defendant presented regarding the checks' origins and if a jury were to view these changes as evidence of prefabrication, it could infer that the defendant knew the checks were forged; additionally, the State showed the defendant, when negotiating each check, lied to the recipient about the check's origin and from this the jury could infer that the defendant doubted the legitimacy of these transactions. State v. Sanders, 95 N.C. App. 494, 383 S.E.2d 409, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 712, 388 S.E.2d 470 (1989).

There is no requirement that the check upon which an endorsement was allegedly forged be in evidence. State v. Nicholson, 78 N.C. App. 398, 337 S.E.2d 654 (1985).

Instructions as to Forgery — Presumption of Authority. — In a prosecution for forgery and uttering forged checks, the trial court did not err in refusing to charge that when a defendant signs the name of another to an instrument it is presumed he did so with authority where the defendant offered no evidence that he signed the checks with authority but testified that he had never seen the checks. State v. Roberts, 51 N.C. App. 221, 275 S.E.2d 536, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 318, 281 S.E.2d 657 (1981).

Same — Inference Arising from Attempt to Obtain Money. — In a prosecution for forging and uttering forged checks, the trial court's instruction that when a person in possession of a forged check attempts to obtain money or advances upon it, a presumption is raised that the defendant either forged or consented to the forging of such check and, nothing appearing, the defendant would be presumed guilty of forgery described a mere permissive inference which did not violate due process since (1) there was a rational connection between the basic and elemental facts such that upon proof of the basic facts (possession of a forged check and attempting to obtain money from it), the elemental facts (either forged or consented to forging of such check) are more likely to exist, and (2) there was other evidence in the case which, taken together with the inference, was sufficient for a jury to find the elemental facts beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Roberts, 51 N.C. App. 221, 275 S.E.2d 536, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 318, 281 S.E.2d 657 (1981).

Punishment. — Where the sentences imposed on defendant's plea of guilty, understandingly and voluntarily made, are within the limits prescribed by this section and § 14-119, such sentences cannot be considered cruel or unusual in the constitutional sense. State v. Newell, 268 N.C. 300, 150 S.E.2d 405 (1966).

A contention that the punishment for forging and uttering a check in violation of this section and § 14-119, by analogy to § 14-72, should be limited to the punishment imposed for a misdemeanor is untenable since a violation of each section is a felony and the court has no power to amend an act of the General Assembly. State v. Davis, 267 N.C. 126, 147 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

Status as Habitual Felon. — Trial court did not err in considering defendant's prior adjudication as an habitual felon as a nonstatutory aggravating factor when sentencing defendant for uttering an instrument bearing a forged endorsement. State v. Kirkpatrick, 123 N.C. App. 86, 472 S.E.2d 371 (1996), aff'd, 346 N.C. 451, 480 S.E.2d 400 (1997).

§ 14-121. Selling of certain forged securities.

If any person shall sell, by delivery, endorsement or otherwise, to any other person, any judgment for the recovery of money purporting to have been rendered by a magistrate, or any bond, promissory note, bill of exchange, order, draft or liquidated account purporting to be signed by the debtor (knowing the same to be forged), the person so offending shall be punished as a Class H felon. (R.C., c. 34, s. 63; Code, s. 1033; Rev., s. 3425; C.S., s. 4295; 1973, c. 108, s. 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1186; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-122. Forgery of deeds, wills and certain other instruments.

If any person, of his own head and imagination, or by false conspiracy or fraud with others, shall wittingly and falsely forge and make, or shall cause or wittingly assent to the forging or making of, or shall show forth in evidence, knowing the same to be forged, any deed, lease or will, or any bond, writing obligatory, bill of exchange, promissory note, endorsement or assignment thereof; or any acquittance or receipt for money or goods; or any receipt or release for any bond, note, bill or any other security for the payment of money; or any order for the payment of money or delivery of goods, with intent, in any of said instances, to defraud any person or corporation, and thereof shall be duly convicted, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class H felon. (5 Eliz., c. 14, ss. 2, 3; 21 James I, c. 26; 1801, c. 572, P.R.; R.C., c. 34, s. 59; Code, s. 1029; Rev., s. 3424; C.S., s. 4296; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1187; 1994, Ex. CASE NOTES

Intent to Deceive Is Sufficient. — Differing from false pretenses, it is not an element of this offense that the forgery was "calculated to deceive and did deceive"; intent alone suffices to constitute the crime. State v. Hall, 108 N.C. 776, 13 S.E. 189 (1891); State v. Collins, 115 N.C. 716, 20 S.E. 452 (1894).

It is immaterial to whom the advantages of the forgery would accrue. State v. White, 101 N.C. 770, 7 S.E. 715 (1888), aff'd, 132 U.S. 131, 10 S. Ct. 47, 33 L. Ed. 287 (1889).

An instrument in writing on which forgery can be predicated is one which, if genuine, could operate as the foundation of another man's liability, or the evidence of his rights, such as a letter of recommendation of a person as a man of property and pecuniary responsibility, an order for the delivery of goods, a receipt, or a railroad pass, as well as a bill of exchange, or other express contract. Barnes v. Crawford, 115 N.C. 76, 20 S.E. 386 (1894).

To constitute an "order for the delivery of goods," a forgery within the meaning of this section, there must appear to be a drawer, a person drawn upon, who is under obligation to obey, and there must appear to be a person to whom the goods are to be delivered, and if the paper writing set forth in the indictment as a forgery does not contain these requisites, there cannot be a conviction for forgery under this section, State v. Lamb, 65 N.C. 419 (1871); but in such case a conviction will be sustained for the offense at common law. State v. Leak, 80 N.C. 403 (1879).

Falsely putting a witness' name to a bond not required to be attested by a subscribing witness does not affect the validity of the bond, and is not forgery. State v. Gherkin, 29 N.C. 206 (1847).

Erasure of Obliteration Not a Forgery. — Obliterating by erasure, or otherwise, a release or acquittance on the back of a bond or elsewhere, with the intent to defraud any person thereby, is not according to the law of North Carolina, a forgery. State v. Thornburg, 28 N.C. 79 (1845).

Forgery of One of Two Names. — Where the alleged forged instrument has the names of two or more persons affixed, it is sufficient if one of them is proved to have been forged. State v. White, 101 N.C. 770, 7 S.E. 715 (1888), aff'd on other grounds, 132 U.S. 131, 10 S. Ct. 47, 33 L. Ed. 287 (1889).

Misspelled Signature. — An indictment lies for forgery of an order for the payment of money, although the signature is misspelled, State v. Covington, 94 N.C. 913 (1886), or the names of a firm are in reverse order if it is clear who the parties intended to be designated are. State v. Lane, 80 N.C. 407 (1879).

Possession Raises Presumption of Guilt. — In State v. Britt, 14 N.C. 122 (1831), Ruffin, J., says: "That the order was not in the handwriting of the defendant did not rebut the legal presumption of his guilt. Being in possession of the forged order, drawn in his own favor, were facts constituting complete proof that, either by himself or by false conspiracy with others, he forged or assented to the forgery of the instrument; that he either did the act or caused it to be done until he showed the actual perpetrator and that he himself was not privy." To the same effect is State v. Morgan, 19 N.C. 348 (1837). It is wholly immaterial whether the defendant himself forged the order or procured and caused it to be done. In either case his guilt is the same. State v. Lane, 80 N.C. 407 (1879).

One possessing a forged instrument is presumed to have either forged it or consented to the forgery, and nothing else appearing such holder will be presumed guilty. State v. Peterson, 129 N.C. 556, 40 S.E. 9 (1901).

Where defendant signs the name of another person to an instrument, there is no presumption of want of authority. State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 512, 227 S.E.2d 172 (1976).

Proof of Signature of Another Name to Instrument Without Authority Is Required. — To show that the defendant signed the name of some other person to an instrument, and that he passed such instrument as genuine, is not sufficient to establish the commission of a crime. It must still be shown that it was a false instrument, and this is not established until it is shown that the person who signed another's name did so without authority. State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 512, 227 S.E.2d 172 (1976).

Charge in Indictment Where Instrument Is Lost. — If the forged instrument is lost it is not necessary to set it out in the indictment, and the substance of the forged instrument is all that need be charged, though in such case it would be better practice to aver the loss. State v. Peterson, 129 N.C. 556, 40 S.E. 9 (1901).

Instrument Partly Printed and Partly in Writing. — An indictment for forging "a certain instrument in writing" is supported by proof of the forgery of an instrument partly printed and party in writing. State v. Ridge, 125 N.C. 655, 34 S.E. 439 (1899).

Description in Indictment Held Insufficient. — A description of the forged instrument as a "railroad pass" merely, is insufficient. The circumstances showing authority of the officer whose name is forged, and the obligation of the company to honor it, must be set out in the indictment. State v. Weaver, 94 N.C. 836 (1886).

§ 14-122.1. Falsifying documents issued by a secondary school, postsecondary educational institution, or governmental agency.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly and willfully:

(1) To make falsely or alter falsely, or to procure to be made falsely or altered falsely, or to aid or assist in making falsely or altering falsely, a diploma, certificate, license, or transcript signifying merit or achievement in an educational program issued by a secondary school, a postsecondary educational institution, or a governmental agency;

(2) To sell, give, buy, or obtain, or to procure to be sold, given, bought, or obtained, or to aid or assist in selling, giving, buying, or obtaining, a diploma, certificate, license, or transcript, which he knows is false, signifying merit or achievement in an educational program issued by a secondary school, a postsecondary educational institution, or a governmental agency;

(3) To use, offer, or present as genuine a falsely made or falsely altered diploma, certificate, license, or transcript signifying merit or achievement in an educational program issued by a secondary school, a postsecondary educational institution, or a governmental agency, which he knows is false; or

(4) To make a false written representation of fact that he has received a degree or other certification signifying merit, achievement, or completion of an educational program involving study, experience, or testing from a secondary school, a postsecondary educational institution or governmental agency in an application for:

(a) Employment;

(b) Admission to an educational program;

(c) Award; or

(d) For the purpose of inducing another to issue a diploma, certificate, license, or transcript signifying merit or achievement in an educational program of a secondary school, postsecondary educational institution, or a governmental agency.

(b) As used in this section, "postsecondary educational institution" means a technical college, community college, junior college, college, or university. As used in this section, "governmental agency" means any agency of a State or local government or of the federal government. As used in this section, "secondary school" means grades 9 through 12.

(c) Any person who violates a provision of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1981, c. 146, s. 1; 1987, c. 388, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 66; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-123. Forging names to petitions and uttering forged petitions.

If any person shall willfully sign, or cause to be signed, or willfully assent to the signing of the name of any person without his consent, or of any deceased or fictitious person, to any petition or recommendation with the intent of procuring any commutation of sentence, pardon or reprieve of any person convicted of any crime or offense, or for the purpose of procuring such pardon, reprieve or commutation to be refused or delayed by any public officer, or with the intent of procuring from any person whatsoever, either for himself or another, any appointment to office, or to any position of honor or trust, or with the intent to influence the official action of any public officer in the management, conduct or decision of any matter affecting the public, he shall be punished as a Class I felon; and if any person shall willfully use any such paper for any of the purposes or intents above recited, knowing that any part of the signatures to such petition or recommendation has been signed thereto without the consent of the alleged signers, or that names of any dead or fictitious persons are signed thereto, he shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished in like manner. (1883, c. 275; Code, s. 1034; Rev., s. 3426; C.S., s. 4297; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14.)

§ 14-124. Forging certificate of corporate stock and uttering forged certificates.

If any officer or agent of a corporation shall, falsely and with a fraudulent purpose, make, with the intent that the same shall be issued and delivered to any other person by name or as holder or bearer thereof, any certificate or other writing, whereby it is certified or declared that such person, holder or bearer is entitled to or has an interest in the stock of such corporation, when in fact such person, holder or bearer is not so entitled, or is not entitled to the amount of stock in such certificate or writing specified; or if any officer or agent of such corporation, or other person, knowing such certificate or other writing to be false or untrue, shall transfer, assign or deliver the same to another person, for the sake of gain, or with the intent to defraud the corporation, or any member thereof, or such person to whom the same shall be transferred, assigned or delivered, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. (R.C., c. 34, s. 62; Code, s. 1032; Rev., s. 3421; C.S., s. 4298; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14.)

§ 14-125. Forgery of bank notes and other instruments by connecting genuine parts.

If any person shall fraudulently connect together different parts of two or more bank notes, or other genuine instruments, in such a manner as to produce another note or instrument, with intent to pass all of them as genuine, the same shall be deemed a forgery, and the instrument so produced a forged note, or forged instrument, in like manner as if each of them had been falsely made or forged. (R.C., c. 34, s. 66; Code, s. 1037; Rev., s. 3420; C.S., s. 4299.)

§ 14-127. Willful and wanton injury to real property.

If any person shall willfully and wantonly damage, injure or destroy any real property whatsoever, either of a public or private nature, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (R.C., c. 34, s. 111; 1873-4, c. 176, s. 5; Code, s. 1081; Rev., s. 3677; C.S., s. 4301; 1967, c. 1083; 1993, c. 539, s. 67; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section was designed to avoid the element of malicious ill will required by the common-law crime of malicious mischief. State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd, 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

Intent. — This section requires, as an essential element of the offenses set forth, a showing that defendant "willfully" or "wantonly" caused the damage. State v. Davis, 86 N.C. App. 25, 356 S.E.2d 607 (1987).

Count Charging Violation of § 14-49 as Embracing a Charge Under This Section. — See State v. Bindyke, 288 N.C. 608, 220 S.E.2d 521 (1975).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Conviction for willful damage to real property under this section would be affirmed where the evidence was sufficient to allow the jury to infer that defendant put paper towels in museum toilet intending to create a serious water problem, as the resulting damage to the toilet (as an attached fixture, part of the real property) and water damage to the floor of the museum were natural and foreseeable consequences of clogging the constantly-running toilet. State v. Davis, 86 N.C. App. 25, 356 S.E.2d 607 (1987).

§ 14-128. Injury to trees, crops, lands, etc., of another.

Any person, not being on his own lands, who shall without the consent of the owner thereof, willfully commit any damage, injury, or spoliation to or upon any tree, wood, underwood, timber, garden, crops, vegetables, plants, lands, springs, or any other matter or thing growing or being thereon, or who cuts, breaks, injures, or removes any tree, plant, or flower, shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor: Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to the officers, agents, and employees of the Department of Transportation while in the discharge of their duties within the right-of-way or easement of the Department of Transportation. On lands under option which have formally or informally been offered to and accepted by the North Carolina Department of Environment and Natural Resources by the acquiring federal agency and tentatively accepted by said Department for administration as State forests, State parks, State game refuges or for other public purposes, it shall be unlawful to cut, dig, break, injure or remove any timber, lumber, firewood, trees, shrubs or other plants; or any fence, house, barn or other structure; or to pursue, trap, hunt or kill any bird or other wild animals or take fish from streams or lakes within the boundaries of such areas without the written consent of the local official of the United States having charge of the acquisition of such lands.

Any person, firm or corporation convicted of the violation of this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor.

(1) One to which the public or a portion of the public has access and is owned or controlled by the State, any subdivision of the State, any other public agency, or any private institution or agency of a charitable, educational, or eleemosynary nature; or

(2) Dedicated to the use of the general public for a purpose which is primarily concerned with public recreation, cultural activities, and other events of a public nature or character.

(3) Designated by the Attorney General in accordance with G.S. 114-20.1.

The term "building or facility" as used in this section also includes the surrounding grounds and premises of any building or facility used in connection with the operation or functioning of such building or facility.

(1975, c. 636, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 75; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-487, s. 2.)

Evidence that the parties are living apart shall include but is not necessarily limited to:

(1) A judicial order of separation;
(2) A court order directing the person charged to stay away from the premises occupied by the complainant;
(3) An agreement, whether verbal or written, between the complainant and the person charged that they shall live separate and apart, and such parties are in fact living separate and apart; or
(4) Separate places of residence for the complainant and the person charged.

Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, upon conviction, said person is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) A person convicted of a violation of this section is guilty of a Class G felony if the person is trespassing upon property operated as a safe house or haven for victims of domestic violence and the person is armed with a deadly

CASE NOTES

Prior Contempt Adjudication And Double Jeopardy. — Defendant's convictions for kidnapping, non-felonious breaking or entering, and domestic criminal trespass did not violate the Double Jeopardy Clause where several elements contained within the applicable statutory language were not set out in the protective order that defendant had previously been held in contempt for violating. State v. Gilley, 135 N.C. App. 519, 522 S.E.2d 111 (1999).

Defendant wife's previous "conviction" in a criminal contempt proceeding barred her subsequent prosecution for domestic criminal trespass under this section; the phrase "shall not come to the residence" contained in the civil consent order was equivalent to the domestic criminal trespass element of "entering . . . upon the premises," for purposes of double jeopardy. State v. Dye, 139 N.C. App. 148, 532 S.E.2d 574 (2000).

§ 14-135. Cutting, injuring, or removing another's timber.

If any person not being the bona fide owner thereof, shall knowingly and willfully cut down, injure or remove any standing, growing or fallen tree or log, the property of another, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1889, c. 168; Rev., s. 3687; C.S., s. 4306; 1957, c. 1437, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 77; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Prosecutor's Ownership of Land Essential. — The crime of unlawfully cutting, injuring or removing another's timber as defined by this section is an offense against the freehold rather than the possession, and ownership of the property by the prosecutor is a sine qua non to conviction. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Cited in State v. Edgerton, 25 N.C. App. 45, 212 S.E.2d 398 (1975).

§ 14-136. Setting fire to grass and brushlands and woodlands.

If any person shall intentionally set fire to any grassland, brushland or woodland, except it be his own property, or in that case without first giving notice to all persons owning or in charge of lands adjoining the land intended to be fired, and without also taking care to watch such fire while burning and to extinguish it before it shall reach any lands near to or adjoining the lands so fired, he shall for every such offense be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor for the first offense, and for a second or any subsequent similar offense shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. If intent to damage the property of another shall be shown, said person shall be punished as a Class I felon. This section shall not prevent an action for the damages sustained by the owner of any property from such fires. For the purposes of this section, the term "woodland" is to be taken to include all forest areas, both timber and cutover land, and all second-growth stands on areas that have at one time been cultivated. Any person who shall furnish to the State, evidence sufficient for the conviction of a violation of this section shall receive the sum of five hundred dollars ($500.00) to be paid from the State Fire Suppression Fund. (1777, c. 123, ss. 1, 2, P.R.; R.C., c. 16, ss. 1, 2; Code, ss. 52, 53; Rev., s. 3346; 1915, c. 243, ss. 8, 11; 1919, c. 318; C.S., s. 4309; 1925, c. 61, s. 1; 1943, c. 661; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, ss. 78, 1188; c. 892; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

The primary purpose of this section is to protect property from fire damage. But the enactment is broad enough to include setting fire to a grass-covered field. Benton v. Montague, 253 N.C. 695, 117 S.E.2d 771 (1961).

The primary purpose of this section is to protect property. Pickard v. Burlington Belt Corp., 2 N.C. App. 97, 162 S.E.2d 601 (1968).

This section defines the standard of care imposed upon a person who undertakes to burn brush, grass, etc., and a violation of its provisions constitutes negligence. Pickard v. Burlington Belt Corp., 2 N.C. App. 97, 162 S.E.2d 601 (1968).

Care No Defense Where Notice Not Given. — If one firing woods fails to give the statutory notice to adjoining owners and damages ensue, the cause of action is complete, no matter what degree of care may have been shown. Lamb v. Sloan, 94 N.C. 534 (1886); Benton v. Montague, 253 N.C. 695, 117 S.E.2d 771 (1961).

Waiver of Notice Bars Damages. — A waiver of notice is a sufficient answer to an action for damages caused to woodland by fire. Roberson v. Kirby, 52 N.C. 477 (1860); Lamb v. Sloan, 94 N.C. 534 (1886).

Waiver when made by a tenant in common while in possession is also a sufficient defense. See Stanland v. Rourk, 168 N.C. 568, 84 S.E. 845 (1915).

Waiver by Adjoining Owner No Bar to Penalty. — When an adjoining owner waives notice of the intended fire such waiver does not waive the penalty of this section, but is only a waiver of the landowner's right of action for damages to his land caused by the spreading of the fire. Lamb v. Sloan, 94 N.C. 534 (1886).

Liability to One Not an Adjoining Owner. — The notice required by this section applies only to adjoining owners and one is not subject to the penalty for failure to give notice to one who is not an adjoining owner, but by the express terms of the statute there is a liability in damages for damages to "any property." See Roberson v. Morgan, 118 N.C. 991, 24 S.E. 667 (1896).

No Evidence to Show Fire Started by Defendant. — Where the evidence tended only to show that the fire started on defendant's land and spread to the plaintiff's land, but that the defendant had ordered his employees not to set out a fire on account of the dry conditions, and there was neither direct nor circumstantial evidence tending to show the fire had been started either by the defendant or his employees under his authority, a judgment of nonsuit was proper. Sutton v. Herrin, 202 N.C. 599, 163 S.E. 578 (1932).

Burning Off Railroad Rights-of-Way. — In case of Mizzell v. Branning Mfg. Co., 158 N.C. 265, 73 S.E. 802 (1912), it was held under a prior statute, similar in some respects to this except that it did not provide against burning grassland and brushland, that the statute did not apply to railroads burning off their rights-of-way that were covered with grass and tree tops.

Defendant was properly charged and convicted under former § 14-138 where defendant set two fires: the first one intentionally, and the second by leaving a smoldering stump. State v. Hewitt, 126 N.C. App. 366, 484 S.E.2d 844 (1997).

§ 14-137. Willfully or negligently setting fire to woods and fields.

If any person, firm or corporation shall willfully or negligently set on fire, or cause to be set on fire, any woods, lands or fields, whatsoever, every such offender shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. This section shall apply only in those counties under the protection of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources in its work of forest fire control. It shall not apply in the case of a landowner firing, or causing to be fired, his own open, nonwooded lands, or fields in connection with farming or building operations at the time and in the manner now provided by law: Provided, he shall have confined the fire at his own expense to said open lands or fields. (1907, c. 320, ss. 4, 5; C.S., s. 4310; 1925, c. 61, s. 2; 1941, c. 258; 1973, c. 1262, s. 86; 1977, c. 771, s. 4; 1989, c. 727, s. 218(3); 1993, c. 539, s. 79; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-443, s. 11A.119(a).)

CASE NOTES

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence that the county in which defendant negligently or willfully started forest fires was in charge of the State forest service and that this section was applicable to the county, defendant having offered no evidence to the contrary, was sufficient to show a violation of the section. State v. Patton, 221 N.C. 117, 19 S.E.2d 142 (1942).

Any person, firm, corporation, or other legal entity who shall in any manner whatsoever start any fire upon any grassland, brushland, or woodland without fully extinguishing the same, shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor which may include a fine of not less than ten dollars ($10.00) or more than fifty dollars ($50.00). Any person, firm, corporation, or other legal entity who shall burn any brush, grass, or other material whereby any property may be endangered or destroyed, without keeping and maintaining a careful watchman in charge of the burning, shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor which may include a fine of not less than ten dollars ($10.00) or more than fifty dollars ($50.00). Fire escaping from the brush, grass, or other material while burning shall be prima facie evidence of violation of this provision. (1995, c. 210, s. 2.)

§ 14-141. Burning or otherwise destroying crops in the field.

Any person who shall willfully burn or destroy any other person's lawfully grown crop, pasture, or provender shall be punished as follows:

(1) If the damage is two thousand dollars ($2,000) or less, the person is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(2) If the damage is more than two thousand dollars ($2,000), the person is guilty of a Class I felony. CASE NOTES

Out of Doors. — One who burns cotton in a railroad car cannot be convicted under this section as the cotton is not out of doors. State v. Avery, 109 N.C. 798, 13 S.E. 931 (1891), decided prior to 1991 amendment.

Indictment. — An indictment should charge a statutory crime in the words of the statute. Therefore an indictment charging setting fire to a lot of fodder, without charging the burning, is defective. State v. Hall, 93 N.C. 571 (1885), decided prior to 1991 amendment.

It is not necessary under this section to aver in the indictment that the stack burned was "out of doors." State v. Huskins, 126 N.C. 1070, 35 S.E. 608 (1900), decided prior to 1991 amendment.

§ 14-142. Injuries to dams and water channels of mills and factories.

If any person shall cut away, destroy or otherwise injure any dam, or part thereof, or shall obstruct or damage any race, canal or other water channel erected, opened, used or constructed for the purpose of furnishing water for the operation of any mill, factory or machine works, or for the escape of water therefrom, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1866, c. 48; Code, s. 1087; Rev., s. 3678; C.S., s. 4315; 1969, c. 1224, s. 13; 1993, c. 539, s. 82; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Obstruction Below Dam or Channel. — This section only applies to obstructions and damages to the dam or channel, and an indictment cannot be had for obstructions below the dam or channel. State v. Tomlinson, 77 N.C. 528 (1877).

§ 14-144. Injuring houses, churches, fences and walls.

If any person shall, by any other means than burning or attempting to burn, unlawfully and willfully demolish, destroy, deface, injure or damage any of the houses or other buildings mentioned in this Chapter in the Article entitled Arson and Other Burnings; or shall by any other means than burning or attempting to burn unlawfully and willfully demolish, pull down, destroy, deface, damage or injure any church, uninhabitated house, outhouse or other house or building not mentioned in such article; or shall unlawfully and willfully burn, destroy, pull down, injure or remove any fence, wall or other inclosure, or any part thereof, surrounding or about any yard, garden, cultivated field or pasture, or about any church or graveyard, or about any factory or other house in which machinery is used, every person so offending shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (R.C., c. 34, s. 103; Code, s. 1062; Rev., s. 3673; C.S., s. 4317; 1957, c. 250, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 83; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Houses and Other Buildings.
III. Fences, etc.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Trespass Is a Necessary Part of This Offense. — It was held that to constitute a criminal offense under this section, there must be a trespass. State v. Williams, 44 N.C. 197 (1853); State v. Watson, 86 N.C. 626 (1882); State v. McCracken, 118 N.C. 1240, 24 S.E. 530 (1896).

And a party in lawful possession cannot commit a trespass upon the property of which he is in possession. Dobbs v. Gullidge, 20 N.C. 197 (1838); State v. Reynolds, 95 N.C. 616 (1886); State v. Howell, 107 N.C. 835, 12 S.E. 569 (1890).

If defendant was shown to have been in the actual lawful possession of house at the time he tore it down, he committed no criminal offense under this section. State v. Jones, 129 N.C. 508, 39 S.E. 795 (1901).

Tenant's and Landlord's Liability to One Another. — A tenant is not subject under this section for damage done to property in his possession, but the owner of the reversion would be subject to prosecution for damage to property in the possession of a tenant, as the statute covers offenses against possession. State v. Mason, 35 N.C. 341 (1852); State v. Whitener, 92 N.C. 798 (1885).

A tenant cannot divest the possession of his landlord by an attempted attornment to another, and if the person to whom the attempted attornment is made enters the land and damages buildings he is liable under this section, in spite of proof of good faith and claim of title. State v. Howell, 107 N.C. 835, 12 S.E. 569 (1890).

Same — Tenant at Sufferance. — If a building is torn down by a landlord while it is in the possession of a tenant at sufferance, an indictment under this section cannot be supported, for this section was intended to protect property in which the tenant at sufferance has no interest in. State v. Mace, 65 N.C. 344 (1871).

Cited in Fowler v. Graves, 83 N.C. App. 403, 350 S.E.2d 155 (1986); Brooks v. Pembroke City Jail, 722 F. Supp. 1294 (E.D.N.C. 1989).

II. HOUSES AND OTHER BUILDINGS.

An "uninhabited house" within the purview of this section is a house fit for human habitation, but which is uninhabited at the time. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956).

Where the evidence disclosed that the structure in question was not fit for human habitation at the time of the alleged offense, the evidence was insufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution for burning an uninhabited house in violation of this section. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956).

An indictment which charged that the defendant unlawfully, willfully and feloniously set fire to and burned the dwelling house of named person, the same being unoccupied at the time of the burning, charged the burning of an "uninhabited house" in violation of this section, and not a violation of § 14-67. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956).

"Other Houses". — It is manifest that the words "other house or building" embrace a jail, a jailhouse or building. State v. Bryan, 89 N.C. 531 (1883).

Houses Erected Through Mistake and Subsequently Removed. — One who peaceably enters upon lands believing at the time that he has the right to do so, and erects houses thereon, but, being still in possession, tears them down and removes them upon discovering that he was upon the lands of another, is not such a trespasser as will subject him to a conviction under this section. State v. Reynolds, 95 N.C. 616 (1886).

Schoolhouses Held by Adverse Possession. — If defendants are in the adverse possession of a schoolhouse and are bona fide claiming it as their own, it is not a crime in them to pull it down. State v. Roseman, 66 N.C. 634 (1872).

Dynamiting a Crib. — An indictment will lie under this section for injury to a crib by an explosion of dynamite. See State v. Martin, 173 N.C. 808, 92 S.E. 597 (1917).

Proof of defacement by either bullets or paint would be sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section. State v. Dawson, 272 N.C. 535, 159 S.E.2d 1 (1968).

III. FENCES, ETC.

Fence Must Enclose Something. — It is necessary under this section that the fence destroyed or injured surround or enclose something, and a fence along a road, erected to prevent passersby from turning into the field to avoid mud in the road, when not connected with any other fence, is not within the meaning of this section. See State v. Roberts, 101 N.C. 744, 7 S.E. 714 (1888).

Wire Fences. — An indictment for cutting and destroying a wire fence may be maintained under this section if it charges that the wire fence was an enclosure. State v. Biggers, 108 N.C. 760, 12 S.E. 1024 (1891).

Cultivated Field Defined. — Where a piece or tract of land has been cleared and fenced and cultivated, or is proposed to be cultivated, and is kept and used for cultivation according to the ordinary course of husbandry, although nothing may be growing within the enclosure at the time of the trespass, it is a "cultivated field" within the description of the statute. State v. Allen, 35 N.C. 36 (1851); State v. McMinn, 81 N.C. 585 (1879).

The ruling in State v. Allen, 35 N.C. 36 (1851), was cited and approved in State v. McMinn, 81 N.C. 585 (1879), in which case it was also held that the smallness of the tract made no difference; that a town lot, if inclosed and cultivated, could be described as a "field" under this statute, unless it was used as a "garden," in which case it should be so described. State v. Campbell, 133 N.C. 640, 45 S.E. 344 (1903).

"Cultivated Field" and "Pasture" Are Not Synonymous. — Where in a criminal prosecution for the violation of this section, the indictment charges the defendant with having removed a fence surrounding a cultivated field, and the evidence is that the fence surrounded a pasture, the word "pasture" and "cultivated field" are not synonymous and are distinguished in the statute by a disjunctive, and an instruction which charges that a pasture is a cultivated field within the meaning of the statute is erroneous. State v. Cornett, 199 N.C. 634, 155 S.E. 451 (1930).

Agency No Defense. — Under an indictment for tearing down a fence, the defendant cannot avoid liability by showing that he acted as agent for another. State v. Campbell, 133 N.C. 640, 45 S.E. 344 (1903).

Title to Land No Defense. — It is well settled that where the State, in an indictment under this section, for unlawfully and willfully removing a fence, shows actual possession in the prosecutor, the defendant cannot excuse himself by showing title to the land upon which the fence was situated. State v. Graham, 53 N.C. 397 (1861); State v. Hovis, 76 N.C. 117 (1877); State v. Marsh, 91 N.C. 632 (1884); State v. Howell, 107 N.C. 835, 12 S.E. 569 (1890); State v. Fender, 125 N.C. 649, 34 S.E. 448 (1899); State v. Campbell, 133 N.C. 640, 45 S.E. 344 (1903); State v. Taylor, 172 N.C. 892, 90 S.E. 294 (1916).

Question of Title Cannot Be Raised. — Where a party has neither possession, nor a right of possession to land, he cannot, upon an indictment for unlawfully removing a fence therefrom, raise a question as to a right of entry, nor is it any defense to him that he did the act to bring on a civil suit in order to try the title. State v. Graham, 53 N.C. 397 (1861).

Destroying Fence When Line Is in Dispute. — Although a defendant cannot plead his title as a defense to an indictment for destroying fences, etc., on the land in possession of another, he can plead his title if the land is not in the possession of the prosecutor. In case of a disputed line, if the prosecutor erects a fence on land in possession of the defendant, the defendant is not liable under this section for pulling it down. State v. Watson, 86 N.C. 626 (1882); State v. Fender, 125 N.C. 649, 34 S.E. 448 (1899). Nor is a quasi-tenant occupying by the consent of the owner subject to prosecution under this section for the removal of a fence. State v. Williams, 44 N.C. 197 (1853).

Fence Made from Rails Taken from Another. — Although rails of which a fence around an enclosure was made were taken from the land of another, no right to go on the land and remove the fence exists in favor of the person from whom the rails were taken, as the fence is a part of the realty, and such a trespass comes within the meaning of this section. State v. McMinn, 81 N.C. 585 (1879).

Removal by Officer of Fence Erected Across a Street. — A fence erected across a public street is a public nuisance, and a city marshal will not be liable for abating the nuisance by pulling it down. State v. Godwin, 145 N.C. 461, 59 S.E. 132 (1907).

Defective Bill of Indictment. — A motion in arrest of judgment after conviction for removal of fences on the ground that the bill of indictment is defective will not be granted, unless it appears that the bill is so defective that judgment cannot be pronounced upon it. State v. Taylor, 172 N.C. 892, 90 S.E. 294 (1916).

§ 14-145. Unlawful posting of advertisements.

Any person who in any manner paints, prints, places, or affixes, or causes to be painted, printed, placed, or affixed, any business or commercial advertisement on or to any stone, tree, fence, stump, pole, automobile, building, or other object, which is the property of another without first obtaining the written consent of such owner thereof, or who in any manner paints, prints, places, puts, or affixes, or causes to be painted, printed, placed, or affixed, such an advertisement on or to any stone, tree, fence, stump, pole, mile-board, milestone, danger-sign, danger-signal, guide-sign, guide-post, automobile, building or other object within the limits of a public highway, shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 109; 1993, c. 539, s. 84; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-146. Injuring bridges.

If any person shall unlawfully and willfully demolish, destroy, break, tear down, injure or damage any bridge across any of the creeks or rivers or other streams in the State, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1883, c. 271; Code, s. 993; Rev., s. 3771; C.S., s. 4318; 1993, c. 539, s. 85; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-147. Removing, altering or defacing landmarks.

If any person, firm or corporation shall knowingly remove, alter or deface any landmark in anywise whatsoever, or shall knowingly cause such removal, alteration or defacement to be done, such person, firm or corporation shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. This section shall not apply to landmarks, such as creeks and other small streams, which the interest of agriculture may require to be altered or turned from their channels, nor to such persons, firms or corporations as own the fee simple in the lands on both sides of the lines designated by the landmarks removed, altered or defaced. Nor shall this section apply to those adjoining landowners who may by agreement remove, alter or deface landmarks in which they alone are interested. (1858-9, c. 17; Code, s. 1063; Rev., s. 3674; 1915, c. 248; C.S., s. 4319; 1993, c. 539, s. 86; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Removal of Stakes. — As between the parties stakes are evidence of a definite location of land, as also is the planting of a stone, and a removal of such stakes comes within the meaning of this section. State v. Jenkins, 164 N.C. 527, 80 S.E. 231 (1913).

Indictment. — An indictment charging that one A. B., with force and arms, etc., willfully and unlawfully did alter, deface, and remove a corner tree, the property of C., against the form of the statute, was good without a negative averment of the matter contained in the proviso to the act creating the offense. State v. Bryant, 111 N.C. 693, 16 S.E. 326 (1892).

Applied in Suhre v. Haywood County, 55 F. Supp. 2d 384 (W.D.N.C. 1999).

§ 14-148. Defacing or desecrating grave sites.

(a) It is unlawful to willfully:

(1) Throw, place or put any refuse, garbage or trash in or on any cemetery;

(2) Take away, disturb, vandalize, destroy or change the location of any stone, brick, iron or other material or fence enclosing a cemetery without authorization of law or consent of the surviving spouse or next of kin of the deceased thereby causing damage of less than one thousand dollars ($1,000); or

(3) Take away, disturb, vandalize, destroy, tamper with or deface any tombstone, headstone, monument, grave marker, grave ornamentation, grave artifacts, shrubbery, flowers, plants or other articles within any cemetery erected or placed to designate where a body is interred or to preserve and perpetuate the memory and name of any person, without authorization of law or the consent of the surviving spouse or next of kin, thereby causing damage of less than one thousand dollars ($1,000).

(b) The provisions of this section shall not apply to a professional archaeologist as defined in G.S. 70-28(4) acting pursuant to the provisions of Article 3 of Chapter 70 of the General Statutes.

(c) Violation of this section is a Class 1 misdemeanor. In passing sentence, the court shall consider the appropriateness of restitution or reparation as a condition of probation under G.S. 15A-1343(b)(6) as an alternative to actual imposition of a fine, jail term, or both. (1840, c. 6; R.C., c. 34, s. 102; Code, s. 1088; Rev., s. 3680; C.S., s. 4320; 1969, c. 987; 1981, c. 752, s. 1; c. 853, s. 4; 1993, c. 539, s. 87; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section creates a misdemeanor not defined as larceny. State v. Jackson, 218 N.C. 373, 11 S.E.2d 149 (1940).

Interment of Body Required. — The presence of a deceased body is an essential element of the crime of defacing or desecrating a grave under subdivision (a)(2) of this section, and to prove a violation of this section, the state must prove not only that the defendant willfully performed an act proscribed by the section, but that a deceased person was interred in the cemetery at the time the proscribed act was committed. State v. Phipps, 112 N.C. App. 626, 436 S.E.2d 280 (1993), aff'd, 338 N.C. 305, 449 S.E.2d 450 (1994).

Where the evidence showed there was not a body buried on the lot and there was no evidence that the lot would be used in the future for the burial of the dead, the lot was not a cemetery and subdivision (a)(2) does not apply. State v. Phipps, 338 N.C. 305, 449 S.E.2d 450 (1994).

Right of Landowner to Remove Bodies or Monuments. — Where the owner of land consents, either expressly or by implication, to the interment of dead bodies on his land, he has no right to afterwards remove the bodies or to deface or pull down the gravestones and monuments erected to perpetuate their memory. State v. Wilson, 94 N.C. 1015 (1886).

Indictment. — It is not necessary to charge in the indictment that the monument removed was intended to designate the spot where the dead body of a particular named person, or a person unknown, was interred. State v. Wilson, 94 N.C. 1015 (1886).

Applied in State v. Schultz, 294 N.C. 281, 240 S.E.2d 451 (1978).

Cited in Mills v. Carolina Cem. Park Corp., 242 N.C. 20, 86 S.E.2d 893 (1955).

§ 14-149. Desecrating, plowing over or covering up graves.

(a) It is a Class I felony, without authorization of law or the consent of the surviving spouse or next of kin of the deceased, to knowingly and willfully:

(1) Open, disturb, destroy, remove, vandalize or desecrate any casket, human remains or any portion thereof or the repository of any such remains, by any means including plowing under, tearing up, covering over or otherwise obliterating or removing any grave;

(2) Take away, vandalize or destroy any stone, brick, iron or other material or fence enclosing a cemetery, causing damage of more than one thousand dollars ($1,000); or

(3) Take away, vandalize, destroy or deface any tombstone, headstone, monument, grave marker, grave ornamentation, grave artifacts, shrubbery, flowers, plants or other articles within any cemetery erected or placed to designate the place where any dead body is interred or to preserve and perpetuate the memory and the name of any person, causing damage of more than one thousand dollars ($1,000).

(b) The provisions of this section shall not apply to a professional archaeologist as defined in G.S. 70-28(4) acting pursuant to the provisions of Article 3 of Chapter 70 of the General Statutes. (1889, c. 130; Rev., s. 3681; 1919, c. 218; C.S., s. 4321; 1981, c. 752, s. 2; c. 853, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For structured sentencing provisions effective October 1, 1994, see § 15A-1340.10 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Intent. — The intent to open a grave and remove the dead body is sufficient criminal intent, and proof of the intent to disturb the grave is conclusive. State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140 (1897).

Persons Liable. — The mayor or other town officers counseling their subordinates to remove bodies were liable under this section although they were honestly mistaken as to the scope of their official power. State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140 (1897).

When Lot Is Not Paid For. — The fact that the lot has not been paid for will not excuse the disturbance of a body only for the purpose of moving it to a pauper section. State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140 (1897).

Damages. — While desecrating grave sites in violation of this section requires a showing that damage of more than $1,000 resulted from the desecration, it does not require an additional showing of great monetary loss, and where the damages were $10,000, the same evidence was not used to prove both an element of the offense and the aggravating factor. State v. Sammartino, 120 N.C. App. 597, 463 S.E.2d 307 (1995).

Aggravating Factors. — Where the trial court found as an aggravating factor that defendants' conduct was intended to show disrespect to law enforcement in a manner calculated to be highly publicized and the trial court found that defendants' conduct additionally was meant to show disrespect for law enforcement in general, because evidence was necessary to prove this portion of the factor which was not necessary to prove an element of the offense, that portion of the factor was proper. State v. Sammartino, 120 N.C. App. 597, 463 S.E.2d 307 (1995).

§ 14-151. Interfering with gas, electric and steam appliances.

If any person shall willfully, with intent to injure or defraud, commit any of the acts set forth in the following subdivisions, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor:

(1) Connect a tube, pipe, wire or other instrument or contrivance with a pipe or wire used for conducting or supplying illuminating gas, fuel, natural gas or electricity in such a manner as to supply such gas or electricity to any burner, orifice, lamp or motor where the same is or can be burned or used without passing through the meter or other instrument provided for registering the quantity consumed; or,

(2) Obstruct, alter, injure or prevent the action of a meter or other instrument used to measure or register the quantity of illuminating fuel, natural gas or electricity consumed in a house or apartment, or at an orifice or burner, lamp or motor, or by a consumer or other person other than an employee of the company owning any gas or electric meter, who willfully shall detach or disconnect such meter, or make or report any test of, or examine for the purpose of testing any meter so detached or disconnected; or,

(3) In any manner whatever change, extend or alter any service or other pipe, wire or attachment of any kind, connecting with or through which natural or artificial gas or electricity is furnished from the gas mains or pipes of any person, without first procuring from said person written permission to make such change, extension or alterations; or,

(4) Make any connection or reconnection with the gas mains, service pipes or wires of any person, furnishing to consumers natural or artificial gas or electricity, or turn on or off or in any manner interfere with any valve or stopcock or other appliance belonging to such person, and connected with his service or other pipes or wires, or enlarge the orifices of mixers, or use natural gas for heating purposes except through mixers, or electricity for any purpose without first procuring from such person a written permit to turn on or off such stopcock or valve, or to make such connection or reconnections, or to enlarge the orifice of mixers, or to use for heating purposes without mixers, or to interfere with the valves, stopcocks, wires or other appliances of such, as the case may be; or,

(5) Retain possession of or refuse to deliver any mixer, meter, lamp or other appliance which may be leased or rented by any person, for the purpose of furnishing gas, electricity or power through the same, or sell, lend or in any other manner dispose of the same to any person other than such person entitled to the possession of the same; or,

(6) Set on fire any gas escaping from wells, broken or leaking mains, pipes, valves or other appliances used by any person in conveying gas to consumers, or interfere in any manner with the wells, pipes, mains, gateboxes, valves, stopcocks, wires, cables, conduits or any other appliances, machinery or property of any person engaged in furnishing gas to consumers unless employed by or acting under the authority and direction of such person; or,

(7) Open or cause to be opened, or reconnect or cause to be reconnected any valve lawfully closed or disconnected by a district steam corporation; or

(8) Turn on steam or cause it to be turned on or to reenter any premises when the same has been lawfully stopped from entering such premises. (1901, c. 735; Rev., s. 3666; C.S., s. 4323; 1993, c. 539, s. 88; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-151.1. Interfering with electric, gas or water meters; prima facie evidence of intent to alter, tamper with or bypass electric, gas or water meters; unlawful reconnection of electricity, gas, or water; civil liability.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any unauthorized person to alter, tamper with or bypass a meter which has been installed for the purpose of measuring the use of electricity, gas or water or knowingly to use electricity, gas or water passing through any such tampered meter or use electricity, gas or water bypassing a meter provided by an electric, gas or water supplier for the purpose of measuring and registering the quantity of electricity, gas or water consumed.

(b) Any meter or service entrance facility found to have been altered, tampered with, or bypassed in a manner that would cause such meter to inaccurately measure and register the electricity, gas or water consumed or which would cause the electricity, gas or water to be diverted from the recording apparatus of the meter shall be prima facie evidence of intent to violate and of the violation of this section by the person in whose name such meter is installed or the person or persons so using or receiving the benefits of such unmetered, unregistered or diverted electricity, gas or water.

(b1) It is unlawful for any unauthorized person to reconnect electricity, gas, or water connections or otherwise turn back on one or more of those utilities when they have been lawfully disconnected or turned off by the provider of the utility.

(b2) It is unlawful for any unauthorized person to alter, bypass, interfere with, or cut off any load management device, equipment, or system which has been installed by the electricity supplier for the purpose of limiting the use of electricity at peak-load periods, provided, however, if there has been a written request to remove the load management device, equipment or system to the electric supplier and the electric supplier has not removed the device within two working days, there shall be no violation of this section.

(c) Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(d) Whoever is found in a civil action to have violated any provision hereof shall be liable to the electric, gas or water supplier in triple the amount of losses and damages sustained or five hundred dollars ($500.00), whichever is greater.

(e) Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to licensed contractors while performing usual and ordinary services in accordance with recognized customs and standards. (1977, c. 735, s. 1; 1983, c. 508, ss. 1, 2; 1989, c. 119; 1993, c. 539, s. 89; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Such person shall also forfeit and pay to the company so injured, to be sued for and recovered in a civil action, double the amount of the damages sustained by any such injury. (1889 (Pr.), c. 35, s. 3; Rev., s. 3671; C.S., s. 4324; 1993, c. 539, s. 90; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

No connection approved by the Federal Communications Commission or the North Carolina Utilities Commission shall be a violation of this section. CASE NOTES

Right to Be Free of Unauthorized Wiretapping Nonnegotiable. — Where employee claimed that on various occasions both her work and home telephones were monitored without her consent and the issue of whether employee telephone was monitored at work was a dispute that fell under the terms of collective bargaining agreement, employee could pursue her invasion of privacy claim based on alleged wiretapping under state law, since employee's right to be free of unauthorized wiretapping of her telephone was in the nature of a nonnegotiable right. Binkley v. Loughran, 714 F. Supp. 768 (M.D.N.C. 1988), aff'd, 940 F.2d 651 (4th Cir. 1991).

§ 14-156. Injuring fixtures and other property of electric-power companies.

It shall be unlawful for any person willfully and wantonly, and without the consent of the owner, to take down, remove, injure, obstruct, displace or destroy any line erected or constructed for the transmission of electrical current, or any poles, towers, wires, conduits, cables, insulators or any support upon which wires or cables may be suspended, or any part of any such line or appurtenances or apparatus connected therewith, or to sever any wire or cable thereof, or in any manner to interrupt the transmission of electrical current over and along any such line, or to take down, remove, injure or destroy any house, shop, building or other structure or machinery connected with or necessary to the use of any line erected or constructed for the transmission of electrical current, or to wantonly or willfully cause injury to any of the property mentioned in this section by means of fire. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1907, c. 919; C.S., s. 4328; 1993, c. 539, s. 94; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-157. Felling trees on telephone and electric-power wires.

If any person shall negligently and carelessly cut or fell any tree, or any limb or branch therefrom, in such a manner as to cause the same to fall upon and across any telephone, electric light or electric-power-transmission wire, from which any injury to such wire shall be occasioned, he shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor, and shall also be liable to penalty of fifty dollars ($50.00) for each and every offense. (1903, c. 616; Rev., s. 3849; 1907, c. 827, s. 2; C.S., s. 4329; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9; 1993, c. 539, s. 95; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-158. Interfering with telephone lines.

If any person shall unnecessarily disconnect the wire or in any other way render any telephone line, or any part of such line, unfit for use in transmitting messages, or shall unnecessarily cut, tear down, destroy or in any way render unfit for the transmission of messages any part of the wire of a telephone line, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1901, c. 318; Rev., s. 3845; C.S., s. 4330; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 96; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Civil Action for Damages. — The willful cutting of a telephone wire in public use for hire is made a misdemeanor by this section, and where such act has caused damages to another the action sounds in tort, making the tort-feasor liable for any injuries naturally following and flowing from the wrongful act, independent of any contractual relations between the parties. Hodges v. Virginia-Carolina Ry., 179 N.C. 566, 103 S.E. 145 (1920).

§ 14-159. Injuring buildings or fences; taking possession of house without consent.

If any person shall deface, injure or damage any house, uninhabited house or other building belonging to another; or deface, damage, pull down, injure, remove or destroy any fence or wall enclosing, in whole or in part, the premises belonging to another; or shall move into, take possession of and/or occupy any house, uninhabited house or other building situated on the premises belonging to another, without having first obtained authority so to do and consent of the owner or agent thereof, he shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1929, c. 192, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 97; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-159.1. Contaminating a public water system.

(a) A person commits the offense of contaminating a public water system, as defined in G.S. 130A-313(10), if he willfully or wantonly:

(1) Contaminates, adulterates or otherwise impurifies or attempts to contaminate, adulterate or otherwise impurify the water in a public water system, including the water source, with any toxic chemical, biological agent or radiological substance that is harmful to human health, except those added in approved concentrations for water treatment operations; or

(2) Damages or tampers with the property or equipment of a public water system with the intent to impair the services of the public water system.

(b) Any person who commits the offense defined in this section is guilty of a Class C felony. (1983, c. 507, s. 1; 1985, c. 509, s. 4; c. 689, s. 5; 1993, c. 539, s. 1189; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-159.2. Interference with animal research.

(a) It is unlawful for a person willfully to commit any of the following acts:

(1) The unauthorized entry into any research facility where animals are kept within the facility for research in the advancement of medical, veterinary, dental, or biological sciences, with the intent to (i) disrupt the normal operation of the research facility, or (ii) damage the research facility or any personal property located thereon, or (iii) release from any enclosure or restraining device any animal kept within the research facility, or (iv) interfere with the care of any animal kept within the research facility;

(2) The damaging of any such research facility or any personal property located thereon;

(3) The unauthorized release from any enclosure or restraining device of any animal kept within any research facility; or

(4) The interference with the care of any animal kept within any research facility.

(b) Any person who commits an offense under subsection (a) of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(c) Any person who commits an offense under subsection (a) of this section that involves the release from any enclosure or restraining device of any animal having an infectious disease shall be guilty of a Class I felony.

(d) As a condition of probation, the court may order a person convicted under this section to make restitution to the owner of the animal for damages, including the cost of restoring the animal to confinement and of restoring the animal to its health condition prior to any release, and for damages to personal property, including materials, equipment, data, and records, and real property caused by the interference. If the interference causes the failure of an experiment, the restitution may include all costs of repeating the experiment, including replacement of the animals, labor, and materials.

(e) Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any rights or causes of action of a person damaged through interference with animal research. (1991, c. 203, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, ss. 98, 1190; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-159.3. Trespass to land on motorized all terrain vehicle.

(a) No person shall operate any motorized all terrain vehicle:

(1) On any private property not owned by the operator, without the consent of the owner; or

(2) Within the banks of any stream or waterway, but excluding a sound or the Atlantic Ocean, the adjacent lands of which are not owned by the operator, without the consent of the owner or outside the restrictions imposed by the owner.

(b) A "motorized all terrain vehicle", as used in this section, is a two or more wheeled vehicle designed for recreational off-road use.

(c) A violation of this section shall be a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1997-456, s. 56.8; 1997-487, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-487, s. 3, made this section effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to acts committed on or after that date.

Definition of "Recreational Vehicle". — North Carolina statutes do not preclude the definition of a "recreational vehicle" including an ATV. Halter v. J.C. Penney Life Ins. Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21386 (M.D.N.C. Nov. 30, 1999).

Article 22A.

Trespassing upon "Posted" Property to Hunt, Fish, Trap, or Remove Pine Needles/Straw.

§ 14-159.6. Trespass for purposes of hunting, etc., without written consent a misdemeanor.

(a) Any person who willfully goes on the land, waters, ponds, or a legally established waterfowl blind of another upon which notices, signs or posters prohibiting hunting, fishing or trapping have been placed in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 14-159.7, or upon which "posted" notices have been placed in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 14-159.7, to hunt, fish or trap without the written consent of the owner or his agent shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Provided, further, that no arrests under authority of this subsection shall be made without the consent of the owner or owners of said land, or their duly authorized agents in the following counties: Halifax and Warren.

(b) Any person who willfully goes on the land of another upon which notices, signs, or posters prohibiting raking or removing pine needles or pine straw have been placed in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 14-159.7, or upon which "posted" notices have been placed in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 14-159.7, to rake or remove pine needles or pine straw without the written consent of the owner or his agent shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1949, c. 887, s. 1; 1953, c. 1226; 1965, c. 1134; 1975, c. 280, s. 1; 1979, c. 830, s. 11; 1991, c. 435, s. 4; 1993, c. 539, s. 99; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-443, s. 19.25(z).)

CASE NOTES

Prohibited Activities. — This section prohibits hunting, fishing or trapping on properly posted lands or waters without the written consent of the owner or his agent, provided that in designated counties, including Halifax County, no arrest may be made for such violation without consent of the owner or his agent. State v. Manning, 3 N.C. App. 451, 165 S.E.2d 13 (1969), decided under former § 113-120.1.

Term "Owner" Does Not Include Lessee. — In a prosecution in Halifax County under this section for a trespass by fishing on properly posted lands and waters of a private club without the written consent of the owner or his agent, defendants' motion for nonsuit should have been allowed where the State's evidence disclosed that the private club was the lessee of the land under and around the lake upon which defendants were fishing, a lessee not being included within the term "owner" as used in § 113-130, and there being no showing that defendants were fishing without the written consent of the actual owner, or that the owner consented to their arrest, or that the private club was the agent of the owner for these purposes. State v. Manning, 3 N.C. App. 451, 165 S.E.2d 13 (1969), decided under former § 113-120.1.

Whether a body of water is a "private pond" is not relevant to a prosecution for trespass under this section, there being no requirement that a pond must be a "private pond" in order to post the notices and signs described in § 113-120.2 (now § 14-159.7). State v. Manning, 3 N.C. App. 451, 165 S.E.2d 13 (1969), decided under former § 113-120.1.

§ 14-159.7. Regulations as to posting of property.

The notices, signs or posters described in G.S. 14-159.6 shall measure not less than 120 square inches and shall be conspicuously posted on private lands not more than 200 yards apart close to and along the boundaries. At least one such notice, sign, or poster shall be posted on each side of such land, and one at each corner thereof, provided that said corner can be reasonably ascertained. For the purpose of prohibiting fishing, or the taking of fish by any means, in any stream, lake, or pond, it shall only be necessary that the signs, notices, or posters be posted along the stream or shoreline of a pond or lake at intervals of not more than 200 yards apart. (1949, c. 887, s. 2; 1953, c. 1226; 1965, c. 923; 1975, c. 280, ss. 2, 3; 1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

§ 14-159.8. Mutilation, etc., of "posted" signs; posting signs without consent of owner or agent.

Any person who shall mutilate, destroy or take down any "posted," "no hunting" or similar notice, sign or poster on the lands, waters, or legally established waterfowl blind of another, or who shall post such sign or poster on the lands, waters or legally established waterfowl blind of another, without the consent of the owner or his agent, shall be deemed guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor and only punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00). (1949, c. 887, s. 3; 1953, c. 1226; 1969, c. 51; 1979, c. 830, s. 11; 1993, c. 539, s. 100; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-159.9. Entrance on navigable waters, etc., for purpose of fishing, hunting or trapping not prohibited.

Nothing in this Article shall be construed to prohibit the entrance of any person upon navigable waters and the bays and sounds adjoining such waters for the purpose of fishing, hunting or trapping. (1949, c. 887, s. 4; 1953, c. 1226; 1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

§ 14-159.10. Enforcement of Article by peace officers; wildlife protectors authorized to execute process.

This Article may be enforced by deputy sheriffs and other peace officers with general subject matter jurisdiction. Law-enforcement officers of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission may execute process issued by the court for violations of this Article. (1979, c. 830, s. 11.)

Article 22B.

First and Second Degree Trespass.

§ 14-159.11. Definition.

As used in this Article, "building" means any structure or part of a structure, other than a conveyance, enclosed so as to permit reasonable entry only through a door and roofed to protect it from the elements. (1987, c. 700, s. 1.)

§ 14-159.12. First degree trespass.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of first degree trespass if, without authorization, he enters or remains:

(1) On premises of another so enclosed or secured as to demonstrate clearly an intent to keep out intruders; or

(2) In a building of another.

(b) Classification. — First degree trespass is a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1987, c. 700, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 101; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases annotated below were decided under former § 14-126, which described the crime of forcible entry and detainer, and former § 14-134, which pertained to the crime of trespass on land after being forbidden.

Actual Possession Necessary. — The essential element of the offense of forcible entry was that the lands, etc., had to be in the actual possession of him whose possession was charged to have been interfered with. To constitute actual possession, there must have been an actual exercise of authority and control over the land, either in person or by the family or servants of the person alleged to have been in possession. He need not have at all times been personally present on the premises. State v. Bryant, 103 N.C. 436, 9 S.E. 1 (1889).

Former § 14-126 was designed to protect actual possession only, and it was no defense that the accused had title to the locus in quo if the prosecutor was in actual possession of it. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

It was necessary to allege and establish actual possession in the prosecutor. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

The element of actual possession must be charged in the indictment. State v. Bryant, 103 N.C. 436, 9 S.E. 1 (1889).

It is a sufficient compliance with this rule to allege that the owner was "then and there in peaceable possession." State v. Eason, 70 N.C. 88 (1874).

Where the possession of the prosecutor in forcible entry and detainer was only by sufferance, the prosecution could not be sustained. State v. Leary, 136 N.C. 578, 48 S.E. 570 (1904).

Title Is Not Involved. — The right or title to land could not be vindicated with the bludgeon, but the party who claimed the better title could, if it be denied or the actual possession of the land be refused, upon a lawful demand made for the same, resort to the peaceful methods and processes of the law for his redress and the recovery of his property. If, instead of pursuing this course, he elected to use violence, the law held him criminally responsible for his act. State v. Webster, 121 N.C. 586, 28 S.E. 254 (1897), where it was said: "As forcible trespass is essentially an offense against the possession of another and does not depend upon the title, it is proper to exclude evidence of title in defendants on trial under an indictment for such offense." State v. Davenport, 156 N.C. 596, 72 S.E. 7 (1911).

The offense of forcible trespass under former § 14-126 did not involve title to the premises, but was directed against the possession, and when the possession was in the prosecuting witness, and the entry was made in such a manner with such show of force, after being prohibited by the prosecuting witness, as tended to a breach of the peace, it was sufficient for conviction. State v. Earp, 196 N.C. 164, 145 S.E. 23 (1928).

Forcible trespass and trespass were not lesser included offenses of attempted first-degree burglary. Attempted first-degree burglary did not require a commandment forbidding entry or an order to leave as did trespass under former § 14-134. It also did not require that the defendant enter the lands of another by force, threats of force or a show of strength by a multitude of people, as did forcible trespass under former § 14-126. State v. McAlister, 59 N.C. App. 58, 295 S.E.2d 501 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 471, 299 S.E.2d 226 (1983).

First-degree trespass is a lesser included offense of felony breaking or entering. State v. Hamilton, 132 N.C. App. 316, 512 S.E.2d 80 (1999).

Forcible Trespass Not a Lesser Included Offense of Kidnapping. — Since forcible trespass required proof of an element not essential to kidnapping, i.e., entry into a person's premises, it could not be a lesser included offense of kidnapping. State v. McRae, 58 N.C. App. 225, 292 S.E.2d 778 (1982).

Forcible Trespass Was Not a Lesser Included Offense of Common-Law Robbery. — Since the statute on forcible trespass to real property contained the different element of "entry into lands and tenements," the statutory offense of forcible trespass to real property therefore could not be a lesser included offense of common-law robbery. Similarly, common-law forcible trespass to real property by definition required an unlawful invasion of or threat to premises possessed by another, and this involved an element separate and distinct from those of common-law robbery. State v. Bates, 70 N.C. App. 477, 319 S.E.2d 683, aff'd, 313 N.C. 580, 330 S.E.2d 200 (1984).

Entry after being forbidden did not involve an assault or entry with a strong hand as did forcible entry and detainer, and it did not require actual occupancy of the land by the complaining party, but it did require the complaining party to have legal title to the land. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

A peaceful entry negatived liability under former § 14-126. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958).

One Who Remained After Being Directed to Leave Was Guilty of Wrongful Entry. — In applying this section, one who remained after being directed to leave was guilty of a wrongful entry even though the original entrance was peaceful and authorized. State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958). But see State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 455 (1980).

One who remained in a home after being directed to leave was guilty of a wrongful entry and became a trespasser, even though the original entry was peaceful and authorized, and a householder could use such force as was reasonably necessary to eject him. State v. Kelly, 24 N.C. App. 670, 211 S.E.2d 854 (1975).

As Were Those Who Abused Possessor. — In order to convict of a misdemeanor under the provisions of former § 14-126, it was not necessary that the act of going on the lands was unlawful, if the accused thereafter had in overpowering numbers cursed and abused the one in lawful possession, using threatening and abusive language. State v. Fleming, 194 N.C. 42, 138 S.E. 342 (1927).

The unlatching and opening of the screen and the attempt to open the door, as shown by the State's evidence, was enough to constitute entry. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Staging Sit-In. — Where defendants acted in concert with approximately 20 other persons in staging a sit-in, and their number was of such a magnitude that only by yielding to their continued presence could a breach of the peace be avoided, once they refused to leave as requested, in such a situation, the original entry, though peaceful, became unlawful, though no other force was used. State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314 (1980).

In a prosecution of defendants under former § 14-126 for forcible entry, the multitude of persons entering the property was sufficient to constitute the required force and the only force required was the force necessary to remain on the premises after having been requested to leave, where defendants acted in concert with approximately 20 other persons in staging a sit-in at the premises of a utility company. State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 455 (1980).

Entry Under Void Warrant. — Where four or more men entered upon premises in the actual possession of another by virtue of a warrant and proceedings before a magistrate, which were a nullity, and ejected such person and his family from the house they were occupying, they were guilty of a forcible trespass. State v. Yarborough, 70 N.C. 250 (1874); Atlantic T. & O.R.R. v. Johnston, 70 N.C. 348 (1874).

No Accessories. — In misdemeanors there were no accessories, and those who were present in numbers, some armed with axes and others with guns, while one of their number caused the prosecutor's agents to abandon the locus in quo, were his aiders and abettors and equally guilty of forcible trespass. State v. Davenport, 156 N.C. 596, 72 S.E. 7 (1911).

Alleging Expulsion of Possession. — While expulsion of possession must be alleged where actual ouster has occurred, such an allegation was not essential when the basis for charging defendants with violation of former § 14-126 was because of a refusal to leave, thus distinguishing the decision in State v. Bryant, 103 N.C. 436, 9 S.E. 1 (1889); State v. Birkhead, 48 N.C. App. 575, 269 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 455 (1980).

Sufficiency of Warrant. — A warrant charging an offense under former § 14-126 was sufficient even though it did not charge occupancy at the time of entry where the warrant cited the section and charged that with "force and violence" the defendant trespassed upon the property of the occupant. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Essential Ingredients of Offense. — To constitute trespass on the land of another after notice or warning under former § 14-134, three essential ingredients had to coexist: (1) The land had to be the land of the prosecutor in the sense that it was in either his actual or constructive possession; (2) the accused had to enter upon the land intentionally; and (3) the accused had to do this after being forbidden to do so by the prosecutor. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

To constitute the offense forbidden by former § 14-134 and with which defendants were charged there had to be an entry on land after being forbidden; and such entry had to be wilful, and not from ignorance, accident, or under a bona fide claim of right or license. State v. Cobb, 262 N.C. 262, 136 S.E.2d 674 (1964).

Entering the property "without a license therefor" was not a necessary element of the crime under former § 14-134. State v. Edgerton, 25 N.C. App. 45, 212 S.E.2d 398 (1975).

Possession was an essential element of the crime. If the State failed to establish that prosecutor had possession (actual or constructive) no crime had been established. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

The principal distinctions between forcible trespass and forcible entry and detainer were that forcible trespass required that the complaining party be an occupant of the premises while forcible entry and detainer required occupancy plus some type of estate in the land. State v. Blackmon, 36 N.C. App. 207, 243 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Entry Under Claim of Right Was a Defense to Criminal Prosecution. — One who entered upon the land of another under a bona fide claim of right was guilty of no criminal offense. State v. Crosset, 81 N.C. 579 (1879).

In a prosecution under former § 14-134, even though the State established that defendant intentionally entered upon land in the actual or constructive possession of prosecutor after being forbidden to do so by the prosecutor, and thus established as an ultimate fact that defendant entered the locus in quo without legal right, defendant could still escape conviction by showing as an affirmative defense that he entered under a bona fide claim of right, i.e., that he believed he had a right to enter, and that he had reasonable grounds for such belief. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Good faith in making the entry was a defense. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

But Not to a Civil Action. — Entry under a claim of right was a defense only in a criminal action, as ignorance of a trespasser did not exonerate him from civil liability. State v. Whitener, 93 N.C. 590 (1885); State v. Clyburn, 247 N.C. 455, 101 S.E.2d 295 (1958).

Burden on Defendant to Show Reasonable Grounds for Claim of Right. — As a defense to a charge under former § 14-134, it was sufficient for defendants to establish that they entered under a bona fide belief of a right to so enter, which belief had a reasonable foundation in fact, but the burden was on the defendant to establish facts sufficient to excuse his wrongful conduct. State v. Cooke, 248 N.C. 485, 103 S.E.2d 846 (1958), appeal dismissed, 359 U.S. 951, 79 S. Ct. 737, 3 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1959); 364 U.S. 177, 80 S. Ct. 1482, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1650 (1960).

A mere belief on the part of a trespasser that he had a claim of right or license did not protect him; he had to satisfy the jury that he had reasonable grounds for such belief. State v. Cobb, 262 N.C. 262, 136 S.E.2d 674 (1964). See also, State v. Fisher, 109 N.C. 817, 13 S.E. 878 (1891); State v. Durham, 121 N.C. 546, 28 S.E. 22 (1897); State v. Wells, 142 N.C. 590, 55 S.E. 210 (1906); State v. Faggart, 170 N.C. 737, 87 S.E. 31 (1915).

Land Sought to Be Condemned. — An indictment for willful trespass under former § 14-134 would lie against an employee of a railroad company for an entry after being forbidden on land which the company was seeking to condemn, the entry being for the purpose of constructing the road and before an appraisement has been made, although a restraining order against such a trespass would be refused. State v. Wells, 142 N.C. 590, 55 S.E. 210 (1906).

Entry by Husband on Wife's Property. — A husband was not subject to the rule of this section, in regard to property of his wife, and although she might forbid him to enter he could enter nevertheless. State v. Jones, 132 N.C. 1043, 43 S.E. 939 (1903).

Entry As Servant. — One who entered upon the land of another, after being forbidden, as the servant, and at the command of a bona fide claimant, was not guilty of any criminal offense. State v. Winslow, 95 N.C. 649 (1886).

Upon the trial under an indictment for trespass on lands after being forbidden, it was no defense to show that defendant acted under the instructions of his superior officer of a railroad company in entering upon the lands to construct a railroad. Evidence that such superior officer therein acted by the advice of counsel learned in the law was incompetent. State v. Mallard, 143 N.C. 666, 57 S.E. 351 (1907).

Entry by Former Tenant to Gather Crops. — For a conviction under the provisions of former § 14-134 for unlawful trespass on lands after being forbidden, it was not alone sufficient to show that the trespass had been forbidden, when there was evidence tending to show that the trespasser peacefully entered upon a claim of title, founded upon a reasonable belief that he had the right to go upon the lands; and a peremptory instruction to find the prisoner guilty upon the evidence was held as error, there being evidence that the trespasser had been a tenant upon the lands of the prosecutor, and had entered upon the lands to gather the crops he had sown and cultivated, after he had moved to another place with the intention to return for this purpose, believing he had the right, though forbidden to do so by the prosecutor. State v. Faggart, 170 N.C. 737, 87 S.E. 31 (1915).

Entry as Guest of Tenant. — One forbidden by the landlord to enter his land was not guilty under former § 14-134 if he entered a part of the land in the possession of a tenant and as a guest of the tenant. State v. Lawson, 101 N.C. 717, 7 S.E. 905 (1888).

Entry When Sober After Entry While Intoxicated Forbidden. — Where defendant's evidence in a prosecution for trespass was to the effect that the prosecutrix had forbidden him the premises only when he was intoxicated and that on the occasion in question he was sober, his testimony, if the jury found it to be true, would entitle him to an acquittal, and he was entitled to an instruction on the legal effect of his evidence. State v. Keziah, 269 N.C. 681, 153 S.E.2d 365 (1967).

Abatement of Pending Convictions by Civil Rights Act. — Since the Civil Rights Act of 1964 forbid discrimination in places of public accommodation and removed peaceful attempts to be served on an equal basis from the category of punishable activities, pending convictions for violation of former § 14-134 were abated by passage of the act, even though the conduct involved occurred prior to its enactment. Blow v. North Carolina, 379 U.S. 684, 85 S. Ct. 635, 13 L. Ed. 2d 603 (1965).

Evidence Not Establishing Prosecutor's Possession. — Where, in a prosecution under former § 14-134, the only evidence offered by the State as to title of prosecutor was oral testimony that prosecutor had purchased the property, and the only evidence of possession was that prosecutor had warned defendant to stay off the land and had entered upon the land temporarily on a single occasion to erect a barbed wire fence thereon, defendant's motion to nonsuit should have been granted, since the evidence was insufficient to establish prosecutor's possession of the land within the meaning of the section. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Indictment Had to Negative License to Enter. — In an indictment for entering on the land of another and taking therefrom turpentine, etc., it was necessary that a "license so to enter" should be distinctly negatived as an essential part of the description of the offense. State v. Bullard, 72 N.C. 445 (1875).

An indictment was fatally defective if it does not charge that the entry was "without a license therefor." State v. Smith, 263 N.C. 788, 140 S.E.2d 404 (1965).

An indictment in which it was charged that the defendant did unlawfully enter upon the premises of the prosecutors, he, the said defendant, having been forbidden to enter on said premises, and not having a license so to enter, etc., was sufficient. State v. Whitehurst, 70 N.C. 85 (1874).

Ownership or Possession Had to Be Alleged and the Proof Had to Correspond. — It was necessary to allege in the warrant or bill of indictment the rightful owner or possessor of the property, and the proof had to correspond with the charge. If the rightful possession was in one other than the person named in the warrant or bill, there was a fatal variance. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

Amendment as to Possession Constituted Fatal Variance. — On appeal to the superior court from conviction on a warrant charging trespass on the property of one person after being forbidden, the allowance of an amendment to charge that the property was in the possession of a different person resulted in the charge of an entirely different crime and constitutes a fatal variance. State v. Cooke, 246 N.C. 518, 98 S.E.2d 885 (1957).

Warrant Could Be Amended. — The superior court had power to amend, after verdict, a warrant brought by appeal of defendant charging defendant with going upon the land of another, after being forbidden to do so, so as to charge that the entry was "willful and unlawful," and to make the charge conclude, "against the peace and dignity of the State." State v. Smith, 103 N.C. 410, 9 S.E. 200 (1889).

Warrant with Affidavit Attached. — A warrant for trespass would not be quashed because it did not contain the necessary descriptive words of the illegal offense, when it referred to an "annexed affidavit" in which all the essential averments are made, as the reference to the affidavit made it a part of the warrant. State v. Winslow, 95 N.C. 649 (1886).

Jury Instruction in Felony Breaking or Entering Prosecution. — A jury instruction on the lesser included offenses of misdemeanor breaking or entering and first degree trespass was not required in a prosecution for felonious breaking or entering, where there was no evidence that defendant scaled the wall, attained the roof, forced a hole in it, and entered the store for some reason other than larceny, particularly as items were stolen from the premises. State v. Hamilton, 132 N.C. App. 316, 512 S.E.2d 80 (1999).

§ 14-159.13. Second degree trespass.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of second degree trespass if, without authorization, he enters or remains on premises of another:

(1) After he has been notified not to enter or remain there by the owner, by a person in charge of the premises, by a lawful occupant, or by another authorized person; or

(2) That are posted, in a manner reasonably likely to come to the attention of intruders, with notice not to enter the premises.

(b) Classification. — Second degree trespass is a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1987, c. 700, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 102; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Probable Cause. — The trial court erred by failing to grant defendant father a directed verdict on plaintiff son's claim for malicious prosecution where defendant had probable cause to institute trespass proceedings, where the undisputed evidence showed that defendant owned the premises upon which store in question was located; that plaintiff did not enter into a written or unwritten lease with defendant to occupy the premises; that, on the day prior to his arrest for trespass, plaintiff received written notification that "effective immediately" he was no longer employed by defendant; and that the written notification requested that he "vacate" the premises and notified him that his continued presence at the store would be "considered trespassing." Hill v. Hill, 142 N.C. App. 524, 545 S.E.2d 442 (2001).

Necessity Defense Unavailable. — The defense of "necessity" is unavailable to individuals who commit the crime of trespass in an effort to "save the lives" of fetuses from abortion. State v. Thomas, 103 N.C. App. 264, 405 S.E.2d 214, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 792, 408 S.E.2d 528 (1991).

The North Carolina General Assembly has made a "clear and deliberate choice" regarding the competing values at issue by choosing to make those abortions performed in accordance with the provisions of § 14-45.1 lawful. Since there was no evidence at the defendants' trial that the clinic was performing or about to perform illegal abortions, it is implicit that the "evil" which the defendants sought to avoid by blocking the clinic's entrances was nonexistent. The nonexistence of an "evil" to avoid foreclosed the possibility of a defense based upon necessity. State v. Thomas, 103 N.C. App. 264, 405 S.E.2d 214, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 792, 408 S.E.2d 528 (1991).

§ 14-159.14. Lesser included offenses.

The offenses created by this act shall constitute lesser included offenses of breaking or entering as provided in G.S. 14-54 and G.S. 14-56. (1987, c. 700, s. 1.)

§§ 14-159.15 through 14-159.19: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 22C.

Cave Protection Act.

§ 14-159.20. Definitions.

The terms listed below have the following definitions as used in this Article, unless the context clearly requires a different meaning:

(1) "Cave" means any naturally occurring subterranean cavity. The word "cave" includes or is synonymous with cavern, pit, well, sinkhole, and grotto;
(2) "Commercial cave" means any cave with improved trails and lighting utilized by the owner for the purpose of exhibition to the general public as a profit or nonprofit enterprise, wherein a fee is collected for entry;
(3) "Gate" means any structure or device located to limit or prohibit access or entry to any cave;
(4) "Person" means any individual, partnership, firm, association, trust or corporation;
(5) "Speleothem" means a natural mineral formation or deposit occurring in a cave. This includes or is synonymous with stalagmites, stalactites, helectites, anthodites, gypsum flowers, needles, angel's hair, soda straws, draperies, bacon, cave pearls, popcorn (coral), rimstone dams, columns, palettes, and flowstone. Speleothems are commonly composed of calcite, epsomite, gypsum, aragonite, celestite and other similar minerals; and
(6) "Owner" means a person who has title to land where a cave is located, including a person who owns title to a leasehold estate in such land. (1987, c. 449, s. 1.)

§ 14-159.21. Vandalism; penalties.

It is unlawful for any person, without express, prior, written permission of the owner, to willfully or knowingly:
(1) Break, break off, crack, carve upon, write, burn or otherwise mark upon, remove, or in any manner destroy, disturb, deface, mar or harm the surfaces of any cave or any natural material therein, including speleothems;
(2) Disturb or alter in any manner the natural condition of any cave;
(3) Break, force, tamper with or otherwise disturb a lock, gate, door or other obstruction designed to control or prevent access to any cave, even though entrance thereto may not be gained.

Any person violating a provision of this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1987, c. 449, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 103; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-159.22. Sale of speleothems unlawful; penalties.

It is unlawful to sell or offer for sale any speleothems in this State, or to export them for sale outside the State. A person who violates any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1987, c. 449, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 104; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-159.23. Limitation of liability of owners and agents.

The owner of a cave, and his agents and employees, shall not be liable for any injury to, or for the death of any person, or for any loss or damage to property, by reason of any act or omission unless it is established that the injury, death, loss, or damage occurred as a result of gross negligence, wanton conduct, or intentional wrongdoing. The limitation of liability provided by this section applies only with respect to injury, death, loss, or damage occurring within a cave, or in connection with entry into or exit from a cave, and applies only with respect to persons to whom no charge has been made for admission to the cave. (1987, c. 449, s. 1.)

Article 23.

Trespasses to Personal Property.

§ 14-160. Willful and wanton injury to personal property; punishments.

(a) If any person shall wantonly and willfully injure the personal property of another he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), if any person shall wantonly and willfully injure the personal property of another, causing damage in an amount in excess of two hundred dollars ($200.00), he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(c) This section applies to injuries to personal property without regard to whether the property is destroyed or not. (1876-7, c. 18; Code, s. 1082; 1885, c. 53; Rev., s. 3676; C.S., s. 4331; 1969, c. 1224, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 105.)

Cross References. — As to definition of personal property, see § 12-3, subdivision (6). As to malicious or willful injury to hired personal property, see § 14-165. As to prosecution for perjury based upon acquittal in former prosecution under this section, see note to § 14-209.

CASE NOTES

Elements Generally. — Proof of four elements appears essential to sustain an adjudication of delinquency based upon violation of this section: (1) that personal property was injured; (2) that the personal property was that "of another," i.e., someone other than the person or persons accused; (3) that the injury was inflicted "wantonly and willfully"; and (4) that the injury was inflicted by the person or persons accused. In re Meaut, 51 N.C. App. 153, 275 S.E.2d 200 (1981).

This section was designed to avoid the element of malicious ill will required by the common-law crime of malicious mischief. State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973), aff'd, 22 N.C. App. 53, 205 S.E.2d 358 (1974).

Thus, Malice Need Not Be Charged Under This Section. — This section was not intended to supersede the common law as to malicious mischief, and though malice must be charged at common law it is not necessary under this section. State v. Martin, 141 N.C. 832, 53 S.E. 874 (1906).

It is not necessary to allege or prove any malice to the owner of personal property on the part of one who wantonly and willfully injures it nor is it material whether the property was destroyed or not. State v. Sneed, 121 N.C. 614, 28 S.E. 365 (1897).

Injury Must Be Wanton and Willful. — Destruction of personal property is not a crime. It becomes so only when the injury is wanton and willful under this section. State v. Sims, 247 N.C. 751, 102 S.E.2d 143 (1958).

Children Throwing Rocks at a Car — Sufficient evidence existed to support the juvenile court's findings that the juveniles acted "wantonly and willfully" in damaging a vehicle, when they threw rocks at it denting it and cracking the windshield, and thus support the findings of delinquency. In re McKoy, 138 N.C. App. 143, 530 S.E.2d 334 (2000).

Elements Differ from Discharging Firearm into Occupied Vehicle. — The elements of willful damage to property by shooting out the automobile window are not the same as discharging a firearm into an occupied vehicle. The element of damages which must be shown in a charge of willful damage to property is not an element in a charge of discharging a firearm into an occupied vehicle. Therefore, the two charges are not the same in fact or in law. State v. Tanner, 25 N.C. App. 251, 212 S.E.2d 695 (1975).

Offense May Be Committed Jointly. — The offense under this section may be committed jointly by several persons, one doing the act, the others aiding and abetting or participating. State v. Martin, 141 N.C. 832, 53 S.E. 874 (1906); State v. Parrish, 251 N.C. 274, 111 S.E.2d 314 (1959).

What Constitutes Personal Property — Promissory Note. — A promissory note or due bill being an "evidence of debt" is personal property within the meaning of this section and § 12-3, subdivision (6). State v. Sneed, 121 N.C. 614, 28 S.E. 365 (1897).

Same — Electric Streetcar. — An electric streetcar is personalty and not a fixture. State

v. Sneed, 121 N.C. 614, 28 S.E. 365 (1897).

Same — Fence. — Proof of the destruction of a fence erected upon land was held to be insufficient to sustain a conviction upon an indictment charging wanton and willful injury to personal property, since a fence is a part of the realty and there was a fatal variance between allegation of ownership of the realty and proof. State v. Baker, 231 N.C. 136, 56 S.E.2d 424 (1949).

Destruction of Whiskey by Revenue Officer. — The mere possession of whiskey gives no title, and a revenue officer who seizes a barrel concealed on private premises, and in good faith destroys it, is not guilty of a misdemeanor under this section. North Carolina v. Vanderford, 35 F. 282 (W.D.N.C. 1888).

Indictment Need Not Allege That Act Was Done "Unlawfully". — An indictment for injury to personal property under this section, which charged that the act was "wantonly and willfully" done, was not defective because it did not aver the act to have been unlawfully perpetrated. Lawful acts are not done wantonly and willfully. State v. Martin, 107 N.C. 904, 12 S.E. 194 (1890).

