Preface

This volume contains the general laws of a permanent nature enacted by the General Assembly through the 2001 Regular Session that are within Chapters 15 through 18A, and brings to date the annotations included therein.

A majority of the Session Laws are made effective upon becoming law, but a few provide for stated effective dates. If the Session Law makes no provision for an effective date, the law becomes effective under G.S. 120-20 "from and after 60 days after the adjournment of the session" in which passed.

A ready reference index is included at the back of this volume. This index is intended to give the user a quick reference to larger bodies of statutes within this volume only. For detailed research on any subject, both within this volume and the General Statutes as a whole, see the General Index to the General Statutes.

Beginning with formal opinions issued by the North Carolina Attorney General on July 1, 1969, selected opinions which construe a specific statute are cited in the annotations to that statute. For a copy of an opinion or of its headnotes, write the Attorney General, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

This recompiled volume has been prepared and published under the supervision of the Department of Justice of the State of North Carolina. The members of the North Carolina Bar are requested to communicate any suggestions they may have for improving the General Statutes to the Department, or to LexisNexis, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, repealed, transferred and amended numerous sections in this Chapter and elsewhere in the General Statutes, largely relating to pretrial procedure, and enacted a new Chapter 15A, the Criminal Procedure Act.

Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, ss. 27, 28, and 31, provided: "Sec. 27. All statutes which refer to sections repealed or amended by this act shall be deemed, insofar as possible, to refer to those provisions of this act which accomplish the same or an equivalent purpose.

"Sec. 28. None of the provisions of this act providing for the repeal of certain sections of the General Statutes shall constitute a reenactment of the common law.

"Sec. 31. This act becomes effective on July 1, 1975, and is applicable to all criminal proceedings begun on and after that date and each provision is applicable to criminal proceedings pending on that date to the extent practicable, except § 12 [§§ 15-176.3 through 15-176.5] of this act which becomes effective on July 1, 1974."

Session Laws 1975, c. 573, amended Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, s. 31, so as to make the provisions of the act that were to become effective on July 1, 1975 effective Sept. 1, 1975.

Article 1.

General Provisions.

§ 15-1. Statute of limitations for misdemeanors.

The crimes of deceit and malicious mischief, and the crime of petit larceny where the value of the property does not exceed five dollars ($5.00), and all misdemeanors except malicious misdemeanors, shall be presented or found by the grand jury within two years after the commission of the same, and not afterwards: Provided, that if any indictment found within that time shall be defective, so that no judgment can be given thereon, another prosecution may be instituted for the same offense, within one year after the first shall have been abandoned by the State. (1826, c. 11; R.C., c. 35, s. 8; Code, s. 1177; Rev., s. 3147; 1907, c. 408; C.S., s. 4512; 1943, c. 543.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Particular Offenses.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section Not Repealed. — There is no stated purpose in § 15A-641 that indicates the legislature intended to repeal this section. Furthermore, § 15A-641 appears to be an effort by the legislature to codify the common law that permitted the use of presentments by grand juries but prohibited the arrest and trial of defendants on a presentment. Thus, this section has not been repealed and remains a part of the law of this State; it would support the order of the trial court denying defendant's motion to dismiss. State v. Whittle, 118 N.C. App. 130, 454 S.E.2d 688 (1995).

Effect of Statute on Privilege Against Self-Incrimination. — A witness cannot invoke the privilege against self-incrimination where he is either immune from prosecution, or where prosecution is barred by statute of limitations. Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

A legal limitation of time of prosecution is in practical effect expurgation of crime; so after the lapse of time fixed by law, the privilege against self-incrimination ceases. Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

Meaning of "Deceit". — There has never been such an indictable offense as "deceit" but the meaning of this section has always been that misdemeanors, the gist of which was a malice or deceit, were within the exception of the section as formerly appearing. State v. Crowell, 116 N.C. 1052, 21 S.E. 502 (1895).

There being no such offense as "deceit," this term would apply to "cheating by false token" of which deceit was the gist but would not include "conspiracy to cheat" the gist of which offense is the conspiracy and the cheating but an aggravation. "Deceit" is not restricted to "cheating by false token". It is an instance of an offense coming within the general description of misdemeanors by deceit. State v. Christiansbury, 44 N.C. 46 (1852); State v. Crowell, 116 N.C. 1052, 21 S.E. 502 (1895).

Meaning of "Malicious Misdemeanors". — When, in the former wording of this section, the Legislature used the words "other malicious misdemeanors," which immediately followed the words "malicious mischief," it evidently intended to describe offenses of which malice was a necessary ingredient to constitute the criminal act, as in the case of malicious mischief. It was not the purpose to include within the exception from the operation of this section such offenses as would be misdemeanors, even in the absence of malice, and when malice, if present, would be only a circumstance of aggravation, which the court might consider in imposing the punishment. State v. Frisbee, 142 N.C. 671, 55 S.E. 722 (1906).

What Constitutes a Presentment. — See State v. Morris, 104 N.C. 537, 10 S.E. 454 (1889).

Statute Tolled on Date of Indictment or Presentment. — In criminal cases where an indictment or presentment is required, the date on which the indictment or presentment has been brought or found by the grand jury marks the beginning of the criminal proceeding and arrests the statute of limitations. State v. Underwood, 244 N.C. 68, 92 S.E.2d 461 (1956); State v. Hundley, 272 N.C. 491, 158 S.E.2d 582 (1968).

The indictment marks the beginning of the prosecution and it arrests the running of the statute of limitations. State v. Williams, 151 N.C. 660, 65 S.E. 908 (1909).

Even If Defendant Is Apprehended and Tried More Than Two Years After Offense. — An indictment or presentment marks the beginning of the prosecution so as to toll the statute of limitations, even though defendant be apprehended and tried more than two years after the offense was committed. State v. Best, 10 N.C. App. 62, 177 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

When Statute Tolled on Appeal to Superior Court. — In all misdemeanor cases, where there has been a conviction in an inferior court that had final jurisdiction of the offense charged, upon appeal to the superior court the accused may be tried upon the original warrant and the statute of limitations is tolled from the date of the issuance of the warrant. State v. Underwood, 244 N.C. 68, 92 S.E.2d 461 (1956); State v. Hundley, 272 N.C. 491, 158 S.E.2d 582 (1968).

Entry of Nolle Prosequi "With Leave." — This section does not begin to run from an entry of nolle prosequi "with leave." State v. Williams, 151 N.C. 660, 65 S.E. 908 (1909).

Effect of Preliminary Warrants. — There is no saving clause in this section as to the effect of preliminary warrants before a justice of the peace or other committing magistrate, and the law must be construed and applied as written. There must be a presentment or indictment within two years from the time of the offense committed and not afterwards. State v. Hedden, 187 N.C. 803, 123 S.E. 65 (1924).

Void Warrant Does Not Toll Statute. — The issuance of a void warrant in a misdemeanor prosecution does not toll the running of this section, and where on appeal from a conviction upon such warrant in an inferior court defendant is tried upon an identical indictment returned by the grand jury more than two years after the commission of the offense, he is entitled to quashal of the indictment. State v. Hundley, 272 N.C. 491, 158 S.E.2d 582 (1968).

Defective Indictments Exception Not Applicable to Warrants. — The statute of limitations had run as a result of the defendant being charged with a fatally defective warrant; although defective indictments may be refiled within one year of dismissal, no such exception exists for defective warrants. State v. Madry, 140 N.C. App. 600, 537 S.E.2d 827 (2000).

Trial on Second Bill After Two Years Barred. — Even an indictment within the statutory time limit will not uphold a trial and conviction on a second bill found after the statutory period. State v. Tomlinson, 25 N.C. 32 (1842); State v. Hedden, 187 N.C. 803, 123 S.E. 65 (1924).

No statute of limitation bars the prosecution of a felony. State v. Johnson, 275 N.C. 264, 167 S.E.2d 274 (1969).

Where a warrant charging a misdemeanor is amended to charge a felony, defendant's plea of the statute of limitations on the misdemeanor count becomes immaterial. State v. Sanderson, 213 N.C. 381, 196 S.E. 324 (1938).

Necessity for Pleading Statute. — For a person charged with the commission of a criminal offense to avail himself of the alleged running of the statute of limitations, he must either specifically plead it or in apt time bring it to the attention of the court. State v. Brinkley, 193 N.C. 747, 138 S.E. 138 (1927).

Statute Not Presumed to Have Run. — Upon a trial on indictment for the sale of intoxicants where there was evidence of sales at undisclosed times, it would not be presumed that such sales occurred more than two years next preceding the prosecution when defendant has not pleaded this section, or in apt time called it to the court's attention or offered evidence as to the dates of sale. State v. Colson, 222 N.C. 28, 21 S.E.2d 808 (1942).

Jury is not restricted to the time stated in the indictment, but is at liberty, as directed by the trial judge, to consider acts charged and proved within the two years next before the finding of the indictment. State v. Newsome, 47 N.C. 173 (1855).

Wrong Name in Bill of Indictment. — A bill of indictment against a person by a wrong name, which is pleaded to in abatement, and the plea found, is, nevertheless, the same cause of action, and the elapse of two years is no bar to prosecution. State v. Hailey, 51 N.C. 42 (1858).

Applied in State v. Watts, 32 N.C. 369 (1849); State v. Claywell, 98 N.C. 731, 3 S.E. 920 (1887); State v. Crowell, 116 N.C. 1052, 21 S.E. 502 (1895); State v. Frisbee, 142 N.C. 671, 55 S.E. 722 (1906); United States v. MacCloskey, 682 F.2d 468 (4th Cir. 1982).

Cited in State v. Brown, 81 N.C. App. 281, 343 S.E.2d 553 (1986).

II. PARTICULAR OFFENSES.

Adultery is subject to two-year statute of limitations. Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

Bastardy proceedings are not governed by this section. State v. Perry, 122 N.C. 1043, 30 S.E. 139 (1898).

Conspiracy. — The section has no application to conspiracy, which is a felony. State v. Mallett, 125 N.C. 718, 34 S.E. 651 (1899), aff'd, 181 U.S. 589, 21 S. Ct. 730, 45 L. Ed. 1015 (1901).

Each Overt Act of Conspiracy Tolls Statute. — A conspiracy is a continuing offense so that the statute of limitations is tolled as to the original conspiracy each time an overt act is committed in furtherance of the purpose and design of the conspiracy. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Where a count and the indictment alleged that a conspiracy continued from time to time with the commission of overt acts by the alleged conspirators in furtherance of conspiracy and to effectuate its unlawful purpose within two years of the finding of the indictment, the trial court correctly overruled defendants' motion to quash the first count in the indictment on the ground that a prosecution on such count was barred by this section. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Conspiracy to commit a misdemeanor is a misdemeanor. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Influencing Agents and Servants. — Violation of § 14-353, which makes it a crime to influence agents and servants to violate duties owed employers, is not a malicious misdemeanor. State v. Brewer, 258 N.C. 533, 129 S.E.2d 262, appeal dismissed, 375 U.S. 9, 84 S. Ct. 72, 11 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1963).

Public Nuisances. — No length of possession can bar an action to abate a public nuisance. State v. Holman, 104 N.C. 861, 10 S.E. 758 (1889).

§§ 15-2, 15-3: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, s. 26.

Cross References. — See Editor's note following the analysis to this Chapter. For present provisions as to criminal process, see §§ 15A-301 through 15A-305.

§ 15-4. Accused entitled to counsel.

Every person, accused of any crime whatsoever, shall be entitled to counsel in all matters which may be necessary for his defense. (1777, c. 115, s. 85, P.R.; R.C., c. 35, s. 13; Code, s. 1182; Rev., s. 3150; C.S., s. 4515.)

Cross References. — As to constitutional provisions for counsel, see the N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23, and U.S. Const., Amend. VI. As to court's power to limit argument, see § 7A-97.

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the right of counsel, see 32 N.C.L. Rev. 331 (1954).

CASE NOTES

Right Is Constitutional. — In all criminal prosecutions every man has the right to have counsel for his defense under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23. State v. Sykes, 79 N.C. 618 (1878); State v. Hardy, 189 N.C. 799, 128 S.E. 152 (1925).

Right Is a Mandate in Capital Felony Cases. — Where the crime charged is a capital felony this right becomes a mandate. State v. Farrell, 223 N.C. 321, 26 S.E.2d 322 (1943); State v. Hedgebeth, 228 N.C. 259, 45 S.E.2d 563 (1947), cert. dismissed, 334 U.S. 806, 68 S. Ct. 1185, 92 L. Ed. 1739 (1948).

Counsel Allowed Reasonable Time to Prepare Case. — The right to counsel and the right of confrontation are closely interrelated and, together, form an integral part of a fair trial. Hence, this requirement, as incorporated in this section, was not intended to be a mere formality. It does not contemplate that counsel shall be compelled to act without being allowed reasonable time within which to understand the case and prepare for the defense. State v. Farrell, 223 N.C. 321, 26 S.E.2d 322 (1943).

Right Following Waiver at Prior Stage. — Where defendant had waived his right to have assigned counsel at the preliminary hearing, but made a specific request for a lawyer prior to the selection of the jury at his trial in the superior court, he was entitled to be represented by counsel. State v. Haire, 19 N.C. App. 89, 198 S.E.2d 31 (1973).

Cited in Hammond v. North Carolina, 227 F. Supp. 1 (E.D.N.C. 1964); State v. Hill, 276 N.C. 1, 170 S.E.2d 885 (1969); State v. Anderson, 281 N.C. 261, 188 S.E.2d 336 (1972).

§§ 15-4.1 through 15-5.1: Repealed by Session Laws 1969, c. 1013, s. 12.

§ 15-5.2: Repealed by Session Laws 1969, c. 1013, s. 6.

§§ 15-5.3, 15-5.4: Repealed by Session Laws 1969, c. 1013, s. 12.

§ 15-6. Imprisonment to be in county jail.

No person shall be imprisoned except in the common jail of the county, unless otherwise provided by law: Provided, that whenever the sheriff of any county shall be imprisoned, he may be imprisoned in the jail of any adjoining county. (1797, c. 474, s. 3, P.R.; R.C., c. 35, s. 6; 1879, c. 12; Code, s. 1174; Rev., s. 3151; C.S., s. 4517; 1973, c. 1141, s. 1.)

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

This section has two prongs. First, it makes clear the type of facility in which a convicted defendant shall not serve a term of imprisonment, unless permitted under other legislation, and second, it provides that a person may only be sentenced to imprisonment in the county where the crime was committed. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bruce E. Colvin, Assistant County Attorney, Forsyth County, 55 N.C.A.G. 21 (1985).

Place of Imprisonment Where Sentence Is Less Than or Greater Than 180 Days. — Absent specific statutory authorization (see, e.g., §§ 15A-711, 148-32.1, 162-38 to 162-40), imprisonment of misdemeanants with sentences of 180 days or less must be in the local confinement facility of the county where the crime was committed. If the sentence is greater than 180 days, commitment may be either to such a local facility or to the N.C. Department of Correction. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bruce E. Colvin, Assistant County Attorney, Forsyth County, 55 N.C.A.G. 21 (1985).

Section Overridden by § 15A-1352 as to Certain Criminals. — While § 15-6 applies to both felons and misdemeanants, § 15A-1352 overrides § 15-6 to the extent it provides for certain felons and misdemeanants to be sentenced to terms of imprisonment under the jurisdiction of the N.C. Department of Correction. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bruce E. Colvin, Assistant County Attorney, Forsyth County, 55 N.C.A.G. 21 (1985).

Effect of § 15A-1352 on Section. — Section 15A-1352 is an exception to § 15-6 as to those misdemeanants with sentences of more than 180 days, because they may be sentenced to serve their term of imprisonment under the jurisdiction of the Department of Correction, but as to those not placed in the custody of the Department of Correction, the only effect of § 15A-1352 is to broaden the term "common jail" to include other types of local facilities which may be used under appropriate circumstances. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bruce Colvin, Assistant County Attorney, Forsyth County, 55 N.C.A.G. 21 (1985).

County of Venue Irrelevant in Determining Place of Imprisonment. — Even though the venue of a criminal trial may properly be in a county other than the one in which the crime occurred, to the extent that § 15-6 applies, it requires imprisonment to be in the county jail of the county where the crime occurred. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bruce Colvin, Assistant County Attorney, Forsyth County, 55 N.C.A.G. 21 (1985).

§ 15-6.1. Changing place of confinement of prisoner committing offense.

In all cases where a defendant has been convicted in a court inferior to the superior court and sentenced to a term in the county jail or to serve in some county institution other than under the supervision of the State Department of Correction, and such defendant is subsequently brought before such court for an offense committed prior to the expiration of the term to be served in such county institution, upon conviction, plea of guilty or nolo contendere, the judge shall have the power and authority to change the place of confinement of the prisoner and commit such defendant to work under the supervision of the State Department of Correction. This provision shall apply whether or not the terms of the new sentence are to run concurrently with or consecutive to the remaining portion of the old sentence. (1953, c. 778; 1957, c. 65, s. 11; 1967, c. 996, s. 16.)

§ 15-6.2. Concurrent sentences for offenses of different grades or to be served in different places.

When by a judgment of a court or by operation of law a prison sentence runs concurrently with any other sentence a prisoner shall not be required to serve any additional time in prison solely because the concurrent sentences are for different grades of offenses or that it is required that they be served in different places of confinement. (1955, c. 57.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on this section, see 35 N.C.L. Rev. 112 (1956).

CASE NOTES

Concurrent sentences may be imposed for separate offenses, even though one is for a misdemeanor and the other a felony, so that one is required to be served in the State's prison and one in the county jail. State v. Brooks, 271 N.C. 462, 156 S.E.2d 676 (1967).

Applied in State v. Efird, 271 N.C. 730, 157 S.E.2d 538 (1967).

§ 15-6.3. Credit for service of sentence while in another jurisdiction.

When a person in actual confinement under sentence of another jurisdiction is brought for trial before a court of this State, the court may, upon sentencing, specifically impose a sentence to be concurrently served and direct that such person receive credit against the sentence imposed for all time subsequently served in the jurisdiction possessing physical custody of such person. (1971, c. 828.)

§ 15-7. Postmortem examinations directed.

In all cases of homicide, any officer prosecuting for the State may, at any time, direct a postmortem examination of the deceased to be made by one or more physicians to be summoned for the purpose; and the physicians shall be paid a reasonable compensation for such examination, the amount to be determined by the court and taxed in the costs, and if not collected out of the defendant the same shall be paid by the State. CASE NOTES

Section Valid. — This section is a valid exercise of the police power of the State. Withers v. Board of Comm'rs, 163 N.C. 341, 79 S.E. 615 (1913).

Liability for Wrongful Mutilation. — Coroner and physicians performing autopsy may be held liable by father of deceased for wrongful mutilation when the autopsy is ordered by the coroner on his own initiative solely to ascertain the cause of death without suspicion of foul play, since in such case the coroner is without authority to order the autopsy, and his direction therefor can confer no immunity upon the physicians. Gurganious v. Simpson, 213 N.C. 613, 197 S.E. 163 (1938).

§ 15-8. Stolen property returned to owner.

Upon the conviction of any person for robbing or stealing any money, goods, chattels, or other estate of any description whatever, the person from whom such goods, money, chattels or other estate were robbed or stolen shall be entitled to restitution thereof; and the court may award restitution of the articles so robbed or stolen, and make all such orders and issue such writs of restitution or otherwise as may be necessary for that purpose. (21 Hen. VIII, c. 11; R.C., c. 35, s. 34; Code, s. 1201; Rev., s. 3153; C.S., s. 4519; 1943, c. 543.)

§ 15-10. Speedy trial or discharge on commitment for felony.

When any person who has been committed for treason or felony, plainly and specially expressed in the warrant of commitment, upon his prayer in open court to be brought to his trial, shall not be indicted some time in the next term of the superior or criminal court ensuing such commitment, the judge of the court, upon notice in open court on the last day of the term, shall set at liberty such prisoner upon bail, unless it appear upon oath that the witnesses for the State could not be produced at the same term; and if such prisoner, upon his prayer as aforesaid, shall not be indicted and tried at the second term of the court, he shall be discharged from his imprisonment: Provided, the judge presiding may, in his discretion, refuse to discharge such person if the time between the first and second terms of the court be less than four months. (1868-9, c. 116, s. 33; Code, s. 1658; Rev., s. 3155; 1913, c. 2; C.S., s. 4521.)

CASE NOTES

Section is for the protection of persons held without bail. State v. Lowry, 263 N.C. 536, 139 S.E.2d 870, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 382 U.S. 22, 86 S. Ct. 227, 15 L. Ed. 2d 16 (1965); State v. Wilburn, 21 N.C. App. 140, 203 S.E.2d 407 (1974); Farrington v. North Carolina, 391 F. Supp. 714 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

It requires simply that under certain circumstances the prisoner be discharged from custody. State v. Patton, 260 N.C. 359, 132 S.E.2d 891 (1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 956, 84 S. Ct. 977, 11 L. Ed. 2d 974 (1964); State v. Lowry, 263 N.C. 536, 139 S.E.2d 870, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 382 U.S. 22, 86 S. Ct. 227, 15 L. Ed. 2d 16 (1965); State v. Cavallaro, 274 N.C. 480, 164 S.E.2d 168 (1968).

This section merely provides that under certain circumstances a defendant who has not been speedily tried shall be released from custody. It does not require that the prosecution against him be dismissed. State v. Hardin, 20 N.C. App. 193, 201 S.E.2d 74 (1973).

In a case where the court has ordered that defendant's trial must begin within a certain time period or he must be discharged, failure to try defendant within that time period, absent determination that defendant has been deprived of a speedy trial, results only in release of defendant from custody, but not dismissal of charges against him. State v. Wilburn, 21 N.C. App. 140, 203 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 376, 205 S.E.2d 101 (1974).

And not that he go quit of further prosecution. State v. Patton, 260 N.C. 359, 132 S.E.2d 891 (1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 956, 84 S. Ct. 977, 11 L. Ed. 2d 974 (1964); State v. Lowry, 263 N.C. 536, 139 S.E.2d 870, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 382 U.S. 22, 86 S. Ct. 227, 15 L. Ed. 2d 16 (1965); State v. Cavallaro, 274 N.C. 480, 164 S.E.2d 168 (1968).

This section does not bar further prosecution. Farrington v. North Carolina, 391 F. Supp. 714 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Requirements Peremptory. — This section is peremptory in its requirements; and where one so committed has formally complied with the provisions of the statute, it is the duty of the court to discharge the prisoner. State v. Webb, 155 N.C. 426, 70 S.E. 1064 (1911).

Remedy Is by Certiorari. — A certiorari is the proper procedure to review the order of the lower court in refusing to discharge a prisoner from custody under the provisions of this section. State v. Webb, 155 N.C. 426, 70 S.E. 1064 (1911).

"Speedy" cannot be defined in specific terms of days, months or years and the question of whether a defendant has been denied a speedy trial must be answered in light of the facts of each particular case. State v. Wilburn, 21 N.C. App. 140, 203 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 376, 205 S.E.2d 101 (1974).

But Four Factors Are Considered in Determining Whether Denial of Speedy Trial Is Unconstitutional. — The four generally accepted interrelated factors to be considered together in reaching a determination of whether the denial of a speedy trial assumes due process proportions are the length of the delay, the reason for the delay, the prejudice to the defendant, and waiver by defendant. State v. Roberts, 18 N.C. App. 388, 197 S.E.2d 54, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973); State v. O'Kelly, 285 N.C. 368, 204 S.E.2d 672 (1974); State v. Wilburn, 21 N.C. App. 140, 203 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 376, 205 S.E.2d 101 (1974).

Whether Right Denied Is Determined in Circumstances of Each Case. — Whether defendant has been denied the right to a speedy trial is a matter to be determined by the trial judge in the circumstances of each case. State v. Setzer, 21 N.C. App. 511, 204 S.E.2d 921 (1974).

Balancing Test. — A claim that a defendant has been denied his right to a speedy trial is subject to a balancing test in which the conduct of both the prosecutor and defendant are weighed. State v. Roberts, 18 N.C. App. 388, 197 S.E.2d 54 (1973).

Convict in Penitentiary for Unrelated Crime Not Excepted from Guarantee. — A convict, confined in the penitentiary for an unrelated crime, is not excepted from the constitutional guarantee of a speedy trial of any other charges pending against him. State v. O'Kelly, 285 N.C. 368, 204 S.E.2d 672 (1974).

Burden is on an accused who asserts denial of his right to a speedy trial to show that the delay was due to the neglect or willfulness of the prosecution. State v. Arnold, 21 N.C. App. 92, 203 S.E.2d 395, aff'd, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Accused waives his right to a speedy trial unless he demands it. State v. Johnson, 3 N.C. App. 420, 165 S.E.2d 27, rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 264, 167 S.E.2d 274 (1969).

§ 15-10.1. Detainer; purpose; manner of use.

Any person confined in the State prison of North Carolina, subject to the authority and control of the State Department of Correction, or any person confined in any other prison of North Carolina, may be held to account for any other charge pending against him only upon a written order from the clerk or judge of the court in which the charge originated upon a case regularly docketed, directing that such person be held to answer the charge pending in such court; and in no event shall the prison authorities hold any person to answer any charge upon a warrant or notice when the charge has not been regularly docketed in the court in which the warrant or charge has been issued: Provided, that this section shall not apply to any State agency exercising supervision over such person or prisoner by virtue of a judgment, order of court or statutory authority. (1949, c. 303; 1953, c. 603; 1957, c. 349, s. 10; 1967, c. 996, s. 13.)

§ 15-10.2. Mandatory disposition of detainers — request for final disposition of charges; continuance; information to be furnished prisoner.

(a) Any prisoner serving a sentence or sentences within the State prison system who, during his term of imprisonment, shall have lodged against him a detainer to answer to any criminal charge pending against him in any court within the State, shall be brought to trial within eight months after he shall have caused to be sent to the district attorney of the court in which said criminal charge is pending, by registered mail, written notice of his place of confinement and request for a final disposition of the criminal charge against him; said request shall be accompanied by a certificate from the Secretary of Correction stating the term of the sentence or sentences under which the prisoner is being held, the date he was received, and the time remaining to be served; provided that, for good cause shown in open court, the prisoner or his counsel being present, the court may grant any necessary and reasonable continuance.

(b) The Secretary of Correction shall, upon request by the prisoner, inform the prisoner in writing of the source and contents of any charge for which a detainer shall have been lodged against such prisoner as shown by said detainer, and furnished the prisoner with the certificate referred to in subsection (a). (1957, c. 1067, s. 1; 1967, c. 996, s. 15; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 1262, s. 10.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The primary purpose of this section is to provide a prisoner with a means by which he may require the State to try all the criminal charges against him to the end that he and the authorities may know the full extent of his debt to society for his criminal activities and that he may plan for his release when the debt has been satisfied. State v. White, 270 N.C. 78, 153 S.E.2d 774 (1967).

Effect of Detainer. — The presence of a detainer in a prisoner's file jeopardizes his chances for parole, proper good behavior credits and work release. State v. White, 270 N.C. 78, 153 S.E.2d 774 (1967); Farrington v. North Carolina, 391 F. Supp. 714 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Compliance with Section Is Required. — A defendant cannot claim the benefits afforded by this section without complying with its terms. State v. McKoy, 294 N.C. 134, 240 S.E.2d 383 (1978).

Where defendant did not follow the requirements of this section by making his demand upon the solicitor (now district attorney) by registered mail, but instead he sent a letter to the clerk of the superior court and the solicitor (now district attorney) did not receive the notice, the defendant is not entitled to his release for failure of the State to bring him to trial within eight months. State v. White, 270 N.C. 78, 153 S.E.2d 774 (1967).

An inmate must follow the section's requirements. He must send by registered mail a demand to the district attorney, and sending it to the clerk of the superior court unregistered is insufficient, when the district attorney does not know of the demand. Farrington v. North Carolina, 391 F. Supp. 714 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

And Failure to Comply Deprives Prisoner of Its Benefit. — Failure to send the motion by registered mail to the district attorney of the judicial district in which the charges are pending will deprive defendant of the benefit of this section. State v. Wright, 290 N.C. 45, 224 S.E.2d 624 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1049, 97 S. Ct. 760, 50 L. Ed. 2d 765 (1977).

Defendant's letter requesting a speedy trial did not comply with the provisions of this section where, for example, he failed to send the letter by registered mail to the district attorney; he failed to give notice of his place of confinement; and he failed to include a certificate from the Secretary of Correction. Having failed to follow the provisions of the statute, defendant was not entitled to the statutory relief. State v. Wright, 28 N.C. App. 426, 221 S.E.2d 751, aff'd, 290 N.C. 45, 224 S.E.2d 624 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1049, 97 S. Ct. 760, 50 L. Ed. 2d 765 (1977).

Oral requests for trial made by defendant's counsel to the district attorney were not sufficient to entitle defendant to a dismissal under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section. State v. McKoy, 33 N.C. App. 304, 235 S.E.2d 98, rev'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 134, 240 S.E.2d 383 (1978).

Applied in State v. Watts, 25 N.C. App. 104, 212 S.E.2d 224 (1975); State v. Dammons, 293 N.C. 263, 237 S.E.2d 834 (1977).

Stated in Howell v. Barker, 684 F. Supp. 132 (E.D.N.C. 1988).

Cited in Courtney v. Pinion, 420 F. Supp. 890 (W.D.N.C. 1976); State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

§ 15-10.3. Mandatory disposition of detainers — procedure; return of prisoner after trial.

The district attorney, upon receipt of the written notice and request for a final disposition as hereinbefore specified, shall make application to the court in which said charge is pending for a writ of habeas corpus ad prosequendum and the court upon such application shall issue such writ to the Secretary of Correction requiring the prisoner to be delivered to said court to answer the pending charge and to stand trial on said charge within the time hereinbefore provided; upon completion of said trial, the prisoner shall be returned to the State prison system to complete service of the sentence or sentences under which he was held at the time said writ was issued. (1957, c. 1067, s. 2; 1967, c. 996, s. 15; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 1262, s. 10.)

§ 15-10.4. Mandatory disposition of detainers — exception as to prisoners who are mentally ill.

The provisions of G.S. 15-10.2 and 15-10.3 shall not apply to any prisoner who has been transferred and assigned for observation or treatment to any unit of the prison system which is maintained for those prisoners who are mentally ill or are suffering from mental disorders. (1957, c. 1067, s. 3.)

Article 2.

Record and Disposition of Seized, etc., Articles.

§ 15-11. Sheriffs and police departments to maintain register of personal property confiscated, seized or found.

Each sheriff and police department in this State is hereby required to keep and maintain a book or register, and it shall be the duty of each sheriff and police department to keep a record therein of all articles of personal property which may be seized or confiscated by him or it, or of which he or it may have become possessed in any way in the discharge of his duty. Said sheriffs and police departments shall cause to be kept in said registers a description of such property, the name of the person from whom it was seized, if such name be known, the date and place of its seizure, and, where the article was not taken from the person of a suspect or prisoner, a brief recital of the place and circumstances concerning the possession thereof by such sheriff and police department. Such sheriff and police department shall also keep in said register appropriate entries showing the manner, date, and to whom said articles are disposed of or delivered, and, if sold as hereinafter provided, a record showing the disposition of the proceeds arising from such sale. (1939, c. 195, s. 1; 1973, c. 1141, s. 3.)

§ 15-11.1. Seizure, custody and disposition of articles; exceptions.

(a) If a law-enforcement officer seizes property pursuant to lawful authority, he shall safely keep the property under the direction of the court or magistrate as long as necessary to assure that the property will be produced at and may be used as evidence in any trial. Upon application by the lawful owner or a person, firm or corporation entitled to possession or upon his own determination, the district attorney may release any property seized pursuant to his lawful authority if he determines that such property is no longer useful or necessary as evidence in a criminal trial and he is presented with satisfactory evidence of ownership. If the district attorney refuses to release such property, the lawful owner or a person, firm or corporation entitled to possession may make application to the court for return of the property. The court, after notice to all parties, including the defendant, and after hearing, may in its discretion order any or all of the property returned to the lawful owner or a person, firm or corporation entitled to possession. The court may enter such order as may be necessary to assure that the evidence will be available for use as evidence at the time of trial, and will otherwise protect the rights of all parties. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, photographs or other identification or analyses made of the property may be introduced at the time of the trial provided that the court determines that the introduction of such substitute evidence is not likely to substantially prejudice the rights of the defendant in the criminal trial.

(b) In the case of unknown or unapprehended defendants or of defendants willfully absent from the jurisdiction, the court shall determine whether an attorney should be appointed as guardian ad litem to represent and protect the interest of such unknown or absent defendants. Appointment shall be in accordance with rules adopted by the Office of Indigent Defense Services. The judicial findings concerning identification or value that are made at such hearing whereby property is returned to the lawful owner or a person, firm, or corporation entitled to possession, may be admissible into evidence at the trial. After final judgment all property lawfully seized by or otherwise coming into the possession of law-enforcement authorities shall be disposed of as the court or magistrate in its discretion orders, and may be forfeited and either sold or destroyed in accordance with due process of law.

(b1) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) of this section or any other provision of law, if the property seized is a firearm and the district attorney determines the firearm is no longer necessary or useful as evidence in a criminal trial, the district attorney, after notice to all parties known or believed by the district attorney to have an ownership or a possessory interest in the firearm, including the defendant, shall apply to the court for an order of disposition of the firearm. The judge, after hearing, may order the disposition of the firearm in one of the following ways:

(1) By ordering the firearm returned to its rightful owner, when the rightful owner is someone other than the defendant and upon findings by the court (i) that the person, firm, or corporation determined by the court to be the rightful owner is entitled to possession of the firearm and (ii) that the person, firm, or corporation determined by the court to be the rightful owner of the firearm was unlawfully deprived of the same or had no knowledge or reasonable belief of the defendant's intention to use the firearm unlawfully.

(2) By ordering the firearm returned to the defendant, but only if the defendant is not convicted of any criminal offense in connection with the possession or use of the firearm, the defendant is the rightful owner of the firearm, and the defendant is not otherwise ineligible to possess such firearm.

(3) By ordering the firearm turned over to be destroyed by the sheriff of the county in which the firearm was seized or by his duly authorized agent. The sheriff shall maintain a record of the destruction of the firearm.

This subsection (b1) is not applicable to seizures pursuant to G.S. 113-137 of firearms used only in connection with a violation of Article 22 of Chapter 113 of the General Statutes or any local wildlife hunting ordinance.

(c) Any property, the forfeiture and disposition of which is specified in any general or special law, shall be disposed of in accordance therewith. (1977, c. 613; 1979, c. 593; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 16, s. 1; 2000-144, s. 27.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-144, s. 27, effective July 1, 2001, in subsection (b), substituted "determine whether an attorney should be appointed as guardian ad litem" for "have discretion to appoint a guardian ad litem, who shall be a licensed attorney" in the first sentence and inserted the second sentence.

CASE NOTES

Federal Procedures. — Assuming, without deciding, police department violated § 15-11.1(a) by transferring cash seized under § 90-112 to the federal DEA rather than to North Carolina Board of Education, the United States may adopt a seizure even when the person who seized the property had no authority to do so. United States v. Winston-Salem/Forsyth County Bd. of Educ., 902 F.2d 267 (4th Cir. 1990).

Where the State did not seek forfeiture under § 90-112, the U.S. Attorney General did not abuse his discretion by not discontinuing the federal forfeiture proceeding and by following the equitable sharing provisions of 21 U.S.C. § 881(e)(1)(A) and 19 U.S.C. § 1616a(c)(1)(B)(ii). United States v. Winston-Salem/Forsyth County Bd. of Educ., 902 F.2d 267 (4th Cir. 1990).

A violation of this section does not mandate dismissal of the charges against defendant. State v. Ysut Mlo, 335 N.C. 353, 440 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1224, 114 S. Ct. 2716, 129 L. Ed. 2d 841 (1994).

Where a car was released to the executor of the victim's estate without the authority of the district attorney or the court charges were not dismissed. State v. Ysut Mlo, 335 N.C. 353, 440 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1224, 114 S. Ct. 2716, 129 L. Ed. 2d 841 (1994).

Seizure of Currency. — Where law enforcement seized currency as potential evidence, once the district attorney determined that the evidence was not needed at trial, he had complete control to release the property to the lawful owner or to another entitled to possession without a court order; the district attorney's failure to designate the property as needed evidence or act in any way to deny release of the proceeds, established conclusively that the district attorney permitted release of the proceeds to the Department of Revenue under subsection (a). State v. Bonds, 120 N.C. App. 546, 463 S.E.2d 298 (1995).

Destruction of Rape Kit. — Defendant's rights were not violated by inadvertent destruction of rape kit by police nor was there any showing of bad faith on the part of the police where there was no reason for the police to believe the rape kit had any exculpatory value at the time of its destruction. State v. Banks, 125 N.C. App. 681, 482 S.E.2d 41 (1997), aff'd, 347 N.C. 390, 493 S.E.2d 58 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1128, 118 S. Ct. 1817, 140 L. Ed. 2d 955 (1998).

If money or property is not seized as evidence of a controlled substance law violation, agents of the Department of Revenue may seize it for satisfaction of controlled substance excise taxes without an order from the court having jurisdiction over the criminal offense and without the district attorney's consent provided the seizure otherwise is made in compliance with law. See opinion of Attorney General to Secretary Janice H. Faulkner, 1994 N.C.A.G. 2 (July 19, 1994).

In the absence of a pre-existing valid court order directing that property seized pursuant to a search warrant or other lawful authority be retained by the court or delivered to another court, a law enforcement agency in possession of the property is not required to obtain a court order prior to releasing it. See opinion of Attorney General to Secretary Janice H. Faulkner, 1994 N.C.A.G. 2 (July 19, 1994).

§ 15-12. Publication of notice of unclaimed property; advertisement and sale or donation of unclaimed bicycles.

(a) Unless otherwise provided herein, whenever such articles in the possession of any sheriff or police department have remained unclaimed by the person who may be entitled thereto for a period of 180 days after such seizure, confiscation, or receipt thereof in any other manner, by such sheriff or police department, the said sheriff or police department in whose possession said articles are may cause to be published one time in some newspaper published in said county a notice to the effect that such articles are in the custody of such officer or department, and requiring all persons who may have or claim any interest therein to make and establish such claim or interest not later than 30 days from the date of the publication of such notice or in default thereof, such articles will be sold and disposed of. Such notice shall contain a brief description of the said articles and such other information as the said officer or department may consider necessary or advisable to reasonably inform the public as to the kind and nature of the article about which the notice relates.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this section or Article 12 of Chapter 160A of the General Statutes, when bicycles which are in the possession of any sheriff or police department, as provided for in this Article, have remained unclaimed by the person who may be entitled thereto for a period of 60 days after such seizure, confiscation or receipt thereof, the said sheriff or police department who has possession of any such bicycle may proceed to advertise and sell such bicycles as provided by this Article, or may donate such bicycles to a charitable organization exempt under section 501(c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code. If the bicycles are to be donated, the notice shall state that as the intended disposition if they are not claimed. (1939, c. 195, s. 2; 1965, c. 807, s. 1; 1973, c. 1141, s. 4; 1997-180, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-180, s. 3, provides: "Any law, public or local, in conflict with this act is repealed."

§ 15-13. Public sale 30 days after publication of notice.

If said articles shall remain unclaimed or satisfactory evidence of ownership thereof not be presented to the sheriff or police department, as the case may be, for a period of 30 days after the publication of the notice provided for in G.S. 15-12, then the said sheriff or police department in whose custody such articles may be is hereby authorized and empowered to sell the same at public auction for cash to the highest bidder, either at the courthouse door of the county, the county law enforcement headquarters if the sale is conducted by the sheriff, or at the police headquarters of the municipality in which the said articles of property are located, and at such sale to deliver the same to the purchaser or purchasers thereof. (1939, c. 195, s. 3; 1973, c. 1141, s. 5; 1991, c. 531, s. 2.)

Before any sale of said property is made under the provisions of this Article, however, the said sheriff or police department making the same shall first advertise the sale by publishing a notice thereof in some newspaper published in the said county at least one time not less than 10 days prior to the date of sale, and by posting a notice of the sale at the courthouse door and at three other public places in the said county. Said notice shall specify the time and place of sale, and contain a sufficient description of the articles of property to be sold. It shall not be required that the sale lay open for increase bids or objections, but it may be deemed closed when the purchaser at the sale pays the amount of the accepted bid. (1939, c. 195, s. 4; 1973, c. 1141, s. 6.)

§ 15-15. Disbursement of proceeds of sale.

From the proceeds realized from the sale of said property, the sheriff, police department or other officer making the same shall first pay the costs and expenses of the sale, and all other necessary expenses incident to a compliance with this Article, and any balance then remaining from the proceeds of said sale shall be paid within 30 days after the sale to the treasurer of the county board of education of the county in which such sale is made, for the benefit of the fund for maintaining the free public schools of such county. (1939, c. 195, s. 5; 1973, c. 1141, s. 7.)

§ 15-16. Nonliability of officers.

No sheriff, police department, or other officer shall be liable for any damages or claims on account of any such sale or disposition of such property, as provided in this Article. (1939, c. 195, s. 6; 1973, c. 1141, s. 8.)

§ 15-17. Construction of Article.

This Article shall not be construed to apply to the seizure and disposition of whiskey distilleries, game birds, and other property or articles which have been or may be seized, where the existing law now provides the method, manner, and extent of the disposition of such articles or of the proceeds derived from the sale thereof. § 15-24.1. Amendment of warrant to show ownership of property.

Any criminal warrant may be amended in the superior court, before or during the trial, when there shall appear to be any variance between the allegations in the warrant and the evidence in setting forth the ownership of property if, in the opinion of the court, such amendment will not prejudice the defendant. This section shall be construed as enlarging and not limiting the conditions and situations under which a warrant may be amended. (1965, c. 285.)

Article 4A.

Administrative Search and Inspection Warrants.

§ 15-27.2. Warrants to conduct inspections authorized by law.

(a) Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 11 of Chapter 15A, any official or employee of the State or of a unit of county or local government of North Carolina may, under the conditions specified in this section, obtain a warrant authorizing him to conduct a search or inspection of property if such a search or inspection is one that is elsewhere authorized by law, either with or without the consent of the person whose privacy would be thereby invaded, and is one for which such a warrant is constitutionally required.

(b) The warrant may be issued by any magistrate of the general court of justice, judge, clerk, or assistant or deputy clerk of any court of record whose territorial jurisdiction encompasses the property to be inspected.

(c) The issuing officer shall issue the warrant when he is satisfied the following conditions are met:

(1) The one seeking the warrant must establish under oath or affirmation that the property to be searched or inspected is to be searched or inspected as part of a legally authorized program of inspection which naturally includes that property, or that there is probable cause for believing that there is a condition, object, activity or circumstance which legally justifies such a search or inspection of that property;

(2) An affidavit indicating the basis for the establishment of one of the grounds described in (1) above must be signed under oath or affirmation by the affiant;

(3) The issuing official must examine the affiant under oath or affirmation to verify the accuracy of the matters indicated by the statement in the affidavit;

(d) The warrant shall be validly issued only if it meets the following requirements:

(1) Except as provided in subsection (e), it must be signed by the issuing official and must bear the date and hour of its issuance above his signature with a notation that the warrant is valid for only 24 hours following its issuance;
(2) It must describe, either directly or by reference to the affidavit, the property where the search or inspection is to occur and be accurate enough in description so that the executor of the warrant and the owner or the possessor of the property can reasonably determine from it what person or property the warrant authorizes an inspection of;
(3) It must indicate the conditions, objects, activities or circumstances which the inspection is intended to check or reveal;
(4) It must be attached to the affidavit required to be made in order to obtain the warrant.

(e) Any warrant issued under this section for a search or inspection shall be valid for only 24 hours after its issuance, must be personally served upon the owner or possessor of the property between the hours of 8:00 A.M. and 8:00 P.M. and must be returned within 48 hours. If the warrant, however, was procured pursuant to an investigation authorized by G.S. 58-79-1, the warrant may be executed at any hour, is valid for 48 hours after its issuance, and must be returned without unnecessary delay after its execution or after the expiration of the 48 hour period if it is not executed. If the owner or possessor of the property is not present on the property at the time of the search or inspection and reasonable efforts to locate the owner or possessor have been made and have failed, the warrant or a copy thereof may be affixed to the property and shall have the same effect as if served personally upon the owner or possessor.

(f) No facts discovered or evidence obtained in a search or inspection conducted under authority of a warrant issued under this section shall be competent as evidence in any civil, criminal or administrative action, nor considered in imposing any civil, criminal, or administrative sanction against any person, nor as a basis for further seeking to obtain any warrant, if the warrant is invalid or if what is discovered or obtained is not a condition, object, activity or circumstance which it was the legal purpose of the search or inspection to discover; but this shall not prevent any such facts or evidence to be so used when the warrant issued is not constitutionally required in those circumstances.

(g) The warrants authorized under this section shall not be regarded as search warrants for the purposes of application of Article 11 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes of North Carolina. (1967, c. 1260; 1979, c. 729; 1983, c. 294, ss. 1, 2; c. 739, ss. 1, 2.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Subdivision (c)(1) of this section is not unconstitutionally void for vagueness. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Alternative Criteria for Basis of Warrant. — Subdivision (c)(1) of this section creates two alternative criteria for determining whether to issue a warrant. The first, the "program of inspection test," is that the property is to be inspected as part of a legally authorized program of inspection which naturally includes that property. The second is a probable cause test. If an inspection meets either of these tests a warrant is properly issued under the statute. Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Under subdivision (c)(1) of this section, one of the following two conditions must be met before an administrative search warrant can be issued: First, the property to be searched or inspected must be searched or inspected as part of a "legally authorized program of inspection which naturally includes that property"; or second, there must be "probable cause for believing that there is a condition, object, activity or circumstance that legally justifies such a search or inspection of that property". In re Computer Technology Corp., 78 N.C. App. 402, 337 S.E.2d 165 (1985).

Warrant Protects Rights Under U.S. Const., Amend. IV. — A warrant showing that a specific business has been chosen for an Occupational Safety and Health Act search on the basis of a general administrative plan for the enforcement of the act derived from neutral sources such as, for example, dispersion of employees in various types of industries across a given area, and the desired frequency of searches in any of the lesser divisions of the area, would protect an employer's rights under U.S. Const., Amend IV. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

The statutory scheme for obtaining a warrant to conduct an administrative inspection, when complied with, provides ample protections against the constitutional proscription of general warrants. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Corporations have never possessed the kind of protection under U.S. Const., Amend. IV accorded to persons and their homes. Corporations' special status as creatures of the state exposes them to exhaustive state scrutiny in exchange for the privilege of state recognition. In re Superior Court Order Dated April 8, 1983, 70 N.C. App. 63, 318 S.E.2d 843, rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 378, 338 S.E.2d 307 (1986).

Probable Cause Standards Under Section Are Sufficient. — While subdivision (c)(1) of this section sets forth standards for issuance of an administrative search warrant which are less stringent than the probable cause standards required in the criminal law sense under § 15A-246, these standards are certainly sufficient to guarantee that a decision to search private property is justified by a reasonable governmental interest. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979), but see Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

The requirement of subdivision (c)(1) of this section that property is to be inspected as part of a legally authorized program of inspection which naturally includes that property comports with the criterion that a specific property has been chosen for a search on the basis of a general administrative plan for the enforcement of the act derived from neutral sources. The statute must be interpreted as also requiring a showing to the magistrate that the general administrative plan for enforcement is based upon "reasonable legislative or administrative standards." Interpreted in this way, subdivision (c)(1) of this section requires a sufficient showing of probable cause and is constitutional. Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Basis for Probable Cause. — For purposes of an administrative search, probable cause justifying the issuance of a warrant may be based not only on specific evidence of an existing violation but also on a showing that reasonable legislative or administrative standards for conducting an inspection are satisfied with respect to a particular establishment. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Probable cause for an administration inspection warrant may be based on (1) specific evidence of an existing violation, or (2) a showing that reasonable legislative or administrative standards for conducting an inspection are satisfied with respect to a particular establishment. In order to meet the requirements of the second standard, an applicant for an inspection warrant must show that: (1) there exists a legally authorized inspection program which naturally included the property; (2) that the general administrative enforcement plan is based on reasonable legislative or administrative standards; and (3) that the administrative standards are being applied to the particular establishment on a neutral basis. Brooks v. Butler, 70 N.C. App. 681, 321 S.E.2d 440 (1984), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 313 N.C. 327, 329 S.E.2d 385 (1985).

Probable Cause Where Not Part of Program of Inspection. — A warrant to conduct an inspection that is not part of a program of inspection may issue upon a showing of probable cause, the standard for which is the same as in the case of a search warrant in a criminal proceeding. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980).

Requirements for warrant procedures set out in State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972), a criminal case, apply equally to the issuance of administrative inspection warrants, since the purpose of a warrant in either case is to provide for a determination of probable cause by a neutral officer. Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981), but see Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Neutral Application of Inspection Program Required. — It is necessary for the agency to make a showing to the magistrate, or clerk, that the general administrative plan for enforcement is being applied on a neutral basis as to the particular establishment to be inspected. Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, denied, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Scope and Objects of Search Must Be Included in Warrant. — Unless an administrative inspection warrant advises the owner or possessor of the property proposed to be searched of the scope and objects of the search, beyond which limits the inspector may not go, it does not meet the requirements of subdivision (d)(3) of this section. In short, a valid search warrant serves not only to authorize a search of premises but also to afford reasonable notice to the possessor of property of the nature and extent of any search that is to be conducted. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

A warrant authorizing inspection of all pertinent conditions, structures, machines, apparatus, devices, equipment, and materials, and all other things is not overbroad. A warrant authorizing a general inspection of an industry naturally contemplates a comprehensive inspection since the location of possible violations is unknown. Brooks v. Butler, 70 N.C. App. 681, 321 S.E.2d 440 (1984), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 313 N.C. 327, 329 S.E.2d 385 (1985).

Warrant Improperly Granted. — Where there was no showing from which a magistrate could have independently determined (1) that there existed a legally authorized program of inspection which naturally included the property, (2) that the general administrative plan for enforcement was based upon reasonable legislative or administrative standards, and (3) that the administrative standards were being applied to plaintiff on a neutral basis, the warrant was improperly granted. Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

The allegation that agents have conducted an investigation which has disclosed evidence of irregularities which, if supported by evidence and found to be true, would constitute serious violations of the law on the part of the defendant, without the disclosure of facts from which the magistrate could ascertain the existence of irregularities that would constitute serious violations of the law, does not meet the constitutional standard for issuance of a search warrant. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980).

Sufficiency of Warrant Determined from Affidavits. — The rule that the sufficiency of a search warrant should properly be determined with reference to the supporting affidavits is applicable in the context of administrative inspection warrants. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Warrant Must Expressly Incorporate Supporting Affidavit. — If the warrant and the affidavit are to be construed together to provide sufficient proof of authority and notice of the extent of the proposed search, there must be an express reference to the affidavit in the warrant which is sufficient to put a reasonable person on notice of its incorporation. It is not enough that a warrant and its supporting affidavit be served together as a unit for the affidavit to serve to uphold the validity of the warrant. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Sufficiency of Affidavit. — The "program of inspection" test under subdivision (c)(1) of this section requires the agent seeking the warrant to provide facts in an affidavit showing that a particular business has been selected for inspection pursuant to an administrative plan containing specific neutral criteria. The affidavit to support issuance of a warrant under this standard must contain an adequate description of the general administrative plan, the specific neutral criteria used to determine which businesses will be inspected under the plan, and facts showing why the particular business sought to be inspected comes within the plan. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Inclusion of underlying facts in the affidavit is necessary to make the warrant procedure meaningful. Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

And Affidavit Insufficient Where Facts

Not Included. — Where no facts from which the issuing officer could determine whether probable cause existed were included in the affidavit on which the administrative warrant was obtained, the affidavit was insufficient to support the issuance of an administrative search warrant. Gooden v. Brooks, 39 N.C. App. 519, 251 S.E.2d 698, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 670, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Conclusory allegations by the affiant, which are nothing more than a perfunctory restatement of the statutory language contained in subdivision (c)(1) of this section, are insufficient to meet the statutory requirements. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Specific Evidence of OSHA Violation Is Sufficient. — The "probable cause" standard permits an Occupational Safety and Health Act agent to obtain a warrant where he has specific evidence in an affidavit showing that conditions in violation of OSHA exist on the premises. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

But Not Necessary. — An Occupational Safety and Health Act agent's entitlement to inspect will not depend on his demonstrating probable cause to believe that conditions in violation of OSHA exist on the premises. Probable cause in the criminal law sense is not required. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Statistical Likelihood of OSHA Violation Is Not Sufficient. — The attempt to show through statistics that an inspection of the business would be likely to reveal Occupational Safety and Health Act violations is not sufficient to meet the "probable cause" test under the statute. Brooks v. Taylor Tobacco Enters., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 529, 251 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 759, 260 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Inspection of Corporate Records in Fraud Investigation. — An ex parte order from the superior court, directing officials of a certain corporation to make available the records pertaining to its transactions with two other corporations and with City of Charlotte, incident to an investigation into possible fraud and irregularities in the purchasing of parts, equipment and services by the city, was not an administrative search warrant to which the strictness of U.S. Const., Amend. IV, N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20, and this section would apply. Where such order was neither unreasonably broad nor indefinite, its issuance would be affirmed. In re Computer Technology Corp., 78 N.C. App. 402, 337 S.E.2d 165 (1985).

§ 15-53. Governor may employ agents, and offer rewards.

The Governor, on information made to him of any person, whether the name of such person be known or unknown, having committed a felony or other infamous crime within the State, and of having fled out of the jurisdiction thereof, or who conceals himself within the State to avoid arrest, or who, having been convicted, has escaped and cannot otherwise be apprehended, may either employ a special agent, with a sufficient escort, to pursue and apprehend such fugitive, or issue his proclamation, and therein offer a reward, not exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000), according to the nature of the case, as in his opinion may be sufficient for the purpose, to be paid to him who shall apprehend and deliver the fugitive to such person and at such place as in the proclamation shall be directed. (1800, c. 561, P.R.; R.C., c. 35, s. 4; 1866, c. 28; 1868-9, c. 52; 1870-1, c. 15; 1871-2, c. 29; Code, s. 1169; 1891, c. 421; Rev., s. 3188; C.S., s. 4554; 1925, c. 275, s. 6; 1967, c. 165, s. 1.)

§ 15-53.1. Governor may offer rewards for information leading to arrest and conviction.

When it shall appear to the Governor, upon satisfactory information furnished to him, that a felony or other infamous crime has been committed within the State, whether the name or names of the person or persons suspected of committing the said crime be known or unknown, the Governor may issue his proclamation and therein offer an award [reward] not exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000), according to the nature of the case as, in his opinion, may be sufficient for the purpose, to be paid to him who shall provide information leading to the arrest and conviction of such person or persons. The proclamation shall be upon such terms as the Governor may deem proper, but it shall identify the felony or felonies and the authority to whom the information is to be delivered and shall state such other terms as the Governor may require under which the reward is payable. (1967, c. 165, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The bracketed word "reward" was added by the editors, as the apparently intended term.

§ 15-54. Officer entitled to reward.

Any sheriff or other officer who shall make an arrest of any person charged with crime for whose apprehension a reward has been offered is entitled to such reward, and may sue for and recover the same in any court in this State having jurisdiction: Provided, that no reward shall be paid to any sheriff or other officer for any arrest made for a crime committed within the county of such sheriff or officer making such arrest. And every sheriff or jailer to whose jail any person shall be committed by any court or magistrate of competent jurisdiction shall receive such prisoner and give a receipt for him, and be bound for his safekeeping as prescribed by law. § 15-131. Assault in this State, death in another.

In all cases of felonious homicide, when the assault has been made within this State, and the person assaulted dies without the limits thereof, the offender shall be indicted and punished for the crime in the county where the assault was made, in the same manner, to all intents and purposes, as if the person assaulted had died within the limits of this State. (1831, c. 22, s. 2; R.C., c. 35, s. 28; Code, s. 1197; Rev., s. 3236; C.S., s. 4603.)

Validity of Section. — The validity of sections similar to this seems to be undisputed, and indeed it has been held in many jurisdictions that such legislation is but in affirmance of the common law. State v. Hall, 114 N.C. 909, 19 S.E. 602 (1894).

New Offense Not Created. — This section did not create any new offense, but merely removed a difficulty which existed as to the place of the trial. State v. Dunkley, 25 N.C. 116 (1842); State v. Hall, 114 N.C. 909, 19 S.E. 602 (1894).

Every part of offense, except death, must have occurred in this State. State v. Hall, 114 N.C. 909, 19 S.E. 602 (1894).

Jurisdiction of County Grand Jury. — Under the law of determining jurisdiction as between states, jurisdiction lies in this State if any of the essential acts forming the crime take place in this State. This same rationale extends to jurisdiction of the county grand jury to indict. State v. Vines, 317 N.C. 242, 345 S.E.2d 169 (1986).

If any person, being in this State, unlawfully and willfully puts in motion a force from the effect of which any person is injured while in another state, the person so setting such force in motion shall be guilty of the same offense in this State as he would be if the effect had taken place within this State. Shooting Across State Line. — Where the defendant while in this State shot across the State line and killed a person in Tennessee, he could not be found guilty of murder absent a statute expressly conferring jurisdiction upon the courts of this State, or making the act of shooting under the circumstances a substantive murder. State v. Hall, 114 N.C. 909, 19 S.E. 602 (1894), decided prior to enactment of this section.

§ 15-133. In county where death occurs.

If a mortal wound is given or other violence or injury inflicted or poison is administered on the high seas or land, either within or without the limits of this State, by means whereof death ensues in any county thereof, the offense may be prosecuted and punished in the county where the death happens. § 15-144. Essentials of bill for homicide.

In indictments for murder and manslaughter, it is not necessary to allege matter not required to be proved on the trial; but in the body of the indictment, after naming the person accused, and the county of his residence, the date of the offense, the averment "with force and arms," and the county of the alleged commission of the offense, as is now usual, it is sufficient in describing murder to allege that the accused person feloniously, willfully, and of his malice aforethought, did kill and murder (naming the person killed), and concluding as is now required by law; and it is sufficient in describing manslaughter to allege that the accused feloniously and willfully did kill and slay (naming the person killed), and concluding as aforesaid; and any bill of indictment containing the averments and allegations herein named shall be good and sufficient in law as an indictment for murder or manslaughter, as the case may be. History of Section. — See State v. Talbert, 282 N.C. 718, 194 S.E.2d 822 (1973); State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23 and § 15A-924(a)(5) did not specifically repeal this section, nor did they repeal it by implication. State v. Avery, 315 N.C. 1, 337 S.E.2d 786 (1985).

This section does not prevail over the language of § 15-155. State v. James, 321 N.C. 676, 365 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

Legislature is empowered to prescribe the form of indictment for murder. State v. Moore, 104 N.C. 743, 10 S.E. 183 (1889); State v. Brown, 106 N.C. 645, 10 S.E. 870 (1890); State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E. 990 (1890).

Section is an abbreviated form for bill of indictment for murder. State v. Puckett, 211 N.C. 66, 189 S.E. 183 (1937).

Short-form indictments are constitutional, even after Jones v. United States, 526 U.S. 227, 143 L. Ed. 2d 311, 119 S. Ct. 1215 (1999). State v. Davis, 353 N.C. 1, 539 S.E.2d 243 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 122 S. Ct. 95, 151 L. Ed. 2d 55 (2001).

The short-form murder indictments authorized by this section and utilized in the defendant's triple-murder case were not unconstitutional. State v. Mitchell, 353 N.C. 309, 543 S.E.2d 830 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 122 S. Ct. 475, — L. Ed. 2d — (2001).

Defendant's murder indictment complied with the requirements of this section and did not violate his constitutional rights. State v. Holman, 353 N.C. 174, 540 S.E.2d 18 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 122 S. Ct. 250, 151 L. Ed. 2d 181 (2001).

The court rejected the defendant's contention that the use of the short-form murder indictments authorized by this section did not give him sufficient notice and violated his rights to due process, notice, fundamental fairness, and trial by jury. State v. Lytch, 142 N.C. App. 576, 544 S.E.2d 570 (2001).

Indictment in form prescribed by this section is sufficient. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

An indictment which complies with the short form indictment authorized by this section is sufficient to charge first degree murder without specifically alleging premeditation and deliberation or felony murder. State v. Avery, 315 N.C. 1, 337 S.E.2d 786 (1985), aff'd, 95 N.C. App. 572, 383 S.E.2d 224 (1989).

Short-form murder indictment was constitutionally sufficient to charge the defendant with first-degree murder. State v. Brewington, 352 N.C. 489, 532 S.E.2d 496 (2000), cert denied, 531 U.S. 1165, 121 S. Ct. 1126, 148 L. Ed. 2d 992 (2001).

The murder indictment which complied with G.S. § 15-144 was sufficient and did not violate the defendant's due process and equal protection rights under the United States Constitution. State v. Barnett, 141 N.C. App. 378, 540 S.E.2d 423 (2000), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 353 N.C. 527, 549 S.E.2d 552 (2001).

Defendant was appropriately charged in a short form bill of indictment in accordance with this section. State v. Washington, 142 N.C. App. 657, 544 S.E.2d 249 (2001).

This section contains no requirement that the indictment specify the degree of murder sought. State v. King, 311 N.C. 603, 320 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Indictment must be sufficient in form to allege murder and support a conviction of murder in the first degree under this section. State v. Frazier, 280 N.C. 181, 185 S.E.2d 652, death sentence vacated, 409 U.S. 1004, 93 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1972).

Defendant's "short-form" first degree murder indictment complied with the state and federal Constitutions although it failed to charge in the indictment the elements of the crime or aggravating circumstances as "facts (other than prior conviction) that increase the maximum penalty for [the] crime." State v. Smith, 352 N.C. 531, 532 S.E.2d 773 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1419, 149 L. Ed. 2d 360 (2001).

Indictment Under Section Fully Informs Defendant. — Where an indictment is drawn according to this section the defendant is given full information of the crime on which he is being tried. State v. Puckett, 211 N.C. 66, 189 S.E. 183 (1937).

Section Does Not State What Is Necessary. — This section declares an indictment containing certain words "sufficient," but it does not make those words essential, nor by any reasonable construction can it be held to make technical and "sacramental" words which were not theretofore necessary in indictments for murder. State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E. 990 (1890).

The indictment satisfied the requirements of this section where it stated: The jurors for the State upon their oath present that on or about the date of offense shown and in the county named above the defendant named above unlawfully, willfully and feloniously and of malice aforethought did kill and murder [the victim]. State v. Hammonds, 141 N.C. App. 152, 541 S.E.2d 166 (2000).

Indictment for Murder Need Not Allege All Elements of Crimes Charged. — Short-form indictments which complied with this section were constitutional although they failed to allege all of the elements of the crimes charged, specifically, those elements which differentiate first-degree murder, rape, and sexual offense from second-degree murder, rape, and sexual offense. State v. Wallace, 351 N.C. 481, 528 S.E.2d 326 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1018, 121 S. Ct. 581, 148 L. Ed. 2d 498 (2000).

The defendant's indictments were valid although they did not allege premeditation, deliberation, and specific intent to kill. State v. Choppy, 141 N.C. App. 32, 539 S.E.2d 44 (2000).

Nor That Murder Was Punishable by Death. — Premeditation and deliberation did not have to be separately alleged in the defendant's short-form indictment which charged him with first-degree murder and, since the death penalty is the prescribed statutory maximum punishment for first-degree murder in North Carolina, no additional facts needed to be charged in the indictment to provide the defendant with notice that he was charged with first-degree murder and that the maximum penalty to which he could be subjected was death. State v. Braxton, 352 N.C. 158, 531 S.E.2d 428 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 890, 148 L. Ed. 2d 797 (2001).

The court declined to find the short-form indictment authorized by this section unconstitutional in light of Jones v. United States, 526 U.S. 227, 119 S. Ct. 1215, 143 L. Ed. 2d 311 (1999) for failing to allege all essential elements of first-degree murder. State v. Parker, — N.C. App. —, — S.E.2d —, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1107 (Oct. 3, 2000).

Indictment for murder need not allege deliberation and premeditation. State v. Duncan, 282 N.C. 412, 193 S.E.2d 65 (1972).

Failure to Allege Premeditation and Deliberation Not a Constitutional Violation. — The court rejected the defendant's argument that because the indictment failed to allege two essential elements of first degree murder, i.e., premeditation and deliberation, his conviction of first degree murder based thereon violated Article I, §§ 19, 22 and 23 of the North Carolina Constitution. The court found that the defendant had adequate notice of the charge against him, as North Carolina has for nearly 100 years authorized the use of the short form murder indictment as sufficient to allege the elements of premeditation and deliberation, and the jury was properly required to find those elements beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Holder, 138 N.C. App. 89, 530 S.E.2d 562 (2000).

An indictment of murder in the first degree need not allege deliberation and premeditation, an indictment in the form prescribed by this section being sufficient. State v. Kirksey, 227 N.C. 445, 42 S.E.2d 613 (1947).

By virtue of this section premeditation and deliberation do not have to be alleged in an indictment for first degree murder. State v. Lowe, 295 N.C. 596, 247 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

Nor That Murder was Committed in Course of Felony. — A bill of indictment, drawn in the statutory from as required by this section, includes the charge of murder committed in the perpetration of a robbery, without a specific allegation or count to that effect. State v. Smith, 223 N.C. 457, 27 S.E.2d 114 (1943).

It is not required that an indictment allege that a murder was committed in the perpetration of a robbery or other felony in order that it be sufficient to support a verdict of murder in the first degree. State v. Frazier, 280 N.C. 181, 185 S.E.2d 652, death sentence vacated, 409 U.S. 1004, 93 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1972).

It is not necessary that an indictment for murder committed in the attempt to perpetrate larceny should contain a specific allegation of the attempted larceny, such allegation not having been necessary in indictments prior to the adoption of the section. State v. Covington, 117 N.C. 834, 23 S.E. 337 (1895).

Short-form murder indictment which did not allege premeditation nor the elements of felony murder was held not defective. State v. Harris, 323 N.C. 112, 371 S.E.2d 689 (1988).

Indictment Need Not State Victim's Sex. — An indictment is not defective for failure to allege whether the person killed was a man or woman, or whether the mortal wound was inflicted by poisoning, stabbing or shooting. State v. Pate, 121 N.C. 659, 28 S.E. 354 (1897).

Nor Defendant's County of Residence. — Defendant's county of residence is not an element of murder and not required to be proved at trial. Therefore, it need not be alleged. State v. Carswell, 40 N.C. App. 752, 253 S.E.2d 635, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 613, 257 S.E.2d 220 (1979).

Omission of the county of defendant's residence from murder indictment did not make the indictment fatally defective, since the county of defendant's residence did not have to be proved. State v. James, 321 N.C. 676, 365 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

Word "willfully" is not essential to validity of an indictment for murder, neither at common law nor under this section. State v. Kirkman, 104 N.C. 911, 10 S.E. 312 (1889); State v. Harris, 106 N.C. 682, 11 S.E. 377 (1890); State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E. 990 (1890).

Omission of Word "Wound" Not Fatal. — The omission of the word "wound" in an indictment for murder was held not fatal, long before the adoption of the present short form of indictment for murder under this section. State v. Rinehart, 75 N.C. 52 (1876); State v. Ratliff, 170 N.C. 707, 86 S.E. 997 (1915).

Malice Is Necessary Allegation. — A murder indictment should not fail to charge malice, as it is a necessary allegation in a murder indictment. State v. Moore, 284 N.C. 485, 202 S.E.2d 169 (1974).

Meaning of "Malice Aforethought." — The term "malice aforethought," which is used in an indictment conforming to this section cannot be held to import into the definition of first degree murder the element of premeditation or deliberation. Indeed, it is rather definitely indicated that it relates rather to the prior existence of the malice which motivates the murder than to a previously entertained purpose. State v. Lowe, 295 N.C. 596, 247 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

Omission of the phrase "with force and arms" does not render a defendant's indictment for murder fatally defective. State v. James, 321 N.C. 676, 365 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

Indictment need not include aggravating circumstances or differentiate first-degree murder from second-degree murder. State v. Lawrence, 352 N.C. 1, 530 S.E.2d 807 (2000).

Essentials Make No Distinction Between First and Second Degree Murder. — The essentials for bills of indictment charging homicide make no distinction between an indictment charging murder in the first degree from one charging murder in the second degree. State v. Castor, 28 N.C. App. 336, 220 S.E.2d 819, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 453, 223 S.E.2d 161 (1976).

An indictment which meets the requirements of this section will support a plea of guilty to or a conviction of either first or second degree murder. State v. King, 311 N.C. 603, 320 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

A prosecutor is not required to determine, before the return of the indictment, whether he will ultimately prosecute a defendant for murder in the first or second degree. State v. King, 311 N.C. 603, 320 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

The State is not required at any time to elect a theory upon which it will proceed against defendant on a charge of first degree murder, and it is proper for the trial court to submit the issue of defendant's guilt of that charge to the jury on each of the theories of first degree murder supported by substantial evidence presented at trial; rather than have the jury render a general verdict if it finds defendant guilty of first degree murder, the better practice is for the trial court to have the jury specify the theory or theories upon which it finds first degree murder to have been established beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Clark, 325 N.C. 677, 386 S.E.2d 191 (1989).

Effect of State's Election of Felony Murder Theory. — The State's election to try a homicide case, and the trial judge's submission of it to the jury, only on a felony murder theory did not in effect acquit defendant of murder on a theory of premeditation and deliberation and all of its lesser included homicide offenses. State v. Thomas, 325 N.C. 583, 386 S.E.2d 555 (1989), holding that the jury should have been instructed on involuntary murder under the circumstances.

Offenses Which Indictment Will Support. — An indictment for homicide in the words of this section will support a verdict of murder in the first degree, murder in the second degree, or manslaughter. State v. Talbert, 282 N.C. 718, 194 S.E.2d 822 (1973).

A bill of indictment drawn in the words of this section is sufficient to support a conviction of murder in the first degree. State v. Davis, 290 N.C. 511, 227 S.E.2d 97 (1976).

An indictment in the form declared by this section to be sufficient to charge the offense of murder is also sufficient to sustain judgment entered upon defendant's plea of nolo contendere to the lesser included offense of voluntary manslaughter. State v. Young, 18 N.C. App. 576, 197 S.E.2d 237, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 729 (1973).

An indictment drawn in accordance with this section is sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree based upon a finding that defendant killed with malice, premeditation and deliberation, or that defendant killed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of any arson, rape, robbery, burglary or other felony. State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178, reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 928, 98 S. Ct. 414, 54 L. Ed. 2d 288 (1977).

An indictment for murder in the form prescribed by this section is sufficient to support a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree if the jury finds from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant killed the deceased with malice and after premeditation and deliberation or in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate any arson, rape, robbery, burglary or other felony. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972); State v. Moore, 284 N.C. 485, 202 S.E.2d 169 (1974); State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976); State v. Williams, 304 N.C. 394, 284 S.E.2d 437 (1981).

A bill is sufficient to sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree if the jury should find from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the killing was done with malice and after premeditation and deliberation; or in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a robbery. State v. Haynes, 276 N.C. 150, 171 S.E.2d 435 (1970).

An indictment under this section will support a verdict of murder in the first degree if the jury finds beyond a reasonable doubt that an accused killed with malice and after premeditation and deliberation or in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of any arson, rape, robbery, burglary or other felony the commission of which creates any substantial foreseeable human risk and actually results in loss of life. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

A bill of indictment meeting the requirements of this section concerning murder will support a conviction or plea of guilty to murder in the first degree as well as to murder in the second degree. State v. Melton, 307 N.C. 370, 298 S.E.2d 673 (1983).

The short-form indictment drawn in accordance with this section is sufficient to charge murder in the first degree under a theory of lying in wait, just as it is sufficient to charge murder in the first degree on the theory of felony murder or premeditation and deliberation. State v. Brown, 320 N.C. 179, 358 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1987).

An indictment in the form prescribed by this section will support a verdict finding the defendant guilty of first-degree murder upon any of the theories set forth in § 14-17 or guilty of any lesser offense included within any of those theories. The test in every case involving the propriety of an instruction on a lesser grade of an offense is not whether the jury could convict defendant of the lesser crime, but whether the State's evidence is positive as to each element of the crime charged and whether there is any conflicting evidence relating to any of these elements. State v. Leroux, 326 N.C. 368, 390 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 498 U.S. 871, 111 S. Ct. 192, 112 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1990).

Indictment Sufficient to Charge Conspiracy to Murder. — See State v. Graham, 24 N.C. App. 591, 211 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 262, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975).

Indictment Barred by Collateral Estoppel. — State's first indictment of defendant charging manslaughter of "a natureless living female fetus . . ." was dismissed for failure to allege a material element of manslaughter, (that is, that defendant did kill another living human being), and State did not appeal; therefore, collateral estoppel barred State's second indictment for manslaughter alleging defendant did "kill and slay a living human being . . .," which referred to the same victim and incident. State v. Parsons, 92 N.C. App. 175, 374 S.E.2d 123 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 340, 378 S.E.2d 805 (1989).

Felony murder may be proven although murder is charged in the language of this section. State v. Lee, 277 N.C. 216, 176 S.E.2d 765 (1970); State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

An indictment charging the essential facts of murder as required by this section is sufficient to sustain the court's charge based upon the evidence in the case relative to murder committed in the perpetration of robbery or other felony. State v. Fogleman, 204 N.C. 401, 168 S.E. 536 (1933).

Proof of Felony Murder Under Indictment for Different Offense. — An indictment for homicide in the language of this section is sufficient and proof that the murder was committed in the perpetration of a felony constitutes no variance. State v. Crawford, 260 N.C. 548, 133 S.E.2d 232 (1963).

Where indictment charged capital felony of murder in the language of this section and contained every necessary averment, proof that murder was committed in the perpetration of felony constituted no variance between allegata and probata. State v. Mays, 225 N.C. 486, 35 S.E.2d 494 (1945); State v. Grayson, 239 N.C. 453, 80 S.E.2d 387 (1954); State v. Scales, 242 N.C. 400, 87 S.E.2d 916 (1955).

Variance in Time Held Not Fatal. — Where an indictment for murder charged the killing to have taken place December 5 and the evidence showed that, while the deceased was wounded on that day, he died three days thereafter, and before the bill of indictment was found, the variance was not fatal. State v. Pate, 121 N.C. 659, 28 S.E. 354 (1897).

Bill of Particulars. — If a defendant is charged with murder in the first degree by bill of indictment drawn under this section, and desires to know whether the State relies on proof the killing was done with premeditation and deliberation, or in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a felony, he should apply for a bill of particulars. State v. Haynes, 276 N.C. 150, 171 S.E.2d 435 (1970); State v. McLaughlin, 286 N.C. 597, 213 S.E.2d 238 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3206, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976); State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178, reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 928, 98 S. Ct. 414, 54 L. Ed. 2d 288 (1977).

Under an indictment for murder in the first degree in the usual form under this section, the State is entitled to introduce evidence that defendant committed the homicide in the perpetration of, or attempt to perpetrate a felony, it being incumbent upon defendant if he desires more definite information to request a bill of particulars. State v. Grayson, 239 N.C. 453, 80 S.E.2d 387 (1954); State v. Scales, 242 N.C. 400, 87 S.E.2d 916 (1955).

Reading to Jury of Indictment Closely

Following Section. — An indictment closely following this section could not have prejudiced defendant by its being read in the presence of the jury, even though it is true that in some instances bills of indictment charging murder will contain the words "premeditation and deliberation," the elements that distinguish murder in the first degree from murder in the second degree. State v. Castor, 28 N.C. App. 336, 220 S.E.2d 819, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 453, 223 S.E.2d 161 (1976).

When Instruction on Lesser Included Homicides Is Required. — In a felony murder prosecution under an indictment in the form prescribed by this section, evidence that defendant did not commit the underlying felony requires an instruction upon whatever lesser included homicides the indictment and the evidence support. State v. Thomas, 325 N.C. 583, 386 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

A defendant may always show by the evidence not only his innocence under the theory of prosecution chosen by the State, but also his possible guilt of some lesser offense. If this lesser offense is included in the crime charged in the indictment and if there is evidence to support it, defendant is entitled to have it submitted to the jury. These different theories of defense cannot be abrogated by the State's decision to prosecute, nor the trial court's decision to submit the case on only one prosecutorial theory, when under the indictment and the evidence adduced another is more favorable to defendant. State v. Thomas, 325 N.C. 583, 386 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

Trial court may not premise a second-degree murder instruction on the possibility that the jury will accept some of the State's evidence while rejecting other portions of the State's case. State v. Leroux, 326 N.C. 368, 390 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 498 U.S. 871, 111 S. Ct. 192, 112 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1990).

Felony Murder or Lying in Wait. — For all murder cases prosecuted under § 14-17, when there is a conflict in the evidence regarding whether defendant committed the underlying felony or was lying in wait, all lesser degrees of homicide charged in the indictment pursuant to this section and supported by the evidence must be submitted to the jury. State v. Camacho, 337 N.C. 224, 446 S.E.2d 8 (1994).

Instruction on Second-Degree Murder Where Evidence Shows Lying in Wait. — The trial court may not give an instruction on second-degree murder when the State's evidence supports a jury finding of each element of lying in wait and when there is no conflict with respect to such evidence. State v. Leroux, 326 N.C. 368, 390 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 498 U.S. 871, 111 S. Ct. 192, 112 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1990).

When the evidence supports a finding that the murder was perpetrated by means of lying in wait and there is no conflict in the evidence, the trial court is not required to instruct the jury on second-degree murder. State v. Leroux, 326 N.C. 368, 390 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 498 U.S. 871, 111 S. Ct. 192, 112 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1990).

§ 15-144.1. Essentials of bill for rape.

(a) In indictments for rape it is not necessary to allege every matter required to be proved on the trial; but in the body of the indictment, after naming the person accused, the date of the offense, the county in which the offense of rape was allegedly committed, and the averment "with force and arms," as is now usual, it is sufficient in describing rape to allege that the accused person unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously did ravish and carnally know the victim, naming her, by force and against her will and concluding as is now required by law. Any bill of indictment containing the averments and allegations herein named shall be good and sufficient in law as an indictment for rape in the first degree and will support a verdict of guilty of rape in the first degree, rape in the second degree, attempted rape or assault on a female.

(b) If the victim is a female child under the age of 13 years it is sufficient to allege that the accused unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously did carnally know and abuse a child under 13, naming her, and concluding as aforesaid. Any bill of indictment containing the averments and allegations herein named shall be good and sufficient in law as an indictment for the rape of a female child under the age of 13 years and all lesser included offenses.

(c) If the victim is a person who is mentally defective, mentally incapacitated, or physically helpless it is sufficient to allege that the defendant unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously did carnally know and abuse a person who was mentally defective, mentally incapacitated or physically helpless, naming such victim, and concluding as aforesaid. Any bill of indictment containing the averments and allegations herein named shall be good and sufficient in law for the rape of a mentally defective, mentally incapacitated or physically helpless person and all lesser included offenses. (1977, c. 861, s. 1; 1979, c. 682, s. 10; 1983, c. 720, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 682 deleted "assault with intent to commit rape" in subsection (a), deleted "virtuous" preceding "female child" and preceding "child under 13" in subsection (b), and added subsection (c). Session Laws 1979, c. 682, ss. 13 and 14, provided:

"Sec. 13. All laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed, provided however, nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal any portion of Article 26 of Chapter 14, which relates to offenses against public morality and decency.

"Sec. 14. This act shall become effective January 1, 1980, and shall apply to offenses occurring on and after that date. Nothing herein shall be construed to render lawful acts committed prior to the effective date of this act [January 1, 1979] and unlawful at the time the said acts occurred; and nothing contained herein shall be construed to affect any prosecution instituted under any section repealed by this act pending on the effective date hereof."

CASE NOTES

Section Eliminates Requirement That Every Element Be Alleged. — Prior to the enactment of this section it was necessary that an indictment for rape contain allegations of every element of the offense. This section, in which the legislature explicitly states that "[i]n indictments for rape it is not necessary to allege every matter required to be proved on the trial," eliminates that requirement. State v. Lowe, 295 N.C. 596, 247 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

In enacting this section, the legislature eliminated the requirement that every element to be proven at trial must be alleged in the indictment. State v. Walker, 84 N.C. App. 540, 353 S.E.2d 245 (1987).

And Differs from Federal Equivalent. — The defendant's short-form indictment for rape which failed to specifically allege all the elements of each offense was not defective in spite of the United States Supreme Court's holding, in United States v. Jones, 526 U.S. 227, 143 L. Ed. 2d 311, 119 S. Ct. 1215 (1999), that all indictments must so allege. State v. Harris, 140 N.C. App. 208, 535 S.E.2d 614 (2000).

But Is Constitutional. — This section complies with constitutional requirement that the defendant be informed of the accusation against him even though it eliminates the requirement that the indictment contain allegations of every element of the offense. State v. Lowe, 295 N.C. 596, 247 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

Eight indictments against defendant for first-degree rape comported with federal and state constitutional requirements although they did not contain each element and fact which might increase the maximum punishment for the crime charged. State v. Wallace, 351 N.C. 481, 528 S.E.2d 326 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1018, 121 S. Ct. 581, 148 L. Ed. 2d 498 (2000).

In enacting this section the legislature prescribed a new form of indictment for rape. State v. Lowe, 295 N.C. 596, 247 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

Section Modeled upon § 15-144. — The short-form indictment for homicide in § 15-144 is the model upon which this section was drafted. State v. Lowe, 295 N.C. 596, 247 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

When Indictment Under This Section Is Constitutional. — An indictment under this section is constitutional if it permits the defendant to prepare a defense and to be protected from subsequent prosecution for the same offense. State v. Walker, 84 N.C. App. 540, 353 S.E.2d 245 (1987).

A short form indictment is constitutionally sufficient to charge a defendant with first degree rape. State v. Getward, 89 N.C. App. 26, 365 S.E.2d 209 (1988).

One purpose of an indictment is to give the defendant notice of the charge against him to the end that he may prepare a defense and be in a position to plead double jeopardy if he is again brought to trial for the same offense. Another purpose is to enable the court to know what judgment to pronounce in case of conviction. State v. Sills, 311 N.C. 370, 317 S.E.2d 379 (1984).

Allegation as to Age of Victim. — An allegation that the victim was "a female child eight (8) years old" sufficiently alleged that she was "a child under 12" and satisfied the requirement of subsection (b) of this section as it existed on June 6, 1983. State v. Ollis, 318 N.C. 370, 348 S.E.2d 777 (1986).

State's failure to set forth the marital status of the parties involved is not fatal to an indictment for rape. State v. Getward, 89 N.C. App. 26, 365 S.E.2d 209 (1988).

Unnecessary Averments. — This section authorizes an indictment for first degree rape which omits averments (1) that the offense was perpetrated with a deadly weapon or by inflicting serious bodily injury, or (2) as to the defendant's age, two elements the proof of which were essential to a conviction for first degree rape. State v. Lowe, 295 N.C. 596, 247 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

The date given in a bill of indictment usually is not an essential element of the crime charged. The State may prove that the crime was in fact committed on some other date. This rule, however, may not be used to deprive a defendant of his defense. State v. Sills, 311 N.C. 370, 317 S.E.2d 379 (1984).

Where the indictments for attempted rape fully complied with the requirements set forth in this section, the indictments were not insufficient merely because neither indictment alleged that the victims of the crimes were females. State v. Bell, 311 N.C. 131, 316 S.E.2d 611 (1984).

Sufficiency of Indictment Under This Section and § 15-144.2. — The short form indictments set out in this section and § 15-144.2 for first-degree rape and first-degree sexual offense provide adequate notice of the charges. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

The provisions of this section do not prevail over § 15-155. State v. Sills, 311 N.C. 370, 317 S.E.2d 379 (1984).

Construction with § 15-155 as to "with Force and Arms". — Section 15-155 does not either require the averment "with force and arms" or express a legislative intent that the language in subsection (a) of this section prevail over the express language in § 15-155, which states in effect that no judgment shall be stayed or reversed because of the omission of the words "with force and arms" from the indictment. State v. Corbett, 307 N.C. 169, 297 S.E.2d 553 (1982); State v. Welch, 69 N.C. App. 668, 318 S.E.2d 4 (1984).

An indictment in a rape case under this section need not contain the phrase "with force and arms." State v. Cheek, 307 N.C. 552, 299 S.E.2d 633 (1983).

Bill of Particulars. — The granting of a motion for a bill of particulars lies within the discretion of the trial court and is not subject to review by the appellate courts except for gross abuse of discretion. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

The denial of a defendant's motion for a bill of particulars will be held error only upon a clear showing that the lack of timely access to the information significantly impaired the defendant's preparation and conduct of his case. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

A defendant may request a bill of particulars to obtain information to supplement the facts contained in the indictment. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

Election by State. — By unequivocally arraigning defendant on second-degree rape and by failing thereafter to give any notice whatsoever, prior to the jury being impaneled and jeopardy attaching, of an intent instead to pursue a conviction for first-degree rape as arguably supported by the short-form indictment, the state made a binding election not to pursue the greater degree of the offense, and such election was tantamount to an acquittal of first-degree rape. State v. Jones, 317 N.C. 487, 346 S.E.2d 657 (1986).

Election of Trial Court Not to Submit Lesser Included Offenses. — Although the trial court elected not to submit the lesser included offense of attempted second degree rape and the offense of assault on a female to the jury, defendant was not acquitted of those charges, where there was a mistrial because of a hung jury, and defendant had been indicted only on second degree rape. State v. Hatcher, 117 N.C. App. 78, 450 S.E.2d 19 (1994).

Indictment Upheld. — Indictment for second-degree rape, which met the criteria specified in this section for a proper indictment for rape, was sufficient to allow defendant to prepare a defense and to be protected from double jeopardy, and was thus not fatally defective. State v. Walker, 84 N.C. App. 540, 353 S.E.2d 245 (1987).

Rape indictment drawn in accordance with this section was sufficient enough to let defendant know that he was charged with the rape of his estranged wife and to allow him to prepare his defense. State v. Getward, 89 N.C. App. 26, 365 S.E.2d 209 (1988).

§ 15-144.2. Essentials of bill for sex offense.

(a) In indictments for sex offense it is not necessary to allege every matter required to be proved on the trial; but in the body of the indictment, after naming the person accused, the date of the offense, the county in which the sex offense was allegedly committed, and the averment "with force and arms," as is now usual, it is sufficient in describing a sex offense to allege that the accused person unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously did engage in a sex offense with the victim, naming the victim, by force and against the will of such victim and concluding as is now required by law. Any bill of indictment containing the averments and allegations herein named shall be good and sufficient in law as an indictment for a first degree sex offense and will support a verdict of guilty of a sex offense in the first degree, a sex offense in the second degree, an attempt to commit a sex offense or an assault.

(b) If the victim is a person under the age of 13 years, it is sufficient to allege that the defendant unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously did engage in a sex offense with a child under the age of 13 years, naming the child, and concluding as aforesaid. Any bill of indictment containing the averments and allegations herein named shall be good and sufficient in law as an indictment for a sex offense against a child under the age of 13 years and all lesser included offenses.