But Indictment Must Allege That Injury Was Done "Willfully and Wantonly". — An indictment cannot be sustained under this section if there is neither an allegation nor finding that the injury was "willfully and wantonly" done. The words "unlawfully and on purpose" will not supply in their place. State v. Tweedy, 115 N.C. 704, 20 S.E. 183 (1894).

Effect of Erroneous Conviction Under This Section Instead of § 14-165. — Where there is an erroneous conviction under this section, when the indictment should have been drawn under § 14-165, et seq., the prisoner should be discharged with permission to the solicitor (now district attorney) to send another bill, if so advised. State v. Reed, 196 N.C. 357, 145 S.E. 691 (1928).

In the absence of any proof that damage was greater than $200, defendant should be sentenced pursuant to subsection (a). State v. Tanner, 25 N.C. App. 251, 212 S.E.2d 695 (1975).

§ 14-160.1. Alteration, destruction or removal of permanent identification marks from personal property.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to alter, deface, destroy or remove the permanent serial number, manufacturer's identification plate or other permanent, distinguishing number or identification mark from any item of personal property with the intent thereby to conceal or misrepresent the identity of said item.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to sell, buy or be in possession of any item of personal property, not his own, on which the permanent serial number, manufacturer's identification plate or other permanent, distinguishing number or identification mark has been altered, defaced, destroyed or removed for the purpose of concealing or misrepresenting the identity of said item.

(c) A violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(d) This section shall not in any way affect the provisions of G.S. 20-108, 20-109(a) or 20-109(b). (1977, c. 767, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 106; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-161: Repealed by Session Laws 1994, Extra Session, c. 14, s. 72(7).

§ 14-162. Removing boats.

If any person shall loose, unmoor, or turn adrift from any landing or other place wherever the same shall be, any boat, canoe, or other marine vessel, or if any person shall direct the same to be done without the consent of the owner, or the person having the lawful custody or possession of such vessel, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. The owner may also have his action for such injury. The penalties aforesaid shall not extend to any person who shall press any such property by public authority. (R.C., c. 14, ss. 1, 3; Code, s. 2288; 1889, c. 378; Rev., s. 3544; C.S., s. 4333; 1977, c. 729; 1993, c. 539, s. 107; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-163. Poisoning livestock.

If any person shall willfully and unlawfully poison any horse, mule, hog, sheep or other livestock, the property of another, such person shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1898-9, c. 253; Code, s. 1003; Rev., s. 3313; C.S., s. 4334; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1973, c. 1388; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14.)

§ 14-163.1. Assaulting a law enforcement agency animal or an assistance animal.

(a) The following definitions apply in this section:

(1) Assistance animal. — An animal that is trained and may be used to assist a "handicapped person" as defined in G.S. 168-1. The term "assistance animal" is not limited to a dog and includes any animal trained to assist a handicapped person as provided in Article 1 of Chapter 168 of the General Statutes.

(2) Law enforcement agency animal. — An animal that is trained and may be used to assist a law enforcement officer in the performance of the officer's official duties.

(3) Physical harm. — Any injury, illness, or other physiological impairment.

(4) Serious physical harm. — Physical harm that does any of the following:

a. Creates a substantial risk of death.

b. Causes maiming or causes substantial loss or impairment of bodily function.

c. Causes acute pain of a duration that results in substantial suffering.

(b) Any person who knows or has reason to know that an animal is a law enforcement agency animal or an assistance animal and who willfully causes or attempts to cause serious physical harm to the animal is guilty of a Class I felony.

(c) Unless the conduct is covered under some other provision of law providing greater punishment, any person who knows or has reason to know that an animal is a law enforcement agency animal or an assistance animal and who willfully causes or attempts to cause physical harm to the animal is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(d) Unless the conduct is covered under some other provision of law providing greater punishment, any person who knows or has reason to know that an animal is a law enforcement agency animal or an assistance animal and who willfully taunts, teases, harasses, delays, obstructs, or attempts to delay or obstruct the animal in the performance of its duty as a law enforcement agency animal or assistance animal is guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(e) This section shall not apply to a licensed veterinarian whose conduct is in accordance with Article 11 of Chapter 90 of the General Statutes.

(f) Self-defense is an affirmative defense to a violation of this section. (1983, c. 646, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 108; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1995, c. 258, s. 1; 2001-411, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-411, s. 3, provides that prosecutions for offenses committed under s. 1, which amended this section, before its effective date (December 1, 2001) are not abated or affected by the act, and the statutes that would be applicable but for the act remain applicable to those prosecutions.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-411, s. 1, effective December 1, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, rewrote the section.

§ 14-164: Repealed by Session Laws 1994, Extra Session, c. 14, s. 72(8).

(1927, c. 61, s. 1; 1965, c. 1073, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 109; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Cross References. — As to willful and wanton injury to personal property, see § 14-160.

§ 14-166. Subletting of hired property.

Any person who shall rent or hire, any horse, mule, or other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile, or other like vehicle, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value, who shall, without the permission of the person, firm or corporation from whom such property is rented or hired, sublet or rent the same to any other person, firm or corporation, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1927, c. 61, s. 2; 1965, c. 1073, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15; 1993, c. 539, s. 110; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-167. Failure to return hired property.

Any person who shall rent or hire, any horse, mule or other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile, or other vehicle, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value, and who shall willfully fail to return the same to the possession of the person, firm or corporation from whom such property has been rented or hired at the expiration of the time for which such property has been rented or hired, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1927, c. 61, s. 3; 1965, c. 1073, s. 3; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15; 1993, c. 539, s. 111; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-168. Hiring with intent to defraud.

Any person who shall, with intent to cheat and defraud the owner thereof of the rental price therefor, hire or rent any horse or mule or any other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile or other like vehicle, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value, or who shall obtain the possession of the same by false and fraudulent statements made with intent to deceive, which are calculated to deceive, and which do deceive, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1927, c. 61, s. 4; 1965, c. 1073, s. 4; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15; 1993, c. 539, s. 112; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-168.1. Conversion by bailee, lessee, tenant or attorney-in-fact.

Every person entrusted with any property as bailee, lessee, tenant or lodger, or with any power of attorney for the sale or transfer thereof, who fraudulently converts the same, or the proceeds thereof, to his own use, or secretes it with a fraudulent intent to convert it to his own use, shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

If, however, the value of the property converted or secreted, or the proceeds thereof, is in excess of four hundred dollars ($400.00), every person so converting or secreting it is guilty of a Class H felony. In all cases of doubt the jury shall, in the verdict, fix the value of the property converted or secreted. (1965, c. 1073, s. 5; 1979, c. 468; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 13; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 113; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Embezzlement and fraudulent conversion are not necessarily and strictly synonymous. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Section 14-90 Compared. — This section is more limited in its scope with regard to bailees than § 14-90; it appears to embrace a bailee "who fraudulently converts the same" to his own use, while § 14-90 covers the bailee who "shall embezzle or fraudulently or knowingly and willfully misapply or convert to his own use." State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

There is no irreconcilable conflict between § 14-90 and this section as they relate to bailees. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

This section does not remove bailees from § 14-90 or make embezzlement by a bailee a misdemeanor. State v. Hutson, 10 N.C. App. 653, 179 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Previous Ownership by Named Victim an Essential Element of Crime. — An essential element of the crime of conversion by a bailee is the intent to convert or the act of conversion, which by definition requires proof that someone other than the defendant owned the relevant property, so that the State is required to prove ownership, and a proper indictment must identify as the victim a legal entity capable of owning property. State v. Woody, 132 N.C. App. 788, 513 S.E.2d 801 (1999).

§ 14-168.2. Definitions.

For the purposes of this Article, the terms "rent," "hire" and "lease" are used to designate the letting for hire of any horse, mule or other like animal, or any buggy, wagon, truck, automobile, aircraft, motor, trailer, appliance, equipment, tool, or other thing of value by lease, bailment, or rental agreement. (1965, c. 1073, s. 5.)

§ 14-168.3. Prima facie evidence of intent to convert property.

It shall be prima facie evidence of intent to commit a crime as set forth in G.S. 14-167, 14-168, and 14-168.1 when one who has, by written instrument, leased or rented the personal property of another:

(1) Failed or refused to return such property to its owner after the lease, bailment, or rental agreement has expired,
   a. Within 10 days, and
   b. Within 48 hours after written demand for return thereof is personally served or given by registered mail delivered to the last known address provided in such lease or rental agreement, or

(2) When the leasing or rental of such personal property is obtained by presentation of identification to the lessor or rentor thereof which is false, fictitious, or knowingly not current as to name, address, place of employment, or other identification. (1965, c. 1118.)

§ 14-168.4. Failing to return rented property on which there is purchase option.

(a) It shall be a Class 2 misdemeanor for any person to fail to return rented property with intent to defeat the rights of the owner, which is rented pursuant to a written rental agreement in which there is an option to purchase the property, after the date of termination provided in the agreement has occurred or, if the termination date is the occurrence of a specified event, then that such event has in fact occurred.

(b) Intent to commit the crime set forth in subsection (a) may be presumed from the following evidence:

(1) Evidence that the defendant has disposed of the property, or has encumbered the property by allowing a security interest to be placed on the property or by delivering the property to a pawnbroker; or

(2) Evidence that the defendant has refused to deliver the property to the sheriff or other officer charged with the execution of process directed to him for its seizure, after a judgment for possession of the property or a claim and delivery order for the property has been issued; or

(3) Evidence that the defendant has moved the rented property out of state and has failed to notify the owner of the new location of the property.

However, this presumption may be rebutted by evidence from the defendant that he has no intent to defeat the rights of the owner of the property.

(c) Violations of this Article for failure to return rented property which is rented pursuant to a written rental agreement in which there is an option to purchase shall be prosecuted only under this section. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1065, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 114; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-169. Violation made misdemeanor.

Except as otherwise provided, any person violating the provisions of this Article shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1927, c. 61, s. 5; 1929, c. 38, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 15; 1993, c. 539, s. 115; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Article 26.

Offenses against Public Morality and Decency.

§ 14-177. Crime against nature.

If any person shall commit the crime against nature, with mankind or beast, he shall be punished as a Class I felon. (25 Hen. VIII, c. 6; 5 Eliz., c. 17; R.C., c. 34, s. 6; 1868-9, c. 167, s. 6; Code, s. 1010; Rev., s. 3349; C.S., s. 4336; 1965, c. 621, s. 4; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1191; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section is constitutional. State v. Enslin, 25 N.C. App. 662, 214 S.E.2d 318, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 245, 217 S.E.2d 669 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 1492, 47 L. Ed. 2d 753 (1976). See State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980); State v. Singleton, 85 N.C. App. 123, 354 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 516, 358 S.E.2d 530 (1987).

This section is constitutional, and a defendant is not entitled to quash the bill of indictment against him on grounds that it is unconstitutional because of its vagueness and overbreadth. State v. Moles, 17 N.C. App. 664, 195 S.E.2d 352 (1973); State v. Crouse, 22 N.C. App. 47, 205 S.E.2d 361 (1974).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979), appeal dismissed, 445 U.S. 947, 100 S. Ct. 1593, 63 L. Ed. 2d 782 (1980).

Persons of ordinary intelligence would conclude a fellatio between a man and a woman would be classified as a crime against nature and forbidden by this section. This keeps it from being unconstitutionally vague. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979), appeal dismissed, 445 U.S. 947, 100 S. Ct. 1593, 63 L. Ed. 2d 782 (1980).

The right of privacy does not prohibit the prosecution of unmarried persons for consensual fellatio done in private. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979), appeal dismissed, 445 U.S. 947, 100 S. Ct. 1593, 63 L. Ed. 2d 782 (1980).

The State, consistent with the U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, can classify unmarried persons so as to prohibit fellatio between males and females without forbidding the same acts between married couples. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979), appeal dismissed, 445 U.S. 947, 100 S. Ct. 1593, 63 L. Ed. 2d 782 (1980).

No authority prohibits a state on constitutional grounds from punishing under a statute such as this section individuals who commit the proscribed act in a public restroom. State v. Jarrell, 24 N.C. App. 610, 211 S.E.2d 837, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 725, 213 S.E.2d 724 (1975).

Purpose. — The legislative intent and purpose of this section is to punish persons who undertake by unnatural and indecent methods to gratify a perverted and depraved sexual instinct which is an offense against public decency and morality. State v. Stubbs, 266 N.C. 295, 145 S.E.2d 899 (1966); State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

Definition. — The crime against nature is sexual intercourse contrary to the order of nature. It includes acts with animals and acts between humans per anum and per os. State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969); State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971); State v. Wright, 27 N.C. App. 263, 218 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

Conduct declared criminal by this section is sexual intercourse contrary to the order of nature. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

Scope of Section. — This section includes all kindred acts of bestial character whereby degraded and perverted sexual desires are sought to be gratified. State v. Griffin, 175 N.C. 767, 94 S.E. 678 (1917); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965); State v. Wright, 27 N.C. App. 263, 218 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

This section includes unnatural intercourse between male and male. State v. Fenner, 166 N.C. 247, 80 S.E. 970 (1914).

This section includes acts with animals and acts between humans per anum and per os. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965); State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

This section is broad enough to include in the crime against nature other forms of the offense than sodomy and buggery. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965); State v. Wright, 27 N.C. App. 263, 218 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

The crime against nature includes a consensual fellatio between a man and a woman. State v. Poe, 40 N.C. App. 385, 252 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 303, 259 S.E.2d 304 (1979), appeal dismissed, 445 U.S. 947, 100 S. Ct. 1593, 63 L. Ed. 2d 782 (1980).

In this jurisdiction crime against nature embraces sodomy, buggery and bestiality as those offenses were known and defined at common law. State v. O'Keefe, 263 N.C. 53, 138 S.E.2d 767 (1964), cert. denied, 380 U.S. 985, 85 S. Ct. 1355, 14 L. Ed. 2d 277 (1965); State v. Stokes, 1 N.C. App. 245, 161 S.E.2d 53, rev'd on other grounds, 274 N.C. 409, 163 S.E.2d 770 (1968).

Though penetration by or of a sexual organ is an essential element of the crime, the crime against nature is not limited to penetration by the male sexual organ. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

This section condemns crimes against nature whether committed against adults or children. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

This section and § 14-202.1 are complementary rather than repugnant or inconsistent. Section 14-202.1 condemns other acts against children than unnatural sexual acts. The two statutes can be reconciled, and both declared to be operative without repugnance. State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969); State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

Section 14-202.1 is not repugnant to this section so as to work a repeal in part of this section, intentionally or otherwise. The two sections are complementary rather than repugnant or inconsistent. State v. Lance, 244 N.C. 455, 94 S.E.2d 335 (1956).

Section 14-202.1 supplements this section. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961).

This section and § 14-202.1 can be reconciled and both declared to be operative without repugnance. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

And § 14-202.1 Is Not a Lesser Included Offense of the Crime Against Nature. —

Because the two offenses are separate and distinct and the constituent elements are not identical, a violation of § 14-202.1 is not a lesser included offense of the crime against nature described in this section. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

There was no merit to defendant's contention that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to try him under the indecent liberties with children statute, § 14-202.1, because the criminal act he committed was a crime against nature prohibited by this section, since the crime against nature statute and the indecent liberties with children statute are complementary but not mutually exclusive. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

Sexual Preference. — Neither by its terms nor by judicial gloss proscribes sexual preference or the status of being homosexual; in order to violate the statute, a person must commit one of the specific acts coming within the purview of the statute. Donovan v. Fiumara, 114 N.C. App. 524, 442 S.E.2d 572 (1994).

A simple statement descriptive of an individual's alleged sexual orientation does not as a matter of law impute to that individual commission of a crime. Donovan v. Fiumara, 114 N.C. App. 524, 442 S.E.2d 572 (1994).

Referring to a person as "gay" or "bisexual" is not tantamount to charging that individual with the commission of a crime. Donovan v. Fiumara, 114 N.C. App. 524, 442 S.E.2d 572 (1994).

Crime against nature and taking indecent liberties with a child are separate and distinct offenses. State v. Hoover, 89 N.C. App. 199, 365 S.E.2d 920, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 177, 373 S.E.2d 118 (1988).

Sentencing of defendant for both crime against nature and sexual activity by a substitute parent involving the same victim did not violate the merger doctrine or subject him to double jeopardy. State v. Hoover, 89 N.C. App. 199, 365 S.E.2d 920, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 177, 373 S.E.2d 118 (1988).

Proof of penetration of or by the sexual organ is essential to conviction under this section. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965); State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969); State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971); State v. Wright, 27 N.C. App. 263, 218 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 622 (1975); State v. Adams, 299 N.C. 699, 264 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

Where evidence showed that the defendant penetrated the victim's female sexual organ with his tongue, there was sufficient evidence to overrule defendant's motion for nonsuit. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Proof of penetration is required in order to convict of a crime against nature under this section. State v. Hill, 59 N.C. App. 216, 296 S.E.2d 17.

Crime against nature is not a lesser included offense of first- or second-degree sexual offense. State v. Warren, 309 N.C. 224, 306 S.E.2d 446 (1983). See also, State v. Barrett, 307 N.C. 126, 302 S.E.2d 632 (1982).

Defendant's conviction of both the crime against nature and second-degree sexual offense was not error, because the crime against nature proscribed by this section requires penetration of or by the sexual organ, while second-degree sexual offense does not. State v. Bailey, 80 N.C. App. 678, 343 S.E.2d 434 (1986).

Assault with intent to commit rape and committing a crime against nature are not essentially the same offense since the elements of each offense are distinct and different. State v. Webb, 26 N.C. App. 526, 216 S.E.2d 382, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 251, 217 S.E.2d 676 (1975).

An assault upon a woman is not a lesser degree of the crime of sodomy. State v. Jernigan, 255 N.C. 732, 122 S.E.2d 711 (1961).

Conviction for Attempt. — Upon the trial of an indictment for the crime against nature the prisoner may be convicted of the crime charged therein, or of an attempt to commit a less degree of the same crime. State v. Savage, 161 N.C. 245, 76 S.E. 238 (1912); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

A valid warrant or indictment is an essential of jurisdiction in a prosecution under this section. State v. Jernigan, 255 N.C. 732, 122 S.E.2d 711 (1961).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment under this section which charges that defendant did unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously commit the infamous crime against nature with a particular man, woman, or beast is sufficient. State v. O'Keefe, 263 N.C. 53, 138 S.E.2d 767 (1964), cert. denied, 380 U.S. 985, 85 S. Ct. 1355, 14 L. Ed. 2d 277 (1965); State v. Stubbs, 266 N.C. 295, 145 S.E.2d 899 (1966).

It is essential to a valid indictment in this jurisdiction that the indictment must allege that the defendant did unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously commit the infamous crime against nature with a particular man, woman, or beast. State v. Stokes, 274 N.C. 409, 163 S.E.2d 770 (1968).

It is necessary to the legal sufficiency of an indictment charging the commission of a crime against nature to state with exactitude, inter alia, the name of the person with or against whom the offense was committed, in order that there can be certitude in the statement of the accusation as will identify the offense with which the accused is sought to be charged and to protect the accused from being twice put in jeopardy for the same offense. State v. Stokes, 274 N.C. 409, 163 S.E.2d 770 (1968).

Indictment charging defendant with crime against nature held sufficient under § 15A-924(a)(5). State v. Singleton, 85 N.C. App. 123, 354 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 516, 358 S.E.2d 530 (1987).

The sole testimony of an accomplice will support a conviction in a prosecution for crime against nature. State v. Moles, 17 N.C. App. 664, 195 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

Use of Anatomical Dolls to Illustrate Testimony. — The courts of this State have allowed the use of anatomical dolls in sexual abuse cases to illustrate the testimony of child witnesses; the practice is wholly consistent with existing rules governing the use of photographs and other items to illustrate testimony, and it conveys the information sought to be elicited while permitting the child to use a familiar item, thereby making him more comfortable. State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

Even though dolls were used to illustrate the testimony of a social worker rather than the abused children, the evidence was still admissible; the demonstration illustrated the social worker's testimony as to the manner in which the children communicated the accounts of sexual abuse and the social worker's demonstration of what she observed each child do with the dolls also corroborated the testimony of each child. State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

Instruction Defining Unnatural Sexual Intercourse. — In a prosecution of defendant for crime against nature, cunnilingus, the trial court's definition of "unnatural sexual intercourse" in the jury charge was proper and could not have caused the jury to confuse cunnilingus with sexual intercourse. State v. Thacker, 301 N.C. 348, 271 S.E.2d 252 (1980).

Factual basis for nolo contendere pleas to charges of sexual activity by a substitute parent and crime against nature held adequate. State v. Hoover, 89 N.C. App. 199, 365 S.E.2d 920, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 177, 373 S.E.2d 118 (1988).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence of crime against nature against child held sufficient. State v. Hoover, 89 N.C. App. 199, 365 S.E.2d 920, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 177, 373 S.E.2d 118 (1988).

Applied in State v. Callett, 211 N.C. 563, 191 S.E. 27 (1937); State v. Spivey, 213 N.C. 45, 195 S.E. 1 (1938); State v. Mintz, 242 N.C. 761, 89 S.E.2d 463 (1955); State v. § 14-178. Incest between certain near relatives.

The parties shall be guilty of a felony in all cases of carnal intercourse between (i) grandparent and grandchild, (ii) parent and child or stepchild or legally adopted child, or (iii) brother and sister of the half or whole blood. Every such offense is punishable as a Class F felony. (1879, c. 16, s. 1; Code, s. 1060; Rev., s. 3351; 1911, c. 16; C.S., s. 4337; 1965, c. 132; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1192; 1994, Ex. "1. The North Carolina Sentencing and Policy Advisory Commission may study the current punishments for violations of G.S. 14-178 and G.S. 14-179 to determine whether those punishments are consistent with other punishments for sex offenses. The Commission may also study the incest statutes' application to acts between related minors.

CASE NOTES

The crime of incest is purely statutory. State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963).

Incest was not indictable at common law. State v. Sauls, 190 N.C. 810, 130 S.E. 848 (1925); State v. Broadway, 157 N.C. 598, 72 S.E. 987 (1911).

Incest, although punished by the ecclesiastical courts of England as an offense against good morals, is not at common law an indictable offense. State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963).

Incest requires carnal intercourse. State v. Gregory, 78 N.C. App. 565, 338 S.E.2d 110 (1985), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 316 N.C. 382, 342 S.E.2d 901 (1986).

Intercourse with Daughter. — A father violates this section and by reason thereof is guilty of the statutory felony of incest if he has sexual intercourse, either habitual or in a single instance, with a woman or girl whom he knows to be his daughter in fact, regardless of whether she is his legitimate or his illegitimate child. State v. Wood, 235 N.C. 636, 70 S.E.2d 665 (1952); State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963); State v. Vincent, 278 N.C. 63, 178 S.E.2d 608 (1971); State v. Harvell, 45 N.C. App. 243, 262 S.E.2d 850, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 200, 269 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

Carnal intercourse by the father with his illegitimate daughter constitutes the offense. State v. Lawrence, 95 N.C. 659 (1886); Strider v. Lewey, 176 N.C. 448, 97 S.E. 398 (1918).

Both parties are not necessarily guilty. Strider v. Lewey, 176 N.C. 448, 97 S.E. 398 (1918).

Evidence. — The crime of felonious incest has as an element that the defendant and the other participant be related in one of three enumerated familial ways, including parent-child. Thus, to prove one element of the offense in the case at hand, it was necessary to establish the parent-child relationship and it was error to then use the evidence of this relationship to find that defendant took advantage of a position of trust or confidence. State v. Hughes, 114 N.C. App. 742, 443 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 697, 448 S.E.2d 536 (1994).

Failure to Charge "Carnal" Knowledge. — The mere fact that indictment failed to charge "carnal" knowledge is not a fatal defect that would sustain the defendant's motion to quash the indictment. State v. Sauls, 190 N.C. 810, 130 S.E. 848 (1925).

Corroboration of Prosecutrix' Testimony Not Required. — There is no statute providing that the testimony of the prosecutrix must be corroborated by the evidence of others in a prosecution for incest. In consequence, a conviction for incest may be had against a father upon the uncorroborated testimony of the daughter if such testimony suffices to establish all of the elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Wood, 235 N.C. 636, 70 S.E.2d 665 (1952); State v. Vincent, 278 N.C. 63, 178 S.E.2d 608 (1971).

Parental Immunity Doctrine Inapplicable. — Minor plaintiffs' action against their father for willfully assaulting, abusing, molesting and raping them was improperly dismissed under the provisions of § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) on the ground that the action was barred by the parental immunity doctrine. Doe ex rel. Connolly v. Holt, 103 N.C. App. 516, 405 S.E.2d 807 (1991), aff'd, 332 N.C. 90, 418 S.E.2d 511 (1992).

Where a father's acts against his minor daughters constituted incest in violation of this section, second degree rape in violation of § 14-27.3, and second degree sexual offense in violation of § 14-27.5, and caused plaintiffs to suffer permanent physical, emotional and mental injuries, the doctrine of parental immunity will not bar a civil suit against him. Doe ex rel. Connolly v. Holt, 103 N.C. App. 516, 405 S.E.2d 807 (1991), aff'd, 332 N.C. 90, 418 S.E.2d 511 (1992).

Evidence of Acts Other Than Those Charged in Indictment. — In a prosecution for incest, evidence of acts of incestuous intercourse between the prosecuting witness and defendant other than those charged in the indictment, whether prior or subsequent thereto, is admissible to corroborate the proof of the act relied upon for conviction. State v. Austin, 285 N.C. 364, 204 S.E.2d 675 (1974).

Proof of other similar acts is competent in corroboration. State v. Broadway, 157 N.C. 598, 72 S.E. 987 (1911).

In prosecution for incest, evidence tending to show that defendant had had prior sexual contact with the prosecuting witness was reasonably probative of defendant's knowledge, opportunity, intent and plan, and was not so prejudicial as to outweigh its probative value and render it inadmissible; moreover, even if there was error in the admission of such evidence, absent a showing of a reasonable possibility that a different result would have been reached had the evidence been excluded, any possible error would be considered harmless. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

Confessions of the wife to the husband are not admissible in a trial for incest. State v. Brittain, 117 N.C. 783, 23 S.E. 433 (1895). But see § 8-57.

Testimony of Other Daughter as to Similar Acts. — In a prosecution under this section for an offense allegedly committed upon defendant's daughter, testimony of an older daughter that within the past three years defendant several times had made to her improper advances of a similar nature, was competent solely for the purpose of showing intent or guilty knowledge. State v. Edwards, 224 N.C. 527, 31 S.E.2d 516 (1944).

Statements Made by Prosecutrix to Witnesses. — The trial court in an incest prosecution did not err in permitting repeated testimony by other witnesses of statements allegedly made to them by the prosecuting witness regarding defendant's acts toward her since the trial judge has wide discretion in allowing corroborative testimony. State v. Pollock, 50 N.C. App. 169, 273 S.E.2d 501 (1980).

Prosecutrix May Not Be Bastardized by Mother. — In a prosecution under this section, the married mother of the prosecutrix may not testify that defendant, a person not her husband, is the natural father of the prosecutrix, since a mother will not be permitted to bastardize her own issue and testify to illicit relations, except in an action which directly involves the parentage of the child, and, the prosecutrix having been born in wedlock, the law will conclusively presume legitimacy in the absence of evidence that the father was impotent or could not have had access. State v. Rogers, 260 N.C. 406, 133 S.E.2d 1 (1963).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — Where defendant was charged with incest in violation of this section, and the State's evidence established that defendant had sexual intercourse with his stepchild, and that defendant knew the person was related to him, the three elements of the crime of incest were sufficiently established as a matter of law and this was sufficient evidence of a violation of this section to take to a jury. State v. Collins, 44 N.C. App. 27, 259 S.E.2d 802 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 322, 265 S.E.2d 399 (1980).

The State introduced sufficient evidence of penetration to permit a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the offenses of incest and rape, where the child victim testified at trial that her father had penetrated her, even though there were discrepancies in her extrajudicial statements to others and in her trial testimony with regard to the manner, extent and frequency of the penetration. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Aggravating Factors in Sentencing. — Evidence that defendant pled guilty to one count of incest with his 15-year-old daughter, but that defendant's incestuous relationship with his daughter began when she was 12 years old supported the trial court's findings of the factor in aggravation provided for in § 15A-1340.4(a)(1)j. State v. Jackson, 70 N.C. App. 782, 321 S.E.2d 169 (1984).

Applied in State v. Rhodes, 290 N.C. 16, 224 S.E.2d 631 (1976); State v. Britt, 93 N.C. App. 126, 377 S.E.2d 79 (1989).

§ 14-179. Incest between uncle and niece and nephew and aunt.

In all cases of carnal intercourse between uncle and niece, and nephew and aunt, the parties shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1879, c. 16, s. 2; Code, s. 1061; Rev., s. 3352; C.S., s. 4338; 1993, c. 539, s. 118; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

"1. The North Carolina Sentencing and Policy Advisory Commission may study the current punishments for violations of G.S. 14-178 and G.S. 14-179 to determine whether those punishments are consistent with other punish-

CASE NOTES

Intercourse with Daughter of Half-Sister. — It has been held under this section that carnal intercourse of a man with the daughter of his half-sister is incest. State v. Harris, 149 N.C. 513, 62 S.E. 1090 (1908).

§§ 14-181, 14-182: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 108, s. 4.

§ 14-183. Bigamy.

If any person, being married, shall marry any other person during the life of the former husband or wife, every such offender, and every person counseling, aiding or abetting such offender, shall be punished as a Class I felon. Any such offense may be dealt with, tried, determined and punished in the county where the offender shall be apprehended, or be in custody, as if the offense had been actually committed in that county. If any person, being married, shall contract a marriage with any other person outside of this State, which marriage would be punishable as bigamous if contracted within this State, and shall thereafter cohabit with such person in this State, he shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished as in cases of bigamy. Nothing contained in this section shall extend to any person marrying a second time, whose husband or wife shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years then last past, and shall not have been known by such person to have been living within that time; nor to any person who at the time of such second marriage shall have been lawfully divorced from the bond of the first marriage; nor to any person whose former marriage shall have been declared void by the sentence of any court of competent jurisdiction. CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section, making bigamous cohabitation in this State a felony, is valid and offends neither the federal nor State Constitutions. State v. Williams, 224 N.C. 183, 29 S.E.2d 744 (1944), aff'd, 325 U.S. 226, 65 S. Ct. 1092, 89 L. Ed. 1577, 157 A.L.R. 1366 (1945).

The 1913 amendment to this section, which added the words "shall thereafter cohabit with such person in this State," which words qualify and constitute a requisite to the jurisdiction when the second marriage is not in North Carolina, is constitutional and does not confer extraterritorial jurisdiction upon the courts. See State v. Herron, 175 N.C. 754, 94 S.E. 698 (1917); State v. Moon, 178 N.C. 715, 100 S.E. 614 (1919).

Offense Against Society. — At common law and under this section bigamy is an offense against society rather than against the lawful spouse of the offender. State v. Williams, 220 N.C. 445, 17 S.E.2d 769 (1941), rev'd on other grounds, 317 U.S. 287, 63 S. Ct. 207, 87 L. Ed. 279 (1942).

Validity of First Marriage. — That the first marriage was celebrated without procurement of a license, while subjecting the parties to punishment, will not so invalidate the marriage that bigamy cannot be predicated thereon. State v. Robbins, 28 N.C. 23 (1845).

In a trial for bigamy, an instruction that defendant could not be convicted unless the jury was satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the magistrate who solemnized the first marriage was a "duly appointed, qualified, and acting justice of the peace," was properly refused, it being sufficient if such justice was a de facto officer. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

The evidence showing that there were a number of eyewitnesses to the marriage, and a certified copy of the license with return endorsed being produced, it was not error to charge the jury that it would be presumed that the ceremony was valid. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

A ceremony solemnized by a Roman Catholic layman, who bought for $10.00 a mail order certificate giving him "credentials of minister" in the Universal Life Church, Inc., was not a ceremony of marriage to be recognized for purposes of a bigamy prosecution in this State. State v. Lynch, 301 N.C. 479, 272 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Burden on Defendant to Show Absence of Wife. — The burden is on the defendant to show as a matter of defense that his wife had absented herself for the space of seven years next before the second marriage, and that he was ignorant all that time that she was living. State v. Goulden, 134 N.C. 743, 47 S.E. 450 (1904).

Absence for Less Than Seven Years. — A belief by the defendant that his first wife is dead or his ignorance of her being alive, she having been away for less than seven years, is no defense in a prosecution for bigamy. State v. Goulden, 134 N.C. 743, 47 S.E. 450 (1904).

Indictment — Averment of First Marriage. — An indictment for bigamy which charges that defendant "willfully, unlawfully and feloniously, being a married man, did marry one W. during the life of his first wife," sufficiently averred the first marriage. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

Same — Name of First Wife. — It is not necessary in an indictment for bigamy to set out the name of the first wife. State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891).

Same — Averment That Defendant Was Not Divorced. — It was not necessary that an indictment for bigamy should contain an averment that the defendant had not been divorced from his wife. State v. Norman, 13 N.C. 222 (1829); State v. Davis, 109 N.C. 780, 14 S.E. 55 (1891); State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897).

Same — Time and Place of Marriage. — This section does not by its language make it necessary for the indictment to state the dates of the marriages, and § 15-155 expressly enacts that such a statement shall not be necessary. State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ray, 151 N.C. 710, 66 S.E. 204 (1909).

Under this section it is unnecessary to state where the second marriage took place, and it is not necessary that the offense should be committed in the county where the bill is found to confer jurisdiction. State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ray, 151 N.C. 710, 66 S.E. 204 (1909).

Venue. — Defendant may be prosecuted for bigamy in the county in which he is apprehended, and it is not required that the prosecution be instituted in the county in which the bigamous cohabitation takes place. State v. Williams, 220 N.C. 445, 17 S.E.2d 769 (1941), rev'd on other grounds, 317 U.S. 287, 63 S. Ct. 207, 87 L. Ed. 279 (1942).

Where the bigamous cohabitation took place in one county and the parties were apprehended in another county, the prosecution could be instituted in the county of their apprehension. State v. Williams, 224 N.C. 183, 29 S.E.2d 744 (1944), aff'd, 325 U.S. 226, 65 S. Ct. 1092, 89 L. Ed. 1577, 157 A.L.R. 1366 (1945).

Admissions as to Prior Marriage. — In a prosecution for bigamy an admission of the defendant is competent to prove the first marriage. State v. Goulden, 134 N.C. 743, 47 S.E. 450 (1904).

Testimony of First Wife. — In an indictment for bigamy the first wife of the defendant is a competent witness to prove the marriage. State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897).

By the express provisions of § 8-57, defendant's legal wife was a competent witness before the grand jury, which was considering an indictment against defendant charging him with a violation of the provisions of this section. State v. Vandiver, 265 N.C. 325, 144 S.E.2d 54 (1965).

The record book of marriage for the county or the original marriage license signed by the justice solemnizing the marriage is admissible to prove a marriage. State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897).

Proof of Second Marriage Out of State. — If the defendant wishes to rely upon the fact that the offense of bigamy was committed outside the State, he cannot move to quash or in arrest, but must prove the fact in defense under his plea of not guilty. State v. Mitchell, 83 N.C. 674 (1880); State v. Burton, 138 N.C. 575, 50 S.E. 214 (1905); State v. Barrington, 141 N.C. 820, 53 S.E. 663 (1906); State v. Long, 143 N.C.

670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907).

In a prosecution for bigamous cohabitation based upon a second marriage in another state, the State must prove beyond a reasonable doubt each of the essential elements of the offense. State v. Setzer, 226 N.C. 216, 37 S.E.2d 513 (1946).

Proof of Foreign Divorces. — Where a decree of divorce in another state, which is attacked by the prosecution for insufficient residence in such other state, is relied upon as the only defense on a trial for bigamy, the defendant must satisfy the jury, but not beyond a reasonable doubt, of the bona fides of his residence in the other state. State v. Herron, 175 N.C. 754, 94 S.E. 698 (1917).

While decrees of divorce granted citizens of this State by the courts of another state, standing alone, are taken as prima facie valid, they are not conclusive, and when challenged in a prosecution under this section for bigamous cohabitation, the burden is on defendants to show to the satisfaction of the jury that they had acquired bona fide domiciles in the state granting their divorces and that such divorces are valid. State v. Williams, 224 N.C. 183, 29 S.E.2d 744 (1944), aff'd, 325 U.S. 226, 65 S. Ct. 1092, 89 L. Ed. 1577, 157 A.L.R. 1366 (1945).

Proof of a divorce granted in another state upon a trial for bigamy in North Carolina courts is only evidence which should be submitted to the jury under proper instructions. State v. Herron, 175 N.C. 754, 94 S.E. 698 (1917).

Applied in State v. Hill, 241 N.C. 409, 85 S.E.2d 411 (1955).

§ 14-184. Fornication and adultery.

If any man and woman, not being married to each other, shall lewdly and lasciviously associate, bed and cohabit together, they shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor: Provided, that the admissions or confessions of one shall not be received in evidence against the other. (1805, c. 684, P.R.; R.C., c. 34, s. 45; Code, s. 1041; Rev., s. 3350; C.S., s. 4343; 1969, c. 1224, s. 9; 1993, c. 539, s. 119; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

Statute of Limitations. — Adultery is subject to a two-year statute of limitations. Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

Offense Is Statutory. — The offense of fornication and adultery is statutory. State v. Ivey, 230 N.C. 172, 52 S.E.2d 346 (1949).

Protected Sexual Relationship. — Because this section makes fornication and adultery a misdemeanor in this State, the only sexual relationship the law protects is that between married partners. Nicholson v. Hugh Chatham Mem. Hosp., 300 N.C. 295, 266 S.E.2d 818 (1980).

Adultery is an aggravated species of fornication. State v. Crowell, 26 N.C. 231 (1844).

"Lewdly and lasciviously cohabit" implies habitual intercourse in the manner of husband and wife, and together with the fact of not being married to each other, constitutes the offense, and in plain words draws the distinction between single or nonhabitual intercourse and the offense the statute means to denounce. State v. Davenport, 225 N.C. 13, 33 S.E.2d 136 (1945); State v. Ivey, 230 N.C. 172, 52 S.E.2d 346 (1949); State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

A single act of illicit sexual intercourse is not fornication and adultery as defined by this section. "Lewdly and lasciviously cohabit" plainly implies habitual intercourse, in the manner of husband and wife, and together with the fact of not being married to each other, constitutes the offense, and in plain words draws the distinction between single or nonhabitual intercourse and the offense the statute means to denounce. State v. Robinson, 9 N.C. App. 433, 176 S.E.2d 253 (1970).

Thus a single act of illicit sexual intercourse does not constitute fornication and adultery as defined by this section, the offense being habitual sexual intercourse in the manner of husband and wife by a man and woman not married to each other. However, the duration of the association is immaterial if the requisite habitual intercourse is established and it has been held that a period of two weeks is sufficient to constitute the offense. State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

State Need Not Prove That Male Defendant and His Wife Were Separated. — In a prosecution under this section, it is not required that the State prove that the male defendant and his wife were separated. State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

Acquittal as to One Party. — Where only one party is convicted and the other acquitted, there can be no judgment against the one convicted. State v. Mainor, 28 N.C. 340 (1846). This holding was followed in the case of State v. Lyerly, 52 N.C. 158 (1859), and was held as law in this State until doubted in State v. Rhinehart, 106 N.C. 787, 11 S.E. 512 (1890). The question came before the court again in State v. Armistead, 54 N.C. App. 358, 283 S.E.2d 162 (1981), when it was held that an acquittal of one defendant did not work the same result as to the other, or prevent the court from rendering judgment. This seems to be the present status of the law on this point. It was followed in State v. Childress, 321 N.C. 231, 362 S.E.2d 263 (1987).

Both defendants need not be convicted of mutual intent to violate the law before conviction of one of them can be sustained. State v. Davenport, 225 N.C. 13, 33 S.E.2d 136 (1945).

New Trial as to One Defendant. — If both defendants are convicted, a new trial may be granted as to one party without disturbing the verdict as to the other. State v. Parham, 50 N.C. 416 (1858).

Indictment — Use of Word "Adulterously". — The use of the word "adulterously" dispenses with the necessity of alleging that the parties were not married and were of different sexes. State v. McDuffie, 107 N.C. 885, 12 S.E. 83 (1890).

Same — Use of Words "Lewdly and Lasciviously". — The words "lewdly and lasciviously" need not be used. State v. Britt, 150 N.C. 811, 63 S.E. 1056 (1909).

Same — Allegation of Criminal Intent. — The State is not called upon to allege or prove the criminal intent. State v. Cutshall, 109 N.C. 764, 14 S.E. 107 (1891).

Same — Allegation That Female Defendant Is a "Spinster". — The fact that the female is erroneously alleged to be a "spinster" is not ground of arrest of judgment. State v. Guest, 100 N.C. 410, 6 S.E. 253 (1888).

When Declarations of Codefendant Are Admissible. — While the admissions or confessions of one party are not to be received against the codefendant, it has been held that under certain circumstances such declarations are admissible when made by the female defendant in the presence of the male. See State v. Roberts, 188 N.C. 460, 124 S.E. 833 (1924).

Testimony of an admission made by defendant that "he was guilty" of another charge based upon sexual relations with the other party was competent as an admission of acts which with other similar acts tended to prove the offense of fornication and adultery. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

The proviso in this section relates to extrajudicial declarations, and does not prevent a woman jointly charged with the offense from testifying as a witness at the trial of her paramour to facts, otherwise competent, which are within her personal knowledge, where at the time she testifies her plea of nolo contendere has been accepted by the State, and she is no longer on trial. The prohibition of the proviso is directed not to the person testifying but against the use in evidence of such person's previous admissions or confessions. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948), discussed in 27 N.C.L. Rev. 365 (1949).

Where, in a prosecution for fornication and adultery, the person jointly charged has testified as to the facts forming the basis of the prosecution, testimony that she had made substantially the same statements to another upon the investigation is competent for the purpose of corroboration. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

Circumstantial Evidence. — It is never essential to conviction of fornication and adultery that even a single act of illicit sexual intercourse be proven by direct testimony. While necessary to a conviction that such acts must have occurred, it is, nevertheless, competent to infer them from the circumstances presented in the evidence. State v. Robinson, 9 N.C. App. 433, 176 S.E.2d 253 (1970).

The guilt of defendants or of a defendant, in a prosecution for fornication and adultery, must be established in almost every case by circumstantial evidence. It is never essential to conviction that a single act of intercourse be shown by direct testimony. State v. Davenport, 225 N.C. 13, 33 S.E.2d 136 (1945).

The acts of illicit intercourse may be proved by circumstantial evidence, and it is not required that even one such act be directly proven. State v. Kleiman, 241 N.C. 277, 85 S.E.2d 148 (1954).

It is competent to prove that either defendant had a living spouse. State v. Manly, 95 N.C. 661 (1886).

Statements and conduct prior to the offense charged are admissible. State v. Austin, 108 N.C. 780, 13 S.E. 219 (1891).

Testimony as to conduct of the parties after indictment is admissible. State v.

Stubbs, 108 N.C. 774, 13 S.E. 90 (1891).

Improper Advances Made by Defendant to Another Woman. — Where defendant was charged with fornication and adultery with one of the orphanage girls under his supervision, testimony of another orphanage girl that defendant made improper advances to her was competent for the purpose of showing attitude, animus and purpose of defendant, and as corroborative of the State's case. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

Applied in State v. Miller, 214 N.C. 317, 199 S.E. 89 (1938).

§ 14-185: Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 402.

§ 14-186. Opposite sexes occupying same bedroom at hotel for immoral purposes; falsely registering as husband and wife.

Any man and woman found occupying the same bedroom in any hotel, public inn or boardinghouse for any immoral purpose, or any man and woman falsely registering as, or otherwise representing themselves to be, husband and wife in any hotel, public inn or boardinghouse, shall be deemed guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1917, c. 158, s. 2; C.S., s. 4345; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 120; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Constitutionality. — The portion of this section making it a misdemeanor to occupy a bedroom with a member of the opposite sex for immoral purposes is too vague and indefinite to comply with constitutional due process standards. Such opinion does not apply to statutes which refer to "immoral purposes" but which also contain phrases which, by the doctrine of ejusdem generis, may be used to define "immoral purposes." The phrase "any immoral purposes" within this section is not preceded by any phrases from which could be determined the meaning of "immoral purposes." State v. Sanders, 37 N.C. App. 53, 245 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

This section fails to define with sufficient precision exactly what the term "any immoral purpose" may encompass. The word immoral is not equivalent to the word illegal; hence, enforcement of this section may involve legal acts which, nevertheless, are immoral in the view of many citizens. One must necessarily speculate, therefore, as to what acts are immoral. If the legislative intent of this section is to proscribe illicit sexual intercourse the statute could have specifically so provided. State v. Sanders, 37 N.C. App. 53, 245 S.E.2d 397 (1978).

§ 14-187: Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 402.

§ 14-188. Certain evidence relative to keeping disorderly houses admissible; keepers of such houses defined; punishment.

(a) On a prosecution in any court for keeping a disorderly house or bawdy house, or permitting a house to be used as a bawdy house, or used in such a way as to make it disorderly, or a common nuisance, evidence of the general reputation or character of the house shall be admissible and competent; and evidence of the lewd, dissolute and boisterous conversation of the inmates and frequenters, while in and around such house, shall be prima facie evidence of the bad character of the inmates and frequenters, and of the disorderly character of the house. The manager or person having the care, superintendency or government of a disorderly house or bawdy house is the "keeper" thereof, and one who employs another to manage and conduct a disorderly house or bawdy house is also "keeper" thereof.

(b) On a prosecution in any court for keeping a disorderly house or a bawdy house, or permitting a house to be used as a bawdy house or used in such a way to make it disorderly or a common nuisance, the offense shall constitute a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1907, c. 779; C.S., s. 4347; 1969, c. 1224, s. 22; 1993, c. 539, s. 121; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-190.1. Obscene literature and exhibitions.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to intentionally disseminate obscenity. A person, firm or corporation disseminates obscenity within the meaning of this Article if he or it:

(1) Sells, delivers or provides or offers or agrees to sell, deliver or provide any obscene writing, picture, record or other representation or embodiment of the obscene; or

(2) Presents or directs an obscene play, dance or other performance or participates directly in that portion thereof which makes it obscene; or

(3) Publishes, exhibits or otherwise makes available anything obscene; or

(4) Exhibits, presents, rents, sells, delivers or provides; or offers or agrees to exhibit, present, rent or to provide: any obscene still or motion picture, film, filmstrip, or projection slide, or sound recording, sound tape, or sound track, or any matter or material of whatever form which is a representation, embodiment, performance, or publication of the obscene.

(b) For purposes of this Article any material is obscene if:

(1) The material depicts or describes in a patently offensive way sexual conduct specifically defined by subsection (c) of this section; and

(2) The average person applying contemporary community standards relating to the depiction or description of sexual matters would find that the material taken as a whole appeals to the prurient interest in sex; and

(3) The material lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value; and

(4) The material as used is not protected or privileged under the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of North Carolina.

(c) As used in this Article, "sexual conduct" means:

(1) Vaginal, anal, or oral intercourse, whether actual or simulated, normal or perverted; or

(2) Masturbation, excretory functions, or lewd exhibition of uncovered genitals; or

(3) An act or condition that depicts torture, physical restraint by being fettered or bound, or flagellation of or by a nude person or a person clad in undergarments or in revealing or bizarre costume.

(d) Obscenity shall be judged with reference to ordinary adults except that it shall be judged with reference to children or other especially susceptible audiences if it appears from the character of the material or the circumstances of its dissemination to be especially designed for or directed to such children or audiences.

(e) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to knowingly and intentionally create, buy, procure or possess obscene material with the purpose and intent of disseminating it unlawfully.

(f) It shall be unlawful for a person, firm or corporation to advertise or otherwise promote the sale of material represented or held out by said person, firm or corporation as obscene.

(g) Violation of this section is a Class I felony.

(h) Obscene material disseminated, procured, or promoted in violation of this section is contraband.

(i) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to preempt local government regulation of the location or operation of sexually oriented businesses to the extent consistent with the constitutional protection afforded free speech. (1971, c. 405, s. 1; 1973, c. 1434, s. 1; 1985, c. 703, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 1194; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1998-46, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Section Is Constitutional. — This section specifically defines the elements of obscenity and hence is not unconstitutional on grounds of vagueness or overbreadth. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

The dissemination of obscenity is not protected by the State and federal constitutions; thus, this section by its terms does not infringe upon the rights to disseminate protected material. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Motion to quash warrant grounded on the alleged unconstitutionality of this section would be denied. State v. Horn, 18 N.C. App. 377, 197 S.E.2d 274 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

This section is constitutional. State v. Johnson, 20 N.C. App. 699, 202 S.E.2d 479 (1974); State v. Smith, 89 N.C. App. 19, 365 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 439, 373 S.E.2d 435 (1988); State v. Anderson, 322 N.C. 22, 366 S.E.2d 459, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 975, 109 S. Ct. 513, 102 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1988).

This section is not substantially overbroad and gives sufficiently definite warning of the proscriptions therein. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

This section is aimed at the dissemination of obscenity which is not protected by any constitutional guarantees; the statute is not aimed at mere possession of obscenity in the privacy of one's own home. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

It is not innocent but calculated dissemination of obscene material which is prohibited by this section, and accordingly the scienter requirement therein is constitutionally sufficient. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

It is not constitutionally mandated for a state to statutorily create a right to a prompt adversary proceeding on the obscenity of material seized and retained as evidence pending a trial wherein said evidence will be introduced; the statutory scheme of this section does not constitute a prior restraint merely because there is no provision for an adversary hearing which a defendant bears the burden of requesting. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Subsection (b) of this section is not unconstitutional on its face. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Subsections (a) and (d) of this section are to be read in pari materia with subsection (c), and thus subsection (c) is not unconstitutionally vague. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

This section and §§ 14-190.13, 14-190.16 and 14-190.17 are constitutional as drawn; while potentially beyond constitutional bounds if improperly applied, these statutes are not so substantially overbroad as to require constitutional invalidation on their face. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Neither this section nor judge's instructions contravened the Constitution by failing to specify what is meant by "community." State v. Mayes, 86 N.C. App. 569, 359 S.E.2d 30, petition allowed as to additional issues, 321 N.C. 122, 361 S.E.2d 599 (1987), aff'd, 323 N.C. 159, 371 S.E.2d 476, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1009, 109 S. Ct. 792, 102 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1988).

The constitutionality of this section is no longer in doubt. State v. Smith, 87 N.C. App. 217, 360 S.E.2d 495 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 478, 364 S.E.2d 667 (1988).

Subsection (b) of this section is not rendered unconstitutional by failing to require the use of a "statewide" community standard in determining what materials are obscene. State v. Roland, 88 N.C. App. 19, 362 S.E.2d 800 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 469, 368 S.E.2d 385 (1988).

Contention that the exclusion of the term "educational" from subdivision (b)(3) of this section rendered the provision invalid as a violation of the right to education guaranteed by N.C. Const., Art. I, § 15 was without merit. State v. Watson, 88 N.C. App. 624, 364 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 485, 370 S.E.2d 235 (1988).

This section is neither vague nor overbroad because of the specificity with which it defines which types of "sexual conduct" are considered obscene. State v. Cinema Blue of Charlotte, Inc., 98 N.C. App. 628, 392 S.E.2d 136, appeal dismissed, 327 N.C. 142, 394 S.E.2d 181 (1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1083, 111 S. Ct. 953, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1042 (1991).

Constitutionality of 1985 Amendment. — The federal district court would abstain from determining the constitutionality of North Carolina House Bill No. 1171 (Session Laws 1985, c. 703), enacted in 1985, which substantially amended this section, until the parties could obtain a resolution of this issue in the North Carolina General Courts of Justice. Floyd v. Thornburg, 619 F. Supp. 756 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

N.C. Const., Art. I, §§ 14 and 19 do not require that a statewide standard be judicially incorporated into this section in order to render the statute facially valid. State v. Mayes, 323 N.C. 159, 371 S.E.2d 476 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1009, 109 S. Ct. 792, 102 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1989).

Sections 14-190.1 to 14-190.8 made material and substantial changes in North Carolina law prohibiting the dissemination of obscenity. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

And Section 14-189.1 Was Not Continued in Effect. — Session Laws 1971, c. 405, which repealed § 14-189.1, did not substantially reenact it, therefore it was not continued in effect. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

There is nothing in Session Laws 1971, c. 405, which repealed § 14-189.1 outright and enacted this section, to indicate an intent to leave the old law unrepealed, or to reaffirm it. On the contrary, the clear implication is that the legislature intended to get rid of a law of dubious constitutionality. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

The changes made in the 1971 Act evidence the legislature's apprehension that § 14-189.1 did not meet the requirements of the federal Constitution. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

The enactment of this section was an obvious attempt to provide a new law which would meet the latest tests enunciated by the United States Supreme Court in order that State law-enforcement officers might proceed with assurance against public dissemination and pandering of obscenity. State v. McCluney, 280 N.C. 404, 185 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

Application of 1973 amendment to defendants arrested prior to the amendment violated neither due process nor the ex post facto doctrine as the materials had to be found obscene under the doctrines of both Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419, rehearing denied, 414 U.S. 881, 94 S. Ct. 26, 38 L. Ed. 2d 128 (1973), which precipitated the 1973 amendment and "John Cleland's Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure" v. Attorney Gen., 383 U.S. 413, 86 S. Ct. 975, 16 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1966), the pre-1973 obscenity test in order to convict. State v. Hart, 287 N.C. 76, 213 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

County or Municipal Ordinance Relating to Obscenity. — Nothing in §§ 14-190.1 to 14-190.9, statewide laws relating to obscene literature and exhibitions and to indecent exposure, expresses or indicates an intent by the General Assembly to preclude cities and towns or counties from enacting and enforcing ordinances requiring a higher standard of conduct or condition within their respective jurisdictions. State v. Tenore, 280 N.C. 238, 185 S.E.2d 644 (1972), wherein the Supreme Court declined to express any opinion as to whether a county or municipal ordinance, otherwise valid, may constitutionally prohibit and make punishable an exhibition or the dissemination of materials found to be "obscene" under the standards of the community in which such ordinance applies, though not "obscene" as judged by the "contemporary national community standards."

This section specifically defines the elements of obscenity. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Effect of U.S. Supreme Court Decisions. — The United States Supreme Court, in the interest of strengthening powers to regulate pornography, did not elect to eliminate constitutionally valid law that would otherwise be available in prosecuting pending obscenity cases. State v. Bryant, 20 N.C. App. 223, 201 S.E.2d 211, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Definitions in U.S. Supreme Court Cases to Be Considered. — In appellate review, the court shall consider both definitions of obscenity in Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419, rehearing denied, 414 U.S. 881, 94 S. Ct. 26, 38 L. Ed. 2d 128 (1973), and "John Cleland's Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure" v. Attorney Gen., 383 U.S. 413, 86 S. Ct. 975, 16 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1966). If the film is not obscene under both of these standards the charges must be dismissed. State v. Bryant, 20 N.C. App. 223, 201 S.E.2d 211, aff'd, State v. McMillan, 10 N.C. App. 734, 180 S.E.2d 35 (1971), cert. denied, State v. Jones, 201 N.C. 424, 160 S.E. 468 (1931).

Construction of Section to Conform to Guidelines Set by U.S. Supreme Court. — The broad terms in which obscene material was defined in subsection (b) of this section before the 1973 amendment fall far short of the United States Supreme Court's requirement that the sexual conduct which may be deemed obscene and patently offensive must be specifically defined. However, in Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L.Ed. 2d 419 (1973), the United States Supreme Court held that where state obscenity statutes as written do not define what sexual conduct may be deemed obscene and patently offensive with sufficient specificity to comply with the guidelines set forth in that case, the state courts should be afforded the opportunity by construction to confine the obscene matter prohibited by their statutes to "hard-core" pornography. Thus this section as it stood before the 1973 amendment would be construed to prohibit as obscene only material consisting of the following: (a) patently offensive representations or descriptions of ultimate sexual acts, normal or perverted, actual or simulated and (b) patently offensive representations or descriptions of masturbation, excretory functions, and lewd exhibition of the genitals. State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

A conviction under this section is rendered constitutionally invalid if the statute is not applied substantially in accordance with the test in Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L.Ed. 2d 419, rehearing denied, 414 U.S. 881, 94 S. Ct. 26, 38 L. Ed. 2d 128 (1973), both as initially formulated and as subsequently construed and explained by the United States Supreme Court. State v. Watson, 88 N.C. App. 624, 364 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 485, 370 S.E.2d 235 (1988).

Subsection (b) of this section requires three factual findings before material can be defined as obscene. First, the jury must find that the material depicts "sexual conduct" in a patently offensive way. This requires a two-part inquiry: (1) Does the material in question contain descriptions or depictions of sexual conduct defined in subsection (c), and if so, then (2) is the sexual conduct depicted or described in a "patently offensive way?" Second, the jury must find that the average person applying contemporary community standards relating to the depiction or description of sexual matters would find that the material taken as a whole appeals to the prurient interest in sex. Third, the jury must find that the material lacks serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value. State v. Anderson, 85 N.C. App. 104, 354 S.E.2d 264 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 322 N.C. 22, 366 S.E.2d 459, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 975, 109 S. Ct. 513, 102 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1988).

This section specifically defines the acts of "sexual conduct" the portrayal of which may be found obscene if otherwise in violation of the statute. State v. Anderson, 322 N.C. 22, 366 S.E.2d 459, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 975, 109 S. Ct. 513, 102 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1988).

Test as to Value. — The test is not whether a material has any value, but whether it has "serious" scientific, artistic, literary or political value. State v. Roland, 88 N.C. App. 19, 362 S.E.2d 800 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 467, 368 S.E.2d 385 (1988).

Application of Statewide Standard Not Required. — Under this section, trial court does not err by failing to charge the jury to apply a "statewide" community standard. State v. Watson, 88 N.C. App. 624, 364 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 485, 370 S.E.2d 235 (1988).

Films which are stark portrayals of sex acts without a suggested theme or purpose other than to portray the acts in the most blatant manner, and which exhibit a morbid interest in nudity and portray sex acts far beyond customary limits of candor in description or representation of such matters, are patently offensive "hard-core" portrayals of sexual conduct proscribed by this section which regulates dissemination of obscene materials in a public place. State v. Bryant, 20 N.C. App. 223, 201 S.E.2d 211, aff'd, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Photographs can be so obscene that the fact is incontrovertible. State v. Horn, 18 N.C. App. 377, 197 S.E.2d 274 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Application of More Stringent Criteria Than Constitutionally Required. — Where there was ample evidence to support the jury finding that films were "utterly without redeeming social value," more stringent criteria than the present test of "lacking serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value," the fact that the prosecution in these cases was required to meet the more difficult test gives these defendants no ground for complaint. State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Although whether material alleged to be obscene is patently offensive may now be determined by "contemporary community standards" rather than by "contemporary national community standards," the fact that the prosecution was required to establish and did establish that films were patently offensive when tested by "contemporary national community standards" affords defendant no ground of complaint, since the prosecution was required to meet a more difficult test. State v. Bryant, 285 N.C. 27, 203 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Positive and Negative Findings Required. — This section, in addition to requiring positive findings on the questions of offensive display of sexual conduct patently offensive to the average person, requires an additional negative finding that the material lacks serious literary, artistic, political, educational or scientific value. State ex rel. Yeager v. Neal, 26 N.C. App. 741, 217 S.E.2d 576 (1975).

What Level of Scienter Must Be Proved. — This section is neither a specific intent statute requiring proof that defendant knew the legal status of the materials he disseminated, nor, on the other hand, does it impose strict liability for disseminating obscenity. Instead, the statute requires just the intermediate level scienter proof: proof that defendant knew the nature and content of the materials purveyed. State v. Smith, 87 N.C. App. 217, 360 S.E.2d 495 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 478, 364 S.E.2d 667 (1988).

Finding of Intent and Guilty Knowledge Required for Conviction. — This section requires a finding of intent and guilty knowledge before a defendant may be convicted for dissemination of obscenity in a public place. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036 (1973).

Under subsection (a) of this section, the prosecutor must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the person charged "intentionally" disseminated obscenity. This standard requires findings of both "intent" and "guilty knowledge." State v. Roland, 88 N.C. App. 19, 362 S.E.2d 800 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 469, 368 S.E.2d 385 (1988).

Guilty knowledge requires not only knowledge of the character or nature of the materials, but also knowledge of their content. State v. Roland, 88 N.C. App. 19, 362 S.E.2d 800 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 469, 368 S.E.2d 385 (1988).

Evidence held sufficient to permit a reasonable inference that defendant had knowledge of the contents of the materials in question. State v. Roland, 88 N.C. App. 19, 362 S.E.2d 800 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 469, 368 S.E.2d 385 (1988).

Evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the state, held to constitute sufficient circumstantial evidence to allow a reasonable inference that defendant store manager knew the character and content of the materials she disseminated. State v. Watson, 88 N.C. App. 624, 364 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 485, 370 S.E.2d 235 (1988).

The State is not required to offer affirmative testimony concerning each of the statutory criteria; the materials themselves are sufficient evidence for a determination of the question of obscenity. State v. Von Wilds, 88 N.C. App. 69, 362 S.E.2d 605 (1987), cert. denied, 322 N.C. 329, 368 S.E.2d 873 (1988). But see State v. Smith, 323 N.C. 439, 373 S.E.2d 435 (1988).

The trial court did not err in failing specifically to define the term "community," or to instruct the jury to reach a consensus as to the geographic bounds of the community standards they were to apply. State v. Mayes, 323 N.C. 159, 371 S.E.2d 476 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1009, 109 S. Ct. 792, 102 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1989).

Availability of Similar Material Not Sufficient to Show Community Acceptance. — Evidence of mere availability of similar materials is not by itself sufficiently probative of community standards to be admissible in the absence of proof that the material enjoys a reasonable degree of community acceptance; therefore, the trial court did not err in refusing to admit into evidence two magazines purchased by a private investigator in a local convenience store for comparison by the jury with the two allegedly obscene magazines which were the subject of the trial. State v. Mayes, 323 N.C. 159, 371 S.E.2d 476 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1009, 109 S. Ct. 792, 102 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1989).

Notice of Nature of Material and Protection Against Exposure to Juveniles. — In dissemination of obscenity case, court properly denied request for an instruction to the jury that if the jury found the defendant provided notice to the public of the nature of the magazines involved in the case, and if they found the defendant provided reasonable protection against the exposure of the magazines to juveniles, then the jury would have to find that the defendant's conduct was protected under the U.S. Const., Amends. I and XIV, and that it would be the duty of the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. State v. Horn, 18 N.C. App. 377, 197 S.E.2d 274 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Possession of Obscenity in Own Home Not Prohibited. — This section does not authorize the issuance of criminal process for mere possession of obscenity in the privacy of one's own home. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Single Sale of Multiple Items Spawns One Indictment. — A single sale of multiple obscene materials in contravention of this section does not spawn multiple indictments. State v. Smith, 323 N.C. 439, 373 S.E.2d 435 (1988).

Despite the number of obscene materials sold at one time, a defendant may not be convicted of more than one offense for each transaction. State v. Johnston, 123 N.C. App. 292, 473 S.E.2d 25 (1996).

The fact that defendant sold two obscene magazines did not transform his crime into a multi-offense situation. State v. Johnston, 123 N.C. App. 292, 473 S.E.2d 25 (1996).

Trial court's exclusion of "comparable materials" offered to show that the materials for which defendant was prosecuted were not patently offensive and did not appeal to a prurient interest in sex was not error where three of the magazines in question were involved in prosecutions in Durham County and thus were of little relevance in establishing the community standard in Catawba County, and where although the fourth magazine was involved in a Catawba County case, in which the person charged was acquitted, there was no evidence that the acquittal was based on a jury finding that the material was not obscene. State v. Watson, 88 N.C. App. 624, 364 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 485, 370 S.E.2d 235 (1988).

Exclusion of Survey Results Upheld. — In a prosecution under this section, the trial court properly excluded the results of a survey amounting to little more than a referendum on the desirability of the U.S. Const., Amend. I and this section, as the issue which the jury was to decide was whether the average adult, applying contemporary community standards, would find that the magazines in question appealed to a prurient interest in sex in a patently offensive manner. State v. Anderson, 322 N.C. 22, 366 S.E.2d 459 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 975, 109 S. Ct. 513, 102 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1988).

In prosecution for dissemination of obscene material, the trial court did not err in excluding certain evidence and expert testimony proffered by the defendant concerning a survey of 400 adults in 41 counties about pornography, where the excluded survey questions had no relevance to what the community considered obscene. State v. Mayes, 323 N.C. 159, 371 S.E.2d 476 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1009, 109 S. Ct. 792, 102 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1989).

The State is not required to offer affirmative testimony concerning each of the statutory criteria; the materials themselves are sufficient evidence for a determination of the question of obscenity. State v. Von Wilds, 88 N.C. App. 69, 362 S.E.2d 605 (1987).

Witness Held Qualified to Testify as an Expert. — Where the expert witness had years of experience in teaching speech communication, including the use of sexually explicit materials, at a state university, he had used magazines of the type at issue here throughout his teaching career to assist students in the understanding and application of the U.S. Const., Amend. I and state law relating to obscenity, and he had made a specific study of the subject, he was qualified to give his expert opinion that the magazines in this case were not patently offensive and did not appeal to the prurient interest in sex. State v. Mayes, 323 N.C. 159, 371 S.E.2d 476 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1009, 109 S. Ct. 792, 102 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1989).

Discretion of Court in Admission of Expert Testimony. — While expert testimony is admissible in obscenity trials, the trial court retains wide discretion in its determination to admit and exclude evidence. State v. Anderson, 85 N.C. App. 104, 354 S.E.2d 264, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 975, 109 S. Ct. 513, 102 L. Ed. 2d 548, rev'd on other grounds, 322 N.C. 22, 366 S.E.2d 459 (1988).

While the trial court erred in refusing to permit the expert witness to testify that he had made a systematic study under accepted methodology of sexually explicit materials with relation to U.S. Const., Amend. I and this section, and that based on this study, he held the opinion that the magazines in this case were not patently offensive and did not appeal to the prurient interest in sex, the error was harmless because another expert witness testified that the magazines were not patently offensive and that they did not appeal to the prurient interest in sex and that they had artistic and scientific value. State v. Mayes, 323 N.C. 159, 371 S.E.2d 476 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1009, 109 S. Ct. 792, 102 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1989).

Exclusion of Expert Testimony Upheld. — Fact that expert "found adult material" at several locations in the county did not provide a sufficient basis to support the admission of his expert testimony concerning whether the average adult in the community would find the materials which defendant was accused of selling to be patently offensive. His study was simply too unfocused and unspecific to provide him with a sufficient basis to give an expert opinion as to whether the average adult applying contemporary community standards would find the magazines at issue to be patently offensive. Thus, the trial court properly exercised its discretion by excluding his expert opinion testimony concerning whether the magazines in question were patently offensive to the average adult, applying contemporary community standards, on the ground that he was no better qualified than the jury to address the question and could not assist the jury. State v. Anderson, 322 N.C. 22, 366 S.E.2d 459, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 975, 109 S. Ct. 513, 102 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1988).

A proper jury charge under this section must direct the jury to (1) determine patent offensiveness, like appeal to prurient interest, by applying community standards, and (2) determine value from each work "taken as a whole," and decide whether a reasonable person would find serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value in the material, taken as a whole. State v. Watson, 88 N.C. App. 624, 364 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 485, 370 S.E.2d 235 (1988).

Jury instruction on the definition of obscenity derived solely from this section is necessarily incomplete and inadequate. State v. Watson, 88 N.C. App. 624, 364 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 485, 370 S.E.2d 235 (1988).

Erroneous Instruction Held Harmless. — In a prosecution under this section, the trial court erred in instructing the jury to assess the materials' value based on their "own views," rather than on a reasonable man test. However, this error would be deemed harmless where the appellate court, having examined the materials, concluded that no rational juror, properly instructed, could find value in them. State v. Roland, 88 N.C. App. 19, 362 S.E.2d 800 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 469, 368 S.E.2d 385 (1988).

Case Properly Submitted to Jury. — Films shown in defendants' place of business which had no plot, no real motive and no objectives other than to appeal to the prurient interest in sex were uncontrovertibly obscene and exhibition of such films was not protected by the U.S. Const., Amends. I and XIV; therefore, the trial court did not err in submitting the case to the jury in an action under this section. State v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 456, 192 S.E.2d 693 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 193 S.E.2d 747, vacated and remanded, 413 U.S. 913, 93 S. Ct. 3065, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1036 (1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 974, 95 S. Ct. 238, 42 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1974).

Conditions of Probation. — Where defendant had been convicted of disseminating obscene materials, trial court did not abuse its discretion when it imposed as a condition of defendant's probation that he refrain from "working in any retail establishment that sells sexually explicit materials." State v. Johnston, 123 N.C. App. 292, 473 S.E.2d 25 (1996).

Applied in State v. Horn, 285 N.C. 82, 203 S.E.2d 36 (1974); State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

§ 14-190.4. Coercing acceptance of obscene articles or publications.

No person, firm or corporation shall, as a condition to any sale, allocation, consignment or delivery for resale of any paper, magazine, book, periodical or publication require that the purchaser or consignee receive for resale any other article, book, or publication which is obscene within the meaning of G.S. 14-190.1; nor shall any person, firm or corporation deny or threaten to deny any franchise or impose or threaten to impose any penalty, financial or otherwise, by reason of the failure or refusal of any person to accept such articles, books, or publications, or by reason of the return thereof. § 14-190.9. Indecent exposure.

(a) Any person who shall willfully expose the private parts of his or her person in any public place and in the presence of any other person or persons, of the opposite sex, or aids or abets in any such act, or who procures another to perform such act; or any person, who as owner, manager, lessee, director, promoter or agent, or in any other capacity knowingly hires, leases or permits the land, building, or premises of which he is owner, lessee or tenant, or over which he has control, to be used for purposes of any such act, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a woman may breast feed in any public or private location where she is otherwise authorized to be, irrespective of whether the nipple of the mother's breast is uncovered during or incidental to the breast feeding.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a local government may regulate the location and operation of sexually oriented businesses. Such local regulation may restrict or prohibit nude, seminude, or topless dancing to the extent consistent with the constitutional protection afforded free speech. (1971, c. 591, s. 1; 1993, c. 301, s. 1; c. 539, s. 124; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1998-46, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

This section is not unconstitutional on its face. State v. King, 20 N.C. App. 505, 201 S.E.2d 724, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Nudity Is Conduct Subject to Regulation. — When nudity is employed as sales promotion in bars and restaurants, nudity is conduct. As conduct, the nudity of employees is as fit a subject for governmental regulation as is the licensing of the liquor dispensaries and the fixing of their closing hours. State v. King, 20 N.C. App. 505, 201 S.E.2d 724, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

This section is separate and apart from the general obscenity statutes. — This section was enacted by passage of Chapter 591 of the 1971 Session Laws, and is separate and apart from those statutes dealing with the dissemination of obscenity (§§ 14-190.1 through 14-190.8), all of which were enacted by passage of Chapter 405 of the 1971 Session Laws. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

This section did not preempt a county ordinance regulating the location of adult and sexually oriented businesses. Onslow County v. Moore, 129 N.C. App. 376, 499 S.E.2d 780 (1998).

Conduct Is Not Required to Be "Obscene" or "Indecent". — This section, like its predecessors, simply declares the act of exposing one's private parts in a public place in the presence of persons of the opposite sex, or permitting or aiding or abetting another in doing so, to be a misdemeanor. The statute does not use the term "obscene" and for that matter does not even require the act of exposing one's private parts in public to be "indecent." State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

And Court Is Not Concerned with Definitions of "Obscene" and "Obscenity". — Since this section does not involve the concept of "obscenity" — the definition of which has given both the federal and State courts so much difficulty — the North Carolina court is not concerned with the many and often conflicting decisions attempting to define "obscene" or "obscenity." State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Taking Part in Immoral Show, etc., Is Covered by Obscenity Statutes. — In 1971, the General Assembly amended the obscenity statutes and the indecent exposure statute. In amending the indecent exposure statute the prohibition against procuring or "taking part in any immoral show, exhibition or performance where indecent, immoral, or lewd dances are conducted in any booth, tent, room or other public or private place to which the public is invited ..." was deleted. This proscription was placed in the obscenity statutes and is covered by § 14-190.1, particularly subdivision (2) of subsection (a) thereof. State v. King, 20 N.C. App. 505, 201 S.E.2d 724, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Viewers of Exposure Need Not Be Unwilling. — There is nothing whatsoever in the present or former indecent exposure statutes that in any way requires the viewers of the exposure of one's private parts to be unwilling observers. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

An open parking lot of a business is a public place. State v. Streath, 73 N.C. App. 546, 327 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 513, 329 S.E.2d 402 (1985).

Creek embankment was a "public place"; although located adjacent to the victims' back yard, it was a place where children played, where anyone could go by walking through the back yard, and where no signs of a "No Trespassing" nature were posted. State v. Fusco, 136 N.C. App. 268, 523 S.E.2d 741 (1999).

Intentional exposure while sitting in an automobile in a public place constitutes exposure in a public place. State v. Streath, 73 N.C. App. 546, 327 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 513, 329 S.E.2d 402 (1985).

Private Parts. — "Private parts" include the external organs of sex and excretion. State v. Fly, 348 N.C. 556, 501 S.E.2d 656 (1998).

Buttocks Not Private Parts. — Buttocks are not private parts within the meaning of this section. State v. Fly, 348 N.C. 556, 501 S.E.2d 656 (1998).

"Mooning." — Evidence was sufficient to support a conviction under this section, where, as the defendant "mooned" the victim, he was bent over at the waist with his short pants at his ankles and with no other clothing on except a baseball cap, so that, even if the defendant did not see any of the defendant's private parts, the jury could nonetheless find that they were exposed. State v. Fly, 348 N.C. 556, 501 S.E.2d 656 (1998).

Victim testimony is not necessary to substantiate the charge of indecent exposure where other testimony established that defendant was exposing himself and that a female was present and could have seen had she looked. State v. Fusco, 136 N.C. App. 268, 523 S.E.2d 741 (1999).

Defendant's placing of the witness' hand on his bare private parts, whether seen or not, necessarily involves exposure. State v. Streath, 73 N.C. App. 546, 327 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 513, 329 S.E.2d 402 (1985).

Warrant Must Allege Exposure in Presence of Person of Opposite Sex. — When one of the essential elements of the offense created by this section is that the exposure of the private parts be "in the presence of any other person or persons, of the opposite sex," and the warrants fail to so charge, such omission is fatal, and the warrants must be quashed. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Aiding and Abetting. — Both former § 14-190 and this section clearly and expressly proscribe the conduct for which defendant was arrested, namely, aiding or abetting other persons in willfully exposing their private parts in the presence of other persons of the opposite sex and in a public place. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Where four females willfully exhibited their private parts to an audience of some seventy-five males in a public place, and defendant aided and abetted in such exposure, such conduct constituted a misdemeanor under this section. State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Inclusion of a sentence focusing on viewability as part of the court's overall instruction on the meaning of "public place" was not error. State v. Fusco, 136 N.C. App. 268, 523 S.E.2d 741 (1999).

§ 14-190.13. Definitions for certain offenses concerning minors.

The following definitions apply to G.S. 14-190.14, displaying material harmful to minors; G.S. 14-190.15, disseminating or exhibiting to minors harmful material or performances; G.S. 14-190.16, first degree sexual exploitation of a minor; G.S. 14-190.17, second degree sexual exploitation of a minor; G.S. 14-190.17A, third degree sexual exploitation of a minor; G.S. 14-190.18, promoting prostitution of a minor; and G.S. 14-190.19, participating in prostitution of a minor.

(1) Harmful to Minors. — That quality of any material or performance that depicts sexually explicit nudity or sexual activity and that, taken as a whole, has the following characteristics:

a. The average adult person applying contemporary community standards would find that the material or performance has a predominant tendency to appeal to a prurient interest of minors in sex; and

b. The average adult person applying contemporary community standards would find that the depiction of sexually explicit nudity or sexual activity in the material or performance is patently offensive to prevailing standards in the adult community concerning what is suitable for minors; and

c. The material or performance lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value for minors.

(2) Material. — Pictures, drawings, video recordings, films or other visual depictions or representations but not material consisting entirely of written words.

(3) Minor. — An individual who is less than 18 years old and is not married or judicially emancipated.

(4) Prostitution. — Engaging or offering to engage in sexual activity with or for another in exchange for anything of value.

(5) Sexual Activity. — Any of the following acts:

a. Masturbation, whether done alone or with another human or an animal.

b. Vaginal, anal, or oral intercourse, whether done with another human or with an animal.

c. Touching, in an act of apparent sexual stimulation or sexual abuse, of the clothed or unclothed genitals, pubic area, or buttocks of another person or the clothed or unclothed breasts of a human female.

d. An act or condition that depicts torture, physical restraint by being fettered or bound, or flagellation of or by a person clad in undergarments or in revealing or bizarre costume.

b. Covered human male genitals in a discernibly turgid state. (1985, c. 703, s. 9; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1022, s. 2; 1993, c. 301, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The federal district court would abstain from determining the constitutionality of North Carolina House Bill No. 1171 (Session Laws 1985, c. 703), enacted in 1985, which added this section, until the parties could obtain a resolution of this issue in the North Carolina General Courts of Justice. Floyd v. Thornburg, 619 F. Supp. 756 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

Section 14-190.17 and this section are not unconstitutionally vague and provide fair notice of their prohibitions. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Subdivision (5)c of this section is not substantially overbroad and comports with the requirement stated in New York v. Ferber, 458 U.S. 747, 102 S.Ct. 3348, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1113 (1982), that there must be limits placed on the category of sexual conduct. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

This section and §§ 14-190.1, 14-190.16, and 14-190.17 are constitutional as drawn; while potentially beyond constitutional bounds if improperly applied, these statutes are not so substantially overbroad as to require constitutional invalidation on their face. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effective Date. — The portion of 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1022 which provided that c. 1022 is effective October 1, 1989, is unconstitutional and cannot be enforced. That defect, however, does not render the act unconstitutional. The effect is to make the act effective the day it was passed (July 27, 1990). See opinion of the Attorney General to Senator Connie Wilson, North Carolina General Assembly, 60 N.C.A.G. 34 (1990).

§ 14-190.14. Displaying material harmful to minors.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of displaying material that is harmful to minors if, having custody, control, or supervision of a commercial establishment and knowing the character or content of the material, he displays material that is harmful to minors at that establishment so that it is open to view by minors as part of the invited general public. Material is not considered displayed under this section if the material is placed behind "blinder racks" that cover the lower two thirds of the material, is wrapped, is placed behind the counter, or is otherwise covered or located so that the portion that is harmful to minors is not open to the view of minors.

(b) Punishment. — Violation of this section is a Class 2 misdemeanor. Each day's violation of this section is a separate offense. (1985, c. 703, s. 9; 1993, c. 539, s. 125; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Floyd v. Thornburg, 619 F. Supp. 756 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

§ 14-190.15. Disseminating harmful material to minors; exhibiting harmful performances to minors.

(a) Disseminating Harmful Material. — A person commits the offense of disseminating harmful material to minors if, with or without consideration and knowing the character or content of the material, he:

(1) Sells, furnishes, presents, or distributes to a minor material that is harmful to minors; or

(2) Allows a minor to review or peruse material that is harmful to minors.

(b) Exhibiting Harmful Performance. — A person commits the offense of exhibiting a harmful performance to a minor if, with or without consideration and knowing the character or content of the performance, he allows a minor to view a live performance that is harmful to minors.

(c) Defenses. — Except as provided in subdivision (3), a mistake of age is not a defense to a prosecution under this section. It is an affirmative defense to a prosecution under this section that:

(1) The defendant was a parent or legal guardian of the minor.

(2) The defendant was a school, church, museum, public library, governmental agency, medical clinic, or hospital carrying out its legitimate function; or an employee or agent of such an organization acting in that capacity and carrying out a legitimate duty of his employment.

(3) Before disseminating or exhibiting the harmful material or performance, the defendant requested and received a driver's license, student identification card, or other official governmental or educational identification card or paper indicating that the minor to whom the material or performance was disseminated or exhibited was at least 18 years old, and the defendant reasonably believed the minor was at least 18 years old.

(4) The dissemination was made with the prior consent of a parent or guardian of the recipient.

(d) Punishment. — Violation of this section is a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1985, c. 703, s. 9; 1993, c. 539, s. 126; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Floyd v. Thornburg, 619 F. Supp. 756 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

§ 14-190.16. First degree sexual exploitation of a minor.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of first degree sexual exploitation of a minor if, knowing the character or content of the material or performance, he:

(1) Uses, employs, induces, coerces, encourages, or facilitates a minor to engage in or assist others to engage in sexual activity for a live performance or for the purpose of producing material that contains a visual representation depicting this activity; or

(2) Permits a minor under his custody or control to engage in sexual activity for a live performance or for the purpose of producing material that contains a visual representation depicting this activity; or

(3) Transports or finances the transportation of a minor through or across this State with the intent that the minor engage in sexual activity for a live performance or for the purpose of producing material that contains a visual representation depicting this activity; or

(4) Records, photographs, films, develops, or duplicates for sale or pecuniary gain material that contains a visual representation depicting a minor engaged in sexual activity.

(b) Inference. — In a prosecution under this section, the trier of fact may infer that a participant in sexual activity whom material through its title, text, visual representations, or otherwise represents or depicts as a minor is a minor.