(c) If the victim is a person who is mentally defective, mentally incapacitated, or physically helpless it is sufficient to allege that the defendant unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously did engage in a sex offense with a person who was mentally defective, mentally incapacitated or physically helpless, naming such victim, and concluding as aforesaid. Any bill of indictment containing the averments and allegations herein named shall be good and sufficient in law for a sex offense against a mentally defective, mentally incapacitated or physically helpless person and all lesser included offenses. (1979, c. 682, s. 11; 1983, c. 720, ss. 2, 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 682, ss. 13 and 14, provided: "Sec. 13. All laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed, provided however, nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal any portion of Article 26 of Chapter 14 which relates to offenses against public morality and decency.

"Sec. 14. This act shall become effective January 1, 1980, and shall apply to offenses occurring on and after that date. Nothing herein shall be construed to render lawful acts committed prior to the effective date of this act [January 1, 1979] and unlawful at the time the said acts occurred; and nothing contained herein shall be construed to affect any prosecution instituted under any section repealed by this act pending on the effective date hereof."

Session Laws 1979, c. 682, s. 12 is a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

Requirements of a State Short-Form Indictment Are Less Stringent than Its Federal Equivalent. — The defendant's short-form indictment for sex offense which failed to specifically allege all the elements of each offense was not defective in spite of the United States Supreme Court's holding, in United States v. Jones, 526 U.S. 227, 143 L. Ed. 2d 311, 119 S. Ct. 1215 (1999), that all indictments must so allege. State v. Harris, 140 N.C. App. 208, 535 S.E.2d 614 (2000).

Omission of Elements Distinguishing First and Second Degree Offenses. — Subsection (a) authorizes, for sexual offense, an abbreviated form of indictment which omits allegations of the particular elements that distinguish first-degree and second-degree sexual offense. State v. Berkley, 56 N.C. App. 163, 287 S.E.2d 445 (1982).

Specification of Sexual Act Unnecessary. — An indictment drafted pursuant to subsection (b) of this section without specifying which sexual act was committed is sufficient to charge the crime of first-degree sexual offense and to inform the defendant of such accusation. Should a defendant require additional information on the nature of the specific sexual act with which he stands charged, he may move for a bill of particulars. State v. Effler, 309 N.C. 742, 309 S.E.2d 203 (1983).

An indictment which charges first degree sexual offense in accordance with this section without specifying which sexual act was committed is sufficient to charge the crime of first degree sexual offense and to put defendant on notice of the accusation. State v. Kennedy, 320 N.C. 20, 357 S.E.2d 359 (1987).

For an indictment to be legally valid under this statute, it must contain only the following: the name of the accused, the date of the offense, the county in which the offense was allegedly committed, the averment "with force and arms," the allegation that the accused unlawfully, willfully and feloniously engaged in a sex offense with the victim by force and against the victim's will, and the victim's name. An indictment including such information is sufficient to charge first-degree sexual offense, second-degree sexual offense, attempt to commit a sexual offense or assault. State v. Dillard, 90 N.C. App. 318, 368 S.E.2d 442 (1988).

The indictments against the defendant for first-degree sexual offense and for indecent liberties with a child were upheld in spite of his allegations that they were defective as a matter of law in not setting out each element of the offenses. State v. Youngs, 141 N.C. App. 220, 540 S.E.2d 794 (2000).

Indictment Under Subsection (b) Need Not Specify Sexual Act. — An indictment drafted pursuant to subsection (b) of this section without specifying which sexual act was committed is sufficient to charge the crime of first-degree sexual offense and to inform the defendant of such accusation. Should a defendant require additional information on the nature of the specific sexual act with which he stands charged, he may move for a bill of particulars. State v. Effler, 309 N.C. 742, 309 S.E.2d 203 (1983).

While it is essential that the State prove a "sexual act," as defined by § 14-27.1(4), in order to convict a defendant under § 14-27.4, an indictment which is drafted pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b) of this section without specifying which "sexual act" was committed is sufficient to charge the crime of first-degree sexual offense and to inform a defendant of such accusation. If a defendant wishes additional information in the nature of the specific "sexual act" with which he stands charged, he may move for a bill of particulars. State v. Edwards, 305 N.C. 378, 289 S.E.2d 360 (1982).

But Defendant May Demand to Know Specific "Sexual Act" Charged. — When the State does not specify at the outset which "sexual act" was committed by a defendant, it can be required to do so before trial on the indictment is had. State v. Loudner, 77 N.C. App. 453, 335 S.E.2d 78 (1985).

State Bound by Allegation of Specific Sexual Act. — While the State was not required to allege the specific nature of the sex act in the indictment, having chosen to do so, it is bound by its allegations. State v. Loudner, 77 N.C. App. 453, 335 S.E.2d 78 (1985).

Evidence Must Correspond to Allegations. — The evidence in a criminal prosecution must correspond to the material allegations of the indictment, and where the evidence tends to show the commission of an offense not charged in the indictment, the defendant's conviction thereof cannot stand. State v. Loudner, 77 N.C. App. 453, 335 S.E.2d 78 (1985).

Sufficiency of Indictment Under § 15-144.1 and This Section. — The short form indictments set out in § 15-144.1 and this section for first-degree rape and first-degree sexual offense provide adequate notice of the charges. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

Indictment Sufficient to Charge First-Degree Sexual Offense. — This statute provides that if the indictment contains the averment that the victim was under age 13, the indictment is sufficient to charge first-degree sexual offense and all lesser included offenses. State v. Dillard, 90 N.C. App. 318, 368 S.E.2d 442 (1988).

Indictment charging first degree sexual offense which used the words "by force and against the victim's will[.]" was sufficient. State v. Smith, 110 N.C. App. 119, 429 S.E.2d 425, aff'd, 335 N.C. 162, 435 S.E.2d 770 (1993).

Because the indictment charging a first-degree sexual offense included the terms "feloniously" and "against the victim's will," the charge was sufficient to charge first-degree sexual offense and was not substantially altered by the addition of the term by force; thus, the trial court did not err in allowing the amendment pursuant to § 15A-923(e). State v. Haywood, 144 N.C. App. 223, 550 S.E.2d 38 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 72, 553 S.E.2d 206 (2001).

Bill of Particulars. — A defendant may request a bill of particulars to obtain information to supplement the facts contained in the indictment. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

The granting of a motion for a bill of particulars lies within the discretion of the trial court and is not subject to review by the appellate courts except for gross abuse of discretion. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

The denial of a defendant's motion for a bill of particulars will be held error only upon a clear showing that the lack of timely access to the information significantly impaired the defendant's preparation and conduct of his case. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

§ 15-145. Form of bill for perjury.

In every indictment for willful and corrupt perjury it is sufficient to set forth the substance of the offense charged upon the defendant, and by what court, or before whom, the oath was taken (averring such court or person to have competent authority to administer the same), together with the proper averments to falsify the matter wherein the perjury is assigned, without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record or proceedings, either in law or equity, other than aforesaid, and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court or person before whom the perjury was committed. In indictments for perjury the following form shall be sufficient, to wit:

The jurors for the State, on their oath, present, that A.B., of _____ County, did unlawfully commit perjury upon the trial of an action in _____ court, in _____ County, wherein _____ was plaintiff and _____ was defendant, by falsely asserting, on oath (or solemn affirmation) (here set out the statement or statements alleged to be false), knowing the said statement, or statements, to be false, or being ignorant whether or not said statement was true. (1842, c. 49, s. 1; R.C., c. 35, s. 16; Code, s. 1185; 1889, c. 83; Rev., ss. 3246, 3247; C.S., s. 4615.)

Cross References. — As to perjury generally, see § 14-209 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The form of indictment for perjury prescribed by this section is sufficient and constitutional. State v. Gates, 107 N.C. 832, 12 S.E. 319 (1890); State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890).

Purpose. — The purpose of this section is to render unnecessary useless details and niceties, in charging the offense of perjury, that one time prevailed to the prejudice of the administration of criminal justice. State v. Robertson, 98 N.C. 751, 4 S.E. 511 (1887).

Effect of this section is not to change in any respect the constituent elements of perjury nor the nature or mode of proof. It only relieves the State from charging in the indictment the details, or rather the definition of the offense, and makes it sufficient to allege that the defendant unlawfully committed perjury, charging the name of the action and of the court in which committed, setting out the matter alleged to have been falsely sworn and averring further that the defendant knew such to be false, or that he was ignorant whether or not it was true. State v. Lucas, 244 N.C. 53, 92 S.E.2d 401 (1956).

This section dispenses with the necessity of setting forth the record of the indictment, on the trial of which the false oath is alleged to have been taken, and only requires that the substance would be set forth, but it did not dispense with the necessity of making all the averments in an indictment for perjury which were all necessary to be proved, and it is necessary to prove in what court, or before whom, the oath was taken. State v. Lewis, 93 N.C. 581 (1885).

Defendant Would Not Benefit from Inclusion of Minutiae. — A defendant certainly can derive no just benefit from the insertion in the charge of the minutiae of what would constitute perjury. It would serve not so much to enlighten the defendant as to the charge he was to meet, as to present a network of technicalities which hindered the trial of the cause upon its merits and very often caused a miscarriage of justice. State v. Gates, 107 N.C. 832, 12 S.E. 319 (1890).

Elements of Proof Not Changed by Section. — This section has merely simplified the form of the indictment for perjury, and the constituent elements of the offense remain unchanged and require the same proof to establish the commission of the crime. State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890); State v. Cline, 146 N.C. 640, 61 S.E. 522 (1908).

Construction with § 15-146. — Since the commission of perjury by another is the basic element in the crime of subornation of perjury, it is appropriate to read this section and § 15-146 together. State v. Lucas, 244 N.C. 53, 92 S.E.2d 401 (1956); State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

Indictment Required for Perjury. — A person charged with perjury must be indicted by the grand jury as the offense is a felony. A trial without an indictment is contrary to N.C. Const., Art. I, § 22. State v. Hyman, 164 N.C. 411, 79 S.E. 284 (1913).

Sufficient Averment of Jurisdiction. — The jurisdiction of the justice of the peace of the complaint upon the examination whereof the alleged perjury was committed is sufficiently averred, where it is averred that the justice had power to administer the oath. State v. Davis, 69 N.C. 495 (1873).

Failure to Allege Knowledge of Falsity. — Although an indictment for perjury, which fails to allege that the defendant "knew the said statement to be false," or that "he was ignorant whether or not said statement was false," is defective, the court should not quash it, but the defendant should be held until a proper indictment is had. State v. Flowers, 109 N.C. 841, 13 S.E. 718 (1891).

Materiality of False Testimony Need Not Be Charged. — Prior to the adoption of this section, in indictments for perjury the indictment was required to charge that the alleged false testimony was material to the issue. Since this section was passed, however, it has been repeatedly held that this need not appear in the indictment. State v. Hawley, 186 N.C. 433, 119 S.E. 888 (1923), overruling State v. Cline, 150 N.C. 854, 64 S.E. 591 (1909).

Since Averment of Perjury Includes It. — The averment in a bill that defendant committed perjury involves necessarily the charge that the false testimony was material to the issue. State v. Cline, 146 N.C. 640, 61 S.E. 522 (1908).

Word "Feloniously" Not Required. — This section does not make the word "feloniously" a part of the bill, and it does not appear in the form set out, and the same is, therefore, no longer required. State v. Harris, 145 N.C. 456, 59 S.E. 115 (1907), overruling State v. Shaw, 117 N.C. 764, 23 S.E. 246 (1895) and State v. Bunting, 118 N.C. 1120, 118 N.C. 1200, 24 S.E. 118, 24 S.E. 118 (1896); State v. Holder, 153 N.C. 606, 69 S.E. 66 (1910).

Variance as to Term of Court Held Fatal. — Where an indictment for perjury charged that the false oath was taken at one term of a court in a trial between A and B and the records of that court showed that at that term there was no trial between these parties, but the record showed that at a term other than the one alleged in the indictment there was such a trial, and the judge allowed this record to be introduced, this was held error, and the variance was fatal. State v. Lewis, 93 N.C. 581 (1885).

Use of "Suit, Controversy, or Investigation" to Describe Proceeding. — Where perjury was alleged to have been committed in the trial of a "suit, controversy, or investigation," without a definite statement of the nature of the proceeding, the words, "suit, controversy, or investigation," under this section, may be regarded as surplusage in a bill of indictment charging perjury, and a motion to quash upon the ground that there was indefiniteness of statement of the nature of the proceeding will not be sustained. State v. Hawley, 186 N.C. 433, 119 S.E. 888 (1923).

Style of Court. — The style of the court before which the perjury is alleged to have been committed must be legally set forth. State v. Street, 5 N.C. 156, 3 Am. Dec. 682 (1807), decided prior to enactment of this section.

Name of Justice of the Peace. — An indictment for perjury, alleged to have been committed upon a trial in the court of a justice of the peace, is not defective because it sets out the name of the justice before whom the case was tried. Addition of the justice's name does not harm the defendant. At most its inclusion is mere surplusage. State v. Flowers, 109 N.C. 841, 13 S.E. 718 (1891), decided prior to abolition of justices of the peace.

Applied in State v. Rhinehart, 209 N.C. 150, 183 S.E. 388 (1936); State v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

§ 15-146. Bill for subornation of perjury.

In every indictment for subornation of perjury, or for corrupt bargaining or contracting with others to commit willful and corrupt perjury, it is sufficient to set forth the substance of the offense charged upon the defendant, without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration or any part of any record or proceedings, and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court or person before whom the perjury was committed or was agreed or promised to be committed. (1842, c. 49, s. 2; R.C., c. 35, s. 17; Code, s. 1186; Rev., s. 3248; C.S., s. 4616.)

Allegations Required Generally. — This section requires that an indictment for subornation of perjury should charge that the defendant did unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously procure another to willfully and corruptly commit perjury. State v. Watkins, 256 N.C. 606, 124 S.E.2d 570 (1962).

An indictment under this section should designate the court and the nature of the case wherein the alleged perjury occurred, and set out either the false statement or statements defendant is alleged to have procured another to make, or that the defendant knew said statement or statements to be false, or that he was ignorant as to whether or not such statement or statements were true. State v. Watkins, 256 N.C. 606, 124 S.E.2d 570 (1962).

Indictment Required to Set Forth Underlying Perjury. — Since the commission of the crime of perjury is the basic element in the crime of subornation of perjury, it is appropriate to read this section and § 15-145 in reference to each other. And if it be essential to charge the offense of perjury in conformity to the form of indictment prescribed in § 15-145, it would seem equally clear that in an indictment charging subornation of perjury the crime of perjury constituting the basis therefor is required to be set forth in conformity to the form of indictment so prescribed. State v. Lucas, 244 N.C. 53, 92 S.E.2d 401 (1956); State v. Lucas, 247 N.C. 208, 100 S.E.2d 366 (1957).

§ 15-147: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, s. 26.

Cross References. — See Editor's note following the analysis to this Chapter. For present provisions as to allegations and proof of previous convictions, see §§ 15A-645 and 15A-928.

§ 15-148. Manner of alleging joint ownership of property.

In any indictment wherein it is necessary to state the ownership of any property whatsoever, whether real or personal, which belongs to, or is in the possession of, more than one person, whether such persons be partners in trade, joint tenants or tenants in common, it is sufficient to name one of such persons, and to state such property to belong to the person so named, and another or others as the case may be; and whenever, in any such indictment, it is necessary to mention, for any purpose whatsoever, any partners, joint tenants or tenants in common, it is sufficient to describe them in the manner aforesaid; and this provision shall extend to all joint-stock companies and trustees. (R.C., c. 35, s. 19; Code, s. 1188; Rev., s. 3250; C.S., s. 4618.)

CASE NOTES

Apparent Variance Cured. — Where property is charged in an indictment for larceny as belonging to A and another, and it is proved on the trial to be the property of A and B, a firm well known in the community, the apparent variance is cured by this section. State v. Capps, 71 N.C. 93 (1874).

Where A makes a crop of cotton on the plantation of B, under a verbal agreement that B is to have half of it, in an indictment for larceny the cotton was properly charged to be the property of A and another. State v. Patterson, 68 N.C. 292 (1873).

Variance Not Cured. — Upon the trial of an indictment for injury to livestock, it was a variance where the property was laid in "L.S. and others," and the proof was that L.S. was the exclusive owner. State v. Hill, 79 N.C. 656 (1878).

Words "and Another or Others" Invalidates Indictment. — An indictment for larceny, which charges the thing taken to be the property of J.R.D. "and another or others" is fatally defective under this section. State v. Harper, 64 N.C. 129 (1870).

§ 15-149. Description in bill for larceny of money.

In every indictment in which it is necessary to make any averment as to the larceny of any money, or United States treasury note, or any note of any bank whatsoever, it is sufficient to describe such money, or treasury note, or bank note, simply as money, without specifying any particular coin, or treasury note, or bank note; and such allegation, so far as regards the description of the property, shall be sustained by proof of any amount of coin, or treasury note, or bank note, although the particular species of coin, of which such amount was composed, or the particular nature of the treasury note, or bank note, shall not be proven. (1876-7, c. 68; Code, s. 1190; Rev., s. 3251; C.S., s. 4619.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — An indictment, before 1877, for stealing "money" without further description could not have been sustained, and the Legislature, to remedy the difficulty of describing and identifying bank bills, treasury notes, etc., which may be stolen, passed this section. State v. Reese, 83 N.C. 637 (1880).

Amount Should Be Charged. — The term "money," without anything added to make it more definite, is too loose in indictments, and it should be described at least by the amount, as to how many dollars and cents. State v. Reese, 83 N.C. 637 (1880).

Charge Sufficient. — The charge of the theft of "five dollars in money of the value of five dollars" is good under this section, and is sustained by the proof of the theft of any kind of coin or treasury or bank notes without proof of the particular kind of coin or treasury or bank notes. State v. Carter, 113 N.C. 639, 18 S.E. 517 (1893).

Inasmuch as money is the measure of values, a charge in an indictment of taking "ten dollars in money" is an allegation of taking "the value of ten dollars." State v. Brown, 113 N.C. 645, 18 S.E. 51 (1893).

Variance Not Found. — Where an indictment charged the larceny of "thirty dollars in money," and the proof was that defendant stole "three ten-dollar bills" it was not a variance. State v. Freeman, 89 N.C. 469 (1883).

§ 15-150. Description in bill for embezzlement.

In indictments for embezzlement, except when the offense relates to a chattel, it is sufficient to allege the embezzlement to be of money, without specifying any particular coin or valuable security; and such allegation, so far as regards the description of the property, shall be sustained if the offender shall be proved to have embezzled any amount, although the particular species of coin or valuable security of which such amount was composed shall not be proved. (1871-2, c. 145, s. 2; Code, s. 1020; Rev., s. 3252; C.S., s. 4620.)

Cross References. — As to embezzlement in general, see § 14-90 et seq. and § 53-129.

CASE NOTES

Proof of Embezzlement of Less Than Amount Charged. — In a prosecution for embezzlement the failure of proof of embezzlement of the whole sum charged in the bill of indictment does not constitute a fatal variance between allegation and proof where there is proof of embezzlement of a sum less than that charged in the indictment. State v. Dula, 206 N.C. 745, 175 S.E. 80 (1934).

Description of Property Sufficient. — The description of the property embezzled, as "one note for five dollars in money of the value of five dollars," is sufficiently specific. State v. Fain, 106 N.C. 760, 11 S.E. 593 (1890).

"Did Steal, Take, Carry Away" Is Surplusage. — An allegation in an indictment for embezzlement that the defendant "did steal, take, carry away" the property alleged to have been embezzled, is surplusage, and will not vitiate an indictment otherwise sufficient. State v. Fain, 106 N.C. 760, 11 S.E. 593 (1890).

§ 15-151. Intent to defraud; larceny and receiving.

In any case where an intent to defraud is required to constitute the offense of forgery, or any other offense whatever, it is sufficient to allege in the indictment an intent to defraud, without naming therein the particular person or body corporate intended to be defrauded; and on the trial of such indictment, it shall be sufficient, and shall not be deemed a variance, if there appear to be an intent to defraud the United States, or any state, county, city, town, or parish, or body corporate, or any public officer in his official capacity, or any copartnership or member thereof, or any particular person. The defendant may be charged in the same indictment in several counts with the separate offenses of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen, and larceny. (1852, c. 87, s. 2; R.C., c. 35, ss. 21, 23; 1874-5, c. 62; Code, s. 1191; Rev., s. 3253; C.S., s. 4621.)

Cross References. — As to larceny and receiving stolen goods generally, see § 14-70 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Section modifies the common law. It is not now necessary to name the injured party where prosecution is based on forgery or other fraud. It is, however, necessary to allege and prove the evil intent when fraud is the foundation for the prosecution. State v. Bissette, 250 N.C. 514, 108 S.E.2d 858 (1959).

Uttering a Forged Check. — A bill of indictment charging the uttering of a forged check which charges all the essential elements of the offense but not specifying to whom checks were uttered is sufficient. State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975).

Making Fraudulent Entries in Bank Records. — An indictment charging the employee with the indictable offense of making a false entry on the books of a bank in which he was employed need not necessarily specify all those whom he has thereby intended to defraud; and where it has named the officers of the bank and a depositor, "and other persons to the jurors unknown," it is sufficient to show that the false entry was entered to deceive the bank examiners in concealing his defalcation, who were present making an examination of his books, both under the common law and the statute. State v. Hedgecock, 185 N.C. 714, 117 S.E. 47 (1923).

Election Between Counts of Larceny and Receiving Not Required. — On trial of an indictment for larceny and receiving, etc., the two counts relating to the same transaction and varied to meet the probable proofs, the court will not order the solicitor (now district attorney) to elect upon which count he will proceed. State v. Morrison, 85 N.C. 561 (1881).

General Verdict Correct. — A general verdict of guilty upon an indictment of two counts — one for stealing and the other for receiving stolen goods of a value less than five dollars — is correct and one count is defective the verdict will be taken upon the good count, and there may be judgment. State v. Bailey, 73 N.C. 70 (1875); State v. Leak, 80 N.C. 403 (1879).

Cited in State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586 (1972).

Cross References. — See Editor's note following the analysis to this Chapter. For present provisions as to joinder of offenses and consolidation of indictments, see § 15A-643.

§ 15-153. Bill or warrant not quashed for informality.

Every criminal proceeding by warrant, indictment, information, or impeachment is sufficient in form for all intents and purposes if it express the charge against the defendant in a plain, intelligible, and explicit manner; and the same shall not be quashed, nor the judgment thereon stayed, by reason of any informality or refinement, if in the bill or proceeding, sufficient matter appears to enable the court to proceed to judgment. (37 Hen. VIII, c. 8; 1784, c. 210, s. 2, P.R.; 1811, c. 809, P.R.; R.C., c. 35, s. 14; Code, s. 1183; Rev., s. 3254; C.S., s. 4623.)

I. General Consideration.
II. Form and Sufficiency of Indictments and Warrants.
A. In General.
B. Use of Language of Statute.
C. Remedies for Insufficiency.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Purpose of Section. — This law was certainly designed to uphold the execution of public justice, by freeing the courts from those fetters of form, technicality, and refinement, which do not concern the substance of the charge, and the proof to support it. Many of the stages of the law had before called nice objections of this sort a disease of the law, and a reproach to the bench, and lamented that they were bound down to strict and precise precedents. The Legislature meant to disallow the whole of them, and only require the substance, that is a direct averment of those facts and circumstances which constitute the crime, to be set forth. It is to be remarked that the act directs the court to proceed to judgment, without regard to two things — one of the form, the other refinement. State v. Moses, 13 N.C. 452 (1830); State v. Hester, 122 N.C. 1047, 29 S.E. 380 (1898); State v. Barnes, 122 N.C. 1031, 29 S.E. 381 (1898); State v. Hedgecock, 185 N.C. 714, 117 S.E. 47 (1923); State v. Switzer, 187 N.C. 88, 121 S.E. 43 (1924).

This section and § 15-155 were passed to forbid refinements and technicalities which, without being any aid to the innocent, brought the administration of justice into disrepute. State v. Leeper, 146 N.C. 655, 61 S.E. 585 (1908), overruled on other grounds, In re Alamance County Court Facilities, 329 N.C. 84, 405 S.E.2d 125 (1991).

This section was designed to free the courts from the fetters of form, technicality and refinement not concerned with the substance of the charge. State v. Taylor, 280 N.C. 273, 185 S.E.2d 677 (1972).

This section was enacted to simplify forms of indictment. State v. Russell, 282 N.C. 240, 192 S.E.2d 294 (1972).

Liberal Construction. — This section has received a very liberal construction, and its efficacy has reached and healed numerous defects in the substance as well as in the form of indictment. State v. Smith, 63 N.C. 234 (1869); State v. Carpenter, 173 N.C. 767, 92 S.E. 373 (1917).

This section has received a very liberal construction. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953); State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971); State v. Russell, 282 N.C. 240, 192 S.E.2d 294 (1972); State v. Beach, 283 N.C. 261, 196 S.E.2d 214 (1973).

Rule Also Applied in Defendant's Favor. — Although the rule prohibiting reliance upon technicalities applies only against defendants, it is in accordance with the spirit of the section that it should be invoked in their favor also, for example as to the form of defendant's objection to the indictment. State v. Wood, 175 N.C. 809, 95 S.E. 1050 (1918).

Purpose of the warrant or indictment is (1) to give the defendant notice of the charge against him to the end that he may prepare his defense and to be in a position to plead former acquittal or former conviction in the event he is again brought to trial for the same offense; (2) to enable the court to know what judgment to pronounce in case of conviction. State v. Dorsett, 272 N.C. 227, 158 S.E.2d 15 (1967).

Purposes of Requirements as to Form of Indictments. — An indictment, whether at common law or under a statute, to be good must allege lucidly and accurately all the essential elements of the offense endeavored to be charged. The purpose of such constitutional provisions is: (1) to provide such certainty in the statement of the accusation as will identify the offense with which the accused is sought to be charged; (2) to protect the accused from being twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; (3) to enable the accused to prepare for trial; and (4) to enable the court, on conviction or plea of nolo contendere or guilty, to pronounce sentence according to the rights of the case. State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Two Theories Alleged in Single Count. — Where, in a single count of an indictment, the State alleged two factual underpinnings for, or factual theories of, conviction for a violation of § 14-230, it was not required that the State prove both; proof of only one factual theory was legally sufficient and at most placed the State at risk of failing to persuade the jury of defendant's guilt. State v. Birdsong, 325 N.C. 418, 384 S.E.2d 5 (1989).

Indictment Under Private Statute. — Upon an indictment under a private statute, it is sufficient if the same is set forth by chapter and date and its material provisions incorporated in the indictment. State v. Heaton, 77 N.C. 505 (1877).

Holding Prisoner Where Indictment Is Defective. — Where the indictment should have been quashed because it was defective in form, the prisoner could still be held for a proper bill under this section. State v. Callett, 211 N.C. 563, 191 S.E. 27 (1937).

Applied in State v. Anderson, 208 N.C. 771, 182 S.E. 643 (1935); State v. Dale, 218 N.C. 625, 12 S.E.2d 556 (1940); State v. Blanton, 227 N.C. 517, 42 S.E.2d 663 (1947); State v. Avery, 236 N.C. 276, 72 S.E.2d 670 (1952); State v. Smith, 240 N.C. 99, 81 S.E.2d 263 (1954); State v. Nugent, 243 N.C. 100, 89 S.E.2d 781 (1955); State v. App. 577, 188 S.E.2d 741 (1972); State v. Locklear, 21 N.C. App. 48, 203 S.E.2d 63 (1974); State v. McAllister, 287 N.C. 178, 214 S.E.2d 75 (1975); State v. Hill, 31 N.C. II. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENTS AND WARRANTS.

A. In General.

Plain, intelligible and explicit charge is all that is now required in any criminal proceeding. State v. Smith, 63 N.C. 234 (1869); State v. Caylor, 178 N.C. 807, 101 S.E. 627 (1919). See also State v. Everhardt, 203 N.C. 610, 166 S.E. 738 (1932); State v. Howley, 220 N.C. 113, 16 S.E.2d 705 (1941).

If a warrant is sufficiently intelligible and explicit to (1) inform the defendant of the charge he must answer, (2) enable him to prepare his defense, and (3) sustain the judgment, it meets the requirements of this section. State v. Sumner, 232 N.C. 386, 61 S.E.2d 84 (1950).

A bill is sufficient if it charges the offense in a plain, intelligible and explicit manner, with averments sufficient to enable the court to proceed to judgment and to bar a subsequent prosecution for the same offense. State v. Taylor, 280 N.C. 273, 185 S.E.2d 677 (1972); State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974); State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976); State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

The requirements of this section are met where the indictment sets forth in a plain, intelligible and explicit manner all elements of the crime charged. State v. Page, 32 N.C. App. 478, 232 S.E.2d 460, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 64 (1977).

This section provides against quashal for informality if the charge be plain, intelligible, and explicit and sufficient matter appear in the bill to enable the court to proceed to judgment. State v. Russell, 282 N.C. 240, 192 S.E.2d 294 (1972).

All that is required in a warrant or bill of indictment, since the adoption of this section, is that it be sufficient in form to express the charge against the defendant in a plain, intelligible, and explicit manner, and to contain sufficient matter to enable the court to proceed to judgment and thus bar another prosecution for the same offense. State v. Hammonds, 241 N.C. 226, 85 S.E.2d 133 (1954); State v. Anderson, 259 N.C. 499, 130 S.E.2d 857 (1963); State v. Hunt, 265 N.C. 714, 144 S.E.2d 890 (1965); Godlock v. Ross, 259 F. Supp. 659 (E.D.N.C. 1966); State v. Pinyatello, 272 N.C. 312, 158 S.E.2d 596 (1968); State v. Clontz, 4 N.C. App. 667, 167 S.E.2d 520 (1969); State v. Hawkins, 19 N.C. App. 674, 199 S.E.2d 746 (1973).

A warrant or indictment following substantially the language of the statute is sufficient if and when it thereby charges the essentials of the offense in a plain, intelligible, and explicit manner. If the statutory words fail to do this they must be supplemented by other allegations which so plainly, intelligibly and explicitly set forth every essential element of the offense as to leave no doubt in the mind of the accused and the court as to the offense intended to be charged. State v. McBane, 276 N.C. 60, 170 S.E.2d 913 (1969); State v. Kelly, 13 N.C. App. 588, 186 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 618, 189 S.E.2d 163 (1972).

Plain, Intelligible, and Explicit Indictment Is Constitutional. — A bill of indictment that charges "in a plain, intelligible and explicit manner," under this section, the criminal offense the accused is "put to answer," affords the protection guaranteed by N.C. Const., Art. I, §§ 22, 23. State v. Helms, 247 N.C. 740, 102 S.E.2d 241 (1958).

Requirements for a valid indictment are (1) such certainty in the statement of the accusation as will identify the offense with which the accused is sought to be charged; (2) to protect the accused from being twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; (3) to enable the accused to prepare for trial; and (4) to enable the court, on conviction or plea of nolo contendere or guilty to pronounce sentence according to the rights of the case. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971); State v. Hinson, 17 N.C. App. 25, 193 S.E.2d 415 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 583, 194 S.E.2d 151, 412 U.S. 931, 93 S. Ct. 2762, 37 L. Ed. 2d 159 (1973); State v. Beach, 283 N.C. 261, 196 S.E.2d 214 (1973); State v. Reavis, 19 N.C. App. 497, 199 S.E.2d 139 (1973).

Order of Arrest and Affidavit Constitute Warrant. — The order of arrest and the attached affidavit on which it is based are to be read and considered as a single document and together constitute a warrant. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Requirements for Valid Warrant. — A warrant meets minimum standards for validity if it (1) informed the defendant of the charge against him, (2) enabled him to prepare his defense, and (3) enabled the court to proceed to judgment and thereby barred another prosecution for the same offense. State v. Letterlough, 6 N.C. App. 36, 169 S.E.2d 269 (1969).

A valid warrant must charge the offense with sufficient certainty to apprise the defendant of the specific accusation against him so as to enable him to prepare his defense and to protect him from a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, and to enable the court to proceed to judgment. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

A valid warrant of arrest must be based on an examination of the complainant under oath; it must identify the person charged; it must contain directly or by proper reference at least a defective statement of the crime charged; and it must be directed to a lawful officer or to a class of officers commanding the arrest of the accused. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

A charge must be sufficiently definite to enable the defendant to prepare his defense, to enable the court to proceed to judgment and to bar a subsequent prosecution for the same offense. This is the test of the sufficiency of a warrant as to the definiteness of its allegations. State v. Tenore, 280 N.C. 238, 185 S.E.2d 644 (1972).

A warrant sufficient to inform a person of the offense with which he is charged and adequate to protect him against further prosecution for that offense is sufficient. State v. Daniel, 255 N.C. 717, 122 S.E.2d 704 (1961).

A warrant and the affidavit upon which it is based will be construed together and will be tested by rules less strict than those applicable to indictments, but, nevertheless, the warrant and the affidavit together must charge facts sufficient to constitute an offense. State v. Williams, 1 N.C. App. 312, 161 S.E.2d 198 (1968).

Effect of Defects in Warrant. — Defects in the warrant affect its validity as a basis for a criminal prosecution on the charge set forth in the affidavit as well as its validity as a basis for a legal arrest. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Essential Elements Must Be Set Forth. — In order to constitute a valid charge under a statute, the essential elements of the offense must be set forth in the warrant. State v. Williams, 1 N.C. App. 312, 161 S.E.2d 198 (1968).

A charge in a bill of indictment must be complete in itself, and contain all of the material allegations which constitute the offense charged. State v. Guffey, 265 N.C. 331, 144 S.E.2d 14 (1965).

It is an essential of jurisdiction that a criminal offense shall be sufficiently charged in the indictment. State v. Guffey, 265 N.C. 331, 144 S.E.2d 14 (1965).

Section does not dispense with requirement that essential elements of offense must be charged. State v. Gibbs, 234 N.C. 259, 66 S.E.2d 883 (1951); State v. Nugent, 243 N.C. 100, 89 S.E.2d 781 (1955); State v. Sossamon, 259 N.C. 374, 130 S.E.2d 638 (1963); State v. Guffey, 265 N.C. 331, 144 S.E.2d 14 (1965); State v. McBane, 276 N.C. 60, 170 S.E.2d 913 (1969); State v. Beach, 283 N.C. 261, 196 S.E.2d 214 (1973); State v. Cannady, 18 N.C. App. 213, 196 S.E.2d 617 (1973); State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Section Does Not Supply Essential Averments or Remedy Omission. — By the many adjudications construing this section it has been definitely settled that the section neither supplies nor remedies the omission of any distinct averment of any fact or circumstance which is an essential constituent of the offense charged. State v. Cole, 202 N.C. 592, 163 S.E. 594 (1932); State v. Tarlton, 208 N.C. 734, 182 S.E. 481 (1935).

Trend Is Not to Consider Objections Founded on Mere Matter of Form. — The trend of judicial decision and the tendency of legislation is towards the practical view that objections founded upon mere matter of form should not be considered by the courts unless there is reason to believe that a defendant has been misled by the form of the charge, or was not apprised by its terms of the nature of the offense which he was held to answer. State v. Russell, 282 N.C. 240, 192 S.E.2d 294 (1972).

Nonessential and Minor Defects Do Not Affect Judgment. — This section provides against quashal for mere informality or refinement, and judgments are no longer stayed or reversed for nonessential or minor defects. State v. Davenport, 227 N.C. 475, 42 S.E.2d 686 (1947).

Approved Forms Should Be Followed. — This section was enacted to prevent miscarriage of justice, but not to encourage prosecuting officers to try experiments with new forms, or to excuse them from the duty of ascertaining and following those which have been approved by long use or by statute. The object of the statute in disregarding refinements and informalities is to secure trials upon the merits, and solicitors (now district attorneys) will best serve that end by observing approved forms so as not to raise unnecessary questions as to what are refinements and informalities and what are indispensable allegations. State v. Barnes, 122 N.C. 1031, 29 S.E. 381 (1898); State v. Marsh, 132 N.C. 1000, 43 S.E. 828 (1903); State v. Hammonds, 241 N.C. 226, 85 S.E.2d 133 (1954); State v. Russell, 282 N.C. 240, 192 S.E.2d 294 (1972).

Prosecuting officers should ordinarily follow approved forms in drafting bills of indictment so as to avoid raising questions unnecessarily as to what are refinements and what are essential allegations. State v. Taylor, 280 N.C. 273, 185 S.E.2d 677 (1972).

Incorporation of Essential Information by Reference. — Reference in the second count of an indictment for forgery and for uttering a bad check to the first count, wherein the check was fully described, was sufficient to incorporate by reference essential information necessary to sustain the second count. State v. Russell, 282 N.C. 240, 192 S.E.2d 294 (1972).

Identity of Accused. — For an indictment to be valid, the name of the accused must be alleged in a manner sufficient to identify him with certainty. State v. Bagnard, 24 N.C. App. 566, 211 S.E.2d 471 (1975).

Indictments and warrants need only allege the ultimate facts constituting each element of the criminal offense. Evidentiary matters need not be alleged. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

Evidentiary matters are not required to be alleged in a bill of indictment. State v. Rankin, 55 N.C. App. 478, 286 S.E.2d 119, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 305 N.C. 590, 292 S.E.2d 11 (1982).

Use of abbreviations in warrants and indictments is not to be encouraged. State v. Letterlough, 6 N.C. App. 36, 169 S.E.2d 269 (1969).

Means by Which Accused Aided and Abetted. — An indictment need not set forth the specific facts or means by which an accused aided and abetted in the commission of a crime. State v. Beach, 283 N.C. 261, 196 S.E.2d 214 (1973).

Use of uniform traffic ticket as a warrant should not be encouraged. This form lacks that degree of clarity desirable in a warrant which should "express the charge against the defendant in a plain, intelligible, and explicit manner." State v. Letterlough, 6 N.C. App. 36, 169 S.E.2d 269 (1969).

Endorsement by Grand Jury Unnecessary. — No endorsement on a bill of indictment by the grand jury is necessary. The record that it was presented by the grand jury is sufficient in the absence of evidence to impeach it. State v. Sultan, 142 N.C. 569, 54 S.E. 841 (1906), overruling State v. McBroom, 127 N.C. 528, 37 S.E. 193 (1900); State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907).

B. Use of Language of Statute.

Indictment in Language of Statute. — An indictment following substantially the language of the statute is sufficient only when it thereby charges the essential elements of the offense in a plain, intelligible and explicit manner. If the statutory words fail to do this, they must be supplemented in the indictment by other allegations which explicitly and accurately set forth every essential element of the offense with such exactitude as to leave no doubt in the minds of the accused and the court as to the specific offense intended to be charged. State v. Eason, 242 N.C. 59, 86 S.E.2d 774 (1955); State v. Jordan, 247 N.C. 253, 100 S.E.2d 497 (1957); State v. Sossamon, 259 N.C. 374, 130 S.E.2d 638 (1963); State v. Lackey, 271 N.C. 171, 155 S.E.2d 465 (1967); State v. Cook, 272 N.C. 728, 158 S.E.2d 820 (1968).

The general rule in this State and elsewhere is that an indictment for a statutory offense is sufficient, if the offense is charged in the words of the statute, either literally or substantially, or in equivalent words. This rule does not apply where the words of the statute do not, without uncertainty or ambiguity, set forth all the essential elements necessary to constitute the offense sought to be charged in the indictment. In such a situation the statutory words must be supplemented in the indictment by other allegations which explicitly and accurately set forth every essential element of the offense with such exactitude as to leave no doubt in the minds of the accused and the court as to the specific offense intended to be charged. State v. Beach, 283 N.C. 261, 196 S.E.2d 214 (1973).

In a criminal prosecution for a statutory offense, including the violation of a municipal ordinance, the warrant or indictment is sufficient if and when it follows the language of the statute or ordinance and thereby charges the essentials of the offense "in a plain, intelligible, and explicit manner." If the words of the statute fail to do this they must be supplemented by other allegations which so plainly, intelligibly and explicitly set forth every essential element of the offense as to leave no doubt in the mind of the accused and the court as to the offense intended to be charged. State v. Dorsett, 272 N.C. 227, 158 S.E.2d 15 (1967).

Where an indictment follows the words of a statute it is sufficient under this section. State v. Harrison, 145 N.C. 408, 59 S.E. 867 (1907);

State v. Lepeer, 146 N.C. 655, 61 S.E. 585 (1908), overruled on other grounds, In re Alamance County Court Facilities, 329 N.C. 84, 405 S.E.2d 125 (1991). See also State v. Davis, 203 N.C. 47, 164 S.E. 732, cert. denied, 203 N.C. 327, 166 S.E. 297, 287 U.S. 645, 53 S. Ct. 91, 77 L. Ed. 558 (1932).

Ordinarily, an indictment for a statutory offense is sufficient if the offense is charged in the words of the statute. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971); State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

An indictment couched in the language of the statute is generally sufficient to charge the statutory offense. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

Indictment for offense created by statute must be framed upon the statute, and this fact must distinctly appear upon the face of the indictment itself; and in order that it shall so appear, the bill must either charge the offense in the language of the act or specifically set forth the facts constituting the same. State v. Gibbs, 234 N.C. 259, 66 S.E.2d 883 (1951).

But it is not necessary to charge in the precise words of a statute. Under this section, every criminal proceeding by warrant is sufficient for all intents and purposes if it expresses the charge in a plain, intelligible and explicit manner. State v. Bigelow, 19 N.C. App. 570, 199 S.E.2d 494 (1973).

Indictment need not refer to a particular statute. Godlock v. Ross, 259 F. Supp. 659 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

Reference to a specific statute upon which the charge in a warrant is laid is not necessary to its validity. State v. Anderson, 259 N.C. 499, 130 S.E.2d 857 (1963); State v. Hunt, 265 N.C. 714, 144 S.E.2d 890 (1965).

Where Warrant Avers Facts Constituting Every Element of Offense. — If a warrant avers facts which constitute every element of an offense, it is not necessary that it be couched in the language of the statute. State v. Anderson, 259 N.C. 499, 130 S.E.2d 857 (1963); State v. Hicks, 86 N.C. App. 36, 356 S.E.2d 595 (1987).

Charge in General Terms of Breach of Statute Not Sufficient. — Merely charging in general terms a breach of the statute and referring to it in the indictment is not sufficient. State v. Sossamon, 259 N.C. 374, 130 S.E.2d 638 (1963); State v. Cook, 272 N.C. 728, 158 S.E.2d 820 (1968); State v. McBane, 276 N.C. 60, 170 S.E.2d 913 (1969).

Reference to Statute That Is Not Pertinent. — Where a warrant charges a criminal offense but refers to a statute that is not pertinent, such reference does not invalidate the warrant. State v. Anderson, 259 N.C. 499, 130 S.E.2d 857 (1963).

C. Remedies for Insufficiency.

Substance of Indictment May Not Be Amended. — The substance of a bill of indictment used in a trial may not be amended by the court or the solicitor (now district attorney) after it has been returned by the grand jury as a true bill. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

Fatal Defect Cannot Be Cured by Amendment. — Where a warrant or indictment is fatally defective in failing to charge an essential element of the offense, the defect cannot be cured by amendment. State v. Williams, 1 N.C. App. 312, 161 S.E.2d 198 (1968).

Motion to Quash Tests Sufficiency of Warrant. — A motion to quash is a proper method of testing the sufficiency of the warrant to charge a criminal offense; it is not a means of testing the guilt or innocence of the defendant with respect to a crime properly charged. State v. Tenore, 280 N.C. 238, 185 S.E.2d 644 (1972).