(c) Mistake of Age. — Mistake of age is not a defense to a prosecution under this section.

(d) Punishment and Sentencing. — Violation of this section is a Class D felony. (1985, c. 703, s. 9; 1993, c. 539, s. 1196; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1995, c. 507, s. 19.5(o).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The federal district court would abstain from determining the constitutionality of North Carolina House Bill No. 1171 (Session Laws 1985, c. 703), enacted in 1985, which added this section, until the parties could obtain a resolution of this issue in the North Carolina General Courts of Justice. Floyd v. Thornburg, 619 F. Supp. 756 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

This section and §§ 14-190.1, 14-190.13 and 14-190.17 are constitutional as drawn; while potentially beyond constitutional bounds if improperly applied, these statutes are not so substantially overbroad as to require constitutional invalidation on their face. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

The State has an interest of surpassing importance in the health, safety and welfare of minors; this section and § 14-190.17 are sufficiently narrowly tailored toward said interests and require the exploitation of a live minor to sustain convictions thereunder. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Prior Restraints. — The proscriptions contained in this section and § 14-190.17 do not constitute prior restraints. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

There is a scienter requirement in this section and § 14-190.17. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Visual Representation. — When this section and § 14-190.17 refer to a visual representation of a minor, they are referring to a representation of a live person under 18 years of age. Cinema I Video, Inc. v. Thornburg, 83 N.C. App. 544, 351 S.E.2d 305 (1986), aff'd, 320 N.C. 485, 358 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

§ 14-190.17. Second degree sexual exploitation of a minor.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of second degree sexual exploitation of a minor if, knowing the character or content of the material, he:

(1) Records, photographs, films, develops, or duplicates material that contains a visual representation of a minor engaged in sexual activity; or

(2) Distributes, transports, exhibits, receives, sells, purchases, exchanges, or solicits material that contains a visual representation of a minor engaged in sexual activity.

(b) Inference. — In a prosecution under this section, the trier of fact may infer that a participant in sexual activity whom material through its title, text, visual representations or otherwise represents or depicts as a minor is a minor.

(c) Mistake of Age. — Mistake of age is not a defense to a prosecution under this section.

§ 14-190.18. Promoting prostitution of a minor.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of promoting prostitution of a minor if he knowingly:

(1) Entices, forces, encourages, or otherwise facilitates a minor to participate in prostitution; or

(2) Supervises, supports, advises, or protects the prostitution of or by a minor.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The federal district court would abstain from determining the constitutionality of North Carolina House Bill No. 1171 (Session Laws 1985, c. 703), enacted in 1985, which added this section, until the parties could obtain a resolution of this issue in the North Carolina General Courts of Justice. Floyd v. Thornburg, 619 F. Supp. 756 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

The purpose of this section is the protection of minors, and violation of the statute occurs when a party knowingly entices, forces, encourages, or otherwise facilitates a minor to engage in acts of prostitution. State v. Morris, 87 N.C. App. 499, 361 S.E.2d 414 (1987).

It is the attempt to corrupt a minor with which this statute is concerned, and it never states or implies that actual acts of prostitution must be committed by the minor. State v. Morris, 87 N.C. App. 499, 361 S.E.2d 414 (1987).

§ 14-190.19. Participating in prostitution of a minor.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of participating in the prostitution of a minor if he is not a minor and he patronizes a minor prostitute. As used in this section, "patronizing a minor prostitute" means:

(1) Soliciting or requesting a minor to participate in prostitution;

(2) Paying or agreeing to pay a minor, either directly or through the minor's agent, to participate in prostitution; or

(3) Paying a minor, or the minor's agent, for having participated in prostitution, pursuant to a prior agreement.

(b) Mistake of Age. — Mistake of age is not a defense to a prosecution under this section.

(c) Punishment and Sentencing. — Violation of this section is a Class F felony. (1985, c. 703, s. 9; 1993, c. 539, s. 1200; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-190.20. Warrants for obscenity offenses.

A search warrant or criminal process for a violation of G.S. 14-190.1 through 14-190.5 may be issued only upon the request of a prosecutor. (1985, c. 703, s. 9.1.)

§ 14-196. Using profane, indecent or threatening language to any person over telephone; annoying or harassing by repeated telephoning or making false statements over telephone.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person:

(1) To use in telephonic communications any words or language of a profane, vulgar, lewd, lascivious or indecent character, nature or connotation;

(2) To use in telephonic communications any words or language threatening to inflict bodily harm to any person or to that person's child, sibling, spouse, or dependent or physical injury to the property of any person, or for the purpose of extorting money or other things of value from any person;

(3) To telephone another repeatedly, whether or not conversation ensues, for the purpose of abusing, annoying, threatening, terrifying, harassing or embarrassing any person at the called number;

(4) To make a telephone call and fail to hang up or disengage the connection with the intent to disrupt the service of another;

(5) To telephone another and to knowingly make any false statement concerning death, injury, illness, disfigurement, indecent conduct or criminal conduct of the person telephoned or of any member of his family or household with the intent to abuse, annoy, threaten, terrify, harass, or embarrass;

(6) To knowingly permit any telephone under his control to be used for any purpose prohibited by this section.

(b) Any of the above offenses may be deemed to have been committed at either the place at which the telephone call or calls were made or at the place where the telephone call or calls were received. For purposes of this section, the term "telephonic communications" shall include communications made or received by way of a telephone answering machine or recorder, telefacsimile machine, or computer modem.

(c) Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1913, c. 35; 1915, c. 41; C.S., s. 4351; 1967, c. 833, s. 1; 1989, c. 305; 1993, c. 539, s. 128; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1999-262, s. 1; 2000-125, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-125, s. 2, effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, deleted "or electronic mail" following "To use in telephonic" in subdivision (a)(2).

For note on intentional infliction of emotional distress, see 18 Wake Forest L. Rev. 624 (1982).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Subdivision (a)(1) of this section is unconstitutionally overbroad. Radford v. Webb, 446 F. Supp. 608 (W.D.N.C. 1978), aff'd, 596 F.2d 1205 (4th Cir. 1979). But see In re Simmons, 24 N.C. App. 28, 210 S.E.2d 84 (1974).

Use of one's telephone clearly involves substantial privacy interests which the State may recognize and protect. Subdivision (a)(1) seeks to protect that interest from an invasion made in an essentially intolerable manner, and the means chosen by the legislature were both appropriate and sufficiently narrowed to achieving the legitimate ends sought to be attained. In re Simmons, 24 N.C. App. 28, 210 S.E.2d 84 (1974). But see Radford v. Webb, 446 F. Supp. 608 (W.D.N.C. 1978), aff'd, 596 F.2d 1205 (4th Cir. 1979).

Because subdivision (a)(3) of this section prohibits conduct rather than speech, it survives constitutional challenge. Statutes prohibiting annoying telephoning were directed at the conduct of using telephones to annoy, offend, terrify or harass others and not directed at prohibiting the communication of thoughts or ideas. State v. Camp, 59 N.C. App. 38, 295 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 216 (1982).

Subdivision (a)(3) of this section is not unconstitutionally vague, because the statute adequately warns of the activity it prohibits. State v. Camp, 59 N.C. App. 38, 295 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 216 (1982).

Essential elements of a violation of subdivision (a)(3) of this section are (1) repeatedly telephoning another person, (2) with the intent or purpose of abusing, annoying, threatening, terrifying, harassing or embarrassing any person at the called number. State v. Camp, 59 N.C. App. 38, 295 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 216 (1982); State v. Boone, 79 N.C. App. 746, 340 S.E.2d 527 (1986).

Subdivision (a)(3) of this section does not require more than one call per day. State v. Boone, 79 N.C. App. 746, 340 S.E.2d 527 (1986).

The term "repeatedly" does not ordinarily connote a recurrence within a 24-hour period. State v. Boone, 79 N.C. App. 746, 340 S.E.2d 527 (1986).

There was no fatal variance between warrant charging repeated calls to victim on or about March 29, 1984, and on or about April 5, 1984, and evidence indicating that defendant made more than one call to victim's apartment on these dates, even though victim did not answer more than one call each date. State v. Boone, 79 N.C. App. 746, 340 S.E.2d 527 (1986).

"Another" does not refer only to "another person." A sheriff's department is a person under subdivision (a)(3) of this section. The fact that defendant called more than one employee does not make the statute inapplicable, because § 12-3(1) provides that "Every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons or things, as well as to one person or thing." State v. Camp, 59 N.C. App. 38, 295 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 216 (1982).

Consent by the victim is not an essential element bearing on the offense. State v. Coleman, 270 N.C. 357, 154 S.E.2d 485 (1967), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Threat to take one's life or to beat one falls within this section's proscription against using language in telephone communications threatening to inflict bodily harm. State v. Jacobs, 25 N.C. App. 500, 214 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 666, 216 S.E.2d 909 (1975).

Failure of Court to Define "Annoy" and "Harass". — See State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Tape recordings allegedly containing telephone conversations by the defendant with the prosecuting witness made by a recorder attached to the witness's telephone are not incompetent in prosecuting for annoying a female by repeated telephoning because they violate the North Carolina Wiretapping Statute (§ 14-155) and also § 14-372 and former § 15-27. These statutes were not enacted to prevent introduction of evidence obtained in such a case and are not relevant in such prosecution. State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

The State laid the requisite foundation for the admissibility of tape recordings allegedly containing telephone conversations by the defendant with the prosecuting witness where the witness identified them as being the voice of the defendant, and stated that they were a fair and accurate representation of the conversations she had with the defendant. State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Evidence of Intent. — It is competent for the purpose of showing the intent of the defendant and her attitude toward the prosecuting witness for the court to permit the witness to testify that the defendant had attempted to block her car in the parking lot of the supermarket, that she had frequently followed her to such places as the hospital, school, etc., and would cut her car in front of the witness's at least once a week, and sometimes more than that. Her conduct in blocking the witness's car and cutting in front of it showed the defendant's intent to harass, annoy, and molest her and is competent as interpreting the reasons for her frequent telephone calls which were alleged to be for the same purpose. State v. Godwin, 267 N.C. 216, 147 S.E.2d 890 (1966), decided under former § 14-196.1.

Evidence of Contents of Calls Admissible. — In a prosecution charging defendant with making harassing, embarrassing and annoying telephone calls in violation of subdivision (a)(3) of this section, the actual contents of the statements attributed to defendant were relevant to show whether the intent of the telephone calls was to abuse, annoy, threaten, terrify, harass or embarrass the victims of the calls, and the trial court did not err in allowing witnesses to testify about the actual contents of the calls. State v. Boone, 79 N.C. App. 746, 340 S.E.2d 527 (1986).

Entrapment Not Shown. — Where police placed a want ad in the newspapers similar to ads which had been placed by women who subsequently received obscene telephone calls, and used an electronic device to identify the telephone number of the caller, they merely set a trap to catch defendant in the execution of a crime which had its genesis in his own mind, and the defense of entrapment was not available to him in a prosecution for violating former § 14-196.1. State v. Coleman, 270 N.C. 357, 154 S.E.2d 485 (1967).

Where, despite warnings, defendant continued telephoning the sheriff's department, threatening to shoot the blue lights off of patrol cars, calling the deputies and sheriff names, and using curse words, etc., these calls were not protected speech. The content and number of telephone calls defendant placed supported the conclusion that defendant intended to annoy, harass, and threaten employees of the sheriff's department. This conduct was not constitutionally protected. State v. Camp, 59 N.C. App. 38, 295 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 216 (1982).

Right to Counsel. — A warrant charging a violation of this section charges a serious offense, entitling defendant to the assistance of legal counsel. State v. Best, 5 N.C. App. 379, 168 S.E.2d 433 (1969).

§§ 14-196.1, 14-196.2: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 833, s. 3.

§ 14-196.3. Cyberstalking.

(a) The following definitions apply in this section:

(1) Electronic communication. — Any transfer of signs, signals, writing, images, sounds, data, or intelligence of any nature, transmitted in whole or in part by a wire, radio, computer, electromagnetic, photoelectric, or photo-optical system.

(2) Electronic mail. — The transmission of information or communication by the use of the Internet, a computer, a facsimile machine, a pager, a cellular telephone, a video recorder, or other electronic means sent to a person identified by a unique address or address number and received by that person.

(b) It is unlawful for a person to:

(1) Use in electronic mail or electronic communication any words or language threatening to inflict bodily harm to any person or to that person's child, sibling, spouse, or dependent, or physical injury to the property of any person, or for the purpose of extorting money or other things of value from any person.

(2) Electronically mail or electronically communicate to another repeatedly, whether or not conversation ensues, for the purpose of abusing, annoying, threatening, terrifying, harassing, or embarrassing any person.

(3) Electronically mail or electronically communicate to another and to knowingly make any false statement concerning death, injury, illness, disfigurement, indecent conduct, or criminal conduct of the person electronically mailed or of any member of the person's family or household with the intent to abuse, annoy, threaten, terrify, harass, or embarrass.

(4) Knowingly permit an electronic communication device under the person's control to be used for any purpose prohibited by this section.

(c) Any offense under this section committed by the use of electronic mail or electronic communication may be deemed to have been committed where the electronic mail or electronic communication was originally sent, originally received in this State, or first viewed by any person in this State.

(d) Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(e) This section does not apply to any peaceable, nonviolent, or nonthreatening activity intended to express political views or to provide lawful information to others. This section shall not be construed to impair any constitutionally protected activity, including speech, protest, or assembly. (2000-125, s. 1; 2000-140, s. 91.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2000-125, s. 10, as amended by Session Laws 2000-140, s. 91, makes the section effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date. As enacted by Session Laws 2000-125, the section was assigned to Article 35 of Chapter 14; Session Laws 2000-140 assigned the section to Article 26.

§ 14-197. Using profane or indecent language on public highways; counties exempt.

If any person shall, on any public road or highway and in the hearing of two or more persons, in a loud and boisterous manner, use indecent or profane language, he shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. The following counties shall be exempt from the provisions of this section: Pitt and Swain. (1913, c. 40; C.S., s. 4352; Pub. Loc. Ex. Sess., 1924, c. 65; 1933, c. 309; 1937, c. 9; 1939, c. 73; 1945, c. 398; 1947, cc. 144, 959; 1949, c. 845; 1957, c. 348; 1959, c. 733; 1963, cc. 39, 123; 1969, c. 300; 1971, c. 718; 1973, cc. 120, 233; 1993, c. 539, s. 129; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Sufficiency of Warrant or Indictment. — A bill of indictment charging that defendant "unlawfully and willfully did appear in a public place in a rude and disorderly manner and did use profane and indecent language in the presence of two or more persons" was insufficient to charge a violation of this section in failing to charge that the indecent or profane language was spoken on a public road or highway and in a loud and boisterous manner. State v. Smith, 262 N.C. 472, 137 S.E.2d 819 (1964).

A warrant charging that defendant unlawfully and willfully violated the laws of North Carolina "by disorderly conduct by using profane and indecent language" was insufficient to charge the statutory crime proscribed by this section, since it failed to charge that defendant used the profane language (1) on a public road or highway, (2) in the hearing of two or more persons, or (3) in a loud and boisterous manner. State v. Thorne, 238 N.C. 392, 78 S.E.2d 140 (1953).

§ 14-199. Obstructing way to places of public worship.

If any person shall maliciously stop up or obstruct the way leading to any place of public worship, or to any spring or well commonly used by the congregation, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1785, c. 241, P.R.; R.C., c. 97, s. 5; Code, s. 3669; Rev., s. 3776; C.S., s. 4354; 1945, c. 635; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 130; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-202. Secretly peeping into room occupied by female person.

Any person who shall peep secretly into any room occupied by a female person shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1923, c. 78; C.S., s. 4356(a); 1957, c. 338; 1993, c. 539, s. 131; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is sufficiently narrowed by judicial interpretation to require that the act condemned must be a spying for the wrongful purpose of invading the privacy of the female occupant of the room, thereby omitting from its scope those persons who have a legitimate purpose upon another's property and those who only inadvertently glance in the window of another. Thus, the statute is not so overbroad as to proscribe legitimate conduct. Therefore, this section is not unconstitutional for overbreadth. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

This section is sufficiently definite to give an individual fair notice of the conduct prohibited, and to guide a judge in its application and a lawyer in defending one charged with its violation, and therefore, this statute violates neither N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, nor the Due Process Clause of the Federal Constitution by reason of vagueness and uncertainty. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

This section prohibits the wrongful spying into a room upon a female with the intent of violating the female's legitimate expectation of privacy. This is sufficient to inform a person of ordinary intelligence, with reasonable precision, of those acts the statute intends to prohibit, so that he may know what acts he should avoid in order that he may not bring himself within its provisions. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

This section apparently was derived from the common-law crimes of common nuisance and eavesdropping. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

"Peep". — The word "peep" means to look cautiously or slyly — as if through a crevice — out from chinks and knotholes. State v. Bivins, 262 N.C. 93, 136 S.E.2d 250 (1964).

The word "secretly" as used in this section conveys the definite idea of spying upon another with the intention of invading her privacy. In re Banks, 295 N.C. 236, 244 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

Length of Blind Irrelevant. — The fact that a venetian blind lacks some six to ten inches of reaching the windowsill is entirely irrelevant in a prosecution of defendant for peeping into a room occupied by a female. State v. Bivins, 262 N.C. 93, 136 S.E.2d 250 (1964).

Defendant is entitled to know identity of female person whose privacy he is charged with having invaded. State v. Banks, 263 N.C. 784, 140 S.E.2d 318 (1965).

Warrant was defective where it failed to name the victim of the peeping misdemeanant, and could not be cured by a bill of particulars supplying the name. State v. Banks, 263 N.C. 784, 140 S.E.2d 318 (1965).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence in prosecution of defendant for peeping secretly into a room occupied by a woman was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury where a witness for the State testified that the room was usually occupied by a woman and he saw someone in the room immediately after defendant left the window. State v. Peterson, 232 N.C. 332, 59 S.E.2d 635 (1950).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — Evidence tending to show that shoe prints were found six or eight feet from the window of a house in which a woman lived alone, that shoe prints were also found in the edge of a field nearby, and that bloodhounds were put on the trail at the edge of the field and followed the scent to defendant's house, without evidence as to when or by whom the tracks were made, was insufficient evidence of the corpus delicti, aliunde the confession of the defendant, to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution under this section. State v. Bass, 253 N.C. 318, 116 S.E.2d 772 (1960).

§ 14-202.1. Taking indecent liberties with children.

(a) A person is guilty of taking indecent liberties with children if, being 16 years of age or more and at least five years older than the child in question, he either:

(1) Willfully takes or attempts to take any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex under the age of 16 years for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire; or

(2) Willfully commits or attempts to commit any lewd or lascivious act upon or with the body or any part or member of the body of any child of either sex under the age of 16 years.

(b) Taking indecent liberties with children is punishable as a Class F felony. (1955, c. 764; 1975, c. 779; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1201; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Elements and Proof of Offense.
III. Evidence.
IV. Instructions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — The use of language such as "immoral, improper, indecent liberties" and "lewd or lascivious act" in this section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Vehaun, 34 N.C. App. 700, 239 S.E.2d 705 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 846 (1978).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Maxwell, 47 N.C. App. 658, 267 S.E.2d 582, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 102, 273 S.E.2d 307 (1980).

This section is not unconstitutionally void for vagueness since it clearly prohibits sexual conduct with a minor child and describes with reasonable specificity the proscribed conduct. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981); State v. Strickland, 77 N.C. App. 454, 335 S.E.2d 74 (1985).

This section does not violate equal protection in requiring a five-year difference between the age of the defendant, who cannot himself be under 16, and the age of the victim, who must be under age 16, since the age classifications within the statute are reasonably related to the purpose of the statute, i.e., the protection of children from the sexual advances of adults. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

This statute sufficiently appraises defendants of prohibited conduct and is not void for vagueness. State v. Blackmon, 130 N.C. App.

692, 507 S.E.2d 42 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 531, 526 S.E.2d 470 (1998).

The term "with" contained in this section was not unconstitutionally vague as applied to defendant who exposed himself from behind a sliding glass door to children some 35 feet away. State v. Nesbitt, 133 N.C. App. 420, 515 S.E.2d 503 (1999).

This statute was not unconstitutionally vague as applied to defendant/father. State v. Youngs, 141 N.C. App. 220, 540 S.E.2d 794 (2000).

Standing to Challenge Section. — Defendant held to lack standing to challenge constitutionality of section on equal protection grounds. See State v. Vehaun, 34 N.C. App. 700, 239 S.E.2d 705 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 846 (1978).

Defendant had no standing to attack this section on the ground that it was unconstitutionally overbroad in that it proscribes innocent displays of affection in violation of the U.S. Const., Amend. I since the statute had never been so interpreted and was not so applied against defendant, and defendant had no U.S. Const., Amend. I right to express himself through unlawful actions. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

This section and § 14-177 are complementary rather than repugnant or inconsistent. State v. Lance, 244 N.C. 455, 94 S.E.2d 335 (1956); State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965); State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969).

Section 14-177 and this section can be reconciled and both declared to be operative without repugnance. State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969); State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

There was no merit to defendant's contention that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to try him under the indecent liberties with children statute, this section, because the criminal act he committed was a crime against nature prohibited by § 14-177, since the crime against nature statute and the indecent liberties with children statute are complementary but not mutually exclusive. State v. Elam, 302 N.C. 157, 273 S.E.2d 661 (1981).

And this section supplements § 14-177. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961).

There was no legislative intent in enacting this section to repeal § 14-177 in any aspect; the intent was to supplement it and to give even broader protection to children. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

This Section and § 14-177 Distinguished. — This section condemns those offenses of an unnatural sexual nature against children under 16 years of age by persons over 16 years of age which cannot be reached and punished under the provisions of § 14-177. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

Section 14-177 condemns crimes against nature whether committed against adults or children. This section condemns those offenses of an unnatural sexual nature against children under 16 years of age by persons over 16 years of age which cannot be reached and punished under the provisions of § 14-177. This section, of course, condemns other acts against children than unnatural sexual acts. State v. Chance, 3 N.C. App. 459, 165 S.E.2d 31 (1969).

Section 14-177 condemns crimes against nature whether committed against adults or children while this section condemns other acts against children than unnatural sexual acts and condemns those offenses of an unnatural sexual nature against children under 16 years of age by persons over 16 years of age which cannot be reached and punished under the provisions of § 14-177. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

This Statute Held Not to Punish Only Unnatural Acts. — The indecent liberties statute is not intended to punish only acts which, if committed by and against adults, would be inherently "unnatural", such as crimes against nature and incest. State v. Banks, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 398 (1988).

Indictments with Dates Different from Those of Arrest Warrants Held Not Prejudicial to Defendant. — Trial court committed no error, plain or otherwise, with respect to defendant not having been served with bills of indictment or with respect to the State offering evidence that the offenses occurred on dates different from those alleged in the arrest warrants, where defendant was represented by counsel of record on the date of the return of the true bills of indictment, where he and his counsel waived formal arraignment, at which they would have been informed of the allegations contained in the bills of indictment, where defendant presented evidence that he was never alone with victim during any of the times during which the State's evidence showed the offenses occurred, and where he did not rely solely upon alibi but also presented evidence through his own testimony and the testimony of others directly contradicting victim's account of the incidents. State v. Hutchings, 139 N.C. App. 184, 533 S.E.2d 258 (2000).

Neither the indictments nor the jury verdicts returned thereon were required to specify the acts which constituted the indecent liberties for which the defendant was convicted. State v. Miller, 137 N.C. App. 450, 528 S.E.2d 626 (2000).

The indictments against the defendant for first-degree sexual offense and for indecent liberties with a child were upheld in spite of his allegations that they were defective as a matter of law in not setting out each element of the offenses. State v. Youngs, 141 N.C. App. 220, 540 S.E.2d 794 (2000).

Crime against nature and taking indecent liberties with a child are separate and distinct offenses. State v. Hoover, 89 N.C. App. 199, 365 S.E.2d 920, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 177, 373 S.E.2d 118 (1988).

Elements of This Section and § 14-27.4 Are Different. — Imposition of sentences for first-degree sexual offenses as well as offenses of taking of indecent liberties with a child, based on the same acts, did not constitute double jeopardy, as the elements of the two crimes are different. State v. Swann, 322 N.C. 666, 370 S.E.2d 533 (1988).

The definitional elements of first-degree sex offense and indecent liberties are different; therefore, defendant's conviction of first-degree sex offense and indecent liberties did not contravene his constitutional protection against double jeopardy. State v. Manley, 95 N.C. App. 213, 381 S.E.2d 900, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 712, 388 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

Assault Is Not Lesser Included Offense. — Since assault is not an essential element of taking indecent liberties with a child, the crime of assault on a child under the age of 12 years cannot be a lesser included offense of taking indecent liberties with a child. State v. Holman, 94 N.C. App. 361, 380 S.E.2d 128 (1989).

Assault on a Female Not a Lesser Included Offense. — Assault on a female is not a lesser included offense of taking indecent liberties with a child because assault on a female contains elements not present in the greater offense. State v. Love, 127 N.C. App. 437, 490 S.E.2d 249 (1997).

It is not double jeopardy for a defendant to be punished for convictions of rape, incest, and taking indecent liberties with a minor when all the convictions were based on one incident. State v. Fletcher, 322 N.C. 415, 368 S.E.2d 633 (1988).

Consolidation of Separately Occurring Offenses Held Not Error. — Consolidation of two counts of first-degree sexual offense and two counts of taking indecent liberties with a child, which allegedly occurred one week apart did not constitute error. State v. Swann, 322 N.C. 666, 370 S.E.2d 533 (1988).

Violation of This Section Is Not a Lesser Included Offense Under § 14-177. — Because the two offenses are separate and distinct and the constituent elements are not identical, a violation of this section is not a lesser included offense of the crime against nature described in § 14-177. State v. Copeland, 11 N.C. App. 516, 181 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971).

Nor a Lesser Included Offense of Statutory Rape. — The offense of taking indecent liberties with a child under this section is not a lesser included offense of statutory rape under § 14-27.2(a)(1), because the age elements are different, and, while sexual purpose may be inherent in an act of forcible vaginal intercourse, it is not required to be proved in order to convict a defendant of rape. State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982), overruling State v. Shaw, 293 N.C. 616, 239 S.E.2d 439 (1977); State v. Allen, 92 N.C. App. 168, 374 S.E.2d 119 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 544, 380 S.E.2d 772 (1989).

Convictions of Both Rape and Indecent Liberties Permissible. — Vaginal intercourse is not an element of taking indecent liberties with a minor, and committing the act for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire is not an element of rape. Thus defendant was not placed in double jeopardy by being convicted of both crimes. State v. Rhodes, 321 N.C. 102, 361 S.E.2d 578 (1987).

Violation of This Section Is Not a Lesser Included Offense of First Degree Sexual Offense. — In a prosecution of defendant under § 14-27.4(a) for engaging in a sexual act with children under 12 years, the trial court did not err in failing to instruct on taking indecent liberties with children in violation of this section, since taking indecent liberties with children is not a lesser included offense of the crime proscribed by § 14-27.4(a). State v. Williams, 303 N.C. 507, 279 S.E.2d 592 (1981).

The purpose of this section is to give broader protection to children than the prior laws provided. State v. Turman, 52 N.C. App. 376, 278 S.E.2d 574 (1981).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — Indictments for taking indecent liberties held to clearly inform defendant of the conduct which was the subject of the accusations as required by § 15A-924(a)(5), and therefore sufficiently charged the offense, and did not need to specify the exact act which constituted the "immoral, improper and indecent liberty." State v. Singleton, 85 N.C. App. 123, 354 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 516, 358 S.E.2d 530 (1987); State v. Fultz, 92 N.C. App. 80, 373 S.E.2d 445 (1988).

Abuse of Trust as Aggravating Factor. — Where defendant was convicted of taking indecent liberties with his stepson and stepson's overnight guest, court properly found as an aggravating factor that he abused a position of trust and confidence to commit the offense. State v. Caldwell, 85 N.C. App. 713, 355 S.E.2d 813 (1987).

Youth of Victim as Aggravating Factor. — Aggravation of defendant's sentence for taking indecent liberties with a minor on grounds that the 13-year-old victim was very young was error, as she was not for purposes of this offense

"very young." State v. Sumpter, 318 N.C. 102, 347 S.E.2d 396 (1986).

Finding that the eight-year-old victim was "very young" was not clearly erroneous; proof that the victim was "very young" was not necessary to prove the offense, and consequently the aggravating factor and the offense did not merge. United States v. Price, 812 F.2d 174 (4th Cir. 1987).

The trial court improperly used the victim's age as an aggravating factor because the State did not present evidence that "the victim was more vulnerable than other victims because of his age"; merely checking the AOC form is not sufficient to establish this aggravating factor except in cases where the child is of such tender age that the vulnerability is established by consideration of the nature of the crime. State v. Rudisill, 137 N.C. App. 379, 527 S.E.2d 727 (2000).

II. ELEMENTS AND PROOF OF OFFENSE.

Single Offense Provable by Commission of Various Acts. — The crime of indecent liberties is a single offense which may be proved by evidence of the commission of any one of a number of acts; the evil the legislature sought to prevent in this context is a defendant's performance of any immoral, improper, or indecent act in the presence of a child "for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire." State v. Hartness, 326 N.C. 561, 391 S.E.2d 177 (1990).

In order to obtain a conviction of taking indecent liberties with a minor, the State must prove that (1) the defendant was at least 16 years of age, (2) he was five years older than his victim, (3) he willfully took or attempted to take an indecent liberty with the victim, (4) the victim was under 16 years of age at the time the alleged act or attempted act occurred, and (5) the action by the defendant was for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire. State v. Rhodes, 321 N.C. 102, 361 S.E.2d 578 (1987).

What Intent State Must Prove. — Language requiring intent to commit an unnatural sexual act no longer appears in this section. The State need now only prove a "purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire." State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

Indictments Held Sufficient. — Indictments were sufficiently specific under this section, where the indictments quoted the language of the statute, even though they did not describe the nature of the sex acts. State v. Blackmon, 130 N.C. App. 692, 507 S.E.2d 42 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 531, 526 S.E.2d 470 (1998).

Defendant's purpose for committing an act prohibited by this section is the gravamen of this offense; the particular act performed is immaterial. State v. Hartness, 326 N.C. 561, 391 S.E.2d 177 (1990).

That the action was for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire may be inferred from the evidence of the defendant's actions. State v. Rhodes, 321 N.C. 102, 361 S.E.2d 578 (1987).

Inference of Arousal or Gratification of Sexual Desire. — Where the evidence established that, while alone in a drug store bathroom with the five year old victim, defendant touched her chest and her vaginal area, that touching was sufficient to permit the jury to infer that defendant's purpose in doing so was to arouse himself or to gratify his sexual desire. State v. Rogers, 109 N.C. App. 491, 428 S.E.2d 220, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 625, 435 S.E.2d 348 (1993), 511 U.S. 1008, 114 S. Ct. 1378, 128 L.

Ed. 2d 54, rehearing denied, 511 U.S. 1102, 114 S. Ct. 1875 (1994).

Purpose, being a mental attitude, is seldom provable by direct evidence and must ordinarily be proven by inference. State v. Jones, 89 N.C. App. 584, 367 S.E.2d 139 (1988).

Touching Not Required. — It is not necessary that there be a touching of the child by the defendant in order to constitute an indecent liberty within the meaning of this section. State v. Turman, 52 N.C. App. 376, 278 S.E.2d 574 (1981); State v. Kistle, 59 N.C. App. 724, 297 S.E.2d 626 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 471, 298 S.E.2d 694 (1983).

The word "with" is not limited to mean only a physical touching. State v. Turman, 52 N.C. App. 376, 278 S.E.2d 574 (1981).

No actual touching of a child is necessary to complete the offense described in this section. State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

Evidence of vaginal penetration was not necessary to prove the offense defendant pled guilty to and was sentenced for (taking indecent liberties with a child); therefore, the finding that his conduct indicated he was guilty of the greater offense charged was not forbidden by § 15A-1340.4(a)(1). State v. Parker, 92 N.C. App. 102, 373 S.E.2d 558 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 250, 377 S.E.2d 760 (1989).

A defendant need not be within a certain distance of or in close proximity to the child under subdivision (a)(1) of this section. State v. Strickland, 77 N.C. App. 454, 335 S.E.2d 74 (1985).

Taking photographs of nude female child in clearly sexually suggestive position violates section. State v. Kistle, 59 N.C. App. 724, 297 S.E.2d 626 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 471, 298 S.E.2d 694 (1983).

Constructive Presence. — Where defendant, the headmaster of a school, took advantage of an authoritative position of trust by asking the victim, a fifteen year old student, to try out uniforms so that he could secretly film, and later observe her in a state of undress, defendant was "constructively present" and thereby took immoral, improper or indecent liberties "with" the minor victim. State v. McClees, 108 N.C. App. 648, 424 S.E.2d 687, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 465, 427 S.E.2d 626 (1993).

Age of the victim is an element of the offense which proscribes taking indecent liberties with a child under the age of 16 years. United States v. Price, 812 F.2d 174 (4th Cir. 1987).

Age as an Aggravating Factor. — Where age is an element of the offense, as with taking indecent liberties with children, if the evidence, by its greater weight, shows that the age of the victim caused the victim to be more vulnerable to the crime committed against him than he otherwise would have been, the trial court can properly find the statutory aggravating factor based on age. If, however, the evidence shows that the victim was not more vulnerable than any other victim of the same crime would have been, the statutory aggravating factor that the victim was "very young" cannot properly be found. State v. Farlow, 336 N.C. 534, 444 S.E.2d 913 (1994).

Alcohol as Aggravating Factor. — Trial court did not err in finding the fact that defendant furnished alcohol to sisters and then victimized them was a nonstatutory aggravating factor where a preponderance of evidence supported that finding, and the State was not required to prove, pursuant to § 15A-1340.16(d) regarding aggravating factors, that the sisters were under the age of 16, even though the State did have to prove the sisters were under age 16 in order to convict under § 14-202.1, regarding taking indecent liberties. State v. Bowers, — N.C. App. —, 552 S.E.2d 238, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 866 (2001).

A parental or familial relationship is not a necessary element of the crime of taking indecent liberties with children. State v. Caldwell, 85 N.C. App. 713, 355 S.E.2d 813 (1987).

Allowing Testimony as to Age of Defendant Held Error. — In prosecution for first-degree sexual offense and taking indecent liberties with children, the trial court erred in allowing the deputy to testify, over defendant's objection, that in his opinion defendant appeared to be between 29 and 30 years of age, where it was not necessary for the state to prove defendant's exact age in order to convict him of any of the crimes with which he was charged. State v. Banks, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 398 (1988).

Testimony of Rape Supported Finding. — Where children's testimony showed that defendant raped each of them, evidence supported finding that he had taken indecent liberties with them. State v. Hewett, 93 N.C. App. 1, 376 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

Medical opinion evidence that the vagina of the victim had been penetrated was relevant to the charge of taking indecent liberties with a child, even though the child's testimony did not mention penetration. State v. Baker, 333 N.C. 325, 426 S.E.2d 73 (1993).

Photographs of male models and men in underwear were properly admitted into evidence in defendant's trial for taking indecent liberties with a child and crime against nature. State v. Creech, 128 N.C. App. 592, 495 S.E.2d 752 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 285, 501 S.E.2d 921 (1998).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence that 32-year-old defendant led his 12-year-old victim, in the course of playing hide-and-go-seek, into a dark dog shed, that while hiding there defendant put his arm around the victim, placed his hand between her legs and underneath her softball shorts and rubbed her vagina with his finger, and that when the victim tried to move away, defendant pulled her back to him and fondled her again, was sufficient to warrant the inference that the defendant willfully took indecent liberties with the child for the purpose of arousing or gratifying his sexual desire. State v. Slone, 76 N.C. App. 628, 334 S.E.2d 78 (1985).

Evidence that defendant not only approached and menaced nine-year-old victim, but did so with a repeatedly announced desire to engage in sexual activity, and that he exposed his penis and placed his hand on it while within several feet of victim sufficed to show that defendant took or attempted to take an immoral liberty with victim for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire. State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

Evidence held sufficient to warrant the inference that the defendant willfully took or attempted to take an indecent liberty with a child for the purpose of arousing or gratifying his sexual desire. State v. Bowman, 84 N.C. App. 238, 352 S.E.2d 437 (1987).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of five counts of indecent liberties under subdivision (1) of subsection (a) of this section, each count coinciding with an episode of intercourse described by one of his two children, where the State presented evidence that in each instance the defendant ordered his victim to undress and lie down, then exposed his penis before proceeding with the act of intercourse. State v. Etheridge, 319 N.C. 34, 352 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Corroborated testimony of child who was nine at the time of the offense that 20-year-old defendant rubbed against her until he ejaculated was sufficient evidence to permit the jury to find beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant took indecent liberties with her for the purpose of gratifying his sexual desire. State v. Griffin, 319 N.C. 429, 355 S.E.2d 474 (1987).

Evidence was held sufficient to permit the jury to infer that defendant took indecent liberties with four-year-old victim for the purpose of arousing or gratifying his sexual desire. State v. Jones, 89 N.C. App. 584, 367 S.E.2d 139 (1988).

Where the victim testified that she and defendant were alone in the family's mobile home when she and defendant "started picking at each other ... just playing," and defendant went up and under her blouse and he started rubbing her, and the victim also testified that before she and defendant went into the bedroom, defendant went into the kitchen and locked the back screen door, and defendant stopped rubbing her when her brother attempted to enter the locked back door, the jury could properly infer that defendant's action in rubbing the victim's breasts was for the purpose of arousing or gratifying his sexual desire. State v. Bruce, 90 N.C. App. 547, 369 S.E.2d 95, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 367, 373 S.E.2d 549 (1988).

Where the defendant, a 30-year-old man, waited until all the other adults were in another part of the house, entered the room where the victims lay, got into bed between the children and kissed each of them, putting his tongue into their mouths, ears and noses, and he then threatened to strike the children and kill their mother if they told anyone what he had done, the acts of kissing were "immoral, improper, or indecent" acts within the meaning of subsection (1) of the statute and were "lewd or lascivious" acts within the meaning of subsection (2) of the statute. State v. Banks, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 398 (1988).

Where evidence of the age of both victim and defendant was presented at trial, the victim testified as to the date of the offense and that defendant "put his private parts in my private parts," there was plenary evidence in the record as to each of the essential elements of the offense of taking indecent liberties with a child. State v. Allen, 92 N.C. App. 168, 374 S.E.2d 119 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 544, 380 S.E.2d 772 (1989).

Testimony of 13-year-old victim that intruder was feeling on his "private area" permitted the jury to reasonably conclude that the activity concerned the victim's genital area, and taken with the remainder of State's evidence, was sufficient to establish the underlying felony of taking indecent liberties with a child and, a fortiori, the offense of first-degree burglary. State v. Oakman, 97 N.C. App. 433, 388 S.E.2d 579 (1990).

Where a child's mother knowingly engaged in anal intercourse with her husband in the presence of their child; engaged in sexual activity with another woman in the presence of her child; watched her child engage in vaginal intercourse with an adult woman, and where her husband told the child to engage in sexual activity with the other woman, the jury could reasonably infer from these acts that the child's mother and her husband wilfully engaged in an immoral, improper or indecent liberty with the child to arouse or gratify her own sexual desire. State v. Ainsworth, 109 N.C. App. 136, 426 S.E.2d 410 (1993).

Evidence of defendant's age held sufficient to sustain conviction for the offense of taking indecent liberties with a child. State v. Bynum, 111 N.C. App. 845, 433 S.E.2d 778, cert. denied, 335 N.C. 239, 439 S.E.2d 153 (1993).

Testimony of child victim held sufficient for the jury to find the dates of the offenses. State v. Swann, 322 N.C. 666, 370 S.E.2d 533 (1988).

Evidence that defendant disrobed in children's presence, and that he engaged in intercourse with each child in presence of other supported finding of indecent liberties offense. State v. Hewett, 93 N.C. App. 1, 376 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

The uncorroborated testimony of the victim is sufficient to convict under this section if the testimony establishes all of the elements of the offense. State v. Quarg, 334 N.C. 92, 431 S.E.2d 1 (1993).

III. EVIDENCE.

Expert Testimony Improperly Admitted as Substantive Evidence. — In defendant's trial for first-degree rape and taking indecent liberties with a child, the trial court admitted expert's testimony as substantive evidence. To do so was error because expert testimony regarding the symptoms and characteristics of sexually abused children is admissible only to assist the jury in understanding the behavior patterns of sexually abused children, and must be so limited by the trial court. State v. Hutchens, 110 N.C. App. 455, 429 S.E.2d 755, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 436, 433 S.E.2d 181 (1993).

Competency of Six-Year-Old Victim. — In sexual offense case, fact that six-year-old victim testified without objection that she was six years old and had one brother who was eight years old, named the school she attended, gave her teacher's name and where she lived, and said that she was going to tell the truth clearly supported the trial judge's conclusion that the six-year-old victim was competent to testify; thus, the trial judge's failure to conduct a voir dire examination to establish the child's competency was not prejudicial error. State v. Gilbert, 96 N.C. App. 363, 385 S.E.2d 815 (1989).

Closed Circuit Television in Voir Dire Hearing. — Where, during voir dire hearing as to four-year-old victim's competency as a witness in prosecution for taking indecent liberties, defendant, although absent from the courtroom, was able to hear all testimony, interact freely with his attorney, and through his attorney confront the victim, thereby accomplishing effective cross-examination, the exclusion of defendant from the courtroom did not violate N.C. Const., Art. I, §§ 18, 19 or 23, as the trial court's use of a closed circuit television and its act of providing defendant and his attorney adequate opportunity to communicate during the victim's testimony were sufficient to permit defendant to hear the evidence and to refute it. State v. Jones, 89 N.C. App. 584, 367 S.E.2d 139 (1988).

The uncorroborated testimony of a victim under this section is sufficient to convict a defendant if such testimony suffices to establish all the elements of the offense. State v. Vehaun, 34 N.C. App. 700, 239 S.E.2d 705 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 445, 241 S.E.2d 846 (1978).

Record contained sufficient evidence that defendant was "with" children, within the meaning of this section, when he used his dogs to encourage children to come to his yard and then exposed himself from within a nearby glass door. State v. Nesbitt, 133 N.C. App. 420, 515 S.E.2d 503 (1999).

Evidence of Similar Conduct. — In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a minor, evidence that defendant had, on occasions other than that at issue, engaged in similar sexual conduct with victim and her sister was competent to show defendant's intent, motive and on-going plan to gratify his sexual desires while ostensibly baby-sitting the children. State v. Sturgis, 74 N.C. App. 188, 328 S.E.2d 456 (1985).

In a prosecution for taking immoral, improper, and indecent liberties with a female under the age of 16, evidence of prior misconduct by the defendant toward the prosecuting witness was admissible as an exception to the rule that evidence of independent offenses is not admissible. State v. Jenkins, 35 N.C. App. 758, 242 S.E.2d 505, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 470, 246 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Defendant's prior sexual acts in the presence of children were admitted to show his purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire. State v. Beckham, 145 N.C. App. 119, 550 S.E.2d 231 (2001).

Defendant's Statements Concerning Prior Incidents. — In a case of first degree sexual offense and taking indecent liberties with two young boys, defendant's statement to detective concerning prior incidents of taking indecent liberties with two young girls was relevant to show defendant's unnatural lust, intent or state of mind. State v. Reeder, 105 N.C. App. 343, 413 S.E.2d 580, cert. denied, 331 N.C. 290, 417 S.E.2d 68 (1992).

Evidence Supported Finding of Abuse. — The trial court's findings of fact regarding child's status as an abused juvenile were supported by clear and convincing evidence where the child testified that her father had shown her a picture of a woman wearing a see-through dress, the child's friend drew a picture in court of what she had seen, i.e. the father's anatomy, a social worker testified that the child had told her that her father had "asked her to touch his penis," and a doctor testified that the child had told her that her father had asked her to look at a "dirty book." In re Cogdill, 137 N.C. App. 504, 528 S.E.2d 600 (2000).

Evidence of Defendant's Age. — An officer's testimony that he had contacted the defendant and had taken a statement from him which provided the officer with the observation necessary to render his opinion as to the age of the defendant was admissible in a prosecution under this section. State v. Campbell, 51 N.C. App. 418, 276 S.E.2d 726 (1981).

Use of Anatomical Dolls to Illustrate Testimony. — The courts of this State have allowed the use of anatomical dolls in sexual abuse cases to illustrate the testimony of child witnesses; the practice is wholly consistent with existing rules governing the use of photographs and other items to illustrate testimony and it conveys the information sought to be elicited while permitting the child to use a familiar item, thereby making him more comfortable. State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

Even though dolls were used to illustrate the testimony of a social worker rather than the abused children, the evidence was still admissible; the demonstration illustrated the social worker's testimony as to the manner in which the children communicated the accounts of sexual abuse and the social worker's demonstration of what she observed each child do with the dolls also corroborated the testimony of each child. State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

Child's Nightmares and Mental Health Center Visits Held Relevant. — In a prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a five-year-old girl, from the fact that the child had had severe nightmares or night terrors and that her mother had taken her to a mental health center five times for treatment it was reasonable to infer that the child might have had some form of mental or emotional illness that might have affected her testimonial capacities. This was a subject relevant to the child's credibility as a witness. State v. Durham, 74 N.C. App. 159, 327 S.E.2d 920 (1985).

Testimony about the nature of the child's nightmares, which tended to support defendant's contention that the child had a history of experiencing serious nightmares which may have had a sexual origin and nature, and that she accused defendant at night in a manner similar to that in which she behaved when she had her night terrors was relevant. While this evidence did not conclusively prove that the child fantasized the alleged crime, whether there was a connection between the night terrors and the child's accusation of defendant sufficient to absolve the defendant was a question of fact for the jury. State v. Durham, 74 N.C. App. 159, 327 S.E.2d 920 (1985).

Child's Accusation of Others Held Relevant. — Where a few hours after she accused defendant, the child also told her mother and the defendant's girlfriend that her father had abused her in the same way, the child's accusation of the father was relevant to the child's credibility, and the trial judge abused his discretion and violated defendant's constitutional rights by ruling such a subject irrelevant and by completely foreclosing any discussion of it by the girlfriend before the jury. State v. Durham, 74 N.C. App. 159, 327 S.E.2d 920 (1985).

Refusal to Allow Cross-Examination of Child Prevented Effective Cross-Examination. — Where the judge completely foreclosed any cross-examination of the child or her mother on the child's accusation of her father a few hours after her accusation of defendant and on the content of the child's nightmares, the child having had a history of nightmares, the defendant was deprived of his right to effective cross-examination, since these subjects, were relevant to the child's testimonial capacities. The jury would not have been confused or inflamed by carefully monitored cross-examination of the child or her mother on these topics. State v. Durham, 74 N.C. App. 159, 327 S.E.2d 920 (1985).

Evidence of Bias of Victim's Mother Properly Excluded. — In a prosecution of defendant for taking indecent liberties with a child, the trial court did not err in excluding testimony by defendant, his wife, and an employee of the county department of social services which was offered to show bias, interest, corruption, undue prejudice and influence on the part of the mother of the prosecuting witness, since the competency of the 10-year-old victim was determined by the trial judge after a voir dire hearing; her credibility was tested by careful cross-examination by defendant; defendant was unable to show on cross-examination that the prosecuting witness was biased or prejudiced against him or that her testimony was in any was influenced by her mother. State v. Locklear, 50 N.C. App. 165, 272 S.E.2d 597 (1980).

Leading Questions. — In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a minor, trial judge did not abuse his discretion in permitting the district attorney to ask the 12-year-old victim two leading questions about the sexual acts committed upon her. State v. Sturgis, 74 N.C. App. 188, 328 S.E.2d 456 (1985).

Admission of hearsay evidence at trial does not violate the confrontation clause when the declarant is unavailable to testify and his statement bears adequate indicia of reliability. Thus, in a trial for taking indecent liberties with a four-year-old child, admission of evidence under an established exception to the hearsay rule did not violate defendant's right of confrontation under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 25. State v. Jones, 89 N.C. App. 584, 367 S.E.2d 139 (1988).

Suppression of Social Workers' Testimony Held Proper. — In a case involving, inter alia, indecent liberties with a child, where social worker went beyond merely fulfilling her role as the victim's social worker and began working with the sheriff's department on the case prior to interviewing defendant, the social worker's role changed and became essentially like that of an agent of the State; accordingly, because the social worker did not advise defendant of her Miranda rights, the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress statements made during her interview with the social worker. State v. Morrell, 108 N.C. App. 465, 424 S.E.2d 147, appeal dismissed, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 626 (1993).

Plethysmograph. — The evidence before the trial court by no means established the reliability of the plethysmograph; there is a substantial difference in opinion within the scientific community regarding the plethysmograph's reliability to measure sexual deviancy. State v. Spencer, 119 N.C. App. 662, 459 S.E.2d 812 (1995).

IV. INSTRUCTIONS.

"Purpose of Arousing or Gratifying Sexual Desire". — Charge to the jury that defendant could be found guilty of taking an indecent liberty with a minor if it found that he "willfully took an indecent liberty with a child for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire" did not violate defendant's right to have a unanimous verdict, as the court merely allowed the jury to choose between two alternative purposes for which this single act might have been committed. State v. Jerrells, 98 N.C. App. 318, 390 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 802, 393 S.E.2d 901 (1990).

Touching of Victim or Inducing Victim to Touch. — Trial judge correctly instructed jury that it could find immoral, improper, or indecent liberty upon a finding that defendant either improperly touched his son or induced his son to touch him; the instruction did not permit conviction by less than a unanimous verdict. State v. Hartness, 326 N.C. 561, 391 S.E.2d 177 (1990).

No Variance Between Indictment and Charge. — Where the State could have charged the defendant under subdivision (a)(1) or (a)(2) of this section, the evidence at trial supporting either charge, but indicted defendant under (a)(2), the trial court's inclusion in the jury instruction of language appearing in both subdivisions (a)(1) and (a)(2) did not constitute a fatal variance between the indictment and the charge. State v. Wilson, 87 N.C. App. 399, 361 S.E.2d 105 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 479, 364 S.E.2d 670 (1988).

Failure to Instruct on Corroborative Evidence. — Where the evidence clearly showed defendant engaged in sexual acts with the child on more than one occasion, the State focused the child's testimony on the incident in question and made it clear defendant was charged for committing that act, and the jury was charged solely as to this incident, there was no prejudicial error in failing to instruct on corroborative evidence. State v. Allen, 92 N.C. App. 168, 374 S.E.2d 119 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 544, 380 S.E.2d 772 (1989).

Failure to Charge on Willfulness. — In a prosecution of defendant for taking indecent liberties with a female under the age of 16, defendant being over 16 years old and more than five years older than the female child, the jury, by finding that defendant committed the crime, necessarily found that he acted willfully, and accordingly, the court's failure to charge on willfulness was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Maxwell, 47 N.C. App. 658, 267 S.E.2d 582, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 102, 273 S.E.2d 307 (1980).

Failure to Define "Lewd or Lascivious Act." — The words "lewd or lascivious act" are ordinary words which the jury is presumed to understand. State v. Stell, 39 N.C. App. 75, 249 S.E.2d 480 (1978).

Since the words "lewd or lascivious act" are ordinary words which the jury is presumed to understand, there was no error in a prosecution under this section when the trial court failed to define the words in its charge to the jury. State v. Stell, 39 N.C. App. 75, 249 S.E.2d 480 (1978).

§ 14-202.2. Indecent liberties between children.

(a) A person who is under the age of 16 years is guilty of taking indecent liberties with children if the person either:

(1) Willfully takes or attempts to take any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex who is at least three years younger than the defendant for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire; or

(2) Willfully commits or attempts to commit any lewd or lascivious act upon or with the body or any part or member of the body of any child of either sex who is at least three years younger than the defendant for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire.

(b) A violation of this section is punishable as a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1995, c. 494, s. 1; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

The element "for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire" may not be inferred solely from the act itself under this section. Without some evidence of the child's maturity, intent, experience, or other factor indicating his purpose in acting, sexual ambitions must not be assigned to a child's actions. In re T.S., 133 N.C. App. 272, 515 S.E.2d 230 (1999).

§ 14-202.3. Solicitation of child by computer to commit an unlawful sex act.

(a) Offense. — A person is guilty of solicitation of a child by a computer if the person is 16 years of age or older and the person knowingly, with the intent to commit an unlawful sex act, entices, advises, coerces, orders, or commands, by means of a computer, a child who is less than 16 years of age and at least 3 years younger than the defendant, to meet with the defendant or any other person for the purpose of committing an unlawful sex act.

(b) Jurisdiction. — The offense is committed in the State for purposes of determining jurisdiction, if the transmission that constitutes the offense either originates in the State or is received in the State.

(c) Punishment. — A violation of this section is a Class I felony. (1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 632, s. 1.)

§ 14-202.4. Taking indecent liberties with a student.

(a) If a defendant, who is a teacher, school administrator, student teacher, or coach, at any age, or who is other school personnel and is at least four years older than the victim, takes indecent liberties with a victim who is a student, at any time during or after the time the defendant and victim were present together in the same school but before the victim ceases to be a student, the defendant is guilty of a Class I felony, unless the conduct is covered under some other provision of law providing for greater punishment. The term "same school" means a school at which the student is enrolled and the school personnel is employed or volunteers. A person is not guilty of taking indecent liberties with a student if the person is lawfully married to the student.

(b) If a defendant, who is school personnel, other than a teacher, school administrator, student teacher, or coach, and who is less than four years older than the victim, takes indecent liberties with a student as provided in subsection (a) of this section, the defendant is guilty of a Class A1 misdemeanor.

(c) Consent is not a defense to a charge under this section.

(d) For purposes of this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) "Indecent liberties" means:

a. Willfully taking or attempting to take any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with a student for the purpose of arousing or gratifying sexual desire; or

b. Willfully committing or attempting to commit any lewd or lascivious act upon or with the body or any part or member of the body of a student.

For purposes of this section, the term indecent liberties does not include vaginal intercourse or a sexual act as defined by G.S. 14-27.1.

(2) "School" means any public school, charter school, or nonpublic school under Parts 1 and 2 of Article 39 of Chapter 115C of the General Statutes.

(3) "School personnel" means any person included in the definition contained in G.S. 115C-332(a)(2), and any person who volunteers at a school or a school-sponsored activity.

(4) "Student" means a person enrolled in kindergarten, or in grade one through grade 12 in any school. (1999-300, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-300, s. 3, made this section effective December 1, 1999, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date.

Article 26A.

Which receives a majority of its gross income during any calendar month from the sale or rental of publications (including books, magazines, other periodicals, videotapes, compact discs, other photographic, electronic, magnetic, digital, or other imaging medium) which are distinguished or characterized by their emphasis on matter depicting, describing, or relating to specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas, as defined in this section; or

(6) "Adult mini motion picture theatre" means an enclosed building with viewing booths designed to hold patrons which is used for presenting motion pictures, a preponderance of which are distinguished or characterized by an emphasis on matter depicting, describing or

Purpose of Article. — This Article is aimed at prohibiting a "supermarket" marketing technique that offers for sale or exhibition at one business location a variety of sexual wares in addition to printed materials. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

The essential regulation implemented by this Article is of location. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Constitutionality — No Equal Protection Violation. — This Article does not violate equal protection since the unequal treatment of commercial establishments involved in this Article is based most essentially on the different effects they are considered to have on their surroundings. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Same — U.S. Const., Amend. I Not Violated. — Under this Article the incidental restriction on interests protected by U.S. Const., Amend. I is no greater than is essential to furtherance of the state's interest. The means chosen by North Carolina in its effort to eliminate the undesired secondary effects of adult establishments is one of the least burdensome means the state could have chosen. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

On its face this Article is a permissible regulation of the external costs of adult establishments that is unrelated to the overall suppression of any protected materials offered by them for public consumption. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

This Article is merely a regulation of the place and manner of expression, without proscription of that expression, of the type not forbidden by U.S. Const., Amend. I. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

While U.S. Const., Amend. I sets limits on the economic burdens that can be imposed upon the dissemination of protected materials, those limits are not exceeded by the relocation burden involved in this Article. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

This Article furthers an important or substantial interest. North Carolina has a substantial interest in maintaining a stable, healthful environment in its cities. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Same — Right of Privacy Not Violated. — This Article does not violate the constitutionally protected right of privacy. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Constitutionality of City Ordinance. — City zoning ordinance, which did not ban adult establishment altogether but merely regulated their location, was content-neutral, designed to serve a substantial government interest, and did not unreasonably limit alternative avenues of communication. Mom N Pops, Inc. v. City of Charlotte, 979 F. Supp. 372 (W.D.N.C. 1997), aff'd, 162 F.3d 1155 (4th Cir. 1998).

Standing to Challenge This Article. — Adult establishments which clearly came within the terms of this Article lacked standing to challenge this Article for vagueness. But even were they granted standing to raise this issue, the statute would withstand a vagueness challenge. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

This Article is within the concept of the public welfare that defines the limits of the police power. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Whether or not this Article is a true zoning law, it is a legitimate exercise of the police power, under which the state may limit the use of private property for the public welfare. Hart Book Stores, Inc. v. Edmisten, 612 F.2d 821 (4th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 3028, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Relationship with Section 19-1. — This section and § 19-1 should be construed in pari materia. South Blvd. Video & News, Inc. v. Charlotte Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 129 N.C. App. 282, 498 S.E.2d 623 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 501, 510 S.E.2d 656 (1998).

Preponderance. — The term "preponderance" as used in § 14-202.10(1) and (6) denotes a superiority in weight which is a qualitative measurement, and since the amendment of § 14-202.10 merely codified the Court of Appeals' explanations of what the word "preponderance" had meant, the amendment was not a substantive change in the law. Durham Video & News, Inc. v. Durham Bd. of Adjustment, 144 N.C. App. 236, 550 S.E.2d 212 (2001).

Construction of Term "Publications." — In interpreting this section with § 19-1.1 it is almost impossible to construe the term "publications" as not including videotapes. South Blvd. Video & News, Inc. v. Charlotte Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 129 N.C. App. 282, 498 S.E.2d 623 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 501, 510 S.E.2d 656 (1998).

Emphasis on Anatomy or Sex. — In the context of zoning enforcement, it is reasonable to rely upon an analysis of the pictures and titles on the covers of magazines, videos, and other publications to decide whether such works emphasize the anatomical parts and sexual activities specified in § 14-202.10(10) and (11). Durham Video & News, Inc. v. Durham Bd. of Adjustment, 144 N.C. App. 236, 550 S.E.2d 212 (2001).

Adult Bookstore. — Plaintiffs lacked standing to challenge a city ordinance regulating sexually oriented businesses for vagueness where the ordinance clearly applied to the plaintiffs; court-ordered expedited discovery demonstrated that most if not all of the novelty items and devices stocked or displayed for sale were clearly sexually oriented, and plaintiffs' proposed business fell within the definition of "adult bookstore." Mom N Pops, Inc. v. City of Charlotte, 979 F. Supp. 372 (W.D.N.C. 1997), aff'd, 162 F.3d 1155 (4th Cir. 1998).

Permissible Inference from Defendant's Refusal to Testify. — It was proper for the Town Board of Adjustment's to infer a violation of § 14-202.11(a) from defendant-video store owner's refusal to testify and thus to conclude that his video store qualified as an "adult bookstore" under this section. Davis v. Board of Adjustment, 141 N.C. App. 489, 541 S.E.2d 183 (2000).

§ 14-202.11. Restrictions as to adult establishments.

(a) No person shall permit any building, premises, structure, or other facility that contains any adult establishment to contain any other kind of adult establishment. No person shall permit any building, premises, structure, or other facility in which sexually oriented devices are sold, distributed, exhibited, or contained to contain any adult establishment.

(b) No person shall permit any viewing booth in an adult mini motion picture theatre to be occupied by more than one person at any time.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to preempt local government regulation of the location or operation of adult establishments or other sexually oriented businesses to the extent consistent with the constitutional protection afforded free speech. (1977, c. 987, s. 1; 1985, c. 731, s. 2; 1998-46, s. 5.)

Preemption of County Ordinance. — Provision of a county ordinance that prohibited the location of such businesses in any building located with 1000 feet of another building containing such a business was preempted by this section. Onslow County v. Moore, 129 N.C. App. 376, 499 S.E.2d 780 (1998).

Permissible Inference from Defendant's Refusal to Testify. — It was proper for the Town Board of Adjustment's to infer a violation of this section from defendant-video store owner's refusal to testify and thus to conclude that his video store qualified as an "adult bookstore" under § 14-202.10(1). Davis v. Board of Adjustment, 141 N.C. App. 489, 541 S.E.2d 183 (2000).

§ 14-202.12. Violations; penalties.

Any person who violates G.S. 14-202.11 shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. Any person who has been previously convicted of a violation of G.S. 14-202.11, upon conviction for a second or subsequent violation of G.S. 14-202.11, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

As used herein, "person" shall include:

(1) The agent in charge of the building, premises, structure or facility; or

(2) The owner of the building, premises, structure or facility when such owner knew or reasonably should have known the nature of the business located therein, and such owner refused to cooperate with the public officials in reasonable measures designed to terminate the proscribed use; provided, however, that if there is an agent in charge, and if the owner did not have actual knowledge, the owner shall not be prosecuted; or

(3) The owner of the business; or

(4) The manager of the business. (1977, c. 987, s. 1; 1985, c. 731, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 132; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Article 27.

Prostitution.

§ 14-203. Definition of terms.

The term "prostitution" shall be construed to include the offering or receiving of the body for sexual intercourse for hire, and shall also be construed to include the offering or receiving of the body for indiscriminate sexual intercourse without hire. The term "assignation" shall be construed to include the making of any appointment or engagement for prostitution or any act in furtherance of such appointment or engagement. (1919, c. 215, s. 2; C.S., s. 4357.)

CASE NOTES

This section unequivocally defines prostitution as an act of sexual intercourse, and nothing else. Sexual intercourse is defined as, "the actual contact of the sexual organs of a man and a woman, and an actual penetration into the body of the latter." State v. Richardson, 307 N.C. 692, 300 S.E.2d 379 (1983).

If the legislature wishes to include within § 14-204 other sexual acts, such as cunnilingus, fellatio, masturbation, buggery or sodomy, it should do so with specificity since the court is bound to construe a criminal statute strictly in favor of the defendant. State v. Richardson, 307 N.C. 692, 300 S.E.2d 379 (1983).

Employment as Consideration for Sex. — The exchange of sexual intercourse for the valuable economic benefit of a job fits within North Carolina's criminal prohibition. Harrison v. Edison Bros. Apparel Stores, 924 F.2d 530 (4th Cir. 1991).

North Carolina, sharing the nearly unanimous view of American jurisdictions, prohibits prostitution — "including the offering or receiving of the body for sexual intercourse for hire." Harrison v. Edison Bros. Apparel Stores, 924 F.2d 530 (4th Cir. 1991).

The sexual act of masturbation for hire is not included in the definition of prostitution, as found in this section and prohibited by § 14-204. State v. Richardson, 307 N.C. 692, 300 S.E.2d 379 (1983).

Applied in State v. Bethea, 9 N.C. App. 544, 176 S.E.2d 904 (1970); Brown v. Brannon, 399 F. Supp. 133 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

§ 14-204. Prostitution and various acts abetting prostitution unlawful.

It shall be unlawful:

(1) To keep, set up, maintain, or operate any place, structure, building or conveyance for the purpose of prostitution or assignation.

(2) To occupy any place, structure, building, or conveyance for the purpose of prostitution or assignation; or for any person to permit any place, structure, building or conveyance owned by him or under his control to be used for the purpose of prostitution or assignation, with knowledge or reasonable cause to know that the same is, or is to be, used for such purpose.

(3) To receive, or to offer or agree to receive any person into any place, structure, building, or conveyance for the purpose of prostitution or assignation, or to permit any person to remain there for such purpose.

(4) To direct, take, or transport, or to offer or agree to take or transport, any person to any place, structure, or building or to any other person, with knowledge or reasonable cause to know that the purpose of such directing, taking, or transporting is prostitution or assignation.

(5) To procure, or to solicit, or to offer to procure or solicit for the purpose of prostitution or assignation.

(6) To reside in, enter, or remain in any place, structure, or building, or to enter or remain in any conveyance, for the purpose of prostitution or assignation.

(7) To engage in prostitution or assignation, or to aid or abet prostitution or assignation by any means whatsoever. (1919, c. 215, s. 1; C.S., s. 4358.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — The enterprise sought to be proscribed by this section, the offering of the body for hire, has been fragmented into multiple substantive offenses. This fragmentation serves the laudable purpose of not only punishing those who, at any state, engage in the promotion of the enterprise, but is an obvious prosecutorial aid to those whose responsibility it is to suppress the vice. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Each Step a Separate Crime. — The legislature, by making each step taken in furtherance of the vice of offering the body for sexual hire a separate crime, has made it possible to obtain convictions where, given the nature of the activity, they would otherwise be most difficult to obtain. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

The violation of subdivision (4) is complete when defendant directs and invites agent to her apartment for prostitution. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Same — Transporting. — Where defendants, taxi drivers, were apprehended in a clearing in the woods, each behind the wheel of his taxi with motor running, and carrying soldiers, the evidence of the character of the scene and the other circumstantial evidence was sufficient to support the inference that defendants knew their destination and brought their passengers to the place for the purpose of engaging in prostitution. State v. Willis, 220 N.C. 712, 18 S.E.2d 118 (1942).

Meaning of "Solicit". — Nothing appears with regard to subdivision (5) of this section, from the context or otherwise, to indicate an intent to give the word "solicit" anything other than its ordinary meaning. State v. Haggard, 59 N.C. App. 727, 297 S.E.2d 635 (1982).

The violation of subdivision (6) is complete when defendant enters her apartment with a person for the stated purpose. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Anyone who has violated subdivision (7) has most likely, in the process of doing so, violated one or more of the other subdivisions of this section. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Aiding and Abetting. — It is to be noted that subdivision (7) does not merely say "to aid or abet prostitution or assignation," but there are added the descriptive words "by any means whatsoever," thereby covering a multitude of acts. Thus, it is manifest that the legislature intended that these supplemental words should be given a meaning, and catch all other acts of aiding and abetting prostitution or assignation. Therefore in order to determine whether any offense be committed, it is essential that for the words of the statute "by any means whatsoever" to be given force and effect, there must be stated in the warrant the acts and circumstances of the particular charge, so that the court can see as a matter of law that a crime is charged. State v. Cox, 244 N.C. 57, 92 S.E.2d 413 (1956).

A warrant which charged that defendant did "aid and abet in prostitution and assignation" was defective since it failed to state wherein the defendant aided and abetted, and defendant's motion in arrest of judgment should have been granted. State v. Cox, 244 N.C. 57, 92 S.E.2d 413 (1956).

This section punishes all who aid and abet prostitution by the means set out in the statute or by "any means whatsoever" to the same extent that it punishes those who offer their bodies for that purpose. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

The sexual act of masturbation for hire is not included in the definition of prostitution, as found in § 14-203 and prohibited by this section. State v. Richardson, 307 N.C. 692, 300 S.E.2d 379 (1983).

If the legislature wishes to include within this section other sexual acts, such as cunnilingus, fellatio, masturbation, buggery or sodomy, it should do so with specificity since the court is bound to construe a criminal statute strictly in favor of the defendant. State v. Richardson, 307 N.C. 692, 300 S.E.2d 379 (1983).

Allegations in warrants charging violations of subdivisions (2), (4) and (6) can be so cast that neither offense is made an essential element of any other. State v. Demott, 26 N.C. App. 14, 214 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Competency of Evidence. — Evidence of the reputation of the upstairs of a building owned by defendant, and of the persons frequenting it, is competent in a prosecution under this section. State v. Waggoner, 207 N.C. 306, 176 S.E. 566 (1934).

Sufficiency of Evidence. — In a criminal prosecution for permitting property to be used for prostitution where the State's evidence tended to show that defendant owned the property so used, which was across the road from his residence, that defendant's wife was one of the operators of the place of ill fame and that its general reputation was bad, motion for judgment as of nonsuit was held properly denied. State v. Herndon, 223 N.C. 208, 25 S.E.2d 611, cert. denied, 320 U.S. 759, 64 S. Ct. 67, 88 L. Ed. 452 (1943).

Applied in State v. McClain, 240 N.C. 171, 81 S.E.2d 364 (1954); State v. Bethea, 9 N.C. App. 544, 176 S.E.2d 904 (1970); State v. Butler, 17 N.C. App. 167, 193 S.E.2d 117 (1972); State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

§ 14-204.1. Loitering for the purpose of engaging in prostitution offense.

(a) For the purposes of this section, "public place" means any street, sidewalk, bridge, alley or alleyway, plaza, park, driveway, parking lot or transportation facility, or the doorways and entrance ways to any building which fronts on any of those places, or a motor vehicle in or on any of those places.

(b) If a person remains or wanders about in a public place and

(1) Repeatedly beckons to, stops, or attempts to stop passers-by, or repeatedly attempts to engage passers-by in conversation; or

(2) Repeatedly stops or attempts to stop motor vehicles; or

(3) Repeatedly interferes with the free passage of other persons for the purpose of violating any subdivision of G.S. 14-204 or 14-177, that person is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1979, c. 873, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 133; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Section Not Void for Overbreadth. — American courts have overwhelmingly upheld enactments such as this section which include an element of criminal intent. The North Carolina statute is functionally equivalent to these enactments, since intent or purpose ordinarily must be shown by circumstantial evidence. Accordingly, the North Carolina statute is not void for overbreadth. State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

Legislature Empowered to Punish Prostitute and Not Customer. — It is well within the power of the Legislature to punish the prostitute and provider of sexual services and not the customer. It is the organized and repeated provision of such services, not their use by unorganized and casual individuals, that constitutes the most readily eradicable social evil. State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

§ 14-205. Prosecution; in what courts.

Prosecutions for the violation of any of the provisions of this Article shall be tried in the courts of this State wherein misdemeanors are triable except those courts the jurisdiction of which is so limited by the Constitution of this State that such jurisdiction cannot by statute be extended to include criminal actions of the character herein described. (1919, c. 215, s. 6; C.S., s. 4359.)

§ 14-206. Reputation and prior conviction admissible as evidence.

In the trial of any person charged with a violation of any of the provisions of this Article, testimony of a prior conviction, or testimony concerning the reputation of any place, structure, or building, and of the person or persons who reside in or frequent the same, and of the defendant, shall be admissible in evidence in support of the charge. (1919, c. 215, s. 3; C.S., s. 4360.)

CASE NOTES

Section Provides Exception to General Inadmissibility of Other Crimes. — Under North Carolina common law, evidence of other crimes is generally inadmissible, subject to certain well-defined exceptions. This section represents a legitimate legislative decision to broaden such rules. State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

State Not Relieved of Its Burden of Proof. — This section does not of course relieve the state of its burden of coming forward and proving its case beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

This section does not provide an "open door" for any evidence of other crimes or reputation. State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — By enacting this section, the Legislature did not intend to remove entirely the trial judge's discretion to exclude irrelevant evidence. Evidence proffered on the state's case in chief under this section must remain relevant to the issues at hand. State v. Evans, 73 N.C. App. 214, 326 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

Stated in State v. Harrill, 224 N.C. 477, 31 S.E.2d 353 (1944).

§ 14-207. Degrees of guilt.

Any person who shall be found to have committed two or more violations of any of the provisions of G.S. 14-204 of this Article within a period of one year next preceding the date named in an indictment, information, or charge of violating any of the provisions of such section, shall be deemed guilty in the first degree. Any person who shall be found to have committed a single violation of any of the provisions of such section shall be deemed guilty in the second degree. (1919, c. 215, s. 4; C.S., s. 4361.)

CASE NOTES

Province of Judge. — When the degree of guilt has been properly ascertained the judge doubtless has the right to hear testimony for the purpose of fixing the terms of imprisonment within the limits of the statute; but this right does not extend to or include the finding by the judge of the degree of the offender's guilt. State v. Barnes, 122 N.C. 1031, 29 S.E. 381 (1898); State v. Lee, 192 N.C. 225, 134 S.E. 458 (1926); State v. Brinkley, 193 N.C. 747, 138 S.E. 138 (1927).

§ 14-208. Punishment; probation; parole.

Any person who shall be deemed guilty in the first degree, as set forth in G.S. 14-207, shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor: Provided, that in case of a commitment to a reformatory institution, the commitment shall be made for an indeterminate period of time of not less than one nor more than three years in duration, and the board of managers or directors of the reformatory institution shall have authority to discharge or to place on parole any person so committed after the service of the minimum term or any part thereof, and to require the return to said institution for the balance of the maximum term of any person who shall violate the terms or conditions of the parole.

Notwithstanding the previous paragraph, any person who shall be deemed guilty in the first degree, as set forth in G.S. 14-207, shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. This paragraph applies only in cities with a population of 300,000 or over, according to the most recent decennial federal census, but shall only apply in a city within that class if the city has adopted an ordinance to that effect, which ordinance makes a finding that prostitution is a serious problem within the city.

Any person who shall be deemed guilty in the second degree, as set forth in G.S. 14-207, shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor: Provided, that the defendant may be placed on probation in the care of a probation officer designated by law, or theretofore appointed by the court.

Probation or parole shall be granted or ordered in the case of a person infected with venereal disease only on such terms and conditions as shall insure medical treatment therefor and prevent the spread thereof, and the court may order any convicted defendant to be examined for venereal disease.

No girl or woman who shall be convicted under this Article shall be placed on probation or on parole in the care or charge of any person except a woman probation officer. (1919, c. 215, s. 5; C.S., s. 4362; 1921, c. 101; 1981, c. 969, ss. 1, 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 134; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Admission of Guilt on Time Limitation. — A defendant sentenced for the crime of prostitution upon his own admission of guilt may not successfully resist a sentence therefor upon the ground that the offense charged in the indictment did not come within the period of time prescribed by the statute. State v. Brinkley, 193 N.C. 747, 138 S.E. 138 (1927).

§§ 14-208.1 through 14-208.4: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 27A.

Sex Offender and Public Protection Registration Programs.

Part 1. Registration Programs, Purpose and Definitions Generally.

§ 14-208.5. Purpose.

The General Assembly recognizes that sex offenders often pose a high risk of engaging in sex offenses even after being released from incarceration or commitment and that protection of the public from sex offenders is of paramount governmental interest.

The General Assembly also recognizes that persons who commit certain other types of offenses against minors, such as kidnapping, pose significant and unacceptable threats to the public safety and welfare of the children in this State and that the protection of those children is of great governmental interest. Further, the General Assembly recognizes that law enforcement officers' efforts to protect communities, conduct investigations, and quickly apprehend offenders who commit sex offenses or certain offenses against minors are impaired by the lack of information available to law enforcement agencies about convicted offenders who live within the agency's jurisdiction. Release of information about these offenders will further the governmental interests of public safety so long as the information released is rationally related to the furtherance of those goals.

Therefore, it is the purpose of this Article to assist law enforcement agencies' efforts to protect communities by requiring persons who are convicted of sex offenses or of certain other offenses committed against minors to register with law enforcement agencies, to require the exchange of relevant information about those offenders among law enforcement agencies, and to authorize the access to necessary and relevant information about those offenders to others as provided in this Article. (1995, c. 545, s. 1; 1997-516, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 545, s. 3, made this article effective January 1, 1996, and applicable to all persons convicted on or after that date, and to all persons released from a penal institution on or after that date.

Session Laws 1995, c. 545, s. 3, provides that this act shall be known as the "Amy Jackson Law".

§ 14-208.6A. Lifetime registration requirements for criminal offenders.

It is the objective of the General Assembly to establish a 10-year registration requirement for persons convicted of certain offenses against minors or sexually violent offenses. It is the further objective of the General Assembly to establish a more stringent set of registration requirements for recidivists, persons who commit aggravated offenses, and for a subclass of highly dangerous sex offenders who are determined by a sentencing court with the assistance of a board of experts to be sexually violent predators.

To accomplish this objective, there are established two registration programs: the Sex Offender and Public Protection Registration Program and the Sexually Violent Predator Registration Program. Any person convicted of an offense against a minor or of a sexually violent offense as defined by this Article shall register as an offender in accordance with Part 2 of this Article. Any person who is a recidivist, who commits an aggravated offense, or who is determined to be a sexually violent predator shall register as such in accordance with Part 3 of this Article.

The information obtained under these programs shall be immediately shared with the appropriate local, State, federal, and out-of-state law enforcement officials and penal institutions. In addition, the information designated under G.S. 14-208.10(a) as public record shall be readily available to and accessible by the public. However, the identity of the victim is not public record and shall not be released as a public record. (1997-516, s. 1; 2001-373, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-373, s. 2, effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, rewrote the section catchline, which read "Registration requirements for criminal offenders and for criminal offenders determined to be sexually violent predators"; inserted "recidivists, persons who commit aggravated offenses, and for" in the second sentence of the first paragraph; and inserted "who is a recidivist, who commits an aggravated offense, or who is" in the last sentence of the second paragraph.

§ 14-208.6B. Registration requirements for juveniles transferred to and convicted in superior court.

A juvenile transferred to superior court pursuant to G.S. 7B-2200 who is convicted of a sexually violent offense or an offense against a minor as defined in G.S. 14-208.6 shall register in accordance with this Article just as an adult convicted of the same offense must register. (1997-516, s. 1; 1998-202, s. 13(e).)

§ 14-208.6C. Discontinuation of registration requirement.

The period of registration required by any of the provisions of this Article shall be discontinued only if the conviction requiring registration is reversed, vacated, or set aside, or if the registrant has been granted an unconditional pardon of innocence for the offense requiring registration. (2001-373, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-373, s. 12, makes this section effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date.

Part 2. Sex Offender and Public Protection Registration Program.

§ 14-208.7. Registration.

(a) A person who is a State resident and who has a reportable conviction shall be required to maintain registration with the sheriff of the county where the person resides. If the person moves to North Carolina from outside this State, the person shall register within 10 days of establishing residence in this State, or whenever the person has been present in the State for 15 days, whichever comes first. If the person is a current resident of North Carolina, the person shall register:

(1) Within 10 days of release from a penal institution or arrival in a county to live outside a penal institution; or

(2) Immediately upon conviction for a reportable offense where an active term of imprisonment was not imposed.

Registration shall be maintained for a period of 10 years following release from a penal institution. If no active term of imprisonment was imposed, registration shall be maintained for a period of 10 years following each conviction for a reportable offense.

(a1) A person who is a nonresident student or a nonresident worker and who has a reportable conviction, or is required to register in the person's state of residency, is required to maintain registration with the sheriff of the county where the person works or attends school. In addition to the information required under subsection (b) of this section, the person shall also provide information regarding the person's school or place of employment as appropriate and the person's address in his or her state of residence.

(b) The Division shall provide each sheriff with forms for registering persons as required by this Article. The registration form shall require:

(1) The person's full name, each alias, date of birth, sex, race, height, weight, eye color, hair color, drivers license number, and home address;

(2) The type of offense for which the person was convicted, the date of conviction, and the sentence imposed;

(3) A current photograph; and

(4) The person's fingerprints.

The sheriff shall photograph the individual at the time of registration and take fingerprints from the individual at the time of registration both of which will be kept as part of the registration form. The registrant will not be required to pay any fees for the photograph or fingerprints taken at the time of registration.

(c) When a person registers, the sheriff with whom the person registered shall immediately send the registration information to the Division in a manner determined by the Division. The sheriff shall retain the original registration form and other information collected and shall compile the information that is a public record under this Part into a county registry. (1995, c. 545, s. 1; 1997-516, s. 1; 2001-373, s. 4.)

§ 14-208.8. Prerelease notification.

(a) At least 10 days, but not earlier than 30 days, before a person who will be subject to registration under this Article is due to be released from a penal institution, an official of the penal institution shall:

(1) Inform the person of the person's duty to register under this Article and require the person to sign a written statement that the person was so informed or, if the person refuses to sign the statement, certify that the person was so informed;

(2) Obtain the registration information required under G.S. 14-208.7(b)(1) and (2), as well as the address where the person expects to reside upon the person's release; and

(3) Send the Division and the sheriff of the county in which the person expects to reside the information collected in accordance with subdivision (2) of this subsection.

(b) If a person who is subject to registration under this Article does not receive an active term of imprisonment, the court pronouncing sentence shall conduct, at the time of sentencing, the notification procedures specified in subsection (a) of this section. (1995, c. 545, s. 1; 1997-516, s. 1.)

§ 14-208.9. Change of address.

(a) If a person required to register changes address, the person shall provide written notice of the new address not later than the tenth day after the change to the sheriff of the county with whom the person had last registered. Upon receipt of the notice, the sheriff shall immediately forward this information to the Division. If the person moves to another county in this State, the Division shall inform the sheriff of the new county of the person's new residence.

(b) If a person required to register moves to another state, the person shall provide written notice of the new address not later than 10 days after the change to the sheriff of the county with whom the person had last registered. Upon receipt of the notice, the sheriff shall notify the person that the person must comply with the registration requirements in the new state of residence. The sheriff shall also immediately forward the change of address information to the Division, and the Division shall inform the appropriate state official in the state to which the registrant moves of the person's new address. The information in the county registry shall be verified annually for each registrant as follows:

(1) Every year on the anniversary of a person's initial registration date, the Division shall mail a nonforwardable verification form to the last reported address of the person.

(2) The person shall return the verification form to the sheriff within 10 days after the receipt of the form.