It Lies Only for Defect Appearing on Face. — While a motion to quash is an appropriate method of testing the sufficiency of the bill of indictment to charge a criminal offense, it lies only for a defect appearing on the face of the warrant or indictment. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

And Defect Cannot Be Established by Evidence Outside the Record. — The court, in ruling on a motion to quash an indictment is not permitted to consider extraneous evidence; therefore, when the defect must be established by evidence outside the record, the motion must be denied. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

Quashing indictments is not favored. It releases recognizances and sets the defendant at large where, it may be, he ought to be held to answer upon a better indictment, though allowable, where it will put an end to the prosecution altogether, and advisable where it appears that the court has not jurisdiction, or where the matter charged is not indictable in any form. It is, therefore, a general rule that no indictment which charges the higher offenses, as treason or felony or those crimes which immediately affect the public at large, as perjury, forgery, etc., will be thus summarily dealt with. The example is a bad one, and the effect upon the public injurious, to allow the defendant to escape upon matters of form. State v. Colbert, 75 N.C. 368 (1876); State v. Russell, 282 N.C. 240, 192 S.E.2d 294 (1972). See State v. Flowers, 109 N.C. 841, 13 S.E. 718 (1891).

Quashing of indictments and warrants is not favored. State v. Abernathy, 265 N.C. 724, 145 S.E.2d 2 (1965).

Quashing of indictments is not favored where they do not affect the merits of the case. State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

Motion to Quash Denied Where Essential Elements Present. — Where the bills of indictment contained allegations sufficient to set forth fully and clearly all essential elements of the offense charged, denial of defendant's motion to quash on the ground that the bills were "too vague and insufficient, too broad and general" was proper. State v. Coleman, 24 N.C. App. 530, 211 S.E.2d 542 (1975).

A warrant which, stripped of nonessential words, charges defendant with a crime, is sufficient to survive a motion to quash. State v. Camel, 230 N.C. 426, 53 S.E.2d 313 (1949).

Indictment Not Quashed for Mere Informality or Minor Defects. — In light of the provisions of this section, it is the practice of the Supreme Court not to sustain motions to quash bills of indictment for mere informality or minor defects which do not affect the merits of the case. State v. Brady, 237 N.C. 675, 75 S.E.2d 791 (1953).

Motion to quash for redundancy in the affidavit portion of a warrant upon which the order of arrest portion is based is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Motion to Quash Addressed to Court's Discretion. — A motion to quash for redundancy or inartificiality is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. State v. Davis, 203 N.C. 13, 164 S.E. 737, cert. denied, 287 U.S. 649, 53 S. Ct. 95, 77 L. Ed. 561 (1932); State v. Davenport, 227 N.C. 475, 42 S.E.2d 686 (1947).

Grounds for Motion in Arrest of Judgment. — A motion in arrest of judgment after conviction, on the ground that the bill of indictment is defective, will not be granted unless it appears that the bill is so defective that judgment cannot be pronounced upon it. State v. Francis, 157 N.C. 612, 72 S.E. 1041 (1911); State v. Ratliff, 170 N.C. 707, 86 S.E. 997 (1915); State v. Sauls, 190 N.C. 810, 130 S.E. 848 (1925).

Not Granted Where Court Enabled to Proceed to Judgment. — Where sufficient matter appears on the face of a bill of indictment to enable the court to proceed to judgment, an arrest of judgment is forbidden by this section. State v. Darden, 117 N.C. 697, 23 S.E. 106 (1895).

Error or Defect Must Appear on Face of Record. — A judgment may be arrested only for some error or defect appearing on the face of the record. State v. Eason, 242 N.C. 59, 86 S.E.2d 774 (1955).

Motion for Bill of Particulars as Prerequisite to Arrest of Judgment. — Where the defendant thinks an indictment fails to impart information sufficiently specific as to the nature of the charge he may, before trial, move the court to order that a bill of particulars be filed, and the court will not arrest the judgment after verdict where he attempts to reserve his fire until he takes first the chance of acquittal. State v. Tessnear, 254 N.C. 211, 118 S.E.2d 393 (1961).

III. DEFECTS.

A. In General.

Superfluous Words Disregarded. — The use of superfluous words in a bill of indictment will be disregarded. State v. Guest, 100 N.C. 410, 6 S.E. 253 (1888); State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E.2d 990 (1890); State v. Darden, 117 N.C. 697, 23 S.E. 106 (1895); State v. Piner, 141 N.C. 760, 53 S.E. 305 (1906); State v. Wynne, 151 N.C. 644, 65 S.E. 459 (1909); State v. Taylor, 280 N.C. 273, 185 S.E.2d 677 (1972).

Nonessential Allegations May Be Treated as Surplusage. — Allegations beyond the essential elements of the crime sought to be charged are irrelevant and may be treated as surplusage. State v. Taylor, 280 N.C. 273, 185 S.E.2d 677 (1972).

B. Omissions and Errors.

Inadvertent Omissions. — The inadvertent omission of words not affecting the substance of the charge or prejudicing the defendant is not fatal. State v. Burke, 108 N.C. 750, 12 S.E. 1000 (1891), and cases there cited; State v. Ratliff, 170 N.C. 707, 86 S.E. 997 (1915).

Omission in Complaint of Name of Person Charged. — The omission of the name of the party in the complaint, against whom a criminal offense is charged, will not of itself invalidate the indictment, when the warrant of arrest thereto attached and referred to contains his name and clearly indicates him as the person charged, the complaint and warrant being read together, and in this way they are sufficient in form to proceed to judgment upon conviction. State v. Poythress, 174 N.C. 809, 93 S.E. 919 (1917).

Omission of Defendant's Name from Affidavit. — Where defendant's name appears in the warrant which refers to the affidavit, forming a part thereof, the omission of defendant's name from the affidavit is not a fatal defect. However, an affidavit form which fails to name the person charged is disapproved. State v. St. Clair, 246 N.C. 183, 97 S.E.2d 840, modified, 247 N.C. 228, 100 S.E.2d 493 (1957).

Omission of Caption. — The omission of the caption of a bill of indictment does not constitute ground for arrest of judgment. State v. Davis, 225 N.C. 117, 33 S.E.2d 623 (1945).

Omission in Describing a Lease. — In describing a lease the omission of the word "year" after the word "one," is one of the informalities cured by this section. State v. Walker, 87 N.C. 541 (1882).

Failure to Repeat Names in Charging Scienter. — Where defendants contended that a court in the indictment charging receiving stolen goods was fatally defective in that the names of defendants were not repeated in charging scienter, the defect was merely an informality or refinement not sufficient to support a quashal of the indictment, the charge being plain, explicit and sufficient to enable the court to proceed to judgment. State v. Whitley, 208 N.C. 661, 182 S.E. 338 (1935).

Foreman's Failure to Sign Bill. — The report of the grand jury, signed by the foreman, in which was listed the bill against defendant as having been returned a true bill charging a noncapital felony, rendered the foreman's failure to sign the bill itself amendable, and defendant's motion to quash the indictment was properly denied. State v. Spinks, 24 N.C. App. 548, 211 S.E.2d 476 (1975).

The omission of a signature on one of the bills of indictment did not affect the substance of the bill where the other four bills were properly signed on the same day; therefore, the trial court did not err in amending the bill of indictment by adding the signature of the grand jury foreman. State v. Colvin, 92 N.C. App. 152, 374 S.E.2d 126 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 249, 377 S.E.2d 758 (1989).

Name of Court Incorrect. — Describing the court in which the false oath is alleged to have been taken as "before Joseph Z. Pratt, a justice of the peace, in and for said county," instead of as "a court of a justice of the peace for township A, of Chowan County," is not a substantial variance from the true description and is cured by this section. State v. Davis, 69 N.C. 495 (1873).

Error in Name of Accused. — Where, in the order of arrest portion of the purported warrant, the person ordered arrested was "Dempsey Roy Smith" and not the defendant, "Dempsey Roy Powell," the instrument did not meet the requirement that it be directed to a lawful officer commanding the arrest of the accused. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Bill of indictment identifying the accused in the body thereof as "John Doe AKA 'Varne'" was insufficient to charge a defendant named "Vaughn Bagnard" with any offense. State v. Bagnard, 24 N.C. App. 566, 211 S.E.2d 471 (1975).

Wrong County in Caption. — A misrecital of the proper county in the caption of an indictment furnishes no ground for arrest of judgment, and it seems that such an indictment would have been sufficient even before this section was adopted. State v. Sprinkle, 65 N.C. 463 (1871); State v. Davis, 225 N.C. 117, 33 S.E.2d 623 (1945).

Incorrect Spelling. — Charging that one committed a crime in the "count aforesaid" instead of "county aforesaid" is an informality which is cured by this section. State v. Smith, 63 N.C. 234 (1869); State v. Evans, 69 N.C. 40 (1873).

Use of Singular Rather Than Plural in Joint Indictment. — In a joint indictment of two defendants for murder which charged that defendants "of his malice aforethought" committed the act, the use of the word "his" instead of "their" is insufficient ground for arresting the judgment, informalities and refinements being disregarded if the indictment is sufficient to inform defendants of the charge against them and to enable them to prepare their defense, and to protect them from another prosecution. State v. Linney, 212 N.C. 739, 194 S.E. 470 (1938).

C. Allegations Differing from Proof.

Purpose of the rule as to variance in an indictment is to avoid surprise and to protect the accused from another prosecution for the same offense. State v. Martin, 29 N.C. App. 17, 222 S.E.2d 718, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 96, 225 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

Variance Must Be Material to Be Fatal. — Under this section, a variance, to be fatal, must be substantial and material. State v. Ridge, 125 N.C. 655, 34 S.E. 439 (1899).

Names of Parties. — Where the indictment charged an assault, etc., upon "Lila" Hatcher, and the evidence tended to show that it was made upon "Liza" Hatcher, the variance is immaterial. State v. Drakeford, 162 N.C. 667, 78 S.E. 308 (1913).

Where indictment alleged that Thomas R. Robertson was defendant, and the proof was that "Thomas Robertson" was the defendant in said action and there was evidence of the identity of Thomas Robertson and Thomas R. Robertson, this is an informality cured by the section. State v. Hester, 122 N.C. 1047, 29 S.E. 380 (1898).

Where, in an indictment for murder, the assault is charged to have been made on one "N.S. Jarrett," and in subsequent parts of the indictment he is described as "Nimrod S. Jarrett," there is no variance. State v. Henderson, 68 N.C. 348 (1873).

Where the bill of indictment alleges a sale of narcotics to one person and the proof tends to show only a sale to a different person, the variance is fatal. State v. Ingram, 20 N.C. App. 464, 201 S.E.2d 532 (1974).

Name of Article Stolen. — In an indictment for larceny, when the article stolen is described as a "calf" skin and is proven on the trial to be a "kip" skin, there is no variance between the allegation and the proof. State v. Campbell, 76 N.C. 261 (1877).

Object Used in Commission of Assault. — Evidence that defendant committed the assault with a "brick or a rock or what" was not fatal variance with a warrant charging that the assault was committed with a brick, the evidence being sufficient to justify the jury in inferring that the assault was committed with a brick as charged, and there being no element of surprise in the evidence, especially where defendant's defense was that of an alibi. State v. Hobbs, 216 N.C. 14, 3 S.E.2d 431 (1939).

Number of Victims. — In a prosecution for armed robbery, where the indictment referred only to the robbery of a single victim but the trial judge in his charge to the jury referred to another victim, there was no prejudicial variance since there was only a single criminal transaction, and defendant therefore was in no danger of a subsequent prosecution for the robbery of the other victim. State v. Martin, 29 N.C. App. 17, 222 S.E.2d 718, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 96, 225 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

D. Pleading in the Alternative.

When Use of Disjunctive Constitutes Fatal Defect. — Whether the improper use of the disjunctive constitutes a fatal defect in an indictment, or simply poor pleading, depends upon whether such use renders the indictment uncertain. State v. Kelly, 13 N.C. App. 588, 186 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 618, 189 S.E.2d 163 (1972).

Waiver of Duplicity in Indictment. — By going to trial without making a motion to quash, defendant waived any duplicity that might have existed in the bill of indictment. State v. Kelly, 13 N.C. App. 588, 186 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 618, 189 S.E.2d 163 (1972).

Indictment should not charge a party disjunctively or alternatively, in such a manner as to leave it uncertain what is relied on as the accusation against him. State v. Kelly, 13 N.C. App. 588, 186 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 618, 189 S.E.2d 163 (1972).

Alternative Allegation of Offenses. — Two or more offenses cannot, in the absence of statutory permission, be alleged alternatively in the same count. State v. Kelly, 13 N.C. App. 588, 186 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 618, 189 S.E.2d 163 (1972).

Alternative Pleading as to How Offense Committed. — Where a statute specifies several means or ways in which an offense may be committed in the alternative, it is bad pleading to allege such means or ways in the alternative; the proper way is to connect the various allegations in the accusing pleading with the conjunctive term "and" not with the word "or." State v. Kelly, 13 N.C. App. 588, 186 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 618, 189 S.E.2d 163 (1972).

In an indictment it is always the better practice to use the conjunctive "and" rather than the disjunctive "or" where a statute sets forth disjunctively several means or ways by which an offense may be committed. State v. Kelly, 13 N.C. App. 588, 186 S.E.2d 631, rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 618, 189 S.E.2d 163 (1972).

Offense Not Charged in Alternative. — An indictment charging that defendant did unlawfully and willfully build or install a septic tank, without procuring a permit and having the tank inspected as required by law, should not be quashed on the ground that the offense charged is alleged in the alternative, since the words "build" and "install" in the sense in which they were used in the ordinance, the violation of which is alleged in the indictment, are synonymous. State v. Jones, 242 N.C. 563, 89 S.E.2d 129 (1955).

IV. PARTICULAR OFFENSES.

Description of Property in Indictment for Larceny. — The description in an indictment must be in the common and ordinary acceptation of property and with certainty sufficient to enable the jury to say that the article proved to be stolen is the same, and to enable the court to see that it is the subject of larceny and also to protect the defendant in any subsequent prosecution for the same offense. State v. Campbell, 76 N.C. 261 (1877); State v. Martin, 82 N.C. 672 (1880); State v. Caylor, 178 N.C. 807, 101 S.E. 627 (1919).

The description of the property alleged to have been stolen must be of sufficient certainty to enable the jury to say that the article proved to be stolen is the same. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

The description in a warrant or bill of indictment of the goods alleged to have been stolen is sufficient if from it defendant can have a fair and reasonable opportunity to prepare his defense, can avail himself of his conviction or acquittal as a bar to subsequent prosecution for the same offense, and the court is enabled, on conviction, to pronounce sentence according to law. State v. Fuller, 13 N.C. App. 193, 185 S.E.2d 312 (1971).

The description of property alleged to have been stolen must be plain and intelligible, and must correspond to the different forms of existence in which the same article is found. In its raw or unmanufactured state it may be described by its ordinary name, but if it be worked up into some other forms, etc., when stolen, it must be described by the name by which it is generally known. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

Object of describing property stolen by its usual name, ownership, etc., is to enable the defendant to make his defense, and to protect himself against a second conviction. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

Object of describing property stolen by its quality and quantity is that it may appear to the court to be of value. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

Indictment for burglary need not describe the property stolen by the burglar. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

Indictment for burglary must specify the particular felony which the defendant is alleged to have intended to commit at the time of the breaking and entering, and it is not sufficient to charge generally an intent to commit an unspecified felony. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

But Felony Intended Need Not Be Set Out as Specifically. — In an indictment for burglary, the felony intended need not be set out as fully and specifically as would be required in an indictment for the actual commission of that felony. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

In specifying the felony intended in an indictment for burglary it is enough to state the offense generally and to designate it by name. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

Identifying Premises Entered in Burglary Indictment. — An indictment for burglary is fatally defective if it fails to identify the premises broken into and entered with sufficient certainty to enable the defendant to prepare his defense and to offer him protection from another prosecution for the same incident. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

Ownership of Property in Indictment for Arson. — In a prosecution under § 14-65, an indictment stating that the defendant procured another to burn a certain house owned by the defendant and another as tenants in common is sufficient, and the fact that the same parties owned other houses in like capacity is not ground for demurrer or quashal. State v. McKeithan, 203 N.C. 494, 166 S.E. 336 (1932).

Prerequisites of affidavit portion of warrant charging the offense of resisting arrest are set forth in State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967) and State v. Fenner, 263 N.C. 694, 140 S.E.2d 349 (1965); State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

One of the prerequisites of the affidavit portion of a warrant properly charging the offense of resisting arrest is that the affidavit upon which the order of arrest is based shall identify by name the person alleged to have been resisted, delayed or obstructed, and describe his official character with sufficient certainty to show that he was a public officer within the purview of the statute. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Indictment for Resisting Arrest. — A motion in arrest of judgment should have been granted where indictment for resisting a public officer failed to identify the public officer and did not point out even in a general way the manner in which the defendant resisted. State v. Eason, 242 N.C. 59, 86 S.E.2d 774 (1955).

Use of Deadly Weapon. — It is sufficient for indictments or warrants seeking to charge a crime in which one of the elements is the use of a deadly weapon (1) to name the weapon and (2) either to state expressly that the weapon used was a "deadly weapon" or to allege such facts as would necessarily demonstrate the deadly character of the weapon. State v. Palmer, 293 N.C. 633, 239 S.E.2d 406 (1977).

Driving While License Suspended or Revoked. — Where a warrant does not charge that defendant operated a motor vehicle on a public highway, such warrant fails to allege an essential element of the offense as defined in § 20-28(a). State v. Cook, 272 N.C. 728, 158 S.E.2d 820 (1968).

Public Drunkenness. — A warrant charging that defendant did "unlawfully and willfully appear off of his premises in a drunken condition" is insufficient to charge the offense of public drunkenness proscribed by former § 14-335 (see now § 14-444), since it fails to charge that defendant was in a public place. State v. Williams, 1 N.C. App. 312, 161 S.E.2d 198 (1968).

Receipt of Official Ballots. — A charge of the receipt by defendant of official ballots, knowing that he had no legal right to them, amounts to a charge of interference with the duty of the county board of elections to safely keep the ballots until time for delivery to the registrars (now chief judge), within the provisions of this section, and the bill of indictment should not have been quashed because it failed to charge the manner in which the election officials were interfered with. State v. Abernethy, 220 N.C. 226, 17 S.E.2d 25 (1941).

§ 15-155. Defects which do not vitiate.

No judgment upon any indictment for felony or misdemeanor, whether after verdict, or by confession, or otherwise, shall be stayed or reversed for the want of the averment of any matter unnecessary to be proved, nor for omission of the words "as appears by the record," or of the words "with force and arms," nor for the insertion of the words "against the form of the statutes" instead of the words "against the form of the statute," or vice versa; nor for omission of the words "against the form of the statute" or "against the form of the statutes," nor for omitting to state the time at which the offense was committed in any case where time is not of the essence of the offense, nor for stating the time imperfectly, nor for stating the offense to have been committed on a day subsequent to the finding of the indictment, or on an impossible day, or on a day that never happened; nor for want of a proper and perfect venue, when the court shall appear by the indictment to have had jurisdiction of the offense. (7 Hen. VIII, c. 8; R.C., c. 35, s. 20; Code, s. 1189; Rev., s. 3255; C.S., s. 4625.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Time of Offense.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

One purpose of an indictment is to give the defendant notice of the charge against him to the end that he may prepare a defense and be in a position to plead double jeopardy if he is again brought to trial for the same offense. Another purpose is to enable the court to know what judgment to pronounce in case of conviction. State v. Sills, 311 N.C. 370, 317 S.E.2d 379 (1984).

Section Cures Formal Defects. — This section is intended to cure only formal defects in the indictment after judgment, and not omissions of averments necessary to enable the court to give judgment intelligently. State v. Wise, 66 N.C. 120 (1872).

Effect on Common Law Technicalities. — The refined technicalities of the procedure at common law, in both civil and criminal cases, have almost entirely, if not quite, been abolished by the statute. State v. Hedgecock, 185 N.C. 714, 117 S.E. 47 (1923).

Modern tendency is against technical objections which do not affect the merits of the case. Hence judgments are not to be stayed or reversed for nonessential or minor defects. State v. Anderson, 208 N.C. 771, 182 S.E. 643 (1935).

Essential Elements Must Still Be Charged. — Nothing in § 15-153 or in this section dispenses with the requirement that the essential elements of the offense must be charged. State v. Sossamon, 259 N.C. 374, 130 S.E.2d 638 (1963); State v. McBane, 276 N.C. 60, 170 S.E.2d 913 (1969); State v. King, 285 N.C. 305, 204 S.E.2d 667 (1974).

Purpose of the rule as to variance in an indictment is to avoid surprise and to protect the accused from another prosecution for the same offense. State v. Martin, 29 N.C. App. 17, 222 S.E.2d 718, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 96, 225 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

Variance Raised by Motion for Judgment of Nonsuit. — A fatal variance between the indictment and the proof is properly raised by motion for judgment of nonsuit. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

The provisions of § 15-144.1 do not prevail over this section. State v. Sills, 311 N.C. 370, 317 S.E.2d 379 (1984).

Charge in Warrant Different from That in Indictment. — Where an arrest warrant listed a different charge from that subsequently returned in the indictment did not require that the judge dismiss the latter. State v. Riggs, 100 N.C. App. 149, 394 S.E.2d 670 (1990).

Substance of Indictment May Not Be Amended. — The substance of a bill of indictment used in a trial may not be amended by the court or the solicitor (now district attorney) after it has been returned by the grand jury as a true bill. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 625, 190 S.E.2d 468 (1972).

Words "with force and arms" constitute a formal phrase traditionally included in bills of indictment, but have no significance as an element of the specific crime charged in the bill of indictment. State v. Acrey, 262 N.C. 90, 136

S.E.2d 201 (1964); State v. Coleman, 24 N.C. App. 530, 211 S.E.2d 542 (1975).

Section 15-144 does not prevail over the language of this section, and the omission of the phrase "with force and arms" does not, therefore, render a defendant's indictment for murder fatally defective. State v. James, 321 N.C. 676, 365 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

Construction with § 15-144.1 as to "with Force and Arms". — This section does not either require the averment "with force and arms" or express a legislative intent that the language in § 15-144.1(a) prevail over the express language in this section, which states in effect that no judgment shall be stayed or reversed because of the omission of the words "with force and arms" from the indictment. State v. Corbett, 307 N.C. 169, 297 S.E.2d 553 (1982).

An indictment in a rape case under § 15-144.1 need not contain the phrase "with force and arms." State v. Cheek, 307 N.C. 552, 299 S.E.2d 633 (1983).

Indictment concluding against the "force" instead of the "form" of the statute is sufficient under this section. State v. Davis, 80 N.C. 385 (1879).

Indictment concluding against the form of the "statue" instead of "statute" is not ground for an arrest of judgment. State v. Smith, 63 N.C. 234 (1869).

Omissions Held Not Fatal. — Omitting the statement, that the "prisoner, not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigations of the devil," and the further omission of an averment that the "deceased was in the peace of God and the State," are not fatal defects. State v. Howard, 92 N.C. 772 (1885).

Conclusion Simplified. — The formal conclusion, "against the peace and dignity of the State," and "against the form of the statute," etc., are not necessary in an indictment for any offense whatever, but are mere surplusage. State v. Sykes, 104 N.C. 694, 10 S.E. 191 (1889); State v. Kirkman, 104 N.C. 911, 10 S.E. 312 (1889), overruling State v. Joyner, 81 N.C. 534 (1879); State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890); State v. Dudley, 182 N.C. 822, 109 S.E. 63 (1921).

Locality May Be Omitted. — Formerly failure to allege and prove the locality, appropriate to the forum, was fatal, because essential to the jurisdiction, both in civil and criminal actions, but this has been wisely reversed by this section. State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907).

Variance in Description of Locality. — Where an indictment alleges the particular place where an act took place, and such allegation is not descriptive of the offense, and is not required to be proved as laid in order to show the court's jurisdiction, a variance which does not mislead accused or expose him to double jeopardy is not material. State v. Currie, 47 N.C. App. 446, 267 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 237, 283 S.E.2d 134 (1980), overruled on other grounds, State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 871 (1984).

Challenge to Jurisdiction in Plea in Abatement. — Where the jurisdiction of the court is not ousted on the face of the indictment the position that the court does not have jurisdiction is not available on a plea in abatement. State v. Davis, 203 N.C. 13, 164 S.E. 737, cert. denied, 287 U.S. 649, 53 S. Ct. 95, 77 L. Ed. 561 (1932).

Incorrect Venue. — Even if trafficking indictment failed to name Wake County as a county in which the offense occurred, and venue was therefore technically incorrect in Wake County, the Superior Court of Wake County nevertheless had jurisdiction to try the offense, as under § 15A-631 the return of an indictment is a matter of venue, not jurisdiction. State v. Carter, 96 N.C. App. 611, 386 S.E.2d 620 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 365, 389 S.E.2d 817 (1990).

Later Indictment for Same Offense Where Time Not of the Essence. — While an appeal from conviction in a recorder's court upon a warrant, charging unlawful possession on a certain date of intoxicating liquors for the purpose of sale, was pending in the superior court, that court had jurisdiction to try defendant on a bill of indictment of a later date charging the same offense, where the record contains nothing to show that the offenses are identical. Time is not of the essence and need not be specified in the indictment. State v. Suddreth, 223 N.C. 610, 27 S.E.2d 623 (1943).

Variance as to Identity of Victim of Armed Robbery. — In a prosecution for armed robbery, where the indictment referred only to the robbery of a single victim but the trial judge in his charge to the jury referred to another victim, there was no prejudicial variance since there was only a single criminal transaction, and defendant therefore was in no danger of a subsequent prosecution for the robbery of the other victim. State v. Martin, 29 N.C. App. 17, 222 S.E.2d 718, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 96, 225 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

Amendment of Description of Stolen Property Did Not Invalidate Breaking and Entering Count. — An amendment by the solicitor (now district attorney) of the description of the stolen property in felonious larceny and receiving counts of an indictment, if error, did not invalidate a count charging felonious breaking and entering, and was not prejudicial where the only sentence imposed was for breaking and entering. State v. Haigler, 14 N.C. App. 501, 188 S.E.2d 586 (1972).

Variance as to Whom Narcotics Were Sold. — Where the bill of indictment alleges a sale of narcotics to one person and the proof tends to show only a sale to a different person, the variance is fatal. State v. Ingram, 20 N.C. App. 464, 201 S.E.2d 532 (1974).

Lack of Evidence as to Alleged Serial Number of Stolen Goods. — Where a larceny indictment describes the stolen property as "a 1970 Plymouth, Serial # PM14360F239110, the personal property of George Edison Biggs," and the evidence shows the taking by defendant of a 1970 Plymouth which was owned by George Edison Biggs but there is no evidence as to the serial number, the variance is not fatal. State v. Coleman, 24 N.C. App. 530, 211 S.E.2d 542 (1975).

Variance as to Custody from Which Defendant Escaped. — Where bill of indictment charges that defendant escaped while lawfully confined in the North Carolina State Prison System in the lawful custody of the North Carolina Department of Correction, and the evidence shows he escaped while assigned by an official of the Department of Correction to work under an employee of the State Highway Commission, the variance is not fatal. State v. Coleman, 24 N.C. App. 530, 211 S.E.2d 542 (1975).

Applied in State v. Gore, 207 N.C. 618, 178 S.E. 209 (1935); State v. Puckett, 211 N.C. 66, 189 S.E. 183 (1937); State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972); State v. II. TIME OF OFFENSE.

Failure to Charge Any Date. — Where time is not of the essence of a crime, the omission to charge any date is immaterial by this section, though the allegation of time can do no harm. State v. Taylor, 83 N.C. 601 (1880); State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E. 990 (1890); State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890); State v. Williams, 117 N.C. 753, 23 S.E. 250 (1895).

When time is not of the essence of the offense charged, an indictment may not be quashed for failure to allege the specific date on which the crime was committed. State v. Price, 310 N.C. 596, 313 S.E.2d 556 (1984).

Failure to accurately state the date or time an offense is alleged to have occurred does not invalidate a bill of indictment, nor does it justify reversal of a conviction obtained thereon. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

A judgment for burglary was not arrested because the indictment imperfectly referred to the hour of midnight as 12:00 a.m. State v. Mandina, 91 N.C. App. 686, 373 S.E.2d 155 (1988).

A child's uncertainty as to the time or particular day when the offense charged was committed shall not be grounds for nonsuit where there is sufficient evidence that the defendant committed each essential act of the offense. State v. Hicks, 319 N.C. 84, 352 S.E.2d 424 (1987).

Variance as to time is not material where no statute of limitations is involved. State v. Davis, 282 N.C. 107, 191 S.E.2d 664 (1972).

Variance Between Date on Indictment and Date Proved Not Prejudicial. — Where defendant's evidence showed that he did not participate in the crimes and, had this evidence been believed by the jury, would have entitled defendant to acquittal, the variance between the date listed on the indictment and the time of the offense as proved at trial was not prejudicial to defendant, and did not deprive him of an opportunity to present his defense. State v. Riggs, 100 N.C. App. 149, 394 S.E.2d 670 (1990).

Variance Between Time Alleged and Time Proved Not Usually Fatal. — Where time is not of the essence of the offense and the statute of limitations is not involved, a discrepancy between the date alleged in the indictment and the date shown by the State's evidence is ordinarily not fatal. State v. Lemmond, 12 N.C. App. 128, 182 S.E.2d 636 (1971); State v. Locklear, 33 N.C. App. 647, 236 S.E.2d 376, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 363, 237 S.E.2d 851 (1977); State v. Currie, 47 N.C. App. 446, 267

S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 237, 283 S.E.2d 134 (1980); State v. Christopher, 58 N.C. App. 788, 295 S.E.2d 487, rev'd on other grounds, 307 N.C. 645, 300 S.E.2d 381 (1983).

The time named in a bill of indictment is not usually an essential ingredient of the crime charged, and the State may prove that it was in fact committed on some other date. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961); State v. Wilson, 264 N.C. 373, 141 S.E.2d 801 (1965).

The State may prove that an offense charged was committed on some date other than the time named in the bill of indictment. A variance as to time, however, becomes material and of the essence when it deprives a defendant of an opportunity to adequately present his defense. State v. Price, 310 N.C. 596, 313 S.E.2d 556 (1984).

Ordinarily, the date alleged in the indictment is neither an essential nor a substantial fact, and therefore the State may prove that the offense was actually committed on some date other than that alleged in the indictment without the necessity of a motion to change the bill. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

But May Not Be Used to Deprive Defendant of His Defense. — This salutary rule, preventing a defendant who does not rely on time as a defense from using a discrepancy between the time named in the bill and the time shown by the evidence for the State, cannot be used to ensnare a defendant and thereby deprive him of an opportunity to adequately present his defense. State v. Whittemore, 255 N.C. 583, 122 S.E.2d 396 (1961); State v. Wilson, 264 N.C. 373, 141 S.E.2d 801 (1965); State v. Lemmond, 12 N.C. App. 128, 182 S.E.2d 636 (1971); State v. Locklear, 33 N.C. App. 647, 236 S.E.2d 376, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 363, 237 S.E.2d 851 (1977); State v. Currie, 47 N.C. App. 446, 267 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 237, 283 S.E.2d 134 (1980); State v. Christopher, 58 N.C. App. 788, 295 S.E.2d 487, rev'd on other grounds, 307 N.C. 645, 300 S.E.2d 381 (1983).

As Where He Relies upon Alibi. State v. Lemmond, 12 N.C. App. 128, 182 S.E.2d 636 (1971).

Where a defendant relies upon a defense of alibi, time becomes essential. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

Time is not of the essence of carrying a concealed weapon, and it may be shown at a previous time to that alleged in the bill. State v. Spencer, 185 N.C. 765, 117 S.E. 803 (1923).

Nor Felonious Assault. — There was no fatal variance between an indictment charging that the date of a felonious assault was April 17, 1979, and evidence that the assault occurred on February 17, 1979, where the variance was caused by a clerical mistake in the indictment; the statute of limitations was not involved; all of the evidence at trial concerned an incident on February 17; defense counsel's questioning of the witnesses clearly indicates that he was aware of the clerical error before trial; and defendant was not prejudiced in his preparation of an adequate defense by the variance. State v. Bailey, 49 N.C. App. 377, 271 S.E.2d 752 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 723, 276 S.E.2d 288 (1981).

Nor Receiving Stolen Goods. — When time is not of the essence of the offense, leaving out the date does not make the bill of indictment defective, and the crime of receiving stolen goods is not one of the offenses in which time is of the essence. State v. Tessnear, 254 N.C. 211, 118 S.E.2d 393 (1961).

Nor Breaking or Entering. — Indictment alleging violation of § 14-54 "on or about the ... day of June, A.D. 1956" was not fatally defective. Time not being of the essence of the offense charged, it was not necessary that the exact date be specified. State v. Andrews, 246 N.C. 561, 99 S.E.2d 745 (1957).

Nor Rape. — It is to the girl's first act of intercourse with a man when she is under 16 (now 13) years of age, that the law attaches criminality on the part of the man, and a variance between allegation and proof as to time is not material where no statute of limitations is involved. State v. Trippe, 222 N.C. 600, 24 S.E.2d 340 (1943).

Nor Unlawfully Withholding Credit Card. — The date upon which an allegedly stolen credit card was issued is not necessary to describe the card, is not an essential element of the offense charged, and therefore is not a material fact which the State must allege and prove. State v. Springer, 283 N.C. 627, 197 S.E.2d 530 (1973).

Nor Abandonment. — Failure to specify a particular day in an indictment for abandonment is not fatal especially in view of an instruction that the jury should consider only such evidence as tends to show that the defendant violated the statute after a particular date. State v. Jones, 201 N.C. 424, 160 S.E. 468 (1931).

In cases of sexual assaults on children, temporal specificity requisites diminish. Thus, where the child victim testified that defendant perpetrated rape and other sexual offenses against her on several occasions over a period of six years, and specifically recalled offenses occurring on September 27 and September 29, 1988, for both of which dates the defendant presented an alibi, and where the difference between the testimony of the victim as to which offense occurred on which date did not prevent the defendant from presenting his alibi, there was no error in letting the case go to the jury. State v. Young, 103 N.C. App. 415, 406 S.E.2d 3, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 201, 412 S.E.2d 65 (1991).

Time of Birth in Bastardy Proceeding. — Indictment, in a bastardy proceeding, which states that the child was born on August 13, 1941, whereas the evidence was that the birth occurred on November 13, 1940, is not fatally defective. State v. Moore, 222 N.C. 356, 23 S.E.2d 31 (1942).

Reversal of Dates of Offenses. — Variance between indictments which charged the defendant with purchasing heroin on July 8 and marijuana on July 11 and evidence which showed that the dates of purchase were reversed was not such a fatal variance as to require a new trial. State v. Knight, 9 N.C. App. 62, 175 S.E.2d 332 (1970).

The date given in a bill of indictment usually is not an essential element of the crime charged. The State may prove that the crime was in fact committed on some other date. This rule, however, may not be used to deprive a defendant of his defense. State v. Sills, 311 N.C. 370, 317 S.E.2d 379 (1984).

Failure to Include Year in Alleged Date of Offense. — Where the warrant upon which defendant was tried place the time of the offense as "on or about the 19 day of June, 19...," the failure to insert the year being defendant's only assignment of error, the warrant was not fatally defective. State v. Hawkins, 19 N.C. App. 674, 199 S.E.2d 746 (1973).

Change of Date on Indictment Permitted. — In prosecution for incest, where although the testimony of the young prosecuting witness as to the date of the offense differed from that of her mother, all of the State's evidence showed that the crime, if committed, took place on the Sunday of the weekend during which a certain individual visited the defendant's residence, the change on the indictment of the date of the offense, as permitted by the trial court, did not substantially alter the charge against the defendant, nor did it unfairly surprise him or prevent him from presenting a defense. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

It was the fact that another felony was committed, not its specific date, which was the essential question in habitual felon indictment; therefore, because date alleged in indictment was neither an essential nor a substantial fact as to the charge of habitual felon, the trial court properly allowed the state to change the date in the habitual felon indictment. State v. Locklear, 117 N.C. App. 255, 450 S.E.2d 516 (1994).

Fatal Variance Not Shown. — There was no fatal variance between the allegations contained in the indictment and the actual proof presented by the State with regard to the date of the offense, where although the warrant and bill of indictment showed the date of the offense as March 13, 1985, the defendant was put on notice as to the child victim's uncertainty as to the date during a probable cause hearing, and where, additionally, the defendant did not in fact rely on the date stated in the indictment. State v. Ramey, 318 N.C. 457, 349 S.E.2d 566 (1986).

Article 15A.

Investigation of Offenses Involving Abandonment and Nonsupport of Children.

§ 15-155.1. Reports to district attorneys of Work First Family Assistance and out-of-wedlock births.

The Department of Health and Human Services by and through the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promptly after June 19, 1959, make a report to each district attorney, setting out the names and addresses of all mothers who reside in his prosecutorial district as defined in G.S. 7A-60 and are recipients of assistance under the provisions of Part 2, Article 2, Chapter 108A of the General Statutes. Such report shall in some manner show the identity of the unwed mothers and shall set forth the number of children born to each said mother. Such a report shall also be made monthly thereafter setting out the names and addresses of all such mothers who reside in the district and who may have become recipients of assistance under the provisions of Part 2, Article 2, Chapter 108A of the General Statutes since the date of the last report. (1959, c. 1210, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 476, s. 138; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 50; 1997-443, ss. 11A.118(a), 12.23.)

Local Modification. — (As to Article 15A) Gaston and Mecklenburg: 1959, c. 1210.

Editor's Note. — Part 2, Article 3, Chapter 108 (§§ 108-76 to 108-78), referred to in this section, was recodified as §§ 131D-1 to 131D-5 pursuant to Session Laws 1981, c. 275, s. 2.

§ 15-155.2. District attorney to take action on report of aid to dependent child [Work First Family Assistance] or illegitimate [out-of-wedlock] birth.

(a) Upon receipt of such reports as are provided for in G.S. 15-155.1, the district attorney of superior court may make an investigation to determine whether the mother of an out-of-wedlock child or who is a recipient of Work First Family Assistance, has abandoned, is willfully neglecting or is refusing to support and maintain the child within the meaning of G.S. 14-326 or 49-2 or is diverting any part of the funds received as Work First Family Assistance to any purpose other than for the support and maintenance of a child in violation of G.S. 108-76.1. In making this investigation the district attorney is authorized to call upon:

(1) Any county board of social services or the Department of Health and Human Services for personal, clerical or investigative assistance and for access to any records kept by either such board and relating to the matter under investigation and such boards are hereby directed to assist in all investigations hereunder and to furnish all records relating thereto when so requested by the district attorney;

(2) The board of county commissioners of any county within his district for legal or clerical assistance in making any investigation or investigations in such county and such boards are hereby authorized to furnish such assistance in their discretion; and

(3) The district attorney of any inferior court in his district for personal assistance in making any investigation or investigations in the county in which the court is located and any district attorney so called upon is hereby authorized to furnish such assistance by and with the consent of the board of county commissioners of the county in which the court is located, which board shall provide and fix his compensation for assistance furnished.

(b) If following the investigation the district attorney has reasonable grounds to believe that a violation of G.S. 49-2, 14-326, 108-76.1 or any other criminal offense is being or has been committed, he shall send to the grand jury of the county in which he believes the offense is being or has been committed a bill of indictment charging the commission of the offense. Sole and exclusive jurisdiction of offenses discovered as a result of investigations under this section shall be vested in the superior court notwithstanding any other provisions of law, whether general, special or local. Provided nothing in this Article shall be construed to take from the inferior courts any authority or responsibility now vested in them by existing law or to compel the district attorney to again prosecute a crime that has been disposed of in the inferior courts.

(c) Repealed by Session Laws 1985, c. 589, s. 8. (1959, c. 1210, s. 1; 1969, c. 982; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 476, s. 138; 1985, c. 589, s. 8; 1997-443, ss. 11A.118(a), 12.24.)

Editor's Note. — Section 14-326, referred to in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 683, s. 3. The subject matter of former § 14-326 is covered in § 14-322.

Section 108-76.1, referred to in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, was not retained in the 1969 revision of Chapter 108.

(1907, c. 21; C.S., s. 4636; 1973, c. 1141, s. 14; 1979, c. 682, s. 3; 1981, c. 682, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Exclusion of Bystanders Does Not Deny Right to Public Trial. — There was no merit in the contention of the defendants that the exclusion of bystanders during the testimony of the prosecutrix in a prosecution for rape denied them the right to a public trial. State v. Yoes, 271 N.C. 616, 157 S.E.2d 386 (1967).

In a prosecution for first-degree rape of a child, the constitutional right of defendant to a public trial was not violated by the court's order entered pursuant to this section that, during the testimony of the seven-year-old victim, the courtroom be cleared of all persons except defendant, defendant's family, defense counsel, defense witnesses, the prosecutor, the state's witnesses, officers of the court, members of the jury, and members of the victim's family. State v. Burney, 302 N.C. 529, 276 S.E.2d 693 (1981).

Factors Considered. — In determining whether to close a courtroom, trial courts must consider the factors enunciated in Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 104 S. Ct. 2210, 81 L.Ed. 31 (1984) and may not rely solely on this section; however, a court need only articulate its fundamental reasons for closing a courtroom and is not required to exhaustively articulate every observation and inference underlying its decision. Bell v. Jarvis, 7 F. Supp. 2d 699 (E.D.N.C. 1998).

Sufficiency of Findings. — Trial court's finding that the minor victim's testimony was of a "delicate nature" was sufficient to justify a partial closure of the courtroom, even though that finding was contained in a memorandum the trial court prepared three years after the petitioner's conviction. Bell v. Jarvis, 7 F. Supp. 2d 699 (E.D.N.C. 1998).

The trial court erred in granting the State's motion to clear the courtroom during the victim's testimony because it did not determine if the party seeking closure had advanced an overriding interest that was likely to be prejudiced, ordered closure no broader than necessary to protect that interest, considered reasonable alternatives to closing the procedure, and made findings adequate to support the closure. State v. Jenkins, 115 N.C. App. 520, 445 S.E.2d 622, stay granted pending appeal, 336 N.C. 784, 447 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, temporary stay dissolved, 337 N.C. 804, 449 S.E.2d 752 (1994).

Alleged rapist was entitled to habeas corpus where appellate counsel provided ineffective assistance resulting in prejudice by failing to appeal the trial court's decision to close the court. Bell v. Jarvis, 198 F.3d 432 (4th Cir. 1999).

Applied in Bell v. Jarvis, 236 F.3d 149 (4th

§ 15-167. Extension of session of court by trial judge.

Whenever a trial for a felony is in progress on the last Friday of any session of court and it appears to the trial judge that it is unlikely that such trial can be completed before 5:00 P.M. on such Friday, the trial judge may extend the session as long as in his opinion it shall be necessary for the purposes of the case, but he may recess court on Friday or Saturday of such week to such time on the succeeding Sunday or Monday as, in his discretion, he deems wise. The trial judge, in his discretion, may exercise the same power in the trial of any other cause under the same circumstances, except civil actions begun after Thursday of the last week. The length of time such court shall remain in session each day shall be in the discretion of the trial judge. Whenever a trial judge continues a session pursuant to this section, he shall cause an order to such effect to be entered in the minutes, which order may be entered at such time as the judge directs, either before or after he has extended the session. (1830, c. 22; R.C., c. 31, s. 16; C.C.P., s. 397; Code, s. 1229; 1893, c. 226; Rev., s. 3266; C.S., s. 4637; 1961, c. 181; 1973, c. 1141, s. 15.)

CASE NOTES

Section Constitutional. — This section is constitutional. State v. Adair, 66 N.C. 298 (1872); State v. Jefferson, 66 N.C. 309 (1872); State v. Taylor, 76 N.C. 64 (1877); State v. Monroe, 80 N.C. 373 (1879). See also National Bank v. Gilmer, 116 N.C. 684, 22 S.E. 2, rehearing denied, 117 N.C. 416, 23 S.E. 333 (1895).

Expiration of Session No Ground for Discharging Jury. — The expiration of a term (now session) of court is no ground for discharging a jury before verdict, for the term (now session) may be continued for the purposes of the trial. State v. McGimsey, 80 N.C. 377 (1879).

Special Term Extended. — Where a trial began on Wednesday of the last week of a special term and the jury had not agreed upon a verdict on Saturday night, it was not improper for the trial judge to open and conduct the regular term on Monday following to continue the special term into that week for the purpose of receiving the verdict of the jury, since the rights of the parties were not prejudiced thereby. National Bank v. Gilmer, 116 N.C. 684, 22 S.E. 2, rehearing denied, 117 N.C. 416, 23 S.E. 333 (1895).

Entry in Minutes Held in Compliance with Section. — Daily entries on the journal during the trial of a felony, stating the name of the case and that the court takes a recess "until 9:30 A.M. tomorrow," and the entry next day "court convened at 9:30 A.M. pursuant to recess," etc., in regular form, constitute a sufficient compliance with this section. State v. Harris, 181 N.C. 600, 107 S.E. 466 (1921).

§ 15-168. Justification as defense to libel.

Every defendant who is charged by indictment with the publication of a libel may prove on the trial for the same the truth of the facts alleged in the indictment; and if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the jury that the facts are true, the defendant shall be acquitted of the charge. (R.C., c. 35, s. 26; Code, s. 1195; Rev., s. 3267; C.S., s. 4638.)

Cross References. — As to effect of publication in good faith and retraction by a newspaper, see § 99-2.

CASE NOTES

Truth of Entire Charge Must Be Proved. — Where the matter set out in the indictment is libelous, in order for the defendant to justify he must show that the entire charge imputed to the prosecutor is true. State v. Lyon, 89 N.C. 568 (1883).

General Report of Truth Insufficient. — In an indictment for a libel, it is not competent for the defendant to justify by proving that there was, and long had been, a general report in the neighborhood, of the truth of his charge. State v. White, 29 N.C. 180 (1847).

General Bad Character Insufficient. — Proof of the general bad character of an officer in other matters of which he had taken cognizance will not be received to establish the truth of libelous charge in reference to a particular matter. State v. Lyon, 89 N.C. 568 (1883).

§ 15-169. Conviction of assault, when included in charge.

On the trial of any person for any felony whatsoever, when the crime charged includes an assault against the person, it is lawful for the jury to acquit of the felony and to find a verdict of guilty of assault against the person indicted, if the evidence warrants such finding; and when such verdict is found the court shall have power to imprison the person so found guilty of an assault, for any term now allowed by law in cases of conviction when the indictment was originally for the assault of a like character. (1885, c. 68; Rev., s. 3268; C.S., s. 4639; 1979, c. 682, s. 4.)

Cross References. — As to conviction of defendant of lesser degree of the crime charged generally, see § 15-170.

CASE NOTES

Section Refers to Assault Generally. — This section does not describe the kind of assault, but refers to an assault generally and without regard to its degree of punishment under the law. State v. Smith, 157 N.C. 578, 72 S.E. 853 (1911).

When Section Applicable. — This section and § 15-170 are applicable only where there is evidence tending to show that defendant is guilty of a crime of lesser degree than that charged in the indictment. State v. Jackson, 199 N.C. 321, 154 S.E. 402 (1930); State v. Sawyer, 224 N.C. 61, 29 S.E.2d 34 (1944); State v. Jones, 249 N.C. 134, 105 S.E.2d 513 (1958); State v. Stalnaker, 1 N.C. App. 524, 162 S.E.2d 76 (1968); State v. Williams, 275 N.C. 77, 165 S.E.2d 481 (1969); State v. Murry, 277 N.C. 197, 176 S.E.2d 738 (1970); State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972); State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

This section and § 15-170 are applicable only when there is evidence tending to show that the defendant may be guilty of a lesser offense. State v. Carnes, 279 N.C. 549, 184 S.E.2d 235 (1971); State v. Noell, 284 N.C. 670, 202 S.E.2d 750 (1974), death sentence vacated and remanded, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3203, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976).

When Inapplicable. — This section is not applicable where all the evidence for the State, uncontradicted by any evidence for the defendant, if believed by the jury, shows that the crime charged in the indictment was committed as alleged therein, and there is no evidence tending to support a contention that the defendants, if not guilty of the crime charged in the indictment, were guilty of a crime of less degree. State v. Cox, 201 N.C. 357, 160 S.E. 358 (1931); State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966).

This section is not applicable where all the evidence for the State, uncontradicted by any evidence for the defendant, if believed by the jury, shows that the crime charged in the indictment was committed as alleged therein. State v. LeGrande, 1 N.C. App. 25, 159 S.E.2d 265 (1968).

What Indictment Includes. — An indictment for any offense against the criminal law includes all lesser degrees of the same crime known to the law; and conviction may be had of the lesser offense when the charge is inclusive of both. State v. Williams, 185 N.C. 685, 116 S.E. 736 (1923).

Same — Murder. — Under an indictment for murder, the defendant may be convicted either of murder in the first degree, murder in the second degree, or manslaughter, and even of assault with a deadly weapon, or simple assault, if the evidence shall warrant such finding when he is not acquitted entirely. State v. Williams, 185 N.C. 685, 116 S.E. 736 (1923).

Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, when it is sought to fall back on the lesser offense of assault and battery or assault with a deadly weapon in case the greater offense of murder or manslaughter is not made out, the indictment for murder should be drawn as necessarily to include an assault and battery or assault with a deadly weapon, or it should contain a separate count to that effect. State v. Rorie, 252 N.C. 579, 114 S.E.2d 233 (1960).

A bill of indictment charging that defendant "unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously and of malice aforethought did kill and murder the victim" is insufficient to support a verdict of guilty of assault, assault inflicting serious injury or assault with intent to kill. State v. Whiteside, 325 N.C. 389, 383 S.E.2d 911 (1989).

Same — Robbery. — The crime of robbery ex vi termini includes an assault on the person, and in a prosecution for robbery, the court must submit the question of defendant's guilt of assault in those instances where the evidence warrants such finding, even in the absence of a request, and even though the State contends solely for conviction of robbery and the defendant contends solely for complete acquittal. State v. Hicks, 241 N.C. 156, 84 S.E.2d 545 (1954).

Same — Rape. — An indictment for rape, as this section declares, includes an assault against the person; and where there is evidence sufficient to warrant such finding, the jury may acquit of the felony of rape and return a verdict of guilty of a lesser criminal assault. State v. Jones, 249 N.C. 134, 105 S.E.2d 513 (1958).

An assault with intent to commit rape under former § 14-22 is a lesser degree of the crime of rape. Therefore, a conviction or acquittal of the former bars a subsequent prosecution of the latter based on the same act or transaction. State v. Birckhead, 256 N.C. 494, 124 S.E.2d 838 (1962).

Same — Attempted First-Degree Rape. — In deciding whether trial court erred in submitting assault on a female as a lesser included offense of charge of attempted first-degree rape, the appellate court must consider (1) whether the charge of attempted first-degree rape includes all the essential elements of assault on a female and (2) whether there was some evidence to support a finding of assault on a female. State v. Rick, 54 N.C. App. 104, 282 S.E.2d 497 (1981).

Same — Assault with Intent to Rape. — Under a bill of indictment charging an assault with an intent to commit rape, under former § 14-22 the lesser offense of assault and battery may be found to have been committed, and in such instance a special issue may be submitted to the jury, if necessary, so that, in accordance with the jury's finding, the court may determine the grade of the punishment. State v. Smith, 157 N.C. 578, 72 S.E. 853 (1911).

Assault is not a less degree of the crime of larceny from the person, and therefore, in a prosecution for larceny, the court is not required to submit the question of defendant's guilt of assault, even though there be evidence thereof. State v. Acrey, 262 N.C. 90, 136 S.E.2d 201 (1964).

Duty to Instruct as to Assault. — Where the indictment is sufficient and the evidence is conflicting as to whether the defendant committed highway robbery or an assault with a deadly weapon, the jury may find for the lesser offense, and it is the duty of the trial judge to so instruct the jury, though a special request therefor has not been aptly tendered in writing. State v. Holt, 192 N.C. 490, 135 S.E. 324 (1926); State v. Davis, 242 N.C. 476, 87 S.E.2d 906 (1955).

Where the State's evidence in a prosecution under an indictment for rape, if believed to its fullest extent, established the crime of rape but the defendant testified the intercourse was with the girl's consent and the evidence was conflicting in other respects, it would have been error for the court not to have charged the jury on the lesser offenses. State v. Green, 246 N.C. 717, 100 S.E.2d 52 (1957).

When Duty Arises. — The necessity for instructing the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree than that charged arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. State v. Williams, 275 N.C. 77, 165 S.E.2d 481 (1969); State v. Murry, 277 N.C. 197, 176 S.E.2d 738 (1970); State v. Carnes, 279 N.C. 549, 184 S.E.2d 235 (1971); State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976); State v. Mayberry, 38 N.C. App. 509, 248 S.E.2d 402 (1978).

The necessity for instructing the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree than that charged arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. Hence, there is no such necessity if the State's evidence tends to show a completed robbery and there is no conflicting evidence relating to elements of the crime charged. Mere contention that the jury might accept the State's evidence in part and might reject it in part will not suffice. State v. LeGrande, 1 N.C. App. 25, 159 S.E.2d 265 (1968); State v. Norman, 14 N.C. App. 394, 188 S.E.2d 667 (1972).

No Duty to Instruct Where Evidence

Supports Greater Offense. — The trial court is not required to charge the jury upon the question of the defendant's guilt of lesser degrees of the crime charged in the indictment when there is no evidence to sustain a verdict of defendant's guilt of such lesser degrees. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

The court is not required to submit to the jury a lesser included offense when there is no evidence of such lesser included offense. State v. LeGrande, 1 N.C. App. 25, 159 S.E.2d 265 (1968); State v. Alexander, 13 N.C. App. 216, 185 S.E.2d 302 (1971).

If the State's evidence tends to show a completed robbery and there is no conflicting evidence relating to the elements of this offense, the court is not required to submit the question of defendant's guilt of assault, notwithstanding the jury's right to accept the State's evidence in part and reject it in part. State v. Hicks, 241 N.C. 156, 84 S.E.2d 545 (1954).

The trial court in a prosecution for common-law robbery did not err in refusing to instruct on the lesser included offense of misdemeanor assault where the State's evidence tended to show that defendant took the victim's money by violent means, and defendant admitted taking the victim's money but denied assaulting him. State v. Thompson, 49 N.C. App. 690, 272 S.E.2d 160 (1980).

In a prosecution for armed robbery, where the evidence tends to show that the defendant had committed the armed robbery as alleged in the indictment or that the defendant was innocent, the trial court is not required to instruct the jury on the lesser included offenses of assault with a deadly weapon and simple assault. State v. Martin, 6 N.C. App. 616, 170 S.E.2d 539 (1969).

In a rape case, the trial court did not err in failing to submit the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape under former § 14-22 and assault on a female where all the State's evidence tended to show commission of rape and the defendant's evidence was that he had never had intercourse with the prosecutrix nor did he touch her in a manner constituting an assault. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

The trial court in a rape prosecution did not err in failing to submit to the jury the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape under former § 14-22 and of assault on a female, where the State's evidence was positive as to each and every element of the crime of rape and there was no conflict in the evidence relating to any element thereof. State v. Flippin, 280 N.C. 682, 186 S.E.2d 917 (1972).

Verdict Does Not Cure Failure to Charge upon Lesser Degree. — The error of the judge in failing to charge on the supporting evidence, upon the lesser degree of the crime of rape, under a charge thereof in the indictment, is not cured by the verdict finding that the defendant was guilty of the greater degree of the crime charged in the indictment. State v. Williams, 185 N.C. 685, 116 S.E. 736 (1923).

It is a well recognized principle that where one is indicted for a crime, and under the same bill he may be convicted of a lesser degree of the same crime, and there is evidence tending to support the milder verdict, the prisoner is entitled to have this view presented to the jury under a correct charge, and an error in this respect is not cured by a verdict convicting the prisoner of a higher offense, for in such case it cannot be determined that the jury would not have convicted of the lesser crime if the view had been correctly presented by the judge, upon evidence. State v. Bass, 249 N.C. 209, 105 S.E.2d 645 (1958).

Conviction of Lesser Offense Where Evidence Supports Greater Offense. — Where all the evidence points to a graver crime and the jury's verdict is for an offense of a lesser degree, although illogical and incongruous, it will not be disturbed, since it is favorable to accused. State v. Bentley, 223 N.C. 563, 27 S.E.2d 738 (1943); State v. Roy, 233 N.C. 558, 64 S.E.2d 840 (1951); State v. Wade, 49 N.C. App. 257, 271 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Effect of Simple Verdict of Guilty. — While this section permits a verdict for an assault when it is embraced in the charge of a greater offense, as rape or other felony, a verdict simply of "guilty," and not specifying a lower offense, is a verdict of guilty of the offense charged in the indictment. State v. Barnes, 122 N.C. 1031, 29 S.E. 381 (1898); State v. Lee, 192 N.C. 225, 134 S.E. 458 (1926).

Effect of Nonsuit or Dismissal as to Greater Offense. — Upon an indictment charging an assault with intent to commit rape, defendant may be convicted of an assault upon a female as though separately charged, and motion to dismiss under § 15-173 was properly refused where there was sufficient evidence to convict of an assault. State v. Jones, 222 N.C. 37, 21 S.E.2d 812 (1942).

Upon an indictment for an assault with intent to commit rape, even though the evidence is insufficient to support a verdict, motion for judgment of dismissal or nonsuit cannot be granted, as defendant may be convicted of an assault. State v. Gay, 224 N.C. 141, 29 S.E.2d 458 (1944).

Where in a prosecution under a bill of indictment charging assault with intent to commit rape the evidence discloses an assault but is insufficient to prove the intent necessary for a conviction of this offense, defendant is entitled to nonsuit on the offense charged, but is not entitled to his discharge, since he may be convicted under the bill of indictment for assault upon a female as though this offense had been separately charged in the bill. State v. Moore, 227 N.C. 326, 42 S.E.2d 84 (1947).

In a prosecution of a defendant for assault with intent to commit rape, under former § 14-22 nonsuit of the felony does not entitle the defendant to his discharge, but the State may put defendant on trial under the same indictment for assault on a female, defendant being a male over the age of 18. State v. Gammons, 260 N.C. 753, 133 S.E.2d 649 (1963).

Applied in State v. Hardee, 192 N.C. 533, 135 S.E. 345 (1926); State v. Johnson, 227 N.C. 587, 42 S.E.2d 685 (1947); State v. Lunsford, 229 N.C. 229, 49 S.E.2d 410 (1948); State v. Matthews, 231 N.C. 617, 58 S.E.2d 625 (1950); State v. Fletcher, 268 N.C. 140, 150 S.E.2d 54 (1966); State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 167, 150 S.E.2d 194 (1966); State v. Hamm, 1 N.C. App. 444, 161 S.E.2d 758 (1968).

§ 15-170. Conviction for a less degree or an attempt.

Upon the trial of any indictment the prisoner may be convicted of the crime charged therein or of a less degree of the same crime, or of an attempt to commit the crime so charged, or of an attempt to commit a less degree of the same crime. (1891, c. 205, s. 2; Rev., s. 3269; C.S., s. 4640.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — This section is not unconstitutional. State v. Young, 305 N.C. 391, 289 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

When Applicable. — This section and § 15-169 are applicable only when there is evidence tending to show that the defendant may be guilty of a lesser offense. State v. Jones, 249 N.C. 134, 105 S.E.2d 513 (1958), commented on in 41 N.C.L. Rev. 118 (1962); State v. Stalnaker, 1 N.C. App. 524, 162 S.E.2d 76 (1968); State v. Williams, 275 N.C. 77, 165 S.E.2d 481 (1969); State v. Murry, 277 N.C. 197, 176 S.E.2d 738 (1970); State v. Carnes, 279 N.C. 549, 184 S.E.2d 235 (1971); State v. Noell, 284 N.C. 670, 202 S.E.2d 750 (1974), death sentence vacated and remanded, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3203, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976); State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976); State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

When a defendant is indicted for a criminal offense he may be convicted of the charged offense or of a lesser included offense when the greater offense charged in the bill contains all the essential elements of the lesser offense, all of which could be proved by proof of the allegations of fact contained in the indictment. State v. Riera, 276 N.C. 361, 172 S.E.2d 535 (1970); State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974); State v. Aiken, 286 N.C. 202, 209 S.E.2d 763 (1974); State v. Williams, 51 N.C. App. 397, 276 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 319, 281 S.E.2d 658 (1981).

Section 15-169 and this section are applicable only when there is evidence tending to show the defendant may be guilty of an included crime of lesser degree. State v. Thompson, 280 N.C. 202, 185 S.E.2d 666 (1972).

An indictment or information is insufficient to charge the accused with the commission of a minor offense, or one of less degree, unless, in charging the major offense, it necessarily includes within itself all of the essential elements of the minor offense. State v. Chavis, 9 N.C. App. 430, 176 S.E.2d 388 (1970); State v. Rick, 54 N.C. App. 104, 282 S.E.2d 497 (1981).

An indictment or information is insufficient to charge the accused with the commission of a minor offense or one of less degree unless, in charging the major offense, it necessarily includes within itself all of the essential elements of the minor offense, or sufficiently sets them forth by separate allegations in an added count; but when the indictment or information contains all the essential constituents of the minor offense, it sufficiently alleges that offense. State v. Rorie, 252 N.C. 579, 114 S.E.2d 233 (1960).

Lesser included offense is one in which the greater offense contains all of the essential elements of the lesser offense. State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

Greater crime includes the lesser, so that where an offense is alleged in an indictment, and the jury acquits as to that one, it may convict of the lesser offense when the charge is inclusive of both offenses. State v. Craig, 35 N.C. App. 547, 241 S.E.2d 704 (1978); State v. Daniels, 51 N.C. App. 294, 276 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

Conviction on lesser offense renders any error in submission of greater offense harmless. State v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 567, 397 S.E.2d 364 (1990), cert. dismissed, 328 N.C. 576, 403 S.E.2d 520 (1991).

Offense Not Included If It Contains Element Not in Other Crime. — A crime is not a lesser included offense of another crime if the former contains any element that the latter does not. State v. Peoples, 65 N.C. App. 168, 308 S.E.2d 500 (1983).

Crime of "less degree" is not exclusively one which carries a less severe sanction than the crime formally charged in the indictment. State v. Young, 305 N.C. 391, 289 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Facts of particular case should not determine whether one crime is a lesser included offense of another. Rather, the definitions accorded the crimes determine whether one offense is a lesser included offense of another crime. In other words, all of the essential elements are included in the greater crime. If the lesser crime has an essential element which is not completely covered by the greater crime, it is not a lesser included offense. The determination is made on a definitional, not a factual basis. State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

The determination of whether one crime is a lesser included offense of another is made on a definitional, not a factual, basis. All essential elements of the lesser offense must be completely covered by the essential elements of the greater offense. State v. Wortham, 80 N.C. App. 54, 341 S.E.2d 76 (1986), modified, 318 N.C. 669, 351 S.E.2d 294 (1987).

Defendant may plead guilty to less degrees of the same crimes charged in the indictments against him, and the State may accept such pleas. State v. Woody, 271 N.C. 544, 157 S.E.2d 108 (1967).

Discretion of Court. — It is not within the trial judge's province to negotiate a plea or enter judgment on a plea to a charge which is not a lesser included offense of the charge at issue. In re Fuller, 345 N.C. 157, 478 S.E.2d 641 (1996).

Evidence Required to Support Conviction of Lesser Degree. — When the solicitor (now district attorney) announces that he will not seek a conviction upon the maximum degree of the crime charged in the bill of indictment, and the defendant interposes no objection to being tried upon the lesser degree of the offense, the sufficiency of the evidence to support a conviction of the lesser degree must be measured by the same standards which would be applied had the bill of indictment charged only the lesser degree of the offense. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

Jury Not to Arbitrarily Convict of Lesser Degree. — This section and § 15-169 were not intended to give to the jury the arbitrary right or discretion to convict a defendant of a lesser degree of the crime charged or of a less serious offense than that charged, if the uncontradicted evidence shows beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of the more serious offense charged in the bill of indictment. State v. Brown, 227 N.C. 383, 42 S.E.2d 402 (1947).

Silence of Verdict as to All But One Count Distinguished. — Where there are several counts in a bill, if the jury find the defendant guilty on one count and say nothing in their verdict concerning the other counts, it will be equivalent to a verdict of not guilty as to them. This principle should not be confused with the practice, authorized by this section, which permits the conviction of a less degree of the same crime, when included in a single count. State v. Hampton, 210 N.C. 283, 186 S.E. 251 (1936).

Joinder Mere Surplusage. — Since this section was adopted, the joinder in an indictment of a count for a lesser offense, or for an attempt to commit the same, is mere surplusage. State v. Brown, 113 N.C. 645, 18 S.E. 51 (1893).

Election by District Attorney to Try Lesser Degrees and Included Offenses. — Upon the return of an indictment sufficient in form to support a conviction of the defendant of either the maximum degree of the offense charged, a lesser degree thereof or a lesser offense, all of the elements of which are included in the crime charged, the solicitor (now district attorney) has the authority to elect not to try the defendant on the maximum degree of the offense charged but to put him on trial for the lesser degree thereof and lesser offenses included therein. The effect of such election by the solicitor (now district attorney), announced in open court, is that of a verdict of not guilty upon the maximum degree of the offense charged, leaving for trial the lesser degree and the lesser included offenses. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

When, upon arraignment, or thereafter in open court, and in the presence of the defendant, the solicitor (now district attorney) announces the State will not ask for a verdict of guilty of the maximum crime charged but will ask for a verdict of guilty on a designated and included lesser offense embraced in the bill, and the announcement is entered in the minutes of the court, the announcements is the equivalent of a verdict of not guilty on the charge or charges the solicitor (now district attorney) has elected to abandon. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

The defendant was charged with burglary in the first degree in the bill of indictment. And when the solicitor (now district attorney) stated that he would not ask for a verdict of first degree burglary, but would only ask for a verdict of second degree burglary on the indictment, it was tantamount to taking a nolle prosequi with leave on the capital charge. State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

Uncontradicted Evidence of Greater Offense May Support Lesser Verdict. — When the State, either through a bill of indictment as returned by the grand jury or through the election of its solicitor (now district attorney) to seek a lesser verdict, brings the defendant to trial on a lesser degree of the offense charged, the case can be submitted to the jury if the uncontradicted evidence, as thereafter developed, shows the defendant is guilty of the more serious degree of the crime. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

Conviction of Greater Offense Than Charged. — It would be without precedent to try defendant for one offense and to convict him of another and greater offense, even though the conviction be of a higher degree of the same offense for which he is being tried. State v. Jordan, 226 N.C. 155, 37 S.E.2d 111 (1946).

Elements of Attempt. — The two elements of an attempt to commit a crime are: (1) An intent to commit it, and (2) an overt act done for that purpose, going beyond mere preparation, but falling short of the completed offense. State v. Gray, 58 N.C. App. 102, 293 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 746, 295 S.E.2d 482 (1982).

An attempt is an act done with intent to commit that crime, carried beyond mere preparation to commit it, but falling short of its actual commission. State v. McAlister, 59 N.C. App. 58, 295 S.E.2d 501 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 471, 299 S.E.2d 226 (1983).

Intent Alone Not Sufficient for Attempt Conviction. — The intent, though connected with preparations to commit a criminal offense, is not alone sufficient for a conviction of the attempt, unless it is connected with some overt act or acts toward the end in view that will, in the judgment of the one charged, and as matters appeared to him, result in the consummation of the contemplated purpose. State v. Addor, 183 N.C. 687, 110 S.E. 650 (1922).

When Motion for Nonsuit Denied. — A motion for judgment as of nonsuit addressed to the entire bill is properly overruled if there is evidence sufficient to support a conviction of the crime charged or of an included crime. State v. Virgil, 263 N.C. 73, 138 S.E.2d 777 (1964).

New Trial Must Be on Full Charge. — Upon an appeal from a conviction for a lesser offense than that charged in the indictment, a new trial, if granted, must be upon the full charge in the bill. State v. Matthews, 142 N.C. 621, 55 S.E. 342 (1906).

Effect of State's Election of Felony Murder Theory. — The State's election to try a homicide case, and the trial judge's submission of it to the jury, only on a felony murder theory did not in effect acquit defendant of murder on a theory of premeditation and deliberation and all of its lesser included homicide offenses. State v. Thomas, 325 N.C. 583, 386 S.E.2d 555 (1989), holding that the jury should have been instructed on involuntary murder under the circumstances.

A defendant may always show by the evidence not only his innocence under the theory of prosecution chosen by the State, but also his possible guilt of some lesser offense. If this lesser offense is included in the crime charged in the indictment and if there is evidence to support it, defendant is entitled to have it submitted to the jury. These different theories of defense cannot be abrogated by the State's decision to prosecute, nor the trial court's decision to submit the case on only one prosecutorial theory, when under the indictment and the evidence adduced another is more favorable to defendant. State v. Thomas, 325 N.C. 583, 386 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

II. JURY INSTRUCTIONS.

Defendant Entitled to Complete Charge. — Under the provisions of this section when the bill of indictment is sufficient with the supporting evidence upon the trial, the defendant may be convicted of the criminal offense charged or of a lesser degree thereof, and he is entitled to a charge from the court on all degrees of the crime thus encompassed by the indictment. State v. Robinson, 188 N.C. 784, 125 S.E. 617 (1924). See also State v. Keaton, 206 N.C. 682, 175 S.E. 296 (1934).

When there is evidence tending to support a milder verdict than the one charged in the bill of indictment the defendant is entitled to have the different views presented to the jury under a proper charge. State v. Burnette, 213 N.C. 153, 195 S.E. 356 (1938); State v. DeGraffenreid, 223 N.C. 461, 27 S.E.2d 130 (1943). See also State v. Chambers, 218 N.C. 442, 11 S.E.2d 280 (1940).

Where there is evidence of defendant's guilt of a lesser degree of the crime charged in the indictment, the court must submit defendant's guilt of the lesser included offense to the jury. State v. Putnam, 24 N.C. App. 570, 211 S.E.2d 493 (1975).

The general rule of practice is, that when it is permissible under the indictment to convict the defendant of "a less degree of the same crime," and there is evidence to support the milder verdict, the defendant is entitled to have the different views arising on the evidence presented to the jury under proper instructions. State v. Childress, 228 N.C. 208, 45 S.E.2d 42 (1947); State v. Haith, 48 N.C. App. 319, 269 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 403, 273 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

And Conviction of Offense Charged Does Not Cure Error. — A verdict of guilty of the offense charged in the indictment does not cure error of the court in failing to submit to the jury the question of defendant's guilt of less degrees of the crime. State v. McNeill, 229 N.C. 377, 49 S.E.2d 733 (1948); State v. Davis, 242 N.C. 476, 87 S.E.2d 906 (1955); State v. Lang, 58 N.C. App. 117, 293 S.E.2d 255, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 747, 295 S.E.2d 761 (1982).

An error in failing to submit lesser offenses is not cured by a verdict convicting him of the crime as charged in the bill of indictment, for in such case it cannot be known whether the jury would have convicted of a less degree if the different views, arising on the evidence, had been correctly presented by the trial court. State v. Burnette, 213 N.C. 153, 195 S.E. 356 (1938); State v. DeGraffenreid, 223 N.C. 461, 27 S.E.2d 130 (1943). See also State v. Chambers, 218 N.C. 442, 11 S.E.2d 280 (1940); State v. Childress, 228 N.C. 208, 45 S.E.2d 42 (1947); State v. Riera, 276 N.C. 361, 172 S.E.2d 535 (1970); State v. Haith, 48 N.C. App. 319, 269 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 403, 273 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

Error in failing to submit defendant's guilt of the lesser included offense to the jury is not cured by a verdict convicting defendant of the offense charged. State v. Jones, 6 N.C. App. 712, 171 S.E.2d 17 (1969); State v. Holloway, 7 N.C. App. 147, 171 S.E.2d 475 (1970); State v. Putnam, 24 N.C. App. 570, 211 S.E.2d 493 (1975).

An error in failing to charge upon the lesser degrees of the crime is not cured by a verdict of conviction upon one of a greater degree. State v. Robinson, 188 N.C. 784, 125 S.E. 617 (1924). See also State v. Keaton, 206 N.C. 682, 175 S.E. 296 (1934).

But Evidence Must Support Conviction of Lesser Offense. — This section does not make mandatory the submission to the jury of a lesser included offense where the indictment does not charge such offense and where there is no evidence of such offense. State v. McLean, 2 N.C. App. 460, 163 S.E.2d 125 (1968); State v. Stevenson, 3 N.C. App. 46, 164 S.E.2d 24 (1968).

A court is not required to submit a lesser included offense to the jury when there is no evidence to support such a charge. State v. Carriker, 24 N.C. App. 91, 210 S.E.2d 98 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 287 N.C. 530, 215 S.E.2d 134 (1975); State v. Tidwell, 323 N.C. 668, 374 S.E.2d 577 (1989).

In order to justify submission of a lesser included offense there must be some evidence to support submission of the lesser offenses to the jury. State v. Thompson, 306 N.C. 526, 294 S.E.2d 314 (1982).

Necessity for instructing jury as to included crime of lesser degree than that charged arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. State v. Jones, 264 N.C. 134, 141 S.E.2d 27 (1965); State v. Williams, 2 N.C. App. 194, 162 S.E.2d 688 (1968); State v. Stevenson, 3 N.C. App. 46, 164 S.E.2d 24 (1968); State v. Lilley, 3 N.C. App. 276, 164 S.E.2d 498 (1968); State v. Williams, 275 N.C. 77, 165 S.E.2d 481 (1969); State v. Bailey, 4 N.C. App. 407, 167 S.E.2d 24 (1969); State v. Jones, 6 N.C. App. 712, 171 S.E.2d 17 (1970); State v. Parker, 7 N.C. App. 191, 171 S.E.2d 665 (1970); State v. Murry, 277 N.C. 197, 176 S.E.2d 738 (1970); State v. Carnes, 279 N.C. 549, 184 S.E.2d 235 (1971); State v. Black, 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974); State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976); State v. Putnam, 24 N.C. App. 570, 211 S.E.2d 493 (1975); State v. Mayberry, 38 N.C. App. 509, 248 S.E.2d 402 (1978); State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 731, 268 S.E.2d 201 (1980); State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980); State v. App. 186, 278 S.E.2d 535 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 591, 292 S.E.2d 16 (1982); State v. Gray, 58 N.C. App. 102, 293 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 746, 295 S.E.2d 482 (1982).

Where all the evidence at the trial of a criminal action, if believed by the jury, tends to show that the crime charged in the indictment was committed as alleged therein, and there is no evidence tending to show the commission of a crime of less degree, it is not error for the court to fail to instruct the jury that they may acquit the defendant of the crime charged in the indictment and convict him of a crime of less degree. State v. Cox, 201 N.C. 357, 160 S.E. 358 (1931); State v. Manning, 221 N.C. 70, 18 S.E.2d 821 (1942); State v. Sawyer, 224 N.C. 61, 29 S.E.2d 34 (1944).

The provisions of this section in regard to conviction of a less degree of the crime charged in a bill of indictment applies only where there is some evidence that a less degree of the crime had been committed, and where the State's uncontradicted evidence is to the effect that the crime of rape had been committed and the defendant relies solely upon an alibi, the refusal of the court to charge upon the lesser degrees of the crime or of an attempt is not error. State v. Smith, 201 N.C. 494, 160 S.E. 577 (1931).

Where one is indicted for a crime and under the same bill it is permissible to convict the defendant of a less degree of the same crime and there is evidence tending to support a milder verdict the prisoner is entitled to have the different views presented to the jury under a proper charge, but where there is no evidence to support such milder verdict the court is not required to submit the question of such verdict to the jury. State v. Thacker, 13 N.C. App. 299, 185 S.E.2d 455 (1971), rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 447, 189 S.E.2d 145 (1972).

The necessity for instructing the jury as to an included crime of lesser degree than that charged arises when and only when there is evidence from which the jury could find that such included crime of lesser degree was committed. The presence of such evidence is the determinative factor. Hence, there is no such necessity if the State's evidence tends to show completion of the offense as charged and there is no conflicting evidence relating to elements of the crime charged. Mere contention that the jury might accept the State's evidence in part and might reject it in part will not suffice. State v. McLean, 2 N.C. App. 460, 163 S.E.2d 125 (1968).

A defendant may be convicted of a less degree of the crime charged, or for which he is being tried, when there is evidence to support the milder verdict. State v. Jordan, 226 N.C. 155, 37 S.E.2d 111 (1946).

In a proper case where it is permissible under the indictment to convict defendant of a lesser included offense, the court must still determine that there is evidence tending to support the lesser offense in order to submit it for the jury's consideration. Upon a favorable determination of both issues, that is, that the crime is a lesser included offense and that there is evidence to support it, defendant is entitled to have the instruction on the lesser offense submitted to the jury. State v. Brewer, 325 N.C. 550, 386 S.E.2d 569 (1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 951, 110 S. Ct. 2215, 109 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1990).

When Instruction on Lesser Included Homicides Required. — In a felony murder prosecution under an indictment in the form prescribed by § 15-144, evidence that defendant did not commit the underlying felony requires an instruction upon whatever lesser included homicides the indictment and the evidence support. State v. Thomas, 325 N.C. 583, 386 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

Instructions Not Required Where State's Evidence Is Positive as to Each Element. — Where the State's evidence is positive as to each and every element of the crime charged and there is no conflicting evidence relating to any element of the charged crime, the court is not required to submit an issue as to defendant's guilt or innocence of a lesser included offense. State v. Owen, 24 N.C. App. 598, 211 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 263, 214 S.E.2d 435 (1975); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982); State v. Musselwhite, 59 N.C. App. 477, 297 S.E.2d 181 (1982).

The trial court in a rape prosecution did not err in failing to submit to the jury the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape under former § 14-22 and of assault on a female, where the State's evidence was positive as to each and every element of the crime of rape and there was no conflict in the evidence relating to any element thereof. State v. Flippin, 280 N.C. 682, 186 S.E.2d 917 (1972).

And Uncontradicted. — It is not necessary to submit the lesser included offense if the evidence discloses no conflicting evidence relating to the essential elements of the greater crime. State v. Gray, 58 N.C. App. 102, 293 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 746, 295 S.E.2d 482 (1982).

Where the uncontradicted evidence is that the deceased was murdered by poison, there is no basis for a verdict of second-degree murder or manslaughter. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

Where upon the trial for murder all the evidence tends to show that if the defendant is guilty, he is guilty of the crime of murder in the first degree, the failure of the trial court to charge upon the law of murder in the second degree or manslaughter is not error under this section. State v. Ferrell, 205 N.C. 640, 172 S.E. 186 (1934).

Where all the evidence tends to show that defendants feloniously took money from the person of prosecuting witness by violence and against his will through the use or threatened use of firearms, the court properly limits the jury to a verdict of guilty of robbery with firearms or a verdict of not guilty, there being no evidence warranting court in submitting the question of defendant's guilt of less degrees of the crime. State v. Bell, 228 N.C. 659, 46 S.E.2d 834 (1948).

In a rape case, the trial court did not err in failing to submit the lesser included offenses of assault with intent to commit rape under former § 14-22 and assault on a female where all the State's evidence tended to show commission of rape and the defendant's evidence was that he had never had intercourse with the prosecutrix nor did he touch her in a manner constituting an assault. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

Absence of Specific Request for Instruction. — When there is evidence of guilt of a lesser offense, a defendant is entitled to have the trial court instruct the jury with respect to that lesser included offense even though the defendant makes no request for such an instruction. State v. Lang, 58 N.C. App. 117, 293 S.E.2d 255, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 747, 295 S.E.2d 761 (1982); State v. Gray, 58 N.C. App. 102, 293 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 746, 295 S.E.2d 482 (1982).

If the defendant is entitled to an instruction on the lesser offense, based on the presence of such evidence, it is of no legal significance that defendant's counsel did not make a specific request for the instruction nor that the defendant was subsequently convicted of the greater offense. State v. Williams, 51 N.C. App. 397, 276 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 319, 281 S.E.2d 658 (1981).

Where a defendant's sole defense is one of alibi, he is not entitled to have the jury consider a lesser offense on the theory that jurors may take bits and pieces of the State's evidence and bits and pieces of defendant's evidence and thus find him guilty of a lesser offense not positively supported by the evidence. State v. Brewer, 325 N.C. 550, 386 S.E.2d 569 (1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 951, 110 S. Ct. 2215, 109 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1990).

Defendant Not Entitled to Instruction. — Defendant's testimony was that he knew nothing of any of the controlled substances found in the house, there was no basis on which a jury could find that a lesser offense was committed, and at trial the defendant denied knowledge of all of the controlled substances, not just those not in "plain view;" therefore, the trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury on a lesser included offense of felonious possession of heroin. State v. Agubata, 92 N.C. App. 651, 375 S.E.2d 702 (1989).

In a trafficking by possession case, the trial judge properly refused to instruct on attempt where the State's uncontroverted evidence showed that defendant gave officer a tube sock full of cash and discussed the exchange before the officer placed cocaine in the back seat of his vehicle and left the car. State v. Broome, 136 N.C. App. 82, 523 S.E.2d 448 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 362, 543 S.E.2d 136 (2000).

Error to Charge on Unsupported Lesser Degree. — Where all the evidence tends to show that the crime charged in the indictment was committed, and there is no evidence tending to show the commission of a crime of lesser degree, the principle of lesser included offenses does not apply and it would be erroneous for the court to charge on the unsupported lesser degree. State v. Gray, 58 N.C. App. 102, 293 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 746, 295 S.E.2d 482 (1982).

But Such Error Not Prejudicial. — Error committed by the court in submitting the question of defendant's guilt of a lesser degree of the offense charged cannot be prejudicial to defendant. State v. Chase, 231 N.C. 589, 58 S.E.2d 364 (1950).

In a prosecution for armed robbery, defendant was not prejudiced by error, if any, in the trial court's submission to the jury of the lesser included offense of common-law robbery. State v. Mitchell, 48 N.C. App. 680, 270 S.E.2d 117 (1980).

Instruction as to Lesser Offense Absent Evidence. — If there is evidence of self-defense and no evidence of involuntary manslaughter, it is prejudicial error to submit a charge of involuntary manslaughter in a trial for second-degree murder. State v. Brooks, 46 N.C. App. 833, 266 S.E.2d 3 (1980).

Instructions as to Lesser Degree May Invite Compromise Verdict. — Upon a trial under an indictment for first-degree burglary, there being no announcement by the solicitor (now district attorney) of his intent to seek a milder verdict, the prosecuting witness testified that the defendant broke and entered her dwelling house in the nighttime and assaulted and raped her therein and the defense is alibi, to instruct the jury that it might return a verdict of second-degree burglary is simply to invite a compromise verdict. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

III. LESSER AND INCLUDED OFFENSES.

Crime of accessory after the fact is not included in the charge of the principal crime. State v. Jones, 254 N.C. 450, 119 S.E.2d 213 (1961), commented on in 41 N.C.L. Rev. 118 (1962).

An indictment charging a completed offense is sufficient to support a conviction for attempt to commit the crime charged. This statute applies even though the completed crime and the attempt are not in the same statute. State v. Slade, 81 N.C. App. 303, 343 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 318 N.C. 419, 349 S.E.2d 604 (1986); State v. Bennett, 132 N.C. App. 187, 510 S.E.2d 698 (1999).

Indictment charging defendant with the completed offense of giving a controlled substance to an inmate was sufficient to enable him to adequately prepare for trial and to protect him from being twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, so as to support his conviction of attempt to give a controlled substance to an inmate. State v. Slade, 81 N.C. App. 303, 343 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 318 N.C. 419, 349 S.E.2d 604 (1986).

Murder. — In a prosecution for murder, where the evidence raises a question as to whether or not the killing was intentional, this section requires that the question of the defendant's guilt of manslaughter be submitted to the jury with proper instructions. State v. McNeill, 229 N.C. 377, 49 S.E.2d 733 (1948).

Where there is evidence to support a charge of murder and evidence to support the defendant's plea of homicide by misadventure, and also evidence of manslaughter, this section requires that the less degree of the same crime be submitted to the jury with proper instructions. State v. Childress, 228 N.C. 208, 45 S.E.2d 42 (1947).

Where the evidence in a first-degree murder prosecution is susceptible to the interpretation that defendant killed in self-defense, the court must submit the question of defendant's guilt of manslaughter. State v. Holloway, 7 N.C. App. 147, 171 S.E.2d 475 (1970).

Rape. — An indictment for rape includes an assault with intent to commit rape under former § 14-22. State v. Green, 246 N.C. 717, 100 S.E.2d 52 (1957); State v. Birckhead, 256 N.C. 494, 124 S.E.2d 838 (1962).

Rape of Child Under Age 12. — The offense of assault on a female by a male over the age of 18, § 14-33(b)(2), is not, as a matter of law, a lesser included offense of first-degree rape of a child of the age of 12 or less, under § 14-27.2(a)(1). State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

The offense of assaulting a child under the age of 12, § 14-33(b)(3), is not, as a matter of law, a lesser included offense of first-degree rape of a child of the age of 12 or less, under § 14-27.2(a)(1). State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

The offense of taking indecent liberties with a child under the age of 16, § 14-202.1, is not, as a matter of law, a lesser included offense of first-degree rape of a child of the age of 12 or less, under § 14-27.2(a)(1). State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982), overruling State v. Shaw, 293 N.C. 616, 239 S.E.2d 439 (1977).

Larceny Pursuant to Breaking or Entering. — While it is error for the court to permit the jury to convict based on some abstract theory not supported by the bill of indictment, an indictment charging defendant with larceny pursuant to a burglary was sufficient to uphold defendant's conviction for larceny pursuant to a breaking or entering, as felonious breaking or entering is a lesser degree of the offense of second degree burglary, and this section provides that upon the trial of any indictment the prisoner may be convicted of the crime charged therein or of a lesser degree of the same crime. State v. McCoy, 79 N.C. App. 273, 339 S.E.2d 419 (1986).

Felony Murder While Discharging Firearm into Occupied Building. — In felony murder trial for murder committed during the act of discharging a firearm into an occupied building, a felony under § 14-34.1, where defendant's sole and unequivocal defense was that he was nowhere near the area on the night in question, an instruction on the offense of involuntary manslaughter was not warranted by the evidence. State v. Brewer, 325 N.C. 550, 386 S.E.2d 569 (1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 951, 110 S. Ct. 2215, 109 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1990).

Assault with Intent to Commit Rape. — Where the evidence was sufficient to carry the case to the jury upon the charge of assault with intent to commit rape under former § 14-22 but the jury returned a verdict of guilty of an assault upon a female, the defendant being a male person over 18 years of age, such verdict was authorized by this section. State v. Morgan, 225 N.C. 549, 35 S.E.2d 621 (1945).

Crimes Against Nature. — In a prosecution for the crime against nature, the accused may be convicted of the offense charged therein or the attempt to commit the offense. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

Sodomy. — An assault upon a woman is not a less degree of the crime of sodomy. State v. Jernigan, 255 N.C. 732, 122 S.E.2d 711 (1961).

Assault with a Deadly Weapon. — Where a warrant charges a criminal assault with a deadly weapon, specifying the weapon, the jury is empowered to convict of simple assault, a less degree of the same crime, where the evidence warrants the verdict. State v. Gooding, 251 N.C. 175, 110 S.E.2d 865 (1959).