(3) The verification form shall be signed by the person and shall indicate whether the person still resides at the address last reported to the sheriff. If the person has a different address, then the person shall indicate that fact and the new address.

(4) If the person fails to return the verification form to the sheriff within 10 days after receipt of the form, the person is subject to the penalties provided in G.S. 14-208.11. If the verification form is returned to the sheriff as undeliverable, the sheriff shall make a reasonable attempt to verify that the person is residing at the registered address. If the person cannot be found at the registered address and has failed to report a change of address, the person is subject to the penalties provided in G.S. 14-208.11, unless the person reports in person to the sheriff and proves that the person has not changed his or her residential address. (a) The following information regarding a person required to register under this Article is public record and shall be available for public inspection: name, sex, address, physical description, picture, conviction date, offense for which registration was required, the sentence imposed as a result of the conviction, and registration status. The information obtained under G.S. 14-208.22 regarding a person's medical records or documentation of treatment for the person's mental abnormality or personality disorder shall not be a part of the public record.

The sheriff shall release any other relevant information that is necessary to protect the public concerning a specific person, but shall not release the identity of the victim of the offense that required registration under this Article.

(b) Any person may obtain a copy of an individual's registration form, a part of the county registry, or all of the county registry, by submitting a written request for the information to the sheriff. However, the identity of the victim of an offense that requires registration under this Article shall not be released. The sheriff may charge a reasonable fee for duplicating costs and for mailing costs when appropriate. (1995, c. 545, s. 1; 1997-516, s. 1.)

§ 14-208.11. Failure to register; falsification of verification notice; failure to return verification form; order for arrest.

(3) Fails to return a verification notice as required under G.S. 14-208.9A.

(4) Forges or submits under false pretenses the information or verification notices required under this Article.

(a1) If a person commits a violation of subsection (a) of this section, the probation officer, parole officer, or any other law enforcement officer who is aware of the violation shall immediately arrest the person in accordance with G.S. 15A-401, or seek an order for the person's arrest in accordance with G.S. 15A-305.

(b) Before a person convicted of a violation of this Article is due to be released from a penal institution, an official of the penal institution shall conduct the prerelease notification procedures specified under G.S. 14-208.8(a)(2) and (3). The court may for good cause shown allow late filing of the notice, grant additional time to the parties to prepare for trial, or make other appropriate orders.
(b) Prior to sentencing a person as a sexually violent predator, the court shall order a presentence investigation in accordance with G.S. 15A-1332(c). However, the study of the defendant and whether the defendant is a sexually violent predator shall be conducted by a board of experts selected by the Department of Correction. The court's findings regarding whether the juvenile is a danger to the community and whether the juvenile shall register shall be entered into the court record. (1997-516, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — Law of perjury was intended to afford defendant greater protection against the chance of unjust conviction than is ordinarily afforded in prosecuting for crime. State v. Horne, 28 N.C. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

Definition of Perjury. — Perjury, as defined by common law and enlarged by this section, is a false statement under oath, knowingly, willfully and designedly made, in a proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction, or concerning a matter wherein the affiant is required by law to be sworn, as to some matter material to the issue or point in question. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949); State v. Sailor, 240 N.C. 113, 81 S.E.2d 191 (1954); State v. Lucas, 244 N.C. 53, 92 S.E.2d 401 (1956); State v. Arthur, 244 N.C. 582, 94 S.E.2d 646 (1956); State v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

This section does not specifically define perjury or state all the elements essential to constitute the crime. It enlarges the scope of the criminality of a false oath, and prescribes punishment. The definition is derived from the common law. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949).

Essential Elements. — Elements essential to constitute perjury are substantially these: A false statement under oath, knowingly, willfully and designedly made, in a proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction, or concerning a matter wherein the affiant is required by law to be sworn, as to some matter material to the issue or point in question. To constitute materiality essential to sustain a charge of perjury the false testimony must be so connected with the fact directly in issue as to have a legitimate tendency to prove or disprove such fact. State v. Chaney, 256 N.C. 255, 123 S.E.2d 498 (1962).

The administration of an oath is an essential element of perjury. State v. Glisson, 93 N.C. 506 (1885).

As is jurisdiction of the court. Boling v. Luther, 4 N.C. 635 (1816); State v. Alexander, 11 N.C. 182 (1825); Governor ex rel. Halcombe v. Deaver, 3 N.C. 56 (1842).

Offense Must Be Willfull and Corrupt. — Where the defendant swears to an answer in a civil action before one authorized to administer the oath and the answer contains a false statement of fact, in order to convict him of perjury under the provisions of this section it must be shown that he "willfully and corruptly" committed the offense. State v. Dowd, 201 N.C. 714, 161 S.E. 205 (1931).

What Statements Are Not Perjurious. — False statements made unintentionally or with the honest belief that one is telling the truth are not perjurious. Hill v. Winn-Dixie Charlotte, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 518, 397 S.E.2d 347 (1990).

False Statement Must Be Material to Issue. — A false statement under oath must be so connected with the fact directly in issue as to have a legitimate tendency to prove or disprove such fact, in order to be material to the issue and constitute a basis for a prosecution for perjury. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949).

In a prosecution for willful failure of defendant to support his illegitimate child, defendant swore he had not had sexual intercourse with prosecutrix and was not the father of her child, and testified as to the number of times he had visited prosecutrix. In a subsequent prosecution for perjury it was made to appear that defendant had visited prosecutrix or had been seen with her more times than he had admitted under oath, but there was no evidence that he was the father of the child. It was held that the proof of false testimony did not relate to matters determinative of the issue in the first prosecution, and the evidence was insufficient to withstand nonsuit in the prosecution for perjury. State v. Smith, 230 N.C. 198, 52 S.E.2d 348 (1949).

One of the essential elements of the crime of perjury is that the false statement must be material to an issue or point in question. State v. Chaney, 256 N.C. 255, 123 S.E.2d 498 (1962). See also, State v. Cline, 146 N.C. 640, 61 S.E. 522 (1908); State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

Materiality of False Testimony Is a Question of Law. — In a trial for perjury, the question of the materiality of the alleged false testimony is in its nature a question of law for the court rather than of fact for the jury. State v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

Solicitation to commit perjury is a felony within the terms of § 14-3(b) and is properly within the jurisdiction of the superior court. State v. Huff, 56 N.C. App. 721, 289 S.E.2d 604, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 389, 294 S.E.2d 215 (1982).

Acquittal No Shield from Charge of Perjury. — To hold that a person could go into a court of justice and by perjured testimony secure an acquittal and by that acquittal be shielded from a charge of perjury would be a dangerous doctrine. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

A verdict of acquittal is not equivalent to an affirmative finding that all of defendant's testimony at a former trial was true. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

Former acquittal of malicious injury to personal property under § 14-160 would not support a plea of former jeopardy in a prosecution for perjury committed at the trial, since the crimes are not the same either in fact or in law and the charge of perjury was not based on the assumption that defendant was guilty of the charge of malicious injury, and his acquittal upon the latter charge did not necessarily establish the fact that all material evidence given by him in that case was true. State v. Leonard, 236 N.C. 126, 72 S.E.2d 1 (1952), cert. denied, 344 U.S. 916, 73 S. Ct. 339, 97 L. Ed. 706 (1953).

Civil Action Will Not Lie. — Aside from defamation and malicious prosecution, the courts refuse to recognize any injury from false testimony on which a civil action for damages can be maintained, and no action for damages lies for false testimony in a civil suit, whereby the plaintiff fails to recover a judgment, or a judgment is rendered against him. Brewer v. Carolina Coach Co., 253 N.C. 257, 116 S.E.2d 725 (1960).

It seems to be the general rule that a civil action in tort cannot be maintained upon the ground that a defendant gave false testimony or procured other persons to give false or perjured testimony. Brewer v. Carolina Coach Co., 253 N.C. 257, 116 S.E.2d 725 (1960).

Perjured testimony and the subornation of perjured testimony are criminal offenses, but neither are torts supporting a civil action for damages. Gillikin v. Springle, 254 N.C. 240, 118 S.E.2d 611 (1961).

Vacating Judgment Because of Perjured Testimony. — A judgment cannot be vacated because of perjured testimony unless the party charged with perjury has been indicted and convicted or he has passed beyond the jurisdiction of courts and is not amenable to criminal process. Gillikin v. Springle, 254 N.C. 240, 118 S.E.2d 611 (1961).

Irregularity of Warrant Immaterial. — When perjury is charged to have been committed by a witness in the trial of a criminal proceeding which was begun by warrant, if the court had jurisdiction to investigate the offense charged, it is no defense that the warrant was issued without complaint or affidavit. State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890).

Burden of Proof on State. — The burden is not on the defendant in perjury to show the truth of the matter at issue, but the burden is on the State to show that it is false. State v. Cline, 150 N.C. 854, 64 S.E. 591 (1909), overruled on other grounds in State v. Hawley, 186 N.C. 433, 119 S.E. 888 (1923).

Corroborative Evidence Required. — To prove the falsity of the oath, the evidence must not necessarily equal in weight the testimony of two witnesses. It is sufficient if there is the testimony of one witness and corroborative circumstances sufficient to turn the scale against the oath which is charged to have been false. State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890).

In a prosecution for perjury it is required that the falsity of the oath be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances sufficient to turn the scales against the defendant's oath. State v. Sailor, 240 N.C. 113, 81 S.E.2d 191 (1954). See also State v. Arthur, 244 N.C. 582, 94 S.E.2d 646 (1956); State v. Allen, 260 N.C. 220, 132 S.E.2d 302 (1963).

To sustain a conviction for perjury, the falsity of the oath must be directly proved by one witness and there must be corroborating evidence of independent and supplemental character, sufficient to resolve "the dilemma of weighing [one] oath against [another]." State v. Horne, 28 N.C. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

In a prosecution for perjury it is required that the falsity of the oath be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances sufficient to turn the scales against the defendant's oath. State v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

Circumstantial evidence of perjury alone is not sufficient. State v. Horne, 28 N.C. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 715 (1976).

Evidence Must Relate to Statement upon Which Indictment Predicated. — Testimony of two or more witnesses as to conflicting statements made by defendant while under oath in courts of competent jurisdiction, but without evidence that the statement upon which the bill of indictment was predicated was the false testimony, is insufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution for perjury. State v. Allen, 260 N.C. 220, 132 S.E.2d 302 (1963).

Evidence Sufficient. — The direct oath of one witness and proof of declarations of the prisoner in an action for perjury are sufficient to convict. State v. Molier, 12 N.C. 263 (1827).

Applied in Henry v. Deen, 310 N.C. 75, 310 S.E.2d 326 (1984).

§ 14-210. Subornation of perjury.

If any person shall, by any means, procure another person to commit such willful and corrupt perjury as is mentioned in G.S. 14-209, the person so offending shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1791, c. 338, s. 2, P.R.; R.C., c. 34, s. 50; Code, s. 1093; Rev., s. 3616; C.S., s. 4365; 1993, c. 539, s. 1203; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Elements of Offense. — The crime of subornation of perjury consists of two elements, namely, the commission of perjury by the person suborned, and willfully procuring or inducing him to do so by the suborner. The guilt of both the suborned and the suborner must be proved on the trial of the latter. The commission of the crime of perjury is the basic element in the crime of subornation of perjury. State v. Sailor, 240 N.C. 113, 81 S.E.2d 191 (1954);

State v. Lucas, 244 N.C. 53, 92 S.E.2d 401 (1956); State v. McBride, 15 N.C. App. 742, 190 S.E.2d 658 (1972).

In a prosecution under this section, the State was required to establish, inter alia, that the alleged perjurer made the alleged false statement under oath in a court of competent jurisdiction and that such false statement was material to the matter then in issue. State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

The commission of the crime of perjury is the basic element in the crime of subornation of perjury. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

The crime of subornation of perjury consists of two elements, the commission of perjury by the person suborned, and willfully procuring or inducing him to do so by the suborner. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

The guilt of both the suborned and the suborner must be proved on the trial of the latter. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966).

The suborner of perjury and the perjurer stand on an equal footing, especially in respect of turpitude and punishment. State v. Cannon, 227 N.C. 338, 42 S.E.2d 344 (1947).

How Falsity of Alleged Perjurer's Oath Established. — In a prosecution for subornation of perjury, the falsity of the oath of the alleged perjurer must be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or one witness and corroborating circumstances. State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

In a prosecution for perjury or subornation of perjury, it is required that the falsity of the oath be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances, sometimes called adminicular circumstances. State v. King, 267 N.C. 631, 148 S.E.2d 647 (1966); State v. McBride, 15 N.C. App. 742, 190 S.E.2d 658 (1972).

The requirement of proving by independent circumstances the commission of perjury does not apply to the procurement element of the offense of subornation of perjury. State v. McBride, 15 N.C. App. 742, 190 S.E.2d 658 (1972).

Solicitation to commit perjury is a felony within the terms of § 14-3(b) and is properly within the jurisdiction of the superior court. State v. Huff, 56 N.C. App. 721, 289 S.E.2d 604, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 389, 294 S.E.2d 215 (1982).

Competency of Corroborative Evidence. — See State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

Instructions held erroneous for failure to instruct the jury that the alleged perjury must be established by the testimony of two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances and failure to instruct that the State was required to establish, inter alia, that the alleged perjurer testified as charged in the bill of indictment. State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

§ 14-211. Perjury before legislative committees.

If any person shall willfully and corruptly swear falsely to any fact material to the investigation of any matter before any committee or commission of either house of the General Assembly, he shall be subject to all the pains and penalties of willful and corrupt perjury, and, on conviction in the Superior Court of Wake County, shall be punished as a Class I felon. ARTICLE 29.

Bribery.

§ 14-217. Bribery of officials.

(a) If any person holding office under the laws of this State who, except in payment of his legal salary, fees or perquisites, shall receive, or consent to receive, directly or indirectly, anything of value or personal advantage, or the promise thereof, for performing or omitting to perform any official act, which lay within the scope of his official authority and was connected with the discharge of his official and legal duties, or with the express or implied understanding that his official action, or omission to act, is to be in any degree influenced thereby, he shall be punished as a Class F felon.

(b) Indictments issued under these provisions shall specify:

(1) The thing of value or personal advantage sought to be obtained; and

(2) The specific act or omission sought to be obtained; and

(3) That the act or omission sought to be obtained lay within the scope of the defendant's official authority and was connected with the discharge of his official and legal duties.

(c) Repealed by Session Laws 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 539, s. 1207, effective October 1, 1994. CASE NOTES

Bribery Defined. — Bribery is the voluntary offering, giving, receiving or soliciting of any sum of money or thing of value with the corrupt intent to influence the recipient's action as a public officer or official in the discharge of a public legal duty. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

A person is guilty of bribery if, while holding a public office, he receives something of value for omitting to perform an official act with the express or implied understanding that his official action or inaction was to be influenced by the thing of value. State v. Stanley, 60 N.C. App. 568, 299 S.E.2d 464 (1983).

The distinction between bribery and extortion seems to be that the former offense consists in offering a present or receiving one, the latter in demanding a fee or present by color of office. State v. Pritchard, 107 N.C. 921, 12 S.E. 50 (1890).

Necessity of Proving Corrupt Intent. — On the trial of an officer for bribery in taking unlawful fees, it is necessary to prove a corrupt intent. State v. Pritchard, 107 N.C. 921, 12 S.E. 50 (1890).

And Receipt of Anything of Value Influencing Official Acts. — This section has an essential element of the offense of bribery of officials the receipt of anything of value with the express or implied understanding that his official acts are to be in any degree influenced thereby. State v. Smith, 237 N.C. 1, 74 S.E.2d 291 (1953).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An allegation in an indictment against a public officer for unlawfully receiving compensation for the performance of his duty, that defendant "did receive and consent to receive" such compensation, is sufficient and is not defective because of the use of "and" instead of "or" as used in the statute. State v. Wynne, 118 N.C. 1206, 24 S.E. 216 (1896).

Evidence Sufficient for Submission to Jury. — Evidence in this case of one defendant's guilt of paying or delivering money or merchandise, directly and through agents, to each of defendant policemen to influence them in the performance of their duties, and of the acceptance by each defendant policeman of such payments or delivering with intent and understanding that his actions as a police officer would be influenced thereby, was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury as to each defendant. State v. Smith, 237 N.C. 1, 74 S.E.2d 291 (1953).

Applied in State v. Cofer, 205 N.C. 653, 172 S.E. 176 (1934).

§ 14-218. Offering bribes.

If any person shall offer a bribe, whether it be accepted or not, he shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1870-1, c. 232; Code, s. 992; Rev., s. 3569; C.S., s. 4373; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1208; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Cross References. — For structured sentencing provisions effective October 1, 1994, see § 15A-1340.10 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Indictment. — The general rule that an indictment for a statutory offense is sufficient, if the offense is charged in the words of the statute, either literally or substantially, or in equivalent words, does not apply where the words of the statute, as in this section, do not set forth all the essential elements necessary to constitute the offense sought to be charged. In such a situation the statutory words must be supplemented in the indictment by other allegations which explicitly and accurately set forth every essential element of the offense with such exactitude as to leave no doubt in the minds of the accused and the court as to the specific offense intended to be charged. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — The offer of money to an Alcohol Beverage Control (ABC) enforcement officer with the request that the officer arrest or stop a person for driving while impaired is a bribe within the meaning of this section. State v. Hair, 114 N.C. App. 464, 442 S.E.2d 163 (1994).

A corrupt intent means a wrongful design to acquire some pecuniary profit or other advantage. State v. Hair, 114 N.C. App. 464, 442 S.E.2d 163 (1994).

An indictment for offering a bribe or bribery must allege by definite and particular statement, and not as a mere conclusion, that the acts were done to influence the performance of some public legal duty, and it must further appear, at least as a reasonable inference, that defendant had knowledge of the official character of him to whom the bribe was offered. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

Where an indictment for bribing or offering a bribe to a State highway patrolman fails to allege the official act the accused intended to influence, defendant's motion to quash should be allowed. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

Same — Not Necessary to Charge That Bribed Juror Received Fee. — In a prosecution under this section it is not necessary that the indictment should charge that the juror received any fee or other compensation, the statutes making a distinction between bribery and an offer to bribe. State v. Noland, 204 N.C. 329, 168 S.E. 412 (1933).

Competency of Evidence. — Evidence is competent which shows the quo animo, intent, design, guilty knowledge or scienter with which the defendant charged under this section gave money or other things of value to an official. State v. Smith, 237 N.C. 1, 74 S.E.2d 291 (1953).

§ 14-220. Bribery of jurors.

If any juror, either directly or indirectly, shall take anything from the plaintiff or defendant in a civil suit, or from any defendant in a State prosecution, or from any other person, to give his verdict, every such juror, and the person who shall give such juror any fee or reward to influence his verdict, or induce or procure him to make any gain or profit by his verdict, shall be punished as a Class F felon. (5 Edw. III, c. 10; 34 Edw. III, c. 8; 38 Edw. III, c. 12; R.C., c. 34, s. 34; Code, s. 990; Rev., s. 3697; C.S., s. 4375; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1209; 1994, Ex. Obstructing Justice.

§ 14-221. Breaking or entering jails with intent to injure prisoners.

If any person shall conspire to break or enter any jail or other place of confinement of prisoners charged with crime or under sentence, for the purpose of killing or otherwise injuring any prisoner confined therein; or if any person shall engage in breaking or entering any such jail or other place of confinement of such prisoners with intent to kill or injure any prisoner, he shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1893, c. 461, s. 1; Rev., s. 3698; C.S., s. 4376; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1210; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Conviction of Attempt. — On an indictment under this section as construed with former § 15-128 and § 15-170, the defendant may be found guilty of an attempt. State v. Rumple, 178 N.C. 717, 100 S.E. 622 (1919).

Specific Intent Is Element of Offense. — All of the codified obstruction of justice offenses found at § 14-221 through § 14-227 are specific intent crimes, requiring that the state present evidence that the defendant acted willfully or with purpose in committing the offense. State v. Eastman, 113 N.C. App. 347, 438 S.E.2d 460 (1994).

Indictment Need Not Charge Accomplices. — It was error to quash a bill of indictment under this section which charged the defendant with conspiring "with others" to commit the crime of lynching, because it did not name the others or charge that they were unknown. State v. Lewis, 142 N.C. 626, 55 S.E. 600 (1906).

Indictment in Adjoining County. — In an indictment for lynching it was error to quash the bill on the ground that it appeared on the face of the bill that the offense charged was not committed in the county in which the bill was found, but in an adjoining county. State v. Lewis, 142 N.C. 626, 55 S.E. 600 (1906).

§ 14-221.1. Altering, destroying, or stealing evidence of criminal conduct.

Any person who breaks or enters any building, structure, compartment, vehicle, file, cabinet, drawer, or any other enclosure wherein evidence relevant to any criminal offense or court proceeding is kept or stored with the purpose of altering, destroying or stealing such evidence; or any person who alters, destroys, or steals any evidence relevant to any criminal offense or court proceeding shall be punished as a Class I felon.

As used in this section, the word evidence shall mean any article or document in the possession of a law-enforcement officer or officer of the General Court of Justice being retained for the purpose of being introduced in evidence or having been introduced in evidence or being preserved as evidence. (1975, c. 806, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14.)

CASE NOTES

Illegal to Destroy Any Relevant Evidence. — This section makes it illegal to destroy evidence no matter what that evidence is (a green vegetable material or actually marijuana) so long as it is "evidence relevant to any criminal offense." State v. Tate, 300 N.C. 180, 265 S.E.2d 223 (1980).

Conviction of defendant was not obtained in violation of this section where unidentifiable fingerprints lifted from the scene of the crime were thrown away by the State as irrelevant. State v. Pennell, 54 N.C. App. 252, 283 S.E.2d 397 (1981), appeal dismissed, 304 N.C. 732, 288 S.E.2d 804 (1982).

§ 14-221.2. Altering court documents or entering unauthorized judgments.

Any person who without lawful authority intentionally enters a judgment upon or materially alters or changes any criminal or civil process, criminal or civil pleading, or other official case record is guilty of a Class H felony. (1979, c. 526; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 14; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14.)

§ 14-222: Repealed by Session Laws 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 767, s. 30(12).

§ 14-223. Resisting officers.

If any person shall willfully and unlawfully resist, delay or obstruct a public officer in discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1889, c. 51, s. 1; Rev., s. 3700; C.S., s. 4378; 1969, c. 1224, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 136; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Nature and Evidence of Offense.
III. Indictments and Warrants.
IV. Instructions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Singletary, 73 N.C. App. 612, 327 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

Section Provides Fair Notice of Proscribed Conduct. — This section gives a person of ordinary intelligence fair notice of the behavior it proscribes. The legislature has drafted with reasonable precision a comprehensible rule of conduct. State v. Singletary, 73 N.C. App. 612, 327 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

This section is not so generally phrased that it proscribes innocent but orderly communication with police officers. State v. Singletary, 73 N.C. App. 612, 327 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

Communications simply intended to assert rights, seek clarification or obtain information in a peaceful way are not chilled by this section. Burton v. City of Durham, 118 N.C. App. 676, 457 S.E.2d 329 (1995).

Term "unlawfully" in this section is conclusory but does not make the statute as a whole unconstitutionally vague. State v. Singletary, 73 N.C. App. 612, 327 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section is to enforce orderly conduct in the important mission of preserving the peace, carrying out the judgments and orders of the court, and upholding the dignity of the law, and the provisions of this section provide for safeguards that are essential to the welfare of the public. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Construction with Federal Law. — Defendants were entitled to summary judgment as to plaintiff's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim for unlawful arrest, where officers had probable cause to believe that plaintiff had committed, at least, three offenses; that is, discharging a firearm in violation of a county ordinance, resisting, obstructing, and delaying an officer in carrying out his duties, and threatening bodily harm to an officer. Bell v. Dawson, 144 F. Supp. 2d 454 (W.D.N.C. 2001).

Resisting Officer and Assaulting Officer Are Separate Offenses. — The charge of resisting an office and the charge of assaulting a public officer while discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his officer are separate and distinct offenses and the trial judge did not err in failing to "merge" them. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

There is a distinction between the offenses of resisting an officer under this section and assault on an officer under former § 14-33(b)(4). In the offense of resisting an officer, the resisting of the public officer in the performance of some duty is the primary conduct proscribed by that statute and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being resisted is of paramount importance and is very material to the preparation of the defendant's defense, while in the offense of assaulting a public officer in the performance of some duty, the assault on the officer is the primary conduct proscribed by the statute and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being assaulted is of secondary importance. State v. Waller, 37 N.C. App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

Resisting Arrest Is Not Necessarily a Lesser Included Offense of Assaulting an Officer. — The offense of unlawfully resisting, delaying or obstructing a public officer in the discharge of a duty of his office is not a lesser degree of the offense of assaulting a law-enforcement officer while he is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office. This does not eliminate the possibility that the facts in a given case might constitute a violation of both statutes. In such a case the defendant could not be punished twice for the same conduct. State v. Hardy, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

But Conviction of Both Resisting and Assaulting on Same Evidence Violates Double Jeopardy. — Where the record revealed that defendant was convicted of both resisting arrest and assault on an officer in the performance of his duties on the same evidence, the defendant was twice convicted and sentenced for the same criminal offense. The fact that defendant was given concurrent sentences did not make the duplication of punishment and sentences any less a violation of defendant's constitutional right not to be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense. State v. Raynor, 33 N.C. App. 698, 236 S.E.2d 307 (1977).

Where a defendant had been tried under two warrants, one for violating this section and the other for violating former § 14-33(c)(4), and where each warrant included all the elements of the offense charged in the other, and each specified only acts of violence which defendant directed at the officer's person while he was attempting to hold defendant in custody, the defendant was twice convicted and sentenced for the same criminal offense, and the constitutional guaranty against double jeopardy protected him from multiple punishments for the same offense. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972), overruled on other grounds, State v. Barnes, 324 N.C. 539, 380 S.E.2d 118 (1989).

Thus State Must Elect Between Duplicate Charges. — In a prosecution for resisting arrest and assaulting a police officer, where the warrants charge the same conduct and the evidence clearly shows that no line of demarcation between defendant's resistance of arrest and his assaults upon the officer could be drawn, the assaults being the means by which the resistance was accomplished, the State must elect between the duplicate charges. State v. Hardy, 33 N.C. App. 722, 236 S.E.2d 709, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 363, 238 S.E.2d 150 (1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 298 N.C. 191, 257 S.E.2d 426 (1979).

II. NATURE AND EVIDENCE OF OFFENSE.

"Resist, Delay or Obstruct." — The words "delay" and "obstruct" appear to be synonymous as used in this section. And perhaps the word "resist" would infer more direct and forceful action. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

This section will apply to cases falling within any one of the descriptive words, since the words describing the act are joined by the disjunctive "or". State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

In order to convict a person of a violation of this section, the State does not have to show that a defendant resisted, delayed and obstructed an officer. It is sufficient if a defendant unlawfully and willfully resists, or delays, or obstructs an officer. State v. Leigh, 10 N.C. App. 202, 178 S.E.2d 85 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

"Public Officer" — An alcoholic beverage control officer is a "public officer" within the meaning of this section. State v. Taft, 256 N.C. 441, 124 S.E.2d 169 (1962).

Same — Collector of Back Tax. — See State v. Alston, 127 N.C. 518, 37 S.E. 137 (1900).

Same — A State highway patrolman, when acting as such, is a public officer within the purview of this section. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

"Discharging a Duty of His Office". — A deputy sheriff is discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office when he begins an investigation of a crime reported to him by eyewitnesses, under circumstances which appear to threaten a further breach of the peace. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

A police officer attempting to preserve the peace by placing the defendant under arrest for disorderly conduct was performing a duty of his office when the defendant resisted arrest. State v. Cunningham, 34 N.C. App. 72, 237 S.E.2d 334 (1977).

"Arrest". — The term "arrest" has a technical meaning, applicable in legal proceedings. It implies that a person is thereby restrained of his liberty by some officer or agent of the law, armed with lawful process, authorizing and requiring the arrest to be made. It is intended to serve, and does serve, the end of bringing the person arrested personally within the custody and control of the law, for the purpose specified in, or contemplated by, the process. State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

In criminal procedure an arrest consists in the taking into custody of another person under real or assumed authority for the purpose of holding or detaining him to answer a criminal charge or of preventing the commission of a criminal offense. State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

An "arrest" does not necessarily terminate the instant a person is taken into custody; arrest also includes "bringing the person personally within the custody and control of the law." State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

The defendant's contention that at the time he was in the magistrate's office his arrest had been consummated, and that the acts alleged to have occurred between the magistrate's office and the jail were not in connection with his arrest, and that, therefore, he was not guilty of resisting arrest, was rejected. State v. Leak, 11 N.C. App. 344, 181 S.E.2d 224 (1971).

Resisting Officer in Performance of Some Duty Is Primary Conduct Proscribed. — In the offense of resisting an officer, the resisting of the public officer in the performance of some duty is the primary conduct proscribed by this section, and the particular duty that the officer is performing while being resisted is of paramount importance and is very material to the preparation of the defense. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320 (1972), appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

Conduct Not Limited to Resisting Arrest. — The conduct proscribed under this section is not limited to resisting an arrest but includes any resistance, delay, or obstruction of an officer in the discharge of his duties. State v. Lynch, 94 N.C. App. 330, 380 S.E.2d 397 (1989).

There does not have to be an assault on or actual physical interference with the officer in order to constitute a crime under this section. Neither does the conduct of a defendant have to be so effective that it permanently prevents the officer from making his investigation. State v. Leigh, 10 N.C. App. 202, 178 S.E.2d 85 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

No actual assault or force or violence is necessary to complete the offense described by this section. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320 (1972), appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

This section prohibits only willful resistance, delay or obstruction of a police officer in attempting to discharge or in discharging a duty of his office. State v. Singletary, 73 N.C. App. 612, 327 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

Not Mere Disagreement or Criticism. — An individual who disagrees with or criticizes a police officer, but who does not intend to resist, obstruct or delay the officer's performance of his duty cannot be convicted under this section. State v. Singletary, 73 N.C. App. 612, 327 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

Conduct Not Constituting Obstruction of Officer. — Merely remonstrating with an officer in behalf of another, or criticizing or questioning an officer while he is performing his duty, when done in an orderly manner, does not amount to obstructing or delaying an officer in the performance of his duties. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971); State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972). Citizen may advise another of his constitutional rights in an orderly and peaceable manner while the officer is performing his duty without necessarily obstructing or delaying the officer in the performance of his duty. State v. Leigh, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Vague, intemperate language used without apparent purpose is not sufficient to constitute the offense of resisting, delaying and obstructing an officer. State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972).

Where defendant was merely arguing with the officer and protesting the confiscation of his property, he had committed no offense and the officer had no authority to arrest him. State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972).

Preventing Road Overseer Cutting Ditch. — See State v. New, 130 N.C. 731, 41 S.E. 1033 (1902).

Duty to Submit Peaceably to Lawful Arrest. — When a person has been lawfully arrested by a lawful officer and understands that he is under arrest, it is his duty to submit peaceably to the arrest. State v. Summrell, 13 N.C. App. 1, 185 S.E.2d 241 (1971), aff'd, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972).

Where State's evidence showed that defendant continued to struggle after the officers apprehended him, evidence was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction for resisting a public officer. State v. Lynch, 94 N.C. App. 330, 380 S.E.2d 397 (1989).

A person resisting an illegal arrest is not resisting an officer within the discharge of his official duties. Roberts v. Swain, 126 N.C. App. 712, 487 S.E.2d 760 (1997).

Right to Resist Unlawful Arrest. — The offense of resisting arrest presupposes a lawful arrest both at common law and under this section. And every person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest by the use of force. But such right to use force is not unlimited, and only such force may be used as reasonably appears to be necessary to prevent unlawful restraint of liberty. State v. Mobley, 240 N.C. 476, 83 S.E.2d 100 (1954).

When an officer attempts to make an arrest without a warrant and in so doing exceeds his lawful authority, he may be resisted as in self-defense, and in such case the person resisting cannot be convicted under this section of the offense of resisting an officer engaged in the discharge of his duties. State v. Wright, 1 N.C. App. 479, 162 S.E.2d 56 (1968); aff'd, 274 N.C. 380, 163 S.E.2d 897 (1968).

Every person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest and he may use such force as reasonably appears to be necessary to prevent the unlawful arrest. State v. Allen, 14 N.C. App. 485, 188 S.E.2d 568 (1972).

The offense of resisting arrest, both at common law and under this section, presupposes a lawful arrest. Every person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest. In such case the person attempting the arrest stands in the position of a wrongdoer and may be resisted by the use of force, as in self-defense. State v. Jefferies, 17 N.C. App. 195, 193 S.E.2d 388 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 153 (1973).

Every person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest. Roberts v. Swain, 126 N.C. App. 712, 487 S.E.2d 760 (1997).

Flight from unlawful arrest may not be used to establish probable cause. A person is entitled to resist an illegal, but not a legal, arrest. Not only may a person resist, but his subsequent flight from an unlawful arrest can not be considered as a circumstance to establish probable cause for an arrest. State v. Swift, 105 N.C. App. 550, 414 S.E.2d 65 (1992).

Officer Must Have Authority and Notify the Party Thereof. — If the officer has no authority to make the arrest, or, having the authority, is not known to be an officer and does not in some way notify the party that he is an officer and has authority, the party arrested may lawfully resist the arrest as if it were made by a private person. State v. Kirby, 24 N.C. 201 (1842); State v. Bryant, 65 N.C. 327 (1871); State v. Belk, 76 N.C. 10 (1877).

Process Must Be Legal. — A person is not liable for resisting an unlawful arrest, as where the warrant lacked a seal and the officer did not state what he arrested him for. State v. Curtis, 2 N.C. 471 (1797).

Where police officers attempt an arrest under an invalid arrest warrant, the person sought to be arrested has a legal right to resist, and in such instances, in prosecutions for resisting arrest, the defendant's motion for judgment as of nonsuit should be granted. State v. Carroll, 21 N.C. App. 530, 204 S.E.2d 908, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 759, 209 S.E.2d 283 (1974).

But Defective Process Which Is Sufficient on Its Face May Not Be Resisted. — A person may not resist an arrest by an officer acting under authority of a court process which is sufficient on its face to show its purpose, even though the process may be defective or irregular in some respect. State v. Wright, 1 N.C. App. 479, 162 S.E.2d 56, aff'd, 274 N.C. 380, 163 S.E.2d 897 (1968).

Right to Resist Illegal Entry. — Decisions of the Supreme Court recognize the right to resist illegal conduct of an officer and officers have no duty to make an illegal entry into a person's home. Hence, one who resists an illegal entry is not resisting an officer in the discharge of the duties of his office. These views are in accordance with the ancient rules of the common law and are predicated on the constitutional principle that a person's home is his castle. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

Mere verbal refusal to provide social security number was insufficient to establish probable cause for the charge of resisting arrest. Roberts v. Swain, 126 N.C. App. 712, 487 S.E.2d 760 (1997).

Defendant may not rely on self-defense where State's evidence is that defendant provoked the incident after his lawful arrest, and the officer used only the amount of force necessary to bring the situation under control. State v. Wells, 59 N.C. App. 682, 298 S.E.2d 73 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 194, 302 S.E.2d 248 (1983).

Presumption of Validity of Arrest. — Failure of State to introduce evidence tending to prove validity of warrant of arrest, in a prosecution for resisting arrest, does not justify nonsuit when defendant does not challenge the validity of the warrant, since, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the warrant and order of arrest were legally adequate. State v. Honeycutt, 237 N.C. 595, 75 S.E.2d 525 (1953).

Resistance Held Lawful. — Defendant was not liable for assault and battery for resisting an entry into her house by an officer armed with a warrant which had once been served and returned, though defendant had entered into a recognizance and failed to appear. State v. Queen, 66 N.C. 615 (1872).

The defendant was not guilty of resisting arrest by closing his door to officers who were arresting him on a civil warrant which was not in their possession, and they entered his home illegally to arrest him. State v. Hewson, 88 N.C. App. 128, 362 S.E.2d 574 (1987).

Resistance Not Warranted. — Where a patrolman, while not engaged in any patrol of the highway for purposes of observing traffic or making random license checks, spontaneously decided to stop petitioner, not while petitioner was "on a public highway" nor while petitioner was operating a vehicle, but instead while petitioner was in a private driveway, although petitioner would have had a meritorious defense to any prosecution based on failure to display his license, he was not entitled to invoke self-help against what was, at the time, an arguably lawful arrest, and petitioner's conviction for assaulting the highway patrolman could survive despite the finding that the officer's initial stop and demand were illegal as an unreasonable search and seizure under U.S. Const., Amend. IV. Keziah v. Bostic, 452 F. Supp. 912 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

Where the evidence is sufficient for the jury to find that a defendant unlawfully and willfully, by loud and abusive language directed at an officer, delayed him in making his investigation, this requires the submission of the case to the jury. State v. Leigh, 10 N.C. App. 202, 178 S.E.2d 85 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 243, 179 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

III. INDICTMENTS AND WARRANTS.

Allegations Required, Generally. — A warrant or bill of indictment charging a violation of this section must identify the officer by name and indicate the official duty he was discharging or attempting to discharge, and should point out, in a general way at least, the manner in which the defendant is charged with having resisted, delayed, or obstructed such officer. State v. Smith, 262 N.C. 472, 137 S.E.2d 819 (1964).

A warrant charging a violation of this section must: (a) Identify by name the person alleged to have been resisted, delayed or obstructed, and describe his official character with sufficient certainty to show that he was a public officer within the purview of the statute; (b) indicate the official duty he was discharging or attempting to discharge; and (c) state in a general way the manner in which accused resisted, delayed or obstructed such officer. State v. Fenner, 263 N.C. 694, 140 S.E.2d 349 (1965); State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967); State v. White, 3 N.C. App. 443, 165 S.E.2d 19 (1969).

The prerequisites of the affidavit portion of a warrant properly charging the offense of resisting arrest are set forth in State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967) and State v. Fenner, 263 N.C. 694, 140 S.E.2d 349 (1965); State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

One of the prerequisites of the affidavit portion of a warrant properly charging the offense of resisting arrest is that the affidavit upon which the order of arrest is based shall identify by name the person alleged to have been resisted, delayed or obstructed, and describe his official character with sufficient certainty to show that he was a public officer within the purview of the statute. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Victim Must Be Named. — In order to properly charge an assault, there must be a victim named, since by failing to name the particular person assaulted, the defendant would not be protected from a subsequent prosecution for assault upon a named person. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Official Duty Being Performed Must Be Specified. — For a warrant to charge a defendant with resisting, delaying, or obstructing an officer in discharging or attempting to discharge a duty of his office in violation of this section, the warrant must indicate the official duty the officer was discharging or attempting to discharge. State v. Waller, 37 N.C. App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

A bill of indictment is defective that does not charge the official duty the named officer was discharging or attempting to discharge. State v. Dunston, 256 N.C. 203, 123 S.E.2d 480 (1962).

To charge a violation of this section, the warrant or bill must indicate the specific official duty the officer was discharging or attempting to discharge. State v. Wells, 59 N.C. App. 682, 298 S.E.2d 73 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 194, 302 S.E.2d 248 (1983); State v. Davis, 90 N.C. App. 185, 368 S.E.2d 52 (1988).

General Description of Defendant's Actions. — An indictment for resisting arrest must only include a general description of the defendant's actions. State v. Baldwin, 59 N.C. App. 430, 297 S.E.2d 188 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 698, 301 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

Allegations Held Sufficient. — Warrant charging that defendant did resist, delay, and obstruct named police officers in the making of a lawful arrest "by shoving said officers and refusing to go" is sufficient to charge a violation of this section. State v. White, 3 N.C. App. 443, 165 S.E.2d 19 (1969).

Allegations Held Insufficient. — The charge that defendant "did resist arrest" neither charged the offense in the language of this section, nor specifically set forth the facts constituting the offense created by the section. It was wholly insufficient to support the verdict and judgment rendered. State v. Raynor, 235 N.C. 184, 69 S.E.2d 155 (1952).

A warrant alleging that defendant unlawfully and willfully violated the laws of North Carolina by resisting arrest is insufficient to charge the offense proscribed by this section. This allegation and the additional allegation that the defendant interfered "with an officer while legally performing the duties of his office" did not suffice to impute to defendant a violation of the section. These allegations did not describe the official character of the person alleged to have been resisted with sufficient certainty to show that he was a public officer within the purview of the statute. State v. Jenkins, 238 N.C. 396, 77 S.E.2d 796 (1953).

An indictment charging that defendant did unlawfully "resist, delay and obstruct a public officer in discharge and attempting to discharge the duty of his office . . ." was insufficient to charge the offense of resisting arrest. State v. Scott, 241 N.C. 178, 84 S.E.2d 654 (1954).

Indictment is fatally defective though it identifies public officer by name where it fails to indicate the official duty he was discharging or attempting to discharge and does not point out even in a general way the manner in which the defendant is charged with having resisted, delayed or obstructed such public officer. State v. Eason, 242 N.C. 59, 86 S.E.2d 774 (1955); State v. Harvey, 242 N.C. 111, 86 S.E.2d 793 (1955). See State v. Stonestreet, 243 N.C. 28, 89 S.E.2d 734 (1955).

An indictment charging defendant with resisting an officer in the language of this section was held insufficient. State v. Barnes, 253 N.C. 711, 117 S.E.2d 849 (1961).

Warrant held insufficient to charge a violation of this section. State v. White, 266 N.C. 361, 145 S.E.2d 872 (1966).

Warrant was fatally defective and void because of the combination of failing to identify the assaulted officer by name in the affidavit and failing to order the defendant arrested in the order of arrest. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

An instrument setting forth the charge of assault by the use of the words "assault on an officer" to identify the person assaulted was not sufficient to charge the offense of assault. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

A "North Carolina Uniform Traffic Ticket" setting forth the charge of resisting arrest by using only the two words "resist arrest" was not sufficient to charge the offense. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

An order granting motion to amend warrant so as to charge the violation in the words of the statute cannot cure fatal defects in the warrant in failing to charge the offense when the amendment is not actually made, since neither the motion nor the order sets out the contemplated wording of the proposed amendment and therefore could not be self-executing. State v. Thorne, 238 N.C. 392, 78 S.E.2d 140 (1953); State v. Jenkins, 238 N.C. 396, 77 S.E.2d 796 (1953).

Indictment in Two Counts. — An indictment having two counts, one against one person under this section, and the other against several persons under former § 14-224, was defective, but, where not objected to before a verdict which convicted on one count and acquitted on the other, was not sufficient grounds for arrest of judgment, as the acquittal was equivalent to a nol pros. State v. Perdue, 107 N.C. 853, 12 S.E. 253 (1890).

Quashing Indictment Insufficient Under This Section If Sufficient to Convict of Assault. — Where an indictment for resisting an officer is defective, as such, it ought not to be quashed if the defendant may be convicted thereon for a simple assault. State v. Dunn, 109 N.C. 839, 13 S.E. 881 (1891).

IV. INSTRUCTIONS.

Instruction on Self-Defense. — Where, in a prosecution charging defendant with resisting arrest and with obstructing an officer in the performance of his duties, the defendant offered evidence that the officer had struck the first blow and that defendant was forced in self-defense to take the actions which resulted in the charges against him, the trial court should have instructed the jury to acquit defendant if they found that he was legitimately exercising a right of self-defense; the court's instruction merely that the jury "will take into consideration in arriving at your verdict" the defendant's lawful exercise of self-defense was insufficient and was reversible error. State v. May, 8 N.C. App. 423, 174 S.E.2d 633 (1970).

Instruction Held Expression of Opinion. — In prosecution charging resisting lawful arrest in violation of this section, statement of the trial court during the instructions that "the offense charged here was committed in violation of § 14-223" was held to constitute an expression of opinion. State v. Cooper, 4 N.C. App. 210, 166 S.E.2d 509 (1969).

§ 14-225. False reports to law enforcement agencies or officers.

Any person who shall willfully make or cause to be made to a law enforcement agency or officer any false, misleading or unfounded report, for the purpose of interfering with the operation of a law enforcement agency, or to hinder or obstruct any law enforcement officer in the performance of his duty, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1941, c. 363; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 137; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 23, ss. 1-3; c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-225.1. Picketing or parading.

Any person who, with intent to interfere with, obstruct, or impede the administration of justice, or with intent to influence any justice or judge of the General Court of Justice, juror, witness, district attorney, assistant district attorney, or court officer, in the discharge of his duty, pickets, parades, or uses any sound truck or similar device within 300 feet of an exit from any building housing any court of the General Court of Justice, or within 300 feet of any building or residence occupied or used by such justice, judge, juror, witness, district attorney, assistant district attorney, or court officer, shall upon plea or conviction be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1977, c. 266, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 138; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutional Challenge to Section Held Moot. — In an action to contest the constitutionality of this section under the Declaratory Judgment Act when his license to picket was voided, plaintiff was granted a temporary restraining order which allowed the picketing to proceed; therefore, where it was over a year later when the lower court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and over two years before the case was heard on appeal, the case was moot, both at the time it was before the lower court and on appeal; plaintiff had yet to be arrested or refused a permit for a similar demonstration, and the case did not fall under the exception "capable of repetition, yet evading review." Crumpler v. Thornburg, 92 N.C. App. 737, 375 S.E.2d 708, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 543, 380 S.E.2d 770 (1989).

§ 14-225.2. Harassment of and communication with jurors.

(a) A person is guilty of harassment of a juror if he:

(1) With intent to influence the official action of another as a juror, harasses, intimidates, or communicates with the juror or his spouse; or

(2) As a result of the prior official action of another as a juror in a grand jury proceeding or trial, threatens in any manner or in any place, or intimidates the former juror or his spouse.

(b) In this section "juror" means a grand juror or a petit juror and includes a person who has been drawn or summoned to attend as a prospective juror.

(c) A person who commits the offense defined in subdivision (a)(1) of this section is guilty of a Class H felony. A person who commits the offense defined in subdivision (a)(2) of this section is guilty of a Class I felony. (1977, c. 711, s. 16; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 15; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1985, c. 691; 1993, c. 539, s. 1211; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Communication which constitutes harassment of jurors is not protected speech. Burgess v. Busby, 142 N.C. App. 393, 544 S.E.2d 4 (2001).

Obstruction of Justice. — Complaint of plaintiffs who had served as jurors in a medical malpractice case against defendant doctor who had subsequently sent their names and addresses to practitioners at regional medical center sufficiently alleged a cause of action for obstruction of justice in violation of this section. Burgess v. Busby, 142 N.C. App. 393, 544 S.E.2d 4 (2001).

Cited in In re Kivett, 309 N.C. 635, 309 S.E.2d 442 (1983).

§ 14-226. Intimidating or interfering with witnesses.

If any person shall by threats, menaces or in any other manner intimidate or attempt to intimidate any person who is summoned or acting as a witness in any of the courts of this State, or prevent or deter, or attempt to prevent or deter any person summoned or acting as such witness from attendance upon such court, he shall be guilty of a Class H felony. (1891, c. 87; Rev., s. 3696; C.S., s. 4380; 1977, c. 711, s. 16; 1993, c. 539, s. 1212; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section is additional to and not a repeal of the inherent power of the court to protect itself from interference by bribery or intimidation of its jurors or witnesses in both civil and criminal cases. In re Young, 137 N.C. 552, 50 S.E. 220 (1905).

The gist of the offense under this section is the obstruction of justice. State v. Neely, 4 N.C. App. 475, 166 S.E.2d 878 (1969); State v. Rogers, 68 N.C. App. 358, 315 S.E.2d 492, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 767, 319 S.E.2d 284 (1984), appeal dismissed, 469 U.S. 1101, 105 S. Ct. 769, 83 L. Ed. 2d 766 (1985).

It is an offense, at common law, to dissuade or prevent, or to attempt to dissuade or prevent, a witness from attending or testifying on the trial of a cause, and such conduct may be made an offense by statute. The gist of the offense is the willful and corrupt attempt to interfere with and obstruct the administration of justice. State v. Neely, 4 N.C. App. 475, 166 S.E.2d 878 (1969).

It is immaterial that person procured to absent himself was not regularly summoned or legally bound to attend as a witness. State v. Neely, 4 N.C. App. 475, 166 S.E.2d 878 (1969).

§ 14-226.1. Violating orders of court.

Any person who shall willfully disobey or violate any injunction, restraining order, or any order lawfully issued by any court for the purpose of maintaining or restoring public safety and public order, or to afford protection for lives or property during times of a public crisis, disaster, riot, catastrophe, or when such condition is imminent, or for the purpose of preventing and abating disorderly conduct as defined in G.S. 14-288.4 shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor which may include a fine not to exceed two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00). This section shall not in any manner affect the court's power to punish for contempt. (1969, c. 1128; 1993, c. 539, s. 139; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-227. Failing to attend as witness before legislative committees.

If any person shall willfully fail or refuse to attend or produce papers, on summons of any committee of investigation of either house of the General Assembly, either select or committee of the whole, he shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor and fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500.00) nor more than one thousand dollars ($1,000). (1869-70, c. 5, s. 2; Code, s. 2854; Rev., s. 3692; C.S., s. 4381; 1993, c. 539, s. 140; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Article 30A.

Secret Listening.

§ 14-227.1. Secret listening to conference between prisoner and his attorney.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person willfully to overhear, or procure any other person to overhear, or attempt to overhear any spoken words between a person who is in the physical custody of a law-enforcement agency or other public agency and such person's attorney, by using any electronic amplifying, transmitting, or recording device, or by any similar or other mechanical or electrical device or arrangement, without the consent or knowledge of all persons engaging in the conversation.

(b) No evidence procured in violation of this section shall be admissible over objection against any person participating in such conference in any court in this State. (1967, c. 187, s. 1.)

§ 14-227.2. Secret listening to deliberations of grand or petit jury.

It shall be unlawful for any person willfully to overhear, or procure any other person to overhear, or attempt to overhear the investigations and deliberations of, or the taking of votes by, a grand jury or a petit jury in a criminal case, by using any electronic amplifying, transmitting, or recording device, or by any similar or other mechanical or electrical device or arrangement, without the consent or knowledge of said grand jury or petit jury. (1967, c. 187, s. 1.)

§ 14-227.3. Violation made misdemeanor.

All persons violating the provisions of G.S. 14-227.1 or 14-227.2 shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1967, c. 187, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6; 1993, c. 539, s. 141; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Article 31.

Misconduct in Public Office.

§ 14-228. Buying and selling offices.

If any person shall bargain away or sell an office or deputation of an office, or any part or parcel thereof, or shall take money, reward or other profit, directly or indirectly, or shall take any promise, covenant, bond or assurance for money, reward or other profit, for an office or the deputation of an office, or any part thereof, which office, or any part thereof, shall touch or concern the administration or execution of justice, or the receipt, collection, control or disbursement of the public revenue, or shall concern or touch any clerkship in any court of record wherein justice is administered; or if any person shall give or pay money, reward or other profit, or shall make any promise, agreement, bond or assurance for any of such offices, or for the deputation of any of them, or for any part of them, the person so offending in any of the cases aforesaid shall be guilty of a Class I felony. (5, 6 Edw. VI, c. 16, ss. 1, 5; R.C., c. 34, s. 33; Code, s. 998; Rev., s. 3571; C.S., s. 4382; 1993, c. 539, s. 1213; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-229. Acting as officer before qualifying as such.

If any officer shall enter on the duties of his office before he executes and delivers to the authority entitled to receive the same the bonds required by law, and qualifies by taking and subscribing and filing in the proper office the oath of office prescribed, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor and shall be ejected from his office. (Code, s. 79; Rev., s. 3565; C.S., s. 4383; 1999-408, s. 2.)

§ 14-230. Willfully failing to discharge duties.

If any clerk of any court of record, sheriff, magistrate, county commissioner, county surveyor, coroner, treasurer, or official of any of the State institutions, or of any county, city or town, shall willfully omit, neglect or refuse to discharge any of the duties of his office, for default whereof it is not elsewhere provided that he shall be indicted, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. If it shall be proved that such officer, after his qualification, willfully and corruptly omitted, neglected or refused to discharge any of the duties of his office, or willfully and corruptly violated his oath of office according to the true intent and meaning thereof, such officer shall be guilty of misbehavior in office, and shall be punished by removal therefrom under the sentence of the court as a part of the punishment for the offense. (1901, c. 270, s. 2; Rev., s. 3592; C.S., s. 4384; 1943, c. 347; 1973, c. 108, s. 5; 1993, c. 539, s. 142; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

In General. — The law will not countenance or condone any attempt to defy its mandates. The private citizen must obey the law, and the public officer is not exempt from this duty by any special privilege appertaining to his office. He is not wiser than the law, nor is he above it. The truth is, that if he willfully neglects or omits to perform a public duty, he is liable to indictment at common law. State v. Commissioners, 4 N.C. 419 (1816); State v. Williams, 34 N.C. 172 (1851); State v. Furguson, 76 N.C. 197 (1877). If the neglect, omission, or refusal to discharge any of his official duties is willful and corrupt, it is criminal misbehavior, and subjects him to indictment for a misdemeanor and punishment by fine or imprisonment, and, as a part of the penalty, to removal from office. State ex rel. Battle v. City of Rocky Mount, 156 N.C. 329, 72 S.E. 354 (1911).

History of Section. — See State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965).

Sections 7A-173 and 7A-376 are not irreconcilably in conflict with this section. State v. Greer, 308 N.C. 515, 302 S.E.2d 774 (1983).

Effect of Section on Common-Law Crime of Official Oppression. — It is futile to attempt to mark the extent, if any, the common-law crime of official oppression has been modified or superseded by this section, as there is no exact common-law definition of official oppression, and the possible acts which may constitute the crime are as many and varied as the forms of corruption that may exist in public office. State v. Lackey, 271 N.C. 171, 155 S.E.2d 465 (1967).

An essential difference between a public office and mere employment is the fact that the duties of the incumbent of an office shall involve the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power. State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965).

Failure to Establish Defendant Was an Official. — Where the State failed to show any instance where the defendant could exercise sovereign power at any time in the course of his employment and failed to show that the defendant's position of senior administrator at school for the blind was created by statute, constitution, or delegation of state authority, the state failed to establish he was an official of a state institution. State v. Eastman, 113 N.C. App. 347, 438 S.E.2d 460 (1994).

Elements of Offense. — The offense described in this section has two components: (1) That the defendant be an official of a State institution, and (2) that he willfully fail to discharge the duties of his office; additionally, injury to the public is a judicially recognized element of the crime. State v. Birdsong, 325 N.C. 418, 384 S.E.2d 5 (1989).

Injury to the public must occur as a consequence of the omission, neglect or refusal. State v. Rhome, 120 N.C. App. 278, 462 S.E.2d 656 (1995).

Willful Neglect and Injury to Public Required. — It is to be observed that the essentials of the crime as prescribed are first, a willful neglect in the discharge of official duty, and second, injury to the public. State v. Anderson, 196 N.C. 771, 147 S.E. 305 (1929).

Liability for Honest Errors. — It is so well settled that there is nothing to the contrary that an officer who has to exercise his judgment or discretion is not liable criminally for any error which he commits, provided he acts honestly. State v. Powers, 75 N.C. 281 (1876).

If the illegal act be done mala fide, then it becomes a crime, and the officer liable both civilly and criminally, but if free of any wicked intent, then he is civilly liable only. State v. Snuggs, 85 N.C. 541 (1881).

Accused Must Show Good Faith. — Where a public officer is indicted for failure to perform a duty required by law, the law raises a presumption that such failure is willful, and makes it incumbent upon him to rebut the presumption. State v. Heaton, 77 N.C. 505 (1877).

And Public Will Be Protected Against Carelessness. — However honest the defendants may be (and their honesty is not called in question) the public have a right to be protected against the wrongful conduct of their servants, if there is carelessness amounting to a willful want of care in the discharge of their official duties, which injuries the public. State v. Anderson, 196 N.C. 771, 147 S.E. 305 (1929).

A duly appointed policeman of a city is an officer of such city within the meaning of this section. State v. Fesperman, 264 N.C. 160, 141 S.E.2d 255 (1965); State v. Teeter, 264 N.C. 162, 141 S.E.2d 253 (1965); State v. Stogner, 264 N.C. 163, 141 S.E.2d 248 (1965); State v. Fesperman, 264 N.C. 168, 141 S.E.2d 252 (1965).

As Is Chief of Police. — A chief of police as well as a policeman is an officer of the municipality which engages his services, within the meaning of the provisions of this section. State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965).

And Captain of Detectives. — A captain of detectives of a police department of a city is an officer of such city within the meaning of this section. State v. McCall, 264 N.C. 165, 141 S.E.2d 250 (1965).

Magistrates Not Exempted. — The legislature did not intend to exempt magistrates from indictment and criminal prosecution under this section when it included magistrates under the sanctions of §§ 7A-173 and 7A-376. This section applies to misconduct in office unless another statute provides for the "indictment" of the officer, but neither §§ 7A-173 nor 7A-376 provide for criminal charges to be brought against a magistrate who is guilty of misconduct in office. State v. Greer, 308 N.C. 515, 302 S.E.2d 774 (1983).

Proceedings of Forfeiture Under § 1-515. — Forfeiture cannot be enforced by judgment of a motion from office as a part of the punishment where the clerk has been convicted of a misdemeanor under this section in willfully neglecting to discharge the duties of his office, but proceedings of forfeiture must be under § 1-515. State v. Norman, 82 N.C. 687 (1880).

Sufficiency of Bill of Indictment. — See State v. Hord, 264 N.C. 149, 141 S.E.2d 241 (1965); State v. Teeter, 264 N.C. 162, 141 S.E.2d 253 (1965); State v. Stogner, 264 N.C. 163, 141 S.E.2d 248 (1965); State v. McCall, 264 N.C. 165, 141 S.E.2d 250 (1965).

It is required that the indictment under this section sufficiently charge the offense of which such officer is accused; and where the action is against the superintendent of a State hospital for the insane, and the indictment charges that he removed or caused to be removed patients to his private farm and caused them to be worked thereon, without allegation of injury to the public or to the patients, or of personal gain to the defendant, the indictment fails to charge facts sufficient to constitute an offense under the statute, and defendant's motion in arrest of judgment should be allowed. State v. Anderson, 196 N.C. 771, 147 S.E. 305 (1929).

Two Theories Alleged in Single Count of Indictment. — Where, in a single count of an indictment, the State alleged two factual underpinnings for, or factual theories of, conviction for a violation of this section it was not required to prove both; proof of only one factual theory was legally sufficient and at most placed the State at risk of failing to persuade the jury of defendant's guilt. State v. Birdsong, 325 N.C. 411, 384 S.E.2d 5 (1989).

Warrant Falling Short of Alleging Malfeasance in Office in Violation of Section. — See Hawkins v. Reynolds, 236 N.C. 422, 72 S.E.2d 874 (1952).

Applied in State v. Hucks, 264 N.C. 160, 141 S.E.2d 299 (1965); State v. Stanley, 60 N.C. App. 568, 299 S.E.2d 464 (1983).

§ 14-231. Failing to make reports and discharge other duties.

If any State or county officer shall fail, neglect or refuse to make, file or publish any report, statement or other paper, or to deliver to his successor all books and other property belonging to his office, or to pay over or deliver to the proper person all moneys which come into his hands by virtue or color of his office, or to discharge any duty devolving upon him by virtue of his office and required of him by law, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (Rev., s. 3576; C.S., s. 4385; 1993, c. 539, s. 143; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Injurious Effects Not Necessary. — The crime exists although no injurious effects result to any individual because of the misconduct of the officer. State v. Glasgow, 1 N.C. 176 (1800).

Honesty of Purpose. — There may be neglect without corruption. Therefore honesty of purpose is not a full defense under this section. Turner v. McKee, 137 N.C. 251, 49 S.E. 330 (1904).

Enforcing Unconstitutional Law. — An officer is not liable for obeying the mandates of an unconstitutional statute. State v. Godwin, 123 N.C. 697, 31 S.E. 221 (1898).

Manager of Elections. — Any conduct of the manager of a primary election for county officials which interferes with the freedom or purity of the election is punishable at common law, and under this section. State v. Cole, 156 N.C. 618, 72 S.E. 221 (1911).

§ 14-232. Swearing falsely to official reports.

If any clerk, sheriff, register of deeds, county commissioner, county treasurer, magistrate or other county officer shall willfully swear falsely to any report or statement required by law to be made or filed, concerning or touching the county, State or school revenue, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1874-5, c. 151, s. 4; 1876-7, c. 276, s. 4; Code, s. 731; Rev., s. 3605; C.S., s. 4386; 1973, c. 108, s. 6; 1993, c. 539, s. 144; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-233. Making of false report by bank examiners; accepting bribes.

If any bank examiner shall knowingly and willfully make any false or fraudulent report of the condition of any bank, which shall have been examined by him, with the intent to aid or abet the officers, owners, or agents of such bank in continuing to operate an insolvent bank, or if any such examiner shall keep or accept any bribe or gratuity given for the purpose of inducing him not to file any report of examination of any bank made by him, or shall neglect to make an examination of any bank by reason of having received or accepted any bribe or gratuity, he shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1903, c. 275, s. 24; Rev., s. 3324; 1921, c. 4, s. 79; C.S., s. 4387; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1214; 1994, Ex. CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Because under this section an officer could consider speech that was not fighting words as disorderly or not peaceable, the section impermissibly criminalizes protected speech. Brooks v. North Carolina Dep't of Cor., 984 F. Supp. 940 (E.D.N.C. 1997).

Because the petitioner's comments did not fall within the narrowly defined class of fighting words so devoid of value as to be unprotected under the first amendment, the possibility existed that he was convicted for his speech and not his actions, and the danger that the jury based its verdict on protected activity required that the petitioner's conviction be vacated. Brooks v. North Carolina Dep't of Cor., 984 F. Supp. 940 (E.D.N.C. 1997).

§ 14-234. (Effective until July 1, 2002) Director of public trust contracting for his own benefit; participation in business transaction involving public funds; exemptions.

(a) If any person appointed or elected a commissioner or director to discharge any trust wherein the State or any county, city or town may be in any manner interested shall become an undertaker, or make any contract for his own benefit, under such authority, or be in any manner concerned or interested in making such contract, or in the profits thereof, either privately or openly, singly or jointly with another, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Provided, that this section shall not apply to public officials transacting business with banks or banking institutions or savings and loan associations or public utilities regulated under the provisions of Chapter 62 of the General Statutes in regular course of business: Provided further, that such undertaking or contracting shall be authorized by said governing board by specific resolution on which such public official shall not vote.

(b) Nothing in this section nor in any general principle of common law shall render unlawful the acceptance of remuneration from a governmental board, agency or commission for services, facilities, or supplies furnished directly to needy individuals by a member of said board, agency or commission under any program of direct public assistance being rendered under the laws of this State or the United States to needy persons administered in whole or in part by such board, agency or commission; provided, however, that such programs of public assistance to needy persons are open to general participation on a nondiscriminatory basis to the practitioners of any given profession, professions or occupation; and provided further that the board, agency or commission, nor any of its employees or agents, shall have no control over who, among licensed or qualified providers, shall be selected by the beneficiaries of the assistance, and that the remuneration for such services, facilities or supplies shall be in the same amount as would be paid to any other provider; and provided further that, although the board, agency or commission member may participate in making determinations of eligibility of needy persons to receive the assistance, he shall take no part in approving his own bill or claim for remuneration.

§ 14-234 is set out twice. See notes.

(c) No director, board member, commissioner, or employee of any State department, agency, or institution shall directly or indirectly enter into or otherwise participate in any business transaction involving public funds with any firm, corporation, partnership, person or association which at any time during the preceding two-year period had a financial association with such director, board member, commissioner or employee.

(c1) The fact that a person owns ten percent (10%) or less of the stock of a corporation or has a ten percent (10%) or less ownership in any other business entity or is an employee of said corporation or other business entity does not make the person "in any manner interested" or "concerned or interested in making such contract, or in the profits thereof," as such phrase is used in subsection (a) of this section, and does not make the person one who "had a financial association," as defined in subsection (c) of this section; provided that in order for the exception provided by this subsection to apply, such undertaking or contracting must be authorized by the governing board by specific resolution on which such public official shall not vote.

(d) The provisions of subsection (c) shall not apply to any transactions meeting the requirements of Article 3, Chapter 143 of the General Statutes or any other transaction specifically authorized by the Advisory Budget Commission.

(d1) The first sentence of subsection (a) shall not apply to (i) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office of a village, town, or city having a population of no more than 15,000 according to the most recent official federal census, (ii) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office of a county within which there is located no village, town, or city with a population of more than 15,000 according to the most recent official federal census, (iii) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office on a city board of education in a city having a population of no more than 15,000 according to the most recent official federal census, (iv) any elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office as a member of a county board of education in a county within which there is located no village, town or city with a population of more than 15,000 according to the most recent official federal census, (v) any physician, pharmacist, dentist, optometrist, veterinarian, or nurse appointed to a county social services board, local health board, or area mental health, developmental disabilities, and substance abuse board serving one or more counties within which there is located no village, town, or city with a population of more than 15,000 according to the most recent official federal census, and (vi) any member of the board of directors of a public hospital if all of the following apply:

(1) The undertaking or contract or series of undertakings or contracts between the village, town, city, county, county social services board, county or city board of education, local health board or area mental health, developmental disabilities, and substance abuse board, or public hospital and one of its officials is approved by specific resolution of the governing body adopted in an open and public meeting, and recorded in its minutes and the amount does not exceed twelve thousand five hundred dollars ($12,500) for medically related services and twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) for other goods or services within a 12-month period.

(2) The official entering into the contract with the unit or agency does not participate in any way or vote.

(3) The total annual amount of contracts with each official, shall be specifically noted in the audited annual financial statement of the village, town, city, or county.

§ 14-234 is set out twice. See notes.

(4) The governing board of any village, town, city, county, county social services board, county or city board of education, local health board, area mental health, developmental disabilities, and substance abuse board, or public hospital which contracts with any of the officials of their governmental unit shall post in a conspicuous place in its village, town, or city hall, or courthouse, as the case may be, a list of all such officials with whom such contracts have been made, briefly describing the subject matter of the undertakings or contracts and showing their total amounts; this list shall cover the preceding 12 months and shall be brought up-to-date at least quarterly.

(d2) The provision of subsection (d1) shall not apply to contracts required by Article 8 of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes, Public Building Contracts.

(d3) Subsection (a) of this section does not apply to an application for or the receipt of a grant under the Agriculture Cost Share Program for Nonpoint Source Pollution Control created pursuant to G.S. 143-215.74 by a member of the Soil and Water Conservation Commission if the requirements of G.S. 139-4(e) are met, and does not apply to a district supervisor of a soil and water conservation district if the requirements of G.S. 139-8(b) are met.

(d4) Subsection (a) of this section does not apply to an application for, or the receipt of a grant or other financial assistance from, the Tobacco Trust Fund created under Article 75 of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes by a member of the Tobacco Trust Fund Commission or an entity in which a member of the Commission has an interest provided that the requirements of G.S. 143-717(g) are met.

(e) Anyone violating this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1825, c. 1269, P.R.; 1826, c. 29; R.C., c. 34, s. 38; Code, s. 1011; Rev., s. 3572; C.S., s. 4388; 1929, c. 19, s. 1; 1969, c. 1027; 1975, c. 409; 1977, cc. 240, 761; 1979, c. 720; 1981, c. 103, ss. 1, 2, 5; 1983, c. 544, ss. 1, 2; 1985, c. 190; 1987, c. 570; 1989, c. 231; 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 1030, s. 5; 1993, c. 539, s. 145; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1995, c. 519, s. 4; 2000-147, s. 6; 2001-409, s. 1; 2001-487, s. 44(a).)

"(a) Interpretation of Act. — The foregoing sections of this act provide an additional and alternative method for the doing of the things authorized by the act, are supplemental and additional to powers conferred by other laws, and do not derogate any powers now existing.

"(b) References in this act to specific sections or Chapters of the General Statutes are intended to be references to those sections or Chapters as amended and as they may be amended from time to time by the General Assembly.

"(c) This act, being necessary for the health and welfare of the people of the State, shall be liberally construed to effect its purposes."

Session Laws 2000-147, s. 8(d), contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 2001-409, which amended this section, provides in s. 10 that subsection (d1), as rewritten in s. 1 of the act, is effective April 1, 2001, and applies to actions taken and offenses committed on or after that date. The remainder of the act is effective July 1, 2002, and applies to actions taken and offenses committed on or after that date. Prosecutions for offenses committed before the effective dates of the provisions of the act are not abated or affected by the act, and the statutes that would be applicable but for the act remain applicable to those prosecutions.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws

2000-147, s. 6, effective August 2, 2000, added subsection (d4).

For effective date and applicability, see Editor's note.

Session Laws 2001-487, s. 44(a), effective April 1, 2002, substituted "The first sentence of subsection (a) shall not apply" for "Subdivision (a)(1) of this section does not apply" at the beginning of the introductory paragraph of subsection (d1) of this section, as rewritten by Session Laws 2001-409, s. 1.

CASE NOTES

Public Policy of State. — The General Assembly in adopting this section made the condemnation of the transactions embraced within its terms a part of the public policy of the State so as to remove from public officials the temptation to take advantage of their official positions to "feather their own nests" by letting to themselves or to firms or corporations in which they are interested contracts for services, materials, supplies, or the like. Lexington Insulation Co. v. Davidson County, 243 N.C. 252, 90 S.E.2d 496 (1955).

Effect of Special Validating Act. — Although municipal bonds were sold to a corporation controlled by the mayor, an act passed by the legislature expressly confirming and validating the sale removes all objections based upon the violation of the provisions of this section. Starmount Co. v. Ohio Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 55 F.2d 649 (4th Cir. 1932).

Denial of Recovery on Quantum Meruit Basis. — The courts not only will declare void and unenforceable any contract between a public official, or a board of which he is a member, and himself, or a company in which he is financially interested, whereby he stands to gain by the transaction, but it will also deny recovery on a quantum meruit basis. Lexington Insulation Co. v. Davidson County, 243 N.C. 252, 90 S.E.2d 496 (1955).

Officer of Both City and Corporation. — The prohibition of this section extends to an officer of a corporation in making contracts between the corporation and the city of which he is commissioner or alderman. State v. Williams, 153 N.C. 595, 68 S.E. 900 (1910); Lexington Insulation Co. v. Davidson County, 243 N.C. 252, 90 S.E.2d 496 (1955).

Contracts with city when an alderman is an employee of the other contracting party are not covered by the section. State v. Weddell, 153 N.C. 587, 68 S.E. 897 (1910).

Sale to Corporation Organized by Advisor to Municipality. — Under this statute a contract of sale does not become void because the purchasing corporation was organized through the efforts of a person who had a merely advisory relationship to a municipal corporation. Tonkins v. City of Greensboro, 276 F.2d 890 (4th Cir. 1960).

Contracts for Benefit of County. — A sheriff is not guilty of a misdemeanor where he purchases county claims at less than their value, but for the benefit of the county, at the instance of the county commissioners. State v. Garland, 134 N.C. 749, 47 S.E. 426 (1904).

Service to Body of Which Officer Is a Member. — A member of the board of county commissioners cannot recover for services rendered the board in inspecting a bridge. Davidson v. Guilford County, 152 N.C. 436, 67 S.E. 918 (1910).

When County Director of Social Services May Serve on Board of Nonprofit Corporation Administering CETA Funds. — A conflict of interest does not arise if a county director of social services serves as a member of the board of directors of a nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of administering federal funds under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (29 USC, Ch. 17; Pub. L. 93-203 (1973); Pub. L. 95-524 (1978)), when: (a) The nonprofit corporation will administer federal funds through community programs to which the county department of social services may refer social services clients; (b) The county department of social services is a potential recipient, through the nonprofit corporation, of federal funds, of services by employees of the nonprofit corporation and of training of social service employees; (c) The director, as a member of the board of the nonprofit corporation, will approve, or establish policy for entering into, contracts, including contracts with the county department of social services; and (d) Neither the county director of social services nor any member of his immediate family will realize any direct or indirect benefits by reason of any contractual or other relationship between the county department of social services and the nonprofit corporation. See opinion of Attorney General to Robert H. Ward, Director, Division of Social Services, Dep't of Human Resources and William W. Ivey, County Att'y for Randolph County, 49 N.C.A.G. 102 (1980).

When Person May Be Member of Two Nonprofit Corporations. — A conflict of interest does not arise if an individual, who is not a public official, serves as a member of the board of directors of a nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of administering federal funds under CETA and at the same time serves as a member of the board of directors of another nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of administering programs for the aging (Ch. 143B, Art. 3, Part 14; 42 USC, Ch. 35; Pub. L. 89-73, as amended), when the circumstances and relationships between the corporations will be similar to those required for directors of social services serving on board of nonprofit corporation administering CETA funds. See opinion of Attorney General to Robert H. Ward, Director, Div. of Social Services, Dep't of Human Resources and William W. Ivey, County Att'y for Randolph County, 49 N.C.A.G. 102 (1980).

This section does prohibit a person from serving both on the Hyde County Board of Health and the Hyde Rural Health Corporation Board of Directors. See opinion of Attorney General to Cliff Swindell, County Manager, Hyde County, 50 N.C.A.G. 12 (1980).

A prohibited conflict of interest may occur when a funeral home in which the chairman of the county board of social services holds a pecuniary interest enters into a contract with the county department of social services to provide funeral and burial services for a ward or juvenile under the jurisdiction or custody of the county department of social services. See opinion of Attorney General to Timothy W. Howard, Attorney for Sampson County Department of Social Services, 49 N.C.A.G. 108 (1980).

Trustees of New Hanover Memorial Hospital, Inc., are subject to the provisions of this section. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. A. Dumay Gorham, Jr., Attorney for New Hanover Memorial Hospital, Inc., 52 N.C.A.G. 49 (1982).

A trustee's ownership of stock in a company which does business with the hospital violates this section. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. A. Dumay Gorham, Jr., Attorney for New Hanover Memorial Hospital, Inc., 52 N.C.A.G. 49 (1982).

Telephone Membership Corporation

§ 14-234 is set out twice. See notes.

President. — A conflict of interest under this section would not arise from the President of the Board of Directors of a telephone membership corporation serving on the Board of the Rural Electrification Authority. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Aaron A. Hathcock, Administrator, Rural Electrification Authority, 52 N.C.A.G. 107 (1983).

Current Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation (now Developmental Disabilities) and Substance Abuse Services employees can also serve as members of the Commission of Mental Health, Mental Retardation (now Developmental Disabilities) and Substance Abuse Services. See opinion of Attorney General to Ms. Sarah T. Morrow, M.D., M.P.H., Secretary, Department of Human Resources, 52 N.C.A.G. 102 (1983).

This section does not prohibit members of the Trend Community Mental Health Services from serving as members of the Board of Directors of Trend Foundation, Incorporated. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James F. Creekman, Attorney for Trend Community Mental Health Services, 53 N.C.A.G. 2 (1983).

A conflict of interest may exist, within the purview of subsection (a) of this section, when an Authority member, the president of a public relations firm, enters into a contract with another company providing public relations services to the airport. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Victor W. Buchanan, Attorney for the Asheville Regional Airport Authority, 57 N.C.A.G. 63 (1987).

Regarding a possible conflict of interest which could arise between an airport authority and two members of its board of directors if the authority decides to refund some of its outstanding bonds, which would likely involve entering into a contract with a financial institution to underwrite the issuance of such bonds, see opinion of Attorney General to William Owen Cooke, Cooke & Cooke, Attorneys At Law, 1999 N.C.A.G. 20 (6/24/99).

Applicability of Exemption in Subsection (d1). — The exemption of subsection (d1) of this section, which was enacted in 1979 and exempts from the prohibition against self-dealing in subsection (a) certain contracts between public boards and their members in counties with no town with a population of more than 7,500, only applies to an "elected official or person appointed to fill an elective office." It does not apply to persons appointed to an appointive office, such as technical college trustee. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Garrett Dixon Baily, Attorney for Mayland Technical College, 55 N.C.A.G. 28 (1985).

Board of trustees of a technical college may not employ one of its members as a part-time instructor. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Garrett Dixon Baily, Attorney for Mayland Technical College, 55 N.C.A.G. 28 (1985).

This is a common-law offense. State v. Ritchie, 107 N.C. 857, 12 S.E. 251 (1890).

The statute contemplates two offenses — negligently permitting or willfully promoting the escape — but charging negligence alone will suffice. State v. McLain, 104 N.C. 894, 10 S.E. 518 (1889).

The section changes the ordinary rule of the burden of proof by shifting such burden to the defendant. State v. Hunter, 94 N.C. 829 (1886); State v. Lewis, 113 N.C. 622, 18 S.E. 69 (1893).

This section provides an example of specific language used by the legislature when it intended to shift the burden of proof to a defendant. State v. Cooke, 270 N.C. 644, 155 S.E.2d 165 (1967).

Right to Kill to Prevent Escape. — The guard has no authority to kill one convicted of a misdemeanor while fleeing to escape, without his offering resistance or showing any menace or show of force in doing so, or, anything that would suggest danger to the person of the guard. Holloway v. Moser, 193 N.C. 185, 136 S.E. 375 (1927).

Where the escape is due to the negligence of an assistant the only question presented is whether the defendant has exercised due care in his selection. State v. Lewis, 113 N.C. 622, 18 S.E. 69 (1893).

§ 14-241. Disposing of public documents or refusing to deliver them over to successor.

It shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court of each county, and every other person to whom the acts of the General Assembly, appellate division reports or other public documents are transmitted or deposited for the use of the county or the State, to keep the same safely in their respective offices; and if any such person having the custody of such books and documents, for the uses aforesaid, shall negligently and willfully dispose of the same, by sale or otherwise, or refuse to deliver over the same to his successor in office, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. § 14-242. Failing to return process or making false return.

If any sheriff, deputy, or other officer, whether State or municipal, or any person who presumes to act as any such officer, not being by law authorized so to do, willfully refuses to return any precept, notice or process, to him tendered or delivered, which it is his duty to execute, or willfully makes a false return thereon, the person who willfully refused to make the return or willfully made the false return shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1818, c. 980, s. 3, P.R.; 1827, c. 20, s. 4; R.C., c. 34, s. 118; Code, s. 1112; Rev., s. 3604; C.S., s. 4396; 1989, c. 462; 1993, c. 539, s. 152; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-243. Failing to surrender tax list for inspection and correction.

If any tax collector shall refuse or fail to surrender his tax list for inspection or correction upon demand by the authorities imposing the tax, or their successors in office, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. § 14-244. Failing to file report of fines or penalties.

If any officer who is by law required to file any report or statement of fines or penalties with the county board of education shall fail so to do at or before the time fixed by law for the filing of such report, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1901, c. 4, s. 62; Rev., s. 3579; C.S., s. 4398; 1993, c. 539, s. 154; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-246. Failure of ex-magistrate to turn over books, papers and money.

If any magistrate, on expiration of his term of office, or if any personal representative of a deceased magistrate shall, after demand upon him by the clerk of the superior court, willfully fail and refuse to deliver to the clerk of the superior court all dockets, all law and other books, all money, and all official papers which came into his hands by virtue or color of his office, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (Code, ss. 828, 829; 1885, c. 402; Rev., s. 3578; C.S., s. 4399; 1973, c. 108, s. 10; 1993, c. 539, s. 155; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-247. Private use of publicly owned vehicle.

It shall be unlawful for any officer, agent or employee of the State of North Carolina, or of any county or of any institution or agency of the State, to use for any private purpose whatsoever any motor vehicle of any type or description whatsoever belonging to the State, or to any county, or to any institution or agency of the State. It is not a private purpose to drive a permanently assigned state-owned motor vehicle between one's official work station and one's home as provided in G.S. 143-341(8)i7a.

It shall be unlawful for any person to violate a rule or regulation adopted by the Department of Administration and approved by the Governor concerning the control of all state-owned passenger motor vehicles as provided in G.S. 143-341(8)i with the intent to defraud the State of North Carolina. (1925, c. 239, s. 1; 1981, c. 859, ss. 52, 53; 1983, c. 717, s. 75.)

CASE NOTES

Elements of Offense. — The elements of the offense created by this section and § 14-252 are (1), the use of a vehicle belonging to the State or one of the political subdivisions named in the statute (2), by a public official or employer answering to the statutory description and (3), for a private purpose. A warrant which fails to charge that the use of a police car by a policeman of a municipality was for a private purpose is insufficient to charge the offense. Hawkins v. Reynolds, 236 N.C. 422, 72 S.E.2d 874 (1952).

Statement of Charges Held Sufficient. — A misdemeanor statement of charges which, when all surplusage was excluded from consideration, asserted that the defendant was a state employee, that she directed her subordinate to pick up a birthday cake and deliver it to her home, and that she did so with knowledge that her private purpose would be accomplished through the use of a state-owned motor vehicle, was sufficient to support a conviction of unlawful private use of a publicly owned vehicle. State v. Lilly, 75 N.C. App. 173, 330 S.E.2d 30 (1985).

It was error to instruct the jury that defendant would be guilty if she allowed the use of a state-owned vehicle for a private purpose. Merely having knowledge of the commission of a criminal offense, and doing nothing to prevent its commission, does not render one guilty. State v. Lilly, 75 N.C. App. 173, 330 S.E.2d 30 (1985).

§ 14-248. Obtaining repairs and supplies for private vehicle at expense of State.

It shall be unlawful for any officer, agent or employee to have any privately owned motor vehicle repaired at any garage belonging to the State or to any county, or any institution or agency of the State, or to use any tires, oils, gasoline or other accessories purchased by the State, or any county, or any institution or agency of the State, in or on any such private car. (1925, c. 239, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Violation of this section does not require an intent to do something in violation of the law. State v. Anderson, 88 N.C. App. 545, 364 S.E.2d 163 (1988).

This section contains no language setting forth any specific level of intent as an element of the crime. State v. Anderson, 88 N.C. App. 545, 364 S.E.2d 163 (1988).

A lack of specific criminal intent is not a valid defense under this section. State v. Anderson, 88 N.C. App. 545, 364 S.E.2d 163 (1988).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Uncontroverted evidence in the record that defendant, while an employee of Craven County, used tires and rims purchased by the county on his personal vehicle was sufficient to support a guilty verdict under this section. State v. Anderson, 88 N.C. App. 545, 364 S.E.2d 163 (1988).

Session Laws 2001-424, s. 36.5 is a severability clause.

§ 14-251. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of G.S. 14-247 to 14-250 shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Nothing in G.S. 14-247 through 14-251 shall apply to the purchase, use or upkeep or expense account of the car for the executive mansion and the Governor. (1925, c. 239, s. 5; 1969, c. 1224, s. 16; 1993, c. 539, s. 156; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Editor's Note. — Section 14-250 referred to in the above G.S. 14-251 was repealed by Session Laws 2001-424, s. 6.14(d).

§ 14-252. Five preceding sections applicable to cities and towns.

General Statutes 14-247 through 14-251 in every respect shall also apply to cities and incorporated towns. (1931, c. 31.)

Local Modification. — City of Charlotte: 1971, c. 220.

CASE NOTES

Elements of Offense. — The elements of the offense created by § 14-247 and this section are (1) the use of a vehicle belonging to the State or one of the political subdivisions named in the statute (2) by a public official or employer answering to the statutory description (3) for a private purpose. A warrant which fails to charge that the use of a police car by a policeman of a municipality was for a private purpose is insufficient to charge the offense. Hawkins v. Article 32.

Misconduct in Private Office.

§ 14-253. Failure of certain railroad officers to account with successors.

If the president and directors of any railroad company, and any person acting under them, shall, upon demand, fail or refuse to account with the president and directors elected or appointed to succeed them, and to transfer to them forthwith all the money, books, papers, choses in action, property and effects of every kind and description belonging to such company, they shall be guilty of a Class I felony. The Governor is hereby authorized, at the request of the president, directors and other officers of any railroad company, to make requisition upon the governor of any other state for the apprehension of any such president failing to comply with this section. (1870-1, c. 72, ss. 1-3; Code, ss. 2001, 2002; Rev., s. 3760; C.S., s. 4400; 1993 c. 539, ss. 157, 1215; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 767, s. 20.)

CASE NOTES

Not Applicable to Tax Bond. — As this section has reference only to money, books, choses, etc., an indictment cannot be sustained against a former president of a railroad, for refusing to transfer to his successor in office certain special tax bonds. State v. Jones, 67 N.C. 210 (1872).

§ 14-254. Malfeasance of corporation officers and agents.

(a) If any president, director, cashier, teller, clerk or agent of any corporation shall embezzle, abstract or willfully misapply any of the moneys, funds or credits of the corporation, or shall, without authority from the directors, issue or put forth any certificate of deposit, draw any order or bill of exchange, make any acceptance, assign any note, bond, draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment or decree, or make any false entry in any book, report or statement of the corporation with the intent in either case to injure or defraud or to deceive any person, or if any person shall aid and abet in the doing of any of these things, he shall be punished as a Class H felon.

(b) For purposes of this section, "person" means a natural person, association, consortium, corporation, body politic, partnership, or other group, entity, or organization. (1903, c. 275, s. 15; Rev., s. 3325; C.S., s. 4401; 1977, c. 809, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1216; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section applies only to agents and officers of a corporation. State v. Kornegay, 313 N.C. 1, 326 S.E.2d 881 (1985).

Crime of Embezzlement Compared. — A defendant charged with embezzlement (see § 14-90) must have intended to defraud his principal. By contrast, a defendant violates this section if he does any of the acts prohibited by the statute with an intent to defraud or deceive any person. State v. Kornegay, 313 N.C. 1, 326 S.E.2d 881 (1985).

A defendant charged with embezzlement must have received the property he embezzled in the course of his employment and by virtue of his fiduciary relationship with his principal. Under this section it is sufficient to show that a defendant as an agent or officer of a corporation abstracted or misapplied corporate funds. It need not be shown that he received such funds in the course of his employment. State v. Kornegay, 313 N.C. 1, 326 S.E.2d 881 (1985).

Indictments Quashed. — Indictments charging the defendant with corporate malfeasance in violation of this section must be quashed where they allege an intent "to defraud or to deceive the said Housing Authority of the City of Lumberton, North Carolina," since this section requires that they allege an accompanying intent to injure, defraud, or deceive an officer of the corporation. State v. Hill, 45 N.C. App. 136, 263 S.E.2d 14 (1980).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence was sufficient to find that defendant induced others to participate in the commission of obtaining property by false pretense and corporate malfeasance where defendant induced putative father to participate in a scheme to defraud mother of child support by suggesting to him that drawing his blood and a paternity test would subject him to years of paying child support and the possible loss of his family, and offered to prevent him from being found to be the father for $500. State v. Weary, 124 N.C. App. 754, 479 S.E.2d 28 (1996).

Phlebotomist hired as independent contractor for corporation was acting as the corporation's agent when she falsified a blood test report where she had an employment contract with the corporation, a salary, a traveling allowance, and a description of her duties, and the corporation had a contract with county child support enforcement agency to perform phlebotomy services and sent defendant to the agency on its behalf. State v. Weary, 124 N.C. App. 754, 479 S.E.2d 28 (1996).

Applied in State v. Chapman, 26 N.C. App. 66, 214 S.E.2d 789 (1975); State v. Fletcher, 66 N.C. App. 36, 310 S.E.2d 787 (1984).

Article 33.

Prison Breach and Prisoners.

§ 14-255. Escape of working prisoners from custody.

If any prisoner removed from the local confinement facility or satellite jail/work release unit of a county pursuant to G.S. 162-58 shall escape from the person having him in custody or the person supervising him, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1876-7, c. 196, s. 4; Code, s. 3455; Rev., s. 3658; C.S., s. 4403; 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 841, s. 2.; 1993, c. 539, s. 158; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-443, s. 19.25(r).)

CASE NOTES

Two Classes of Escape. — There are two classes of escape from the State prison system. One is a felonious escape and the other is a misdemeanor. A defendant who has committed an escape is entitled to have his case submitted to the jury on question of whether he was imprisoned while serving a sentence imposed for a felony or for a misdemeanor. State v. Ledford, 9 N.C. App. 245, 175 S.E.2d 605 (1970) (decided under prior law).

No Evidence That Defendant Was Hired Out Under This Section. — A defendant's contention that he should have been tried for escape under this section rather than under § 148-45 was without merit where the evidence showed that, when he escaped, defendant was in the custody of the State Department of Correction and was under the supervision of a foreman for the State Highway Department, and there was no evidence that defendant was being hired out by a county, city or town under the provisions of this section. State v. Ledford, 9 N.C. App. 245, 175 S.E.2d 605 (1970) (decided under prior law).

Fair Sentencing Act. — Although the principal provisions of the Fair Sentencing Act are codified in Chapter 15A, Article 81A of the General Statutes, the act resulted in revisions to other portions of the general statutes. See e.g., Chapter 14, Articles 1, 2, 2A, 33; Chapter 15A, Articles 58, 81A, 82, 83, 85, 85A, 89, 91; Chapter 148, Article 2, and Chapter 162, Article 4. State v. Ahearn, 307 N.C. 584, 300 S.E.2d 689 (1983).

For case discussing the historical background, policies, purposes, and implementation of the new Fair Sentencing Act, see State v. Ahearn, 307 N.C. 584, 300 S.E.2d 689 (1983).

§ 14-256. Prison breach and escape from county or municipal confinement facilities or officers.

If any person shall break any prison, jail or lockup maintained by any county or municipality in North Carolina, being lawfully confined therein, or shall escape from the lawful custody of any superintendent, guard or officer of such prison, jail or lockup, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor, except that the person is guilty of a Class H felony if:

(1) He has been convicted of a felony and has been committed to the facility pending transfer to the State prison system; or

(2) He is serving a sentence imposed upon conviction of a felony. (1 Edw. II, st. 2d; R.C., c. 34, s. 19; Code, s. 1021; Rev., s. 3657; 1909, c. 872; C.S., s. 4404; 1955, c. 279, s. 1; 1983, c. 455, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, ss. 159, 1217; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-443, s. 19.25(s).)

Cross References. — As to penalty for escaping or assisting in an escape from the state prison, see § 148-45.

Editor's Note. — The 1955 amendatory act provided in s. 4: "The provisions of this act shall be construed to be mandatory rather than directive."

CASE NOTES

Common Law. — The offense of breaking jail was a felony at common law, but by this section, all cases, no matter what the person is confined for, are reduced to a misdemeanor. State v. Brown, 82 N.C. 585 (1880) (decided under prior law).

This section applies only to the act of breaking out of jail or county prison and not from mere personal restraint or imprisonment under law. State v. Brame, 71 N.C. App. 270, 321 S.E.2d 449 (1984).

Escape From Officer Not Included. — This section applies only to breaking prison or escaping therefrom and does not, because of its wording, include escape from an officer before being confined to prison. State v. Brown, 82 N.C. 585 (1880).

A juvenile detention home or center is not a "prison, jail, or lockup" within the meaning of this section. State v. Puckett, 43 N.C. App. 596, 259 S.E.2d 310 (1979).

Cost of Recapture May Not Be Recovered from Prisoner. — The State may not recover of a prisoner moneys expended by it to recapture him after escape from custody, since the escape does not invade any property right of the State, but the expenditure of the sums is voluntary and made by it for the protection of the people of the State in preserving the integrity of a penal system. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n v. Cobb, 215 N.C. 556, 2 S.E.2d 565 (1939).

Applied in State v. Abernathy, 1 N.C. App. 625, 162 S.E.2d 114 (1968); State v. Whitt, 2 N.C. App. 601, 163 S.E.2d 531 (1968); State v. Netcliff, 116 N.C. App. 396, 448 S.E.2d 311 (1994), overruled on other grounds, State v. Patton, 342 N.C. 633, 466 S.E.2d 708 (1996).

§ 14-256.1. Escape from private correctional facility.

It is unlawful for any person convicted in a jurisdiction other than North Carolina but housed in a private correctional facility located in North Carolina to escape from that facility. Violation of this section is a Class H felony. (1998-212, s. 17.23(a).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-212, s. 17.23(d), made this section effective January 1, 1999, and applicable to offenses commmitted on or after that date.

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 1.1 provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations Appropriations and Capital Improvement Appropriations Act of 1998'."

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 30.5 contains a severability clause.

§ 14-257: Repealed by Session Laws 1994, Extra Session, c. 14, s. 72(12).

§ 14-258. Conveying messages and weapons to or trading with convicts and other prisoners.

If any person shall convey to or from any convict any letters or oral messages, or shall convey to any convict or person imprisoned, charged with crime and awaiting trial any weapon or instrument by which to effect an escape, or that will aid him in an assault or insurrection, or shall trade with a convict for his clothing or stolen goods, or shall sell to him any article forbidden him by prison rules, he shall be guilty of a Class H felony: Provided, that when a murder, an assault or an escape is effected with the means furnished, the person convicted of furnishing the means shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1873-4, c. 158; s. 12; Code, s. 3441; Rev., s. 3662; 1911, c. 11; C.S., s. 4406; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1218; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-258.1. Furnishing poison, controlled substances, deadly weapons, cartridges, ammunition or alcoholic beverages to inmates of charitable, mental or penal institutions or local confinement facilities.

(a) If any person shall give or sell to any inmate of any charitable, mental or penal institution, or local confinement facility, or if any person shall combine, confederate, conspire, aid, abet, solicit, urge, investigate, counsel, advise, encourage, attempt to procure, or procure another or others to give or sell to any inmate of any charitable, mental or penal institution, or local confinement facility, any deadly weapon, or any cartridge or ammunition for firearms of any kind, or any controlled substances included in Schedules I through VI contained in Article 5 of Chapter 90 of the General Statutes except under the general supervision of a practitioner, poison or poisonous substance, except upon the prescription of a physician, he shall be punished as a Class H felon; and if he be an officer or employee of any institution of the State, or of any local confinement facility, he shall be dismissed from his position or office.

(b) Any person who shall knowingly give or sell any alcoholic beverages to any inmate of any State mental or penal institution, or to any inmate of any local confinement facility, except for medical purposes as prescribed by a duly licensed physician and except for an ordained minister or rabbi who gives sacramental wine to an inmate as part of a religious service; or any person who shall combine, confederate, conspire, procure, or procure another or others to give or sell any alcoholic beverages to any inmate of any such State institution or local confinement facility, except for medical purposes as prescribed by a duly licensed physician and except for an ordained minister or rabbi who gives sacramental wine to an inmate as part of a religious service; or any person who shall bring into the buildings, grounds or other facilities of such institution any alcoholic beverages, except for medical purposes as prescribed by a duly licensed physician or sacramental wine brought by an ordained minister or rabbi for use as part of a religious service, shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. If such person is an officer or employee of any institution of the State, such person shall be dismissed from office. (1961, c. 394, s. 2; 1969, c.

970, s. 6; 1971, c. 929; 1973, c. 1093; 1975, c. 804, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66; 1989, c. 106; 1993, c. 539, s. 160; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section delineates two categories of offenses for which an individual might be found guilty: (1) The substantive offense of giving or selling or (2) a group of 13 related acts that depict involvement with, but fall short of the commission of, the substantive offense, namely, combining, confederating, conspiring, aiding, abetting, soliciting, urging, investigating (instigating?), counseling, advising, encouraging, attempting to procure, or procuring another to commit the offense of giving or selling. State v. Seagroves, 78 N.C. App. 49, 336 S.E.2d 684 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 384, 342 S.E.2d 905 (1986).

The second category of proscribed acts in this section does not create 13 separate criminal offenses, each punishable as a Class H felony. State v. Seagroves, 78 N.C. App. 49, 336 S.E.2d 684 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 384, 342 S.E.2d 905 (1986).

Defendant's convictions of conspiring to provide drugs to an inmate in violation of subsection (a) of this section and of procuring drugs for an inmate in violation of the same statute constituted double jeopardy, and his conviction on the second count would be vacated. State v. Seagroves, 78 N.C. App. 49, 336 S.E.2d 684 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 384, 342 S.E.2d 905 (1986).

Indictment Held Sufficient. — Indictment charging defendant with the completed offense of giving a controlled substance to an inmate was sufficient to enable him to adequately prepare for trial and to protect him from being twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, so as to support his conviction of an attempt to give a controlled substance to an inmate. State v. Slade, 81 N.C. App. 303, 343 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 318 N.C. 419, 349 S.E.2d 604 (1986).

Evidence Held Sufficient in Controlled Substance Case. — The State's evidence showing that the defendant's boyfriend was an inmate at a local confinement facility, that defendant gave him a controlled substance while he was an inmate, and that defendant acted knowingly and intentionally was sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section. State v. Mitchell, 135 N.C. App. 617, 522 S.E.2d 94 (1999).

Number of Conspiracy Counts Allowed. — Defendant could only be convicted of one count of conspiracy to provide an inmate with a controlled substance, even though four incidents occurred, where the offenses transpired over a short period of time, the participants in the conspiracies for which defendant was indicted remained the same, the indictments all averred the same objective, delivering controlled substances to the inmate coconspirator, and the state presented no evidence concerning the number of meetings which took place between defendant and the other participants. State v. Griffin, 112 N.C. App. 838, 437 S.E.2d 390 (1993).

§ 14-258.2. Possession of dangerous weapon in prison.

(a) Any person while in the custody of the Division of Prisons, or any person under the custody of any local confinement facility as defined in G.S. 153A-217, who shall have in his possession without permission or authorization a weapon capable of inflicting serious bodily injuries or death, or who shall fabricate or create such a weapon from any source, shall be guilty of a Class H felony; and any person who commits any assault with such weapon and thereby inflicts bodily injury or by the use of said weapon effects an escape or rescue from imprisonment shall be punished as a Class F felon.

(b) A person is guilty of a Class H felony if he assists a prisoner in the custody of the Division of Prisons or of any local confinement facility as defined in G.S. 153A-217 in escaping or attempting to escape and:

(1) In the perpetration of the escape or attempted escape he commits an assault with a deadly weapon and inflicts bodily injury; or
(2) By the use of a deadly weapon he effects the escape of the prisoner. (1975, c. 316, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1983, c. 455, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 1219; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

The provisions of this section apply to: (i) violations committed by any prisoner in the custody of the Department of Correction, whether inside or outside of the facilities of the North Carolina Department of Correction; (ii) violations committed by any prisoner or by any other person lawfully under the custody of any local confinement facility (as defined in G.S. 153A-217), whether inside or outside the local confinement facilities (as defined in G.S. 153A-217). The provisions of this section apply to violations committed inside or outside of the prison, jail, detention center, or other confinement facility.
(b) Reserved. (2001-360, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-360, s. 2, makes this section effective December 1, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date.

As enacted, this section contained a subsection (a) but no (b). This section has been set out in the form above at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

§ 14-259. Harboring or aiding certain persons.

It shall be unlawful for any person knowing or having reasonable cause to believe, that any person has escaped from any prison, jail, reformatory, or from the criminal insane department of any State hospital, or from the custody of any peace officer who had such person in charge, or that such person is a convict or prisoner whose parole has been revoked, or that such person is a fugitive from justice or is otherwise the subject of an outstanding warrant for arrest or order of arrest, to conceal, hide, harbor, feed, clothe or otherwise aid and comfort in any manner to any such person. Fugitive from justice shall, for the purpose of this provision, mean any person who has fled from any other jurisdiction to avoid prosecution for a crime.

Every person who shall conceal, hide, harbor, feed, clothe, or offer aid and comfort to any other person in violation of this section shall be guilty of a felony, if such other person has been convicted of, or was in custody upon the charge of a felony, and shall be punished as a Class I felon; and shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor, if such other person had been convicted of, or was in custody upon a charge of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished in the discretion of the court.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to members of the immediate family of such person. For the purposes of this section "immediate family" shall be defined to be the mother, father, brother, sister, wife, husband and child of said person. SUBCHAPTER IX. OFFENSES AGAINST THE PUBLIC PEACE.

ARTICLE 35.

Offenses Against the Public Peace.

§ 14-269. Carrying concealed weapons.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person willfully and intentionally to carry concealed about his person any bowie knife, dirk, dagger, slung shot, loaded cane, metallic knuckles, razor, shurikin, stun gun, or other deadly weapon of like kind, except when the person is on the person's own premises.

(a1) It shall be unlawful for any person willfully and intentionally to carry concealed about his person any pistol or gun except in the following circumstances:

(1) The person is on the person's own premises.

(2) The deadly weapon is a handgun, and the person has a concealed handgun permit issued in accordance with Article 54B of this Chapter.

(b) This prohibition shall not apply to the following persons:

(1) Officers and enlisted personnel of the armed forces of the United States when in discharge of their official duties as such and acting under orders requiring them to carry arms and weapons;

(2) Civil and law enforcement officers of the United States while in the discharge of their official duties;

(3) Officers and soldiers of the militia and the national guard when called into actual service;

(4) Officers of the State, or of any county, city, or town, charged with the execution of the laws of the State, when acting in the discharge of their official duties;

(5) Sworn law-enforcement officers, when off-duty, if:

a. Written regulations authorizing the carrying of concealed weapons have been filed with the clerk of superior court in the county where the law-enforcement unit is located by the sheriff or chief of police or other superior officer in charge; and

b. Such regulations specifically prohibit the carrying of concealed weapons while the officer is consuming or under the influence of alcoholic beverages.

(b1) It is a defense to a prosecution under this section that:

(1) The weapon was not a firearm;

(2) The defendant was engaged in, or on the way to or from, an activity in which he legitimately used the weapon;

(3) The defendant possessed the weapon for that legitimate use; and

(4) The defendant did not use or attempt to use the weapon for an illegal purpose.

The burden of proving this defense is on the defendant.

(c) Any person violating the provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Any person violating the provisions of subsection (a1) of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor for the first offense. A second or subsequent offense is punishable as a Class I felony.

(d) This section does not apply to an ordinary pocket knife carried in a closed position. As used in this section, "ordinary pocket knife" means a small knife, designed for carrying in a pocket or purse, that has its cutting edge and point entirely enclosed by its handle, and that may not be opened by a throwing, explosive, or spring action. (Code, s. 1005; Rev., s. 3708; 1917, c. 76; 1919, c. 197, s. 8; C.S., s. 4410; 1923, c. 57; Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 30; 1929, cc. 51, 224; 1947, c. 459; 1949, c. 1217; 1959, c. 1073, s. 1; 1965, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 7; 1977, c. 616; 1981, c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66; 1983, c. 86; 1985, c. 432, ss. 1-3; 1993, c. 539, s. 163; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1995, c. 398, s. 2; 1997-238, s. 1.)

III. Persons Excepted.
IV. Illustrative Cases.
V. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Purpose. — The purpose of this section is to reduce the likelihood that a concealed weapon may be resorted to in a fit of anger. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

Applied in State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972); State v. Patton, 18 N.C. App. 266, 196 S.E.2d 560 (1973); State v. McZorn, 288 N.C. 417, 219 S.E.2d 201 (1975).

Stated in State v. Burgess, 2 N.C. App. 677, 163 S.E.2d 662 (1968).

Scoggin, 236 N.C. 19, 72 S.E.2d 54 (1952); State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973); State v. Grainger, 60 N.C. App. 188, 298 S.E.2d 203 (1982); State v. Gonzalez, 311 N.C. 80, 316

II. ELEMENTS OF THE OFFENSE.

Elements Generally. — In order to be guilty of violating this section the accused must be off his own premises, carrying a deadly weapon, and the weapon must be concealed about his person. State v. Williamson, 238 N.C. 652, 78 S.E.2d 763 (1953).

Concealment Is Gist of Offense. — The mischief provided against is the practice of wearing weapons concealed about the person to be used upon any emergency. State v. Broadnax, 91 N.C. 543 (1884).

Concealment of the weapon must be shown. State v. Cobb, 18 N.C. App. 221, 196 S.E.2d 521 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 878 (1974).

If the weapon was carried openly, the defendant could not be guilty under this section. State v. Brown, 125 N.C. 704, 34 S.E. 549 (1899).

And Is Question for Jury. — Whether, in a given case, the weapon is concealed from the public and such presumption of guilty intent is rebutted by the mode of carrying the weapon, are questions for the jury. State v. Reams, 121 N.C. 556, 27 S.E. 1004 (1897). See State v. Lilly, 116 N.C. 1049, 21 S.E. 563 (1895).

Prima Facie Evidence of Concealment. — The fact that defendant had a pistol about his person, off of his own premises, was prima facie evidence of concealment, which shifted the burden upon the defendant to rebut or disprove. State v. McManus, 89 N.C. 555 (1883); State v. Lilly, 116 N.C. 1049, 21 S.E. 563 (1895); State v. Reams, 121 N.C. 556, 27 S.E. 1004 (1897); State v. Hamby, 126 N.C. 1066, 35 S.E. 614 (1900).

The possession of a pistol by one on the premises of another is not alone sufficient to convict of carrying a concealed weapon in violation of this section, although the statute makes such possession prima facie evidence of the concealment thereof. State v. Vanderburg, 200 N.C. 713, 158 S.E. 248 (1931).

Affirmative Showing Required in Rebuttal. — To rebut the statutory presumption arising from the concealment, the absence of intent to conceal must be affirmatively found. State v. Gilbert, 87 N.C. 527 (1882); State v. Brown, 125 N.C. 704, 34 S.E. 549 (1899).

Intent Required. — The intent to carry, not the intent to use, determines the guilt. State v. Reams, 121 N.C. 556, 27 S.E. 1004 (1897).

To conceal a weapon means something more than the mere act of having it where it may not be seen. It implies an assent of the mind and a purpose to so carry it that it may not be seen. State v. Gilbert, 87 N.C. 527 (1882).

Defense of No Intent to Conceal. — The question is as to the manner of carrying, whether concealed or not, and it might be shown, in defense, that there was no intent to conceal it. State v. Brown, 125 N.C. 704, 34 S.E. 549 (1899).

When Intent Is Immaterial. — But if from defendant's own testimony it appears that he necessarily knew that he was carrying it concealed, intent is immaterial. State v. Simmons, 143 N.C. 613, 56 S.E. 701 (1907).

"About His Person". — The language is not "concealed on his person," but "concealed about his person"; that is, concealed near, in close proximity to him, and within his convenient control and easy reach, so that he could promptly use it, if prompted to do so by any violent motive. It makes no difference how it is concealed, so it is on or near to and within the reach and control of the person charged. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

The language of the statute is, not "concealed on his person," but "concealed about his person," and hence, if the weapon be within reach and control of the defendant, it is sufficient to bring the case within the meaning of the statute. State v. McManus, 89 N.C. 555 (1883).

To be criminal, the weapon must be concealed, not necessarily on the person of the accused, but in such position as gives him ready access to it. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

Carrying on Own Premises. — That defendant was not on his own premises when discovered carrying a concealed weapon is an element of this section. State v. Stanfield, 19 N.C. App. 622, 199 S.E.2d 741 (1973), appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 622, 201 S.E.2d 692 (1974).

The use of the words, "on his own premises," and not being "on his own lands," in this section, shows an intention to restrict the right to carry concealed weapons to those who are in the privacy of their own premises and not likely to be thrown into contact with the public, nor tempted, on a sudden quarrel, to use the great advantage a concealed weapon gives. State v. Perry, 120 N.C. 580, 26 S.E. 915, 26 S.E. 1008 (1897).

Time Not Essence of Offense. — Time is not the essence of the offense of carrying a concealed weapon, and it may be shown at a previous time to that alleged in the bill. State v. Spencer, 185 N.C. 765, 117 S.E. 803 (1923).

Apprehension of Assault No Defense. — Carrying concealed weapons in reasonable apprehension of deadly assaults is not justification of a violation of the statutory offense, but in aggravation thereof, and may be considered by the trial judge in imposing the sentence, according to the discretion given him therein by this section. State v. Woodlief, 172 N.C. 885, 90 S.E. 137 (1916).

Nor Is Acting upon Advice of Attorney. — A person acting in ignorance of the law in good faith and upon advice of the clerk of the court or of an attorney, but in violation of this section, is not excused. State v. Simmons, 143 N.C. 613, 56 S.E. 701 (1907).

III. PERSONS EXCEPTED.

Night Watchman. — A private night watchman is not guilty of carrying a concealed weapon, under this section, while on duty upon the premises he is employed to watch. State v. Anderson, 129 N.C. 521, 39 S.E. 824 (1901).

Officials of Transportation Companies. — The exception in this section does not apply to the officials of corporations, such as turnpikes, railroads and others, which invite the public to use their lines of travel. State v. Perry, 120 N.C. 580, 26 S.E. 915, 26 S.E. 1008 (1897).

United States Mail Carrier. — A United States mail carrier is indictable under this section for carrying a concealed weapon while carrying the mail and while returning to his home after delivering the mail. State v. Boone, 132 N.C. 1107, 44 S.E. 595 (1903).

IV. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

"Ordinary Pocket Knife." — Knife about four and one-half inches in overall length which, when folded, was clearly designed for carrying in a pocket or purse, was an "ordinary pocketknife" as defined by this section. In re Dale B., 96 N.C. App. 375, 385 S.E.2d 521 (1989).

Butcher Knife. — This section making it indictable for one to carry concealed about his person any pistol, bowie knife, razor or other deadly weapon of like kind, embraces a butcher's knife. State v. Erwin, 91 N.C. 545 (1884).

Revolver in Bag in Back Seat. — Where police officers stopped defendant's car to make a routine driver's license check and defendant removed revolver from a bag in the backseat, the police properly arrested him without a warrant inasmuch as they had reasonable ground to believe defendant was committing a misdemeanor — carrying a concealed weapon in violation of this section — in their presence. State v. White, 18 N.C. App. 31, 195 S.E.2d 576 (1973), appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 587, 196 S.E.2d 811 (1973).

Gun Under Driver's Seat. — Evidence of defendant's guilty knowledge and intent was quite plain, where he was the driver of a car involved in a collision, witnesses to accident, who prevented his escape, saw him reach under the driver's seat as though placing something there, and that is where the patrolman found a gun. State v. Jordan, 75 N.C. App. 637, 331 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 544, 335 S.E.2d 23 (1985).

Pistol in Hip Pocket with Coat on Shoulder. — Upon evidence tending to show that the defendant had a pistol with the butt end projecting above his hip pocket, and with his coat off and carried upon his shoulder, it is sufficient for the determination of the jury, upon the issue of defendant's guilt in having carried a concealed weapon in violation of this section. State v. Mangum, 187 N.C. 477, 121 S.E. 765 (1924).

Carrying Pistol to Deliver to Another. — One is not guilty of a violation of this section where it appears that he had a pistol in his pocket for the purpose of delivering it to the owner who had sent him for it. State v. Broadnax, 91 N.C. 543 (1884).

Sitting on Firearm. — Where officer approached the defendant's car and, using his flashlight, looked into the interior, viewed the empty holster next to the defendant, asked the defendant where his gun was and was told by the defendant that the defendant was sitting on the gun, the officer then had probable cause to arrest the defendant for carrying a concealed weapon. State v. Brooks, 337 N.C. 132, 446 S.E.2d 579 (1994).

Persons Not "On Premises". — A superintendent or overseer of a department of a cotton mill, is not, while therein, "on his premises," within the meaning of this section. State v. Bridgers, 169 N.C. 309, 84 S.E. 689 (1915).

A person in his own automobile on a public highway is not on his own premises within the meaning of this section. State v. Gainey, 273 N.C. 620, 160 S.E.2d 685 (1968).

A mere servant or hireling who carries concealed weapons on the premises of his employer is indictable. State v. Deyton, 119 N.C. 880, 26 S.E. 159 (1896).

V. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Warrant Must State That Defendant Carried Weapon Off His Own Premises. — In prosecution for carrying a concealed weapon, the warrant is held fatally defective in failing to embrace in the charge the essential element of the offense that the weapon was carried concealed by defendant off his own premises, the warrant itself excluding the charge that the weapon was carried off the premises by charging that defendant carried an unconcealed weapon off his premises. State v. Bradley, 210 N.C. 290, 186 S.E. 240 (1936).

Information Held Sufficient. — An information charging that defendant, on a specified date, unlawfully and willfully carried a concealed weapon, to wit, a pistol, about his person, the defendant not being at the time on his own premises, is an accurate and sufficient charge of violating this section. State v. Caldwell, 269 N.C. 521, 153 S.E.2d 34 (1967).

Former Conviction of Assault. — A conviction of assault with a deadly weapon will not sustain a plea of former conviction in a subsequent trial for carrying a concealed weapon. State v. Robinson, 116 N.C. 1046, 21 S.E. 701 (1895).

Punishment. — When the punishment does not exceed the limits fixed by this section, it cannot be considered cruel and unusual punishment in a constitutional sense. State v. Caldwell, 269 N.C. 521, 153 S.E.2d 34 (1967).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Possession of an Unconcealed Pistol in an Automobile Not Violation of Statute. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Albert Jackson, Sheriff of Henderson County, 41 N.C.A.G. 207 (1971).

§ 14-269.1. Confiscation and disposition of deadly weapons.

Upon conviction of any person for violation of G.S. 14-2.2, 14-269, 14-269.7, or any other offense involving the use of a deadly weapon of a type referred to in G.S. 14-269, the deadly weapon with reference to which the defendant shall have been convicted shall be ordered confiscated and disposed of by the presiding judge at the trial in one of the following ways in the discretion of the presiding judge.

(1) By ordering the weapon returned to its rightful owner, but only when such owner is a person other than the defendant and has filed a petition for the recovery of such weapon with the presiding judge at the time of the defendant's conviction, and upon a finding by the presiding judge that petitioner is entitled to possession of same and that he was unlawfully deprived of the same without his consent.

(2), (3) Repealed by Session Laws 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 16, s. 2.

(4) By ordering such weapon turned over to the sheriff of the county in which the trial is held or his duly authorized agent to be destroyed. The sheriff shall maintain a record of the destruction thereof.

(4a) By ordering the weapon, if the weapon has a legible unique identification number, turned over to a law enforcement agency in the county of trial for the official use of such agency, but only upon the written request by the head or chief of such agency. The receiving law enforcement agency shall maintain a record and inventory of all such weapons received.

(5) By ordering such weapon turned over to the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation's Crime Laboratory Weapons Reference Library for official use by that agency. The State Bureau of Investigation shall maintain a record and inventory of all such weapons received.

(6) By ordering such weapons turned over to the North Carolina Justice Academy for official use by that agency. The North Carolina Justice Academy shall maintain a record and inventory of all such weapons received. (1965, c. 954, s. 2; 1967, c. 24, s. 3; 1983, c. 517; 1989, c. 216; 1993, c. 259, s. 2; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 16, s. 2; c. 22, s. 23; 1997-356, s. 1.)

Certain Counties Governed by Former § 14-269(b). — Harnett, Pamlico, Perquimans, Scotland and Warren Counties were excepted from the provisions of this section by Session Laws 1965, c. 954, s. 2 1/2, as amended by Session Laws 1969, c. 301, Session Laws 1973, c. 1399, Session Laws 1981, c. 279, and Session Laws 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 895, s. 1. Session Laws 1969, c. 1117, amended the 1965 act by adding to s. 2 1/2 the following sentence: "The provisions of G.S. 14-269(b) prior to amendment by this Act shall be effective as to these counties." Former § 14-269(b) provided:

"(b) If the deadly weapon with reference to which the defendant shall have been convicted is a bowie knife, dirk, dagger, slung shot, loaded cane, brass, iron or metallic knuckles, razor or weapon of like kind, the same shall be destroyed. However, pistols or guns may be confiscated and ordered turned over to the sheriff of the county in which the trial is held by the judge presiding at the trial. Under the direction of said sheriff the weapon shall be sold after one advertisement in a newspaper having a general circulation in the county, at public auction, which shall be held at least once a year. The proceeds of the sale of the weapon or weapons shall go the general fund of the county in which the weapon or weapons were confiscated and sold. The sheriff shall keep a record and inventory of all weapons received by him and sold under his direction; provided, however, that in any case the presiding judge may, if the facts so justify, order any pistol or gun returned to the defendant."

Editor's Note. — In former § 14-269(b) as set out above, the word "sheriff" was substituted for the words "clerk of the superior court" in three places by Session Laws 1959, c. 1073, the intent of the amendatory act being to transfer to the sheriffs the duties theretofore performed by the clerks of the superior court in disposing of confiscated weapons. Of the counties presently governed by former § 14-269(b), the following are excepted from the application of the 1959 amendment: Perquimans, and Warren. (Harnett and Pamlico, originally among those excepted, were brought under the 1959 act by Session Laws 1967, cc. 470 and 6, respectively.) As to the counties excepted from the 1959 act, the word "sheriff" in former § 14-469(b) as set out above should be read "clerk of the superior court."

Former § 14-269(b) was also modified, as to one of the counties in which it remains applicable, as follows: Scotland: 1955, c. 569.

Session Laws 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 895 deleted Rockingham from the list of counties in Session Laws 1965, c. 954, s. 2 1/2 governed by former § 14-269(b), and repealed Session Laws 1957, c. 939, which had modified § 14-269(b) as to Rockingham County.

(1971, c. 241, ss. 1, 2; c. 1224; 1991, c. 622, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 164; c. 558, s. 1; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 4(a), (b); 1995, c. 49, s. 1; 1997-238, s. 2; 1999-211, s. 1; 1999-257, s. 3, 3.1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — The purpose of subsection (b) is to deter students and others from bringing any type of gun onto school grounds. In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

Public policy favors that subsection (b) be treated differently from the other firearm statutes. In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

Construction with Other Sections. — Section 14-87(a) is distinguishable because the only way a person's life would be threatened is with the use of an operable gun; the armed robbery statute necessarily implies that the gun be operable. To the contrary, subsection (b) states it is illegal to carry any gun on school property. In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

The focus of § 14-288.8 is weapons of mass death and destruction which is considerably different from the concept of any gun used in subsection (b). In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

Section 14-415.1(a) encompasses a narrow range of guns, while subsection (b) of this section prohibits any gun, excluding only a BB gun, stun gun, air rifle, or air pistol. In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

Evidence Was Sufficient. — The State presented sufficient evidence for a reasonable mind to conclude that the juvenile knowingly possessed a pellet gun on educational property. In re Murray, 136 N.C. App. 648, 525 S.E.2d 496 (2000).

A gun does not have to be operable in order for a student to be adjudicated delinquent under the statute prohibiting the possession of "any gun" on educational property. In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

The juvenile's motion to suppress the search was properly denied where the school principal had reasonable grounds for suspicion about the contents of the book bag, and the search was conducted in a reasonable manner under the circumstances. In re Murray, 136 N.C. App. 648, 525 S.E.2d 496 (2000).

Educational Property. — Where a school principal testified that a parking lot in which the principal located defendant juvenile and her cohorts was school property, the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of possession of a weapon, a knife, on educational property in violation of § 14-269.2(d), regardless of the fact that a city bus made stops in that parking lot. In re D.D., — N.C. App. —, 554 S.E.2d 346, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 942 (2001).

CASE NOTES

Elements of the Offense. — The offense defined by this section consists of two material elements, both of which must be made to appear before the person charged can be convicted. He must have made a false representation that he is a duly authorized peace officer, and acting upon such representation he must have arrested some person, searched a building, or done some act in accordance with the authority delegated to duly authorized officers. State v. Church, 242 N.C. 230, 87 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

Punishment Provisions Under § 14-3(a) and Subsection (d) of This Section. — While subsection (d) of this section provides in pertinent part that a violation of both subsections (a) and (b) is a misdemeanor, it also provides that a violation of subsection (a) is punishable under § 14-3(a) and a violation of subsection (b) is punishable under subsection (d) of this section. The punishment provisions of § 14-3(a) and subsection (d) vary. State v. Chisholm, 90 N.C. App. 526, 369 S.E.2d 375 (1988).

Error in Instruction Held Not Plain Error. — The trial judge's instruction to the jury of elements under subsection (b) of this section instead of subsection (a) of this section did not create an error that rose to the level of "plain error" when defendant was only charged with a violation of subsection (a), since to have convicted defendant under this section the jury would have to have found that he represented himself as a sworn law-enforcement officer to another. State v. Chisholm, 90 N.C. App. 526, 369 S.E.2d 375 (1988).

When Nonsuit Proper. — Where the defendant made no oral representation that he was a peace officer, but merely exhibited a courtesy card, which the witness examined, but was not misled by, and the defendant used no words or action which would indicate that he intended or attempted to arrest the witness, a motion for judgment as of nonsuit should have been allowed. State v. Church, 242 N.C. 230, 87 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

§ 14-277.1. Communicating threats.

(a) A person is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor if without lawful authority:
(1) He willfully threatens to physically injure the person or that person's child, sibling, spouse, or dependent or willfully threatens to damage the property of another;
(2) The threat is communicated to the other person, orally, in writing, or by any other means;
(3) The threat is made in a manner and under circumstances which would cause a reasonable person to believe that the threat is likely to be carried out; and
(4) The person threatened believes that the threat will be carried out.
(b) A violation of this section is a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1973, c. 1286, s. 11; 1993, c. 539, s. 172; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1999-262, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Construction with Federal Law. — Defendants were entitled to summary judgment as to the plaintiff's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim for unlawful arrest, where officers had probable cause to believe that the plaintiff had committed, at least, three offenses, that is, discharging a firearm in violation of a county ordinance, resisting, obstructing, and delaying an officer in carrying out his duties, and threatening bodily harm to an officer. Bell v. Dawson, 144 F. Supp. 2d 454 (W.D.N.C. 2001).

Conditional Threats. — A defendant may be held liable under this section for conditional threats where the condition is one which she had no right to impose. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

Defendant's threat to hit the victim with a rock did not become lawful merely because defendant indicated she had no intention to strike if the victim did not "come any closer." While the threat gave the victim the power to avoid the threatened consequences by simply complying with the condition imposed by defendant, the condition was one which defendant had no right to impose. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

Threatening language can amount to an offer to injure a person even though it is a conditional offer. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

No Requirement That Threat Be Carried Out. — The conduct proscribed by this section is the making and communicating of the threat in the manner described in the statute, with no requirement that the threat be carried out. State v. Roberson, 37 N.C. App. 714, 247 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

Belief That Threat Will Be Carried Out. — The crime of communicating threats under this section involves more than making a threat to injure one's person or property and communicating it to the other person; it is also necessary, as the statute expressly provides, that the threat was made in a manner and under circumstances which could cause a reasonable person to believe that the threat is likely to be carried out and that the person threatened believes that the threat will be carried out. State v. Elledge, 80 N.C. App. 714, 343 S.E.2d 549 (1986).

Evidence that on earlier occasions defendant had broken into wife's house and assaulted her tended to prove the two elements of the offense under this section and its receipt did not violate § 8C-1, Rule 404(b). State v. Elledge, 80 N.C. App. 714, 343 S.E.2d 549 (1986).

Insufficient Evidence of a Willful Threat to Physically Injure Person or Property. — The State failed to present substantial evidence of the first element of the crime of communicating threats—that defendant willfully threatened to physically injure the person or damage the property of another—where the defendant created a screen saver which ambiguously stated, "The end is near;" the defendant was never connected with any of the alleged bomb threats at the school; there was no evidence defendant had any plans to physically injure anyone or damage school property; he had exhibited good behavior at the school prior to this incident, and the arresting officer testified he determined the message written on the computer was "a prank." State v. Mortimer, 142 N.C. App. 321, 542 S.E.2d 330 (2001).

Refusal to Allow Testimony as to Defendant's Peacefulness as Error. — Where at abortion clinic defendant yelled, "If you will hold that door open, I'm going to throw a bomb in there and get you out," trial court erred in its refusal to allow defendant to present character witnesses to testify as to his character for peacefulness; evidence of defendant's peacefulness was relevant to the issues of defendant's willfulness in making the statement, whether the statement would have been believed by a reasonable person as well as the reasonableness of business manager's perception that the statement was not a joke. State v. Shreve, 94 N.C. App. 383, 380 S.E.2d 158 (1989).

Testimony Collateral to Issue Charged. — Where at an abortion clinic defendant yelled at business manager, "If you will hold that door open, I'm going to throw a bomb in there," trial court did not err in refusing to allow defendant to cross-examine business manager about her experiences in Cyprus just a few months earlier; defendant's argument that evidence was relevant in determining whether business manager believed that defendant would actually throw a bomb was without merit and testimony defendant attempted to elicit was collateral to the charges tried. State v. Shreve, 94 N.C. App. 383, 380 S.E.2d 158 (1989).

Defendant Not Subjected to Double Jeopardy. — Where the defendant was charged with communicating threats and assault by pointing a gun, he was not subjected to double jeopardy, even though the charges arose out of the same incident, since the elements of the two offenses differed. State v. Evans, 40 N.C. App. 730, 253 S.E.2d 590, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 456, 256 S.E.2d 809 (1979).

Instructions. — In a prosecution for communicating a threat, the trial court did not err in instructing that the threat must be proven to have been communicated orally and in failing to instruct the jury that the threat could be communicated by any other means. State v. Evans, 40 N.C. App. 730, 253 S.E.2d 590, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 456, 256 S.E.2d 809 (1979).

§ 14-277.2. Weapons at parades, etc., prohibited.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person participating in, affiliated with, or present as a spectator at any parade, funeral procession, picket line, or demonstration upon any private health care facility or upon any public place owned or under the control of the State or any of its political subdivisions to willfully or intentionally possess or have immediate access to any dangerous weapon. Violation of this subsection shall be a Class 1 misdemeanor. It shall be presumed that any rifle or gun carried on a rack in a pickup truck at a holiday parade or in a funeral procession does not violate the terms of this act.

(b) For the purposes of this section the term "dangerous weapon" shall include those weapons specified in G.S. 14-269, 14-269.2, 14-284.1, or 14-288.8 or any other object capable of inflicting serious bodily injury or death when used as a weapon.

(c) The provisions of this section shall not apply to a person exempted by the provisions of G.S. 14-269(b) or to persons authorized by State or federal law to carry dangerous weapons in the performance of their duties or to any person who obtains a permit to carry a dangerous weapon at a parade, funeral procession, picket line, or demonstration from the sheriff or police chief, whichever is appropriate, of the locality where such parade, funeral procession, picket line, or demonstration is to take place. (1981, c. 684, s. 1; 1983, c. 633; 1993, c. 412, s. 2; c. 539, s. 174; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-238, s. 4.)

§ 14-277.3. Stalking.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of stalking if the person willfully on more than one occasion follows or is in the presence of, or otherwise harasses, another person without legal purpose and with the intent to do any of the following:

(1) Place that person in reasonable fear either for the person's safety or the safety of the person's immediate family or close personal associates.

(2) Cause that person to suffer substantial emotional distress by placing that person in fear of death, bodily injury, or continued harassment, and that in fact causes that person substantial emotional distress.

(b) Classification. — A violation of this section is a Class A1 misdemeanor. A person who commits the offense of stalking when there is a court order in effect prohibiting similar behavior by that person is guilty of a Class H felony. A person who commits the offense of stalking after having been previously convicted of a stalking offense is guilty of a Class F felony.

(c) Definition. — For the purposes of this section, the term "harasses" or "harassment" means knowing conduct, including written or printed communication or transmission, telephone or cellular or other wireless telephonic communication, facsimile transmission, pager messages or transmissions, answering machine or voice mail messages or transmissions, and electronic mail messages or other computerized or electronic transmissions, directed at a specific person that torments, terrorizes, or terrifies that person and that serves no legitimate purpose. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 804, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 173; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-306, s. 1; 2001-518, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-518, s. 1, effective March 1, 2002, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, rewrote the section.

CASE NOTES

The trial courts should instruct the jury as to the definition of "reasonable fear" when handling violations under this section to ensure that an objective standard, based on what frightens an ordinary, prudent person under the same or similar circumstances, is applied rather than a subjective standard which focuses on the individual victim's fears and apprehensions. State v. Ferebee, 137 N.C. App. 710, 529 S.E.2d 686 (2000).

Evidence. — Evidence which related to events occurring before defendant was warned to stay a way from the victim was not irrelevant and prejudicial. State v. Ferebee, 128 N.C. App. 710, 499 S.E.2d 459 (1998).

Acts Prior to Warning Relevant to Show Context But Not to Convict. — The trial court's charge, given in accordance with the pattern jury instructions, "incorrectly allowed the jury to consider acts prior to the alleged warning as constituting part of the basis of a stalking conviction." A conviction for the offense of stalking may not be based upon acts which occurred prior to the time a defendant was warned to desist, but rather upon acts committed after the warning. State v. Ferebee, 137 N.C. App. 710, 529 S.E.2d 686 (2000).

§ 14-277.4. Obstruction of health care facilities.

(a) No person shall obstruct or block another person's access to or egress from a health care facility or from the common areas of the real property upon which the facility is located in a manner that deprives or delays the person from obtaining or providing health care services in the facility.

(b) No person shall injure or threaten to injure a person who is or has been:

(1) Obtaining health care services;

(2) Lawfully aiding another to obtain health care services; or

(3) Providing health care services.

(c) A violation of subsection (a) or (b) of this section is a Class 2 misdemeanor. A second conviction for a violation of either subsection (a) or (b) of this section within three years of the first shall be punishable as a Class 1 misdemeanor. A third or subsequent conviction for a violation of either subsection (a) or (b) of this section within three years of the second or most recent conviction shall be punishable as a Class I felony.

(d) Any person aggrieved under this section may seek injunctive relief in a court of competent jurisdiction to prevent threatened or further violations of this section. Any violation of an injunction obtained pursuant to this section constitutes criminal contempt and shall be punishable by a term of imprisonment of not less than 30 days and no more than 12 months.

(e) This section shall not prohibit any person from engaging in lawful speech or picketing which does not impede or deny another person's access to health care services or to a health care facility or interfere with the delivery of health care services within a health care facility.

(f) "Health care facility" as used in this section means any hospital, clinic, or other facility that is licensed to administer medical treatment or the primary function of which is to provide medical treatment in this State.

(g) "Health care services" as used in this section means services provided in a health care facility.

(h) Persons subject to the prohibitions in subsection (a) of this section do not include owners, officers, agents, or employees of the health care facility or law enforcement officers acting to protect real or personal property. (1993, c. 412, s. 1; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 6; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 767, s. 21.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is neither vague nor overbroad; the terms "obstruct" and "block" do not require those persons subject to the statute to guess at their meaning, and the plain language of the section prohibits only conduct that imposes physical impediments to entering and exiting a health care facility. Hoffman v. Hunt, 126 F.3d 575 (4th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1136, 118 S. Ct. 1838, 140 L. Ed. 2d 1089 (1998).

Law enforcement officers exceeded their authority in threatening plaintiffs with arrest for attempting to distribute literature to persons entering clinics and for being present when patients were rescheduling appointments, activities that do no violate this section. Hoffman v. Hunt, 126 F.3d 575 (4th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1136, 118 S. Ct. 1838, 140 L. Ed. 2d 1089 (1998).

ARTICLE 36.

Offenses Against the Public Safety.

§ 14-278. Willful injury to property of railroads.

(R.C., c. 34, s. 101; Code, s. 1099; Rev., s. 3755; C.S., s. 4418; 1967, c. 1082, s. 2; 1985, c. 577, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 175; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

(1876-7, c. 4; Code, s. 1100; 1887, c. 19; Rev., s. 3763; 1911, c. 179; C.S., s. 4419; 1985, c. 577, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 1222; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Intent a Question for Jury. — Where a defendant was indicted for shooting at a train with intent to injure it, and there was evidence tending to show that he was helplessly drunk at the time, the court properly left the question of intent to the jury, and it was for them to say whether the presumption had been rebutted. State v. Barbee, 92 N.C. 820 (1885).

Proof That Gun Was Unloaded. — If a gun be unloaded and this is relied on as a defense, in an action for shooting at a train, the fact must be shown by the defendant. State v. Hinson, 82 N.C. 597 (1880).

Proof of Conspiracy. — Upon trial for throwing stones at a train, it is not necessary to show a conspiracy, it appearing that the several defendants were not only present, but threw stones at different coaches of the same train. State v. Holder, 153 N.C. 606, 69 S.E. 66 (1910).

Indictment. — Upon a trial for throwing stones at a train, a charge in the bill that it was done "from one station to another" follows the form set out in the statute, and is not void vagueness and uncertainty. It is not necessary that the indictment contain the word "feloniously." State v. Holder, 153 N.C. 606, 69 S.E. 66 (1910).

But the indictment must charge that the train was in actual motion or stopped for a temporary purpose. State v. Boyd, 86 N.C. 634 (1882).

§ 14-280.1. Trespassing on railroad right-of-way.

(a) Offense. — A person commits the offense of trespassing on railroad right-of-way if the person enters and remains on the railroad right-of-way without the consent of the railroad company or the person operating the railroad or without authority granted pursuant to State or federal law.

(b) Crossings. — Nothing in this section shall apply to a person crossing the railroad right-of-way at a public or private crossing.

(c) Legally Abandoned Rights-of-Way. — This section shall not apply to any right-of-way that has been legally abandoned pursuant to an order of a federal or State agency having jurisdiction over the right-of-way and is not being used for railroad services.

(d) Classification. — Trespassing on railroad right-of-way is a Class 3 misdemeanor. (2000-146, s. 10.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2000-146, s. 14, made Session Laws 2000-146, s. 10, which added this section, effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses occurring on or after that date.

§ 14-281. Operating trains and streetcars while intoxicated.

Any train dispatcher, telegraph operator, engineer, fireman, flagman, brakeman, switchman, conductor, motorman, or other employee of any steam, street, suburban or interurban railway company, who shall be intoxicated while engaged in running or operating, or assisting in running or operating, any railway train, shifting-engine, or street or other electric car, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 38; Code, s. 1972; 1891, c. 114; Rev., s. 3758; 1907, c. 330; C.S., s. 4420; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 177; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-281.1. Throwing, dropping, etc., objects at sporting events.

It shall be unlawful for any person to throw, drop, pour, release, discharge, expose or place in an area where an athletic contest or sporting event is taking place any substance or object that shall be likely to cause injury to persons participating in or attending such contests or events or to cause damage to animals, vehicles, equipment, devices, or other things used in connection with such contests or events. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1977, c. 772, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 178; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-282. Displaying false lights on seashore.

If any person shall make or display, or cause to be made or displayed, any false light or beacon on or near the seacoast, for the purpose of deceiving and misleading masters of vessels, and thereby putting them in danger of shipwreck, he shall be guilty of a Class I felony. (1831, c. 42; R.C., c. 34, s. 58; Code, s. 1024; Rev., s. 3430; C.S., s. 4421; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 16; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 1223; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-283. Exploding dynamite cartridges and bombs.

If any person shall fire off or explode, or cause to be fired off or exploded, except for mechanical purposes in a legitimate business, any dynamite cartridge, bomb or other explosive of a like nature, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1887, c. 364, s. 53; Rev., s. 3794; C.S., s. 4423; 1993, c. 539, s. 179; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

If any dealer or other person shall sell or keep for sale any dynamite cartridges, bombs or other combustibles of a like kind, without first having obtained from the board of commissioners of the county where such person or dealer resides a license for that purpose, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. § 14-284.1. Regulation of sale of explosives; reports; storage.

(a) No person shall sell or deliver any dynamite or other powerful explosives as hereinafter defined without being satisfied as to the identity of the purchaser or the one to receive such explosives and then only upon the written application signed by the person or agent of the person purchasing or receiving such explosive, which application must contain a statement of the purpose for which such explosive is to be used.

(b) All persons delivering or selling such explosives shall keep a complete record of all sales or deliveries made, including the amounts sold and delivered, the names of the purchasers or the one to whom the deliveries were made, the dates of all such sales or such deliveries and the use to be made of such explosive, and shall preserve such record and make the same available to any law-enforcement officer during business hours for a period of 12 months thereafter.

(c) All persons having dynamite or other powerful explosives in their possession or under their control shall at all times keep such explosives in a safe and secure manner, and when such explosives are not in the course of being used they shall be stored and protected against theft or other unauthorized possession.

(d) As used in this section, the term "powerful explosives" includes, but shall not be limited to, nitroglycerin, trinitrotoluene, and blasting caps, detonators and fuses for the explosion thereof.

(e) Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(f) The provisions of this section are intended to apply only to sales to those who purchase for use. Nothing herein contained is intended to apply to a sale made by a manufacturer, jobber, or wholesaler to a retail merchant for resale by said merchant.

(g) Nothing herein contained shall be construed as repealing any law now prohibiting the sale of firecrackers or other explosives; nor shall this section be construed as authorizing the sale of explosives now prohibited by law. (1953, c. 877; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6; 1993, c. 539, s. 181; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Applicability of Section to United States. — See Duvall v. United States, 312 F. Supp. 625 (E.D.N.C. 1970).

Only the highest degree of care is commensurate with the dangerous nature of dynamite. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

Such Care Is Required by Common Law and Statutes. — Both the common law and the statutes of North Carolina require persons having possession and control of dynamite to use the highest degree of care to keep the explosive safe and secure and to guard others against injury from it. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

Violation as Negligence. — A violation of a statute enacted for safety and protection of the general public, such as this section, is negligence per se. Duvall v. United States, 312 F. Supp. 625 (E.D.N.C. 1970).

A person in North Carolina who has explosives under his control or in his possession must take adequate precautions to insure that no person, and especially children, are able to gain possession of these dangerous devices. If the person fails to take such precautions, under North Carolina law he is negligent. Duvall v. United States, 312 F. Supp. 625 (E.D.N.C. 1970).

Discarding Dynamite Cap Is Negligence. — To discard or leave a dynamite cap where either a child or unversed adult might pick it up and cause it to explode is positive negligence. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

Dynamite Must Be Shown to Have Been Defendant's Property. — To hold a defendant liable for injury caused by dynamite there must be evidence, direct or circumstantial, sufficient to support a finding that it was his property, or property he had abandoned; otherwise, the verdict is a mere guess, which cannot be permitted. Tayloe v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 258 N.C. 766, 129 S.E.2d 512 (1963).

§ 14-284.2. Dumping of toxic substances.

(a) It shall be unlawful to deposit, place, dump, discharge, spill, release, burn, incinerate, or otherwise dispose of any toxic substances as defined in this section or radioactive material as defined in G.S. 104E-5 into the atmosphere, in the waters, or on land, except where such disposal is conducted pursuant to federal or State law, regulation, or permit. Any person who willfully violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class F felony. The fine authorized by G.S. 14-1.1(a)(8) for a conviction under this section may include a fine of up to one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) per day of violation.

(b) Within the meaning of this section, toxic substances are defined as the following heavy metals and halogenated hydrocarbons:

(1) Heavy metals: mercury, plutonium, selenium, thallium and uranium;

(2) Halogenated hydrocarbons: polychlorinated biphenyls, kepone.

(c) Within the meaning of this section, the phrase "law, regulation or permit" includes controls over equipment or machinery that emits substances into the atmosphere, in waters, or on land (such as federal or State controls over motor vehicle emissions) and controls over sources of substances that are publicly consumed (such as drinking water standards), as well as controls over substances directly released into the atmosphere, in waters, or on land (such as pesticide controls and water pollution controls).

(d) Within the meaning of this section the term "person" includes any individual, firm, partnership, limited partnership, corporation or association.

§ 14-285: Repealed by Session Laws 1994, Extra Session, c. 14, s. 72.

§ 14-286. Giving false fire alarms; molesting fire-alarm, fire-detection or fire-extinguishing system.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to wantonly and willfully give or cause to be given, or to advise, counsel, or aid and abet anyone in giving, a false alarm of fire, or to break the glass key protector, or to pull the slide, arm, or lever of any station or signal box of any fire-alarm system, except in case of fire, or willfully misuse or damage a portable fire extinguisher, or in any way to willfully interfere with, damage, deface, molest, or injure any part or portion of any fire-alarm, fire-detection, smoke-detection or fire-extinguishing system. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1921, c. 46; C.S., s. 4426(a); 1961, c. 594; 1969, c. 1224, s. 5; 1975, c. 346; 1993, c. 539, s. 182; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-286.1. Making false ambulance request.

It shall be unlawful for any person to willfully summon an ambulance or willfully report that an ambulance is needed when such person does not have good cause to believe that the services of an ambulance are needed. Every person convicted of willfully violating this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1967, c. 343, s. 6; 1993, c. 539, s. 183; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-286.2. Interfering with emergency communication.

(a) Offense. — A person who intentionally interferes with an emergency communication, knowing that the communication is an emergency communication, and who is not making an emergency communication himself, is guilty of a Class A1 misdemeanor. In addition, a person who interferes with a communications instrument or other emergency equipment with the intent to prevent an emergency communication is guilty of a Class A1 misdemeanor.

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 2001-148, s. 1, effective December 1, 2001.

(1) Emergency communication. — The term includes communications to law enforcement agencies or other emergency personnel, or other individuals, relating or intending to relate that an individual is or is reasonably believed to be, or reasonably believes himself or another person to be, in imminent danger of bodily injury, or that an individual reasonably believes that his property or the property of another is in imminent danger of substantial damage, injury, or theft.

(2) Intentional interference. — The term includes forcefully removing a communications instrument or other emergency equipment from the possession of another, hiding a communications instrument or other emergency equipment from another, or otherwise making a communications instrument or other emergency equipment unavailable to another, disconnecting a communications instrument or other emergency equipment, removing a communications instrument from its connection to communications lines or wavelengths, damaging or otherwise interfering with communications equipment or connections between a communications instrument and communications lines or wavelengths, disabling a theft-prevention alarm system, providing false information to cancel an earlier call or otherwise falsely indicating that emergency assistance is no longer needed when it is, and any other type of interference that makes it difficult or impossible to make an emergency communication or that conveys a false impression that emergency assistance is unnecessary when it is needed. (1987, c. 690, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 184; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 2001-148, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-148, s. 1, effective December 1, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, rewrote subsection (a); deleted subsection (b), regarding the definition of emergency communication; and added subsection (b1).

§ 14-287. Leaving unused well open and exposed.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, after discontinuing the use of any well, to leave said well open and exposed; said well, after the use of same has been discontinued, shall be carefully and securely filled: Provided, that this shall not apply to wells on farms that are protected by curbing or board walls. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1923, c. 125; C.S., s. 4426(c); 1969, c. 1224, s. 5; 1993, c. 539, s. 185; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-288. Unlawful to pollute any bottles used for beverages.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation having custody for the purpose of sale, distribution or manufacture of any beverage bottle, to place, cause or permit to be placed therein turpentine, varnish, wood alcohol, bleaching water, bluing, kerosene, oils, or any unclean or foul substance, or other offensive material, or to send, ship, return and deliver or cause or permit to be sent, shipped, returned or delivered to any producer of beverages, any bottle used as a container for beverages, and containing any turpentine, varnish, wood alcohol, bleaching water, bluing, kerosene, oils, or any unclean or foul substance, or other offensive material. Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined on the first offense, one dollar ($1.00) for each bottle so defiled, and for any subsequent offense not more than ten dollars ($10.00) for each bottle so defiled. (1929, c. 324, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 186; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Article 36A.

Riots and Civil Disorders.

§ 14-288.1. Definitions.

Unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the definitions in this section apply throughout this Article:

(1) "Chairman of the board of county commissioners": The chairman of the board of county commissioners or, in case of his absence or disability, the person authorized to act in his stead. Unless the governing body of the county has specified who is to act in lieu of the chairman with respect to a particular power or duty set out in this Article, the term "chairman of the board of county commissioners" shall apply to the person generally authorized to act in lieu of the chairman.

(2) "Dangerous weapon or substance": Any deadly weapon, ammunition, explosive, incendiary device, radioactive material or device, as defined in G.S. 14-288.8(c)(5), or any instrument or substance designed for a use that carries a threat of serious bodily injury or destruction of property; or any instrument or substance that is capable of being used to inflict serious bodily injury, when the circumstances indicate a probability that such instrument or substance will be so used; or any part or ingredient in any instrument or substance included above, when the circumstances indicate a probability that such part or ingredient will be so used.

(3) "Declared state of emergency": A state of emergency found and proclaimed by the Governor under the authority of G.S. 14-288.15, by any mayor or other municipal official or officials under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, by any chairman of the board of commissioners of any county or other county official or officials under the authority of G.S. 14-288.13, by any chairman of the board of county commissioners acting under the authority of G.S. 14-288.14, by any chief executive official or acting chief executive official of any county or municipality acting under the authority of any other applicable statute or provision of the common law to preserve the public peace in a state of emergency, or by any executive official or military commanding officer of the United States or the State of North Carolina who becomes primarily responsible under applicable law for the preservation of the public peace within any part of North Carolina.

(5) "Law-enforcement officer": Any officer of the State of North Carolina or any of its political subdivisions authorized to make arrests; any other person authorized under the laws of North Carolina to make arrests and either acting within his territorial jurisdiction or in an area in which he has been lawfully called to duty by the Governor or any mayor or chairman of the board of county commissioners; any member of the armed forces of the United States, the North Carolina national guard, or the State defense militia called to duty in a state of emergency in North Carolina and made responsible for enforcing the laws of North Carolina or preserving the public peace; or any officer of the United States authorized to make arrests without warrant and assigned to duties that include preserving the public peace in North Carolina.

(6) "Mayor": The mayor or other chief executive official of a municipality or, in case of his absence or disability, the person authorized to act in his stead. Unless the governing body of the municipality has specified who is to act in lieu of the mayor with respect to a particular power or duty set out in this Article, the word "mayor" shall apply to the person generally authorized to act in lieu of the mayor.

(7) "Municipality": Any active incorporated city or town, but not including any sanitary district or other municipal corporation that is not a city or town. An "active" municipality is one which has conducted the most recent election required by its charter or the general law, whichever is applicable, and which has the authority to enact general police-power ordinances.

(8) "Public disturbance": Any annoying, disturbing, or alarming act or condition exceeding the bounds of social toleration normal for the time and place in question which occurs in a public place or which occurs in, affects persons in, or is likely to affect persons in a place to which the public or a substantial group has access. The places covered by this definition shall include, but not be limited to, highways, transport facilities, schools, prisons, apartment houses, places of business or amusement, or any neighborhood.

(9) "Riot": As defined in G.S. 14-288.2(a).

(10) "State of emergency": The condition that exists whenever, during times of public crisis, disaster, rioting, catastrophe, or similar public emergency, public safety authorities are unable to maintain public order or afford adequate protection for lives or property, or whenever the occurrence of any such condition is imminent. CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The statutory scheme of this Article is not unconstitutional in contravention of the U.S. Const., Amends. I, IV, IX, and XIV and N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19. State v. Dobbins, 9 N.C. App. 452, 176 S.E.2d 353 (1970), aff'd, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Action in Federal Court Attacking Constitutionality of Article. — The rule is that in addition to facial unconstitutionality of a statute, not susceptible of a limiting state court construction, involving fundamental constitutional rights, federal courts must abstain unless there is a showing of bad faith or harassment, and a showing that the enforcement of the statute will result in irreparable harm that is both great and immediate; a "chilling effect" on rights protected by U.S. Const., Amend. I will not by itself justify intervention. Therefore, where there was no showing of a bad faith use of this article or that it had been used in a threatening or harassing manner against the plaintiffs or anyone else, and a voluntary dismissal was taken in the State court suit for injunctive relief, which relief had been granted pursuant to § 14-288.18, and there was no evidence that any of the plaintiffs had been arrested or threatened since they were charged with violating the article, an action attacking its constitutionality was dismissed. Fuller v. Scott, 328 F. Supp. 842 (M.D.N.C. 1971).

Subdivision (8) Is Not an Essential Part of § 14-288.4(a)(4)a. — See State v. Strickland, 27 N.C. App. 40, 217 S.E.2d 758, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

§ 14-288.2. Riot; inciting to riot; punishments.

(a) A riot is a public disturbance involving an assemblage of three or more persons which by disorderly and violent conduct, or the imminent threat of disorderly and violent conduct, results in injury or damage to persons or property or creates a clear and present danger of injury or damage to persons or property.

(b) Any person who willfully engages in a riot is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(c) Any person who willfully engages in a riot is guilty of a Class H felony, if:

(1) In the course and as a result of the riot there is property damage in excess of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) or serious bodily injury; or

(2) Such participant in the riot has in his possession any dangerous weapon or substance.

(d) Any person who willfully incites or urges another to engage in a riot, so that as a result of such inciting or urging a riot occurs or a clear and present danger of a riot is created, is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(e) Any person who willfully incites or urges another to engage in a riot, and such inciting or urging is a contributing cause of a riot in which there is property damage in excess of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) or serious bodily injury, shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, ss. 187, 188, 1225, 1226; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section is constitutionally valid. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The scope of this section in no way infringes upon the freedom of nonviolent assemblage. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The reach of this section is not so pervasive as to include activity protected by the First Amendment. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The fact that correct application of this section requires a cross reference through interlocking statutory descriptions does not make this section so complex and imprecise as to be unconstitutional. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Riddle, 45 N.C. App. 34, 262 S.E.2d 322, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

There is no federal law restraining prosecutions for riot. Frinks v. North Carolina, 333 F. Supp. 169 (E.D.N.C. 1971), cert. denied, 411 U.S. 920, 93 S. Ct. 1552, 36 L. Ed. 2d 314 (1973), aff'd, 468 F.2d 639 (4th Cir. 1972).

The 1964 Federal Civil Rights Act does not in any sense void the anti-riot laws of North Carolina. Frinks v. North Carolina, 468 F.2d 639 (4th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 411 U.S. 920, 93 S. Ct. 1552, 36 L. Ed. 2d 314 (1973).

The key words of the statutory definition of riot are "three persons," "violent conduct," and "clear and present danger of injury or damage." State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The words of this section are not words so vague and imprecise that men of common intelligence and understanding must guess at their meanings. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

One purpose for codifying riot as an offense was to simplify the common law by setting out in concrete form the essential elements that constitute this crime. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The State has a paramount duty to maintain order not only in the streets but in schools, hospitals and other public places. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The advocacy of imminent lawless action is not protected by U.S. Const., Amend. I. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Advocacy of imminent lawless action is the only type of speech that can come within the purview of this section. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Damage or Injury or Threat Thereof. — A public disturbance involving three or more people, no matter how noisy or boisterous, cannot, under the statutory definition, be a riot unless violence or the threat of immediate violence which poses a clear and present danger to persons or property is present. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Under subsection (a) the capacity of members of the assemblage to inflict injury or damage to persons or property or to create the clear and present danger of such injury or damage is material to the crime of riot and is relevant to establish the proposition defendant was engaged in a riot. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

The component elements that constitute the crime of riot are: (1) public disturbance; (2) assemblage; (3) three or more persons; (4) disorderly and violent conduct, or the imminent threat of such conduct; and (5) results in injury or damage to persons or property or creates a clear and present danger of injury or damage to persons or property. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975); State v. Riddle, 45

N.C. App. 34, 262 S.E.2d 322, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

The common-law crime of unlawful assembly, which is a component element of common-law riot, contains the following elements: (1) the participation of three or more persons; (2) a common intent to attain a purpose which will interfere with the rights of others by committing disorderly acts; and (3) a purpose to commit acts in such manner as would cause firm persons to apprehend a breach of peace. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Involuntariness Does Not Negate Fact of Assemblage. — While an assemblage of prison inmates is involuntary, the involuntariness does not negate the fact of an assemblage within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section. State v. Riddle, 45 N.C. App. 34, 262 S.E.2d 322, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

Warrant charging "engaging in a riot" states a proper cause of action. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Failure of Warrant to State Crime. — Warrant charging that defendant did unlawfully, willfully incite a riot by urging three or more persons to congregate at Prospect School, Robeson County, North Carolina, thereby creating a clear and present danger of a riot fails to state the commission of any criminal offense, much less the offense of inciting a riot. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Petition for Removal of Prosecution to Federal Court. — Where defendants, charged with inciting and/or engaging in a riot, alleged in their petition for removal to the United States District Court that they were peaceably exercising their rights to public accommodations, removal under 28 U.S.C. § 1443(1) was not required simply by reason of an artfully drafted petition. Nor was an evidentiary hearing required because the petition alleged a peaceful exercise of civil rights. Frinks v. North Carolina, 333 F. Supp. 169 (E.D.N.C. 1971), cert. denied, 411 U.S. 920, 93 S. Ct. 1552, 36 L. Ed. 2d 314 (1973), aff'd, 468 F.2d 639 (4th Cir. 1972).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Where several witnesses testified that they saw defendant in the company of three or four men harassing girls in truck, they also testified that defendant was fighting with the others present and that he pulled a knife and cut the three victims, the knife was identified at trial, and photographic evidence as well as testimony from treating personnel confirmed the severity of the knife wounds, there was evidence sufficient to go to the jury on a charge of felonious rioting. State v. Hunt, 100 N.C. App. 43, 394 S.E.2d 221 (1990).

Evidence of defendant's resistance to being arrested and the apparent assault on police officer did not by itself appear sufficient to support the charge of participation in riotous activity. However, this conduct when coupled with the defendant's deliberate act of running into the table upon which the officer was standing while the riot was taking place, was clearly sufficient to show that the defendant "willfully engaged" in the riot. State v. Mitchell, 110 N.C. App. 250, 429 S.E.2d 580 (1993).

Quoted in State v. Yarborough, 55 N.C. App. 52, 284 S.E.2d 550 (1981).

§ 14-288.3. Provisions of Article intended to supplement common law and other statutes.

The provisions of this Article are intended to supersede and extend the coverage of the common-law crimes of riot and inciting to riot. To the extent that such common-law offenses may embrace situations not covered under the provisions of this Article, however, criminal prosecutions may be brought for such crimes under the common law. All other provisions of the Article are intended to be supplementary and additional to the common law and other statutes of this State and, except as specifically indicated, shall not be construed to abrogate, abolish, or supplant other provisions of law. In particular, this Article shall not be deemed to abrogate, abolish, or supplant such common-law offenses as unlawful assembly, rout, conspiracy to commit riot or other criminal offenses, false imprisonment, and going about armed to the terror of the populace and other comparable public-nuisance offenses. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535 (1975).

§ 14-288.4. Disorderly conduct.

(a) Disorderly conduct is a public disturbance intentionally caused by any person who:

(1) Engages in fighting or other violent conduct or in conduct creating the threat of imminent fighting or other violence; or

(2) Makes or uses any utterance, gesture, display or abusive language which is intended and plainly likely to provoke violent retaliation and thereby cause a breach of the peace; or

(3) Takes possession of, exercises control over, or seizes any building or facility of any public or private educational institution without the specific authority of the chief administrative officer of the institution, or his authorized representative; or

(4) Refuses to vacate any building or facility of any public or private educational institution in obedience to:

a. An order of the chief administrative officer of the institution, or his representative, who shall include for colleges and universities the vice chancellor for student affairs or his equivalent for the institution, the dean of students or his equivalent for the institution, the director of the law enforcement or security department for the institution, and the chief of the law enforcement or security department for the institution; or

b. An order given by any fireman or public health officer acting within the scope of his authority; or

c. If a state of emergency is occurring or is imminent within the institution, an order given by any law-enforcement officer acting within the scope of his authority; or

(5) Shall, after being forbidden to do so by the chief administrative officer, or his authorized representative, of any public or private educational institution:

a. Engage in any sitting, kneeling, lying down, or inclining so as to obstruct the ingress or egress of any person entitled to the use of any building or facility of the institution in its normal and intended use; or

b. Congregate, assemble, form groups or formations (whether organized or not), block, or in any manner otherwise interfere with the operation or functioning of any building or facility of the institution so as to interfere with the customary or normal use of the building or facility; or

(6) Disrupts, disturbs or interferes with the teaching of students at any public or private educational institution or engages in conduct which disturbs the peace, order or discipline at any public or private educational institution or on the grounds adjacent thereto; or

(6a) Engages in conduct which disturbs the peace, order, or discipline on any public school bus or public school activity bus; or

(7) Disrupts, disturbs, or interferes with a religious service or assembly or engages in conduct which disturbs the peace or order at any religious service or assembly.

As used in this section the term "building or facility" includes the surrounding grounds and premises of any building or facility used in connection with the operation or functioning of such building or facility.

(b) Any person who willfully engages in disorderly conduct is guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1971, c. 668, s. 1; 1973, c. 1347; 1975, c. 19, s. 4; 1983, c. 39, s. 5; 1987, c. 671, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 189; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 2001-26, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1971, c. 668, which amended this section, in s. 2 provided: "Every word, clause, sentence, paragraph, section, or other part of this act shall be interpreted in such manner as to be as expansive as the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of North Carolina permit."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-26, s. 2, effective December 1, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, inserted subdivision (a)(6a) and made related changes.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Decisions under Former Provisions.
A. Disturbing Schools.
B. Disturbing Religious Congregations.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Former Provisions Held Unconstitutional. — Former subdivision (a)(3) and a portion of subdivision (a)(2) as it stood before the 1971 amendment, which proscribed offensively coarse utterances and acts such as to alarm and disturb persons present, were unconstitutionally vague and overbroad. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972), overruled on other grounds, State v. Barnes, 324 N.C. 539, 380 S.E.2d 118 (1989).

Constitutionality of Subdivision (a)(4)a. — Subdivision (a)(4)a makes it clear that a violation of the statute occurs when a person intentionally refuses to vacate any building or facility of any public or private educational institution after having been ordered to do so by the chief administrative officer of the institution or his authorized representative, and the statute is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Strickland, 27 N.C. App. 40, 217 S.E.2d 758, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Legislative Guidelines Not Needed. — The validity of subdivision (a)(4)a making it a misdemeanor to refuse to vacate an educational institution building after having been ordered to do so by the chief administrative officer of the institution or his representative does not depend upon the enactment by the legislature of detailed guidelines for the guidance of the specified school officials in the exercise of their responsibility to control the use of the buildings and facilities under their care. State v. Strickland, 27 N.C. App. 40, 217 S.E.2d 758, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

A motion to dismiss a juvenile petition is recognized by North Carolina statutory and case law. In re Grubb, 103 N.C. App. 452, 405 S.E.2d 797 (1991).

Fighting or Insulting Words May Constitutionally Be Prevented and Punished. — There are certain well defined and narrowly limited classes of speech, the prevention and punishment of which have never been though to raise any constitutional problem. These include the insulting or "fighting" words which by their very utterance tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972), overruled on other grounds, State v. Barnes, 324 N.C. 539, 380 S.E.2d 118 (1989).

There can be no doubt that the General Assembly intended to prohibit "fighting words," words tending to cause an immediate breach of the peace willfully spoken in a public place, and that such an interpretation accurately expresses the legislative purpose. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972), overruled on other grounds, State v. Barnes, 324 N.C. 539, 380 S.E.2d 118 (1989); State v. Orange, 22 N.C. App. 220, 206 S.E.2d 377, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 762, 208 S.E.2d 380 (1974), cert. denied, 420 U.S. 996, 95 S. Ct. 1431, 43 L. Ed. 2d 675 (1975).

Profanities in Emergency Room. — Where defendant, when he was informed that the doctor whom he had demanded was not immediately available, began shouting profanities, cursing, and loudly voicing unfounded complaints, his words and mode of communication in hospital emergency room were not protected by the U.S. Const., Amend. I. State v. Summrell, 282 N.C. 157, 192 S.E.2d 569 (1972), overruled on other grounds, State v. Barnes, 324 N.C. 539, 380 S.E.2d 118 (1989).

Disorderly Conduct in School. — The conduct in question must substantially interfere with the operation of school to rise to the level of disorderly conduct. In re Grubb, 103 N.C. App. 452, 405 S.E.2d 797 (1991).

When the words "interrupt" and "disturb" are used in conjunction with the word "school," they mean a substantial interference with, disruption of and confusion of the operation of the school in its program of instruction and training of students there enrolled. In re Eller, 103 N.C. App. 625, 406 S.E.2d 299, rev'd on other grounds, 331 N.C. 714, 417 S.E.2d 479 (1992).

Evidence that a student stopped talking after being asked a second time and that the class was only momentarily disrupted, even in the light most favorable to the State, was insufficient to establish a violation of subdivision

(a)(6). In re Grubb, 103 N.C. App. 452, 405 S.E.2d 797 (1991).

Disturbance in Bar. — The allegation that defendant created a "little bit of disturbance" earlier in a bar did not demonstrate sufficiently provocative behavior to rise to the level of disorderly conduct under this section. State v. Sanders, 295 N.C. 361, 245 S.E.2d 674 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 512, 259 S.E.2d 258 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 973, 102 S. Ct. 523, 70 L. Ed. 2d 392 (1981).

Vague Language in Warrant Disregarded as Surplusage. — Unconstitutionally vague and overly broad language in a warrant for disorderly conduct could be disregarded as surplusage and the conviction under the warrant upheld where, absent the unconstitutional language, the warrant still alleged all the essential elements of subdivision (a)(2). State v. Cunningham, 34 N.C. App. 72, 237 S.E.2d 334 (1977).

Where the trial judge inadvertently failed to note the 1971 amendment to this section in his instructions to the jury and in so doing charged concerning disorderly conduct in the language of subdivisions (1) and (2) of subsection (a) as those subdivisions were originally enacted in 1969, the court's charge failed to limit the definition of disorderly conduct to embrace only actions and words likely to bring on an immediate breach of the peace, as would be required by the 1971 amendment. For this error in the charge, defendant was entitled to a new trial in the case charging him with failing to comply with a lawful order to disperse. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Applied in State v. Carroll, 21 N.C. App. 530, 204 S.E.2d 908 (1974); State v. Clark, 22 N.C. App. 81, 206 S.E.2d 252 (1974); State v. Butts, 22 N.C. App. 504, 206 S.E.2d 806 (1974); State v. McLoud, 26 N.C. App. 297, 215 S.E.2d 872 (1975).

Stated in State v. Smith, 139 N.C. App. 209, 533 S.E.2d 518 (2000).

Cited in Fuller v. Scott, 328 F. Supp. 842 (M.D.N.C. 1971); State v. Lightner, 108 N.C. App. 349, 423 S.E.2d 827 (1992).

II. DECISIONS UNDER FORMER PROVISIONS.

A. Disturbing Schools.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former § 14-273.

Although former § 14-273 has been repealed, it is instructive as to the meaning of "disruptive conduct." In re Grubb, 103 N.C. App. 452, 405 S.E.2d 797 (1991).

"Interrupt" means "to break the uniformity or continuity of; to break in upon an action." State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

"Disturb" means "to throw into disorder." State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

When the words "interrupt" and "disturb" are used in conjunction with the word "school," they mean to a person of ordinary intelligence a substantial interference with, disruption of, and confusion of the operation of the school in its program of instruction and training of students there enrolled. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

The elements of the offense punishable under former § 14-273 were: (1) some act or course of conduct by the defendant, within or without the school; (2) an actual, material interference with, frustration of or confusion in, part or all of the program of a public or private school for the instruction or training of students enrolled therein and in attendance thereon, resulting from such act or conduct; and (3) the purpose or intent on the part of the defendant that his act or conduct have that effect. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968); State v. Midgett, 8 N.C. App. 230, 174 S.E.2d 124 (1970).