Assault with a deadly weapon is an essential element of the felony created and defined by § 14-32, being an included less degree of the same crime. State v. Weaver, 264 N.C. 681, 142 S.E.2d 633 (1965).

Assault with a Deadly Weapon with Intent to Kill. — In prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, the court's instruction that the jury might find defendant guilty of a less degree of the crime, including assault with a deadly weapon, if they so found beyond a reasonable doubt, is without error. State v. Elmore, 212 N.C. 531, 193 S.E. 713 (1937); State v. Anderson, 230 N.C. 54, 51 S.E.2d 895 (1949).

An indictment sufficiently charging defendant with assault with a deadly weapon, to wit, a pistol, with intent to kill and inflicting serious injury not resulting in death, includes the offense of assault with a deadly weapon. State v. Caldwell, 269 N.C. 521, 153 S.E.2d 34 (1967).

Aggravated Assault. — Simple assault is a lesser degree of the crime of aggravated assault. State v. Jeffries, 3 N.C. App. 218, 164 S.E.2d 398 (1968).

Burglary in the First Degree. — In a prosecution for burglary in the first degree, it is permissible for the jury to convict the defendant of an attempt to commit burglary in the second degree. State v. Surles, 230 N.C. 272, 52 S.E.2d 880 (1949).

A violation of § 14-54 is a less degree of the felony of burglary in the first degree. State v. Fikes, 270 N.C. 780, 155 S.E.2d 277 (1967); State v. Gaston, 4 N.C. App. 575, 167 S.E.2d 510 (1969).

Where the bill of indictment returned by the grand jury charged all elements of burglary in the first degree, the bill of indictment would have supported a verdict of guilty of either first-degree burglary or second-degree burglary as the evidence might warrant. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 115, 181 S.E.2d 453 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 451, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

Breaking and Entering. — Any person who breaks or enters any building described in § 14-54, with intent to commit any felony or larceny therein, is guilty of a felony. A wrongful breaking or entering into such building, without the intent to commit any felony therein, is a misdemeanor, a lesser included offense within the meaning of this section. State v. Dozier, 19 N.C. App. 740, 200 S.E.2d 348 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 618, 201 S.E.2d 690 (1974).

Arson. — The felony created by § 14-67 is a lesser included offense of the crime of arson. State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Armed Robbery. — An indictment for armed robbery under § 14-87 will support a verdict of guilty of common-law robbery. State v. Jackson, 6 N.C. App. 406, 170 S.E.2d 137 (1969).

In a prosecution for robbery with firearms, an accused may be acquitted of the major charge and convicted of an included or lesser offense, such as common-law robbery, or assault, or larceny from the person, or simple larceny, if a verdict for the included or lesser offense is supported by allegations of the indictment and by evidence on the trial. State v. McLean, 2 N.C. App. 460, 163 S.E.2d 125 (1968); State v. Black, 286 N.C. 191, 209 S.E.2d 458 (1974).

Robbery. — Where the evidence was not sufficient to make out a case of common-law robbery, the court properly submitted the case on larceny from the person. State v. Kirk, 17 N.C. App. 68, 193 S.E.2d 377 (1972).

Larceny from the person is a lesser included offense of common-law robbery, and an indictment for common-law robbery will support a conviction for larceny from the person. State v. Young, 54 N.C. App. 366, 283 S.E.2d 812 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 391, 289 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Testimony of defendants in a prosecution for robbery that they took the pistol from prosecuting witness to prevent him from harming them or some other person, requires the court to submit the question of each defendant's guilt of simple assault to the jury as a lesser offense included in the crime charged, since such verdict would be justified in the event the jury should find that defendants took the pistol without intent to steal it, but were not warranted in doing so on the principle of self-protection. State v. Lunsford, 229 N.C. 229, 49 S.E.2d 410 (1948).

Misdemeanor of larceny is a less degree of the felony of larceny within the meaning of this section. State v. Cooper, 256 N.C. 372, 124 S.E.2d 91 (1962); State v. Summers, 263 N.C. 517, 139 S.E.2d 627 (1965); State v. Respass, 27 N.C. App. 137, 218 S.E.2d 227, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 733, 220 S.E.2d 352 (1975); State v. Daniels, 51 N.C. App. 294, 276 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

Larceny from the Person. — Assault is not a less degree of the crime of larceny from the person. State v. Acrey, 262 N.C. 90, 136 S.E.2d 201 (1964).

Possession of Marijuana. — To prove the offense of possession of over one ounce of marijuana, the State must show possession and that the amount possessed was greater than one ounce. To prove the offense of possession with intent to sell or deliver marijuana, the State must show possession of any amount of marijuana and that the person possessing the substance intended to sell or deliver it. Thus, the two crimes each contain one element that is not necessary for proof of the other crime. One is not a lesser included offense of the other. State v. Gooch, 58 N.C. App. 582, 294 S.E.2d 13, rev'd on other grounds, 307 N.C. 253, 297 S.E.2d 599 (1982).

Barratry. — An attempt to commit barratry is an offense in this State and a defendant may be convicted of an attempt to commit the offense upon an indictment charging the common-law offense of barratry. State v. Batson, 220 N.C. 411, 17 S.E.2d 511, 139 A.L.R. 614 (1941).

§ 15-172. Verdict for murder in first or second degree.

Nothing contained in the statute law dividing murder into degrees shall be construed to require any alteration or modification of the existing form of indictment for murder, but the jury before whom the offender is tried shall determine in their verdict whether the crime is murder in the first or second degree. (1893, c. 85, s. 3; Rev., s. 3271; C.S., s. 4642.)

Cross References. — As to definitions of first and second-degree murder, see § 14-17. As to guilty pleas in capital cases, see § 15A-2001.

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — See State v. Kirksey, 227 N.C. 445, 42 S.E.2d 613 (1947); State v. Talbert, 282 N.C. 718, 194 S.E.2d 822 (1973); State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

Section Codifies Rule That Verdict Specify Degree. — In requiring the jury to determine the degree of homicide of which defendant is guilty, this section merely codified the well-established rule that a verdict which leaves the matter in conjecture will not support a judgment. State v. Talbert, 282 N.C. 718, 194 S.E.2d 822 (1973).

Object of Section. — The object of this section is, of course, to place it beyond doubt in what degree of murder the prisoner was convicted. State v. Wiggins, 171 N.C. 813, 89 S.E. 58 (1916).

The purpose of the requirement that the jury determine whether one charged under the statutory form is guilty of murder in the first or second degree was merely to eliminate that uncertainty when the defendant's plea was not guilty. State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

Section Applies to All Indictments for Murder. — This section applies to all indictments for murder, whether perpetrated by means of poisoning, lying in wait, imprisonment, starving, torture, or otherwise. State v. Matthews, 142 N.C. 621, 55 S.E. 342 (1906); State v. Simmons, 236 N.C. 340, 72 S.E.2d 743 (1952).

Section Only Incidentally Related to Death Penalty. — The statutory requirement that the jury determine the degree of murder of which a defendant is guilty is only incidentally related to the death penalty. State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

Duty Imposed by Section. — By this section it is made the duty of the jury alone to determine in their verdict whether the crime is murder in the first or second degree. State v. Gadberry, 117 N.C. 811, 23 S.E. 477 (1895); State v. Murphy, 157 N.C. 614, 72 S.E. 1075 (1911); State v. Bagley, 158 N.C. 608, 73 S.E. 995 (1912).

What Record Must Show. — The record must show that the jurors have determined in their verdict where the crime is murder in the first or second degree, in order that there may be a proper judgment. State v. Lucas, 124 N.C. 825, 32 S.E. 962 (1899); State v. Truesdale, 125 N.C. 696, 34 S.E. 646 (1899).

Evidence at Trial Determines Charge to Jury. — Where all the evidence at a trial for murder tends to show murder in the first degree in that the murder was committed by poisoning, starvation, lying in wait, imprisonment, torture, or in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a felony, the trial court may instruct the jury that they may render only one of two verdicts, murder in the first degree, or not guilty. But where the evidence tends to show that the killing was with a deadly weapon, and the State in one phase of its case relies on premeditation and deliberation, the presumption is that the murder was in the second degree, with the burden of proving premeditation beyond a reasonable doubt on the State, in order to constitute it murder in the first degree, and under these circumstances it is error for the trial court to fail to charge the jury that they might find the prisoner guilty of murder in the second degree. State v. Newsome, 195 N.C. 552, 143 S.E. 187 (1928); State v. Gause, 227 N.C. 26, 40 S.E.2d 463 (1946).

When the entire evidence shows, and no other reasonable inference can be fairly drawn therefrom, that the murder was committed either by lying in wait or in an attempt to perpetrate a felony, and the controverted question is the identity of prisoner as the murderer, the trial judge does not commit error in charging the jury to render a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree or not guilty. State v. Spevey, 151 N.C. 676, 65 S.E. 995 (1909); State v. Wiggins, 171 N.C. 813, 89 S.E. 58 (1916).

Verdict must be construed according to the charge and the evidence and when these make it certain beyond question, the law has been complied with. State v. Gilchrist, 113 N.C. 673, 18 S.E. 319 (1893); State v. Wiggins, 171 N.C. 813, 89 S.E. 58 (1916).

Procedure upon Failure to Determine Degree. — Where the degree of murder is not expressed in the verdict, the judge should tell the jury to reconsider their finding, for the purpose of specifying the crime, and upon response being made by them of murder in the first degree, the verdict is properly recorded accordingly. State v. Bagley, 158 N.C. 608, 73 S.E. 995 (1912).

Verdict of "guilty as charged" in prosecution under § 15-144 is sufficient to support the judgment when the judge has instructed the jury to return a verdict of murder in the first degree or not guilty and there was no evidence to warrant a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree or manslaughter. In such a situation the verdict will be taken with reference to the charge and the evidence in the case and interpreted as a verdict of guilty of the only charge submitted. This is an application of the general rule that a verdict apparently ambiguous may be given significance and correctly interpreted by reference to the allegations, the facts in evidence, and the instructions of the court. State v. Talbert, 282 N.C. 718, 194 S.E.2d 822 (1973).

When, in a prosecution for homicide upon an indictment drawn under § 15-144, the judge accepts a verdict of "guilty as charged" after having instructed the jury that it might return a verdict of guilty of murder in the first or second degree, or guilty of murder in either degree or manslaughter, such a verdict on such an indictment cannot be sustained. In such case the verdict is a general one without a response as to what grade of homicide the defendant was guilty, and a new trial must be ordered. State v. Talbert, 282 N.C. 718, 194 S.E.2d 822 (1973).

When on the trial of any criminal action in the superior or district court, the State has introduced its evidence and rested its case, the defendant may move to dismiss the action, or for judgment as in case of nonsuit. If the motion is allowed, judgment shall be entered accordingly; and such judgment shall have the force and effect of a verdict of "not guilty" as to such defendant. If the motion is refused and the defendant does not choose to introduce evidence, the case shall be submitted to the jury as in other cases, and the defendant may on appeal urge as ground for reversal, the trial court's denial of his motion without the necessity of the defendant's having taken exception to such denial.

If the defendant introduces evidence, he thereby waives any motion for dismissal or judgment as in case of nonsuit which he may have made prior to the introduction of his evidence and cannot urge such prior motion as ground for appeal. The defendant, however, may make such motion at the conclusion of all the evidence in the case, irrespective of whether or not he made a motion for dismissal or judgment as in case of nonsuit theretofore. If the motion is allowed, or shall be sustained on appeal, it shall in all cases have the force and effect of a verdict of "not guilty." If the motion is refused, the defendant may on appeal, after the jury has rendered its verdict, urge as ground for reversal the trial court's denial of his motion made at the close of all the evidence without the necessity of the defendant's having taken exception to such denial. I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Necessity of Moving for Judgment or Dismissal at Trial. — Although § 15A-1446(d)(5) allows a defendant to appeal on insufficiency of evidence grounds, notwithstanding the fact that no objection, exception or motion was made at trial, this statute is negated by N.C.R.A.P., Rule 10(b)(3), which states that a defendant may not assign as error the insufficiency of the evidence to prove the crime charged unless he moves to dismiss the action or for judgment as in case of nonsuit at trial. State v. Jordan, 321 N.C. 714, 365 S.E.2d 617 (1988).

Means of Raising Objection That Evidence Is Insufficient for Jury. — Objection that the evidence is not sufficient to carry the case to the jury must be raised by motion to nonsuit under this section, or by prayer for instructions to the jury, and may not be raised after verdict by motion for new trial or motion in arrest of judgment. State v. Gaston, 236 N.C. 499, 73 S.E.2d 311 (1952); State v. Wiggs, 269 N.C. 507, 153 S.E.2d 84 (1967).

The objection that the evidence is not sufficient to carry the case to the jury must be raised during the trial by a motion for a compulsory nonsuit under this section or by a prayer for instruction to the jury. State v.

Glover, 270 N.C. 319, 154 S.E.2d 305 (1967); State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972).

In a criminal case the proper motion to test the sufficiency of the State's evidence to carry the case to the jury is a motion to dismiss the action or a motion for judgment as in case of nonsuit. State v. Dickens, 278 N.C. 537, 180 S.E.2d 844 (1971); State v. Everette, 284 N.C. 67, 199 S.E.2d 409 (1973); State v. Holton, 284 N.C. 391, 200 S.E.2d 612 (1973); State v. Chavis, 30 N.C. App. 75, 226 S.E.2d 389, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 778, 229 S.E.2d 33 (1976).

A motion to dismiss under § 15A-1227 is substantively identical to a motion for nonsuit under this section. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

Motion for Nonsuit Challenges Sufficiency of Evidence. — A motion for judgment as in case of nonsuit challenges the sufficiency of the State's evidence to warrant its submission to the jury and to support a verdict of guilty of the criminal offense charged in the warrant or indictment on which the prosecution is based. State v. Vaughan, 268 N.C. 105, 150 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

Defendant's motion for nonsuit at the close of all the evidence draws into question the sufficiency of all of the evidence to go to the jury. State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977).

Defendant's later motion for nonsuit, made at the close of all the evidence, draws into question the sufficiency of all the evidence to go to the jury. State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977).

Whether correct or erroneous, a judgment of nonsuit has the force and effect of a verdict of "not guilty." State v. Ballard, 280 N.C. 479, 186 S.E.2d 372 (1972).

Where indictments contain two separate charges and State takes a voluntary nonsuit upon the first count, defendant's contention that the nonsuit established his innocence of acts charged under that count which also constituted essential elements of the offense charged in the second count must be presented by a plea of former jeopardy or former acquittal, and not by motion for judgment as of nonsuit, under this section, and the failure of a plea of former jeopardy amounts to a waiver of his rights in the premises. State v. Baldwin, 226 N.C. 295, 37 S.E.2d 898 (1946).

Submission of Lesser Degree upon Nonsuit on Offense Charged. — An instruction that the court grants a nonsuit on the offense charged in the indictment, followed by submission of the case on the question of defendants' guilt of a lesser degree of the offense charged, does not amount to a nonsuit on the indictment. State v. Matthews, 231 N.C. 617, 58 S.E.2d 625, cert. denied, 340 U.S. 838, 71 S. Ct. 24, 95 L. Ed. 615 (1950).

Effect of Judgment of Nonsuit on Subsequent Prosecution. — The granting of a motion under this section for judgment of nonsuit, or verdict of not guilty in a criminal prosecution charging defendant with willful neglect or refusal to support and maintain his illegitimate child, does not constitute an adjudication on the issue of paternity, and will not support a plea of former acquittal in a subsequent prosecution under § 49-2. State v. Robinson, 236 N.C. 408, 72 S.E.2d 857 (1952).

Raising Question of Variance. — The defendant in a criminal action may raise the question of a variance between the indictment and the proof by a motion to dismiss the prosecution as in case of nonsuit. This is clearly set forth in State v. Gibson, 170 N.C. 697, 86 S.E. 774 (1915); State v. Harbert, 185 N.C. 760, 118 S.E. 6 (1923); State v. Harris, 195 N.C. 306, 141 S.E. 883 (1928); State v. Grace, 196 N.C. 280, 145 S.E. 399 (1928); State v. Hicks, 233 N.C. 511, 64 S.E.2d 871, cert. denied, 342 U.S. 831, 72 S. Ct. 56, 96 L. Ed. 629 (1951); State v. Overman, 257 N.C. 464, 125 S.E.2d 920 (1962); State v. Bell, 270 N.C. 25, 153 S.E.2d 741 (1967).

Motion Sustained Where Variance Fatal. — Where there is a fatal variance between the indictment and the proof, it is proper to sustain the demurrer to the evidence, or to dismiss the action as in case of nonsuit. State v. Franklin, 204 N.C. 157, 167 S.E. 569 (1933). See also State v. Martin, 199 N.C. 636, 155 S.E. 447 (1930).

Applied in State v. Tankersley, 172 N.C. 955, 90 S.E. 781 (1916); State v. Jenkins, 182 N.C. 818, 108 S.E. 767 (1921); State v. Fulcher, 184 N.C. 663, 113 S.E. 769 (1922); State v. Williams, 187 N.C. 492, 122 S.E. 13 (1924); State v. Sigmon, 190 N.C. 684, 130 S.E. 854 (1925); State v. Pace, 192 N.C. 780, 136 S.E. 11 (1926); State v. II. OTHER MOTIONS COMPARED.

Section 15A-1227 Compared. — Both this section and § 15A-1227 allow motions to dismiss to be made at the close of the State's evidence. However, they are not identical. This section provides that "If the defendant introduces evidence, he thereby waives any motion for dismissal or judgment as in case of nonsuit which he may have made prior to the introduction of his evidence and cannot urge such prior motion as ground for appeal." Although no such provision is contained in § 15A-1227, its enactment did not create a new type of motion to challenge the sufficiency of the evidence. State v. Mendez, 42 N.C. App. 141, 256 S.E.2d 405 (1979).

A challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a conviction is still properly made by either a motion for dismissal or a motion for judgment as in the case of nonsuit. Both motions were known to the law for many years prior to the enactment of § 15A-1227. The motion for dismissal referred to in § 15A-1227 is the same motion for dismissal referred to in this section. Therefore, there is but one motion for dismissal for insufficiency of the evidence to sustain a conviction, and that motion is governed by the provisions of both this section and § 15A-1227. State v. Mendez, 42 N.C. App. 141, 256 S.E.2d 405 (1979).

Cases Under This Section Applicable to § 15A-1227. — A motion for dismissal under § 15A-1227 is identical to a motion to dismiss the action, or for judgment as in the case of nonsuit, under this section in this respect: both statutes allow counsel to make a motion challenging the sufficiency of the evidence at the close of the State's evidence or at the close of all the evidence. Hence, cases dealing with the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand the latter motion made under the older statute, this section, are applicable when ruling on motions made under the more recent statute, § 15A-1227. State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

Motion to dismiss under § 15A-1227(a)(1) for insufficiency of the evidence to go to the jury is tantamount to a motion for nonsuit under this section. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985); State v. Griffin, 319 N.C. 429, 355 S.E.2d 474 (1987); State v. Stocks, 319 N.C. 437, 355 S.E.2d 492 (1987).

No Difference in Motions to Dismiss and for Judgment as in Case of Nonsuit. — As used in this section, there is no difference in legal significance between a motion "to dismiss the action" and a motion "for judgment as in case of nonsuit." State v. Cooper, 275 N.C. 283, 167 S.E.2d 266 (1969); State v. Everhart, 291 N.C. 700, 231 S.E.2d 604 (1977); State v. Lindsay, 45 N.C. App. 514, 263 S.E.2d 364 (1980).

A motion to dismiss will be treated the same as a motion for judgment of nonsuit. State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977).

Motion for directed verdict of not guilty treated as motion for judgment of nonsuit under this section. State v. Holton, 284 N.C. 391, 200 S.E.2d 612 (1973).

The motion for judgment of nonsuit and the motion for a directed verdict of not guilty have the same legal effect. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975); State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Hammonds, 290 N.C. 1, 224 S.E.2d 595 (1976).

And Test for Granting Them Is the Same. — The standard governing the granting or not of a motion as of nonsuit is the same with regard to a motion for a directed verdict. State v. Flannery, 31 N.C. App. 617, 230 S.E.2d 603 (1976).

The test of the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand motions for a directed verdict and for judgment of nonsuit is the same. State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Arrest of Judgment and Judgment of Nonsuit Compared. — An order for arrest of judgment is based upon the insufficiency of the indictment or other defect appearing on the face of the record and it is appealable by the State; a judgment of nonsuit, on the other hand, has the force and effect of verdict of not guilty, and the State may not appeal. State v. Pinkney, 25 N.C. App. 316, 212 S.E.2d 907 (1975).

Civil and Criminal Actions Compared. — This section serves, and was intended to serve, the same purpose in criminal prosecutions as was accomplished by former § 1-183, in civil actions. State v. Fulcher, 184 N.C. 663, 113 S.E. 769 (1922); State v. Sigmon, 190 N.C. 684, 130 S.E. 854 (1925); State v. Norris, 206 N.C. 191, 173 S.E. 14 (1934); State v. Ormond, 211 N.C. 437, 191 S.E. 22 (1937); State v. Hill, 225 N.C. 74, 33 S.E.2d 470 (1945); State v. Bryant, 235 N.C. 420, 70 S.E.2d 186 (1952); State v. Sears, 235 N.C. 623, 70 S.E.2d 907 (1952); State v. Nall, 239 N.C. 60, 79 S.E.2d 354 (1953).

Former § 1-183 was the statute setting forth the procedure to make a motion for judgment of compulsory nonsuit in civil actions and this section is the statute setting forth the procedure to make a motion for judgment of compulsory nonsuit in criminal actions. Jenkins v. Hawthorne, 269 N.C. 672, 153 S.E.2d 339 (1967).

III. QUESTION PRESENTED BY MOTION.

Question Presented. — The question for the court in considering a motion for judgment of nonsuit is whether there is reasonable basis upon which the jury might find that an offense charged in the indictment has been committed and the defendant is the perpetrator, or one of the perpetrators, of it. State v. Price, 280 N.C. 154, 184 S.E.2d 866 (1971); State v. Covington, 290 N.C. 313, 226 S.E.2d 629 (1976); State v. Thomas, 292 N.C. 527, 234 S.E.2d 615 (1977); State v. Hyatt, 32 N.C. App. 623, 233 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 733, 235 S.E.2d 786 (1977); State v. Joyner, 301 N.C. 18, 269 S.E.2d 125 (1980).

A motion for nonsuit presents only the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to carry the case to the jury. State v. Green, 251 N.C. 40, 110 S.E.2d 609 (1959); State v. Thompson, 256 N.C. 593, 124 S.E.2d 728, cert. denied, 371 U.S. 820, 83 S. Ct. 36, 9 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1962).

The test on a motion to dismiss is whether sufficient evidence has been presented to support a finding by the jury that defendant committed an offense with which he is charged. State v. Church, 43 N.C. App. 365, 258 S.E.2d 812 (1979).

Motion for nonsuit brings in question the sufficiency of all the evidence to take the case to the jury. State v. Sallie, 13 N.C. App. 499, 186 S.E.2d 667, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 316, 188 S.E.2d 900 (1972).

On a motion to nonsuit the question is whether, when all of the evidence is considered, there is substantial evidence to support a finding both that an offense charged in the bill of indictment has been committed and that the defendant committed it. State v. Scott, 289 N.C. 712, 224 S.E.2d 185 (1976); State v. Burke, 36 N.C. App. 577, 244 S.E.2d 477 (1978); State v. Riddle, 300 N.C. 744, 268 S.E.2d 80 (1980).

Upon motion for judgment as of nonsuit in a criminal prosecution, the questions before the court are whether there is substantial evidence of each essential element of the crime charged, and whether the accused was the perpetrator of the charged offense. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Lindsay, 45 N.C. App. 514, 263 S.E.2d 364 (1980); State v. LeDuc, 48 N.C. App. 227, 269 S.E.2d 220 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 306 N.C. 62, 291 S.E.2d 607 (1982).

Upon the defendant's motion for judgment of nonsuit in a criminal action, the question for the court is whether there is substantial evidence of each essential element of the offense charged, or of a lesser offense included therein, and of the defendant's being the perpetrator of such offense. State v. Hill, 32 N.C. App. 261, 231 S.E.2d 682 (1977); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

Upon motion for nonsuit, the question is whether there is substantial evidence — direct, circumstantial or both — to support a finding that the offense charged has been committed and that the accused committed it. State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977); State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977); State v. Jenkins, 300 N.C. 578, 268 S.E.2d 458 (1980).

Question for the trial court on a motion to dismiss is whether, upon consideration of the evidence in the light most favorable to the State, there is a reasonable basis upon which the jury might find that the crime charged has been committed and that defendant was a perpetrator of the crime. State v. Shelton, 53 N.C. App. 632, 281 S.E.2d 684 (1981), appeal dismissed, 305 N.C. 306, 290 S.E.2d 707 (1982); State v. Perry, 316 N.C. 87, 340 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

On a motion for nonsuit the sole question for decision is whether upon a consideration of all the evidence admitted — whether competent or incompetent — in the light most favorable to the State, there is substantial evidence to support the finding that the offenses charged in the bills of indictment were committed by defendant. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 406, 183 S.E.2d 680 (1971).

When the court is to rule upon a demurrer to the evidence in a criminal case, it is required merely to ascertain whether there is any competent evidence to sustain the allegations of the indictment, the evidence being construed in the light most favorable to the State. State v. Murdock, 225 N.C. 224, 34 S.E.2d 69 (1945).

When ruling on a defendant's motion to dismiss, the question for the court is whether substantial evidence which will support a reasonable inference of the defendant's guilt has been introduced. In deciding this question, the trial court must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the State. State v. Thomas, 52 N.C. App. 186, 278 S.E.2d 535, cert. denied, 305 N.C. 591, 292 S.E.2d 16 (1982).

When the motion for nonsuit calls into question the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence, the question for the court is whether a reasonable inference of defendant's guilt may be drawn from the circumstances. If so, it is for the jury to decide whether the facts, taken singly or in combination, satisfy them beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty. State v. Mapp, 45 N.C. App. 574, 264 S.E.2d 348 (1980).

On motion to nonsuit, the court is required merely to ascertain whether there is any competent evidence to sustain the allegations of the indictment. State v. Landin, 209 N.C. 20, 182 S.E. 689 (1935). See also State v. Lefevers, 216 N.C. 494, 5 S.E.2d 552 (1939); State v. Alston, 233 N.C. 341, 64 S.E.2d 3 (1951).

In considering a motion to dismiss, it is the duty of the court to ascertain whether there is substantial evidence of each essential element of the offense charged. State v. Smith, 300 N.C. 71, 265 S.E.2d 164 (1980).

On a motion for nonsuit or dismissal, the court must determine whether there is substantial evidence of all the material elements of the offense charged. State v. Avery, 48 N.C. App. 675, 269 S.E.2d 708 (1980).

When a defendant moves under § 15A-1227(a)(2) or under this section for dismissal at the close of all of the evidence, the trial court is to determine whether there is substantial evidence (a) of each essential element of the offense charged, or of a lesser offense included therein, and (b) of the defendant's being the perpetrator of the offense. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Same — Circumstantial Evidence. — When the motion questions the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence, the question for the court is whether a reasonable inference of defendant's guilt may be drawn from the circumstances. State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972); State v. Solomon, 24 N.C. App. 527, 211 S.E.2d 478 (1975); State v. Shelton, 53 N.C. App. 632, 281 S.E.2d 684 (1981), appeal dismissed, 305 N.C. 306, 290 S.E.2d 707 (1982).

When a motion is made for a judgment of nonsuit or for a directed verdict of not guilty, the trial judge must determine whether there is substantial evidence of every essential element of the offense, and it is immaterial whether the substantial evidence is circumstantial, or direct, or both. State v. Jones, 280 N.C. 60, 184 S.E.2d 862 (1971).

When the motion for nonsuit calls into question the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence, the question for the court is whether a reasonable inference of defendant's guilt may be drawn from the circumstances. If so, it is for the jury to decide whether the facts, taken singly or in combination, satisfy them beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is actually guilty. State v. Rowland, 263 N.C. 353, 139 S.E.2d 661 (1965).

Motion Presents Question of Law for Court. — On motion for nonsuit, it is a question of law for the court to determine, in the first instance, whether the evidence adduced, when considered in its light most favorable to the State, is of sufficient probative force to justify the jury in drawing the affirmative inference of guilt. State v. Needham, 235 N.C. 555, 71 S.E.2d 29 (1952).

Whether the State has offered substantial evidence presents a question of law for the trial court. State v. McKinney, 24 N.C. App. 259, 210 S.E.2d 450 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 288 N.C. 113, 215 S.E.2d 578 (1975); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

To withstand defendant's motion for judgment as of nonsuit, there must be substantial evidence against the accused of every essential element that goes to make up the crime charged and whether the State has offered such substantial evidence presents a question of law for the court. State v. Allred, 279 N.C. 398, 183 S.E.2d 553 (1971).

When Jury Question Presented. — If there is any evidence tending to prove the fact of guilt or which reasonably conduces to its conclusion as a fairly logical and legitimate deduction, and not such as merely raises a suspicion or conjecture of guilt, it is for the jury to say whether they are convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of the fact of guilt. State v. Marion, 200 N.C. 715, 158 S.E. 406 (1931); State v. Rhodes, 252 N.C. 438, 113 S.E.2d 917 (1960); State v. Rogers, 252 N.C. 499, 114 S.E.2d 355 (1960).

Weight and Credibility of Evidence Are Jury Questions. — A demurrer to the evidence presents only the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to carry the case to the jury, the weight and credibility of the evidence being for the jury and not the court. State v. Smith, 221 N.C. 400, 20 S.E.2d 360 (1942).

When considering a motion for nonsuit the court is not concerned with the weight of the testimony but only with its sufficiency to carry the case to the jury and sustain the indictment. State v. McNeil, 280 N.C. 159, 185 S.E.2d 156 (1971).

Upon motion to dismiss under this section, it is required that the court ascertain merely where there is any sufficient evidence to sustain the allegations of the indictment and not whether it be true nor whether the jury should believe it. State v. McLeod, 196 N.C. 542, 146 S.E. 409 (1929).

The trial court in considering motions under this section is concerned only with the sufficiency of the evidence to carry the case to the jury and not with its weight. The trial court's function is to test whether a reasonable inference of the defendant's guilt of the crime charged may be drawn from the evidence. State v. Powell, 299 N.C. 95, 261 S.E.2d 114 (1980); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

In ruling on a motion for nonsuit the court does not pass upon the credibility of the witnesses for the prosecution, or take into account any evidence contradicting them offered by the defense. The court merely considers the testimony favorable to the State, assumes it to be true, and determines its legal sufficiency to sustain the allegations of the indictment. Whether the testimony is true or false, and what it proves if it be true, are matters for the jury. State v. Wood, 235 N.C. 636, 70 S.E.2d 665 (1952).

In considering a motion for judgment as of nonsuit, the court is not concerned with the weight of the testimony, or with its truth or falsity, but only with the question of whether there is sufficient evidence for the jury to find that the offense charged has been committed and that defendant committed it. State v. Hines, 286 N.C. 377, 211 S.E.2d 201 (1975); State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 588, 229 S.E.2d 839 (1976), further review denied, 303 N.C. 712, 283 S.E.2d 138 (1981); State v. Flannery, 31 N.C. App. 617, 230 S.E.2d 603 (1976).

The reconciliation of any apparent discrepancy in the testimony, the weight of the evidence, and the credibility of the witnesses are all matters for the jury and not the court. State v. Reeves, 235 N.C. 427, 70 S.E.2d 9 (1952).

The credibility of witnesses and the weight to be given to their testimony is exclusively a matter for the jury. State v. Keller, 50 N.C. App. 364, 273 S.E.2d 741, appeal dismissed, 302 N.C. 400, 279 S.E.2d 354 (1981).

IV. ALLOWANCE OF MOTION.

When Motion Allowed. — When all the evidence, that of the State and that of the defendant, is to the same effect and tends only exculpate the defendant, his motion for judgment as of nonsuit should be allowed. State v. McWilliams, 277 N.C. 680, 178 S.E.2d 476 (1971); State v. Atwood, 290 N.C. 266, 225 S.E.2d 543 (1976).

When the evidence most favorable to the State is sufficient only to raise a suspicion or conjecture that the accused was the perpetrator of the crime charged in the indictment, the motion for judgment as in case of nonsuit should be allowed. State v. Poole, 285 N.C. 108, 203 S.E.2d 786 (1974).

If, when the evidence is considered in the light most favorable to the State, it is sufficient only to raise a suspicion or conjecture as to the commission of the offense, the motion for nonsuit should be allowed. State v. Atwood, 290 N.C. 266, 225 S.E.2d 543 (1976).

If, when the evidence is considered in the light most favorable to the State, it is sufficient only to raise a suspicion or conjecture as to either the commission of the offense or the identity of the defendant as the perpetrator of it, the motion for nonsuit should be allowed, and this is true even though the suspicion aroused by the evidence is strong. State v. Scott, 289 N.C. 712, 224 S.E.2d 185 (1976); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

Mere Suspicion of Guilt Warrants Dismissal. — When the facts and circumstances warranted by the evidence do no more than raise a suspicion of guilt, they are insufficient to make out a case and a motion to dismiss should be allowed. State v. Blizzard, 280 N.C. 11, 184 S.E.2d 851 (1971); State v. McCall, 286 N.C. 472, 212 S.E.2d 132 (1975); State v. Miller, 289 N.C. 1, 220 S.E.2d 572 (1975); State v. Warren, 289 N.C. 551, 223 S.E.2d 317 (1976); State v. Manuel, 291 N.C. 705, 231 S.E.2d 588 (1977); State v. Fletcher, 301 N.C. 515, 271 S.E.2d 913 (1980).

On a motion to dismiss for insufficient evidence, the court must find that there is substantial evidence, whether direct, circumstantial, or both, that the offense charged has been committed and that defendant committed it, in order to properly deny the motion; if, on the other hand, the evidence raises merely a suspicion or conjecture as to either the commission of the offense or defendant's identity as the perpetrator, the motion should be allowed. State v. Collins, 50 N.C. App. 155, 272 S.E.2d 603 (1980).

When a motion for judgment as of nonsuit or a motion to dismiss is lodged in a criminal action, the court must consider all the evidence actually admitted, whether competent or incompetent, in the light most favorable to the State. All contradictions or discrepancies must be resolved in its favor, and it must be given the benefit of every reasonable inference to be drawn from the evidence. When all the evidence is so considered, it is for the court to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to support a finding that the charged offense has been committed and that the defendant was the perpetrator of the offense. If, when so considered, the evidence is only sufficient to raise a suspicion or conjecture that the offense has been committed or that the defendant committed the charged offense, then the motion for judgment as of nonsuit or the motion to dismiss should be allowed. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

Where a complete defense is established by the State's case, on a criminal indictment, the defendant should be allowed to avail himself of a motion for nonsuit under this section. State v. Boyd, 223 N.C. 79, 25 S.E.2d 456 (1943); State v. Watts, 224 N.C. 771, 32 S.E.2d 348 (1944); State v. Jarrell, 233 N.C. 741, 65 S.E.2d 304 (1951).

When the State's evidence presents a complete defense, a defendant's motion for nonsuit should be allowed. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

V. DENIAL OF MOTION.

A. In General.

When Motion Denied. — A motion to dismiss or as of nonsuit upon the evidence in a criminal case will be denied if the evidence is sufficient, considered in the light most favorable to the State, to prove guilty of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Sigmon, 190 N.C. 684, 130 S.E. 854 (1925).

The rule to be applied when considering whether the State has introduced sufficient evidence to withstand a motion for nonsuit is well settled in this jurisdiction. A motion for nonsuit is properly denied when there is any evidence, whether introduced by the State or defendant, which will support the charges contained in the bill of indictment or warrant, considering the evidence in the light most favorable to the State and drawing every reasonable inference, deducible from the evidence, in favor of the State. State v. Everhart, 291 N.C. 700, 231 S.E.2d 604 (1977).

On a motion for judgment of nonsuit the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable for the State, and if there be any competent evidence to support the charge contained in the bill of indictment the case is one for the jury. State v. Scoggins, 225 N.C. 71, 33 S.E.2d 473 (1945); State v. Block, 245 N.C. 661, 97 S.E.2d 243 (1957); State v. Bell, 285 N.C. 746, 208 S.E.2d 506 (1974); State v. Yancey, 291 N.C. 656, 231 S.E.2d 637 (1977).

If, when the evidence is viewed in the light most favorable to the State, there is evidence from which a jury could find that the offense charged has been committed and that defendant committed it, the motion to nonsuit should be overruled. State v. McKenna, 289 N.C. 668, 224 S.E.2d 537, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976).

Motion for directed verdict or for judgment of nonsuit should be denied when, upon such consideration of the evidence, there is substantial evidence to support a finding that an offense charged in the bill of indictment has been committed and the defendant committed it. State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

If there is substantial evidence, whether direct, circumstantial, or both, of all material elements of the offense charged, then the motion for nonsuit must be denied and it is then for the jury to determine whether the evidence establishes guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Coble, 24 N.C. App. 79, 210 S.E.2d 118 (1974); State v. Williams, 38 N.C. App. 138, 247 S.E.2d 630 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 108, 249 S.E.2d 807 (1979).

Motion to nonsuit should be denied if there is substantial evidence tending to prove each essential element of the offense charged. This rule applies whether the evidence is direct or circumstantial, or a combination of both. State v. Stephens, 244 N.C. 380, 93 S.E.2d 431 (1956); State v. Joyner, 301 N.C. 18, 269 S.E.2d 125 (1980).

Defendant's motion must be denied if the State has offered substantial evidence against defendant of every element of the crime charged. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

Whether the evidence is direct, circumstantial, or both, if there is evidence from which a jury could find that the offense charged has been committed and that defendant committed it, the motion to nonsuit should be overruled. State v. Cummings, 301 N.C. 374, 271 S.E.2d 277 (1980).

When there is sufficient evidence, direct or circumstantial, from which the jury could find that the charged offense has been committed and that defendant was the person who committed it, the motion should be denied. State v. McNeil, 280 N.C. 159, 185 S.E.2d 156 (1971); State v. Reynolds, 18 N.C. App. 10, 195 S.E.2d 581 (1973); State v. Mull, 24 N.C. App. 502, 211 S.E.2d 515 (1975); State v. Covington, 290 N.C. 313, 226 S.E.2d 629 (1976); State v. Mull, 24 N.C. App. 502, 211 S.E.2d 515 (1975); State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1050, 97 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 2d 766, 429 U.S. 1123, 97 S. Ct. 1160, 51 L. Ed. 2d 573 (1977); State v. Abrams, 29 N.C. App. 144, 223 S.E.2d 516 (1976); State v. Dangerfield, 32 N.C. App. 608, 233 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 642, 235 S.E.2d 63 (1977); State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980); State v. Owen, 51 N.C. App. 429, 276 S.E.2d 478 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 154, 289 S.E.2d 382 (1982).

Motion challenging the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence to go to the jury should be denied if there is evidence, considered in the light most favorable to the State, from which the jury could find that a crime has been committed and that defendant committed it. State v. Solomon, 24 N.C. App. 527, 211 S.E.2d 478 (1975).

The motion for nonsuit must be denied where there is sufficient evidence that the offense charged was committed and that the defendant committed it. State v. Hales, 32 N.C. App. 729, 233 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 732, 235 S.E.2d 782 (1977).

If there is any competent evidence tending to establish each material element of the offense charged in the bill of indictment the motion to dismiss or for nonsuit must be overruled. State v. Thomas, 292 N.C. 251, 232 S.E.2d 411 (1977).

Where there is any competent evidence to support the allegations of the indictment, the motion to dismiss is properly denied. State v. Shelton, 53 N.C. App. 632, 281 S.E.2d 684 (1981), appeal dismissed, 305 N.C. 306, 290 S.E.2d 707 (1982).

If there is any evidence tending to prove the fact of guilt, or which reasonably leads to that conclusion as a logical and legitimate deduction, the motion must be denied. State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977); State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977).

If there be any evidence tending to prove the fact in issue, or which reasonably conduces to its conclusion as a fairly logical and legitimate deduction, and not merely such as raises a suspicion or conjecture in regard to it, the case should be submitted to the jury. State v. Bogan, 266 N.C. 99, 145 S.E.2d 374 (1965); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

A motion for judgment as of nonsuit should be denied if there is any evidence tending to prove the fact in issue, or which reasonably conduces the conclusion of guilt as a fairly logical and legitimate deduction, but evidence which merely raises a suspicion or conjecture of the fact of guilt is insufficient to be submitted to the jury. State v. Stephenson, 218 N.C. 258, 10 S.E.2d 819 (1940); State v. Boyd, 223 N.C. 79, 25 S.E.2d 456 (1943); State v. Kirkman, 224 N.C. 778, 32 S.E.2d 328 (1944); State v. Murphy, 225 N.C. 115, 33 S.E.2d 588 (1945); State v. Simmons, 240 N.C. 780, 83 S.E.2d 904 (1954).

Where the evidence for the prosecution is sufficient to make out a case, nonsuit on the ground that the defendant's evidence tended to establish a defense is properly denied. State v. Werst, 232 N.C. 330, 59 S.E.2d 835 (1950).

A motion for judgment of nonsuit must be denied, if there be any substantial evidence — more than a scintilla — to prove the allegations of the indictment. State v. Weinstein, 224 N.C. 645, 31 S.E.2d 920, cert. denied, 324 U.S. 849, 65 S. Ct. 689, 89 L. Ed. 1410 (1944).

If there is any evidence which reasonably tends to show guilt of the offense charged and from which a jury might legitimately convict, a motion for nonsuit should be denied. State v. McWilliams, 277 N.C. 680, 178 S.E.2d 476 (1971).

Where a motion is not limited to a single count or to any one degree of the crimes charged, but is addressed to the entire bill or to both counts as a whole, it cannot be allowed to support either count or any degree of either count. State v. Marsh, 234 N.C. 101, 66 S.E.2d 684 (1951).

A motion for judgment as of nonsuit addressed to the entire bill is properly overruled if there is evidence sufficient to support a conviction of the crime charged or of an included crime. State v. Virgil, 263 N.C. 73, 138 S.E.2d 777 (1964); State v. Rowland, 263 N.C. 353, 139 S.E.2d 661 (1965).

When State offers evidence of corpus delicti in addition to defendant's extrajudicial confessions, the defendant's motion to nonsuit is correctly denied. State v. Whitfield, 51 N.C. App. 241, 275 S.E.2d 540 (1981).

Motion will not lie for failure of the State to offer evidence of a nonessential averment in the indictment, when each essential element of the offense is supported by competent evidence. State v. Atkinson, 210 N.C. 661, 188 S.E. 73 (1936).

B. Appeal from Denial of Motion.

Scope of Appellate Review. — On appeal in criminal cases the Supreme Court cannot pass upon the weight of evidence, but only upon whether there is sufficient evidence to support conviction. State v. Shoup, 226 N.C. 69, 36 S.E.2d 697 (1946).

Supreme Court Not to Weigh Evidence. — This section provides that if on the motion the judgment of nonsuit is allowed on appeal, it shall, in all cases, have the force and effect of a verdict of not guilty. This is not, therefore, the case of a new trial for some error of the judge, but is a verdict by the court of not guilty, which theretofore was without precedent. But the statute certainly did not intend that the Supreme Court should weigh the evidence and render a verdict. State v. Cooke, 176 N.C. 731, 97 S.E. 171 (1918).

Effect of Reversal of Judgment of Guilty. — Under the provisions of this section the reversal of a judgment of guilty has the force and effect of a verdict of "not guilty." State v. Corey, 199 N.C. 209, 153 S.E. 923 (1930).