Motive No Defense. — Nothing else appearing, the defendant's motive for doing willfully an act forbidden by former § 14-273 was no defense to charge of violation of such section. State v. Wiggins, 272 N.C. 147, 158 S.E.2d 37 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1028, 88 S. Ct. 1418, 20 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1968).

Evidence Sufficient for Jury. — In a prosecution charging that defendants unlawfully and willfully interrupted a public school, the issue of defendants' guilt was properly submitted to the jury, where the State's evidence tended to show that (1) the defendants entered the office of the secretary to the principal and told her that they were going to interrupt the school that day; (2) the defendants locked the secretary out of her office, moved furniture about, scattered papers, and dumped books on the floor; (3) the secretary and several teachers were kept away from their jobs or classes by these actions; (4) the defendants also occupied the principal's office and operated the bells that normally signalled the change of classes; and (5) the principal, as a result of the commotion, was forced to dismiss school prior to the regular closing hour. State v. Midgett, 8 N.C. App. 230, 174 S.E.2d 124 (1970).

B. Disturbing Religious Congregations.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former § 14-275 and the statutes from which it was derived.

People Must Be Collected. — In order to render indictable the disturbance of persons assembled for divine worship, the people, or some considerable number, must be collected at or about the time when worship is about to commence, and in the place where it is to be celebrated. State v. Bryson, 82 N.C. 576 (1880).

And an indictment will not lie after the congregation has dispersed. State v. Davis, 126 N.C. 1059, 35 S.E. 600 (1900).

But the congregation need not be engaged in the act of worship. State v. Ramsey, 78 N.C. 448 (1878).

The act itself must disturb the congregation. Information of the act, for example that a fight is in progress, will not suffice. State v. Kirby, 108 N.C. 772, 12 S.E. 1045 (1891).

Persistent speaking in church after remonstrance from the minister was sufficient to sustain a verdict under former § 14-275. See State v. Ramsey, 78 N.C. 448 (1878).

Persistence in singing off-key where the intention was not to disturb was not sufficient to sustain a verdict under former § 14-275. State v. Linkhaw, 69 N.C. 214 (1873).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Applicability to Non-riot Situation. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. G. Patrick Hunter, Jr., Charlotte Police Attorney, 40 N.C.A.G. 166 (1970).

§ 14-288.5. Failure to disperse when commanded a misdemeanor; prima facie evidence.

(a) Any law-enforcement officer or public official responsible for keeping the peace may issue a command to disperse in accordance with this section if he reasonably believes that a riot, or disorderly conduct by an assemblage of three or more persons, is occurring. The command to disperse shall be given in a manner reasonably calculated to be communicated to the assemblage.

(b) Any person who fails to comply with a lawful command to disperse is guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(c) If any person remains at the scene of any riot, or disorderly conduct by an assemblage of three or more persons, following a command to disperse and after a reasonable time for dispersal has elapsed, it is prima facie evidence that the person so remaining is willfully engaging in the riot or disorderly conduct, as the case may be. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 190; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

This section is constitutional. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Constitutionality. — This section is narrowly tailored to prohibit the unprotected activity of refusing to obey a valid police command under certain circumstances. Brooks v. North Carolina Dep't of Cor., 984 F. Supp. 940 (E.D.N.C. 1997).

Failure to Disperse Where No Disorderly Conduct Was Occurring. — Under this section the failure to disperse when commanded by an officer would be an offense where no disorderly conduct was occurring so long as it was shown on trial that the officer had reasonable grounds to believe that disorderly conduct was occurring by an assemblage of three or more persons. State v. Orange, 22 N.C. App. 220, 206 S.E.2d 377, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 762, 208 S.E.2d 380 (1974), cert. denied, 420 U.S. 996, 95 S. Ct. 1431, 43 L. Ed. 2d 675 (1975).

Evidence Required. — It was necessary under this section for the State to present evidence of defendant's failure to disperse on command to do so and that the officer had reasonable grounds to believe that disorderly conduct was occurring by an assemblage of three or more persons. State v. Thomas, 28 N.C. App. 495, 221 S.E.2d 749 (1976).

Evidence sufficient to support jury's finding that defendant was guilty of charge of failing to comply with lawful command to disperse. State v. Brooks, 24 N.C. App. 338, 210 S.E.2d 535, aff'd in part, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Applied in State v. Clark, 22 N.C. App. 81, 206 S.E.2d 252 (1974).

Cited in Fuller v. Scott, 328 F. Supp. 842 (M.D.N.C. 1971).

§ 14-288.6. Looting; trespass during emergency.

(a) Any person who enters upon the premises of another without legal justification when the usual security of property is not effective due to the occurrence or aftermath of riot, insurrection, invasion, storm, fire, explosion, flood, collapse, or other disaster or calamity is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor of trespass during an emergency.

(b) Any person who commits the crime of trespass during emergency and, without legal justification, obtains or exerts control over, damages, ransacks, or destroys the property of another is guilty of the felony of looting and shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, ss. 191, 1227; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Cross References. — For structured sentencing provisions effective October 1, 1994, see § 15A-1340.10 et seq.

§ 14-288.7. Transporting dangerous weapon or substance during emergency; possessing off premises; exceptions.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, it is unlawful for any person to transport or possess off his own premises any dangerous weapon or substance in any area:

(1) In which a declared state of emergency exists; or

(2) Within the immediate vicinity of which a riot is occurring.

(b) This section does not apply to persons exempted from the provisions of G.S. 14-269 with respect to any activities lawfully engaged in while carrying out their duties.

(c) Any person who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 192; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Penalty Not Limited to That Prescribed by Ordinance. — Since this section itself makes the possession of a disassembled shotgun and the shotgun shells in the area in question a criminal offense and specifies the penalty therefor, and since the warrant relating to this offense was founded upon the statute, not the ordinance, the sentence imposable in this case was not limited to the penalty prescribed for such conduct by the ordinance. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Applied in State v. Dobbins, 9 N.C. App. 452, 176 S.E.2d 353 (1970).

§ 14-288.8. Manufacture, assembly, possession, storage, transportation, sale, purchase, delivery, or acquisition of weapon of mass death and destruction; exceptions.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, it is unlawful for any person to manufacture, assemble, possess, store, transport, sell, offer to sell, purchase, offer to purchase, deliver or give to another, or acquire any weapon of mass death and destruction.

(b) This section does not apply to:

(1) Persons exempted from the provisions of G.S. 14-269 with respect to any activities lawfully engaged in while carrying out their duties.

(2) Importers, manufacturers, dealers, and collectors of firearms, ammunition, or destructive devices validly licensed under the laws of the United States or the State of North Carolina, while lawfully engaged in activities authorized under their licenses.

(3) Persons under contract with the United States, the State of North Carolina, or any agency of either government, with respect to any activities lawfully engaged in under their contracts.

(4) Inventors, designers, ordnance consultants and researchers, chemists, physicists, and other persons lawfully engaged in pursuits designed to enlarge knowledge or to facilitate the creation, development, or manufacture of weapons of mass death and destruction intended for use in a manner consistent with the laws of the United States and the State of North Carolina.

(c) The term "weapon of mass death and destruction" includes:

(1) Any explosive or incendiary:

a. Bomb; or

b. Grenade; or

c. Rocket having a propellant charge of more than four ounces; or

d. Missile having an explosive or incendiary charge of more than one-quarter ounce; or

e. Mine; or

f. Device similar to any of the devices described above; or

(2) Any type of weapon (other than a shotgun or a shotgun shell of a type particularly suitable for sporting purposes) which will, or which may be readily converted to, expel a projectile by the action of an explosive or other propellant, and which has any barrel with a bore of more than one-half inch in diameter; or

(3) Any firearm capable of fully automatic fire, any shotgun with a barrel or barrels of less than 18 inches in length or an overall length of less than 26 inches, any rifle with a barrel or barrels of less than 16 inches in length or an overall length of less than 26 inches, any muffler or silencer for any firearm, whether or not such firearm is included within this definition. For the purposes of this section, rifle is defined as a weapon designed or redesigned, made or remade, and intended to be fired from the shoulder; or

(4) Any combination of parts either designed or intended for use in converting any device into any weapon described above and from which a weapon of mass death and destruction may readily be assembled.

The term "weapon of mass death and destruction" does not include any device which is neither designed nor redesigned for use as a weapon; any device, although originally designed for use as a weapon, which is redesigned for use as a signaling, pyrotechnic, line-throwing, safety, or similar device; surplus ordnance sold, loaned, or given by the Secretary of the Army pursuant to the provisions of section 4684(2), 4685, or 4686 of Title 10 of the United States Code; or any other device which the Secretary of the Treasury finds is not likely to be used as a weapon, is an antique, or is a rifle which the owner intends to use solely for sporting purposes, in accordance with Chapter 44 of Title 18 of the United States Code.

(d) Any person who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a Class F felony. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1975, c. 718, ss. 6, 7; 1977, c. 810; 1983, c. 413, ss. 1, 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 1228; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 2001-470, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to nuclear, biological, or chemical weapons of mass destruction, see § 14-288.21 et seq.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-470, s. 5, provides that prosecutions for offenses occurring before the effective date of the act (November 28, 2001) are not abated or affected by the act, and the statutes that would be applicable but for the act remain applicable to those prosecutions.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-470, s. 3, effective November 28, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "explosive or incendiary" for "explosive, incendiary, poison gas or radioactive material" at the end of the introductory language of subdivision (c)(1); and deleted subdivision (c)(5).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section does not completely ban a class of weapons protected by the Constitution; the statute permits possession of shotguns, with the exception of those which have been tampered with so as to shorten the barrel and State can regulate the length of a particular firearm as long as there is a reasonable purpose for doing so. State v. Fennell, 95 N.C. App. 140, 382 S.E.2d 231 (1989).

Construction with Other Provisions. — Reading this section in pari materia with § 14-415.1, it is clear that the footnote to this section which reads "nothing in this subsection would prohibit the right of any person to have possession of a firearm within his own home or ... place of business" does not apply to weapons of mass death and destruction; North Carolina did not intend to restore to its ex-felons the right to possess such weapons within their own homes, in contravention of the general federal prohibition against felons possessing firearms. United States v. Walker, 39 F.3d 489 (4th Cir. 1994).

The focus of this section is weapons of mass death and destruction which is considerably different from the concept of any gun used in § 14-269.2(b). In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

Operability is not an element of the crime to be proven by the State; it is, rather, an affirmative defense. State v. Fennell, 95 N.C. App. 140, 382 S.E.2d 231 (1989).

Devices listed in the statute lose their status as weapons of mass death and destruction once they are found to be totally inoperable and incapable of being readily made operable. State v. Fennell, 95 N.C. App. 140, 382 S.E.2d 231 (1989).

Inoperability is defense only to the extent that the defendant can prove the pieces seized were not designed or intended for use in converting any device into a weapon of mass death and destruction. State v. Jackson, 353 N.C. 495, 546 S.E.2d 570 (2001).

Potential Inoperability Did Not Shift Burden of Proof. — Where defendant offered no evidence that the weapon was inoperable, but merely raised the possibility that the weapon was incapable of being fired and no witness opined that the weapon was inoperable, defendant's simply raising the issue of potential inoperability was not sufficient to shift the burden of proof to the State. State v. Fennell, 95 N.C. App. 140, 382 S.E.2d 231 (1989).

Fact That Weapon Had Been Disassembled Did Not Remove It from Scope of Section. — Subsection (c) merely defines what weapons qualify as weapons of mass death and destruction; included in this list are sawed-off shotguns and, under subdivision (c)(4), any combination of parts that may be readily assembled into weapons listed in the other subsections; the fact that the weapon had been disassembled by the time it was found by the officers did not lessen its quality as a weapon of mass death and destruction. State v. Fennell, 95 N.C. App. 140, 382 S.E.2d 231 (1989).

Sawed-Off Shotgun. — With limited and specific exceptions, no one in North Carolina, ex-felon or otherwise, may possess, store or acquire a sawed-off shotgun for any reason or under any circumstance. United States v. Walker, 39 F.3d 489 (4th Cir. 1994).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effect on Permit Requirements. — The provisions of this section relating to weapons of mass death and destruction do not abrogate or abolish permit requirements of §§ 14-409 and 14-409.9. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. T.A. Radewicz, Sheriff, New Hanover County, 50 N.C.A.G. 109 (1981).

§ 14-288.9. Assault on emergency personnel; punishments.

(a) An assault upon emergency personnel is an assault upon any person coming within the definition of "emergency personnel" which is committed in an area:

(1) In which a declared state of emergency exists; or

(2) Within the immediate vicinity of which a riot is occurring or is imminent.

(b) The term "emergency personnel" includes law-enforcement officers, firemen, ambulance attendants, utility workers, doctors, nurses, and other persons lawfully engaged in providing essential services during the emergency.

(c) Any person who commits an assault upon emergency personnel is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. Any person who commits an assault upon emergency personnel with or through the use of any dangerous weapon or substance shall be punished as a Class F felon. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, ss. 193, 1229; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974).

(a) Any law-enforcement officer may frisk any person in order to discover any dangerous weapon or substance when he has reasonable grounds to believe that the person is or may become unlawfully involved in an existing riot and when the person is close enough to such riot that he could become immediately involved in the riot. The officer may also at that time inspect for the same purpose the contents of any personal belongings that the person has in his possession.

(b) Any law-enforcement officer may frisk any person he finds violating the provisions of a curfew proclaimed under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, 14-288.14, or 14-288.15 or any other applicable statutes or provisions of the common law in order to discover whether the person possesses any dangerous weapon or substance. The officer may also at that time inspect for the same purpose the contents of any personal belongings that the person has in his possession. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.11. Warrants to inspect vehicles in riot areas or approaching municipalities during emergencies.

(a) Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 4 of Chapter 15, any law-enforcement officer may, under the conditions specified in this section, obtain a warrant authorizing inspection of vehicles under the conditions and for the purpose specified in subsection (b).

(b) The inspection shall be for the purpose of discovering any dangerous weapon or substance likely to be used by one who is or may become unlawfully involved in a riot. The warrant may be sought to inspect:

(1) All vehicles entering or approaching a municipality in which a state of emergency exists; or

(2) All vehicles which might reasonably be regarded as being within or approaching the immediate vicinity of an existing riot.

(c) The warrant may be issued by any judge or justice of the General Court of Justice.

(d) The issuing official shall issue the warrant only when he has determined that the one seeking the warrant has been specifically authorized to do so by the head of the law-enforcement agency of which the affiant is a member, and:

(1) If the warrant is being sought for the inspection of vehicles entering or approaching a municipality, that a state of emergency exists within the municipality; or

(2) If the warrant being sought is for the inspection of vehicles within or approaching the immediate vicinity of a riot, that a riot is occurring within that area.

Facts indicating the basis of these determinations must be stated in an affidavit and signed by the affiant under oath or affirmation.

(e) The warrant must be signed by the issuing official and must bear the hour and date of its issuance.

(f) The warrant must indicate whether it is for the inspection of vehicles entering or approaching a municipality or whether it is for the inspection of vehicles within or approaching the immediate vicinity of a riot. In either case, it must also specify with reasonable precision the area within which it may be exercised.

(g) The warrant shall become invalid 24 hours following its issuance and must bear a notation to that effect.

(h) Warrants authorized under this section shall not be regarded as search warrants for the purposes of application of Article 4 of Chapter 15.

(i) Nothing in this section is intended to prevent warrantless frisks, searches, and inspections to the extent that they may be constitutional and consistent with common law and governing statutes. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Article 4 of Chapter 15, referred to in subsections (a) and (h) of this section, has been repealed. See now § 15A-241 et seq.

CASE NOTES

When Search of Automobile Without Warrant Is Reasonable. — Because of its mobility, a search of an automobile without a warrant is reasonable if it is based on probable cause. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Search May Be Conducted After Automobile Is Transported to Police Station. — If there is probable cause to search the automobile at the place where it was stopped, it matters not that the search is conducted sometime later after the automobile has been transported to the police station. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

§ 14-288.12. Powers of municipalities to enact ordinances to deal with states of emergency.

(a) The governing body of any municipality may enact ordinances designed to permit the imposition of prohibitions and restrictions during a state of emergency.

(b) The ordinances authorized by this section may permit prohibitions and restrictions:

(1) Of movements of people in public places;

(2) Of the operation of offices, business establishments, and other places to or from which people may travel or at which they may congregate;

(3) Upon the possession, transportation, sale, purchase, and consumption of alcoholic beverages;
(4) Upon the possession, transportation, sale, purchase, storage, and use of dangerous weapons and substances, and gasoline; and
(5) Upon other activities or conditions the control of which may be reasonably necessary to maintain order and protect lives or property during the state of emergency.

The ordinances may delegate to the mayor of the municipality the authority to determine and proclaim the existence of a state of emergency, and to impose those authorized prohibitions and restrictions appropriate at a particular time.

(c) This section is intended to supplement and confirm the powers conferred by G.S. 160A-174(a), and all other general and local laws authorizing municipalities to enact ordinances for the protection of the public health and safety in times of riot or other grave civil disturbance or emergency.

(d) Any ordinance of a type authorized by this section promulgated prior to June 19, 1969 shall, if otherwise valid, continue in full force and effect without reenactment.

(e) Any person who violates any provision of an ordinance or a proclamation enacted or proclaimed under the authority of this section is guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1981, c. 412, s. 4(4); c. 747, s. 66; 1989, c. 770, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 194; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The contention that this statute is unconstitutionally vague in that it fails to provide a standard for the exercise of the discretion conferred is clearly without merit. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Freedom of Travel May Be Limited. — The liberty of every American citizen freely to come and to go must frequently, in the face of sudden danger, be temporarily limited or suspended. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Freedom of travel, like freedom of speech, may be subject to reasonable limitations as to time and place. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Incidental Restriction on Freedom of Speech May Be No Greater Than Essential to Government Interest. — The standard that has developed where regulation of conduct has an incidental effect on speech is that the incidental restriction of U.S. Const., Amend. I freedoms can be no greater than is essential to the furtherance of the government interest which is being protected. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Control of Civil Disorders Is Within Police Power. — Control of civil disorders that may threaten the very existence of the State is certainly within the police power of government. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Section Delegates Portion of Police Power to Municipalities. — By this section, the State has delegated a portion of its police power to its municipalities. This statute authorizes the city to enact an ordinance prohibiting the movement of people in public places "during a state of emergency" as defined in § 14-288.1(10). State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

The "state of emergency" is the condition precedent to the exercise of this power by the city. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Only when local law-enforcement is no longer able to maintain order and and protect lives and property may the emergency powers be invoked. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Maintenance of Public Order Is Duty of Executive. — The responsibility for maintaining public peace on a day-to-day basis is lodged with the executive branch of government. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Public peace in our cities may be suddenly breached by massive civil disorder. Dealing with such an emergency situation requires an immediacy of action that is not possible for judges. It would be highly inappropriate for the court, removed from the primary responsibility for maintaining order and with the benefit of time for reflection not available to the mayor, to substitute its judgment of necessity for his. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Precise Definition Would Destroy Executive's Broad Discretion. — Attempting to precisely define under what specific conditions each of the authorized restrictions might be imposed would destroy the "broad discretion" necessary for the executive to deal with an emergency situation. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Mayor's Power Subject to Definite Standard. — The mayor's power to impose the restraints enumerated in this section and Asheville City Ordinance No. 613 is subject to a narrow, objective, and definite standard. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Standard Is That Which Applies to Executive's Use of Military. — The standard is essentially the same as that which applies to the executive's inherent power to restore order through the use of the military. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Mayor's Actions Subject to Judicial Review. — The executive's decision that civil control has broken down to the point where emergency measures are necessary is not conclusive or free from judicial review, but the scope of review must be limited to a determination of whether the mayor's actions were taken in good faith and whether there is some factual basis for his decision that the restrictions he imposed were necessary to maintain order. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Where actual violence, good faith, and a relation between means and ends are shown, an executive's finding of necessity will be upheld in court. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Declaration of State of Emergency Must Be Necessary to Preserve Order. — The declaration of a state of emergency and the restrictions imposed pursuant to it must appear to have been reasonably necessary for the preservation of order. United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277 (4th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 943, 92 S. Ct. 294, 30 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1971).

Imposition of Curfew is Proper Exercise of Police Power. — Whatever the cause, given the fact of widespread riotous conditions and criminal activities, the restoration of "domestic tranquility" becomes, not alone a constitutional right, but a constitutional obligation. The temporary imposition of a curfew, limited in time and reasonably made necessary by conditions prevailing, is a legitimate and proper exercise of the police power of public authority. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Prohibiting Use of Public Parks at Night and Forbidding Transportation of Arms. — The restrictions imposed by a proclamation which only prohibited use of the public parks at night or forbade transportation of dangerous arms or substances were clearly among those authorized by subsection (b) of this section. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Arrest Without Warrant. — The presence of the defendant and his driver upon the streets, while the curfew was in effect, was a violation of the ordinance, declared thereby to be a misdemeanor, unless they were traveling for an excepted purpose. The arresting officer having at least reasonable grounds to believe that the defendant had committed a misdemeanor in his presence, arrest without a warrant was lawful. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Search Incident to Arrest. — The search of the defendant's person was incidental to such arrest and, consequently, the four shotgun shells found tucked in the tops of his boots were properly admitted into evidence. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Burden of Proof. — The defendant's contention that the burden was on the State to prove that his presence on the streets was for a purpose other than those excepted by the ordinance and by the curfew proclamation was without merit. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

A defendant charged with the crime, who seeks protection by reason of the exception, has the burden of proving that he comes within the same. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

§ 14-288.13. Powers of counties to enact ordinances to deal with states of emergency.

(a) The governing body of any county may enact ordinances designed to permit the imposition of prohibitions and restrictions during a state of emergency.

(b) The ordinances authorized by this section may permit the same prohibitions and restrictions to be imposed as enumerated in G.S. 14-288.12(b). The ordinances may delegate to the chairman of the board of county commissioners the authority to determine and proclaim the existence of a state of emergency, and to impose those authorized prohibitions and restrictions appropriate at a particular time.

(c) No ordinance enacted by a county under the authority of this section shall apply within the corporate limits of any municipality, or within any area of the county over which the municipality has jurisdiction to enact general police-power ordinances, unless the municipality by resolution consents to its application.

(d) Any person who violates any provision of an ordinance or a proclamation enacted or proclaimed under the authority of this section is guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 195; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The limited delegation of the State's police power which the legislature deemed wise to grant by this Article to local governmental units in order to assist them in maintaining public peace and order during periods of emergency is constitutional. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Responsibilities and Powers of Local Executive Officials. — This Article wisely provides for placing in local executive officials, whose first and primary duty it is to maintain public order, powers adequate to their responsibilities and the initial decision as to whether a "state of emergency" in fact exists must be made by those who bear primary responsibility and who are closest to the scene. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

The local official may not act arbitrarily or without some factual basis to support his determination that a state of emergency in fact exists, and the prohibitions and restrictions which he imposes must be among those authorized by this section. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

And His Decision Is Subject to Review. — The decision of the responsible local official as to whether a "state of emergency" in fact exists, while entitled to great respect, is not conclusive or entirely free from judicial review. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

The scope of judicial review, in cases reviewing the validity of a proclamation, is limited to the type of review which traditionally is for the judge, and not for the jury, to perform. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Proclamation Need Not Make Reference to Section. — That a proclamation makes no reference to this section in no way affects its validity; the existence of the statute, not reference to it in the proclamation, is all that matters. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

Uniform Enforcement. — That the activities of an organization may have been a major factor in bringing on the conditions which prompted declaration of the state of emergency furnishes no valid support for the contention that that organization and its members were unfairly discriminated against, if once the proclamation was issued, it was uniformly enforced as to all. State v. Allred, 21 N.C. App. 229, 204 S.E.2d 214, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 591, 205 S.E.2d 724 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1127, 95 S. Ct. 814, 42 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1975).

§ 14-288.14. Power of chairman of board of county commissioners to extend emergency restrictions imposed in municipality.

(a) The chairman of the board of commissioners of any county who has been requested to do so by a mayor may by proclamation extend the effect of any one or more of the prohibitions and restrictions imposed in that mayor's municipality pursuant to the authority granted in G.S. 14-288.12. The chairman may extend such prohibitions and restrictions to any area within his county in which he determines it to be necessary to assist in controlling the state of emergency within the municipality. No prohibition or restriction extended by proclamation by the chairman under the authority of this section shall apply within the limits of any other municipality, or within any area of the county over which the municipality has jurisdiction to enact general police-power ordinances, unless that other municipality by resolution consents to its application.

(b) Whenever any chairman of the board of county commissioners extends the effect of municipal prohibitions and restrictions under the authority of this section to any area of the county, it shall be deemed that a state of emergency has been validly found and declared with respect to such area of the county.

(c) Any chairman of a board of county commissioners extending prohibitions and restrictions under the authority of this section must take reasonable steps to give notice of its terms to those likely to be affected. The chairman of the board of commissioners shall proclaim the termination of any prohibitions and restrictions extended under the authority of this section upon:

(1) His determination that they are no longer necessary; or

(2) The determination of the board of county commissioners that they are no longer necessary; or

(3) The termination of the prohibitions and restrictions within the municipality.

(d) The powers authorized under this section may be exercised whether or not the county has enacted ordinances under the authority of G.S. 14-288.13. Exercise of this authority shall not preclude the imposition of prohibitions and restrictions under any ordinances enacted by the county under the authority of G.S. 14-288.13.

(e) Any person who violates any provision of any prohibition or restriction extended by proclamation under the authority of this section is guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 196; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 7; c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-288.15. Authority of Governor to exercise control in emergencies.

(a) When the Governor determines that a state of emergency exists in any part of North Carolina, he may exercise the powers conferred by this section if he further finds that local control of the emergency is insufficient to assure adequate protection for lives and property.

(b) Local control shall be deemed insufficient only if:

(1) Needed control cannot be imposed locally because local authorities responsible for preservation of the public peace have not enacted appropriate ordinances or issued appropriate proclamations as authorized by G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, or 14-288.14; or

(2) Local authorities have not taken implementing steps under such ordinances or proclamations, if enacted or proclaimed, for effectual control of the emergency that has arisen; or

(3) The area in which the state of emergency exists has spread across local jurisdictional boundaries and the legal control measures of the jurisdictions are conflicting or uncoordinated to the extent that efforts to protect life and property are, or unquestionably will be, severely hampered; or

(4) The scale of the emergency is so great that it exceeds the capability of local authorities to cope with it.

(c) The Governor when acting under the authority of this section may:

(1) By proclamation impose prohibitions and restrictions in all areas affected by the state of emergency; and

(2) Give to all participating State and local agencies and officers such directions as may be necessary to assure coordination among them. These directions may include the designation of the officer or agency responsible for directing and controlling the participation of all public agencies and officers in the emergency. The Governor may make this designation in any manner which, in his discretion, seems most likely to be effective. Any law-enforcement officer participating in the control of a state of emergency in which the Governor is exercising control under this section shall have the same power and authority as a sheriff throughout the territory to which he is assigned.

(d) The Governor in his discretion, as appropriate to deal with the emergency then occurring or likely to occur, may impose any one or more or all of the types of prohibitions and restrictions enumerated in G.S. 14-288.12(b), and may amend or rescind any prohibitions and restrictions imposed by local authorities.

(e) Any person who violates any provision of a proclamation of the Governor issued under the authority of this section is guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 197; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-288.16. Effective time, publication, amendment, and recision of proclamations.

(a) This section applies to proclamations issued under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, 14-288.14, and 14-288.15, and any other applicable statutes and provisions of the common law.

(b) All prohibitions and restrictions imposed by proclamation shall take effect immediately upon publication of the proclamation in the area affected unless the proclamation sets a later time. For the purpose of requiring compliance, publication may consist of reports of the substance of the prohibitions and restrictions in the mass communications media serving the affected area or other effective methods of disseminating the necessary information quickly. As soon as practicable, however, appropriate distribution of the full text of any proclamation shall be made. This subsection shall not be governed by the provisions of G.S. 1-597.

(c) Prohibitions and restrictions may be extended as to time or area, amended, or rescinded by proclamation. Prohibitions and restrictions imposed by proclamation under the authority of G.S. 14-288.12, 14-288.13, and 14-288.14 shall expire five days after their last imposition unless sooner terminated under G.S. 14-288.14(c)(3), by proclamation, or by the governing body of the county or municipality in question. Prohibitions and restrictions imposed by proclamation of the Governor shall expire five days after their last imposition unless sooner terminated by proclamation of the Governor. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.17. Municipal and county ordinances may be made immediately effective if state of emergency exists or is imminent.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whether general or special, relating to the promulgation or publication of ordinances by any municipality or county, this section shall control with respect to any ordinances authorized by G.S. 14-288.11 and 14-288.12.

(b) Upon proclamation by the mayor or chairman of the board of county commissioners that a state of emergency exists within the municipality or the county, or is imminent, any ordinance enacted under the authority of this article shall take effect immediately unless the ordinance sets a later time. If the effect of this section is to cause an ordinance to go into effect sooner than it otherwise could under the law applicable to the municipality or county, the mayor or chairman of the board of county commissioners, as the case may be, shall take steps to cause reports of the substance of any such ordinance to be disseminated in a fashion that such substance will likely be communicated to the public in general, or to those who may be particularly affected by the ordinance if it does not affect the public generally. As soon as practicable thereafter, appropriate distribution or publication of the full text of any such ordinance shall be made. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.18. Injunction to cope with emergencies at public and private educational institutions.

(a) The chief administrative officer, or his authorized representative, of any public or private educational institution may apply to any superior court judge for injunctive relief if a state of emergency exists or is imminent within his institution. For the purposes of this section, the superintendent of any city or county administrative school unit shall be deemed the chief administrative officer of any public elementary or secondary school within his unit.

(b) Upon a finding by a superior court judge, to whom application has been made under the provisions of this section, that a state of emergency exists or is imminent within a public or private educational institution by reason of riot, disorderly conduct by three or more persons, or the imminent threat of riot, the judge may issue an injunction containing provisions appropriate to cope with the emergency then occurring or threatening. The injunction may be addressed to named persons or named or described groups of persons as to whom there is satisfactory cause for believing that they are contributing to the existing or imminent state of emergency, and ordering such persons or groups of persons to take or refrain or desist from taking such various actions as the judge finds it appropriate to include in his order. (1969, c. 869, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section envisions an action in the nature of a civil action for a permanent injunction, in which the parties to be enjoined are named or described with at least a modicum of particularity. State ex rel. Moore v. Doe, 19 N.C. App. 131, 198 S.E.2d 236, appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 663 (1973).

§ 14-288.19. Governor's power to order evacuation of public building.

(a) When it is determined by the Governor that a great public crisis, disaster, riot, catastrophe, or any other similar public emergency exists, or the occurrence of any such condition is imminent, and, in the Governor's opinion it is necessary to evacuate any building owned or controlled by any department, agency, institution, school, college, board, division, commission or subdivision of the State in order to maintain public order and safety or to afford adequate protection for lives or property, the Governor is hereby authorized to issue an order of evacuation directing all persons within the building to leave the building and its premises forthwith. The order shall be delivered to any law-enforcement officer or officer of the national guard, and such officer shall, by a suitable public address system, read the order to the occupants of the building and demand that the occupants forthwith evacuate said building within the time specified in the Governor's order.

(b) Any person who willfully refuses to leave the building as directed in the Governor's order shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1969, c. 1129; 1993, c. 539, s. 198; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-288.20. Certain weapons at civil disorders.

(a) The definitions in G.S. 14-288.1 do not apply to this section. As used in this section:

(1) The term "civil disorder" means any public disturbance involving acts or violence by assemblages of three or more persons, which causes an immediate danger of damage or injury to the property or person of any other individual or results in damage or injury to the property or person of any other individual.

(2) The term "firearm" means any weapon which is designed to or may readily be converted to expel any projectile by the action of an explosive; or the frame or receiver of such a weapon.

(3) The term "explosive or incendiary device" means (i) dynamite and all other forms of high explosives, (ii) any explosive bomb, grenade, missile, or similar device, and (iii) any incendiary bomb or grenade, fire bomb, or similar device, including any device which (i) consists of or includes a breakable container including a flammable liquid or compound, and a wick composed of any material which, when ignited, is capable of igniting that flammable liquid or compound, and (ii) can be carried or thrown by one individual acting alone.

(4) The term "law-enforcement officer" means any officer of the United States, any state, any political subdivision of a state, or the District of Columbia charged with the execution of the laws thereof; civil officers of the United States; officers and soldiers of the organized militia and state guard of any state or territory of the United States, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the District of Columbia; and members of the armed forces of the United States.

(b) A person is guilty of a Class H felony, if he:

(1) Teaches or demonstrates to any other person the use, application, or making of any firearm, explosive or incendiary device, or technique capable of causing injury or death to persons, knowing or having reason to know or intending that the same will be unlawfully employed for use in, or in furtherance of, a civil disorder; or

(2) Assembles with one or more persons for the purpose of training with, practicing with, or being instructed in the use of any firearm, explosive or incendiary device, or technique capable of causing injury or death to persons, intending to employ unlawfully the training, practicing, instruction, or technique for use in, or in furtherance of, a civil disorder.

(c) Nothing contained in this section shall make unlawful any act of any law-enforcement officer which is performed in the lawful performance of his official duties. (1981, c. 880, ss. 1, 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 1230; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Conduct Carried Out by Defendant's Agents. — Although defendant never had direct involvement in any activities that violated this section, it was sufficient, in order to find defendant in contempt of a court order prohibiting violation of this section, that the violative conduct was carried out by defendant's agents under his direct orders. Person v. Miller, 854 F.2d 656 (4th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1011, 109 S. Ct. 1119, 103 L. Ed. 2d 182 (1989).

Acts Need Not Threaten "Immediate" Danger. — In an action for contempt of a court order prohibiting violation of this section, prosecution need not prove that the acts engaged in threatened "immediate" danger but, rather, that the prohibited activities were engaged in with the intent of furthering civil disorder at some point in time. Person v. Miller, 854 F.2d 656 (4th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1011, 109 S. Ct. 1119, 103 L. Ed. 2d 182 (1989).

   a. Radiation or radioactivity;
   b. A disease organism; or
   c. Toxic or poisonous chemicals or their immediate precursors.

(2) Any substance that is designed or has the capability to cause death or serious injury and:

      3. Any genetically modified microorganisms or genetic elements that contain nucleic acid sequences coding for any of the toxins listed on Appendix A of Part 72 of Title 42 of the Code of Federal Regulations, or their toxic submits.

The term "nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction" also includes any combination of parts or substances either designed or intended for use in converting any device or substance into any nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction or from which a nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction may be readily assembled or created.

(d) Any person who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a Class B1 felony. (2001-470, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-470, s. 5, makes this Article effective November 28, 2001, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date. Prosecutions for offenses occurring before the effective date of the act (November 28, 2001) are not abated or affected by the act, and the statutes that would be applicable but for the act remain applicable to those prosecutions.

§ 14-288.22. Unlawful use of a nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction; punishment.

(c) Any person who for the purpose of violating any provision of this Article, deposits for delivery or attempts to have delivered, a nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction by the United States Postal Service or other public or private business engaged in the delivery of mail, packages, or parcels is guilty of a Class B1 felony. (2001-470, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.23. Making a false report concerning a nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction; punishment; restitution.

(a) Any person who, by any means of communication to any person or group of persons, makes a report, knowing or having reason to know the report is false, that causes any person to reasonably believe that there is located at any place or structure whatsoever any nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction is guilty of a Class D felony.

(b) The court may order a person convicted under this section to pay restitution, including costs and consequential damages resulting from disruption of the normal activity that would have otherwise occurred but for the false report, pursuant to Article 81C of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes.

(c) For purposes of this section, the term "report" shall include making accessible to another person by computer. (2001-470, s. 1.)

§ 14-288.24. Perpetrating hoax by use of false nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction; punishment; restitution.

(a) Any person who, with intent to perpetrate a hoax, conceals, places, or displays any device, object, machine, instrument, or artifact, so as to cause any person reasonably to believe the same to be a nuclear, biological, or chemical weapon of mass destruction is guilty of a Class D felony.

(b) The court may order a person convicted under this section to pay restitution, including costs and consequential damages resulting from disruption of the normal activity that would have otherwise occurred but for the hoax, pursuant to Article 81C of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. (2001-470, s. 1.)

SUBCHAPTER XI. GENERAL POLICE REGULATIONS.

ARTICLE 37.

Lotteries, Gaming, Bingo and Raffles.

Part 1. Lotteries and Gaming.

§ 14-289. Advertising lotteries.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in Part 2 of this Article, if anyone by writing or printing or by circular or letter or in any other way, advertise or publish an account of a lottery, whether within or without this State, stating how, when or where the same is to be or has been drawn, or what are the prizes therein or any of them, or the price of a ticket or any share or interest therein, or where or how it may be obtained, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1887, c. 211; Rev., s. 3725; C.S., s. 4427; 1979, c. 893, s. 3; 1983, c. 896, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 199; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Local Modification. — (As to Article 37) Carteret: 1971, c. 221; Cleveland: 1971, c. 627; Jones: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 157; Lincoln: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 66; Pamlico: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 157; Polk: 1971, c. 627; Rutherford: 1971, c. 627; Union: 1971, c. 627; 1977, c. 157.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1983, c. 896, s. 3, effective Oct. 1, 1983, designated existing Article 37 of Chapter 14 as Part 1 of such Article and added a new Part 2.

Session Laws 1983, c. 896, which amended this section and G.S. 14-290, 14-291, 14-291.1, and 14-292, in s. 5.1, provided: "Sec. 5.1. Should the Supreme Court of North Carolina or a federal court having jurisdiction over North Carolina find and determine in any manner, whether on the merits or by denial of petition for discretionary review, that the General Assembly may not constitutionally allow 'exempt organizations' as defined herein to conduct bingo or raffles, while denying that privilege to all other persons, then this act and G.S. 14-292.1 are repealed in their entirety, and no person may conduct bingo or raffles under any circumstances not permitted by the gambling laws of North Carolina."

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — With the exception of the provision relating to homeowner and property owner associations (now found in § 14-309.6(1)), this section and § 14-290 and former § 14-292.1 (now replaced by § 14-309.5 et seq.) do not violate the due process or equal protection provisions of either the North Carolina Constitution or the United States Constitution. State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd, 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

§ 14-290. Dealing in lotteries.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in Part 2 of this Article, if any person shall open, set on foot, carry on, promote, make or draw, publicly or privately, a lottery, by whatever name, style or title the same may be denominated or known; or if any person shall, by such way and means, expose or set to sale any house, real estate, goods, chattels, cash, written evidence of debt, certificates of claims or any other thing of value whatsoever, every person so offending shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor which may include a fine not to exceed two thousand dollars ($2,000). Any person who engages in disposing of any species of property whatsoever, including money and evidences of debt, or in any manner distributes gifts or prizes upon tickets, bottle crowns, bottle caps, seals on containers, other devices or certificates sold for that purpose, shall be held liable to prosecution under this section. Any person who shall have in his possession any tickets, certificates or orders used in the operation of any lottery shall be held liable under this section, and the mere possession of such tickets shall be prima facie evidence of the violation of this section. (1834, c. 19, s. 1; R.C., c. 34, s. 69; 1874-5, c. 96; Code, s. 1047; Rev., s. 3726; C.S., s. 4428; 1933, c. 434; 1937, c. 157; 1979, c. 893, s. 4; 1983, c. 896, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 200; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — With the exception of the provision relating to homeowner and property owner associations (now found in § 14-309.6(1)), this section and § 14-289 and former § 14-292.1 (now replaced by § 14-309.5 et seq.) do not violate the due process or equal protection provisions of either the North Carolina Constitution or the United States Constitution. State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd, 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

The 1933 amendment to this section, which made the possession of tickets, etc., used in the operating of a lottery prima facie evidence of violation of the section, was constitutional and valid, the presumption being a rational one. State v. Fowler, 205 N.C. 608, 172 S.E. 191 (1934).

Statutes, such as this section, regulating such schemes violate neither the State nor federal Constitution. They are remedial and should be liberally construed. And the fact that the device is an advertising scheme of an otherwise legitimately run business concern does not prevent the section from applying. Brevard Mfg. Co. v. W. Benjamin & Sons, 172 N.C. 53, 89

S.E. 797 (1916). See State v. Lumsden, 89 N.C. 572 (1883).

Lottery Defined. — A lottery may be defined as any scheme for the distribution of prizes, by lot or chance, by which one, on paying money or giving any other thing of value to another, obtains a token which entitles him to receive a larger or smaller value, or nothing, as some formula of chance may determine. State v. Lipkin, 169 N.C. 265, 84 S.E. 340 (1915); State v. Simmons, 59 N.C. App. 287, 296 S.E.2d 805 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 701, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600 (1991).

This Section and § 14-291.1 Distinguished. — This section refers to persons who promote, make or draw, publicly or privately, a lottery, by whatever name, while § 14-291.1, deals only with those persons who shall "sell, barter or cause to be sold or bartered, any ticket, token, certificate or order," etc. Thus it is apparent that the two statutes not only act upon different persons and serve purposes which are not the same, but also they deal with different conditions. One inveighs against trafficking in lottery tickets and the other is designed to affect those persons engaged in promoting a particular kind of lottery. State v. Robinson, 224 N.C. 412, 30 S.E.2d 320 (1944).

Section Not Applicable To Purchaser. — This section does not embrace persons who buy lottery tickets. State v. Bryant, 74 N.C. 207 (1876).

Lottery Privilege Not a Contract. — A right, conferred in the charter of a corporation, to dispose of property by means of lottery tickets, is not a contract between the corporation and the State, but a mere privilege or license, and is revocable at will by the legislative power. State v. Morris, 77 N.C. 512 (1877).

Note for Lottery Contract Unenforceable. — Notes given in pursuance of a contract prohibited by this section are for an illegal consideration, and collection thereof is not enforceable in the courts of the State. Brevard Mfg. Co. v. W. Benjamin & Sons, 172 N.C. 53, 89 S.E. 797 (1916).

Surety to Lottery Contract. — A bond guaranteeing the performance of a "trade expansion contract" which is contrary to this section, is as unenforceable against the surety thereon as the contract upon which it is founded. Basnight v. American Mfg. Co., 174 N.C. 206, 93 S.E. 734 (1917).

Legal Effect of Lottery Ticket. — A lottery ticket entitles the holder to demand and receive one of the prizes awarded. It is a thing which is the holder's means of making good his rights. The essence of it is that it is in the hands of the other party to the contract with the lottery as a document of title. State v. Simmons, 59 N.C. App. 287, 296 S.E.2d 805 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 701, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600 (1991).

First clause of the last sentence creates a separate offense that is applicable to those participating in a lottery as well as to those conducting the lottery. This offense comprises the possession of tickets, certificates or orders that are used in the operation of a lottery. State v. Simmons, 59 N.C. App. 287, 296 S.E.2d 805 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 701, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600 (1991).

Actual Physical Possession of Tickets Unnecessary. — The possession of lottery tickets sufficient to raise prima facie evidence of the violation of this section need not be actual physical possession, and the tickets need not be found on defendant's person, it being sufficient if they are found in his place of business under his control. State v. Jones, 213 N.C. 640, 197 S.E. 152 (1938).

Admissibility of Evidence. — In establishing the promotion of the lottery by circumstantial evidence it was permissible for the State to show the association of the defendants together with their financial relation and transactions. The declaration of one defendant as to the other's participation in the enterprise and as to their protection if they were caught was also competent. State v. Ingram, 204 N.C. 557, 168 S.E. 837 (1933).

In a prosecution for possession of lottery tickets, testimony that on another occasion a short time previously like tickets had been found in defendant's home was held competent as tending to show intent, guilty knowledge, system, purposeful possession of the tickets charged, and as supporting the State's view that defendant was engaged in operating a lottery. State v. Bryant, 231 N.C. 106, 55 S.E.2d 922 (1949).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence that numerous lottery tickets and lottery ticket books were found in the store operated by defendant was sufficient to be submitted to the jury in a prosecution under this section, and defendant's contention that there was no evidence that he was in charge of the store was untenable when the record disclosed that several witnesses referred to the locus in quo as defendant's place of business. State v. Jones, 213 N.C. 640, 197 S.E. 152 (1938).

Evidence that officers apprehended defendant with lottery tickets in his possession and that upon seeing the officers he tried to dispose of same was sufficient to be submitted to the jury in prosecution for operating a lottery and for illegal possession of lottery tickets, the evidence being sufficient to make out a prima facie case under the provisions of this section. State v. Powell, 219 N.C. 220, 13 S.E.2d 232 (1941).

Evidence held insufficient to show violation of this section. State v. Heglar, 225 N.C.

220, 34 S.E.2d 76 (1945).

Circumstantial evidence of defendant's guilt of conspiracy or participation in lottery held insufficient. State v. Smith, 236 N.C. 748, 73 S.E.2d 901 (1953).

Applied in State v. Blanton, 207 N.C. 872, 180 S.E. 81 (1935); State v. King, 224 N.C. 329, 30 S.E.2d 230 (1944).

§ 14-291. Selling lottery tickets and acting as agent for lotteries.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in Part 2 of this Article, if any person shall sell, barter or otherwise dispose of any lottery ticket or order for any number of shares in any lottery, or shall in anywise be concerned in such lottery, by acting as agent in the State for or on behalf of any such lottery, to be drawn or paid either out of or within the State, such person shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1834, c. 19, s. 2; R.C., c. 34, s. 70; Code, s. 1048; Rev., s. 3727; C.S., s. 4429; 1979, c. 893, s. 5; 1983, c. 896, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 201; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-291.1. Selling "numbers" tickets; possession prima facie evidence of violation.

Except in connection with a lawful raffle as provided in Part 2 of this Article, if any person shall sell, barter or cause to be sold or bartered, any ticket, token, certificate or order for any number or shares in any lottery, commonly known as the numbers or butter and egg lottery, or lotteries of similar character, to be drawn or paid within or without the State, such person shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Any person who shall have in his possession any tickets, tokens, certificates or orders used in the operation of any such lottery shall be guilty under this section, and the possession of such tickets shall be prima facie evidence of the violation of this section. (1943, c. 550; 1979, c. 893, s. 6; 1983, c. 896, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 202; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Lottery Defined. — A lottery is any scheme for the distribution or prizes, by lot or chance, by which one, on paying money or giving any other thing of value to another, obtains a token which entitles him to receive a larger or smaller value, or nothing, as some formula of chance may determine. State v. Walker, 25 N.C. App. 157, 212 S.E.2d 528, modified on other grounds, 27 N.C. App. 295, 219 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 264, 214 S.E.2d 436, 423 U.S. 894, 96 S. Ct. 193, 46 L. Ed. 2d 126 (1975).

"Barter" and "sell" are not used as synonyms in this section. Barter is a contract by which parties exchange one commodity for another. It differs from a sale, in that the latter is a transfer of goods for a specified price, payable in money. This being so, an accused may violate this section in four distinct ways. He may sell the illegal articles, or he may barter them, or he may cause another to sell them, or he may cause another to barter them. State v. Albarty, 238 N.C. 130, 76 S.E.2d 381 (1953).

Warrant Sufficient. — Warrant charging the defendant with the sale of tickets and tokens to be used in a numbers "lottery" omits none of the essential elements of the offense. State v. Walker, 25 N.C. App. 157, 212 S.E.2d 528, modified on other grounds, 27 N.C. App. 295, 219 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 264, 214 S.E.2d 436, 423 U.S. 894, 96 S. Ct. 193, 46 L. Ed. 2d 126 (1975).

Racketeering Activity. — Gambling in houses of public entertainment in violation of § 14-293, operating or possessing gambling devices in violation of § 14-302, and selling or possessing numbers tickets in violation of this section are gambling offenses chargeable as a general misdemeanor punishable by up to two years' imprisonment, thereby satisfying the federal criteria for racketeering activity under 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1). Therefore, the gambling offenses constituted "racketeering activity" under the alternate definition established in § 75D-3(c)(2). State ex rel. Thornburg v. Lot & Bldgs. at 800 Waughtown St., 107 N.C. App. 559, 421 S.E.2d 374, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 170, 424 S.E.2d 915 (1992).

Admissibility of Evidence. — In a prosecution for possession of lottery tickets, testimony that on another occasion a short time previously, like tickets had been found in defendant's home, was held competent as tending to show intent, guilty knowledge, system, purposeful possession of the tickets charged, and as supporting the State's view that defendant was engaged in operating a lottery. State v. Bryant, 231 N.C. 106, 55 S.E.2d 922 (1949).

Evidence held insufficient to show violation of this section. State v. Heglar, 225 N.C. 220, 34 S.E.2d 76 (1945); State v. Roberson, 29 N.C. App. 152, 223 S.E.2d 551 (1976).

Circumstantial evidence of defendant's guilt of conspiracy or participation in lottery held insufficient. State v. Smith, 236 N.C. 748, 73 S.E.2d 901 (1953).

Instructions. — In a prosecution for possession of lottery tickets, the trial court properly instructed the jury that the State had the burden of proving that the defendant knew that the pieces of paper with the numbers on them were lottery tickets, but the court erred in instructing that, "under our law unless the defendant introduces evidence of lack of knowledge, this element may be presumed." State v. Mayo, 27 N.C. App. 336, 219 S.E.2d 255 (1975).

In a prosecution for possession of certificates, tickets and orders used in the operation of a numbers lottery, where the court instructed the jury that before it could find defendant guilty of violating the statute it must find from the evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt that (1) the defendant possessed the tickets and orders and (2) that such tickets, orders and paraphernalia were used in a numbers lottery, the charge, when considered contextually as a whole, complied with the requirements of the statute requiring the judge to declare and explain the law arising on the evidence given in the case. State v. Roberson, 29 N.C. App. 152, 223 S.E.2d 551 (1976).

Punishment. — A sentence and fine imposed upon conviction of violating this section are in personam; an order of confiscation entered under § 14-299 is in rem and is no part of the personal judgment against the accused. State v. Richardson, 228 N.C. 426, 45 S.E.2d 536 (1947). See note to § 14-299.

§ 14-291.2. Pyramid and chain schemes prohibited.

(a) No person shall establish, operate, participate in, or otherwise promote any pyramid distribution plan, program, device or scheme whereby a participant pays a valuable consideration for the opportunity or chance to receive a fee or compensation upon the introduction of other participants into the program, whether or not such opportunity or chance is received in conjunction with the purchase of merchandise. A person who establishes or operates a pyramid distribution plan is guilty of a Class H felony. A person who participates in or otherwise promotes a pyramid distribution plan is deemed to participate in a lottery and is guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(b) "Pyramid distribution plan" means any program utilizing a pyramid or chain process by which a participant gives a valuable consideration for the opportunity to receive compensation or things of value in return for inducing other persons to become participants in the program; and

"Compensation" does not mean payment based on sales of goods or services to persons who are not participants in the scheme, and who are not purchasing in order to participate in the scheme.

(c) Any judge of the superior court shall have jurisdiction, upon petition by the Attorney General of North Carolina or district attorney of the superior court, to enjoin, as an unfair or deceptive trade practice, the continuation of the scheme described in subsection (a); in such proceeding the court may assess civil penalties and attorneys' fees to the Attorney General or the District Attorney pursuant to G.S. 75-15.2 and 75-16.1; and the court may appoint a receiver to secure and distribute assets obtained by any defendant through participation in any such scheme. The clear proceeds of civil penalties provided for in this subsection shall be remitted to the Civil Penalty and Forfeiture Fund in accordance with G.S. 115C-457.2.

(d) Any contract hereafter created for which a part of the consideration consisted of the opportunity or chance to participate in a program described in subsection (a) is hereby declared to be contrary to public policy and therefore void and unenforceable. CASE NOTES

Injunctive Relief at Instance of State. — Even though individual remedies may exist, the statutes provide for injunctive relief at the instance of the State. To hold otherwise would cripple the legislative intent to provide an effective means of curbing illegitimate business schemes and protecting the consumers of our State. State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

§ 14-292. Gambling.

Except as provided in Part 2 of this Article, any person or organization that operates any game of chance or any person who plays at or bets on any game of chance at which any money, property or other thing of value is bet, whether the same be in stake or not, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1891, c. 29; Rev., s. 3715; C.S., s. 4430; 1979, c. 893, s. 1; 1983, c. 896, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 204; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Betting is essential to the offense; playing without betting is not indictable. State v. Brannen, 53 N.C. 208 (1860).

The section does not apply to prizes given for skill. State v. DeBoy, 117 N.C. 702, 23 S.E. 167 (1895).

Games of Chance and Games of Skill Distinguished. — A game of chance is one in which the element of chance predominates over the element of skill, and a game of skill is one in which the element of skill predominates over the element of chance. State v. Eisen, 16 N.C. App. 532, 192 S.E.2d 613 (1972).

The universal acceptation of "a game of chance" is such a game as is determined entirely or in part by lot or mere luck, and in which judgment, practice, skill or adroitness have honestly no office at all, or are thwarted by chance. State v. Gupton, 30 N.C. 271 (1848).

Illegal Bingo. — In plaintiff's action for declaratory judgment seeking declaration of promotional schemes' legality, where affidavits plainly showed that patrons came to play bingo, not because they wanted or needed to purchase combs and candy, and affidavits also showed patrons understood their purchases to be the basis for the opportunity to play bingo, no unresolved issue of fact regarding the existence of consideration remained for trial; the plaintiffs' own evidence showed that consideration was an element of the bingo game offered by corporate solicitor; therefore, the game was "gambling" in violation of this section, and defendants were entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Animal Protection Soc'y of Durham, Inc. v. State, 95 N.C. App. 258, 382 S.E.2d 801 (1989).

Where some patrons obtained bingo cards without first buying combs or candy, this fact alone did not transform the bingo games offered by corporation into "free bingo"; patrons who obtained the cards without making a purchase received fewer cards than patrons who did buy the items; therefore, the other patrons had to pay to obtain a greater number of bingo cards. Animal Protection Soc'y of Durham, Inc. v. State, 95 N.C. App. 258, 382 S.E.2d 801 (1989).

Blackjack. — Whether blackjack was a game of chance or one of skill was a question for the jury to decide from the evidence. State v. Eisen, 16 N.C. App. 532, 192 S.E.2d 613 (1972).

Tenpins is not a game of chance. State v. King, 113 N.C. 631, 18 S.E. 169 (1893).

Horse racing is included in the category of "gaming" or "gambling." The word "game" is very comprehensive and embraces every contrivance or institution which has for its object to furnish sport, recreation, or amusement. Let a stake be laid on the chance of a game, and it is gaming. State v. Brown, 221 N.C. 301, 20 S.E.2d 286 (1942).

Betting on horse racing, or on any other sort of race, in an offense against the criminal law. The fact that the race itself is one of skill and endurance on the part of the jockey and his mount does not confer immunity upon those who wager on its result. State v. Brown, 221 N.C. 301, 20 S.E.2d 286 (1942).

Betting on dog races under a pari-mutuel system having no other purpose than that of providing the facilities by means of tickets, machines, etc., for placing bets, calculating odds, determining winnings, if any, constitutes gambling within the meaning of this section. State ex rel. Taylor v. California Racing Ass'n, 241 N.C. 80, 84 S.E.2d 390 (1954).

Calling Transaction a Raffle Does Not Change its Character. — Where several parties each put up a piece of money and then decide, by throwing dice, who shall have the aggregate sum or "pool," the game is one of chance and the fact that the aggregate sum so put up is exchanged for a turkey and the transaction is denominated a "raffle" does not change the character of the game. State v. DeBoy, 117 N.C. 702, 23 S.E. 167 (1895).

Ordinances as to Gambling Void. — Gambling being an offense under the general law, a city ordinance covering the same subject is void. State v. McCoy, 116 N.C. 1059, 21 S.E. 690 (1895).

All who engage in gambling are principals. State v. DeBoy, 117 N.C. 702, 23 S.E. 167 (1895).

A defendant may be indicted for keeping a gaming house and playing for money, without misjoinder. State v. Morgan, 133 N.C. 743, 45 S.E. 1033 (1903).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment charging defendant with keeping and maintaining a gaming house is sufficient, though it is not alleged that the games played there were games of chance, or that they were played at a place or tables where games of chance were played. State v. Morgan, 133 N.C. 743, 45 S.E. 1033 (1903).

Where misdemeanor statement of charges referenced the violation and stated that defendant unlawfully and willfully operated a game of chance, "a poker machine by paying a player money for said player's score," the misdemeanor statement of charges were sufficiently alleged so as to charge defendant with two counts of gambling. State v. Chase, 117 N.C. App. 686, 453 S.E.2d 195 (1995).

Applied in Greensboro Elks Lodge v. North Carolina Bd. of Alcoholic Control, 27 N.C. App. 594, 220 S.E.2d 106 (1975); Durham Hwy. Fire Protection Ass'n v. Baker, 82 N.C. App. 583, 347 S.E.2d 86 (1986).

§ 14-293. Allowing gambling in houses of public entertainment; penalty.

If any keeper of an ordinary or other house of entertainment, or of a house wherein alcoholic beverages are retailed, shall knowingly suffer any game, at which money or property, or anything of value, is bet, whether the same be in stake or not, to be played in any such house, or in any part of the premises occupied therewith; or shall furnish persons so playing or betting either on said premises or elsewhere with drink or other thing for their comfort or subsistence during the time of play, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Any person who shall be convicted under this section shall, upon such conviction, forfeit his license to do any of the businesses mentioned in this section, and shall be forever debarred from doing any of such businesses in this State. The court shall embody in its judgment that such person has forfeited his license, and no board of county commissioners, board of town commissioners or board of aldermen shall thereafter have power or authority to grant to such convicted person or his agent a license to do any of the businesses mentioned herein. CASE NOTES

Gambling in Leased Room of Tavern. — Where it appeared that the room, in which the game took place, was a part of the house in which the tavern was kept, but had been leased and was not under the control of the landlord, it was held that the defendant landlord could not be convicted under this section. State v. Keisler, 51 N.C. 73 (1858).

House Where Liquor Is Retailed. — For case under this provision, see State v. Terry, 20 N.C. 325 (1839).

Sufficiency of Warrant. — A warrant charging that defendant did operate a house in which various types of gambling "is continuously carried on" and did permit named persons to engage in a game of cards in which money was bet, held sufficient to charge defendant with operating a gambling house. State v. Anderson, 259 N.C. 499, 130 S.E.2d 857 (1963).

Racketeering Activity. — Gambling in houses of public entertainment in violation of this section, operating or possessing gambling devices in violation of § 14-302, and selling or possessing numbers tickets in violation of § 14-291.1 are gambling offenses chargeable as a general misdemeanor punishable by up to two years' imprisonment, thereby satisfying the federal criteria for racketeering activity under 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1). Therefore, the gambling offenses constituted "racketeering activity" under the alternate definition established in § 75D-3(c)(2). State ex rel. Thornburg v. Lot & Bldgs. at 800 Waughtown St., 107 N.C. App. 559, 421 S.E.2d 374, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 170, 424 S.E.2d 915 (1992).

Punishment. — For violation of this section a fine of $2,000 and imprisonment of 30 days, and thereafter until the fine and costs were paid, was held not excessive punishment. State v. Miller, 94 N.C. 904 (1886).

§ 14-294. Gambling with faro banks and tables.

If any person shall open, establish, use or keep a faro bank, or a faro table, with the intent that games of chance may be played thereat, or shall play or bet thereat any money, property or other thing of value, whether the same be in stake or not, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. § 14-295. Keeping gaming tables, illegal punchboards or slot machines, or betting thereat.

If any person shall establish, use or keep any gaming table (other than a faro bank), by whatever name such table may be called, an illegal punchboard or an illegal slot machine, at which games of chance shall be played, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor; and every person who shall play thereat or thereat bet any money, property or other thing of value, whether the same be in stake or not, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. CASE NOTES

This section prohibits establishing, using or keeping an illegal punchboard. Actual operation of the device is not an element of the offense. State v. Warren, 61 N.C. App. 549, 301 S.E.2d 126 (1983).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment under this section is good without any averment that the act was done "willfully and unlawfully" or that the games of chance were played at such table for money or other property. State v. Howe, 100 N.C. 449, 5 S.E. 671 (1888).

Indictment Quashed. — A bill of indictment which does not charge that the game played was one of chance, and that it was played at a place or table where games of chance are played, will be quashed. State v. Norwood, 94 N.C. 935 (1886).

Evidence Admissible. — Where defendants admit keeping gaming tables, evidence may be admitted tending to show that they were continuously present at the place and tending to show their large share in the receipts of these tables. State v. Galloway, 188 N.C. 416, 124 S.E. 745 (1924).

§ 14-296. Illegal slot machines and punchboards defined.

An illegal slot machine or punchboard within the contemplation of G.S. 14-295 through 14-298 is defined as a device where the user may become entitled to receive any money, credit, allowance, or any thing of value, as defined in G.S. 14-306. (1931, c. 14, s. 1; 1989, c. 406, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The act from which this section was taken amended §§ 14-295 through 14-298 to make them applicable to illegal slot machines and punchboards. The act expressly provided that it should not have the effect of modifying in any way §§ 14-301 through 14-303 and should be construed as supplemental thereto.

Evidence Insufficient. — Where the agreed statement of facts in an action to recover the penalty under this section states that defendant kept a slot machine in his store, without a finding that the machine was illegal, the findings are insufficient to support a judgment against defendant. Session Laws 2000-151, s. 6, directs the Legislative Research Commission to study the implementation of the act and recommend any changes it deems necessary in order to strengthen the act. Notwithstanding G.S. 120-30.11, the Commission may make its report under this section to the 2001 General Assembly no later than April 1, 2001.

Session Laws 2000-151, s. 6.1 authorizes the Department of Revenue to draw from collections under Article 4 of Chapter 105 of the General Statutes for the 2000-2001 fiscal year its actual costs of implementing G.S. 14-306.1(e1) (now G.S. 14-306.1(j)) as enacted by the act.

Session Laws 2000-151, s. 7, contains a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-151, s. 5, effective August 2, 2000, substituted "through G.S. 14-300, any illegal" for "through 14-300, or any illegal" and inserted "or any video game machine prohibited to be used by G.S. 14-306 or G.S. 14-306.1."

CASE NOTES

Where a motion for an order directing destruction of gambling equipment was made without an underlying pending action, the superior court was without jurisdiction to hear the motion. State v. Campbell, 79 N.C. App. 468, 339 S.E.2d 674 (1986).

Enjoining Officers. — The court should have found whether the slot machines involved were illegal in determining the plaintiff's right to enjoin officers from interfering with his business. McCormick v. Proctor, 217 N.C. 23, 6 S.E.2d 870 (1940).

§ 14-299. Property exhibited by gamblers to be seized; disposition of same.

All moneys or other property or thing of value exhibited for the purpose of alluring persons to bet on any game, or used in the conduct of any such game, including any motor vehicle used in the conduct of a lottery within the purview of G.S. 14-291.1, shall be liable to be seized by any court of competent jurisdiction or by any person acting under its warrant. Moneys so seized shall be turned over to and paid to the treasurer of the county wherein they are seized, and placed in the general fund of the county. Any property seized which is used for and is suitable only for gambling shall be destroyed, and all other property so seized shall be sold in the manner provided for the sale of personal property by execution, and the proceeds derived from said sale shall (after deducting the expenses of keeping the property and the costs of the sale and after paying, according to their priorities all known prior, bona fide liens which were created without the lienor having knowledge or notice that the motor vehicle or other property was being used or to be used in connection with the conduct of such game or lottery) be turned over and paid to the treasurer of the county wherein the property was seized, to be placed by said treasurer in the general fund of the county. (1798, c. 502, s. 3, P.R.; R.C., c. 34, s. 77; Code, s. 1051; Rev., s. 3722; C.S., s. 4436; 1943, c. 84; 1957, c. 501; 1973, c. 108, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

A confiscation order entered under this section is no part of the personal judgment imposed under § 14-291.1. Hence, a defendant may comply with the personal judgment entered against him upon conviction of violating § 14-291.1, and at the same time prosecute an appeal from an order of confiscation entered under this section, whether embraced in the same judgment or not; but the failure to appeal the personal judgment, while not estopping him for further contesting the order of confiscation, forever precludes him from contesting the fact of guilt. State v. Richardson, 228 N.C. 426, 45 S.E.2d 536 (1947).

This section controls when the procedure used in a raffle violates the "randomness" provision of § 14-309.15; accordingly, proceeds from the tainted raffle should have been paid over to the county's general fund rather than to defendant, whose mistakes alternately prohibited the proper awarding of the promised grand prize that had served as an inducement in the sale of tickets. § 14-300. Opposing destruction of gaming tables and seizure of property.

If any person shall oppose the destruction of any prohibited gaming table, or the seizure of any moneys, property or other thing staked on forbidden games, or shall take and carry away the same or any part thereof after seizure, he shall forfeit and pay to the person so opposed one thousand dollars ($1,000), for the use of the State and the person so opposed, and shall, moreover, be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1798, c. 502, s. 4, P.R.; R.C., c. 34, s. 78; Code, s. 1052; Rev., s. 3723; C.S., s. 4437; 1993, c. 539, s. 209; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-301. Operation or possession of slot machine; separate offenses.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to operate, keep in his possession or in the possession of any other person, firm or corporation, for the purpose of being operated, any slot machine or device where the user may become entitled to receive any money, credit, allowance, or any thing of value, as defined in G.S. 14-306. Each time said machine is operated as aforesaid shall constitute a separate offense. (1923, c. 138, ss. 1, 2; C.S., s. 4437(a); 1989, c. 406, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — See Editor's note to § 14-296.

CASE NOTES

Sections 14-301 to 14-303 and §§ 14-304 to 14-309 Are Complementary. — This section and §§ 14-302 and 14-303, proscribing the operation and possession of slot machines of the type therein defined, are not repealed by §§ 14-304 through 14-309, proscribing ownership, sale, lease and transportation of such slot machines, since the two statutes are not repugnant, but are complementary. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

And Involve Separate and Distinct Offenses. — Where an indictment charged defendant in one count with ownership, sale, lease and transportation of certain slot machines and devices prohibited by law, §§ 14-304 through 14-309, and charged defendant in the second count with the operation and possession of certain illegal slot machines, under this section and §§ 14-302 and 14-303, it was held that the different counts in the bill could stand as separate and distinct offenses, and separate judgments could be entered thereon, and defendant's contention of duplicity was untenable. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

What Value Is Required to Be Given. — Under this section, a slot machine so operated that one putting into it a coin receives, in any event, the value of such coin in chewing gum, and stands to win by chance additional chewing gum or discs of commercial value without further payment, is condemned by the statute as being unlawful. But if the slot machine were so operated that one who puts in a coin receives the same return in market value each and every time such machine is operated, it would not then fall within the condemnation of the statute. State v. May, 188 N.C. 470, 125 S.E. 9 (1924).

Only Lawful Machines Will Be Licensed. — The State license issued for the operation of a slot machine is for one that is lawful and does not permit the operation of one so devised as to give to the one who happens to strike certain mechanical combinations more of the merchandise than received at other times. State v. May, 188 N.C. 470, 125 S.E. 9 (1924).

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment charging that the defendant "unlawfully and willfully did operate a lottery, to wit, a slot machine (chapter 138, Public Laws 1923) against the form of the statute," etc., was insufficient because it failed to inform the accused of the specific offense or the necessary ingredients thereof, notwithstanding the statute was cited. State v. Ballangee, 191 N.C. 700, 132 S.E. 795 (1926).

Cited in Calcutt v. McGeachy, 213 N.C. 1, 195 S.E. 49 (1938).

§ 14-302. Punchboards, vending machines, and other gambling devices; separate offenses.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to operate or keep in his possession, or the possession of any other person, firm or corporation, for the purpose of being operated, any punchboard, slot machine or device where the user may become entitled to receive any money, credit, allowance, or any thing of value, as defined in G.S. 14-306. Each time said punchboard, slot machine or device where the user may become entitled to receive any money, credit, allowance, or any thing of value, as defined in G.S. 14-306 is operated, played, or patronized by the paying of money or other thing of value therefor, shall constitute a separate violation of this section as to operation thereunder. (1923, c. 138, ss. 3, 4; C.S., s. 4437(b); 1989, c. 406, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — See Editor's note to § 14-296.

CASE NOTES

Sections 14-301 to 14-303 and §§ 14-304 to 14-309 Are Complementary. — This section and §§ 14-301 and 14-303, proscribing the operation and possession of slot machines of the type therein defined, are not repealed by §§ 14-304 through 14-309, proscribing ownership, sale, lease and transportation of such slot machines, since the two statutes are not repugnant, but are complementary. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

Operation of Device Essential. — An essential element of the offense created by this section is the operation of the gambling device or the keeping in possession of such device for the purpose of being operated; the mere having in possession of gambling devices, and nothing more, is not made a criminal offense. State v. Sheppard, 4 N.C. App. 670, 167 S.E.2d 535 (1969).

Racketeering Activity. — Gambling in houses of public entertainment in violation of § 14-293, operating or possessing gambling devices in violation of this section, and selling or possessing numbers tickets in violation of § 14-291.1 are gambling offenses chargeable as a general misdemeanor punishable by up to two years' imprisonment, thereby satisying the federal criteria for racketeering activity under 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1). Therefore, the gambling offenses constituted "racketeering activity" under the alternate definition established in § 75D-3(c)(2). State ex rel. Thornburg v. Lot & Bldgs. at 800 Waughtown St., 107 N.C. App. 559, 421 S.E.2d 374, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 170, 424 S.E.2d 915 (1992).

Indictment Held Defective. — An indictment charging possession of gambling devices, but failing to charge that defendant operated the devices or had them in his possession for the purpose of being operated, is fatally defective. State v. Jones, 218 N.C. 734, 12 S.E.2d 292 (1940); State v. Sheppard, 4 N.C. App. 670, 167 S.E.2d 535 (1969).

The omission in a warrant of a charge that the defendant operated the gambling devices or that he kept such devices in his own or the possession of other persons for the purpose of being operated is a fatal defect in the warrant, since an essential element of the offense as provided by this section is the operation of the gambling device or the keeping of the device in his possession for the purpose of being operated. Mere possession of a gambling device is not a criminal offense. State v. Jones, 36 N.C. App. 263, 243 S.E.2d 827 (1978).

§ 14-303. Violation of two preceding sections a misdemeanor.

A violation of any of the provisions of G.S. 14-301 or 14-302 shall be a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1923, c. 138, s. 5; C.S., s. 4437(c); 1993, c. 366, s. 2, c. 539, s. 210; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 8(a), (b).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This and following sections, prohibiting coin slot machines in the operation of which a player may make varying scores or tallies upon which wages may be made, and differentiating between such machines and those returning a definite and unvarying service or things of value each time they are played, are in accord with the policy of the State to suppress gambling and have a reasonable relation to this objective, and this statute is constitutional as a reasonable regulation relating to the public morals and welfare, well within the police power of the State. Calcutt v. McGeachy, 213 N.C. 1, 195 S.E. 49 (1938); State v. Abbott, 218 N.C. 470, 11 S.E.2d 539 (1940).

Sections 14-301 to 14-303 and §§ 14-304 to 14-309 Are Complementary. — Sections 14-301, 14-302 and 14-303, proscribing the operation and possession of slot machines of the type therein defined, are not repealed by this section and §§ 14-305 through 14-309, proscribing ownership, sale, lease and transportation of such slot machines, since the two statutes are not repugnant, but are complementary. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

Not Repealed by § 105-65.1. — The provisions of the Flanagan Act, ch. 196, Public Laws of 1937, proscribing the possession and distribution of a coin slot machine in the operation of which the user may secure additional chances or rights to use the machine were not repealed by § 105-65.1. State v. Abbott, 218 N.C. 470, 11 S.E.2d 539 (1940).

Testimony as to Description and Operation of Machines. — In a prosecution under this section it is competent for witnesses who have examined and studied the machines in question to testify as to their physical description and operation. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 552, 50 S.E.2d 668 (1948).

§ 14-305. Agreements with reference to slot machines or devices made unlawful.

It shall be unlawful to make or permit to be made with any person any agreement with reference to any slot machines or device where the user may become entitled to receive any money, credit, allowance, or any thing of value, as defined in G.S. 14-306 pursuant to which the user thereof may become entitled to receive any money, credit, allowance, or anything of value or additional chance or right to use such machines or devices, or to receive any check, slug, token or memorandum entitling the holder to receive any money, credit, allowance or thing of value. (1937, c. 196, s. 2; 1989, c. 406, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Sections 14-301 to 14-303 and §§ 14-304 to 14-309 Are Complementary. — Sections 14-301, 14-302 and 14-303, proscribing the operation and possession of slot machines of the type therein defined, are not repealed by this section and §§ 14-305 through 14-309, proscribing ownership, sale, lease and transportation of such slot machines, since the two statutes are not repugnant, but are complementary. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

§ 14-306. Slot machine or device defined.

(a) Any machine, apparatus or device is a slot machine or device within the provisions of G.S. 14-296 through 14-309, if it is one that is adapted, or may be readily converted into one that is adapted, for use in such a way that, as a result of the insertion of any piece of money or coin or other object, such machine or device is caused to operate or may be operated in such manner that the user may receive or become entitled to receive any piece of money, credit, allowance or thing of value, or any check, slug, token or memorandum, whether of value or otherwise, or which may be exchanged for any money, credit, allowance or any thing of value, or which may be given in trade, or the user may secure additional chances or rights to use such machine, apparatus or device; or any other machine or device designed and manufactured primarily for use in connection with gambling and which machine or device is classified by the United States as requiring a federal gaming device tax stamp under applicable provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. This definition is intended to embrace all slot machines and similar devices except slot machines in which is kept any article to be purchased by depositing any coin or thing of value, and for which may be had any article of merchandise which makes the same return or returns of equal value each and every time it is operated, or any machine wherein may be seen any pictures or heard any music by depositing therein any coin or thing of value, or any slot weighing machine or any machine for making stencils by the use of contrivances operated by depositing in the machine any coin or thing of value, or any lock operated by slot wherein money or thing of value is to be deposited, where such slot machines make the same return or returns of equal value each and every time the same is operated and does not at any time it is operated offer the user or operator any additional money, credit, allowance, or thing of value, or check, slug, token or memorandum, whether of value or otherwise, which may be exchanged for money, credit, allowance or thing of value or which may be given in trade or by which the user may secure additional chances or rights to use such machine, apparatus, or device, or in the playing of which the operator does not have a chance to make varying scores or tallies.

(b) The definition contained in subsection (a) of this section and G.S. 14-296, 14-301, 14-302, and 14-305 does not include coin-operated machines, video games, pinball machines, and other computer, electronic or mechanical devices that are operated and played for amusement, that involve the use of skill or dexterity to solve problems or tasks or to make varying scores or tallies and that:

(1) Do not emit, issue, display, print out, or otherwise record any receipt, paper, coupon, token, or other form of record which is capable of being redeemed, exchanged, or repurchased for cash, cash equivalent, or prizes, or award free replays; or

(2) In actual operation, limit to eight the number of accumulated credits or replays that may be played at one time and which may award free replays or paper coupons that may be exchanged for prizes or merchandise with a value not exceeding ten dollars ($10.00), but may not be exchanged or converted to money.

(c) Any video machine, the operation of which is made lawful by subsection (b)(2) of this section, shall have affixed to it in view of the player a sticker informing that person that it is a criminal offense with the potential of imprisonment to pay more than that which is allowed by law. In addition, if the machine has an attract chip which allows programming, the static display shall contain the same message.

(d) The exception in subsection (b)(2) of this section does not apply to any machine that pays off in cash. The exemption in subsection (b)(2) of this section does not apply where the prizes, merchandise, credits, or replays are (i) repurchased for cash or rewarded by cash, (ii) exchanged for merchandise of a value of more than ten dollars ($10.00), or (iii) where there is a cash payout of any kind, by the person operating or managing the machine or the premises, or any agent or employee of that person. It is also a criminal offense, punishable under G.S. 14-309, for the person making the unlawful payout to the player of the machine to violate this section, in addition to any other person whose conduct may be unlawful. (1937, c. 196, s. 3; 1967, c. 1219; 1977, c. 837; 1985, c. 644; 1989, c. 406, s. 1; 1993, c. 366, s. 1; 2000-151, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2000-151, s. 6, directs the Legislative Research Commission to study the implementation of the act and recommend any changes it deems necessary in order to strengthen the act. Notwithstanding G.S. 120-30.11, the Commission may make its report under this section to the 2001 General Assembly no later than April 1, 2001.

Session Laws 2000-151, s. 6.1 authorizes the Department of Revenue to draw from collections under Article 4 of Chapter 105 of the General Statutes for the 2000-2001 fiscal year its actual costs of implementing G.S. 14-306.1(e1) (now (j)) as enacted by the act.

Session Laws 2000-151, s. 7, contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 2000-151, s. 8(1) provides: "G.S. 14-306.1(a), (c), (e) (now (i)), (i) (now (n)), (j) (now (o)), and (l) (now (q)) are effective when this act becomes law [August 2, 2000]. Section 4 of this act, other than subsections (c) and (d), are effective when this act becomes law [August 2, 2000]. G.S. 14-306.1(h) (now(m) becomes effective 30 days after this bill becomes law."

Session Laws 2000-151, s. 8(2) provides: "Section 3 of this act and G.S. 14-306(c) and (d) as added by Section 4 of this act become effective with respect to offenses committed on or after October 1, 2000, except as to a violation of G.S. 14-306.1(a), they are effective when they become law [August 2, 2000]." See the editor's note at § 14-306.1 regarding the recodification of subsections in that section.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-151, s. 4, designated the existing first paragraph as present subsection (a); designated the existing second paragraph as subsection (b) and subdivision (b)(2) and added subdivision (b)(1); added subsections (c) and (d); in subsection (b), substituted "subsection (a)" for "the first paragraph," substituted "pinball machines, and other computer, electronic or mechanical devices that are operated and played for amusement" for "and devices used for amusement. Included within this exception are pinball machines, video games, and other mechanical devices," inserted "solve problems or tasks or to" and substituted "that:" for "which, in"; and made a minor wording change in subdivision (b)(2). See editor's note for applicability and effective date.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The definition of "slot machine" as set forth in this section is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Crabtree, 126 N.C. App. 729, 487 S.E.2d 575 (1997).

Sections 14-301 to 14-303 and §§ 14-304 to 14-309 Are Complementary. — Sections 14-301, 14-302 and 14-303, proscribing the operation and possession of slot machines of the type therein defined, are not repealed by this section and §§ 14-305 through 14-309, proscribing ownership, sale, lease and transportation of such slot machines, since the two statutes are not repugnant, but are complementary. State v. Calcutt, 219 N.C. 545, 15 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

Test of Character of Game. — In State v. Stroupe, 238 N.C. 34, 76 S.E.2d 313 (1953), the N.C. Supreme Court determined that the test of the character of a game is whether it is a game of chance or a game of skill, not whether it contains an element of chance or skill, but which is the dominating element that determines the result of the game; or, whether or not the element of chance is present in such a manner as to thwart the exercise of skill or judgment. Collins Coin Music Co. v. North

Sufficiency of Indictment. — An indictment charging the ownership and distribution of slot machines adapted for use in such a way that as a result of the insertion of a coin the machine may be operated in such a manner that the user may secure additional chances or rights to use such machine and upon which the user has a chance to make various scores upon the outcome of which wagers may be made follows the language of this section and is sufficient to charge the offense therein defined. State v. Abbott, 218 N.C. 470, 11 S.E.2d 539 (1940).

Evidence. — Where it was admitted that the machines in question were owned by one defendant and rented by him to the other defendants, testimony of an officer, who had examined and studied the machines, that from his observation they could be converted, or reconverted, to coin slot operated machines by simple mechanical changes was evidence sufficient to overrule defendants' demurrer, and the fact that the witness failed to complete a demonstration of the conversion of such a machine because of lack of soldering tools did not amount to a failure of the State's evidence upon the critical issue. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 552, 50 S.E.2d 668 (1948).

Video Card Game Held Illegal. — Where the operation of video card game depended upon chance rather than a player's skill or dexterity, and a player could win, from a single hand, coupons worth more than ten dollars ($10.00), plaintiff's machines did not fall within the exception in this section and were illegal slot machines. Collins Coin Music Co. v. North Carolina ABC Comm'n, 117 N.C. App. 405, 451 S.E.2d 306 (1994).

Applied in State v. Campbell, 79 N.C. App. 468, 339 S.E.2d 674 (1986).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Legal Video Poker Machines. — Collins Coin Music Co. v. N.C. Alcoholic Beverage Control Comm., 117 N.C. App. 405, cert. denied, 340 N.C. 110 (1995), is no longer controlling when determining whether a video poker machine is a legal machine as defined in this section. In order to be exempt under present law from the definition of an illegal slot machine, the video poker machine must satisfy each of the following statutory criteria: 1. the machine must be "used for amusement;" 2. the players ability to make varying scores and receive coupons must "involve the use of skill or dexterity;" 3. in actual operation, the number of accumulated credits or replays that may be played at one time and which may award free replays or paper coupons that may be exchanged for prizes or merchandise is limited to eight; and 4. the coupons or credits that a player can accumulate in a single hand may not be exchanged for cash and may not be exchanged for merchandise having a value greater than $10.00. See opinion of Attorney General to The Honorable Billy J. Creech N.C. House of Representatives, 1997 N.C.A.G. 66 (11/5/97).

§ 14-306.1. Types of machines and devices prohibited by law; penalties.