Where defendant's motion to nonsuit was allowed in the Supreme Court, this ruling was tantamount to a verdict of not guilty. State v. Smith, 236 N.C. 748, 73 S.E.2d 901 (1953); State v. Wooten, 239 N.C. 117, 79 S.E.2d 254 (1953).

Appeal of Denial of Motion Without Exception in Record. — A defendant may properly present on appeal the questions enumerated in N.C.R.A.P., Rule 10(a) without taking any exceptions or making any assignments of error in the record and may properly present for review the denial of his motion for nonsuit under this section without making any exception in the record. However, in both these situations, the defendant must still bring those questions forward in his brief, argue them and cite authorities in support of his arguments. Failure to do so means that those questions are not properly presented for review. State v. Samuels, 298 N.C. 783, 260 S.E.2d 427 (1979).

Question on Appeal Where Defendant Offers Evidence. — Where defendant offers evidence, the only question on appeal is whether the court erred in the denial of the motion made by defendant at the close of all the evidence. State v. Leggett, 255 N.C. 358, 121 S.E.2d 533 (1961).

Where defendant offers evidence in his own behalf, his assignment of error must be directed to the court's refusal to grant his motion for compulsory nonsuit at the close of all the evidence. State v. Jones, 6 N.C. App. 712, 171 S.E.2d 17 (1969).

The denial of defendant's motion to dismiss at the close of the State's evidence was not properly at issue on appeal, where defendant chose to offer evidence after his motion was denied and thereby waived appellate review of the trial judge's decision. State v. Rasor, 319 N.C. 577, 356 S.E.2d 328 (1987).

Under this section, a defendant who introduces evidence waives any motion for dismissal or nonsuit made prior to the introduction of his evidence and cannot urge the prior motion as grounds for appeal. State v. Smith, 320 N.C. 404, 358 S.E.2d 329 (1987).

Where defendant chose to offer evidence after his motion to dismiss was denied, he thereby waived appellate review of the trial judge's decision. State v. Harris, 323 N.C. 112, 371 S.E.2d 689 (1988).

Supreme Court Will Consider Only Denial of Motion Made at Close of All the Evidence. — Where defendant offered evidence after his motion for judgment as of nonsuit at the close of the State's evidence, the Supreme Court on appeal will consider only the denial of the motion made at the close of all the evidence, and the court must act in light of all the evidence. State v. Robbins, 275 N.C. 537, 169 S.E.2d 858 (1969).

Consideration of Entire Evidence on Appeal. — Where a defendant in a criminal action desires to except to the sufficiency of the evidence to convict him, his excepting, under this section, at the close of the State's evidence, and upon the overruling of his motion to nonsuit, excepting at the close of all the evidence, brings his exception to the Supreme Court on appeal upon the sufficiency of the entire evidence to convict, and is the proper procedure for that purpose. State v. Kelly, 186 N.C. 365, 119 S.E. 755 (1923).

Where both before and after he had introduced evidence, the defendant moved to dismiss the prosecution as in case of nonsuit, and duly excepted to the court's denial of his motion, the exceptions, therefore, required a consideration of the entire evidence. State v. Pasour, 183 N.C. 793, 111 S.E. 779 (1922).

An exception to a motion to dismiss in a criminal action taken after the close of the State's evidence, and renewed by defendant after the introduction of his own evidence, does not confine the appeal to the State's evidence alone, and a conviction will be sustained under the second exception if there is any sufficient evidence on the whole record of the defendant's guilt. State v. Brinkley, 183 N.C. 720, 110 S.E. 783 (1922).

A motion as of nonsuit in a criminal case at the close of the State's evidence, renewed after all the evidence has been introduced, does not confine its sufficiency to the time of the first motion, and will be denied if there is sufficient evidence in the State's behalf viewing all the evidence in its entirety. State v. Earp, 196 N.C. 164, 145 S.E. 23 (1928).

Upon appeal from the denial of a motion as of nonsuit in a criminal action, review of the evidence is not confined to the State's evidence alone, but all the evidence in the State's favor, taken in the light most favorable to the State and giving it every reasonable intendment therefrom, will be considered, and where there is sufficient evidence of the defendant's guilt upon the whole record, the action of the trial judge in denying the motion of nonsuit will be upheld. State v. Lawrence, 196 N.C. 562, 146 S.E. 395 (1929).

When upon the trial of a criminal action, the State produces its evidence and rests, and the defendant preserves his exception to the refusal of his motion for judgment as of nonsuit, and, after offering evidence and the case closed, defendant renews his motion for judgment as of nonsuit, the court must act, not only in the light of the evidence of the State, but of all the evidence; and, in such case, the defendant is entitled to the benefit only of his exception to the refusal of the latter motion. State v. Norton, 222 N.C. 418, 23 S.E.2d 301 (1942).

Defendant's exception to the denial of his motion to dismiss, made at the close of all of the evidence, presented the issue of the sufficiency of all of the evidence to go to the jury. Therefore, for purposes of reviewing this assignment of error, the court would consider all of the evidence introduced at trial, and would not determine whether that evidence was competent. State v. Evangelista, 319 N.C. 152, 353 S.E.2d 375 (1987).

Later Testimony of Codefendant Not Considered. — Where the defendant had not offered evidence, he was entitled to have his motion for nonsuit passed upon based on the facts in evidence when the State rested its case, and the Court of Appeals did not consider the later testimony of the codefendant. State v. Berryman, 10 N.C. App. 649, 179 S.E.2d 875 (1971).

Where evidence was substantially similar to that introduced at former trial, decision of the Supreme Court on the former appeal that evidence was sufficient to be submitted to the jury is res judicata on question of nonsuit or sufficiency of evidence. State v. Stone, 226 N.C. 97, 36 S.E.2d 704 (1946).

Defendant's exception to the denial of his motion to dismiss, made at the close of all of the evidence, presented the issue of the sufficiency of all of the evidence to go to the jury. Therefore, for purposes of reviewing this assignment of error, the court would consider all of the evidence introduced at trial, and would not determine whether that evidence was competent. State v. Evangelista, 319 N.C. 152, 353 S.E.2d 375 (1987).

VI. EVIDENCE.

Substantial evidence is such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion. State v. Smith, 300 N.C. 71, 265 S.E.2d 164 (1980); State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

Terms "more than a scintilla of evidence" and "substantial evidence" are in reality the same, and simply mean that the evidence must be existing and real, not just seeming or imaginary. State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

"No Evidence to Go to Jury" Not Taken Literally. — When it is said that there is no evidence to go to the jury, it does not mean that there is literally and absolutely none, for as to this there could be no room for any controversy, but there is none which ought reasonably to satisfy the jury that the fact sought to be proved is established. State v. Woodell, 211 N.C. 635, 191 S.E. 334 (1937).

Evidence Required to Withstand Motion. — There must be substantial evidence of all material elements of the offense to withstand the motion to dismiss. State v. Bogan, 266 N.C. 99, 145 S.E.2d 374 (1965); State v. Rigsbee, 285 N.C. 708, 208 S.E.2d 656 (1974); State v. McKinney, 24 N.C. App. 259, 210 S.E.2d 450 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 288 N.C. 113, 215 S.E.2d 578 (1975); State v. McKinney, 288 N.C. 113, 215 S.E.2d 578 (1975); State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977).

Upon motions for directed verdict of not guilty and nonsuit, the court must find that there is substantial evidence both that an offense charged has been committed and that the defendant committed it before it can overrule the motions. State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 512, 223 S.E.2d 303, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976); State v. Avery, 48 N.C. App. 675, 269 S.E.2d 708 (1980).

To withstand defendant's motion to dismiss, the State must have presented evidence of every essential element of the crime. State v. Church, 43 N.C. App. 365, 258 S.E.2d 812 (1979).

Evidence May Be Either Circumstantial or Direct. — There must be substantial evidence of all material elements of the offense to withstand the motion to dismiss, and it is immaterial whether the substantial evidence is circumstantial or direct, or both. State v. Poole, 285 N.C. 108, 203 S.E.2d 786 (1974); State v. Minor, 290 N.C. 68, 224 S.E.2d 180 (1976).

The test of the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand the motion for judgment of nonsuit is the same whether the evidence is circumstantial, direct or both. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980); State v. LeDuc, 48 N.C. App. 227, 269 S.E.2d 220 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 306 N.C. 62, 291 S.E.2d 607 (1982); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

Standard of Proof Not Same as for Conviction. — A trial judge, in passing upon a motion for a judgment as of nonsuit, under the provisions of this section is not bound by the measure or quantum of proof by which the State must prove a defendant's guilt before the jury can convict him. State v. Davenport, 227 N.C. 475, 42 S.E.2d 686 (1947).

Evidence Need Not Exclude Every Reasonable Hypothesis of Innocence. — The trial court is not required to determine that the evidence excludes every reasonable hypothesis of innocence before denying a defendant's motion to dismiss. State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982); State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Circumstantial Evidence Need Not Point Unerringly to Defendant's Guilt. — Where all of the evidence introduced by the State is circumstantial in nature, it is not necessary that such evidence must establish facts so connected and related as to point unerringly to defendant's guilt and exclude any other reasonable hypothesis, but only that there be substantial evidence of all elements of the crime sufficient to submit the case to the jury. State v. Griffin, 18 N.C. App. 14, 195 S.E.2d 569 (1973).

There must be legal evidence of the fact in issue and not merely such as raises a suspicion or conjecture in regard to it. State v. Bass, 253 N.C. 318, 116 S.E.2d 772 (1960).

Evidence Raising Suspicion Only. — Evidence that does no more than raise a suspicion, somewhat strong, perhaps, of a crime and the defendant's guilt, is not enough, and demurrer to the evidence will be sustained. State v. Carter, 204 N.C. 304, 168 S.E. 204 (1933).

Where the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to the State, on motion by defendants for judgment as of nonsuit in a criminal prosecution, raises no more than a suspicion as to the guilt of defendants, the same is insufficient to support a verdict of guilt and the motion must be allowed. State v. Heglar, 225 N.C. 220, 34 S.E.2d 76 (1945).

On the trial of several defendants, upon an indictment for robbery, where the evidence against one of the defendants raises no more than a suspicion of his guilt, a motion to dismiss as to such defendant should be allowed. State v. Ham, 224 N.C. 128, 29 S.E.2d 449 (1944).

Mere Possibility or Conjecture Insufficient. — Evidence which merely shows it possible for the fact in issue to be as alleged, or which raises a mere conjecture that it was so, is an insufficient foundation for a verdict and should not be left to a jury. State v. Glenn, 251 N.C. 156, 110 S.E.2d 791 (1959).

Upon a motion for judgment of nonsuit the evidence is to be considered in the light most favorable for the State, but evidence which merely suggests the possibility of guilt or which raises only a conjecture is insufficient to require submission to the jury. State v. Guffey, 252 N.C. 60, 112 S.E.2d 734 (1960).

Defendant's motion to dismiss must be considered in light of all the evidence introduced by the State, as well as that introduced by defendant. State v. Perry, 316 N.C. 87, 340 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

Renewal of the motion to dismiss at the conclusion of all the evidence compels the court to consider the motion in light of all the evidence presented at trial. State v. Britt, 87 N.C. App. 152, 360 S.E.2d 291 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 475, 364 S.E.2d 924 (1988).

Evidence Considered in Light Most Favorable to State. — On a motion for judgment as of nonsuit in a criminal case the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the State. State v. Marion, 200 N.C. 715, 158 S.E. 406 (1931); State v. Herndon, 223 N.C. 208, 25 S.E.2d 611, cert. denied, 320 U.S. 759, 64 S. Ct. 67, 88 L. Ed. 452 (1943). See State v. McMahan, 224 N.C. 476, 31 S.E.2d 357 (1944); State v. Fulk, 232 N.C. 118, 59 S.E.2d 617 (1950); State v. Hendrick, 232 N.C. 447, 61 S.E.2d 349 (1950); State v. Jarrell, 233 N.C. 741, 65 S.E.2d 304 (1951); State v. Holland, 234 N.C. 354, 67 S.E.2d 272 (1951); State v. Reeves, 253 N.C. 427, 70 S.E.2d 9 (1952); State v. Simmons, 240 N.C. 780, 83 S.E.2d 904 (1954); State v. Neal, 248 N.C. 544, 103 S.E.2d 722 (1958); State v. Glenn, 251 N.C. 156, 110 S.E.2d 791 (1959); State v. Rhodes, 252 N.C. 438, 113 S.E.2d 917 (1960); State v. Rogers, 252 N.C. 499, 114 S.E.2d 355 (1960); State v. Downey, 253 N.C. 348, 117 S.E.2d 39 (1960); State v. Bogan, 266 N.C. 99, 145 S.E.2d 374 (1965); State v. Allred, 279 N.C. 398. 183 S.E.2d 553 (1971); State v. Jones, 280 N.C. 60, 184 S.E.2d 862 (1971); State v. Bolin, 281 N.C. 415, 189 S.E.2d 235 (1972); State v. Ferguson, 17 N.C. App. 367, 194 S.E.2d 219 (1973); State v. White, 18 N.C. App. 31, 195 S.E.2d 576, appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 587, 196 S.E.2d 811 (1973); State v. Reynolds, 18 N.C. App. 10, 195 S.E.2d 581 (1973); State v. Atwood, 290 N.C. 266, 225 S.E.2d 543 (1976); State v. Waite, 32 N.C. App. 279, 232 S.E.2d 278 (1977); State v. Hales, 32 N.C. App. 729, 233 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 732, 235 S.E.2d 782 (1977); State v. McRae, 58 N.C. App. 225, 292 S.E.2d 778 (1982); State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

In considering a motion under this section, the evidence most favorable to the State must be considered as true. State v. Poole, 285 N.C. 108, 203 S.E.2d 786 (1974).

Upon a motion for judgment of nonsuit, the evidence by the State is to be deemed true and is to be considered in the light most favorable to the State. State v. Madden, 292 N.C. 114, 232 S.E.2d 656 (1977).

Upon a motion for judgment as of nonsuit, the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the State and the court will not pass upon its weight or the credibility of the witnesses. State v. Rountree, 181 N.C. 535, 106 S.E. 669 (1921); State v. Atlantic Ice & Coal Co., 210 N.C. 742, 188 S.E. 412 (1936); State v. Johnson, 226 N.C. 671, 40 S.E.2d 113 (1946). See State v. Eubanks, 209 N.C. 758, 184 S.E. 839 (1936). See also State v. Mann, 219 N.C. 212, 13 S.E.2d 247, 132 A.L.R. 1309 (1941); State v. Webb, 233 N.C. 382, 64 S.E.2d 268 (1951); State v. McLamb, 235 N.C. 251, 69 S.E.2d 537 (1952); State v. Robbins, 243 N.C. 161, 90 S.E.2d 322 (1955); State v. Edmundson, 244 N.C. 693, 94 S.E.2d 844 (1956); State v. Gay, 251 N.C. 78, 110 S.E.2d 458 (1959).

The court is required, in a motion for judgment of nonsuit, to consider all the State's voluminous and interlocking evidence in the light most favorable to it. State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 377 U.S. 978, 84 S. Ct. 1884, 12 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1964).

On motion for judgment as of nonsuit, the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the State, and the State is entitled to every reasonable inference therefrom. State v. Beaver, 266 N.C. 115, 145 S.E.2d 330 (1965); State v. Moore, 279 N.C. 455, 183 S.E.2d 546 (1971); State v. Berryman, 10 N.C. App. 649, 179 S.E.2d 875 (1971); State v. Dull, 289 N.C. 55, 220 S.E.2d 344 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Mull, 24 N.C. Batts, 303 N.C. 155, 277 S.E.2d 385 (1981); State v. Owen, 51 N.C. App. 429, 276 S.E.2d 478 (1981), 305 N.C. 154, 289 S.E.2d 382 (1982); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982); State v. Dow, 70 N.C. App. 82, 318 S.E.2d 883 (1984).

On motion for nonsuit in a criminal case the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the State, the State is entitled to every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn from the evidence. State v. Sallie, 13 N.C. App. 499, 186 S.E.2d 667, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 316, 188 S.E.2d 900 (1972); State v. McCall, 286 N.C. 472, 212 S.E.2d 132 (1975); State v. Jackson, 306 N.C. 642, 295 S.E.2d 383 (1982).

Motion to nonsuit requires the trial judge to consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the State, take it as true, and give the State the benefit of every reasonable inference to be drawn therefrom. State v. McNeil, 280 N.C. 159, 185 S.E.2d 156 (1971); State v. Miller, 289 N.C. 1, 220 S.E.2d 572 (1975); State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 512, 223 S.E.2d 303, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976); State v. Biggs, 289 N.C. 522, 223 S.E.2d 371 (1976); State v. Haywood, 295 N.C. 709, 249 S.E.2d 429 (1978); State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980); State v. Cummings, 301 N.C. 374, 271 S.E.2d 277 (1980); State v. Fletcher, 301 N.C. 515, 271 S.E.2d 913 (1980).

On a motion for nonsuit in a criminal action, the evidence is to be taken in the light most favorable to the State, and it is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable intendment upon the evidence, and every reasonable inference to be drawn therefrom. State v. Fleming, 194 N.C. 42, 138 S.E. 342 (1927). See also, State v. Lawrence, 196 N.C. 562, 146 S.E. 395 (1929); State v. Durham, 201 N.C. 724, 161 S.E. 398 (1931); State v. Smoak, 213 N.C. 79, 195 S.E. 72 (1938); State v. Adams, 213 N.C. 243, 195 S.E. 822 (1938); State v. Hammonds, 216 N.C. 67, 3 S.E.2d 439 (1939); State v. Brown, 218 N.C. 415, 11 S.E.2d 321 (1940); State v. Block, 245 N.C. 661, 97 S.E.2d 243 (1957); State v. Avent, 253 N.C. 580, 118 S.E.2d 47 (1961), judgment vacated, 373 U.S. 375, 83 S. Ct. 1311, 10 L. Ed. 2d 420 (1963), rev'd on other grounds, 262 N.C. 425, 137 S.E.2d 161 (1964); State v. Walker, 266 N.C. 269, 145 S.E.2d 833 (1966); State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971); State v. McKinney, 288 N.C. 113, 215 S.E.2d 578 (1975); State v. Carter, 289 N.C. 35, 220 S.E.2d 313 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Abrams, 29 N.C. App. 144, 223 S.E.2d 516 (1976); State v. Flannery, 31 N.C. App. 617, 230 S.E.2d 603 (1976); State v. Dangerfield, 32 N.C. App. 608, 233 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 642, 235 S.E.2d 63 (1977); State v. Powell, 299 N.C. 95, 261 S.E.2d 114 (1980); State v. Smith, 300 N.C. 71, 265 S.E.2d 164 (1980); State v. Jenkins, 300 N.C. 578, 268 S.E.2d 458 (1980); State v. Joyner, 301 N.C. 18, 269 S.E.2d 125 (1980); State v. McNeil, 46 N.C. App. 533, 265 S.E.2d 416, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 560, 270 S.E.2d 114 (1980); State v. Avery, 48 N.C. App. 675, 269 S.E.2d 708 (1980); State v. Collins, 50 N.C. App. 155, 272 S.E.2d 603 (1980); State v. Mettrick, 54 N.C. App. 1, 283 S.E.2d 139 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 642, 289 S.E.2d 354 (1982).

In passing upon a motion for judgment as of nonsuit, the trial judge must consider all the evidence admitted, whether competent or incompetent, in the light most favorable to the State, giving the State the benefit of every reasonable inference to be drawn from the evidence and considering so much of defendant's evidence as may be favorable to the State. State v. Hines, 286 N.C. 377, 211 S.E.2d 201 (1975); State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 588, 229 S.E.2d 839 (1976), further review denied, 303 N.C. 712, 283 S.E.2d 138 (1981).

Upon a motion as of nonsuit in a criminal action, made at the close of the State's evidence and renewed at the close of all of the evidence, all the evidence, whether offered by the State or elicited from defendant's witnesses, will be considered in the light most favorable to the State, and it is entitled to every reasonable intendment thereon and every reasonable inference therefrom, and only evidence favorable to the State will be considered, the weight and credibility of the evidence being for the jury. State v. Shipman, 202 N.C. 518, 163 S.E. 657 (1932); State v. Ammons, 204 N.C. 753, 169 S.E. 631 (1933); State v. Mann, 219 N.C. 212, 13 S.E.2d 247, 132 A.L.R. 1309 (1941).

In considering a motion to dismiss the action under the statute, the appellate court is merely to ascertain whether there is any evidence to sustain the indictment; and in deciding the question the appellate court must not forget that the State is entitled to the most favorable interpretation of the circumstances and all inferences that may fairly be drawn from them. State v. Carlson, 171 N.C. 818, 89 S.E. 30 (1916); State v. Rountree, 181 N.C. 535, 106 S.E. 669 (1921); State v. Carr, 196 N.C. 129, 144 S.E. 698 (1928).

Upon defendant's motion to dismiss, all the evidence favorable to the State must be considered, such evidence must be deemed true and considered in the light most favorable to the State, and the State is entitled to every inference of fact which may be reasonably deduced therefrom. State v. Stanley, 74 N.C. App. 178, 327 S.E.2d 902, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 546, 335 S.E.2d 318 (1985).

When defendant moves under § 15A-1227(a)(2) or under this section for dismissal at the close of all the evidence, the trial court is to view all of the evidence in the light most favorable to the state and give the state all reasonable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence supporting the charges against the defendant. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Renewal of the motion to dismiss at the conclusion of all the evidence compels the court to consider the motion in light of all the evidence presented at trial. State v. Britt, 87 N.C. App. 152, 360 S.E.2d 291 (1987).

Whether True or False. — For purposes of ruling on the motion, the court takes as true all of the State's evidence; whether the testimony is true or false and what it proves or fails to prove are matters for the jury. State v. Joyner, 301 N.C. 18, 269 S.E.2d 125 (1980).

Any contradictions and discrepancies in the evidence are resolved in favor of the State for the purpose of considering a motion for nonsuit. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Reasonable Inferences Unfavorable to State Must Be Ignored. — If the trial court determines that a reasonable inference of the defendant's guilt may be drawn from the evidence, it must deny the defendant's motion for nonsuit and send the case to the jury even though the evidence may also support reasonable inferences of the defendant's innocence. State v. McNeil, 46 N.C. App. 533, 265 S.E.2d 416, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 560, 270 S.E.2d 114 (1980).

Evidence favorable to the State is to be considered as a whole in determining its sufficiency. State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

Only incriminating evidence need be considered upon defendant's motion as of nonsuit under this section, and contradictions in the inculpatory testimony and equivocations of some of the State's witnesses, which affects the weight or credibility of the evidence but not its competency, need not be taken into account in determining whether there is any competent evidence to sustain the allegations of the indictment. State v. Satterfield, 207 N.C. 118, 176 S.E. 466 (1934). See also State v. Moses, 207 N.C. 139, 176 S.E. 267 (1934).

Defendant's Evidence May Be Considered. — In considering a motion to dismiss made at the close of all the evidence, the defendant's evidence as well as the State's evidence may be considered. State v. Davis, 80 N.C. App. 523, 342 S.E.2d 530 (1986).

In reviewing a motion to dismiss at the conclusion of all the evidence, the court must consider any evidence presented by defendant which rebuts the inference of guilt, so long as it is not contradicted by any of the State's evidence. State v. Britt, 87 N.C. App. 152, 360 S.E.2d 291 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 475, 364 S.E.2d 924 (1988).

Defendant's Evidence Conflicting with State's Evidence Not Considered. — In considering a motion for judgment of nonsuit, evidence of the defendant which is favorable to the State is considered, but his evidence in conflict with that of the State is not considered. State v. Price, 280 N.C. 154, 184 S.E.2d 866 (1971); State v. Jacobs, 31 N.C. App. 582, 230 S.E.2d 550 (1976); State v. Banks, 31 N.C. App. 667, 230 S.E.2d 429 (1976), cert. denied, 292 N.C. 260, 233 S.E.2d 393 (1977); State v. Cooley, 47 N.C. App. 376, 268 S.E.2d 87, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 96, 273 S.E.2d 442 (1980).

In ruling on defendant's motions for nonsuit or for directed verdict of not guilty the trial judge must consider the State's evidence in the light most favorable to the State without considering the evidence of defendant in conflict therewith. State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

All of the evidence favorable to the State is considered, and defendant's evidence relating to matters of defense or defendant's evidence in conflict with that of the State is not considered. State v. McKinney, 24 N.C. App. 259, 210 S.E.2d 450 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 288 N.C. 113, 215 S.E.2d 578 (1975); State v. Williams, 38 N.C. App. 138, 247 S.E.2d 630 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 108, 249 S.E.2d 807 (1979); State v. Powell, 299 N.C. 95, 261 S.E.2d 114 (1980); State v. Bryant, 50 N.C. App. 139, 272 S.E.2d 916 (1980).

But Is Considered Where It Explains or Clarifies State's Evidence. — On a demurrer to the evidence only the State's evidence is to be considered, and the defendant's evidence is not to be taken into account, unless it tends to explain or make clear that offered by the State. State v. Oldham, 224 N.C. 415, 30 S.E.2d 318 (1944).

On a motion to nonsuit, the defendant's evidence which explains or makes clear the evidence of the State may be considered. State v. Blizzard, 280 N.C. 11, 184 S.E.2d 851 (1971); State v. Atwood, 290 N.C. 266, 225 S.E.2d 543 (1976).

In considering a motion under this section, the defendant's evidence, unless favorable to the State, is not to be taken into consideration, except when not in conflict with the State's evidence, it may be used to explain or make clear that which has been offered by the State. State v. Bryant, 235 N.C. 420, 70 S.E.2d 186 (1952); State v. Sears, 235 N.C. 623, 70 S.E.2d 907 (1952); State v. Roop, 255 N.C. 607, 122 S.E.2d 363 (1961); State v. Colson, 262 N.C. 506, 138 S.E.2d 121 (1964); State v. Jones, 280 N.C. 60, 184 S.E.2d 862 (1971); State v. Sallie, 13 N.C. App. 499, 186 S.E.2d 667, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 316, 188 S.E.2d 900 (1972); State v. Church, 43 N.C. App. 365, 258 S.E.2d 812 (1979); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

In considering a motion for nonsuit lodged at the close of all the evidence, any portion of defendant's evidence which is favorable to the State and any portion of defendant's evidence which explains or clarifies the State's evidence is to be considered; thus by omitting defendant's evidence from the record on appeal, defendant would deprive the State of the benefit of such portions of defendant's evidence, which are entitled to consideration. State v. Paschall, 14 N.C. App. 591, 188 S.E.2d 521 (1972).

Or Where Not Inconsistent with State's Evidence. — On a motion for nonsuit, defendant's evidence which rebuts the inference of guilt may be considered when it is not inconsistent with the State's evidence. State v. Blizzard, 280 N.C. 11, 184 S.E.2d 851 (1971); State v. Atwood, 290 N.C. 266, 225 S.E.2d 543 (1976).

Defendant's evidence relating to matters in defense should not be considered on motion to nonsuit. State v. Avery, 236 N.C. 276, 72 S.E.2d 670 (1952); State v. Moseley, 251 N.C. 285, 111 S.E.2d 308 (1959).

Only the evidence favorable to the State will be considered, and defendant's evidence relating to matters of defense, or defendant's evidence in conflict with that of the State, will not be considered. State v. Henderson, 276 N.C. 430, 173 S.E.2d 291 (1970); State v. Coble, 24 N.C. App. 79, 210 S.E.2d 118 (1974).

Conflicting Evidence. — Where evidence is conflicting in a criminal case and where, considering the evidence in the light most favorable to the State, the jury might find the defendant guilty, a motion as of nonsuit is properly denied. State v. Carr, 196 N.C. 129, 144 S.E. 698 (1928).

Conflicts in State's Evidence. — When the substantive evidence offered by the State is conflicting — some tending to inculpate and some tending to exculpate the defendant — it is sufficient to repel a demurrer thereto. State v. Tolbert, 240 N.C. 445, 82 S.E.2d 201 (1954); State v. Green, 251 N.C. 40, 110 S.E.2d 609 (1959); State v. Gay, 251 N.C. 78, 110 S.E.2d 458 (1959); State v. Rogers, 252 N.C. 499, 114 S.E.2d 355 (1960).

Conflicts Resolved in State's Favor. — Upon a motion for judgment of nonsuit the evidence offered by the State must be taken in the light most favorable to the State and conflicts therein must be resolved in the State's favor, the credibility and effect of such evidence being a question for the jury. State v. Church, 265 N.C. 534, 144 S.E.2d 624 (1965).

The court must consider all of the evidence actually admitted in the light most favorable to the State, resolve any contradictions and discrepancies therein in the State's favor, and give the State the benefit of all reasonable inferences from the evidence. State v. Scott, 289 N.C. 712, 224 S.E.2d 185 (1976).

On a motion for nonsuit, the court considers all of the evidence actually admitted, whether from the State or defendant, in the light most favorable to the State, resolves any contradictions and discrepancies therein in the State's favor, and gives the State the benefit of all reasonable inferences from the evidence. State v. Strickland, 290 N.C. 169, 225 S.E.2d 531 (1976); State v. Aleem, 49 N.C. App. 359, 271 S.E.2d 575 (1980).

Contradictions and Discrepancies in Evidence Are for Jury to Resolve. — Contradictions and discrepancies, even in the State's evidence, are for the jury to resolve, and do not warrant nonsuit. State v. Carter, 265 N.C. 626, 144 S.E.2d 826 (1965); State v. Henderson, 276 N.C. 430, 173 S.E.2d 291 (1970); State v. Allred, 279 N.C. 398, 183 S.E.2d 553 (1971); State v. Bolin, 281 N.C. 415, 189 S.E.2d 235 (1972); State v. Sallie, 13 N.C. App. 499, 186 S.E.2d 667, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 316, 188 S.E.2d 900 (1972); State v. Holton, 284 N.C. 391, 200 S.E.2d 612 (1973); State v. Coble, 24 N.C. App. 79, 210 S.E.2d 118 (1974); State v. McKinney, 24 N.C. App. 259, 210 S.E.2d 450 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 288 N.C. 113, 215 S.E.2d 578 (1975); State v. Carter, 289 N.C. 35, 220 S.E.2d 313 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Cox, 289 N.C. 414, 222 S.E.2d 246

(1976); State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 512, 223 S.E.2d 303, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 912, 97 S. Ct. 301, 50 L. Ed. 278 (1976); State v. Dangerfield, 32 N.C. App. 608, 633 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 642, 235 S.E.2d 63 (1977); State v. Williams, 38 N.C. App. 138, 247 S.E.2d 630 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 108, 249 S.E.2d 807 (1979); State v. Powell, 299 N.C. 95, 261 S.E.2d 114 (1980); State v. Smith, 300 N.C. 71, 265 S.E.2d 164 (1980); State v. Jenkins, 300 N.C. 578, 268 S.E.2d 458 (1980); State v. Owen, 51 N.C. App. 429, 276 S.E.2d 478 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 154, 289 S.E.2d 382 (1982); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982); State v. Dow, 70 N.C. App. 82, 318 S.E.2d 883 (1984).

Ordinarily contradictions and discrepancies bear solely upon the weight to be given the testimony of a witness, a matter within the province of the jury. State v. Allred, 279 N.C. 398, 183 S.E.2d 553 (1971).

On demurrer to the evidence and motion to nonsuit, the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the State, and contradictions and discrepancies in the testimony of the State's witnesses are to be resolved by the jury. State v. Simpson, 244 N.C. 325, 93 S.E.2d 425 (1956); State v. Walker, 251 N.C. 465, 112 S.E.2d 61 (1960), cert. denied, 364 U.S. 832, 81 S. Ct. 45, 5 L. Ed. 2d 58 (1960).

Upon a motion for judgment of nonsuit, only the evidence favorable to the State is considered, and contradictions and discrepancies, even in the State's evidence, are matters for the jury and do not warrant nonsuit. State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971); State v. Rigsbee, 285 N.C. 708, 208 S.E.2d 656 (1974).

The conclusion of the court with respect to the sufficiency of the evidence is unaffected by defendant's contention that some of the State's evidence is contradictory and casts doubt on the credibility of the witnesses. Such contradictions and discrepancies are matters for the jury and do not warrant nonsuit. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

Contradictions and discrepancies in the testimony of the State's witnesses are to be resolved by the jury and, for the purposes of this motion, they are to be deemed by the court as if resolved in favor of the State. State v. LeDuc, 48 N.C. App. 227, 269 S.E.2d 220 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 306 N.C. 62, 291 S.E.2d 607 (1982).

Contradictions and discrepancies in the evidence are for the jury to resolve and do not warrant dismissal. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

And Do Not Warrant Granting Motion. — On motion for judgment of nonsuit the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the State and contradictions and discrepancies therein do not warrant the granting of the motion. State v. Jackson, 265 N.C. 558, 144 S.E.2d 584 (1965).

Discrepancies in the State's evidence will not justify the granting of a motion for nonsuit. State v. Moseley, 251 N.C. 285, 111 S.E.2d 308 (1959).

And Are Disregarded in Ruling on Motion. — For the purpose of ruling upon a motion for judgment as of nonsuit, the evidence for the State is taken to be true, every reasonable inference favorable to the State is to be drawn therefrom and discrepancies therein are to be disregarded. State v. Sellers, 289 N.C. 268, 221 S.E.2d 264 (1976); State v. Manuel, 291 N.C. 705, 231 S.E.2d 588 (1977); State v. Cooley, 47 N.C. App. 376, 268 S.E.2d 87, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 96, 273 S.E.2d 442 (1980); State v. Keller, 50 N.C. App. 364, 273 S.E.2d 741, appeal dismissed, 302 N.C. 400, 279 S.E.2d 354 (1981).

In considering a trial court's denial of a motion for judgment of nonsuit, the evidence for the State, considered in the light most favorable to it, is deemed to be true and inconsistencies or contradictions therein are disregarded. State v. Price, 280 N.C. 154, 184 S.E.2d 866 (1971); State v. Jacobs, 31 N.C. App. 582, 230 S.E.2d 550 (1976); State v. Banks, 31 N.C. App. 667, 230 S.E.2d 429 (1976), cert. denied, 292 N.C. 266, 233 S.E.2d 393 (1977); State v. Hyatt, 32 N.C. App. 623, 233 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 733, 235 S.E.2d 786 (1977).

Upon a motion for judgment of nonsuit, the evidence for the State is taken to be true and the State is entitled to every reasonable inference which may be drawn therefrom, contradictions and discrepancies in the State's evidence are disregarded and the evidence of the defendant in conflict with that of the State is not taken into consideration. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976); State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Any contradictions and inconsistencies, when in the State's evidence, are to be disregarded by the court in considering a trial court's denial of a motion for judgment as of nonsuit. State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 588, 229 S.E.2d 839 (1976), further review denied, 303 N.C. 712, 283 S.E.2d 138 (1981).

Both Competent and Incompetent Evidence Considered. — Incompetent evidence admitted is considered as if it were competent in considering a motion for nonsuit. State v. Bush, 289 N.C. 159, 221 S.E.2d 333, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. LeDuc, 48 N.C. App. 227, 269 S.E.2d 220 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 306 N.C. 62, 291 S.E.2d 607 (1982).

Admitted evidence, whether competent or incompetent, must be considered in passing on defendant's motions for judgment as of nonsuit.

State v. Virgil, 263 N.C. 73, 138 S.E.2d 777 (1964); State v. Walker, 266 N.C. 269, 145 S.E.2d 833 (1966); State v. Accor, 277 N.C. 65, 175 S.E.2d 583 (1970); State v. Holton, 284 N.C. 391, 200 S.E.2d 612 (1973).

All admitted evidence which is favorable to the State, whether competent or incompetent, must be taken into account and so considered by the court when ruling upon a motion for nonsuit. State v. Biggs, 289 N.C. 522, 223 S.E.2d 371 (1976); State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977); State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977); State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977); State v. Powell, 299 N.C. 95, 261 S.E.2d 114 (1980); State v. Jenkins, 300 N.C. 578, 268 S.E.2d 458 (1980); State v. Owen, 51 N.C. App. 429, 276 S.E.2d 478 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 154, 289 S.E.2d 382 (1982); State v. Earnhardt, 307 N.C. 62, 296 S.E.2d 649 (1982).

All of the evidence actually admitted, whether competent or incompetent, which is favorable to the State must be taken into account and must be so considered by the court in ruling upon the motion for directed verdict or for judgment of nonsuit. State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

All of the evidence actually admitted, whether competent or incompetent, including that offered by defendant, if any, which is favorable to the State, must be taken into account and so considered by the court in ruling upon a motion for nonsuit. State v. Jones, 6 N.C. App. 712, 171 S.E.2d 17 (1969); State v. Jones, 32 N.C. App. 408, 232 S.E.2d 475 (1977).

In determining whether there is evidence sufficient for the judge to submit a case to the jury, all admitted evidence favorable to the State, whether competent or incompetent, must be considered and must be deemed true. State v. Riddle, 300 N.C. 744, 268 S.E.2d 80 (1980).

Improperly Admitted Evidence. — Upon the consideration of a motion for judgment of nonsuit, evidence for the State, even though improperly admitted, is taken into account. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Evidence which is inherently impossible or in conflict with indisputable physical facts or laws of nature is not sufficient to take the case to the jury. State v. Cox, 289 N.C. 414, 222 S.E.2d 246 (1976).

Evidence as to Accomplices and Codefendants. — The evidence of accomplices is sufficient to carry the case to the jury and to justify a refusal of motion to nonsuit. State v. Rising, 223 N.C. 747, 28 S.E.2d 221 (1943).

The direct evidence of the guilt of one of the defendants and the circumstantial evidence as to the other's participation and guilt, is held sufficient to overrule their motions as of nonsuit. State v. Ammons, 204 N.C. 753, 169 S.E. 631 (1933).

Nonsuit May Not Be Based on Ground That Testimony Was Incredible. — Nonsuit may not be granted on the ground that the testimony of the State's witnesses was incredible and unworthy of belief, the credibility of the witnesses being for the jury and not the court. State v. Bowman, 232 N.C. 374, 61 S.E.2d 107 (1950); State v. Wood, 235 N.C. 636, 70 S.E.2d 665 (1952).

Evidence of Mere Opportunity to Commit Crime Insufficient. — Where the evidence for the State where the defendants are charged with fornication and adultery, shows no more than that the defendants had opportunities to commit the crime, on motion of the defendants, the action should be dismissed, and a verdict of not guilty, entered under this section. State v. Woodell, 211 N.C. 635, 191 S.E. 334 (1937).

When State's case must rest entirely on declarations made by defendant, and there is no evidence contra which does more than suggest a possibility of guilt or raise a conjecture, demurrer thereto should be sustained. In such case, the declarations of the defendant are presented by the State as worthy of belief, and when they are wholly exculpatory, the defendant is entitled to his acquittal. State v. Tolbert, 240 N.C. 445, 82 S.E.2d 201 (1954).

Defendant May Rely upon Complete Defense Made Out by State's Evidence. — It is axiomatic that when a complete defense is made out by the State's evidence, a defendant should be allowed to avail himself of such defense on a demurrer to the evidence under this section. This is true even when the exculpating evidence is in the form of statements of defendant offered in evidence by the State. State v. Tolbert, 240 N.C. 445, 82 S.E.2d 201 (1954).

Where State introduces declarations by defendant which present a complete defense while its evidence contra raises only a possibility of guilt, the defendant is entitled to acquittal upon his demurrer to the evidence. However, that the State, upon offering evidence of exculpatory declarations of a defendant, is not precluded from showing that the true facts differ from those related by the defendant and such conflicting evidence is sufficient to overcome a motion to dismiss. State v. Caudle, 58 N.C. App. 89, 293 S.E.2d 205 (1982).

Testimony by State witness that defendant made a declaration of innocence does not entitle defendant to judgment as of nonsuit, since such self-serving declaration does not rebut any proof by the State. State v. Baldwin, 226 N.C. 295, 37 S.E.2d 898 (1946).

When State Bound by Defendant's Extrajudicial Statement. — When the State introduced the defendant's extrajudicial statement, it was bound by what he said except insofar as it was contradicted and shown to be false. State v. Bolin, 281 N.C. 415, 189 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

Fingerprints of Accused. — Evidence given by a qualified expert that fingerprints found at the scene of a crime correspond with those of an accused, when accompanied by substantial evidence of circumstances from which the jury can find that such fingerprints could have been impressed only at the time the offense was committed, is sufficient to withstand a motion for nonsuit. State v. Reynolds, 18 N.C. App. 10, 195 S.E.2d 581 (1973); State v. Miller, 289 N.C. 1, 220 S.E.2d 572 (1975).

VII. INTRODUCTION OF TESTIMONY BY DEFENDANT AT TRIAL.

Effect of Defendant Introducing Testimony at Trial. — By introducing testimony at the trial, a defendant waives his right to except on appeal to the denial of his motion for nonsuit at the close of the State's evidence. His later exception to the denial of his motion for nonsuit made at the close of all the evidence, however, draws into question the sufficiency of all the evidence to go to the jury. State v. McWilliams, 277 N.C. 680, 178 S.E.2d 476 (1971); State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 75, 248 S.E.2d 858 (1978); State v. Evangelista, 319 N.C. 152, 353 S.E.2d 375 (1987).

Where defendant introduced evidence, he waived his right to except on appeal to the denial of his motion for nonsuit at the close of the State's evidence. State v. Rigsbee, 285 N.C. 708, 208 S.E.2d 656 (1974); State v. Logan, 25 N.C. App. 49, 212 S.E.2d 236 (1975); State v. Stewart, 292 N.C. 219, 232 S.E.2d 443 (1977); State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977); State v. Lilly, 32 N.C. App. 467, 232 S.E.2d 495, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 64 (1977); State v. Lee, 33 N.C. App. 162, 234 S.E.2d 482 (1977); State v. Daniels, 51 N.C. App. 294, 276 S.E.2d 738 (1981); State v. Lilley, 78 N.C. App. 100, 337 S.E.2d 89 (1985), aff'd, State v. Patrick, 88 N.C. App. 582, 364 S.E.2d 450 (1988); State v. Patrick, 88 N.C. App. 582, 364 S.E.2d 450 (1988); State v. Long, 37 N.C. App. 662, 246 S.E.2d 846 (1978); State v. Guy, 54 N.C. App. 208, 282 S.E.2d 560 (1981).

By introducing evidence after the denial of his motion for judgment of nonsuit, made when the State had rested its case, defendant waived the motion for dismissal which he made prior to the introduction of his evidence. State v. Prince, 270 N.C. 769, 154 S.E.2d 897 (1967); State v. Davis, 80 N.C. App. 523, 342 S.E.2d 530 (1986).

When the defendant offers evidence, he waives a motion for nonsuit lodged, either actually or by statute, at the close of the State's evidence and only the motion lodged at the close of all the evidence is considered. State v. Paschall, 14 N.C. App. 591, 188 S.E.2d 521 (1972).

Defendant's motions for nonsuit must be considered in light of all the evidence since he introduced evidence and thereby waived the motions made at the close of the State's evidence. State v. Allen, 279 N.C. 406, 183 S.E.2d 680 (1971).

When a defendant offers evidence after his motion for judgment as of nonsuit is overruled, he thereby waives all right to urge that denial as error upon appeal. State v. McLamb, 13 N.C. App. 705, 187 S.E.2d 458, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 316, 188 S.E.2d 899 (1972).

By introducing evidence defendant waived his motion to dismiss made at the close of the State's evidence, and having failed to renew his motion at the close of all evidence, defendant established no basis upon which to appeal denial of his motion. State v. Chambers, 53 N.C. App. 358, 280 S.E.2d 636, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 197, 285 S.E.2d 103 (1981).