(a) Ban on New Machines. — It shall be unlawful for any person to operate, allow to be operated, place into operation, or keep in that person's possession for the purpose of operation any video gaming machine as defined in subsection (c) of this section unless either:

(1) Such machine was:

a. Lawfully in operation, and available for play, within this State on or before June 30, 2000; and

b. Listed in this State by January 31, 2000 for ad valorem taxation for the 2000-2001 tax year; or

(2) Such machine is within the scope of the exclusion provided in G.S. 14-306(b)(1).

(b) Prohibition of More Than Three Existing Video Gaming Machines at One Location. — It shall be unlawful for any person to operate, allow to be operated, place into operation, or keep in that person's possession for the purpose of operation at one location more than three video gaming machines as defined in subsection (c).

(c) Definitions. — As used in this section, a video gaming machine means a slot machine as defined in G.S. 14-306(a) and other forms of electrical, mechanical, or computer games such as by way of illustration:

(1) A video poker game or any other kind of video playing card game.
(2) A video bingo game.
(3) A video craps game.
(4) A video keno game.
(5) A video lotto game.
(6) Eight liner.
(7) Pot-of-gold.
(8) A video game based on or involving the random or chance matching of different pictures, words, numbers, or symbols not dependent on the skill or dexterity of the player.

For the purpose of this section, a video gaming machine is a video machine which requires deposit of any coin, token, or use of any credit card, debit card, or any other method that requires payment to activate play of any of the games listed in this subsection. The enumeration of games in the list in this subsection does not authorize the possession or operation of such game if it is otherwise prohibited by law.

For the purpose of this section, a video gaming machine includes those that are within the scope of the exclusion provided in G.S. 14-306(b)(2), but does not include those that are within the scope of the exclusion provided in G.S. 14-306(b)(1).

(d) Age Requirement. — It shall be an infraction for any person under the age of 18 years to play any video gaming machine defined in subsection (c) of this section. It shall be unlawful for the operator of the video gaming machine to knowingly allow a person under the age of 18 years to play any video gaming machine as proscribed by this subsection.

(e) Hours of Operation. — It shall be unlawful to operate or allow the operation of any video gaming machine during the hours of 2:00 A.M. Sunday through 7:00 A.M. Monday.

(f) Plain View. — Any video gaming machine available for operation shall be in plain view of persons visiting the premises.

(g) Advertising Prohibited. — It is unlawful to advertise the operation of video gaming machines by use of on-premise or off-premise signs.

(h) Proximity to Other Locations Regulated; Permanent Building Required. — Each location where it is lawful to operate any video gaming machines as defined in G.S. 14-306.1(c) shall be at least 300 feet in any plane from any other location where such machines are operated. For the purpose of this section, a location is a permanent building having, or being within, a single exterior structure. Notwithstanding this subsection, two or more places where video gaming machines were lawfully operated under separate ownership on June 30, 2000, shall be considered to be separate locations more than 300 feet from each other, regardless of the distance from each other or whether they are located in the same building or edifice. Video gaming machines as defined in G.S. 14-306.1(c) may be operated only within permanent buildings.

(i) Registration With Sheriff. — No later than October 1, 2000, the owner of any video game which is regulated by this section shall register the machine with the Sheriff of the county in which the machine is located using a standardized registration form supplied by the Sheriff. The registration form shall be signed under oath by the owner of the machine. A material false statement in the registration form shall subject the owner to seizure of the machine under G.S. 14-298 in addition to any other punishment imposed by law. At any time that the video gaming machine is moved to a different location, the owner shall reregister the machine with the Sheriff prior to its being placed in operation. At a minimum, the registration form shall require that the registrant provide evidence of the date on which the machine was placed in operation, the serial number of the machine, the location of the facility at which the machine is operated, and the name of the owner of the facility at which the machine is operated. Each Sheriff shall report to the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations no later than November 1, 2000, on the total number of machines registered in that county, itemizing how many locations have one, two, or three machines.

(j) Report on Receipts and Prizes and Merchandise Awarded. — The owner of each machine or the agent of that owner shall report each calendar quarter to the Department of Revenue, under oath on a form provided by that Department, the total amount of gross receipts itemized by each machine, the number of machines at that location, and the total value of prizes and merchandise awarded to players of each machine at that location. The report shall be filed by the fifteenth day of the month after the quarter ends. Failure of the owner or agent to timely file the required report, or filing a report containing a material false statement shall subject the owner of the machine to seizure of the machine under G.S. 14-298 in addition to any other punishment imposed by law. Upon request of the Sheriff of the county, the Department of Revenue shall forward a copy of the report to the Sheriff of the county where the machines are located. The Department of Revenue shall compile the reports and make a summary report each quarter to the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations.

(k) Report to 2001 Session. — The North Carolina Sheriffs' Association, Inc., after consultation with the Division of Alcohol Law Enforcement, and the Conference of District Attorneys of North Carolina, shall report to the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations no later than January 1, 2001, its estimates of the costs of the registration process and the cost of enforcement of this section, along with suggested fees to make the registration and enforcement self-supporting, and recommendations as to a system with registration at the State level and primary enforcement at the local level. Such fee schedule is not effective until approved by the General Assembly.

(l) Exemption for Certain Machines. — This section shall not apply to assemblers, manufacturers, and transporters of video gaming machines who assemble, manufacture, and transport them for sale in another state as long as the machines, while located in this State, cannot be used to play the prohibited games, and does not apply to those who assemble, manufacture, and sell such machines for the use only by a federally recognized Indian Tribe if such machines may be lawfully used on Indian Land under the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act.

(m) Ban on Warehousing. — It is unlawful to warehouse any video gaming machine except in conjunction with the permitted assembly, manufacture, and transportation of such machines under subsection (l) of this section.

(n) Exemption for Activities Under IGRA. — This section does not make any activities of a federally recognized Indian Tribe unlawful or against public policy, which are lawful for any federally recognized Indian Tribe under the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, Public Law 100-497.

(o) No Local Preemption. — This section does not preempt any more restrictive ordinance lawfully adopted under Article 18 of Chapter 153A of the General Statutes or under Article 19 of Chapter 160A of the General Statutes.

(p) No person who has been convicted:

(1) Once under G.S. 14-309(a) may possess any video gaming machine as defined in G.S. 14-306.1 for a period of one year.

(2) Twice under G.S. 14-309(a) may possess any video gaming machine as defined in G.S. 14-306.1 for a period of two years.

(3) Three or more times under G.S. 14-309(a) may possess any video gaming machine.

(q) Not Legalizing Unlawful Activity. — This section does not make lawful any activity which is currently unlawful. (2000-151, s. 1.)

If the court determines that the defense has been proved the slot machine shall be returned immediately to the defendant. (1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1090.)

§§ 14-309.2 through 14-309.4: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Part 2. Bingo and Raffles.

§ 14-309.5. Bingo.

(a) The purpose of the conduct of bingo is to insure a maximum availability of the net proceeds exclusively for application to the charitable, nonprofit causes and undertakings specified herein; that the only justification for this Part is to support such charitable, nonprofit causes; and such purpose should be carried out to prevent the operation of bingo by professionals for profit, prevent commercialized gambling, prevent the disguise of bingo and other game forms or promotional schemes, prevent participation by criminal and other undesirable elements, and prevent the diversion of funds for the purpose herein authorized.

(b) It is lawful for an exempt organization to conduct bingo games in accordance with the provisions of this Part. Any licensed exempt organization who conducts a bingo game in violation of any provision of this Part shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Upon conviction such person shall not conduct a bingo game for a period of one year. It is lawful to participate in a bingo game conducted pursuant to this Part. It shall be a Class I felony for any person: (i) to operate a bingo game without a license; (ii) to operate a bingo game while license is revoked or suspended; (iii) to willfully misuse or misapply any moneys received in connection with any bingo game; or (iv) to contract with or provide consulting services to any licensee. It shall not constitute a violation of any State law to advertise a bingo game conducted in accordance with this Part. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, ss. 1-4; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 826, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, ss. 212, 1231; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1983, c. 896, which enacted this Part, in s. 5.1 provided: "Sec. 5.1. Should the Supreme Court of North Carolina or a federal court having jurisdiction over North Carolina find and determine in any manner, whether on the merits or by denial of petition for discretionary review, that the General Assembly may not constitutionally allow 'exempt organizations' as defined herein to conduct bingo or raffles, while denying that privilege to all other persons, then this act and G.S. 14-292.1 are repealed in their entirety, and no person may conduct bingo or raffles under any circumstances not permitted by the gambling laws of North Carolina."

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — With the exception of the provision relating to homeowner and property owner associations (now found in § 14-309.6(1)), §§ 14-289 and 14-290 and former § 14-292 (now replaced by § 14-309.5 et seq.) do not violate the due process or equal protection provisions of either the North Carolina Constitution or the United States Constitution.

State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd, 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

Plaintiff could proceed by civil action for an injunction against enforcement of this section, a criminal statute, where plaintiff would otherwise not be able to operate bingo games, which had provided it with income, unless the persons operating the games were willing to subject themselves to at least one prosecution for a felony, and the superior court had jurisdiction to hear such case. Durham Council of Blind v. Edmisten, 79 N.C. App. 156, 339 S.E.2d 84, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 316 N.C. 552, 344 S.E.2d 5 (1986).

Bingo as Part of Fundraising Scheme. — Where corporate solicitor operated bingo games in connection with their promotion of the sale of combs and candies, the element of bingo in corporate solicitor's fundraising scheme brought all activity connected to the operation of that game within the ambit of the bingo statutes, even if corporate solicitor sale of combs and candies fit within Chapter 131C's definition of "charitable sales promotion." Animal Protection Soc'y of Durham, Inc. v. State, 95 N.C. App. 258, 382 S.E.2d 801 (1989).

§ 14-309.6. Definitions.

For purposes of this Part, the term:

(1) "Exempt organization" means an organization that has been in continuous existence in the county of operation of the bingo game for at least one year and that is exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(8), 501(c)(10), 501(c)(19), or 501(d) of the Internal Revenue Code and is exempt under similar provisions of the General Statutes as a bona fide nonprofit charitable, civic, religious, fraternal, patriotic or veterans' organization or as a nonprofit volunteer fire department, or as a nonprofit volunteer rescue squad or a bona fide homeowners' or property owners' association. (If the organization has local branches or chapters, the term "exempt organization" means the local branch or chapter operating the bingo game);

(2) "Bingo game" means a specific game of chance played with individual cards having numbered squares ranging from one to 75, in which prizes are awarded on the basis of designated numbers on such cards conforming to a predetermined pattern of numbers (but shall not include "instant bingo" which is a game of chance played by the selection of one or more prepackaged cards, with winners determined by the appearance of a preselected designation on the card);

(3) Repealed by Session Laws 1983 (Regular Session 1984), c. 1107, s. 5.

(4) "Local law-enforcement agency" means for any bingo game conducted outside the corporate limits of a municipality or inside the corporate limits of a municipality having no municipal police force:
   a. The county police force; or
   b. The county sheriff's office in a county with no county police force;

(5) "Local law-enforcement agency" means the municipal police for any bingo game conducted within the corporate limits of a municipality having a police force;

(6) "Beach bingo games" means bingo games which have prizes of ten dollars ($10.00) or less or merchandise that is not redeemable for cash and that has a value of ten dollars ($10.00) or less; and

(7) "Licensed exempt organization" means an exempt organization which possesses a currently valid license. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, ss. 2, 5.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — With the exception of the provision relating to homeowner and property owner associations (now found in subdivision (1) of this section), §§ 14-289 and 14-290 and former § 14-292.1 (now replaced by § 14-309.5 et seq.) do not violate the due process or equal protection provisions of either the North Carolina Constitution or the United States

Constitution. State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd, 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

The statutory provision permitting homeowner or property owner associations to conduct bingo games or raffles bears no rational relation to the purposes of the gambling prohibitions or the charitable exemption, and has the effect of treating similarly situated persons and groups differently, without a rational basis for such differential treatment. Thus, the provision is inconsistent with the constitutional guaranty of equal protection contained in N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19 and with N.C. Const., Art. I, § 32, which provides that no person or set of persons is entitled to exclusive or separate emoluments or privileges from the community but in consideration of public services. State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984), decided under former § 14-292.1.

The portion of former § 14-292.1(d) (see now § 14-309.11(a)) requiring exempt organization facilities financed by bingo or raffle proceeds to be made available for use by the general public "from time to time" is simply insufficient to prevent the grant of a special gambling privilege to homeowner or property owner associations from violating the exclusive emoluments clause of the North Carolina Constitution. State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd, 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

Activities Within Purview of Statutes. — Any activity which meets the Part 2, Article 37, definition of bingo in this section is within the purview of the bingo statutes, whether or not consideration is paid to play the game. Animal Protection Soc'y of Durham, Inc. v. State, 95 N.C. App. 258, 382 S.E.2d 801 (1989).

Consideration Not Condition Precedent to Violation. — Violation of Part 1 of Article 37 is not a prerequisite to violation of Part 2 of this Article, and payment of consideration to play bingo is not a condition precedent to violation of Part 2. Animal Protection Soc'y of Durham, Inc. v. State, 95 N.C. App. 258, 382 S.E.2d 801 (1989).

§ 14-309.7. Licensing procedure.

(a) An exempt organization may not operate a bingo game at a location without a license. Application for a bingo license shall be made to the Department of Health and Human Services on a form prescribed by the Department. The Department shall charge an annual application fee of one hundred dollars ($100.00) to defray the cost of issuing bingo licenses and handling bingo audit reports. The fees collected shall be deposited in the General Fund of the State. This license shall expire one year after the granting of the license. This license may be renewed yearly, if the applicant pays the application fee and files an audit with the Department pursuant to G.S. 14-309.11. A copy of the application and license shall be furnished to the local law-enforcement agency in the county or municipality in which the licensee intends to operate before bingo is conducted by the licensee.

(b) Each application and renewal application shall contain the following information:

(1) The name and address of the applicant and if the applicant is a corporation, association or other similar legal entity, the name and home address of each of the officers of the organization as well as the name and address of the directors, or other persons similarly situated, of the organization.

(2) The name and home address of each of the members of the special committee.

(3) A copy of the application for recognition of exemptions and a determination letter from the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of Revenue that indicates that the organization is an exempt organization and stating the section under which that exemption is granted; except that if the organization is a State or local branch, lodge, post, or chapter of a national organization, a copy of the determination letter of the national organization satisfies this requirement.

(4) The location at which the applicant will conduct the bingo games. If the premises are leased, a copy of the lease or rental agreement.

(c) In order for an exempt organization to have a member familiar with the operation of bingo present on the premises at all times when bingo is being played and for this member to be responsible for the receiving, reporting and depositing of all revenues received, the exempt organization may pay one member for conducting a bingo game. Such pay shall be on an hourly basis only for the time bingo is actually being played and shall not exceed one and one-half times the existing minimum wage in North Carolina. The member paid under this provision shall be a member in good standing of the exempt organization for at least one year and shall not be the lessor or an employee or agent of the lessor. No other person may be compensated for conducting a bingo game from funds derived from any activities occurring in, or simultaneously with, the playing of bingo, including funds derived from concessions. An exempt organization shall not contract with any person for the purpose of conducting a bingo game. Except as provided in subsection (e) of this section, an exempt organization may hold a bingo game only in or on property owned (either legally or equitably and the buildings must be of a permanent nature with approved plumbing for bathrooms and not movable or of a temporary nature such as a tent or lean-to) or leased by the organization from the owner or bona fide property management agent (no subleasing is permitted) at a total monthly rental in an amount not to exceed one and one-quarter percent (11/4%) of the total assessed ad valorem tax value of the portion of the building actually used for the bingo games and the land value on which the building is located (not to exceed two acres) for all activities conducted therein including the playing of bingo for a period of not less than one year and actually occupied and used by that organization on a regular basis for purposes other than bingo for at least six months before the game; and all equipment used by the exempt organization in conducting the bingo game must be owned by the organization. Unless the exempt organization leases the property in accordance with this subsection, an exempt organization may conduct a bingo game only in or on property that is exempt from property taxes levied under Subchapter II of Chapter 105 of the General Statutes, or that is classified and not subject to any property taxes levied under Subchapter II of Chapter 105 of the General Statutes. It shall be unlawful for any person to operate beach bingo games at a location which is being used by any licensed exempt organization for the purpose of conducting bingo games.

(d) Conduct of a bingo game or raffle under this Part on such property shall not operate to defeat an exemption or classification under Subchapter II of Chapter 105 of the General Statutes.

(e) An exempt organization that wants to conduct only an annual or semiannual bingo game may apply to the Department of Health and Human Services for a limited occasion permit. The Department of Health and Human Services may require such information as is reasonable and necessary to determine that the bingo game is conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Part but may not require more information than previously specified in this section for application of a regular license. The application shall be made to the Department on prescribed forms at least 30 days prior to the scheduled date of the bingo game. In lieu of the reporting requirements of G.S. 14-309.11(b) the exempt organization shall file with the licensing agency and local law-enforcement a report on prescribed forms no later than 30 days following the conduct of the bingo game for which the permit was obtained. Such report may require such information as is reasonable and necessary to determine that the bingo game was conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Part but may not require more information than specified in G.S. 14-309.11(b). Any licensed exempt organization may donate or loan its equipment or use of its premises to an exempt organization which has secured a limited occasion permit provided such arrangement is disclosed in the limited occasion permit application and is approved by the Department of Health and Human Services. Except as stated above, all provisions of this Part shall apply to any exempt organization operating a bingo game under this provision. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; c. 923, s. 217; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, ss. 2, 4, 6; 1987, c. 866, ss. 1, 2; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1001, s. 1; 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-237, s. 11.18, provides that the Bingo Program in the Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Facility Services, and all functions, powers, duties, and obligations vested in the Department of Health and Human Services for the Bingo Program, are transferred to and vested in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety by a Type I transfer, as defined in G.S. 143A-6.

CASE NOTES

State Interest in Licensing Bingo Games. — Conditions for licenses to operate bingo games set out in this section and § 14-309.8 are reasonably related to a legitimate state interest that bingo games not be operated by full-time professionals for profit. Durham Council of Blind v. Edmisten, 79 N.C. App. 156, 339 S.E.2d 84, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 316 N.C. 552, 344 S.E.2d 5 (1986).

§ 14-309.8. Limit on sessions.

The number of sessions of bingo conducted or sponsored by an exempt organization shall be limited to two sessions per week and such sessions must not exceed a period of five hours each per session. No two sessions of bingo shall be held within a 48-hour period of time. No more than two sessions of bingo shall be operated or conducted in any one building, hall or structure during any one calendar week and if two sessions are held, they must be held by the same exempt organization. This section shall not apply to bingo games conducted at a fair or other exhibition conducted pursuant to Article 45 of Chapter 106 of the General Statutes. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; c. 923, s. 217; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, ss. 6, 7.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — In the context of the statute as a whole, the meaning of the words "session" and "sessions" is quite plain to anyone of common understanding and the statute is not unconstitutionally vague. Durham Hwy. Fire Protection Ass'n v. Baker, 82 N.C. App. 583, 347 S.E.2d 86 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 744 (1987).

The 48-hour provision, under which the first organization to conduct its bingo session in a given location during that period is not subject to prosecution but the second organization is, does not violate equal protection. One purpose of the distinction in question, a laudable and proper one, is to limit gambling, an offense against public morals when not conducted as the statute specifies. Except for this or some similar limitation, licensed bingo, instead of providing brief and occasional opportunities for harmless recreation, could fill the weekends of many people to their ruinous cost in money and otherwise. Durham Hwy. Fire Protection Ass'n v. Baker, 82 N.C. App. 583, 347 S.E.2d 86 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 744 (1987).

Limiting exempt organizations to one session of bingo during a 48-hour period does not unduly restrict their right to solicit charitable contributions. While soliciting contributions is certainly protected by U.S. Const., Amend. I, this statute does not impinge upon the right to solicit contributions, charitable or otherwise. The statute restricts only the conducting of bingo, which is gambling, and no one has a constitutional right to operate a gambling business. Durham Hwy. Fire Protection Ass'n v. Baker, 82 N.C. App. 583, 347 S.E.2d 86 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 744 (1987).

State Interest in Licensing Bingo Games. — Conditions for licenses to operate bingo games set out in § 14-309.7 and this section are reasonably related to a legitimate state interest that bingo games not be operated by full-time professionals for profit. Durham Council of Blind v. Edmisten, 79 N.C. App. 156, 339 S.E.2d 84, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 316 N.C. 552, 344 S.E.2d 5 (1986).

A "session" of bingo, as used in the statute, means a period of time in which bingo is conducted or sponsored by a particular exempt organization in one location, and "sessions" is more than one session. Durham Hwy. Fire Protection Ass'n v. Baker, 82 N.C. App. 583, 347 S.E.2d 86 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 744 (1987).

§ 14-309.9. Bingo prizes.

(a) The maximum prize in cash or merchandise that may be offered or paid for any one game of bingo is five hundred dollars ($500.00). The maximum aggregate amount of prizes, in cash and/or merchandise, that may be offered or paid at any one session of bingo is one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500). Provided, however, that if an exempt organization holds only one session of bingo during a calendar week, the maximum aggregate amount of prizes, in cash and/or merchandise, that may be offered or paid at any one session is two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500).

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 1983 (Regular Session 1984), c. 1107, s. 8.

(c) This section shall not apply to bingo games conducted at a fair or other exhibition conducted pursuant to Article 45 of Chapter 106 of the General Statutes. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, ss. 6, 8.)

§ 14-309.10. Operation of bingo.

The operation of bingo games shall be the direct responsibility of, and controlled by, a special committee selected by the governing body of the exempt organization in the manner provided by the rules of the exempt organization. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, s. 9.)

§ 14-309.11. Accounting and use of proceeds.

(a) All funds received in connection with a bingo game shall be placed in a separate bank account. No funds may be disbursed from this account except the exempt organization may expend proceeds for prizes, advertising, utilities, and the purchase of supplies and equipment used [in conducting the raffle and] in playing bingo, taxes and license fees related to bingo and the payment of compensation as authorized by G.S. 14-309.7(c) and for the purposes set forth below for the remaining proceeds. Such payments shall be made by consecutively numbered checks. Any proceeds available in the account after payment of the above expenses shall inure to the exempt organization to be used for religious, charitable, civic, scientific, testing, public safety, literary, or educational purposes or for purchasing, constructing, maintaining, operating or using equipment or land or a building or improvements thereto owned by and for the exempt organization and used for civic purposes or made available by the exempt organization for use by the general public from time to time, or to foster amateur sports competition, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, provided that no proceeds shall be used or expended for social functions for the members of the exempt organization.

(b) An audit of the account required by subsection (a) of this section shall be prepared annually for the period of January 1 through December 31 or otherwise as directed by the Department of Health and Human Services and shall be filed with the Department of Health and Human Services and the local law-enforcement agency at a time directed by the Department of Health and Human Services. The audit shall be prepared on a form approved by the Department of Health and Human Services and shall include the following information:

(1) The number of bingo games conducted or sponsored by the exempt organization;
(2) The location and date at which each bingo game was conducted and the prize awarded;
(3) The gross receipts of each bingo game;
(4) The cost or amount of any prize given at each bingo game;
(5) The amount paid in prizes at each session;
(6) The net return to the exempt organization; and
(7) The disbursements from the separate account and the purpose of those disbursements, including the date of each transaction and the name and address of each payee.

(c) Any person who shall willfully furnish, supply, or otherwise give false information in any audit or statement filed pursuant to this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(d) All books, papers, records and documents relevant to determining whether an organization has acted or is acting in compliance with this section shall be open to inspection by the law-enforcement agency or its designee, or the district attorney or his designee, or the Department of Health and Human Services at reasonable times and during reasonable hours. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, ss. 2, 3, 9; 1987, c. 866, s. 3; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1001, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 213; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a).)

Editor's Note. — The phrase "in conducting the raffle and" which appears in the second sentence of subsection (a) was not changed by Session Laws 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, which deleted the other references to raffles from this section. However, it would appear that the retention of this phrase may have been inadvertent.

Session Laws 1999-237, s. 11.18, provides that the Bingo Program in the Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Facility Services, and all functions, powers, duties, and obligations vested in the Department of Health and Human Services for the Bingo Program, are transferred to and vested in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety by a Type I transfer, as defined in G.S. 143A-6.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — With the exception of the provision relating to homeowner and property owner associations (now found in § 14-309.6(1)), §§ 14-289 and 14-290 and former § 14-292.1 (now replaced by § 14-309.5 et seq.) do not violate the due process or equal protection provisions of either the North Carolina Constitution or the United States Constitution. State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd, 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

The portion of former § 14-292.1(d) (see now subsection (a) of this section) requiring exempt organization facilities financed by bingo or raffle proceeds to be made available for use by the general public "from time to time" is simply insufficient to prevent the grant of a special gambling privilege to homeowner or property owner associations from violating the exclusive emoluments clause of the North Carolina Constitution. State v. McCleary, 65 N.C. App. 174, 308 S.E.2d 883 (1983), aff'd, 311 N.C. 397, 316 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

Applied in Animal Protection Soc'y of Durham, Inc. v. State, 95 N.C. App. 258, 382 S.E.2d 801 (1989).

§ 14-309.12. Violation is gambling.

A bingo game conducted otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Part is "gambling" within the meaning of G.S. 19-1 et seq., and proceedings against such bingo game may be instituted as provided for in Chapter 19 of the General Statutes. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, s. 2.)

§ 14-309.13. Public sessions.

Any exempt organization operating a bingo game which is open to persons other than members of the exempt organization, their spouses, and their children shall make such bingo game open to the general public. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, s. 4.)

§ 14-309.14. Beach bingo.

Nothing in this Article shall apply to "beach bingo" games except for the following subdivisions:

(1) No beach bingo game may offer a prize having a value greater than ten dollars ($10.00). Any person offering a greater than ten-dollar ($10.00) but less than fifty-dollar ($50.00) prize is guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Any person offering a prize of fifty dollars ($50.00) or greater is guilty of a Class I felony.

(2) No beach bingo game may be held in conjunction with any other lawful bingo game, with any "promotional bingo game", or with any offering of an opportunity to obtain anything of value, whether for valuable consideration or not. No beach bingo game may offer free bingo games as a promotion, for prizes or otherwise. Any person who violates this subsection is guilty of a Class I felony.

(3) G.S. 18B-308 shall apply to beach bingo games.

(4) Upon conviction under any provision of this section, such person shall not conduct a bingo game for a period of at least one year. (1983, c. 896, s. 3; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, s. 10; 1987, c. 701; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 826, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, ss. 214, 1232; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 539, s. 1232 redesignated former subdivisions (a) and (b) as (1) and (2), respectively, but left the subdivision designations (c) and (d) unchanged. Subdivisions (c) and (d) have been redesignated as subdivisions (3) and (4), respectively, at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

CASE NOTES

Violation Shown. — Requiring a player to have four or five bingos during the same sequence of calling numbers merely extends the single game and does not convert it into five individual games; thus, defendants violated this section by offering $40.00 and $50.00 prizes. State v. Crabtree, 126 N.C. App. 729, 487 S.E.2d 575 (1997).

§ 14-309.15. Raffles.

(a) It is lawful for any nonprofit organization or association, recognized by the Department of Revenue as tax-exempt pursuant to G.S. 105-130.11(a), to conduct raffles in accordance with this section. Any person who conducts a raffle in violation of any provision of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Upon conviction that person shall not conduct a raffle for a period of one year. It is lawful to participate in a raffle conducted pursuant to this section. It shall not constitute a violation of State law to advertise a raffle conducted in accordance with this section. A raffle conducted pursuant to this section is not "gambling".

(b) For purposes of this section "raffle" means a game in which the prize is won by random drawing of the name or number of one or more persons purchasing chances.

(c) Raffles shall be limited to two per nonprofit organization per year.

(d) The maximum cash prize that may be offered or paid for any one raffle is ten thousand dollars ($10,000) and if merchandise is used as a prize, and it is not redeemable for cash, the maximum fair market value of that prize may be fifty thousand dollars ($50,000). No real property may be offered as a prize in a raffle. The total cash prizes offered or paid by any nonprofit organization or association may not exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in any calendar year. The total fair market value of all prizes offered by any nonprofit organization or association, either in cash or in merchandise that is not redeemable for cash, may not exceed fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) in any calendar year.

(e) Raffles shall not be conducted in conjunction with bingo.

(f) As used in this subsection, "net proceeds of a raffle" means the receipts less the cost of prizes awarded. No less than ninety percent (90%) of the net proceeds of a raffle shall be used by the nonprofit organization or association for charitable, religious, educational, civic, or other nonprofit purposes. None of the net proceeds of the raffle may be used to pay any person to conduct the raffle, or to rent a building where the tickets are received or sold or the drawing is conducted. (1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1107, s. 11; 1993, c. 219, s. 1; c. 539, s. 215; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-10, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 219, which amended this section, in s. 2 provides that for purposes of the act, government entities within the State of North Carolina shall be considered nonprofit as defined in G.S. 105-130.11(a).

CASE NOTES

Obligation of One Conducting "Raffle." — By using a "raffle," with a car as the grand prize, as an inducement for people to buy tickets at a price of $100.00 each, defendant was obligated, by virtue of subsection (b) of this section, to ensure that (1) the designated prize would be given to a ticket holder, and (2) the method of selecting that ticket holder would be random. Keene Convenient Mart, Inc. v. SSS Band Backers, 109 N.C. App. 384, 427 S.E.2d 322 (1993).

Randomness. — Defendant, by putting the ticket of ticket purchaser, which had been inadvertently omitted from basket, in the basket out of which names were being drawn, after some of the names already had been drawn, changed the character of the event. The event lost its character of a random drawing and from that point forward constituted a slanted game of chance which did not comply the term "raffle" as defined in this section and, as such, was void as against public policy. Keene Convenient Mart, Inc. v. SSS Band Backers, 109 N.C. App. 384, 427 S.E.2d 322 (1993).

§§ 14-309.16 through 14-309.19: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Part 3. Greyhound Racing.

§ 14-309.20. Greyhound racing prohibited.

(a) No person shall hold, conduct, or operate any greyhound races for public exhibition in this State for monetary remuneration.

(b) No person shall transmit or receive interstate or intrastate simulcasting of greyhound races for commercial purposes in this State.

(c) Any person who violates this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1998-212, s. 17.16(d).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-212, s. 17.16(l), made this Part effective January 1, 1999, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date.

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 1.1 provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations Appropriations and Capital Improvement Appropriations Act of 1998'."

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 30.5 contains a severability clause.

Marathon Dances and Similar Endurance Contests.

§§ 14-310 through 14-312: Repealed by Session Laws 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 767, s. 30(13)-(15), effective October 1, 1994.

Article 39.

Protection of Minors.

§ 14-313. Youth access to tobacco products.

(a) Definitions. — The following definitions apply in this section:

(1) Distribute. — To sell, furnish, give, or provide tobacco products, including tobacco product samples, or cigarette wrapping papers to the ultimate consumer.

(2) Proof of age. — A drivers license or other photographic identification that includes the bearer's date of birth that purports to establish that the person is 18 years of age or older.

(3) Sample. — A tobacco product distributed to members of the general public at no cost for the purpose of promoting the product.

(4) Tobacco product. — Any product that contains tobacco and is intended for human consumption.

(b) Sale or distribution to persons under the age of 18 years. — If any person shall distribute, or aid, assist, or abet any other person in distributing tobacco products or cigarette wrapping papers to any person under the age of 18 years, or if any person shall purchase tobacco products or cigarette wrapping papers on behalf of a person, less than 18 years, the person shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor; provided, however, that it shall not be unlawful to distribute tobacco products or cigarette wrapping papers to an employee when required in the performance of the employee's duties. Retail distributors of tobacco products shall prominently display near the point of sale a sign in letters at least five-eighths of an inch high which states the following:

N.C. LAW STRICTLY PROHIBITS

THE PURCHASE OF TOBACCO PRODUCTS

BY PERSONS UNDER THE AGE OF 18.

PROOF OF AGE REQUIRED.

Failure to post the required sign shall be an infraction punishable by a fine of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) for the first offense and seventy-five dollars ($75.00) for each succeeding offense.

A person engaged in the sale of tobacco products shall demand proof of age from a prospective purchaser if the person has reasonable grounds to believe that the prospective purchaser is under 18 years of age. Failure to demand proof of age as required by this subsection is a Class 2 misdemeanor if in fact the prospective purchaser is under 18 years of age. Proof that the defendant demanded, was shown, and reasonably relied upon proof of age in the case of a retailer, or any other documentary or written evidence of age in the case of a nonretailer, or that the defendant relied on the electronic system established and operated by the Division of Motor Vehicles pursuant to G.S. 20-37.02, shall be a defense to any action brought under this subsection. Retail distributors of tobacco products shall train their sales employees in the requirements of this law.

(b1) Vending machines. — Tobacco products shall not be distributed in vending machines; provided, however, vending machines distributing tobacco products are permitted (i) in any establishment which is open only to persons 18 years of age and older; or (ii) in any establishment if the vending machine is under the continuous control of the owner or licensee of the premises or an employee thereof and can be operated only upon activation by the owner, licensee, or employee prior to each purchase and the vending machine is not accessible to the public when the establishment is closed. The owner, licensee, or employee shall demand proof of age from a prospective purchaser if the person has reasonable grounds to believe that the prospective purchaser is under 18 years of age. Failure to demand proof of age as required by this subsection is a Class 2 misdemeanor if in fact the prospective purchaser is under 18 years of age. Proof that the defendant demanded, was shown, and reasonably relied upon proof of age shall be a defense to any action brought under this subsection. Vending machines distributing tobacco products in establishments not meeting the above conditions shall be removed prior to December 1, 1997. Any person distributing tobacco products through vending machines in violation of this subsection shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(c) Purchase by persons under the age of 18 years. — If any person under the age of 18 years purchases or accepts receipt, or attempts to purchase or accept receipt, of tobacco products or cigarette wrapping papers, or presents or offers to any person any purported proof of age which is false, fraudulent, or not actually his or her own, for the purpose of purchasing or receiving any tobacco product or cigarette wrapping papers, the person shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(d) Send or assist person less than 18 years to purchase or receive tobacco product. — If any person shall send a person less than 18 years of age to purchase, acquire, receive, or attempt to purchase, acquire, or receive tobacco products or cigarette wrapping papers, or if any person shall aid or abet a person who is less than 18 years of age in purchasing, acquiring, or receiving or attempting to purchase, acquire, or receive tobacco products or cigarette wrapping papers, the person shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor; provided, however, persons under the age of 18 may be enlisted by police or local sheriffs' departments to test compliance if the testing is under the direct supervision of that law enforcement department and written parental consent is provided; provided further, that the Department of Health and Human Services shall have the authority, pursuant to a written plan prepared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services, to use persons under 18 years of age in annual, random, unannounced inspections, provided that prior written parental consent is given for the involvement of these persons and that the inspections are conducted for the sole purpose of preparing a scientifically and methodologically valid statistical study of the extent of success the State has achieved in reducing the availability of tobacco products to persons under the age of 18, and preparing any report to the extent required by section 1926 of the federal Public Health Service Act (42 USC § 300x-26).

(e) Statewide uniformity. — It is the intent of the General Assembly to prescribe this uniform system for the regulation of tobacco products to ensure the eligibility for and receipt of any federal funds or grants that the State now receives or may receive relating to the provisions of G.S. 14-313. To ensure uniformity, no political subdivisions, boards, or agencies of the State nor any county, city, municipality, municipal corporation, town, township, village, nor any department or agency thereof, may enact ordinances, rules or regulations concerning the sale, distribution, display or promotion of tobacco products or cigarette wrapping papers on or after September 1, 1995. This subsection does not apply to the regulation of vending machines, nor does it prohibit the Secretary of Revenue from adopting rules with respect to the administration of the tobacco products taxes levied under Article 2A of Chapter 105 of the General Statutes.

(f) Deferred prosecution. — Notwithstanding G.S. 15A-1341(a1), any person charged with a misdemeanor under this section shall be qualified for deferred prosecution pursuant to Article 82 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes provided the defendant has not previously been placed on probation for a violation of this section and so states under oath. (1891, c. 276; Rev., s. 3804; C.S., s. 4438; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1991, c. 628, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 216; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1995, c. 241, s. 1; 1997-434, ss. 1-6; 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a); 2001-461, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — This section was amended by Session Laws 1995, c. 241, s. 1, in the coded bill drafting format provided by § 120-20.1. The first paragraph of subsection (b) has been set out in the form above at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Session Laws 1995, c. 241, s. 2, provides that subsection (e), as enacted by that act, does not affect local ordinances adopted before September 1, 1995.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-461, s. 5, effective November 14, 2001, inserted "or that the defendant relied on the electronic system established and operated by the Division of Motor Vehicles pursuant to G.S. 20-37.02" in the next to last sentence of the second paragraph of subsection (b).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Applicable to State Training Schools. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James M. Paige, Office of Youth Development, 42 N.C.A.G. 203 (1973).

§ 14-314: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 31.

§ 14-315. Selling or giving weapons to minors.

(a) Sale of Weapons Other Than Handguns. — If a person sells, offers for sale, gives, or in any way transfers to a minor any pistol cartridge, brass knucks, bowie knife, dirk, shurikin, leaded cane, or slungshot, the person is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor and, in addition, shall forfeit the proceeds of any sale made in violation of this section.

(a1) Sale of Handguns. — If a person sells, offers for sale, gives, or in any way transfers to a minor any handgun as defined in G.S. 14-269.7, the person is guilty of a Class H felony and, in addition, shall forfeit the proceeds of any sale made in violation of this section. This section does not apply in any of the following circumstances:

(1) The handgun is lent to a minor for temporary use if the minor's possession of the handgun is lawful under G.S. 14-269.7 and G.S. 14-316 and is not otherwise unlawful.

(2) The handgun is transferred to an adult custodian pursuant to Chapter 33A of the General Statutes, and the minor does not take possession of the handgun except that the adult custodian may allow the minor temporary possession of the handgun in circumstances in which the minor's possession of the handgun is lawful under G.S. 14-269.7 and G.S. 14-316 and is not otherwise unlawful.

(3) The handgun is a devise or legacy and is distributed to a parent or guardian under G.S. 28A-22-7, and the minor does not take possession of the handgun except that the parent or guardian may allow the minor temporary possession of the handgun in circumstances in which the minor's possession of the handgun is lawful under G.S. 14-269.7 and G.S. 14-316 and is not otherwise unlawful.

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 597, s. 2.

(b1) Defense. — It shall be a defense to a violation of this section if all of the following conditions are met:

(1) The person shows that the minor produced an apparently valid permit to receive the weapon, if such a permit would be required under G.S. 14-402 or G.S. 14-409.1 for transfer of the weapon to an adult.

(2) The person reasonably believed that the minor was not a minor.

(3) The person either:

a. Shows that the minor produced a drivers license, a special identification card issued under G.S. 20-37.7, a military identification card, or a passport, showing the minor's age to be at least the required age for purchase and bearing a physical description of the person named on the card reasonably describing the minor; or

b. Produces evidence of other facts that reasonably indicated at the time of sale that the minor was at least the required age. (1893, c. 514; Rev., s. 3832; C.S., s. 4440; 1985, c. 199; 1993, c. 259, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 217; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 597, s. 2; 1996, 2nd Ex. Sess., c. 18, s. 20.13(b).)

Editor's Note. — Section 14-409.1, referred to in this section was repealed by Session Laws, 1995, c. 487, s. 4.

§ 14-315.1. Storage of firearms to protect minors.

(a) Any person who resides in the same premises as a minor, owns or possesses a firearm, and stores or leaves the firearm (i) in a condition that the firearm can be discharged and (ii) in a manner that the person knew or should have known that an unsupervised minor would be able to gain access to the firearm, is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor if a minor gains access to the firearm without the lawful permission of the minor's parents or a person having charge of the minor and the minor:

(1) Possesses it in violation of G.S. 14-269.2(b);

(2) Exhibits it in a public place in a careless, angry, or threatening manner;

(3) Causes personal injury or death with it not in self defense; or

(4) Uses it in the commission of a crime.

(b) Nothing in this section shall prohibit a person from carrying a firearm on his or her body, or placed in such close proximity that it can be used as easily and quickly as if carried on the body.

(c) This section shall not apply if the minor obtained the firearm as a result of an unlawful entry by any person.

(d) "Minor" as used in this section means a person under 18 years of age who is not emancipated. (1993, c. 558, s. 2; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 11.)

§ 14-315.2. Warning upon sale or transfer of firearm to protect minor.

(a) Upon the retail commercial sale or transfer of any firearm, the seller or transferor shall deliver a written copy of G.S. 14-315.1 to the purchaser or transferee.

(b) Any retail or wholesale store, shop, or sales outlet that sells firearms shall conspicuously post at each purchase counter the following warning in block letters not less than one inch in height the phrase: "IT IS UNLAWFUL TO STORE OR LEAVE A FIREARM THAT CAN BE DISCHARGED IN A MANNER THAT A REASONABLE PERSON SHOULD KNOW IS ACCESSIBLE TO A MINOR."

(c) A violation of subsection (a) or (b) of this section is a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1993, c. 558, s. 2; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 12.)

§ 14-316. Permitting young children to use dangerous firearms.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis, to knowingly permit his child under the age of 12 years to have the possession, custody or use in any manner whatever, any gun, pistol or other dangerous firearm, whether such weapon be loaded or unloaded, except when such child is under the supervision of the parent, guardian or person standing in loco parentis. It shall be unlawful for any other person to knowingly furnish such child any weapon enumerated herein. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(b) Air rifles, air pistols, and BB guns shall not be deemed "dangerous firearms" within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section except in the following counties: Anson, Caldwell, Caswell, Chowan, Cleveland, Cumberland, Durham, Forsyth, Gaston, Harnett, Haywood, Mecklenburg, Stanly, Stokes, Surry, Union, Vance. (1913, c. 32; C.S., s. 4441; 1965, c. 813; 1971, c. 309; 1993, c. 539, s. 218; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Store was in full compliance with this section when it sold a 12-year-old a BB gun. Rosser ex rel. Brown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 947 F. Supp. 903 (E.D.N.C. 1996).

§ 14-316.1. Contributing to delinquency and neglect by parents and others.

Any person who is at least 16 years old who knowingly or willfully causes, encourages, or aids any juvenile within the jurisdiction of the court to be in a place or condition, or to commit an act whereby the juvenile could be adjudicated delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected as defined by G.S. 7B-101 and G.S. 7B-1501 shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

It is not necessary for the district court exercising juvenile jurisdiction to make an adjudication that any juvenile is delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected in order to prosecute a parent or any person, including an employee of the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention under this section. An adjudication that a juvenile is delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected shall not preclude a subsequent prosecution of a parent or any other person including an employee of the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, who contributes to the delinquent, undisciplined, abused, or neglected condition of any juvenile. (1919, c. 97, s. 19; C.S., s. 5057; 1959, c. 1284; 1969, c. 911, s. 4; 1971, c. 1180, s. 5; 1979, c. 692; 1983, c. 175, ss. 8, 10; c. 720, s. 4; 1993, c. 539, s. 219; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a); 1998-202, s. 4(b); 2000-137, s. 4.(c).)

Editor's Note. — This section formerly appeared as § 110-39. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 911, s. 4.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-137, s. 4.(c), effective July 20, 2000, substituted "Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention" for "Office of Juvenile Justice" twice in the second paragraph.

CASE NOTES

This section is not unconstitutional for vagueness. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

The words used in this section are ordinary words in common usage, and adequate warning is provided those inclined to violate them. Simply stated, any person who knowingly does any act to produce, promote or contribute to any condition of delinquency of a child is in violation of the section. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

Second-Degree Rape Is a Separate and Distinct Crime. — Even though the crimes of second-degree rape and contributing to the delinquency of a minor are related in character and grow out of the same transaction, they are legally distinct and separate crimes. The prosecution for one is not a bar to a prosecution for the other. State v. Cronan, 100 N.C. App. 641, 397 S.E.2d 762 (1990), discretionary review denied and appeal dismissed, 328 N.C. 573, 403 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

It is clear from the statutory definition of the two crimes described in this section and § 14-27.3 that all of the essential elements of the offense of second-degree rape are not essential to the offense of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. State v. Cronan, 100 N.C. App. 641, 397 S.E.2d 762 (1990), discretionary review denied and appeal dismissed, 328 N.C. 573, 403 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

Contributing to Delinquency of a Minor Not Lesser Included Offense of Second-Degree Rape. — The act of sexual intercourse is not inherent to the crime of contributing to the delinquency of a minor under this section. Therefore, this offense is not a lesser included offense of second-degree rape pursuant to § 14-27.3. State v. Cronan, 100 N.C. App. 641, 397 S.E.2d 762 (1990), discretionary review denied and appeal dismissed, 328 N.C. 573, 403 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

Double Jeopardy Not Shown. — At trial on charges of second-degree rape, the defendant was furnished with an opportunity to plead and offer evidence to sustain his plea of former jeopardy by proving that the sexual act at issue, not the alcohol-related instances were the basis of his earlier plea of guilty to contributing to the delinquency of a minor, based upon the same factual circumstances. This, however, defendant failed to do. Thus, defendant's assertion that the factual basis for the acceptance of his guilty plea was solely based upon the sexual act was too speculative and wholly insufficient to establish his burden of proof. State v. Cronan, 100 N.C. App. 641, 397 S.E.2d 762 (1990), discretionary review denied and appeal dismissed, 328 N.C. 573, 403 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

Proof of Delinquency Not Required. — Statutes such as this section are preventive as well as punitive in nature and it is not necessary to allege or prove that the child in fact is or has become a delinquent. State v. Worley, 13 N.C. App. 198, 185 S.E.2d 270 (1971).

This section does not require that the creation of a state of delinquency be accomplished; the legislative intent was to protect children from wrongful influence by adults, and in protection of minors the State should not await the result of the wrong perpetrated before punishing the offender. State v. Worley, 13 N.C. App. 198, 185 S.E.2d 270 (1971).

Conviction of Minor Not Required. — It is not necessary that a minor be convicted of the charges contained in a juvenile petition before a person may be prosecuted under this section for contributing to the delinquency of the minor. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

Duty of Parents to Protect and Provide for Minor Children. — Parents in this State have an affirmative legal duty to protect and provide for their minor children. State v. Walden, 306 N.C. 466, 293 S.E.2d 780 (1982).

Imposition of Duty to Prevent Harm to Child Is Reasonable. — To require a parent as a matter of law to take affirmative action to prevent harm to his or her child or be held criminally liable imposes a reasonable duty upon the parent; this duty is and has always been inherent in the duty of parents to provide for the safety and welfare of their children, which duty has long been recognized by the common law and by statute. State v. Walden, 306 N.C. 466, 293 S.E.2d 780 (1982).

And Requires Reasonable Steps to Prevent Harm. — While parents do not have the legal duty to place themselves in danger of death or great bodily harm in coming to the aid of their children, parents do have the duty to take every step reasonably possible under the circumstances of a given situation to prevent harm to their children. What is reasonable in any given case will be a question for the jury after proper instructions from the trial court. State v. Walden, 306 N.C. 466, 293 S.E.2d 780 (1982).

Failure to Protect Child from Assault. — A mother may be found guilty of assault on a theory of aiding and abetting solely on the basis that she was present when her child was assaulted but failed to take reasonable steps to prevent the assault. State v. Walden, 306 N.C. 466, 293 S.E.2d 780 (1982).

The failure of a parent who is present to take all steps reasonably possible to protect the parent's child from an attack by another person constitutes an act of omission by the parent showing the parent's consent and contribution to the crime being committed. State v. Walden, 306 N.C. 466, 293 S.E.2d 780 (1982).

Trial court properly allowed the jury to consider a verdict of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, upon a theory of aiding and abetting, solely on the ground that defendant mother was present when her child was brutally beaten by third party but failed to take all steps reasonable to prevent the attack or otherwise protect the child from injury. State v. Walden, 306 N.C. 466, 293 S.E.2d 780 (1982).

Neglect Resulting in Death of Child As Involuntary Manslaughter. — Where evidence was sufficient to show that the child's death resulted from the culpably negligent omission of defendants to perform their legal duty with respect to the child, the trial court did not err in overruling defendants' motions for nonsuit as to involuntary manslaughter. State v. Mason, 18 N.C. App. 433, 197 S.E.2d 79, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 669, 197 S.E.2d 878 (1973).

Defendant was not denied his right against double jeopardy by his conviction in superior court of child neglect in violation of this section after a judgment of nonsuit was entered in a prosecution of defendant in the district court for child abuse in violation of § 14-318.2. State v. Hunter, 48 N.C. App. 656, 270 S.E.2d 120 (1980).

Applied in State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980); State v. Harper, 72 N.C. App. 471, 325 S.E.2d 30 (1985).

§ 14-317. Permitting minors to enter barrooms or billiard rooms.

If the manager or owner of any barroom, wherein beer, wine, or any alcoholic beverages are sold or consumed, or billiard room shall knowingly allow any minor under 18 years of age to enter or remain in such barroom or billiard room, where before such minor under 18 years of age enters or remains in such barroom or billiard room, the manager or owner thereof has been notified in writing by the parents or guardian of such minor under 18 years of age not to allow him to enter or remain in such barroom or billiard room, he shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1897, c. 278; Rev., s. 3729; C.S., s. 4442; 1967, c. 1089; 1993, c. 539, s. 220; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-318. Exposing children to fire.

If any person shall leave any child under the age of eight years locked or otherwise confined in any dwelling, building or enclosure, and go away from such dwelling, building or enclosure without leaving some person of the age of discretion in charge of the same, so as to expose the child to danger by fire, the person so offending shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1893, c. 12; Rev., s. 3795; C.S., s. 4443; 1983, c. 175, s. 9, 10; c. 720, s. 4; 1993, c. 539, s. 221; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-318.1. Discarding or abandoning iceboxes, etc.; precautions required.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to discard, abandon, leave or allow to remain in any place any icebox, refrigerator or other container, device or equipment of any kind with an interior storage area of more than one and one-half cubic feet of clear space which is airtight, without first removing the door or doors or hinges from such icebox, refrigerator, container, device or equipment. This section shall not apply to any icebox, refrigerator, container, device or equipment which is being used for the purpose for which it was originally designed, or is being used for display purposes by any retail or wholesale merchant, or is crated, strapped or locked to such an extent that it is impossible for a child to obtain access to any airtight compartment thereof. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1955, c. 305; 1993, c. 539, s. 222; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-318.2. Child abuse a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(a) Any parent of a child less than 16 years of age, or any other person providing care to or supervision of such child, who inflicts physical injury, or who allows physical injury to be inflicted, or who creates or allows to be created a substantial risk of physical injury, upon or to such child by other than accidental means is guilty of the Class 1 misdemeanor of child abuse.

(b) The Class 1 misdemeanor of child abuse is an offense additional to other civil and criminal provisions and is not intended to repeal or preclude any other sanctions or remedies.

(c) A parent who abandons an infant less than seven days of age pursuant to G.S. 14-322.3 shall not be prosecuted under this section for any acts or omissions related to the care of that infant. (1965, c. 472, s. 1; 1971, c. 710, s. 6; 1993, c. 539, s. 223; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 13; c. 24, s. 14(c); 2001-291, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-291, s. 6, provides: "The Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Public Health, shall develop recommendations for a plan to inform the public as to the provisions of this act. The plan shall contain information on responsible parenting in addition to information about the provisions of the act. The plans shall be targeted at adolescents and young adults, and shall be developed in consultation with law enforcement officials, medical professionals, and representatives of the Department of Public Instruction. Not later than April 1, 2002, the Department of Health and Human Services shall report its recommendations, and the projected cost for implementing its recommendations, to the chairpersons of the House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittee on Health and Human Services, the Senate Appropriations Committee on Health and Human Services, the Senate Appropriations Committee on Justice and Public Safety, and the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Justice and Public Safety."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-291, s. 4, effective July 19, 2001, and applicable to acts committed on or after that date, added subsection (c).

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Nature and Proof of Offense.

I. IN GENERAL.

Standing to Challenge Constitutionality. — Where defendant's case was submitted to the jury only on the issue of whether defendant actually inflicted her child's injuries, defendant could not complain of alleged unconstitutional vagueness in the provision of this section making it a criminal offense to create or allow to be created a substantial risk of physical injury upon a child since provisions of this section are severable. State v. Fredell, 17 N.C. App. 205, 193 S.E.2d 587 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 242, 195 S.E.2d 300 (1973).

Child Abuse Is Not a Lesser Included Offense. — The General Assembly did not intend child abuse to be a lesser included offense, or to merge with any other offense. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Neither § 14-32(b) nor this section proscribes a crime which is a lesser included offense of the other, and conviction or acquittal of one will not support a plea of former jeopardy against a charge for violation of the other. State v. Walden, 306 N.C. 466, 293 S.E.2d 780 (1982).

Charges of child abuse and child neglect were not merged into a charge of second-degree murder. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

Conviction Under § 14-316.1 After Nonsuit Under This Section. — Defendant was not denied his right against double jeopardy by his conviction in superior court of child neglect in violation of § 14-316.1 after a judgment of nonsuit was entered in a prosecution of defendant in the district court for child abuse in violation of this section. State v. Hunter, 48 N.C. App. 656, 270 S.E.2d 120 (1980).

Parents have the duty to take every step reasonably possible under the circumstances to prevent harm to their children. Failure to perform this duty is negligence. Coleman v. Cooper, 89 N.C. App. 188, 366 S.E.2d 2, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 834, 371 S.E.2d 275 (1988).

Court's Duty on Review of Denial of Motion to Dismiss. — The Court of Appeals improperly considered exculpatory evidence presented by the defendant in reversing the trial court's denial of defendant's motions to dismiss where the State presented substantial evidence of involuntary manslaughter and felonious or misdemeanor child abuse sufficient to survive defendant's motions to dismiss. State v. Fritsch, 351 N.C. 373, 526 S.E.2d 451 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 890, 121 S. Ct. 213, 148 L. Ed. 2d 150 (2000).

Sentencing. — The aggravating factor that the defendant took advantage of a position of trust or confidence cannot be used to increase a sentence beyond the presumptive sentence for involuntary manslaughter when the manslaughter conviction could have been based on the predicate crime of misdemeanor child abuse, which has as an element that the defendant was a parent of the victim, or by a finding that defendant committed a criminally negligent act. State v. Darby, 102 N.C. App. 297, 401 S.E.2d 791 (1991).

Cited in State v. Heiser, 36 N.C. App. 358, 244 S.E.2d 170 (1978); State v. Ausley, 78 N.C. App. 791, 338 S.E.2d 547 (1986); State v. Zuniga, 320 N.C. 233, 357 S.E.2d 898 (1987); Dobson v. Harris, 352 N.C. 77, 530 S.E.2d 829 (2000).

II. NATURE AND PROOF OF OFFENSE.

This section provides for three separate offenses: If the parent by other than accidental means (1) inflicts physical injury upon the child, (2) allows physical injury to be inflicted upon the child, or (3) creates or allows to be created a substantial risk of physical injury. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980); State v. Byrd, 309 N.C. 132, 305 S.E.2d 724 (1983); State v. Woods, 70 N.C. App. 584, 321 S.E.2d 4 (1984).

By the enactment of this section the General Assembly intended to provide for three separate and independent offenses, none dependent on the other; therefore, the first provision of this section, making infliction of injury upon the child by the parent himself a punishable offense, is divisible and separable from the remainder of the statute. State v. Fredell, 283 N.C. 242, 195 S.E.2d 300 (1973).

And the State Needs to Prove Only One of the Three. — To convict a parent of child abuse under this section it is necessary that the State prove only one of three separate and distinct acts or courses of conduct; that the parent, other than by accidental means, (1) inflicted physical injury upon the child, (2) allowed physical injury to be inflicted upon the child, or (3) created or allowed to be created a substantial risk of physical injury upon the child. State v. Fredell, 17 N.C. App. 205, 193 S.E.2d 587 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 242, 195 S.E.2d 300 (1973); State v. Armistead, 54 N.C. App. 358, 283 S.E.2d 162 (1981).

Injuries Must Be Inflicted Other Than by Accidental Means. — An essential element of proof under this section is a showing that the injuries suffered by the child were inflicted by other than accidental means. State v. Byrd, 309 N.C. 132, 305 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Childress, 321 N.C. 231, 362 S.E.2d 263 (1987).

Intentional Act Is Required. — The word "inflict" means to lay on or impose, and is aptly used in connection with punishment. Thus, to violate this section, an intentional, rather than accidental, act causing physical injury is required; but an intent to injure is not required. The phrase "accidental means" relates to unintentional acts. State v. Young, 67 N.C. App. 139, 312 S.E.2d 665 (1984).

Intent to Punish as Sufficient Intent. — Where child is injured because defendant intentionally put her in hot water, if one of defendant's purposes in doing so was to punish the child, defendant would be guilty of misdemeanor child abuse, even though she may not have intended to cause an injury. State v. Young, 67 N.C. App. 139, 312 S.E.2d 665 (1984).

A violation of this section proximately resulting in death would support a conviction of involuntary manslaughter. State v. Byrd, 309 N.C. 132, 305 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Childress, 321 N.C. 231, 362 S.E.2d 263 (1987).

The "battered child syndrome" is a medicolegal term which describes the diagnosis of a medical expert based on scientific studies that when a child suffers certain types of continuing injuries that the injuries were not caused by accidental means. Upon such a finding, it is logical to presume that someone "caring" for the child was responsible for the injuries. State v. Byrd, 309 N.C. 132, 305 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Childress, 321 N.C. 231, 362 S.E.2d 263 (1987).

For landmark case in North Carolina on the "battered child syndrome," see State v. Wilkerson, 295 N.C. 559, 247 S.E.2d 905 (1978); State v. Byrd, 309 N.C. 132, 305 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Childress, 321 N.C. 231, 362 S.E.2d 263 (1987).

Evidence of Separate Incident of Abuse Held Not Prejudicial. — Although in a prosecution for child abuse it was error to allow introduction of testimony concerning a separate incident in which defendant struck his child, the error was not prejudicial where there was ample uncontradicted evidence that defendant intentionally inflicted some physical injury on his child, and defendant failed to meet the burden of proving a reasonable probability that a different result would have occurred had the court not admitted the testimony. State v. Armistead, 54 N.C. App. 358, 283 S.E.2d 162 (1981).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Where alleged victim of child abuse had his face burned while he was under defendant's supervision and no other adults were present, competent medical evidence at trial was that victim's facial burn looked like the child's face had been immersed in a bowl or cup of liquid, and the medical evidence included an opinion that victim suffered from battered child syndrome and an opinion that he had been abused, the evidence was sufficient to take the charge to the jury. State v. Church, 99 N.C. App. 647, 394 S.E.2d 468 (1990).

§ 14-318.3: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 710, s. 7.

§ 14-318.4. Child abuse a felony.

(a) A parent or any other person providing care to or supervision of a child less than 16 years of age who intentionally inflicts any serious physical injury upon or to the child or who intentionally commits an assault upon the child which results in any serious physical injury to the child is guilty of a Class E felony, except as otherwise provided in subsection (a3) of this section.

(a1) Any parent of a child less than 16 years of age, or any other person providing care to or supervision of the child, who commits, permits, or encourages any act of prostitution with or by the juvenile is guilty of child abuse and shall be punished as a Class E felon.

(a2) Any parent or legal guardian of a child less than 16 years of age who commits or allows the commission of any sexual act upon a juvenile is guilty of a Class E felony.

(a3) A parent or any other person providing care to or supervision of a child less than 16 years of age who intentionally inflicts any serious bodily injury to the child or who intentionally commits an assault upon the child which results in any serious bodily injury to the child, or which results in permanent or protracted loss or impairment of any mental or emotional function of the child, is guilty of a Class C felony. "Serious bodily injury" is defined as bodily injury that creates a substantial risk of death, or that causes serious permanent disfigurement, coma, a permanent or protracted condition that causes extreme pain, or permanent or protracted loss or impairment of the function of any bodily member or organ, or that results in prolonged hospitalization.

(b) The felony of child abuse is an offense additional to other civil and criminal provisions and is not intended to repeal or preclude any other sanctions or remedies.

(c) Abandonment of an infant less than seven days of age pursuant to G.S. 14-322.3 may be treated as a mitigating factor in sentencing for a conviction under this section involving that infant. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1999-451, s. 1; 2001-291, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-291, s. 6, provides: "The Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Public Health, shall develop recommendations for a plan to inform the public as to the provisions of this act. The plan shall contain information on responsible parenting in addition to information about the provisions of the act. The plans shall be targeted at adolescents and young adults, and shall be developed in consultation with law enforcement officials, medical professionals, and representatives of the Department of Public Instruction. Not later than April 1, 2002, the Department of Health and Human Services shall report its recommendations, and the projected cost for implementing its recommendations, to the chairpersons of the House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittee on Health and Human Services, the Senate Appropriations Committee on Health and Human Services, the Senate Appropriations Committee on Justice and Public Safety, and the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Justice and Public Safety."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-291, s. 5, effective July 19, 2001, and applicable to acts committed on or after that date, added subsection (c).

CASE NOTES

Definition. — Felony child abuse is the intentional infliction of serious injuries by a caretaker to a child. State v. Phillips, 328 N.C. 1, 399 S.E.2d 293, cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1208, 111 S. Ct. 2804, 115 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1991).

A violation of this section is a crime of moral turpitude, and where the complaint indicated that defendant had accused the plaintiff of violating this section, the plaintiff alleged slander per se and presented evidence sufficient to withstand defendant's motion for summary judgment. Dobson v. Harris, 134 N.C. App. 573, 521 S.E.2d 710 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 187, 541 S.E.2d 728 (1999).

Inference Raised by "Battered Child Syndrome." — A finding that the alleged victim suffered from the "battered child syndrome" — a medicolegal term describing the diagnosis of a medical expert, based on scientific studies, that when a child suffers certain type of continuing injuries, the injuries were not caused by accidental means — raises the inference that the person supervising her intentionally inflicted the injuries suffered by the child. State v. Campbell, 75 N.C. App. 266, 330 S.E.2d 502 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 316 N.C. 168, 340 S.E.2d 474 (1986).

What Intent Is Required Under Subsection (a). — Under subsection (a) of this section, the element of intent is sufficiently established if a defendant intentionally inflicts injury that proves to be serious on a child of less than 16 years of age in his care. He need not specifically intend that the injury be serious. State v. Campbell, 316 N.C. 168, 340 S.E.2d 474 (1986).

Evidence Sufficient to Show Intent. — Evidence was sufficient to show that defendant intentionally inflicted injury on two-year-old that proved to be serious, as the nature and extent of burns raised the inference that someone other than the child herself intentionally held the child's hands under hot water for a period of 10 to 15 seconds and the fact that defendant alone was with the child at the time she was injured raised an inference that defendant held the child's hands under water. State v. Campbell, 316 N.C. 168, 340 S.E.2d 474 (1986).

Age as Aggravating Factor in Crime Where Age Is Already an Element. — Where mother/defendant was accused of shaking her three-week old infant to death, the trial court did not err in finding as an aggravating factor, under § 15A-1340.16(d)(11), that the victim was of a very young age, even though the victim's age had already been used as an element of the crime under subsection (a) of this section. State v. Burgess, 134 N.C. App. 632, 518 S.E.2d 209 (1999).

Evidence held sufficient to find that defendant intentionally inflicted injury on two year old child who suffered serious immersion burns on her hands, resulting in permanent disfigurement, substantial impairment of the function of her hands, and substantial impairment of her physical health, in violation of this section. State v. Campbell, 316 N.C. 168, 340 S.E.2d 474 (1986).

The evidence was sufficient for a conviction under this section where the child suffered numerous, severe injuries which were inflicted on various occasions, including burns, head trauma, fractures to the leg, arm and ribs, facial bruising, and puncture marks, where the defendant was laughing and talking with co-defendant outside of the emergency room and even appeared to doze when the doctor informed her of the child's condition, and where the defendant's statements exonerated every other member of the household. The jury could also have found defendant guilty under a theory of aiding and abetting because the evidence indicated that she was present when the child was injured by the co-defendant who plead guilty. State v. Noffsinger, 137 N.C. App 418, 528 S.E.2d 605 (2000).

Substantial evidence supported the conclusion that the defendant committed assault, in violation of this section, where defendant was the parent of the victim, was providing care to him, and he was under sixteen years of age at the time of his death. Defendant admitted that she shook him and threw him down, and as a result, seriously injured him; and had assaulted the victim on occasions prior to the assault which led to his death. State v. Krider, 138 N.C. App. 37, 530 S.E.2d 569 (2000).

Inconsistency Between Indictment and Proof. — Dismissal of a felonious child abuse prosecution was not required, where indictment charged the defendant intentionally inflicted serious injury on the victim that resulted in a subdural hematoma, but evidence showed that defendant inflicted an epidural hematoma and subdural hematoma at different times, because the indictment appropriately charged the elements of the crime, and the reference to the subdural hematoma was mere surplusage. State v. Qualls, 130 N.C. App. 1, 502 S.E.2d 31 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 56, 510 S.E.2d 376 (1999).

Trial judge's instruction to jury properly defined "serious physical injury" as "such physical injury as causes great pain and suffering." State v. Phillips, 328 N.C. 1, 399 S.E.2d 293, cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1208, 111 S. Ct. 2804, 115 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1991).

Felony child abuse is not a lesser included offense of murder; it requires proof of facts not required for murder and it addresses a distinct evil, the serious physical abuse of children by parents or other persons providing care to children. State v. Elliott, 344 N.C. 242, 475 S.E.2d 202 (1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1106, 117 S. Ct. 1111, 137 L. Ed. 2d 312 (1997).

Felony Murder Conviction Upheld. — The court rejected the defendant's ex post facto objections and upheld the defendant's conviction, under § 14-17, of murder while committing felonious child abuse, in violation of this section, with the use of her hands as a deadly weapon although this theory had not, at the time of the victim's death, been used to support such a first degree felony murder conviction. State v. Krider, 138 N.C. App. 37, 530 S.E.2d 569 (2000).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Where the medical evidence in a child abuse trial was that second-degree burns, which cause a layer of skin to peel, (1) are very painful, (2) if not treated, cause permanent disfigurement, and (3) if over a joint, the scars left by such burns permanently impede movement of the joint, the trial court did not err in refusing to dismiss the charge of felonious child abuse for lack of proof of serious physical injury. State v. Church, 99 N.C. App. 647, 394 S.E.2d 468 (1990).

§ 14-320.1. Transporting child outside the State with intent to violate custody order.

When any federal court or state court in the United States shall have awarded custody of a child under the age of 16 years, it shall be a felony for any person with the intent to violate the court order to take or transport, or cause to be taken or transported, any such child from any point within this State to any point outside the limits of this State or to keep any such child outside the limits of this State. Such crime shall be punishable as a Class I felony. Provided that keeping a child outside the limits of the State in violation of a court order for a period in excess of 72 hours shall be prima facie evidence that the person charged intended to violate the order at the time of taking. Article 40.

Protection of the Family.

§ 14-322. Abandonment and failure to support spouse and children.

(a) For purposes of this Article:

(1) "Supporting spouse" means a spouse, whether husband or wife, upon whom the other spouse is actually substantially dependent or from whom such other spouse is substantially in need of maintenance and support.

(2) "Dependent spouse" means a spouse, whether husband or wife, who is actually substantially dependent upon the other spouse for his or her maintenance and support or is substantially in need of maintenance and support from the other spouse.

(b) Any supporting spouse who shall willfully abandon a dependent spouse without providing that spouse with adequate support shall be guilty of a Class 1 or 2 misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished according to subsection (f).

(c) Any supporting spouse who, while living with a dependent spouse, shall willfully neglect to provide adequate support for that dependent spouse shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished according to subsection (f).

(d) Any parent who shall willfully neglect or refuse to provide adequate support for that parent's child, whether natural or adopted, and whether or not the parent abandons the child, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished according to subsection (f). Willful neglect or refusal to provide adequate support of a child shall constitute a continuing offense and shall not be barred by any statute of limitations until the youngest living child of the parent shall reach the age of 18 years.

(e) Upon conviction for an offense under this section, the court may make such order as will best provide for the support, as far as may be necessary, of the abandoned spouse or child, or both, from the property or labor of the defendant. If the court requires the payment of child support, the amount of the payments shall be determined as provided in G.S. 50-13.4(c). For child support orders initially entered on or after January 1, 1994, the immediate income withholding provisions of G.S. 110-136.5(c1) shall apply.

(f) A first offense under this section is a Class 2 misdemeanor. A second or subsequent offense is a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1868-9, c. 209, s. 1; 1873-4, c. 176, s. 10; 1879, c. 92; Code, s. 970; Rev., s. 3355; C.S., s. 4447; 1925, c. 290; 1949, c. 810; 1957, c. 369; 1969, c. 1045, s. 1; 1981, c. 683, s. 1; 1989, c. 529, s. 4; 1993, c. 517, s. 3; c. 539, ss. 225, 226; 1994, Ex. CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Nonsupport of Spouse.
III. Nonsupport of Children.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The duty to provide support is not a debt in the legal sense of the word, but an obligation imposed by law, and penal sanctions are provided by this section for its willful neglect or abandonment. Ritchie v. White, 225 N.C. 450, 35 S.E.2d 414 (1945).

This section must be strictly construed. State v. Gardner, 219 N.C. 331, 13 S.E.2d 529 (1941); State v. Carson, 228 N.C. 151, 44 S.E.2d 721 (1947).

The district court has exclusive original jurisdiction of misdemeanors, including action to determine liability of persons for the support of dependents in any criminal proceeding. Cline v. Cline, 6 N.C. App. 523, 170 S.E.2d 645 (1969).

The constructive domicile of the wife is that of her husband, and where he has resided in another state and has left her there, and where for business or other reasonable purposes he has come to this State and made his domicile here, and she has followed him and he has then abandoned her and ceased to contribute to her support and that of his child born to them in lawful wedlock, the abandonment occurs in this State and is within the jurisdiction of the courts of this State and subject to the provisions of the State statute making it a misdemeanor. State v. Sneed, 197 N.C. 668, 150 S.E. 197 (1929).

Plea in Abatement After Plea of Not Guilty. — Where the defendant had been convicted of abandoning his wife and child and failing to provide an adequate support for them under the provisions of this section, his plea in abatement came too late after his plea of not guilty. State v. Hooker, 186 N.C. 761, 120 S.E. 449 (1923).

Order of the Judge Providing for Support. — It is within the discretion of the trial judge to provide for the support of the wife and the minor children of the marriage from the property or labor of the husband upon his conviction of willfully abandoning them, and an order that he pay a certain sum of money into the clerk's office monthly for this purpose, and secure compliance therewith by executing a bond in the sum of $1,000 comes within the provisions of the statute. State v. Vickers, 196 N.C. 239, 145 S.E. 175 (1928).

Where a husband has been convicted of abandoning his wife and minor children, the order of the judge providing for their support should be definite in providing for the contingencies that may arise, such as the coming of age of the children, etc., and should state what part thereof is for the support of the wife and what part is for the support of the children; and an order requiring the defendant to pay a certain sum monthly into the office of the clerk of the superior court, under a bond of the defendant to secure compliance, without further provisions, will be remanded so that a more definite order be given in the judgment of the lower court. State v. Vickers, 196 N.C. 239, 145 S.E. 175 (1928).

Application of Collateral Estoppel in Subsequent Civil Action. — A conviction under this section necessitates a finding that defendant is the father of the minor children involved. Thus, a criminal conviction under this section for the willful neglect of and refusal to support his minor children estops defendant from relitigating the issue of paternity in a subsequent civil action against him for reimbursement of public assistance pay for the support of his children and an order to provide continued support. The doctrine of collateral estoppel bars defendant from relitigating the paternity issue. State ex rel. New Bern Child Support Agency v. Lewis, 311 N.C. 727, 319 S.E.2d 145 (1984).

II. NONSUPPORT OF SPOUSE.

Abandonment under § 50-7(1) is not synonymous with the criminal offense defined in this section. Richardson v. Richardson, 268 N.C. 538, 151 S.E.2d 12 (1966).

There is a distinction between criminal abandonment and the matrimonial offense of desertion. Peoples v. Peoples, 10 N.C. App. 402, 179 S.E.2d 138 (1971).

Indictment. — An indictment against a husband for abandoning his wife must aver his failure to support her. State v. May, 132 N.C. 1020, 43 S.E. 819 (1903).

Abandonment and Failure to Support Must Be Willful. — By express language the abandonment and failure to support must be willful to create criminal offenses. State v. Westmoreland, 255 N.C. 725, 122 S.E.2d 702 (1961).

Willful Abandonment May Signify Whether Failure to Support Was Willful. — Under certain circumstances the willful abandonment of a wife by a husband may be a significant factor in determining whether his failure to provide adequate support was willful, as when he leaves and goes to a new community where there is no prospect of equally satisfactory employment. State v. Lucas, 242 N.C. 84, 86 S.E.2d 770 (1955).

An offer of a home when not made in good faith, and when refused, is equivalent to abandonment by the husband. State v. Smith, 164 N.C. 475, 79 S.E. 979 (1913).

Separation by Consent. — Where the wife has consented to a separation from her husband, his leaving her is not an abandonment within the meaning of this section. State v. Smith, 164 N.C. 475, 79 S.E. 979 (1913).

Where consent to separation is induced by the misconduct of one spouse, a charge of voluntary abandonment may still be maintained. State v. Talbot, 123 N.C. App. 698, 474 S.E.2d 143 (1996).

Institution of bastardy proceedings prior to birth of child is insufficient to establish such abandonment as is contemplated by this section. In re Jane Doe, 231 N.C. 1, 56 S.E.2d 8 (1949).

Proof of Adultery as Justification. — While ordinarily the husband may not withdraw his support from his wife and children, and compel her to leave him without violating this section, it is one of the exceptions to the rule under which the husband may prove justification, when she has committed adultery with another man, and an instruction which deprives the husband of this defense is reversible error. State v. Johnson, 194 N.C. 378, 139 S.E. 697 (1927).

Where a wife is guilty of adultery, her husband is not liable to prosecution for abandonment. State v. Hopkins, 130 N.C. 647, 40 S.E. 973 (1902).

Upon the trial of the husband for abandonment, under this section, the wife's unchastity is a defense, which he may put in issue by cross-examination or otherwise, with the burden remaining on the State to show his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Falkner, 182 N.C. 793, 108 S.E. 756 (1921).

Statute of Limitations. — Where the abandonment consisted in the failure to remit her a certain sum of money periodically to a certain county in which his conduct had forced her to reside, the failure to support occurred at the time he failed to perform his agreement, and the statute will begin to run from that date. State v. Hooker, 186 N.C. 761, 120 S.E. 449 (1923).

Same — Renewal of Cohabitation. — Where a man willfully abandons his wife, sends remittances for her support, returns and lives with her as man and wife for a while, and again abandons her, his willfully leaving her the second time without providing an adequate support for her is a fresh abandonment and failure to support, and an indictment found within two years therefrom is not barred by the statute of limitations. State v. Beam, 181 N.C. 597, 107 S.E. 429 (1921).

Venue. — When the husband has agreed to a separation from his wife upon consideration of his remitting periodically a certain sum of money to a certain county in which she was to reside, and he fails to perform, the venue of an action under the provisions of this section is in that county. State v. Hooker, 186 N.C. 761, 120 S.E. 449 (1923).

Same — Where Husband Is Nonresident. — Where a man willfully abandons his wife in this State and fails to send her funds for an adequate support, when he was residing in another state, he cannot direct her choice of residence and is indictable under this section in the county of her residence. State v. Beam, 181 N.C. 597, 107 S.E. 429 (1921).

Instruction Properly Refused. — Plaintiff's contention that the court should have charged that the failure to provide support under this section must have been willful in order to constitute an abandonment was untenable. Hyder v. Hyder, 215 N.C. 239, 1 S.E.2d 540 (1939).

Defective Instructions. — Where, in a prosecution for abandonment and willful failure to support, the evidence tended to show that the husband was employed and had earnings, and had in some measure made provision for the support of the wife, the adequacy of such support and the willfulness of the defendant's failure to do more were the crucial questions to be submitted to the jury, and an instruction to the effect that defendant's earning capacity made no difference was erroneous, and an instruction that the failure to provide support would be excusable only if the husband had no income or earning capacity whatsoever was inexact. State v. Lucas, 242 N.C. 84, 86 S.E.2d 770 (1955).

Good Faith in Abandonment Is Question for Jury. — In a prosecution of a husband for abandonment the question whether such abandonment was in good faith, for the causes assigned, is for the jury. State v. Hopkins, 130 N.C. 647, 40 S.E. 973 (1902).

Husband Cannot Be Twice Convicted. — A husband once convicted of an abandonment of his wife cannot be again tried for the same offense, he not having lived with her since the original abandonment. State v. Dunston, 78 N.C. 418 (1878).

Condonation by Wife Does Not Bar Prosecution. — Abandonment of the wife by the husband is a statutory offense, and it is not condoned, so far as the State's right to prosecute is concerned, by a subsequent resumption of the marital relation. State v. Manon, 204 N.C. 52, 167 S.E. 493 (1933).

Divorce After First Conviction No Defense on New Trial. — Where the husband has been indicted, tried, and convicted under this section for the criminal abandonment of his wife, and upon appeal he has been granted a new trial, the fact that since his former conviction his wife has obtained an absolute divorce from him will not avail him as a defense. State v. Falkner, 185 N.C. 635, 116 S.E. 168 (1923).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Evidence that defendant had taken his belongings, unplugged the refrigerator, disconnected the telephone, and left no money was sufficient to permit a reasonable juror to conclude that defendant intentionally abandoned his wife. State v. Talbot, 123 N.C. App. 698, 474 S.E.2d 143 (1996).

III. NONSUPPORT OF CHILDREN.

In order to obtain a conviction under subsection (d) of this section, the State must prove three elements beyond a reasonable doubt: (1) That the defendant was the father of the children; (2) that the defendant failed to provide the children with adequate support; and (3) that such failure was willful. State ex rel. New Bern Child Support Agency ex rel. Lewis v. Lewis, 311 N.C. 727, 319 S.E.2d 145 (1984).

Limitation on Prosecution for Nonsupport of Illegitimate Children Held Constitutional. — The three-year statute of limitations contained in § 49-4(1) for prosecutions under § 49-2 does not violate the equal protection clause of the federal Constitution in that it prescribes a limitations period for the prosecution of persons who willfully fail to support their illegitimate children whereas there is no limitations period for the prosecution under subsection (d) of this section of persons who willfully fail to support their legitimate children. State v. Beasley, 57 N.C. App. 208, 290 S.E.2d 730, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 559, 294 S.E.2d 225 (1982).

Sufficient Warrant. — A warrant charging defendant with willful refusal and neglect to provide adequate support for his minor children, naming them, was sufficient, abandonment not being an element of the offense since the 1957 amendment rewrote this section. State v. Goodmen, 266 N.C. 659, 147 S.E.2d 44 (1966).

The word "willfully" as used in § 49-2 is used with the same import as in this section. State v. Cook, 207 N.C. 261, 176 S.E. 757 (1934).

Failure to Support Must Be Willful. — In a prosecution under this section, the failure by a defendant to provide adequate support for his child must be willful, that is, he intentionally and without just cause or excuse does not provide adequate support for his child according to his means and station in life, and this essential element of the offense must be alleged and proved. State v. Hall, 251 N.C. 211, 110 S.E.2d 868 (1959); State v. McMillan, 10 N.C. App. 734, 180 S.E.2d 35 (1971).

Defective Instruction on Presumption of Willfulness. — Where the defendant was indicted under this section for failure to provide adequate support for his minor children, and in the prosecution of the action the evidence tended to show that the defendant and his wife were living apart and that he had not provided any support for his minor children for some time, and that a judgment had been entered in a civil action by the wife awarding all his personalty except his personal belongings, and that he had transferred his realty to his daughter for the support of the wife and minor children, there was no presumption of willfulness from the failure to provide adequate support under § 14-323 (now repealed), and an instruction that left out this essential element of the crime was held to be reversible error. State v. Roberts, 197 N.C. 662, 150 S.E. 199 (1929).

Sufficient Evidence to Show Willful Abandonment and Failure to Support Minor Child. — Evidence that defendant refused to support his minor child although repeated demands were made on him after the parties had returned to this State, was held to show that the offense of willful abandonment and failure to support said minor child was committed by the defendant in this State, since this section provides that the abandonment of a minor child shall constitute a continuing offense. State v. Hinson, 209 N.C. 187, 183 S.E. 397 (1936).

Evidence Insufficient to Infer Willfulness. — Where there was no evidence in the record that the defendant was employed, or that he owned any property, or had any income or any ability whatsoever to contribute to the support of his children, nor any evidence that the defendant had failed to apply himself to some honest calling for the support of himself and family, or that he was a frequenter of drinking houses, or a known common drunkard, so as to bring the case within the presumption raised by § 14-323 (now repealed), the record was devoid of evidence from which the jury might infer that the defendant willfully or intentionally failed to discharge his obligation to support his children, and the defendant's motion for judgment as of nonsuit should have been allowed. State v. McMillan, 10 N.C. App. 734, 180 S.E.2d 35 (1971).

This section has no application to illegitimate children, and therefore an indictment drawn under this section charging defendant with the abandonment of his illegitimate child fails to charge a crime. State v. Gardner, 219 N.C. 331, 13 S.E.2d 529 (1941).

This section relates only to legitimate children. An illegitimate child is not protected thereby. Allen v. Hunnicutt, 230 N.C. 49, 52 S.E.2d 18 (1949).

Denial of Paternity. — Where the husband in an action for nonsupport for a child admits the nonsupport, but denies that he is the father, and introduces evidence in support thereof, an instruction that withdraws the question of the paternity of the child from the jury is reversible error. State v. Ray, 195 N.C. 628, 143 S.E. 216 (1928).

Biological Paternity. — The common-law presumption of the husband's paternity is not a rule of substantive law making biological paternity irrelevant in a prosecution under this section. State v. White, 300 N.C. 494, 268 S.E.2d 481 (1980).

Instruction as to Presumption of Legitimacy Held Constitutional. — In a prosecution for willfully refusing to provide adequate support for his child in violation of this section, where the child was conceived while defendant and child's mother were living together as husband and wife; child was born after they had separated but during wedlock, and there was some evidence that her mother had sexual relations with another man after conception and during the period of gestation, a jury instruction on the common-law presumption of the child's legitimacy did not violate defendant's right to a trial by due process of law. State v. White, 300 N.C. 494, 268 S.E.2d 481 (1980).

Rebutting Presumption of Paternity. — To require a defendant-husband to offer evidence of the physical impossibility of his fatherhood in order to rebut the presumption of paternity places upon him a burden of production so stringent that, in effect, it unconstitutionally shifts the burden of persuasion to him on this issue. Due process precludes requiring that the defendant, in order to rebut the mandatory presumption, do more than offer some evidence which is sufficient to raise a factual issue as to the paternity of the child. State v. White, 300 N.C. 494, 268 S.E.2d 481 (1980).

This section in express terms constitutes the abandonment of children a continuing offense. The prosecution of an offense of this nature is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offense charged to have been committed at any time before the institution of the first prosecution, but it is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for continuing the offense thereafter, as this is a new violation of the law. State v. Hinson, 209 N.C. 187, 183 S.E. 397 (1936).

Abandonment of children is a continuing offense, and therefore, termination of a prosecution in defendant's favor will not preclude a subsequent prosecution. State v. Smith, 241 N.C. 301, 84 S.E.2d 913 (1954).

A parent's willful failure or refusal to provide adequate support for his children is a continuing offense, and is not barred by any statute of limitations until the youngest child shall have reached the age of 18 years. State v. McMillan, 10 N.C. App. 734, 180 S.E.2d 35 (1971).

Autrefois Acquit and Convict. — In a prosecution for the violation of this section a plea by the defendant of former conviction of the same offense is good as to the period prior to the conviction, but it is not a bar to the prosecution for his failure to provide adequate support for his children subsequent thereto. State v. Jones, 201 N.C. 424, 160 S.E. 468 (1931).

If the mother is guilty of nonsupport, this section provides a remedy and this remedy is exclusive. Hensen v. Thomas, 231 N.C. 173, 56 S.E.2d 432, 12 A.L.R.2d 1171 (1949).

A father cannot, by contract, relieve himself of his obligation to support his child. Goodyear v. Goodyear, 257 N.C. 374, 126 S.E.2d 113 (1962).

Abandonment of Children After Divorce. — The father's duty to the children is not lessened by the fact that a decree of absolute divorcement has been obtained, the obligation to support his own children continuing after the marriage relation between him and his wife has been severed by the law. State v. Bell, 184 N.C. 701, 115 S.E. 190 (1922).

Statute of Limitations Repelled by Promise and Gifts. — The promise of a father to support his children and his making gifts to them was sufficient to repel the bar of the two-year statute of limitations, whether he was living in the home with them or otherwise, in proceedings under this section for his willfully abandoning them. State v. Bell, 184 N.C. 701, 115 S.E. 190 (1922).

§ 14-322.1. Abandonment of child or children for six months.

Any man or woman who, without just cause or provocation, willfully abandons his or her child or children for six months and who willfully fails or refuses to provide adequate means of support for his or her child or children during the six months' period, and who attempts to conceal his or her whereabouts from his or her child or children with the intent of escaping his lawful obligation for the support of said child or children, shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1963, c. 1227; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1983, c. 653, s. 2.)

If any person shall knowingly and willfully slaughter any diseased animal and sell or offer for sale any of the meat of such diseased animal for human consumption, or if any person knows that the meat offered for sale or sold for human consumption by him is that of a diseased animal, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. This service fee may not exceed three dollars ($3.00) for each ticket except that a promoter or operator of the property where the event is to be held and a ticket sales agency may agree in writing on a reasonable service fee greater than three dollars ($3.00) for the first sale of tickets by the ticket sales agent. This service fee may be a pre-established amount per ticket or a percentage of each ticket. The existence of the service fee shall be made known to the public by printing or writing the amount of the fee on the tickets which are printed for the event. Any person, firm or corporation which sells or offers to sell a ticket for a price greater than the price permitted by this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1941, c. 180; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8; 1977, c. 9; 1979, c. 909; 1981, c. 36; 1985, c. 434; 1991, c. 165, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 232; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Selling Tickets Not Illegal. — Solicitation to sell tickets in and of itself, without more, is not a crime under any statute or ordinance of record. Roberts v. Swain, 126 N.C. App. 712, 487 S.E.2d 760 (1997).

(2) Products of agricultural or forestry enterprises or quarrying or mining operations in which inmates of any penal or correctional institution of this State are employed, and

(1913, c. 190, s. 1; C.S., s. 4475; 1969, c. 1224, s. 6; 1993, c. 539, s. 234; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The first two parts of this section are not repugnant to the "due process of law" clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, and to "the law of the land" clause of U.S. Const., Art. I, § 17, and are a reasonable and proper exercise of the police power of the State. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The acts prohibited in the first clause of this section are stated in words sufficiently explicit, clear and definite to inform any man of ordinary intelligence as to what conduct on his part will render him liable to its penalties. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Although the second clause of this section employs general terms, the words used are sufficiently explicit and definite to convey to any man of ordinary intelligence and understanding an adequate description of the prohibited act or acts, and to inform him of what conduct on his part will render him liable to its penalties. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The first two parts of this section are divisible and separable from the remainder of the statute. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

A violation of this section is not a malicious misdemeanor. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

A violation of the first clause of this section is related to unfair trade practices, and is an unfair method of competition. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

And Is Commonly Called "Commercial Bribery." — If a person does the prohibited act or acts specified in the first clause of this section with the intent explicitly stated therein, he is guilty of what is commonly called "commercial bribery." State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Such Practices Are Generally Prohibited. — There is general agreement that where an agent or employee receives money or other considerations from a person in return for the agent's or employee's efforts to further that person's interest in business dealings between him and the principal or employer, such an act or acts on the part of the agent or employee and on the part of the person who gives the money or other consideration is an essential element of the offense prohibited. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The intent specified in the first clause of this section is an essential element of the offense. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

As Is Agreement or Understanding in Second Clause. — The agreement or understanding in the second clause of this section is an essential element of the offense. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

First Clause Does Not Prohibit Customary Tipping. — A contention that the language of the first clause of this section is so broad as to prohibit the customary habit of tipping is untenable. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Since Tipping Lacks Intent to Influence. — Customary tipping is in obedience to custom or in appreciation of service, and is done with no intent to influence the action of the person receiving the tip in relation to his or her employer's business, and as to tipping done in such a manner the statute is not applicable. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

But If Such Intent Is Present, Tipping May Be Violation. — It is possible that a person by tipping an agent, servant or employee with the intent specified in the first clause of this section could bring himself within its penalties, e.g., by giving substantial amounts or considerations and calling them tips. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Second Clause Is Intended to Prohibit Disloyalty by Employees. — The plain intent and purpose of the second clause of this section is to prohibit any agent, employee or servant from being disloyal and unfaithful to his principal, employer or master. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

The third and fourth parts of this section refer to a commission, discount or bonus received by any agent, employee or servant under the circumstances therein specified, and to any person who gives or offers such an agent, employee, or servant such commission, discount or bonus. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Parties to Prohibited Acts Generally Only Witnesses. — The activities necessary to accomplish the offenses prohibited by this section and similar statutes require no violence, embody no traces in lasting form, and frequently, if not almost entirely, have no witnesses other than persons implicated or potentially implicated. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Failure to Prove Conspiracy Does Not Bar Conviction of Substantive Offense. — Although the State failed to prove that one of the defendants was one of the conspirators and was guilty of the conspiracy alleged against him in one count in the indictment, he could still be convicted of the substantive offenses committed by him in violation of this section, as charged against him in other counts. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

§ 14-354. Witness required to give self-incriminating evidence; no suit or prosecution to be founded thereon.

No person shall be excused from attending, testifying or producing books, papers, contracts, agreements and other documents before any court, or in obedience to the subpoena of any court, having jurisdiction of the crime denounced in G.S. 14-353, on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate him or to subject him to a penalty or to a forfeiture; but no person shall be liable to any suit or prosecution, civil or criminal, for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before such court or in obedience to its subpoena or in any such case or proceeding: Provided, that no person so testifying or producing any such books, papers, contracts, agreements or other documents shall be exempted from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. (1913, c. 190, s. 2; C.S., s. 4476.)

CASE NOTES

Stated in State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262 (1963).

§ 14-355. Blacklisting employees.

If any person, agent, company or corporation, after having discharged any employee from his or its service, shall prevent or attempt to prevent, by word or writing of any kind, such discharged employee from obtaining employment with any other person, company or corporation, such person, agent or corporation shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00); and such person, agent, company or corporation shall be liable in penal damages to such discharged person, to be recovered by civil action. This section shall not be construed as prohibiting any person or agent of any company or corporation from furnishing in writing, upon request, any other person, company or corporation to whom such discharged person or employee has applied for employment, a truthful statement of the reason for such discharge. (1909, c. 858, s. 1; C.S., s. 4477; 1993, c. 539, s. 235; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on workers' compensation and retaliatory discharge, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 629 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Intent of Section. — This section was intended to correct the abuse under the common law of statements made concerning a discharged employee out of malice, where damages for the loss of employment were difficult of admeasurement, and under the provisions of the act a statement made as to the standing of the discharged employee is not privileged, if made maliciously. Seward v. Receivers of Seaboard Air Line Ry., 159 N.C. 241, 75 S.E. 34 (1912).

Remedial Provisions. — The provisions of this section and former § 14-356 are remedial and do not put the burden upon the plaintiff of showing either malice or actual damages. Goins v. Sargent, 196 N.C. 478, 146 S.E. 131 (1929).

What Constitutes a Violation. — Where an employer has discharged his employee for being a member of a lawful association of like employees, and has advised others, without a request from them, who would have engaged the services of such employee that he would not sell his product to them should they employ him, and thus has prevent the discharged employee from getting employment within the State, and forced him to obtain employment in another state, depriving him of his living at home here with his family, etc., the employee is entitled to recover damages in his civil action against his former employer, and a demurrer ore tenus to a complaint setting forth this cause of action is bad. Goins v. Sargent, 196 N.C. 478, 146 S.E. 131 (1929).

Request from Prospective Employer. — Statements made about a former employee in response to a request from a prospective employer are privileged under this section; for this section to be violated, the statements to the prospective employer would have to be unsolicited. Friel v. Angell Care Inc., 113 N.C. App. 505, 440 S.E.2d 111 (1994).

Negative References Not Unsolicited. — Plaintiff's claim under this section was dismissed where the negative references given about him were given in response to the requests of potential employers, and for this section to be violated, the statements to the prospective employer would have had to have been unsolicited. Cortes v. McDonald's Corp., 955 F. Supp. 531 (E.D.N.C. 1996).

Punitive damages may not be recovered against a municipality absent statutory authorization; thus, plaintiff could not seek punitive damages from police chief in his official capacity. Houpe v. City of Statesville, 128 N.C. App. 334, 497 S.E.2d 82 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 72, 505 S.E.2d 871 (1998).

§ 14-357: Repealed by Session Laws 1994, Extra Session, c. 14, s. 72(19).

§ 14-357.1. Requiring payment for medical examination, etc., as condition of employment.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any employer, as defined in subsection (b) of this section, to require any applicant for employment, as defined in subsection (c), to pay the cost of a medical examination or the cost of furnishing any records required by the employer as a condition of the initial act of hiring.

(b) The term "employer" as used in this section shall mean and include an individual, a partnership, an association, a corporation, a legal representative, trustee, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, and any common carrier by rail, motor, water, air, or express company, doing business in or operating within the State.

Provided that this section shall not apply to any employer as defined in this subsection who employs less than 25 employees.

(c) The term "applicant for employment" shall mean and include any person who seeks to be permitted, required or directed by any employer, as defined in subsection (b) hereof, in consideration of direct or indirect gain or profit, to engage in employment.

(d) Any employer who violates the provisions of this section shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00) for each and every violation. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Labor to enforce this section. (1951, c. 1094.)

Article 46.

Regulation of Landlord and Tenant.

§ 14-358. Local: Violation of certain contracts between landlord and tenant.

If any tenant or cropper shall procure advances from his landlord to enable him to make a crop on the land rented by him, and then willfully abandon the same without good cause and before paying for such advances with intent to defraud the landlord; or if any landlord shall contract with a tenant or cropper to furnish him advances to enable him to make a crop, and shall willfully fail or refuse, without good cause, to furnish such advances according to his agreement with intent to defraud the tenant, he shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. Any person employing a tenant or cropper who has violated the provisions of this section, with knowledge of such violation, shall be liable to the landlord furnishing such advances for the amount thereof, and shall also be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. This section shall apply to the following counties only: Alamance, Alexander, Beaufort, Bertie, Bladen, Cabarrus, Camden, Caswell, Chowan, Cleveland, Columbus, Craven, Cumberland, Currituck, Duplin, Edgecombe, Gaston, Gates, Greene, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Johnston, Jones, Lee, Lenoir, Lincoln, Martin, Mecklenburg, Montgomery, Nash, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Pender, Perquimans, Person, Pitt, Randolph, Robeson, Rockingham, Rowan, Rutherford, Sampson, Stokes, Surry, Tyrrell, Vance, Wake, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Wilson and Yadkin. CASE NOTES

Averment of Fraud Is Essential. — The provisions of this section contravene N.C. Const., Art. I, § 16, prohibiting imprisonment for debt, except in cases of fraud; and an indictment thereunder, without averment of fraud, will be quashed. State v. Williams, 150 N.C. 802, 63 S.E. 949 (1909); Minton v. Early, 183 N.C. 199, 111 S.E. 347 (1922).

Insufficient Indictment. — An indictment under the provisions of this section which does not charge that the abandonment of the crop by tenant or cropper was "without cause" and "before paying for such advances" should be quashed as insufficient. State v. Williams, 150 N.C. 802, 63 S.E. 949 (1909).

§ 14-359. Local: Tenant neglecting crop; landlord failing to make advances; harboring or employing delinquent tenant.

If any tenant or cropper shall procure advances from his landlord to enable him to make a crop on the land rented by him, and then willfully refuse to cultivate such crops or negligently or willfully abandon the same without good cause and before paying for such advances with intent to defraud the landlord; or if any landlord who induces another to become tenant or cropper by agreeing to furnish him advances to enable him to make a crop, shall willfully fail or refuse without good cause to furnish such advances according to his agreement with intent to defraud the tenant, or if any person shall entice, persuade or procure any tenant, lessee or cropper, who has made a contract agreeing to cultivate the land of another, to abandon or to refuse or fail to cultivate such land with intent to defraud the landlord, or after notice shall harbor or detain on his own premises, or on the premises of another, any such tenant, lessee or cropper, he shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. Any person who employs a tenant or cropper who has violated the provisions of this section, with knowledge of such violation, shall be liable to the landlord furnishing such advances, for the amount thereof. This section shall apply only to the following counties: Alamance, Anson, Cabarrus, Caswell, Davidson, Franklin, Granville, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Hoke, Hyde, Lee, Lincoln, Moore, Person, Randolph, Richmond, Rockingham, Rowan, Rutherford, Sampson, Stanly, Stokes, Union, Vance, Wake and Washington. Cruelty to Animals.

§ 14-360. Cruelty to animals; construction of section.

(a) If any person shall intentionally overdrive, overload, wound, injure, torment, kill, or deprive of necessary sustenance, or cause or procure to be overdriven, overloaded, wounded, injured, tormented, killed, or deprived of necessary sustenance, any animal, every such offender shall for every such offense be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) If any person shall maliciously torture, mutilate, maim, cruelly beat, disfigure, poison, or kill, or cause or procure to be tortured, mutilated, maimed, cruelly beaten, disfigured, poisoned, or killed, any animal, every such offender shall for every such offense be guilty of a Class I felony. However, nothing in this section shall be construed to increase the penalty for cockfighting provided for in G.S. 14-362.

(c) As used in this section, the words "torture", "torment", and "cruelly" include or refer to any act, omission, or neglect causing or permitting unjustifiable pain, suffering, or death. As used in this section, the word "intentionally" refers to an act committed knowingly and without justifiable excuse, while the word "maliciously" means an act committed intentionally and with malice or bad motive. As used in this section, the term "animal" includes every living vertebrate in the classes Amphibia, Reptilia, Aves, and Mammalia except human beings. However, this section shall not apply to the following activities:

(1) The lawful taking of animals under the jurisdiction and regulation of the Wildlife Resources Commission, except that this section shall apply to those birds exempted by the Wildlife Resources Commission from its definition of "wild birds" pursuant to G.S. 113-129(15a).

(2) Lawful activities conducted for purposes of biomedical research or training or for purposes of production of livestock, poultry, or aquatic species.

(2a) Lawful activities conducted for the primary purpose of providing food for human or animal consumption.

(3) Activities conducted for lawful veterinary purposes.

(4) The lawful destruction of any animal for the purposes of protecting the public, other animals, property, or the public health. (1881, c. 34, s. 1; c. 368, ss. 1, 15; Code, ss. 2482, 2490; 1891, c. 65; Rev., s. 3299; 1907, c. 42; C.S., s. 4483; 1969, c. 1224, s. 2; 1979, c. 641; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 967, s. 1; 1989, c. 670, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 239; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1998-212, s. 17.16(c); 1999-209, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

This section is for the protection of animals. Belk v. Boyce, 263 N.C. 24, 138 S.E.2d 789 (1964).

It is not for the protection of trespassers or mere licensees. Belk v. Boyce, 263 N.C. 24, 138 S.E.2d 789 (1964).

Hence, Unlawful Shooting at Dog Is Not Negligence Per Se. — Where plaintiff, who was struck by a bullet fired by defendant, was at best a mere licensee, the fact that defendant was unlawfully shooting at a dog did not render the act negligence per se, nor impose on defendant absolute liability. Since this section is not for the protection of the class to which plaintiff belonged, its violation did not impose liability in the absence of a showing that defendant knew, or in the exercise of reasonable care should have known, of plaintiff's presence in the vicinity. Belk v. Boyce, 263 N.C. 24, 138 S.E.2d 789 (1964).

The word "willful" as used in criminal statutes signifies more than the mere intention to do a thing, and means the commission of the act "without just cause, excuse, or justification." State v. Dickens, 215 N.C. 303, 1 S.E.2d 837 (1939); State v. Fowler, 22 N.C. App. 144, 205 S.E.2d 749 (1974).

Unnecessary suffering knowingly and willfully permitted constitutes the offense. State v. Porter, 112 N.C. 887, 16 S.E. 915 (1893).

Finding Required for Conviction. — In order to convict there must be a finding that the act was "willfully and unlawfully" done. State v. Tweedy, 115 N.C. 704, 20 S.E. 183 (1894).

A dog is a useful animal within the meaning of this section. State v. Dickens, 215 N.C. 303, 1 S.E.2d 837 (1939).

Unnecessary to Show Dog Has Pecuniary Value. — It is unnecessary to show that a dog is of a pecuniary value to the owner to maintain an indictment for cruelty forbidden by the section. State v. Smith, 156 N.C. 628, 72 S.E. 321 (1911).

Punishment in Effort to Train. — Punishment administered to an animal in an honest and good faith effort to train it is not without justification and not willful. State v. Fowler, 22 N.C. App. 144, 205 S.E.2d 749 (1974).

Anger No Excuse. — Anger does not excuse the killing when it was willful and needless. And under such circumstances the intent is immaterial. State v. Neal, 120 N.C. 613, 27 S.E. 81 (1897).

Evidence of Dog's Presence on Property Properly Excluded. — In a prosecution for needlessly killing a useful dog, evidence that a dog, not identified as the dog killed, had frequented the place where defendant was employed, resulting in unpleasant odors around the place, and that the dog had barked at night, is properly excluded from the evidence upon the State's objection, since the evidence does not tend to establish justification, the presence of the dog on the premises giving the defendant only the right to drive him away but not to injure him unnecessarily, and previous offenses committed by the dog not being justification for killing him, the right to kill being founded on the immediate necessity of protecting property, a person, or another animal. State v. Dickens, 215 N.C. 303, 1 S.E.2d 837 (1939).

Injury to Prevent Depredations No Defense. — The fact that cows (State v. Butts, 92 N.C. 784 (1885)) or chickens (State v. Neal, 120 N.C. 613, 27 S.E. 81 (1897)) were trespassing on defendant's property was not a defense to an action under this section, where the killing or wounding was unnecessary. See also State v. Smith, 156 N.C. 628, 72 S.E. 321 (1911).

Indictment. — The facts constituting torturing, tormenting or cruel conduct must be set out when such conduct is charged. State v. Watkins, 101 N.C. 702, 8 S.E. 346 (1888).

A charge that defendant "did unlawfully and willfully beat" was held sufficient in State v. Allison, 90 N.C. 733 (1884).

Illustrations. — Shooting pigeons for sport (State v. Porter, 112 N.C. 887, 16 S.E. 915 (1893)) and poisoning chickens (State v. Bossee, 145 N.C. 579, 59 S.E. 879 (1907)) have been held violations of the section.

Hitting a runaway horse with a rock, however, has been held insufficient to sustain a direct verdict; the question of the willful purpose to injure being for the jury. State v. Isley, 119 N.C. 862, 26 S.E. 35 (1896).

Applied in State v. Holt, 90 N.C. 749 (1884); State v. Candler, 25 N.C. App. 318, 212 S.E.2d 901 (1975); State v. Simmons, 36 N.C. App. 354, 244 S.E.2d 168 (1978).

§ 14-361. Instigating or promoting cruelty to animals.

If any person shall willfully set on foot, or instigate, or move to, carry on, or promote, or engage in, or do any act towards the furtherance of any act of cruelty to any animal, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1881, c. 368, s. 6; Code, s. 2487; 1891, c. 65; Rev., s. 3300; C.S., s. 4484; 1953, c. 857, s. 1; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1985 (Reg. A lease of property that is used or is intended to be used for an exhibition featuring the fighting of a cock is void, and a lessor who knows this use is made or is intended to be made of his property is under a duty to evict the lessee immediately. (1881, c. 368, s. 2; Code, s. 2483; 1891, c. 65; Rev., s. 3301; C.S., s. 4485; 1953, c. 857, s. 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 967, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 242; 1994, Ex. CASE NOTES

An essential element of the offense is bribery or offer to bribe with intent to influence the play, action or conduct of a player in any athletic contest. State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 377 U.S. 978, 84 S. Ct. 1884, 12 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1964), overruled on other grounds in News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Starling, 312 N.C. 276, 322 S.E.2d 133 (1984).

It is necessary for the State to prove specific intent to influence the play, action or conduct of a player in any athletic contest. State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 377 U.S. 978, 84 S. Ct. 1884, 12 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1964), overruled on other grounds in News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Competency of Evidence. — Testimony admitted over objections and exceptions as to the bribery of a number of basketball players in other states and rigging of basketball games in other states, was held competent as proof of intent to influence the play, action or conduct of a player in an athletic contest in State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, cert.

denied, 377 U.S. 978, 84 S. Ct. 1884, 12 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1964), overruled on other grounds in News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Starling, 312 N.C. 276, 322 S.E.2d 133 (1984).

If any player or participant in any athletic contest shall accept, or agree to accept, a bribe given for the purpose of inducing the player or participant to lose or try to lose or cause to be lost or limit or try to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest; or if any referee, umpire, manager, coach, or any other official of an athletic club, team, league, association, institution, or conference connected with an athletic contest shall accept or agree to accept a bribe given with the intent to influence his decision or bias his opinion or judgment and for the purpose of losing or trying to lose or causing to be lost said athletic contest or of limiting or trying to limit the margin of victory or defeat in such contest, such person shall be punished as a Class I felon. (1921, c. 112; C.S., s. 4511(a); 1993, c. 539, s. 260; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on intentional infliction of emotional distress, see 18 Wake Forest L. Rev. 624 (1982).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Section 14-3(b), making a misdemeanor offense as to which no specific punishment is prescribed a Class H felony under certain circumstances, and this section set up different punishment levels for the same criminal act without discriminating against any class of defendants, and do not violate equal protection. State v. Glidden, 76 N.C. App. 653, 334 S.E.2d 101 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 557, 346 S.E.2d 470 (1986).

Subsection (b) of § 14-3 does not convert a violation of this section into a felony in any case. State v. Glidden, 317 N.C. 557, 346 S.E.2d 470 (1986).

The misdemeanor of transmitting an unsigned threatening letter in violation of this section does not fall within any of the classes of misdemeanors made felonious by § 14-3(b). State v. Glidden, 317 N.C. 557, 346 S.E.2d 470 (1986).

Transmission an Essential Element. — For a conviction under this section, there must be a transmission of the anonymous letter which contains at least one of the categories of prohibited language. Unless and until there is a transmission, no crime has been committed. State v. Robbins, 253 N.C. 47, 116 S.E.2d 192 (1960).

What Constitutes Transmission. — There can be no transmission within the meaning of this section without an intended recipient and a delivery of the prohibited writing or a communication of its contents to the intended recipient. State v. Robbins, 253 N.C. 47, 116 S.E.2d 192 (1960).

Evidence Held Sufficient to Show Transmission. — Evidence that the recipient of threatening letters was familiar enough with the defendant's handwriting to identify him as the author of the threatening letters, that some of the letters appeared in victim's classroom during or immediately following the time period when defendant attended class there, that some of the envelopes were folded, indicating that they could have been mailed to an accomplice who then mailed them from the postmarked location while defendant was in another location, and that no more letters were mailed to the victim after defendant was arrested was sufficient for the jury to find that defendant transmitted the letters as well as wrote them. State v. Glidden, 76 N.C. App. 653, 334 S.E.2d 101 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 557, 346 S.E.2d 470 (1986).

Circumstantial evidence of defendant's guilt of transmitting a threatening letter held sufficient to sustain conviction and overrule defendant's motion for judgment as of nonsuit. State v. Strickland, 229 N.C. 201, 49 S.E.2d 469 (1948).

Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. (1923, c. 89; C.S., s. 4511(b); 1993, c. 539, s. 261; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-395.1. Sexual harassment.

(a) Offense. — Any lessor of residential real property or the agent of any lessor of residential real property who shall harass on the basis of sex any lessee or prospective lessee of the property shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(b) Definitions. — For purposes of this section:

(1) "Harass on the basis of sex" means unsolicited overt requests or demands for sexual acts when (i) submission to such conduct is made a term of the execution or continuation of the lease agreement, or (ii) submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual is used to determine whether rights under the lease are accorded;

(2) "Lessee" means a person who enters into a residential rental agreement with the lessor and all other persons residing in the lessee's rental unit; and

(3) "Prospective lessee" means a person seeking to enter into a residential rental agreement with a lessor. (1989, c. 712, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 262; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§§ 14-396, 14-397: Repealed by Session Laws 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 767, s. 30(18), (19).

§ 14-398. Theft or destruction of property of public libraries, museums, etc.

Any person who shall steal or unlawfully take or detain, or willfully or maliciously or wantonly write upon, cut, tear, deface, disfigure, soil, obliterate, break or destroy, or who shall sell or buy or receive, knowing the same to have been stolen, any book, document, newspaper, periodical, map, chart, picture, portrait, engraving, statue, coin, medal, apparatus, specimen, or other work of literature or object of art or curiosity deposited in a public library, gallery, museum, collection, fair or exhibition, or in any department or office of State or local government, or in a library, gallery, museum, collection, or exhibition, belonging to any incorporated college or university, or any incorporated institution devoted to educational, scientific, literary, artistic, historical or charitable purposes, shall, if the value of the property stolen, detained, sold, bought or received knowing same to have been stolen, or if the damage done by writing upon, cutting, tearing, defacing, disfiguring, soiling, obliterating, breaking or destroying any such property, shall not exceed fifty dollars ($50.00), be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. If the value of the property stolen, detained, sold or received knowing same to have been stolen, or the amount of damage done in any of the ways or manners hereinabove set out, shall exceed the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00), the person committing same shall be punished as a Class H felon. (1935, c. 300; 1943, c. 543; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 265; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Local Modification. — Dare: 1983, c. 349.
Cross References. — For structured sentencing provisions effective October 1, 1994, see § 15A-1340.10 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Intent. — This section requires, as an essential element of the offenses set forth, a showing that the person charged "willfully" or "wantonly" caused the damage. State v. Davis, 86 N.C. App. 25, 356 S.E.2d 607 (1987).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — Evidence was not sufficient to support conviction under this section for water damage to a museum tapestry which was lying on the floor rolled up in a storage room located directly under rest room with malfunctioning toilet which defendant had clogged with paper towels, as there was insufficient evidence as to the condition of the tapestry prior to the resultant flooding. State v. Davis, 86 N.C. App. 25, 356 S.E.2d 607 (1987).

§ 14-399. Littering.

In addition, the court may require the violator to perform community service of not less than 16 hours nor more than 50 hours. The community service required shall be to pick up litter if feasible, and if not feasible, to perform other labor commensurate with the offense committed.

In addition, the court may require the violator to perform community service of not less than eight hours nor more than 24 hours. The community service required shall be to pick up litter if feasible, and

(3) Perform community public service relating to the removal of litter discarded in violation of this section or to the restoration of an area polluted by litter discarded in violation of this section.

(f) A court may enjoin a violation of this section.

§ 14-399.1: Repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 784, s. 7.

§ 14-399.2. Certain plastic yoke and ring type holding devices prohibited.

(a) As used in this section:

(1) "Degradable" means that within one year after being discarded, the yoke or ring type holding device is capable of becoming embrittled or decomposing by photodegradation, biodegradation, or chemo-degradation under average seasonal conditions into components other than heavy metals or other toxic substances.

(2) "Recyclable" means that the yoke or ring type holding device is capable of being collected and processed for reuse as a product or raw material.

(b) No person may sell or distribute for sale in this State any container connected to another by a yoke or ring type holding device constructed of plastic that is neither degradable nor recyclable. No person may sell or distribute for sale in this State any container connected to another by a yoke or ring type holding device constructed of plastic that is recyclable but that is not degradable unless such device does not have an orifice larger than one and three-fourths inches. The manufacturer of a degradable yoke or ring type holding device shall emboss or mark the device with a nationally recognized symbol indicating that the device is degradable. The manufacturer of a recyclable yoke or ring type holding device shall emboss or mark the device with a symbol of the type specified in G.S. 130A-309.10(e) indicating the plastic resin used to produce the device and that the device is recyclable. The manufacturer shall register the symbol with the Secretary of State with a sample of the device.

(c) Any person who sells or distributes for sale a yoke or ring type holding device in violation of this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than two hundred dollars ($200.00). In lieu of a fine or any portion thereof or in addition to a fine, any violation of this section may also be punished by a term of community service.

(d) Other than a manufacturer required to use and register a symbol under subsection (b), a person may not be prosecuted under this section if, at the time of sale or distribution for sale, the yoke or holding device bears a symbol meeting the requirements of this section which has been registered with the Secretary of State. (1989, c. 371, s. 1; 1991, c. 236, s. 1; c. 621, s. 14; 1993, c. 539, s. 268; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-400. Tattooing; body piercing prohibited.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to tattoo the arm, limb, or any part of the body of any other person under 18 years of age. Anyone violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person to pierce any part of the body other than ears of another person under the age of 18 for the purpose of allowing the insertion of earrings, jewelry, or similar objects into the body, unless the prior consent of a custodial parent or guardian is obtained. Anyone violating the provisions of this section is guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1937, c. 112, ss. 1, 2; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8; 1971, c. 1231, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 269; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1998-230, s. 9.)

§ 14-401. Putting poisonous foodstuffs, antifreeze, etc., in certain public places, prohibited.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to put or place (i) any strychnine, other poisonous compounds or ground glass on any beef or other foodstuffs of any kind, or (ii) any antifreeze that contains ethylene glycol and is not in a closed container, in any public square, street, lane, alley or on any lot in any village, town or city or on any public road, open field, woods or yard in the country. Any person, firm or corporation who violates the provisions of this section shall be liable in damages to the person injured thereby and also shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. This section shall not apply to the poisoning of insects or worms for the purpose of protecting crops or gardens by spraying plants, crops, or trees, to poisons used in rat extermination, or to the accidental release of antifreeze containing ethylene glycol. (1941, c. 181; 1953, c. 1239; 1993, c. 143, s. 1; c. 539, s. 270; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

For survey of 1980 criminal law, see 59 N.C.L. Rev. 1123 (1981).

Constitutionality. — This section is not unconstitutionally vague since the General Assembly intended to prohibit putting poison outside virtually everywhere where an innocent child or animal could find it. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Burden with Respect to Pest Control Exception. — The insect control and rat extermination exception in this section is neither an element of the crime nor an affirmative defense thereto, but is instead a "hybrid" factor in determining criminal liability. The State has no initial burden of producing evidence to show that defendant's actions do not fall within the exception; however, once the defendant, in a nonfrivolous manner, puts forth evidence to show that his conduct is within this exception, the burden of persuading the trier of fact that the exception does not apply falls upon the State. In sum, the exception is not a sufficiently independent, distinct substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense, beyond the essentials of the legal definition of the offense itself, to put all the onus of proof on the defendant. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Requirements of Indictment or Warrant. — An indictment or warrant for an arrest under this section need not set forth a charge that defendant's conduct is not within the insect control and rat extermination exception to the statute. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Concrete patio held within definition of section. See State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Rat Poisons Used for Other Purposes. — While parathion is a poison used in rat extermination, if it is put out for purposes other than rat extermination it comes within the scope of the statutory prohibition. State v. Trimble, 44 N.C. App. 659, 262 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

§ 14-401.1. Misdemeanor to tamper with examination questions.

Any person who, without authority of the entity who prepares or administers the examination, purloins, steals, buys, receives, or sells, gives or offers to buy, give, or sell any examination questions or copies thereof of any examination provided and prepared by law shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1917,

c. 146, s. 10; C.S., s. 5658; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1991, c. 360, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 271; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Section Limited to Examinations "Provided and Prepared by Law". — The portion of this section reading "any examination provided and prepared by law" expressly limits the application of the statute to examinations "provided and prepared by law," i.e., examinations given by the State Board of Medical Examiners, the State Board of Law Examiners, and other examining boards of this class. The statute has no application to college examination papers. State v. Andrews, 246 N.C. 561, 99 S.E.2d 745 (1957).

§ 14-401.2. Misdemeanor for detective to collect claims, accounts, etc.

Violation of the provisions hereof shall be a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1943, c. 383; 1969, c. 1224, s. 5; 1993, c. 539, s. 272; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-401.3. Inscription on gravestone or monument charging commission of crime.

It shall be illegal for any person to erect or cause to be erected any gravestone or monument bearing any inscription charging any person with the commission of a crime, and it shall be illegal for any person owning, controlling or operating any cemetery to permit such gravestone to be erected and maintained therein. If such gravestone has been erected in any graveyard, cemetery or burial plot, it shall be the duty of the person having charge thereof to remove and obliterate such inscription. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1949, c. 1075; 1969, c. 1224, s. 8; 1993, c. 539, s. 273; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-401.4. Identifying marks on machines and apparatus; application to Division of Motor Vehicles for numbers.

(a) No person, firm or corporation shall willfully remove, deface, destroy, alter or cover over the manufacturer's serial or engine number or any other manufacturer's number or other distinguishing number or identification mark upon any machine or other apparatus, including but not limited to farm equipment, machinery and apparatus, but excluding electric storage batteries, nor shall any person, firm or corporation place or stamp any serial, engine, or other number or mark upon such machinery, apparatus or equipment except as provided for in this section, nor shall any person, firm or corporation purchase or take into possession or sell, trade, transfer, devise, give away or in any manner dispose of such machinery, apparatus, or equipment except by intestate succession or as junk or scrap after the manufacturer's serial or engine number or mark has been willfully removed, defaced, destroyed, altered or covered up unless a new number or mark has been added as provided in this section: Provided, however, that this section shall not prohibit or prevent the owner or holder of a mortgage, conditional sales contract, title retaining contract, or a trustee under a deed of trust from taking possession for the purpose of foreclosure under a power of sale or by court order, of such machinery, apparatus, or equipment, or from selling the same by foreclosure sale under a power contained in a mortgage, conditional sales contract, title retaining contract, deed of trust, or court order; or from taking possession thereof in satisfaction of the indebtedness secured by the mortgage, deed of trust, conditional sales contract, or title retaining contract pursuant to an agreement with the owner.

(b) Each seller of farm machinery, farm equipment or farm apparatus covered by this section shall give the purchaser a bill of sale for such machinery, equipment or apparatus and shall include in the bill of sale the manufacturer's serial number or distinguishing number or identification mark, which the seller warrants to be true and correct according to his invoice or bill of sale as received from his manufacturer, supplier, or distributor or dealer.

(c) Each user of farm machinery, farm equipment or farm apparatus whose manufacturer's serial number, distinguishing number or identification mark has been obliterated or is now unrecognizable, may obtain a valid identification number for any such machinery, equipment or apparatus upon application for such number to the Division of Motor Vehicles accompanied by satisfactory proof of ownership and a subsequent certification to the Division by a member of the North Carolina Highway Patrol that said applicant has placed the number on the proper machinery, equipment or apparatus. The Division of Motor Vehicles is hereby authorized and empowered to issue appropriate identification marks or distinguishing numbers for machinery, equipment or apparatus upon application as provided in this section and the Division is further authorized and empowered to designate the place or places on the machinery, equipment or apparatus at which the identification marks or distinguishing numbers shall be placed. The Division is also authorized to designate the method to be used in placing the identification marks or distinguishing numbers on the machinery, equipment or apparatus: Provided, however, that the owner or holder of the mortgage conditional sales contract, title retaining contract, or trustee under a deed of trust in possession of such encumbered machinery, equipment, or apparatus from which the manufacturer's serial or engine number or other manufacturer's number or distinguishing mark has been obliterated or has become unrecognizable or the purchaser at the foreclosure sale thereof, may at any time obtain a valid identification number for any such machinery, equipment or apparatus upon application therefor to the Division of Motor Vehicles.

(d) Any person, firm or corporation who shall violate any part of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1949, c. 928; 1951, c. 1110 s. 1; 1953, c. 257; 1975, c. 716, s. 5; 1993, c. 539, s. 274; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-401.5. Practice of phrenology, palmistry, fortune-telling or clairvoyance prohibited.

§ 14-401.12. Soliciting charitable contributions by telephone.

(a) Any professional solicitor who solicits by telephone contributions for charitable purposes or in any way compensates another person to solicit by telephone contributions for charitable purposes shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. Any person compensated by a professional solicitor to solicit by telephone contributions for charitable purposes shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) Definitions. — Unless a different meaning is required by the context, the following terms as used in this section have the meanings hereinafter respectively ascribed to them:

(1) "Charitable purpose" shall mean any charitable, benevolent, religious, philanthropic, environmental, public or social advocacy or eleemosynary purpose for religion, health, education, social welfare, art and humanities, civic and public interest.

(2) "Contribution" shall mean any promise, gift, bequest, devise or other grant for consideration or otherwise, of any money or property of any kind or value, including the promise to pay, which contribution is wholly or partly induced by a solicitation. The term "contribution" shall not include payments by members of an organization for membership fees, dues, fines or assessments, or for services rendered to individual members, if membership in such organization confers a bona fide right, privilege, professional standing, honor or other direct benefit, other than the right to vote, elect officers, or hold offices; nor any money, credit, financial assistance or property received from any governmental authority; nor any donation of blood or any gift made pursuant to the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. Reference to dollar amounts of "contributions" or "solicitations" in this section means, in the case of payments or promises to pay for merchandise or rights of any description, the value of the total amount paid or promised to be paid for such merchandise or rights, and not merely that portion of the purchase price to be applied to a charitable purpose.

(3) "Professional fund-raising counsel" shall mean any person who for a flat fixed fee under a written agreement plans, conducts, manages, carries on, or acts as a consultant, whether directly or indirectly, in connection with soliciting contributions for, or on behalf of any charitable organization but who actually solicits no contributions as a part of such services.

(4) "Professional solicitor" shall mean any person who, for a financial or other consideration, solicits contributions for or on behalf of a charitable organization, whether such solicitation is performed personally or through its agents, servants or employees specially employed by or for a charitable organization, who are engaged in the solicitation of contributions under the direction of such person; or a person who plans, conducts, manages, carries on, advises or acts as a consultant, whether directly or indirectly, to a charitable organization in connection with the solicitation of contributions but does not qualify as

"professional fund-raising counsel" as defined in this section. A bona fide salaried officer or employee of a charitable organization maintaining a permanent establishment within the State or the bona fide salaried officer or employee of a parent organization certified as tax exempt shall not be deemed to be a professional solicitor.

(5) The words "solicit" and "solicitation" shall mean the request or appeal, directly or indirectly, for any contribution on the plea or representation that such contribution will be used for a charitable purpose. Solicitation as defined herein shall be deemed to occur when the request is made, at the place the request is received, whether or not the person making the same actually receives any contribution.

(c) A solicitation by telephone is presumed to be for a charitable purpose if the person making the solicitation states or implies that some other named person or organization, other than the professional solicitor or his employees, is a sponsor or endorser of the solicitation who will share in the proceeds that result from the telephone solicitation. (1981, c. 805, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 281; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 14-401.13. Failure to give right to cancel in off-premises sales.

(a) It shall be a Class 3 misdemeanor for any sellers, as defined hereinafter, in connection with an off-premises sale, as defined hereinafter, willfully to:

(1) Fail to furnish the buyer with a fully completed receipt or copy of any contract pertaining to such sale at the time of its execution, which is in the same language, e.g., Spanish, as that principally used in the oral sales presentation and which shows the date of the transaction and contains the name and address of the seller, and in immediate proximity to the space reserved in the contract for the signature of the buyer or on the front page of the receipt if a contract is not used and in boldface type of a minimum size of 10 points, a statement in substantially the following form: "You, the buyer, may cancel this transaction at any time prior to midnight of the third business day after the date of this transaction. See the attached notice of cancellation form for an explanation of this right."

(2) Fail to furnish each buyer, at the time he signs the off-premises sales contract or otherwise agrees to buy consumer goods or services from the seller, a completed form in duplicate, captioned "NOTICE OF CANCELLATION", which shall be attached to the contract or receipt and easily detachable, and which shall contain in boldface type in a minimum size of 10 points, the following information and statements in the same language, e.g., Spanish, as that used in the contract:

"NOTICE OF CANCELLATION
(enter date of transaction)

You may cancel this transaction, without any penalty or obligation, within three business days from the above date.

If you cancel, any property traded in, any payments made by you under the contract or sale, and any negotiable instrument executed by you will be returned within 10 business days following receipt by the seller of your cancellation notice and any security interest arising out of the transaction will be canceled.

If you cancel, you must make available to the seller at your residence, in substantially as good condition as when received, any goods delivered to you under this contract or sale; or you may, if you wish, comply with the instructions of the seller regarding the return shipment of the goods at the seller's expense and risk. In the event you purchased antiques at an antique show and cancel, and your residence is out-of-state, you must deliver the purchased goods to the seller.

If you do make the goods available to the seller and the seller does not pick them up within 20 days of the date of your notice of cancellation, you may retain or dispose of the goods without any further obligation. If you fail to make the goods available to the seller, or if you agree to return the goods to the seller and fail to do so, then you remain liable for performance of all obligations under the contract.

To cancel this transaction, mail or deliver a signed and dated copy of this cancellation notice, or any other written notice, or send a telegram, to

(name of seller)

at _____ (address of seller's place of business) not later than midnight of _____ (date)

I hereby cancel this transaction.

(date)

(buyer's signature)

(3) Fail, before furnishing copies of the "Notice of Cancellation" to the buyer, to complete both copies by entering the name of the seller, the address of the seller's place of business, the date of the transaction, and the date, not earlier than the third business day following the date of the transaction, by which the buyer may give notice of cancellation.

(4) Fail to inform each buyer orally, at the time he signs the contract or purchases the goods or services, of his right to cancel.

(5) Misrepresent in any manner the buyer's right to cancel.

(b) Regardless of the seller's compliance or noncompliance with the requirements of the preceding subsection, it shall be a Class 3 misdemeanor for any seller, as defined hereinafter, to willfully fail or refuse to honor any valid notice of cancellation by a buyer and within 10 business days after the receipt of such notice, to (i) refund all payments made under the contract or sale; (ii) return any goods or property traded in, in substantially as good condition as when received by the seller; (iii) cancel and return any negotiable instrument executed by the buyer in connection with the contract or sale and take any action necessary or appropriate to terminate promptly any security interest created in the transaction. If the seller failed to provide a form Notice of Cancellation to the buyer, then oral notice of cancellation by the buyer is sufficient for purposes of this subsection.

(c) For the purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) Off-Premises Sale. — A sale, lease, or rental of consumer goods or services with a purchase price of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) or more,

d. Conducted and consummated entirely by mail or telephone; and without any other contact between the buyer and the seller or its representative prior to delivery of the goods or performance of the services; or
e. In which the buyer has initiated the contact and specifically requested the seller to visit his home for the purpose of repairing or performing maintenance upon the buyer's property. If in the course of such a visit, the seller sells the buyer the right to receive additional services or goods other than replacement parts necessarily used in performing the maintenance or in making the repairs, the sale of those additional goods or services would not fall within this exclusion; or
f. Pertaining to the sale or rental of real property, to the sale of insurance or to the sale of securities or commodities by a broker-dealer registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission; or

(a) Upon application, the sheriff shall issue the license or permit to a resident of that county unless the purpose of the permit is for collecting, in which case a sheriff can issue a permit to a nonresident when the sheriff has done all of the following:

(1) Verified by a criminal history background investigation that it is not a violation of State or federal law for the applicant to purchase, transfer, receive, or possess a handgun. An appeal from the refusal shall lie by way of petition to the chief judge of the district court for the district in which the application was filed. b. Restrains the person from harassing, stalking, or threatening an intimate partner of the person or child of the intimate partner of the person, or engaging in other conduct that would place an intimate partner in reasonable fear of bodily injury to the partner or child; and

c. Includes a finding that the person represents a credible threat to the physical safety of the intimate partner or child; or by its terms explicitly prohibits the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the intimate partner or child that would reasonably be expected to cause bodily injury.

(d) Nothing in this Article shall apply to officers authorized by law to carry firearms if the officers identify themselves to the vendor or donor as being officers authorized by law to carry firearms and state that the purpose for the purchase of the firearms is directly related to the law officers' official duties.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to manufacture, sell, give away, dispose of, use or possess machine guns, submachine guns, or other like weapons as defined by subsection (a) of this section: Provided, however, that this subsection shall not apply to the following:

CASE NOTES

Definitions. — The usual and customary definitions of the words used in this section are as follows: A machine gun is defined as an automatic gun using small-arms ammunition for rapid continuous firing; a submachine gun as a lightweight automatic or semiautomatic portable firearm fired from the shoulder or hip; a carbine as a light automatic or semiautomatic military rifle; and an automatic rifle as a rifle capable commonly of either semiautomatic or full automatic fire and designed to be fired without a mount. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

"Automatic". — The word "automatic" as used in connection with a firearm is one using either gas pressure or force of recoil and mechanical spring action for repeatedly ejecting the empty cartridge shell, introducing a new cartridge and firing it. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

In ordinary usage the word "automatic" is used to describe both automatic and semiautomatic weapons. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

A machine gun is automatic. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

A submachine gun can be automatic or semiautomatic. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

Section Excludes Weapons Which Shoot Less Than 31 Times. — The General Assembly intended to include within the prohibition of this section all weapons either automatic or semiautomatic which shoot 31 times or more and to exclude such weapons which shoot less than 31 times. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

This section has a proviso which excludes automatic shotguns and pistols or other automatic weapons that shoot less than 31 shots. Giving the usual and customary meaning to the word "automatic," the proviso would exclude automatic weapons or semiautomatic weapons which shoot less than 31 shots. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 242, 176 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

"Party poppers" which contain .0052 grams of explosives are not exempted from this section. See opinion of Attorney General to the Honorable Randolph Riley, District Attorney, Wake County, 54 N.C.A.G. 25 (1984).

§ 14-415. Violation made misdemeanor.

Any person violating any of the provisions of this Article, except as otherwise specified in said Article, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1947, c. 210, s. 6; 1969, c. 1224, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 288; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Article 54A.

The Felony Firearms Act.

§ 14-415.1. Possession of firearms, etc., by felon prohibited.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person who has been convicted of a felony to purchase, own, possess, or have in his custody, care, or control any handgun or other firearm with a barrel length of less than 18 inches or an overall length of less than 26 inches, or any weapon of mass death and destruction as defined in G.S. 14-288.8(c).

Every person violating the provisions of this section shall be punished as a Class G felon.

Nothing in this subsection would prohibit the right of any person to have possession of a firearm within his own home or on his lawful place of business.

(b) Prior convictions which cause disentitlement under this section shall only include:

(1) Felony convictions in North Carolina that occur before, on, or after December 1, 1995; and

(2) Repealed by Session Laws 1995, c. 487, s. 3, effective December 1, 1995.

(3) Violations of criminal laws of other states or of the United States that occur before, on, or after December 1, 1995, and that are substantially similar to the crimes covered in subdivision (1) which are punishable where committed by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year.

When a person is charged under this section, records of prior convictions of any offense, whether in the courts of this State, or in the courts of any other state or of the United States, shall be admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving a violation of this section. The term "conviction" is defined as a final judgment in any case in which felony punishment, or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year, as the case may be, is permissible, without regard to the plea entered or to the sentence imposed. A judgment of a conviction of the defendant or a plea of guilty by the defendant to such an offense certified to a superior court of this State from the custodian of records of any state or federal court shall be prima facie evidence of the facts so certified.

(c) The indictment charging the defendant under the terms of this section shall be separate from any indictment charging him with other offenses related to or giving rise to a charge under this section. An indictment which charges the person with violation of this section must set forth the date that the prior offense was committed, the type of offense and the penalty therefor, and the date that the defendant was convicted or plead guilty to such offense, the identity of the court in which the conviction or plea of guilty took place and the verdict and judgment rendered therein. (1971, c. 954, s. 1; 1973, c. 1196; 1975, c. 870, ss. 1, 2; 1977, c. 1105, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; c. 179, s. 14; 1989, c. 770, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 1245; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1995, c. 487, s. 3; c. 507, s. 19.5(k).)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is not constitutionally invalid because the restriction applies during the five years after conviction, discharge from a correctional institution, or termination of a suspended sentence, probation or parole, whichever is later. This merely establishes a class, those convicted of the enumerated crimes who are within five years of the end of their punishment, and the law applies uniformly to all members of the class affected. State v. Tanner, 39 N.C. App. 668, 251 S.E.2d 705, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 303, 254 S.E.2d 924 (1979).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. It clearly delineates those to whom it applies and the classes of conduct proscribed, so that a person of ordinary intelligence may be apprised of the conduct forbidden. State v. Tanner, 39 N.C. App. 668, 251 S.E.2d 705, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 303, 254 S.E.2d 924 (1979).

Where the defendant's earlier conviction was for second-degree murder, a crime of violence, there was no constitutional difficulty with the classification scheme under this section as applied to defendant, since there was clearly a reasonable relation between the classification, those convicted of a crime of violence, and the purpose of the statute, protection of the people from violence. State v. Tanner, 39 N.C. App. 668, 251 S.E.2d 705, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 303, 254 S.E.2d 924 (1979).

Construction with Other Provisions. — Reading § 14-288.8 in pari materia with this section, it is clear that the footnote to § 14-288.8 which reads "nothing in this subsection would prohibit the right of any person to have possession of a firearm within his own home or ... place of business" does not apply to weapons of mass death and destruction; North Carolina did not intend to restore to its ex-felons the right to possess such weapons within their own homes, in contravention of the general federal prohibition against felons possessing firearms. United States v. Walker, 39 F.3d 489 (4th Cir. 1994).

Subsection (a) encompasses a narrow range of guns, while § 14-269.2(b) prohibits any gun, excluding only a BB gun, stun gun, air rifle, or air pistol. In re Cowley, 120 N.C. App. 274, 461 S.E.2d 804 (1995).

Construction with Federal Law. — The fact that state law permits a convicted felon to possess a firearm in his home despite his status as a convicted felon whose civil rights have not been restored was not sufficient to insulate the defendant from prosecution under 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1); a prior felony conviction is exempt from use as predicate offense under § 922(g)(1) only if the defendant has had his civil rights and his firearm privileges restored. United States v. King, 119 F.3d 290 (4th Cir. 1997).

When North Carolina discharged defendant's 1975 and 1977 convictions, the Felony Firearms Act in effect in 1983 barred his possession of firearms for five years; consequently, the occurrence of his 1988 conviction before the expiration of the five-year period precluded a restoration of his civil rights after the other two convictions, and these were, therefore, properly considered along with the 1988 conviction for purposes of the Federal Armed Career Criminal Act, 18 U.S.C. § 924(e). United States v. O'Neal, 180 F.3d 115 (4th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 980, 120 S. Ct. 433, 145 L. Ed. 2d 339 (1999).

In a prosecution under this section, defendant was not subjected to double jeopardy, though he had been tried and acquitted in district court on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon, a charge stemming from the same transaction from which the charge under this section arose, since the warrant in the former action and the indictment in the present action were drawn pursuant to different statutes and elements of the two offenses were separate and distinct. State v. Cobb, 18 N.C. App. 221, 196 S.E.2d 521 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 878 (1974).

Clearly, North Carolina intends to restore to ex-convicts their general citizenship rights but limit their firearms privileges. Therefore, the Felony Firearms Act expressly provides the circumstances under which a "person may not ship, transport, possess or receive firearms," as required by 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(20). United States v. McLean, 904 F.2d 216 (4th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 875, 111 S. Ct. 203, 112 L. Ed. 2d 164 (1990).

Purpose of Repeal of § 14-415.2. — When the Firearms Act became law in 1971, felons were not automatically restored to full citizenship immediately upon their release from prison; however, those felons whose citizenship rights had been restored were exempt from the Act. Then in 1973, North Carolina amended the General Statutes to restore felons to full citizenship immediately upon their unconditional discharge under § 13-1 et seq. When it became apparent that this would make virtually all felons exempt from the Firearms Act, the General Assembly repealed the exemption for felons whose citizenship rights had been restored. United States v. McLean, 904 F.2d 216 (4th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 875, 111 S. Ct. 203, 112 L. Ed. 2d 164 (1990).

Section Held Not Ex Post Facto Respecting Alleged Violation on July 31, 1972. — See State v. Cobb, 18 N.C. App. 221, 196 S.E.2d 521 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 878 (1974).

What Constitutes Conviction Under This Section. — If a defendant enters a plea, including a plea of no contest, so that a felony judgment or imprisonment for more than two years may be imposed then it constitutes a conviction under this section. State v. Watts, 72 N.C. App. 661, 325 S.E.2d 505, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 611, 332 S.E.2d 83 (1985).

Five-Year Period. — Possession beyond the five-year post-release period is simply not a crime in North Carolina. Ex-felons regain the right to possess a gun in North Carolina by the mere passage of time. United States v. Essick, 935 F.2d 28 (4th Cir. 1991).

Sawed-Off Shotguns. — With limited and specific exceptions, no one in North Carolina, ex-felon or otherwise, may possess, store or acquire a sawed-off shotgun for any reason or under any circumstance. United States v. Walker, 39 F.3d 489 (4th Cir. 1994).

Prosecution for Possession of Firearm by Ex-Felon in Violation of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1). — In North Carolina, an ex-felon who is more than five years beyond his release date has the same civil rights regarding firearms as nonfelons; for purposes of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1), then, his prior conviction does not exist. Proof of a prior "conviction" under federal law encompasses more than proof of a discrete event in the defendant's past; the government must show the continuing vitality of the conviction, a matter of proof that, under North Carolina law, necessarily implicates the five-year post-release period. United States v. Essick, 935 F.2d 28 (4th Cir. 1991).

In North Carolina, the government must prove, at a minimum, that the defendant possessed a firearm within five years of release from supervision resulting from the prior North Carolina felony. Otherwise, the defendant would as a matter of law stand in the same shoes as any other person who had not been previously convicted of a felony. United States v. Essick, 935 F.2d 28 (4th Cir. 1991).

Felon convicted of manslaughter whose civil rights were restored was entitled to possess firearms or any type of firearm in his home or business, and all restrictions on his possession of firearms ceased after five years. As a result, the district court erred in denying defendant's motion to dismiss count charging him with violating 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1) by possessing firearms in his home. United States v. Shoemaker, 2 F.3d 53 (4th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1047, 114 S. Ct. 698, 126 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1994).

Because defendant's underlying state felony conviction occurred within five years of a firearm offense, the defendant's civil rights could not have been fully restored, and the government proved a firearm possession violation despite the fact that it did not independently establish that defendant's civil rights had not been restored at the time of his firearm possession. United States v. Thomas, 52 F.3d 82 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 885, 116 S. Ct. 226, 133 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1995.

The General Assembly did not intend a preclusion of consolidation by requiring a separate bill of indictment under this section. Had the General Assembly also intended to preclude consolidation of the related offenses for trial by the requirement of a separate bill of indictment, it would have so stated. State v. Hardy, 67 N.C. App. 122, 312 S.E.2d 699 (1984).

Subsection (c) of this section is clear and unambiguous. It is silent as to the question of consolidation and it simply requires a separate indictment. The mere fact of a requirement of separate indictments constitutes no bar, in and of itself, to consolidation. State v. Hardy, 67 N.C. App. 122, 312 S.E.2d 699 (1984).

Subsection (a). — The first paragraph of subsection (a) creates a substantive criminal offense, complete and definite in its description. State v. Bishop, 119 N.C. App. 695, 459 S.E.2d 830, appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 341 N.C. 653, 462 S.E.2d 518 (1995).

The third paragraph of subsection (a) creates an exception to the offense which allows possession within one's home or place of business. State v. Bishop, 119 N.C. App. 695, 459 S.E.2d 830, appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 341 N.C. 653, 462 S.E.2d 518 (1995).

"Home." — Defendant had plainly surrendered dominion and control of trailer property that he owned when he rented it; thus, it was not his "home" for purposes of this section. State v. Locklear, 121 N.C. App. 355, 465 S.E.2d 61 (1996).

Possession in Own Home or Business. — The first paragraph of subsection (a) of this section creates a substantive criminal offense, complete and definite in its description. The third paragraph of subsection (a) creates an exception to the offense, by excluding from its prohibition the possession of a firearm within one's own home or on his lawful place of business. State v. McNeill, 78 N.C. App. 514, 337 S.E.2d 172 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 383, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

By using the words "within his own home" in the exception in the third paragraph of subsection (a) of this section, as opposed to some broader terminology, the legislature clearly expressed its intent to limit the applicability of the exception to the confines and privacy of the convicted felon's own premises, over which he has dominion and control to the exclusion of the public. State v. McNeill, 78 N.C. App. 514, 337 S.E.2d 172 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 383, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

The Legislature intended to limit the exception under this section to the convicted felon's own premises over which he or she has dominion and control to the exclusion of the public. State v. Cloninger, 83 N.C. App. 529, 350 S.E.2d 895 (1986).

Possession in Common Areas. — The exception in the third paragraph of subsection (a) of this section, applying to a person in his own home, does not encompass common areas of an apartment house, such as stairways, hallways and porches. State v. McNeill, 78 N.C. App. 514, 337 S.E.2d 172 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 383, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

The statutory exception for possession within one's home business does not apply to the common areas of a motel. State v. Cloninger, 83 N.C. App. 529, 350 S.E.2d 895 (1986).

Evidence held sufficient to support a reasonable inference that defendant was on his neighbor's property at the time he fired pistol, and not on his own. State v. Hinson, 85 N.C. App. 558, 355 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 635, 360 S.E.2d 98 (1987).

Operability of Gun. — Where the State produced evidence tending to prove the defendant's constructive possession of a shotgun within five years from the date of a conviction for felonious assault, but there was no evidence as to whether the shotgun was operable, the evidence was sufficient to require the submission of the case to the jury and to support the verdict. State v. Baldwin, 34 N.C. App. 307, 237 S.E.2d 881 (1977).

Inoperability of a handgun or other firearm is not an affirmative defense to a charge of possession of a firearm by a felon. State v. Jackson, 353 N.C. 495, 546 S.E.2d 570 (2001).

The statutory measurements language in this section is not applicable to handguns; the specified measurements are qualifying words which distinguish those firearms, other than handguns, which are also covered by this section. State v. Cloninger, 83 N.C. App. 529, 350 S.E.2d 895 (1986).

Proof of barrel length or overall length is not an essential element of the offense of possession of a handgun within five years after conviction of a felonious offense. State v. Cloninger, 83 N.C. App. 529, 350 S.E.2d 895 (1986).

Evidence of Prior Conviction. — In a prosecution for possession of a firearm by a felon, the trial court did not err in allowing the State to introduce defendant's stipulation as to his previous conviction of breaking and entering a motor vehicle, since the State merely introduced defendant's stipulation into evidence so there would be no doubt as to that particular element of the offense being satisfied; the State offered no other evidence in regard to defendant's prior conviction; and the court properly instructed the jury in its charge to consider the conviction only for the purpose of establishing an essential element of the offense and not as evidence of guilt or predisposition. State v. Jeffers, 48 N.C. App. 663, 269 S.E.2d 731 (1980), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 724, 276 S.E.2d 285 (1981).

The state had no alternative but to introduce evidence of defendant's prior convictions in order to meet its burden of showing an element of possession of a firearm by a felon; thus, the trial did not commit error by the admission of the evidence. State v. Faison, 128 N.C. App. 745, 497 S.E.2d 111 (1998).

Trial court did commit prejudicial error under this section in rejecting defendant's tendered limiting stipulation and admitting evidence of an earlier prior voluntary manslaughter conviction, where defendant was not charged with any attendant offenses similar to his prior conviction, and where the jury was not informed that his prior conviction in any way involved use of a firearm. State v. Jackson, 139 N.C. App. 721, 535 S.E.2d 48 (2000), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 353 N.C. 495 546 S.E.2d 570 (2001).

Burden of Proof. — Absent any evidence that defendant was within the exception in the third paragraph of subsection (a) of this section, the State was required to prove only that the defendant possessed a handgun within five years of his conviction of a felony specified in subsection (b). Defendant's location at the time of the offense would be a substantive issue, requiring negative proof by the State and an instruction by the court, only upon some positive evidence by defendant that defendant's location was within the exception to this section. State v. McNeill, 78 N.C. App. 514, 337 S.E.2d 172 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 383, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

Indictment Upheld. — Assuming for the sake of argument that this section required the State to prove the length both of handguns and of "other firearms", an indictment which alleged that defendant "unlawfully, willfully and feloniously did possess and have in his custody a Charter Arms .38 caliber pistol, which is a handgun", but made no mention of the pistol's length, was sufficient to give defendant notice of the offense charged and to allow defendant to prepare his defense. Furthermore, the State produced at trial the pistol alleged to have been possessed by defendant so that the jurors could determine in court the pistol's length. State v. Riggs, 79 N.C. App. 398, 339 S.E.2d 676 (1986).

Applied in State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 241, 198 S.E.2d 491 (1973); State v. Cobb, 284 N.C. 573, 201 S.E.2d 878 (1974).

Jones, 195 F.3d 205 (4th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1029, 120 S. Ct. 1443, 146 L. Ed. 2d 330 (2000).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

An ex-felon found in possession of a firearm could be prosecuted under the Felony Firearms Act, even though he may have lawfully possessed it prior to the December 1, 1995, amendment since his restoration of rights under Chapter 13, when read in conjunction with this section, expressly prohibits the possession of firearms regardless of the date of felony conviction; the General Assembly clearly intended this section's application to be retroactive. See opinion of Attorney General to Michael P. Martin, Assistant Chief Counsel, Department of the Treasury Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, 1997 N.C.A.G. 52 (8/21/97).

§ 14-415.3. Possession of a firearm or weapon of mass destruction by persons acquitted of certain crimes by reason of insanity or persons determined to be incapable to proceed prohibited.

(a) It is unlawful for the following persons to purchase, own, possess, or have in the person's custody, care, or control, any firearm or any weapon of mass death and destruction as defined by G.S. 14-288.8(c):

(1) A person who has been acquitted by reason of insanity of any crime set out in G.S. 14-415.1(b) or any violation of G.S. 14-33(b)(1), 14-33(b)(8), or 14-34.

(2) A person who has been determined to lack capacity to proceed as provided in G.S. 15A-1002 for any crime set out in G.S. 14-415.1(b) or any violation of G.S. 14-33(b)(1), 14-33(b)(8), or 14-34.

(b) A violation of this section is a Class H felony. Any firearm or weapon of mass death and destruction lawfully seized for a violation of this section shall be forfeited to the State and disposed of as provided in G.S. 15-11.1. (1994, Ex. Sess., c. 13, s. 1.)

§ 14-415.11. Permit to carry concealed handgun; scope of permit.

(a) Any person who has a concealed handgun permit may carry a concealed handgun unless otherwise specifically prohibited by law. The person shall carry the permit together with valid identification whenever the person is carrying a concealed handgun, shall disclose to any law enforcement officer that the person holds a valid permit and is carrying a concealed handgun when approached or addressed by the officer, and shall display both the permit and the proper identification upon the request of a law enforcement officer.

The temporary permit may not be renewed and may be revoked by the sheriff without a hearing.

(c) A person's application for a permit shall be denied only if the applicant fails to qualify under the criteria listed in this Article. If the sheriff denies the application for a permit, the sheriff shall, within 90 days, notify the applicant in writing, stating the grounds for denial. The permittee's criminal history shall be updated, and the sheriff may waive the requirement of taking another firearms safety and training course. If the permittee applies for a renewal of the permit within 30 days of its expiration date and if the permittee remains qualified to have a permit under G.S. 14-415.12, the sheriff shall renew the permit. No fingerprints shall be required for a renewal permit if the applicant's fingerprints were submitted to the State Bureau of Investigation after June 30, 2001, on the Automated Fingerprint Information System (AFIS) as prescribed by the State Bureau of Investigation. (4) The violation of any of the terms of this Article.

(5) The applicant is adjudicated guilty of or receives a prayer for judgment continued for a crime which would have disqualified the applicant from initially receiving a permit.

A permittee may appeal the revocation, or nonrenewal of a permit by petitioning a district court judge of the district in which the applicant resides. The determination by the court, on appeal, shall be upon the facts, the law, and the reasonableness of the sheriff's refusal.

The county finance officer shall remit forty-five dollars ($45.00) of each new application fee and forty dollars ($40.00) of each renewal fee to the North Carolina Department of Justice for the costs of State and federal criminal record checks performed in connection with processing applications and for the implementation of the provisions of this Article. The remaining thirty-five dollars ($35.00) of each application or renewal fee shall be used by the sheriff to pay the costs of administering this Article and for other law enforcement purposes. The county shall expend the restricted funds for these purposes only.

(b) An additional fee, not to exceed ten dollars ($10.00), shall be collected by the sheriff from an applicant for a permit to pay for the costs of processing the applicant's fingerprints, if fingerprints were required to be taken. This fee shall be retained by the sheriff. (1995, c. 398, s. 1; c. 507, s. 22.1(a); 1997-470, s. 1; 2000-140, s. 103; 2000-191, s. 2.)

(4) Manufacture, distribute, transport or wholesale any such article for profit, or possess for such purposes with the knowledge that the sounds are so transferred, without consent of the owner.

(b) Subdivisions (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this section shall apply only to sound recordings that were initially fixed prior to February 15, 1972. Federal copyright law, 17 U.S.C. § 101 et seq., preempts State prosecution of the acts described in subdivisions (a)(1) and (a)(2) with respect to sound recordings initially fixed on or after February 15, 1972.

(c) This section shall not apply to any person engaged in radio or television broadcasting who transfers, or causes to be transferred, any such sounds other than from the sound track of a motion picture intended for, or in connection with broadcast or telecast transmission or related uses, or for archival purposes. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1; 1989, c. 589, s. 1.)

§ 14-434. Retailing, etc., of certain recorded devices unlawful.

It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly retail, advertise or offer for sale or resale, sell or resell or cause the sale or resale, rent or cause to rent, or possess for any of these purposes any article that has been produced, manufactured, distributed, or acquired at wholesale in violation of any provision of this Chapter. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1, 1989, c. 589, s. 1.)

§ 14-435. Recorded devices to show true name and address of manufacturer.

Ninety days after January 1, 1975, every article knowingly sold or transferred or possessed for the purpose of sale, advertising or offering for sale or resale, renting or transporting or causing to be rented or transported by any manufacturer, distributor, or wholesale or retail merchant shall contain on its packaging the true name and address of the manufacturer. The term "manufacturer" shall not include the manufacturer of the cartridge or casing itself. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1; 1989, c. 589, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Payment of Attorneys' Fees. — Plaintiffs who filed federal claim to recover statutory damages for the infringing activity of defendants, justifiably seeking protection of their rights under the law, were entitled to attorney's fees where defendants were convicted in state court for failure to show the true name and address of the manufacturer on packaging on certain sound recordings; defendants' criminal activity supported a finding of bad faith and wilfulness in the infringement of plaintiff's copyrights. Arista Records v. Tysinger, 867 F. Supp. 345 (M.D.N.C. 1994).

§ 14-436. Recorded devices; civil action for damages.

Any owner of an article as defined in this Chapter whose work is allegedly the subject of a violation of G.S. 14-433 or 14-434, shall have a cause of action in the courts of this State for all damages resulting therefrom, including actual, compensatory and incidental damages. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1; 1989, c. 589, s. 1.)

§ 14-437. Violation of Article; penalties.

(a) Every individual act in contravention of the provisions of this Article shall constitute:

(1) A Class I felony, which may include a fine of not more than one hundred fifty thousand dollars ($150,000), if the offense involves at least 1,000 unauthorized sound recordings or at least 100 unauthorized audio visual recordings during any 180-day period or is a second or subsequent conviction under either subdivision (1) or (2) of this section;

(2) A Class 1 misdemeanor, if the offense involves more than 100 but less than 1,000 unauthorized sound recordings or more than 10 but less than 100 unauthorized audio visual recordings during any 180-day period; or

(3) A Class 2 misdemeanor, for any other violation of these sections.

(b) If a person is convicted of any violation under this Article, the court, in its judgment of conviction, shall order the forfeiture and destruction or other disposition of:

(1) All infringing articles; and

(2) All implements, devices and equipment used or intended to be used in the manufacture of the infringing articles. (1973, c. 1279, s. 1; 1989, c. 589, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, ss. 291, 1246; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Payment of Attorneys' Fees. — Plaintiffs who filed federal claim to recover statutory damages for the infringing activity of defendants, justifiably seeking protection of their rights under the law, were entitled to attorney's fees where defendants were convicted in state court for failure to show the true name and address of the manufacturer on packaging on certain sound recordings; defendants' criminal activity supported a finding of bad faith and wilfulness in the infringement of plaintiff's copyrights. Article 59.

Public Intoxication.

§ 14-443. Definitions.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Alcoholism" is the state of a person who habitually lacks self-control as to the use of alcoholic beverages, or uses alcoholic beverages to the extent that his health is substantially impaired or endangered or his social or economic function is substantially disrupted; and

(2) "Intoxicated" is the condition of a person whose mental or physical functioning is presently substantially impaired as a result of the use of alcohol; and

(3) A "public place" is a place which is open to the public, whether it is publicly or privately owned. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1981, c. 412, s. 4; c. 747, s. 66.)

§ 14-444. Intoxicated and disruptive in public.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person in a public place to be intoxicated and disruptive in any of the following ways:

(1) Blocking or otherwise interfering with traffic on a highway or public vehicular area, or

(2) Blocking or lying across or otherwise preventing or interfering with access to or passage across a sidewalk or entrance to a building, or

(3) Grabbing, shoving, pushing or fighting others or challenging others to fight, or

(4) Cursing or shouting at or otherwise rudely insulting others, or

(5) Begging for money or other property.

(b) Any person who violates this section shall be guilty of a Class 3 misdemeanor. Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 7A-273(1), a magistrate is not empowered to accept a guilty plea and enter judgment for this offense. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 292; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Mere public intoxication, standing alone, is no longer unlawful, and in order for there to be a chargeable offense, the intoxicated person must be disruptive in one or more of the ways described in subdivisions (1)-(5) of subsection (a). State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

Section Not Violated. — This statute, making it unlawful for any person in a public place to be intoxicated and disruptive by cursing or shouting at or otherwise rudely insulting others, was not violated by defendant's conduct in standing in a motel parking lot in an intoxicated condition, looking up toward the sky, and shouting "God is alive," and "God is in heaven," and other words which sounded like a foreign language. State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

Applied in Craven County Hosp. Corp. v. Lenoir County, 75 N.C. App. 453, 331 S.E.2d 690 (1985).

Cited in State v. Baker, 77 N.C. App. 465, 335 S.E.2d 56 (1985).

§ 14-445. Defense of alcoholism.

(a) It is a defense to a charge of being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place that the defendant suffers from alcoholism.

(b) The presiding judge at the trial of a defendant charged with being intoxicated and disruptive in public shall consider the defense of alcoholism even though the defendant does not raise the defense, and may request additional information on whether the defendant is suffering from alcoholism.

(c) Whenever any person charged with committing a misdemeanor under G.S. 14-444 enters a plea to the charge, the court may, without entering a judgment, defer further proceedings for up to 15 days to determine whether the person is suffering from alcoholism.

(d) If he believes it will be of value in making his determination, the district court judge may direct an alcoholism court counselor, if available, to conduct a prehearing review of the alleged alcoholic's drinking history in order to gather additional information as to whether the defendant is suffering from alcoholism. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1981, c. 519, s. 1.)

§ 14-446. Disposition of defendant acquitted because of alcoholism.

If a defendant is found not guilty of being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place because he suffers from alcoholism, the court in which he was tried may retain jurisdiction over him for up to 15 days to determine whether he is a substance abuser and dangerous to himself or others as provided in G.S. 122C-281. The trial judge may make that determination at the time the defendant is found not guilty or he may require the defendant to return to court for the determination at some later time within the 15-day period. (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1985, c. 589, s. 6.)

§ 14-447. No prosecution for public intoxication.

(a) No person may be prosecuted solely for being intoxicated in a public place. A person who is intoxicated in a public place and is not disruptive may be assisted as provided in G.S. 122C-301.

(b) If, after arresting a person for being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place, the law-enforcement officer making the arrest determines that the person would benefit from the care of a shelter or health-care facility as provided by G.S. 122C-301, and that he would not likely be disruptive in such a facility, the officer may transport and release the person to the appropriate facility and issue him a citation for the offense of being intoxicated and disruptive in a public place. This authority to arrest and then issue a citation is granted as an exception to the requirements of G.S. 15A-501(2). (1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 1; 1981, c. 519, s. 2; 1985, c. 589, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

Mere public intoxication, standing alone, is no longer unlawful, and in order for there to be a chargeable offense, the intoxicated person must be disruptive in one or more of the ways described in § 14-444(a)(1)-(5). State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

Those who are intoxicated but not disruptive may be assisted but not arrested. State v. Cooke, 49 N.C. App. 384, 271 S.E.2d 561 (1980).

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-125, s. 3, effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, in subdivision (6a), deleted "but not limited to" following "including" and inserted "optical storage media"; added present subdivision (6b) and redesignated former subdivision (6b) as present subdivision (6c).

§ 14-454. Accessing computers.

(a) It is unlawful to willfully, directly or indirectly, access or cause to be accessed any computer, computer program, computer system, computer network, or any part thereof, for the purpose of:

(1) Devising or executing any scheme or artifice to defraud, unless the object of the scheme or artifice is to obtain educational testing material, a false educational testing score, or a false academic or vocational grade, or

(2) Obtaining property or services other than educational testing material, a false educational testing score, or a false academic or vocational grade for a person, by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations or promises.

A violation of this subsection is a Class G felony if the fraudulent scheme or artifice results in damage of more than one thousand dollars ($1,000), or if the property or services obtained are worth more than one thousand dollars ($1,000). Any other violation of this subsection is a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) Any person who willfully and without authorization, directly or indirectly, accesses or causes to be accessed any computer, computer program, computer system, or computer network for any purpose other than those set forth in subsection (a) above, is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(c) For the purpose of this section, the phrase "access or cause to be accessed" includes introducing, directly or indirectly, a computer program (including a self-replicating or a self-propagating computer program) into a computer, computer program, computer system, or computer network. (1979, c.

831, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 19; 1981, cc. 63, 179; 1993, c. 539, s. 293; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 764, s. 1; 2000-125, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — The section above was amended by Session Laws 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 764, s. 1 in the coded bill drafting format provided by § 120-20.1. The act failed to incorporate the changes in subsection (b) made by Session Laws 1993, c. 539. Subsection (b) is set out in the form above at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-125, s. 4, effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, inserted "computer program" in subsections (a), (b) and (c); and substituted "phrase 'access or cause to be accessed'" for "term 'accessing or causing to be accessed'" in subsection (c).

CASE NOTES

The trial court did not err in finding the aggravating factor of damage causing great monetary loss where the crime involved the use of computers to divert millions of dollars and where the amount of money involved in the offense was not an element but came into play only at the time of sentencing. State v. Hughes, 136 N.C. App. 92, 524 S.E.2d 63 (1999).

§ 14-455. Damaging computers, computer programs, computer systems, computer networks, and resources.

(a) It is unlawful to willfully and without authorization alter, damage, or destroy a computer, computer program, computer system, computer network, or any part thereof. A violation of this subsection is a Class G felony if the damage caused by the alteration, damage, or destruction is more than one thousand dollars ($1,000). Any other violation of this subsection is a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) This section applies to alteration, damage, or destruction effectuated by introducing, directly or indirectly, a computer program (including a self-replicating or a self-propagating computer program) into a computer, computer program, computer system, or computer network. (1979, c. 831, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 20; 1981, cc. 63, 179; 1993, c. 539, s. 294; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 764, s. 1; 1995, c. 509, s. 12; 2000-125, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-125, s. 5, effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, inserted "computer program" or its plural variant in the section heading and in subsections (a) and (b).

§ 14-456. Denial of computer services to an authorized user.

(a) Any person who willfully and without authorization denies or causes the denial of computer, computer program, computer system, or computer network services to an authorized user of the computer, computer program, computer system, or computer network services is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) This section also applies to denial of services effectuated by introducing, directly or indirectly, a computer program (including a self-replicating or a self-propagating computer program) into a computer, computer program, computer system, or computer network. (1979, c. 831, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 295; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 764, s. 1; 2000-125, s. 6.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-125, s. 6, effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, inserted "computer program" twice in subsection (a) and once in subsection (b).

§ 14-457. Extortion.

Any person who verbally or by a written or printed communication, maliciously threatens to commit an act described in G.S. 14-455 with the intent to extort money or any pecuniary advantage, or with the intent to compel any person to do or refrain from doing any act against his will, is guilty of a Class H felony. (1979, c. 831, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 21; 1981, cc. 63, 179.)

§ 14-458. Computer trespass; penalty.

(a) Except as otherwise made unlawful by this Article, it shall be unlawful for any person to use a computer or computer network without authority and with the intent to do any of the following:

(1) Temporarily or permanently remove, halt, or otherwise disable any computer data, computer programs, or computer software from a computer or computer network.

(2) Cause a computer to malfunction, regardless of how long the malfunction persists.

(3) Alter or erase any computer data, computer programs, or computer software.

(4) Cause physical injury to the property of another.

(5) Make or cause to be made an unauthorized copy, in any form, including, but not limited to, any printed or electronic form of computer data, computer programs, or computer software residing in, communicated by, or produced by a computer or computer network.

(6) Falsely identify with the intent to deceive or defraud the recipient or forge commercial electronic mail transmission information or other routing information in any manner in connection with the transmission of unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail through or into the computer network of an electronic mail service provider or its subscribers.

For purposes of this subsection, a person is "without authority" when (i) the person has no right or permission of the owner to use a computer, or the person uses a computer in a manner exceeding the right or permission, or (ii) the person uses a computer or computer network, or the computer services of an electronic mail service provider to transmit unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail in contravention of the authority granted by or in violation of the policies set by the electronic mail service provider.

(b) Any person who violates this section shall be guilty of computer trespass, which offense shall be punishable as a Class 3 misdemeanor. If there is damage to the property of another and the damage is valued at less than two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) caused by the person's act in violation of this section, the offense shall be punished as a Class 1 misdemeanor. If there is damage to the property of another valued at two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) or more caused by the person's act in violation of this section, the offense shall be punished as a Class I felony.

(c) Any person whose property or person is injured by reason of a violation of this section may sue for and recover any damages sustained and the costs of the suit pursuant to G.S. 1-539.2A. (1999-212, s. 3; 2000-125, s. 7.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-212, s. 5, makes this section effective December 1, 1999, and applicable to offenses occurring on or after that date.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-125, s. 7, effective December 1, 2000, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "Except as otherwise made unlawful by this Article, it shall be unlawful" for "It shall be unlawful" in subsection (a).