By introducing evidence following denial of motion to dismiss made at the end of the State's case in chief, defendant waived the motion. State v. Melvin, 57 N.C. App. 503, 291 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 748, 295 S.E.2d 484 (1982).

Motion Must Be Renewed. — A motion as of nonsuit upon the evidence will not be considered when it is not renewed after the conclusion of all the evidence as this section requires. State v. Helms, 181 N.C. 566, 107 S.E. 228 (1921); State v. Kiziah, 217 N.C. 339, 8 S.E.2d 474 (1940).

Exception to Denial of Motion. — Defendant's exception to the denial of his motion for nonsuit made at the close of all the evidence raises the question of the sufficiency of all the evidence to go to the jury. State v. Rigsbee, 285 N.C. 708, 208 S.E.2d 656 (1974); State v. Daniels, 51 N.C. App. 294, 276 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

Failure to Renew Motion After Introducing Testimony. — Where the defendant in a criminal action moves for the dismissal or for judgment as of nonsuit after the close of the State's evidence, and thereafter elects to introduce his own evidence, his failure to renew his motion after the whole evidence has been introduced is a waiver of his right to insist upon his first motion, and it is not subject to review in the Supreme Court on Appeal. State v. Hayes, 187 N.C. 490, 122 S.E. 13 (1924). See also State v. Hargett, 196 N.C. 692, 146 S.E. 801 (1929); State v. Chapman, 221 N.C. 157, 19 S.E.2d 250 (1942); State v. Epps, 223 N.C. 741, 28 S.E.2d 219 (1943); State v. Jackson, 226 N.C. 760, 40 S.E.2d 417 (1946).

Waiver of Motion. — Where defendant's motion to dismiss made at the close of the State's evidence was denied, and following the denial of the motion, he put on evidence in his own behalf, and no motion was made at the conclusion of all the evidence, defendant, therefore, waived his prior motion and cannot bring it forward as appealable error. State v. Harden, 42 N.C. App. 677, 257 S.E.2d 635 (1979).

The failure of a defendant to renew his motion for nonsuit at the close of all the evidence constitutes a waiver of his right to insist upon his first motion for nonsuit, and it is not subject to review in the Supreme Court. State v. Howell, 261 N.C. 657, 135 S.E.2d 625 (1964); State v. Fikes, 270 N.C. 780, 155 S.E.2d 277 (1967).

Having elected to offer evidence defendant waived her motion to dismiss at the close of the State's evidence, and proper consideration is thereafter upon her motion to dismiss made at the close of all the evidence. State v. Leonard, 300 N.C. 223, 266 S.E.2d 631, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 960, 101 S. Ct. 372, 66 L. Ed. 2d 227 (1980).

Where defendant introduced evidence at trial on his own behalf, he waived his right to complain on appeal of the denial of his initial motion to dismiss at the conclusion of the State's evidence. Accordingly, only the sufficiency of the evidence at the close of all of the evidence was before the court on appeal. State v. McElrath, 322 N.C. 1, 366 S.E.2d 442 (1988).

Under this section, a defendant who introduces evidence waives any motion for dismissal or nonsuit made prior to the introduction of his evidence and cannot urge the prior motion as ground for appeal. State v. Degree, 322 N.C. 302, 367 S.E.2d 679 (1988).

Waiver Not Affected by § 15A-1227(d) or § 15A-1446(d)(5). — Under this section, a defendant, by presenting evidence, has waived his right to assert the denial of his motion to dismiss at the close of the State's evidence as a ground for appeal. The provisions of §§ 15A-1227(d) and 15A-1446(d)(5), allowing review on appeal of the sufficiency of the State's evidence in a criminal case without regard to whether the appropriate motion has been made, do not change this rule. State v. Mendez, 42 N.C. App. 141, 256 S.E.2d 405 (1979).

§ 15-176. Prisoner not to be tried in prison uniform.

It shall be unlawful for any sheriff, jailer or other officer to require any person imprisoned in jail to appear in any court for trial dressed in the uniform or dress of a prisoner or convict, or in any uniform or apparel other than ordinary civilian's dress, or with shaven or clipped head. And no person charged with a criminal offense shall be tried in any court while dressed in the uniform or dress of a prisoner or convict, or in any uniform or apparel other than ordinary civilian's dress, or with head shaven or clipped by or under the direction and requirement of any sheriff, jailer or other officer, unless the head was shaven or clipped while such person was serving a term of imprisonment for the commission of a crime.

Any sheriff, jailer or other officer who violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1915, c. 124; C.S., s. 4646; 1993, c. 539, s. 296; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

CASE NOTES

Section does not explicitly make it unlawful for defendant to be tried in prison clothes. State v. Westry, 15 N.C. App. 1, 189 S.E.2d 618, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 763, 191 S.E.2d 360 (1972).

Jail Identification Wristband. — The definitions of "uniform", "dress" and "apparel" clearly refer to garments and particular modes of dressing and do not include an identification wristband; thus, there was no error in requiring defendant to wear his jail identification band. State v. Johnson, 128 N.C. App. 361, 496 S.E.2d 805 (1998).

Refusal of Defendants to Wear Other Than Prison Clothing. — Defendants who are tried in a gray shirt and gray trousers entirely as the result of their own refusal to wear the other clothing offered or to obtain other attire suffer prejudice, if any, entirely of their own making. State v. Westry, 15 N.C. App. 1, 189 S.E.2d 618, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 763, 191 S.E.2d 360 (1972).

§ 15-176.1. District attorney may argue for death penalty.

In the trial of capital cases, the district attorney or other counsel appearing for the State may argue to the jury that a sentence of death should be imposed and that the jury should not recommend life imprisonment. (1961, c. 890; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Right to Introduce Evidence Supporting Death Penalty. — The State is entitled to ask the jury not only to find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree, but also to impose the death penalty, and it follows, necessarily, that it may introduce evidence, otherwise competent, to support such a verdict. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Discretion of Judge in Controlling Argument. — The argument of counsel must be left largely to the control and discretion of the presiding judge. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Prosecuting Attorney Need Not Be Neutral. — In the discharge of his duties the prosecuting attorney is not required to be, and should not be, neutral. He is not the judge, but the advocate of the State's interest in the matter at hand. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Counsel must be allowed wide latitude in arguing hotly contested cases. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Scope of Proper Argument. — The prosecuting attorney may not, by argument, insinuating questions, or other means, place before the jury incompetent and prejudicial matters not legally admissible in evidence, and may not travel outside of the record or inject into his argument facts of his own knowledge or other facts not included in the evidence. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

When Argument Proper. — Where the prosecuting attorney, while making a vigorous plea for the imposition of the death penalty, did not depart from or distort the record, and there was nothing in his argument which would tend to mislead the jury or deprive the defendant of a fair trial, the argument was proper. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

When Argument Improper. — Where the prosecuting attorney, in his argument, traveled outside the record, used language offensive in its nature, and, in support of his plea for the death penalty, injected into his argument his own account of his record as a solicitor (now district attorney) in other cases for the purpose of persuading the jury that he did not ask the death penalty where it was not deserved, the argument was improper. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Prosecuting attorney may use appropriate epithets which are warranted by the evidence. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

And he may vigorously urge jury to convict and to impose the death penalty in the light of the evidence. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

The grand jury, an agency of the State, after investigation according to law, indicted the defendant for murder in the first degree, and the solicitor (now district attorney), an officer of the State, after investigation, determined, on behalf of the State, that the defendant should be tried for this offense and that the death penalty should be sought. These determinations having been made on behalf of the State, it was the right and duty of the prosecuting attorney, vigorously but fairly and in accordance with law, both in the presentation of evidence and in his argument, to seek that result. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Characterization of Defendant in Uncomplimentary Terms. — When the prosecuting attorney does not go outside of the record and his characterizations of the defendant are supported by evidence, the defendant is not entitled to a new trial by reason of being characterized in uncomplimentary terms in the argument. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Defendant's Brutality May Be Argued in Murder Prosecution. — In a first-degree murder prosecution, it was permissible for the solicitor (now district attorney) to argue that in view of the brutality of defendant's conduct in the killing of his victim, the jury should find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree without any recommendation that punishment be life imprisonment. State v. Williams, 276 N.C. 703, 174 S.E.2d 503, death sentence rev'd, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2290, 29 L. Ed. 2d 860 (1970), overruled on other grounds, State v. Taylor, 337 N.C. 597, 447 S.E.2d 360 (1994).

Defendant's Conduct in Connection with Killing. — A judgment imposing the death penalty was affirmed, although the solicitor (now district attorney), reviewed the evidence and argued with great zeal and fervor that in the light of the defendant's conduct in connection with the killing of the victim, the punishment therefor should be death and the jury should bring a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree without a recommendation that the punishment should be life imprisonment. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Review on Appeal. — The Supreme Court must determine whether the solicitor (now district attorney) violated the right of the defendant to a fair trial by the nature of his argument to the jury, from the record, irrespective of its view as to the policy of the State with regard to the punishment of the offense in question and without regard to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict and sentence. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

When Defendant Entitled to New Trial. — If the prosecuting attorney passed over the boundary of his right and duty in his argument to the jury by his vigorous denunciation of the defendant and thereby denied him a fair trial, the defendant is entitled to a new trial. State v. Westbrook, 279 N.C. 18, 181 S.E.2d 572 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2873, 33 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1972).

Applied in State v. Christopher, 258 N.C. 249, 128 S.E.2d 667 (1962).

Informing Jury in Case Involving Death Penalty.

§ 15-176.3. Informing and questioning potential jurors on consequences of guilty verdict.

When a jury is being selected for a case in which the defendant is indicted for a crime for which the penalty is a sentence of death, the court, the defense, or the State may inform any person called to serve as a potential juror that the death penalty will be imposed upon the return of a verdict of guilty of that crime and may inquire of any person called to serve as a potential juror whether that person understands the consequences of a verdict of guilty of that crime. (1973, c. 1286, s. 12.)

§ 15-176.4. Instruction to jury on consequences of guilty verdict.

When a defendant is indicted for a crime for which the penalty is a sentence of death, the court, upon request by either party, shall instruct the jury that the death penalty will be imposed upon the return of a verdict of guilty of that crime. (1973, c. 1286, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

Instruction Mandatory. — This section makes it mandatory that the trial judge give the instruction upon the request of either party. State v. Bernard, 288 N.C. 321, 218 S.E.2d 327 (1975).

Instruction in Absence of Request. — It is not error to give an instruction as to the death penalty even in the absence of a request. State v. Boyd, 287 N.C. 131, 214 S.E.2d 14 (1975).

Refusal to Instruct Held Not Prejudicial. — Trial judge erred when he refused to give the instruction mandated by this section, but there was no prejudice to the defendant since the jury knew the sentence of death would be imposed upon the return of a verdict of guilty of the crime. State v. Bernard, 288 N.C. 321, 218 S.E.2d 327 (1975).

§ 15-176.5. Argument to jury on consequences of guilty verdict.

When a case will be submitted to a jury on a charge for which the penalty is a sentence of death, either party in its argument to the jury may indicate the consequences of a verdict of guilty of that charge. (1973, c. 1286, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

Trial court erred when it instructed jury that defendant's argument discussing punishment should be disregarded. This was a violation of defendant's statutory rights under this section and § 84-14. State v. Buckner, 342 N.C. 198, 464 S.E.2d 414 (1995).

CASE NOTES

Section applies only to crimes committed after the effective date of the statute, July 1, 1935, and it will not support a sentence of death by lethal gas imposed for a capital crime committed prior to the effective date of the statute although defendant was tried and convicted after the effective date thereof. § 15-188. Manner and place of execution.

In accordance with G.S. 15-187, the mode of executing a death sentence must in every case be by administering to the convict or felon a lethal quantity of an ultrashort-acting barbiturate in combination with a chemical paralytic agent until the convict or felon is dead; and when any person, convict or felon shall be sentenced by any court of the State having competent jurisdiction to be so executed, the punishment shall only be inflicted within a permanent death chamber which the superintendent of the State penitentiary is hereby authorized and directed to provide within the walls of the North Carolina penitentiary at Raleigh, North Carolina. The superintendent of the State penitentiary shall also cause to be provided, in conformity with this Article and approved by the Governor and Council of State, the necessary appliances for the infliction of the punishment of death and qualified personnel to set up and prepare the injection, administer the preinjections, insert the IV catheter, and to perform other tasks required for this procedure in accordance with the requirements of this Article. (1909, c. 443, s. 2; C.S., s. 4658; 1935, c. 294, s. 2; 1983, c. 678, s. 2; 1998-212, s. 17.22(b).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1983, c. 678, which amended this section, provides in s. 4: "The warden of Central Prison may obtain and employ the drugs necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, regardless of contrary provisions in Chapter 90 of the General Statutes."

§ 15-189. Sentence of death; prisoner taken to penitentiary.

Upon the sentence of death being pronounced against any person in the State of North Carolina convicted of a crime punishable by death, it shall be the duty of the judge pronouncing such death sentence to make the same in writing, which shall be filed in the papers in the case against such convicted person. The clerk of the superior court in which such death sentence is pronounced shall prepare a certified copy of said judgment or sentence of death, including therewith a copy of any notice or entries of appeal made in such case; if no entries or notice of appeal have been made or given in such case, a statement to the effect shall be included in the certificate of the clerk; it shall also be the duty of the district attorney, assistant district attorney, or attorney prosecuting in behalf of the State in the absence of the district attorney, to prepare and sign a certificate stating in substance that he prosecuted said case in behalf of the State and that notice or entries of appeal have or have not been made or given in said case, and further that he has examined a copy of said judgment or sentence of death certified by the clerk, including the copy of the notice or entries of appeal or statement to the effect that no appeal has been given, and to the best of his knowledge the same is correct; the certificate of said district attorney, or other prosecuting officer above named, shall be attached to the certified copy of said sentence of death, as prepared and certified by the clerk, and both certificates shall be transmitted by the clerk of the superior court in which said sentence of death is pronounced to the warden of the State penitentiary at Raleigh, North Carolina; at the same time and in the same manner, a duplicate original of said certificates shall be prepared by the clerk of the superior court and the district attorney, or other prosecuting officer above named, and the said duplicate original or said certificates shall be transmitted to the Attorney General of North Carolina. If notice of appeal is given or entries of appeal are made after the expiration of the term of superior court in which said sentence of death is pronounced, said certificates shall be prepared by the clerk of the superior court in which said sentence is pronounced and by the district attorney, or other prosecuting officer above named, prosecuting in behalf of the State, in the same manner and shall be transmitted as soon as possible to the warden of the State penitentiary at Raleigh, North Carolina, and to the Attorney General of North Carolina. The above certificates so prepared by the clerk of the superior court in which such sentence of death is pronounced and by the district attorney, or other prosecuting officer above named, shall be transmitted by the clerk of the superior court in which such sentence is pronounced to the warden of the State penitentiary at Raleigh, North Carolina, and to the Attorney General of North Carolina, not more than 20 or less than 10 days before the time fixed in the judgment of the court for the execution of the sentence; and in all cases where there is no appeal, said sentence of death shall not be carried out by the warden of the State penitentiary or by any of his deputies or agents until said certificates so prepared and transmitted by the clerk of the superior court in which said sentence of death is pronounced, and by the district attorney, or the prosecuting officer above named, have been received in the office of the warden of the State penitentiary at Raleigh, North Carolina. In all cases where there is no appeal from the sentence of death and in all cases where the sentence is pronounced against a prisoner convicted of the crime of rape it shall be the duty of the sheriff, together with at least one deputy, to convey to the penitentiary, at Raleigh, North Carolina, such condemned felon or convict forthwith upon the adjournment of the court in which the felon was tried, and deliver the convict or felon to the warden of the penitentiary. (1909, c. 443, s. 3; C.S., s. 4659; 1951, c. 899, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on capital punishment in North Carolina, see 59 N.C.L. Rev. 911 (1981).

CASE NOTES

No Distinction Between Conviction by Plea and by Verdict. — Since an accused may be convicted by his plea as well as by a verdict, there is no reason to read into this section a legislative attempt to distinguish between conviction by plea and by verdict. State v. Watkins, 283 N.C. 17, 194 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1000, 94 S. Ct. 353, 38 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973).

Judgment Must Be Written and Signed by Trial Judge. — The entry of judgment of the court on the verdict of guilty of a capital felony by the clerk of the court on its minutes and signed by the judge is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section, its mandatory provisions requiring the judgment to be written and signed by the judge, and where it appears of record that he has failed so to do the case will be remanded. State v. Jackson, 199 N.C. 321, 154 S.E. 402 (1930).

Failure to Refer to Trial or Crime in Judgment. — A judgment, while somewhat informal, because it made no reference to the trial or the crime of which the prisoner was convicted, is, nevertheless, sufficient to meet the requirements of this section. State v. Edney, 202 N.C. 706, 164 S.E. 23 (1932).

Death Sentence Without Reference to Crime. — A judgment sentencing defendant to death for the commission of a capital felony, though making no reference to the trial or the crime of which the defendant was convicted, while not commenced is held sufficient. State v. Taylor, 194 N.C. 738, 140 S.E. 728 (1927).

Judgment Must Show Degree of Murder. — Where the judgment upon a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree states that the defendant had been convicted of murder, the cause must be remanded in order that it appear on the face of the judgment that the conviction was for murder in the first degree, since the judgment alone is certified to the warden of the State penitentiary. State v. Montgomery, 227 N.C. 100, 40 S.E.2d 614 (1946).

Where in a prosecution for murder the jury returns a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, the judgment of the court, which alone is certified to the warden of the State prison, under this section and §§ 15-188, 15-190, must recite that the defendant had been convicted of murder in the first degree, and where it recites that the prisoner had been convicted of murder, and sentences the prisoner to death, the case will be remanded. State v. Langley, 204 N.C. 687, 169 S.E. 705 (1933).

§ 15-190. Person or persons to be designated by warden to execute sentence; supervision of execution; who shall be present.

Some guard or guards or other reliable person or persons to be named and designated by the warden from time to time shall cause the person, convict or felon against whom the death sentence has been so pronounced to be executed as provided by this Article and all amendments thereto. The execution shall be under the general supervision and control of the warden of the penitentiary, who shall from time to time, in writing, name and designate the guard or guards or other reliable person or persons who shall cause the person, convict or felon against whom the death sentence has been pronounced to be executed as provided by this Article and all amendments thereto. At such execution there shall be present the warden or deputy warden or some person designated by the warden in the warden's place, and the surgeon or physician of the penitentiary. Four respectable citizens, two members of the victim's family, the counsel and any relatives of such person, convict or felon and a minister or member of the clergy or religious leader of the person's choosing may be present if they so desire. (1909, c. 443, s. 4; C.S., s. 4660; 1925, c. 123; 1935, c. 294, s. 3; 1983, c. 678, s. 3; 1997-70, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1983, c. 678, which amended this section, provides in s. 4: "The warden of Central Prison may obtain and employ the drugs necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, regardless of contrary provisions in Chapter 90 of the General Statutes."

CASE NOTES

Audiotape or Videotape of Execution Not Allowed. — Plaintiffs (prisoner and television talk-show host) did not have a right under either the First or Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution or under Art. I, § 14 of the North Carolina Constitution to audiotape or videotape prisoner/plaintiff's scheduled execution. Under this section the execution was under the supervision and control of the warden and, as a matter of law, neither the Secretary of the North Carolina Department of Correction nor the warden could be mandamused to permit the requested audiotaping or videotaping. § 15-191. Pending sentences unaffected.

Nothing in G.S. 15-187, 15-188, and 15-190 shall be construed to alter in any manner the execution of the sentence of death imposed on account of any crime or crimes committed before July 1, 1935. (1935, c. 294, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — The act from which this section was codified changed the mode of executing a death sentence from electrocution to the administration of lethal gas.

§ 15-192. Certificate filed with clerk.

The warden, together with the surgeon or physician of the penitentiary, shall certify the fact of the execution of the condemned person, convict or felon to the clerk of the superior court in which such sentence was pronounced, and the clerk shall file such certificate with the papers of the case and enter the same upon the records thereof. (1909, c. 443, s. 5; C.S., s. 4661.)

§ 15-193. Notice of reprieve or new trial.

Should the condemned person, convict or felon be granted a reprieve by the Governor or obtain a writ of error, or a new trial be granted by the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina, or should the execution of the sentence be stayed by any competent judicial tribunal or proceeding, notice of such reprieve, new trial, appeal, writ of error or stay of execution shall be served upon the warden or deputy warden of the penitentiary by the sheriff of Wake County, in case such condemned person is confined in the penitentiary, or upon any sheriff having the custody of any such condemned person, also upon the condemned person himself. (1909, c. 443, s. 6; C.S., s. 4662.)

§ 15-194. Time for execution.

In sentencing a capital defendant to a death sentence pursuant to G.S. 15A-2000(b), the sentencing judge need not specify the date and time the execution is to be carried out by the Department of Correction. The Secretary of Correction shall immediately schedule a date for the execution of the original death sentence not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days from the date of receiving written notification from the Attorney General of North Carolina or the district attorney who prosecuted the case of any one of the following:

(1) The United States Supreme Court has filed an opinion upholding the sentence of death following completion of the initial State and federal postconviction proceedings, if any;

(2) The mandate issued by the Supreme Court of North Carolina on direct appeal pursuant to N.C.R. App. P. 32(b) affirming the capital defendant's death sentence and the time for filing a petition for writ of certiorari to the United States Supreme Court has expired without a petition being filed;

(3) The capital defendant, if indigent, failed to timely seek the appointment of counsel pursuant to G.S. 7A-451(c), or failed to file a timely motion for appropriate relief as required by G.S. 15A-1415(a);

(4) The superior court denied the capital defendant's motion for appropriate relief, but the capital defendant failed to file a timely petition for writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of North Carolina pursuant to N.C.R. App. P. 21(f);

(5) The Supreme Court of North Carolina denied the capital defendant's petition for writ of certiorari pursuant to N.C.R. App. P. 21(f), or, if certiorari was granted, upheld the capital defendant's death sentence, but the capital defendant failed to file a timely petition for writ of certiorari to the United States Supreme Court; or

(6) Following State postconviction proceedings, if any, the capital defendant failed to file a timely petition for writ of habeas corpus in the appropriate federal district court, or failed to timely appeal or petition an adverse habeas corpus decision to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit or the United States Supreme Court.

The Secretary shall send a certified copy of the document fixing the date to the clerk of superior court of the county in which the case was tried or, if venue was changed, in which the defendant was indicted. The certified copy shall be recorded in the minutes of the court. The Secretary shall also send certified copies to the capital defendant, the capital defendant's attorney, the district attorney who prosecuted the case, and the Attorney General of North Carolina. (1909, c. 443, s. 6; C.S., s. 4663; 1925, c. 55; 1951, c. 244, ss. 1, 2; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; 1981, c. 900; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 719, s. 5; 1997-289, s. 1; 1999-358, s. 2.)

§ 15-195. Prisoner taken to place of trial when new trial granted.

Should a new trial be granted the condemned person, convict or felon against whom sentence of death has been pronounced, after he has been conveyed to the penitentiary, he shall be conveyed back to the place of trial by such guard or guards as the warden of the penitentiary shall direct, their expenses to be paid as is now provided by law for the conveyance of convicts to the penitentiary. (1909, c. 443, s. 7; C.S., s. 4664.)

Article 19A.

Credits against the Service of Sentences and for Attainment of Prison Privileges.

§ 15-196.1. Credits allowed.

The minimum and maximum term of a sentence shall be credited with and diminished by the total amount of time a defendant has spent, committed to or in confinement in any State or local correctional, mental or other institution as a result of the charge that culminated in the sentence. The credit provided shall be calculated from the date custody under the charge commenced and shall include credit for all time spent in custody pending trial, trial de novo, appeal, retrial, or pending parole, probation, or post-release supervision revocation hearing: Provided, however, the credit available herein shall not include any time that is credited on the term of a previously imposed sentence to which a defendant is subject. (1973, c. 44, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 16A; 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 30; 1997-237, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, provided: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

CASE NOTES

Section repealed former §§ 15-176.2 and 15-186.1 and was made applicable to all prisoners, including those convicted prior to its enactment, who are entitled to, but who have not heretofore received all such allowable credit. State v. Lewis, 18 N.C. App. 681, 198 S.E.2d 57, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 756, 198 S.E.2d 726 (1973).

Constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy absolutely requires that punishment already exacted must be fully credited in imposing sentence upon a new conviction for the same offense. Wilson v. North Carolina, 438 F.2d 284 (4th Cir. 1971), decided under former § 15-184.

To deny petitioner 64-day credit against his original sentence, after subjecting petitioner to the loss of his liberty by incarceration in a foreign state, would amount to punishment twice for the same offense and a deprivation of his liberty without due process of law, both in violation of U.S. Const., Amend. V, as made applicable to the states via U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Childers v. Laws, 558 F. Supp. 1284 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

By its express terms, this statute includes only time spent in custody in "State" institutions and requires a credit against only custody under a charge already "commenced." "State" is defined at subdivision (8) of § 15A-101 as "The State of North Carolina" and does not include other states. Childers v. Laws, 558 F. Supp. 1284 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

Detention in a foreign city jail at the request of North Carolina amounts to just as much deprivation of liberty and punishment as incarceration in any municipal jail in North Carolina. Childers v. Laws, 558 F. Supp. 1284 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

Where petitioner was arrested and confined in a Virginia city jail solely at the request and direction of the State of North Carolina, whose sole justification for having petitioner arrested and jailed was the fact that petitioner had not yet completed a lawfully imposed sentence of imprisonment; refusal of credit against his original sentence for the time he spent in custody, in effect amounts to an increase in petitioner's prison sentence at the whim of state prison authorities. Clearly, such an increase in petitioner's sentence amounts to a violation of his right under U.S. Const., Amend. V to be free from being punished for the same offense twice. Childers v. Laws, 558 F. Supp. 1284 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

Life Sentence Not Reduced by Credits. — Because a life sentence lasts for the prisoner's natural life, no reduction in sentence by credits of any kind is possible. Wilson v. North Carolina, 438 F.2d 284 (4th Cir. 1971), decided under former § 15-184 before the enactment of this Article.

Credit for Time Awaiting Affirmance of Appeal. — Denial of credit to a prisoner for the time he spent in jail from the date of his first conviction until the affirmance of his second appeal is multiple punishment. Such time must be fully credited insofar as possible as punishment already exacted. Although it cannot be credited against his life sentence, which by its very nature is indefinite, it can be credited toward the 10 years he must wait to be considered for parole. Wilson v. North Carolina, 438 F.2d 284 (4th Cir. 1971), decided under former § 15-184 before the enactment of this Article.

Time spent on parole is not to be credited on an active sentence. State v. Davis, 19 N.C. App. 459, 199 S.E.2d 37 (1973).

House arrest (whether or not accompanied by electronic monitoring) in a defendant's own home while awaiting trial does not constitute confinement in a state or local institution and does not qualify as time that can be credited against a defendant's sentence pursuant to this section. State v. Jarman, 140 N.C. App. 198, 535 S.E.2d 875 (2000).

But a defendant who has served, pursuant to special probation, an active sentence is entitled to credit for that time on any sentence imposed upon revocation of probation. State v. Farris, 111 N.C. App. 254, 431 S.E.2d 803, aff'd, 336 N.C. 552, 444 S.E.2d 182 (1994).

Withholding of Credit for inability to make bail discriminatory. — Denial of credit for pretrial custody necessitated by financial inability to make bail is discrimination based on financial status. Steele v. North Carolina, 348 F. Supp. 1023 (W.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd in part, 475 F.2d 1401 (4th Cir. 1973), decided under former § 15-176.2.

Constitutionality of Revocation of Time Credited Pursuant to This Section. — The trial court's revocation of defendant's credit for time spent under house arrest prior to her entry of plea did not violate her constitutional right against double jeopardy because the restraints ordered were properly imposed to ensure her presence at the trial and to disable her from committing other offenses. State v. Jarman, 140 N.C. App. 198, 535 S.E.2d 875 (2000).

Trial court committed no error in failing to credit time already credited to previously imposed sentence for secret assault. State v. Lewis, 18 N.C. App. 681, 198 S.E.2d 57, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 756, 198 S.E.2d 726 (1973).

Out-of-Term Stripping of Defendant's Jail Credit Erroneously Given for Time in Home Detention Upheld. — Because a judge's signing of an order in compliance with this section is mechanical and routine, the trial court's order depriving the defendant of a jail credit for her time in home detention, which she had erroneously received, was the correction of a clerical error and within the court's power although the term of court had expired. State v. Jarman, 140 N.C. App. 198, 535 S.E.2d 875 (2000).

Credit Properly Applied in Juvenile Proceedings. — Where a juvenile was credited for time served in conjunction with the violation of her conditional release, she was not also entitled to receive similar credit toward a new commitment term under a new disposition order. In re Allison, 143 N.C. App. 586, 547 S.E.2d 169 (2001).

§ 15-196.2. Allowance in cases of multiple sentences.

In the event time creditable under this section shall have been spent in custody as the result of more than one pending charge, resulting in imprisonment for more than one offense, credit shall be allowed as herein provided. Consecutive sentences shall be considered as one sentence for the purpose of providing credit, and the creditable time shall not be multiplied by the number of consecutive offenses for which a defendant is imprisoned. Each concurrent sentence shall be credited with so much of the time as was spent in custody due to the offense resulting in the sentence. When both concurrent and consecutive sentences are imposed, both of the above rules shall obtain to the applicable extent. (1973, c. 44, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Detention in a foreign city jail at the request of North Carolina amounts to just as much deprivation of liberty and punishment as incarceration in any municipal jail in North Carolina. Childers v. Laws, 558 F. Supp. 1284 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

Where petitioner was arrested and confined in a Virginia city jail solely at the request and direction of the State of North Carolina, whose sole justification for having petitioner arrested and jailed was the fact that petitioner had not yet completed a lawfully imposed sentence of imprisonment; refusal of credit against his original sentence for the time he spent in custody, in effect amounts to an increase in petitioner's prison sentence at the whim of state prison authorities. Clearly, such an increase in petitioner's sentence amounts to a violation of his right under U.S. Const., Amend. V to be free from being punished for the same offense twice. Childers v. Laws, 558 F. Supp. 1284 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

Where two life sentences which were imposed on defendant were to run concurrently, defendant should have been credited on both life sentences with time spent in jail awaiting trial. State v. Dudley, 319 N.C. 656, 356 S.E.2d 361 (1987).

Time creditable under this section shall reduce the minimum and maximum term of a sentence; and, irrespective of sentence, shall reduce the time required to attain privileges made available to inmates in the custody of the State Department of Correction which are dependent, in whole or in part, upon the passage of a specific length of time in custody, including parole or post-release supervision consideration by the Post-Release Supervision and Parole Commission. However, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring an automatic award of privileges by virtue of the passage of time. (1973, c. 44, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 17; 1997-237, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32 provided: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

CASE NOTES

Reduction of Original Sentence Not A Credit. — The fact that a judge reduced defendant's original seven year sentence to six years and nine months, a total reduction of 90 days, did not satisfy the requirement that the defendant be given a 90-day credit. A credit reduces the time required to attain privileges which are dependent upon the passage of a specific length of time in custody, and a reduction in the sentence term did not accomplish that purpose. State v. Farris, 111 N.C. App. 254, 431 S.E.2d 803, aff'd, 336 N.C. 552, 444 S.E.2d 182 (1994).

Application to Resentencing. — A person who was initially, and unconstitutionally, sentenced to death, and is resentenced to life imprisonment is entitled to receive credit for pretrial custody provided in this section. Carey v. Garrison, 452 F. Supp. 485 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

§ 15-196.4. Procedures for judicial award.

Upon sentencing or activating a sentence, the judge presiding shall determine the credits to which the defendant is entitled and shall cause the clerk to transmit to the custodian of the defendant a statement of allowable credits. Upon committing a defendant upon the conclusion of an appeal, or a parole, probation, or post-release supervision revocation, the committing authority shall determine any credits allowable on account of these proceedings and shall cause to be transmitted, as in all other cases, a statement of the allowable credit to the custodian of the defendant. Upon reviewing a petition seeking credit not previously allowed, the court shall determine the credits due and forward an order setting forth the allowable credit to the custodian of the petitioner. (1973, c. 44, s. 1; 1997-237, s. 5.)

Cross References. — As to transfer of the functions of the State Probation Commission to the Department of Correction, see § 143B-262.

§ 15-203. Duties of the Secretary of Correction; appointment of probation officers; reports; requests for extradition.

The Secretary of Correction shall direct the work of the probation officers appointed under this Article. He shall consult and cooperate with the courts and institutions in the development of methods and procedure in the administration of probation, and shall arrange conferences of probation officers and judges. He shall make an annual written report with statistical and other information to the Department of Correction and the Governor. He is authorized to present to the Governor written applications for requisitions for the return of probationers who have broken the terms of their probation, and are believed to be in another state, and he shall follow the procedure outlined for requests for extradition as set forth in G.S. 15-77. (1937, c. 132, s. 7; 1959, c. 127; 1963, c. 914, s. 2; 1973, c. 1262, s. 10.)

Editor's Note. — Section 15-77, referred to in this section, was transferred to § 15A-743 by Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, s. 16, effective July 1, 1975.

Cross References. — For duties of the Secretary of Correction, see § 15-203.

§ 15-204. Assignment, compensation and oath of probation officers.

Probation officers appointed under this Article shall be assigned to serve in such courts or districts or otherwise as the Secretary of Correction may determine. They shall be paid annual salaries to be fixed by the Department of Correction, and shall also be paid traveling and other necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their official duties as probation officers when such expense accounts have been authorized and approved by the Secretary of Correction.

Each person appointed as a probation officer shall take an oath of office before the judge of the court or courts in which he is to serve, which oath shall be as follows:

"I, _____, do solemnly and sincerely swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the State of North Carolina, and to the constitutional powers and authorities which are or may be established for the government thereof; and that I will endeavor to support, maintain, and defend the Constitution of said State, not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States, to the best of my knowledge and ability; so help me God," and shall be noted of record by the clerk of the court. (1937, c. 132, s. 8; 1973, c. 1262, s. 10.)

A probation officer shall investigate all cases referred to him for investigation by the judges of the courts or by the Secretary of Correction. Such officer shall keep informed concerning the conduct and condition of each person on probation under his supervision by visiting, requiring reports, and in other ways, and shall report thereon in writing as often as the court or the Secretary of Correction may require. Such officer shall use all practicable and suitable methods, not inconsistent with the conditions imposed by the court or the Secretary of Correction, to aid and encourage persons on probation to bring about improvement in their conduct and condition, and shall within the first 30 days of a person's probation take such person to a prison unit maintained by the Department of Correction for a tour thereof so that he may better appreciate the consequences of probation revocation. Such officer shall keep detailed records of his work; shall make such reports in writing to the Secretary of Correction as he may require; and shall perform such other duties as the Secretary of Correction may require. A probation officer shall have, in the execution of his duties, the powers of arrest and, to the extent necessary for the performance of his duties, the same right to execute process as is now given, or that may hereafter be given by law, to the sheriffs of this State. (1937, c. 132, s. 9; 1973, c. 1262, s. 10; 1975, c. 229, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 18.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, effective July 1, 1978, provided: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

This section refers only to the power to investigate on behalf of the court the advisability of placing the defendant on probation. State v. Gravette, 327 N.C. 114, 393 S.E.2d 856 (1990).

Authority to Arrest Probationer Without Warrant. — If a simple conclusory statement from the probation officer, containing no factual allegations, is sufficient to permit another officer to arrest a probationer without a warrant, then it is reasonable to conclude that this section and § 15A-1345 read together, give the probation officer the authority to arrest a probationer under his supervision for violations of conditions of probation without a warrant or other written document. State v. Waller, 37 N.C. App. 133, 245 S.E.2d 808 (1978).

No Authority to Order DAPP to Supervise Defendant. — Superior court had no authority to enter order requiring Division of Adult Probation and Parole, without its consent, to provide supervision of defendant who had been determined incompetent to stand trial but not subject to involuntary commitment, while in custody of his former wife. State v. Gravette, 327 N.C. 114, 393 S.E.2d 856 (1990).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 34, provided: "All statutes which refer to sections repealed or amended by the act shall be deemed, insofar as possible, to refer to those provisions of this act which accomplish the same or an equivalent purpose."

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 35, provided: "None of the provisions of this act providing for the repeal of certain sections of the General Statutes shall constitute a reenactment of the common law."

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, effective July 1, 1978, provided: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

It shall be the duty of the Secretary of Correction and the Department of Correction to cooperate with each other to the end that the purposes of probation and parole may be more effectively carried out. When requested, each shall make available to the other case records in his possession, and in cases of emergency, where time and expense can be saved, shall provide investigation service.

It is hereby made the duty of every city, county, or State official or department to render all assistance and cooperation within his or its fundamental power which may further the objects of this Article. The State Department of Correction, the Secretary of Correction, and the probation officers are authorized to seek the cooperation of such officials and departments, and especially of the county superintendents of social services and of the Department of Health and Human Services. (1937, c. 132, s. 10; 1961, c. 139, s. 2; 1969, c. 982; 1973, c. 476, s. 138; c. 1262, s. 10; 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a).)

§ 15-207. Records treated as privileged information.

All information and data obtained in the discharge of official duty by any probation officer shall be privileged information, shall not be receivable as evidence in any court, and shall not be disclosed directly or indirectly to any other than the judge or to others entitled under this Article to receive reports, unless and until otherwise ordered by a judge of the court or the Secretary of Correction. (1937, c. 132, s. 11; 1973, c. 1262, s. 10.)

CASE NOTES

Section Requires Court Order, Not Discovery Motion. — Where defendant requested, in motion for discovery, records, files, information or knowledge in the possession of the State, trial court did not err in its refusal to allow defendant access to his parole records; this section requires a court order to obtain probation records to protect their confidentiality and defense counsel did not follow this procedure; therefore, defendant's discovery motion was not applicable to defendant's probation records. State v. Russell, 92 N.C. App. 639, 376 S.E.2d 458 (1989).

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This commentary is based upon the commentary included in the January 1973 report of the Criminal Code Commission with its proposed code of pretrial procedure. The consultant-draftsmen of the Commission have revised the commentary to reflect changes that were made by the General Assembly in the course of passage.

The Commission's commentary was drafted by the consultant-draftsmen in an effort to explain the rationale behind policy decisions, to enlighten practitioners as to the aims and intent of the Commission, and in some cases to draw attention to pertinent cases or factual situations which either made the inclusion of a provision desirable or necessary.

The Commission's debates and debates in committees of the legislature and on the floor are the source of much of this commentary but neither the commission nor any legislative official has reviewed and approved this commentary on a line-by-line basis.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, repealed many, but not all, of the sections of Chapter 15, Criminal Procedure, and a number of sections elsewhere in the General Statutes, and enacted in their place Chapter 15A, Criminal Procedure Act, effective July 1, 1975. Certain sections in Chapter 15 and in other chapters of the General Statutes were transferred and renumbered as sections in Chapter 15A. Where appropriate, the historical citations to the repealed sections have been added to corresponding sections in Chapter 15A.

The "Official Commentary" under Articles 1 to 34, 36 to 61 of this Chapter appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

Many of the cases cited in the annotations under the various sections of this Chapter were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, ss. 27, 28 and 31, provided:

"Sec. 27. All statutes which refer to sections repealed or amended by this act shall be deemed, insofar as possible, to refer to those provisions of this act which accomplish the same or an equivalent purpose.

"Sec. 28. None of the provisions of this act providing for the repeal of certain sections of the General Statutes shall constitute a reenactment of the common law.

"Sec. 31. This act becomes effective on July 1, 1975, and is applicable to all criminal proceedings begun on and after that date and each provision is applicable to criminal proceedings pending on that date to the extent practicable, except § 12 [§§ 15-176.3 through 15-176.5] of this act which becomes effective on July 1, 1974."

Session Laws 1975, c. 573, amended Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, s. 31, so as to make the 1973 act effective Sept. 1, 1975, rather than July 1, 1975.

Session Laws 1975, c. 166, ss. 27 and 28, provided:

"Sec. 27. Chapter 15A of the General Statutes is hereby amended by striking out the words 'district solicitor' wherever the words appear throughout Chapter 15A, and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'district attorney,' and by striking out the word 'solicitor,' wherever the word appears throughout Chapter 15A and inserting in lieu thereof the word 'prosecutor.' The Michie Company, publishers of the General Statutes of North Carolina, is authorized and directed to make the changes directed above wherever they might appear appropriate in the text of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes.

"Sec. 28. This act shall become effective on the date that Chapter 1286 of the 1973 Session Laws becomes effective."

SUBCHAPTER I. GENERAL.

ARTICLE 1.

Definitions and General Provisions.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Article includes definitions of those words or terms which are used in more than one article of Chapter 15A and which have attached to them a significance beyond or different from that which one would ordinarily associate with the word or phrase defined.

§§ 15A-1 through 15A-100: Reserved for future codification purposes.

§ 15A-101. Definitions.

Unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the following words have the listed meanings:

(1) Appeal. — When used in a general context, the term "appeal" also includes appellate review upon writ of certiorari.

(1a) Attorney of Record. — An attorney who, under Article 4 of this Chapter, Entry and Withdrawal of Attorney in Criminal Case, has entered a criminal proceeding and has not withdrawn.

(2) Clerk. — Any clerk of superior court, acting clerk, or assistant or deputy clerk.

(3) District Court. — The District Court Division of the General Court of Justice.

(4) District Attorney. — The person elected and currently serving as district attorney in his prosecutorial district.

(4a) Entry of Judgment. — Judgment is entered when sentence is pronounced. Prayer for judgment continued upon payment of costs, without more, does not constitute the entry of judgment.

(5) Judicial Official. — A magistrate, clerk, judge, or justice of the General Court of Justice.

(6) Officer. — Law-enforcement officer.

(7) Prosecutor. — The district attorney, any assistant district attorney or any other attorney designated by the district attorney to act for the State or on behalf of the district attorney.

(8) State. — The State of North Carolina, all land or water in respect to which the State of North Carolina has either exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction, and the airspace above that land or water. "Other state" means any state or territory of the United States, the District of Columbia or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

(9) Superior Court. — The Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice.

(10) Superior Court Judge. — A superior court judge who has jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1.

(11) Vehicle. — Aircraft, watercraft, or landcraft or other conveyance. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 2; 1977, c. 711, s. 19; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 52; 1997-456, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

(1) Attorney of record is defined to draw attention to the new provisions of Article 4 of this Chapter, Entry and Withdrawal of Attorney in Criminal Case, and the obligations which that designation carries with it.

(2) Clerk, (3) district court, (6) officer, and (9) superior court are defined here because these "shorthand" terms are used throughout the Chapter for convenience and ease of expression and consistently are intended to carry the definition listed here.

(4) District solicitor and (7) solicitor are defined to distinguish the general but less controversial authority given the persons representing the State including assistant solicitors and even temporary "per diem" prosecutors acting for the district solicitor from the authority granted only to the elected district solicitor to whose personal attention certain critical decisions in prosecution of cases and selecting extraordinary investigative techniques are reserved. For example, only the elected district solicitor (and not an assistant solicitor) may make decisions in the area of granting immunity.

(5) Judicial official is defined to distinguish the broader group, i.e., judges, clerks and magistrates (without having to enumerate the categories on each occasion), from any one classification of persons exercising judicial functions, i.e., district court judge.

(8) State is patterned after the Illinois statute's definition. (Ill. Rev. Stat. Ch. 38, § 2-21.)

(10) Superior court judge is intended to encompass all those superior court judges, regular or special, resident or presiding in a district, without having to recite the extended definition. Where a more restricted classification such as the senior resident superior court judge is intended, the less broad term is spelled out in the statute.

(11) Vehicle is intended to be more broad than the Chapter 20 of the General Statutes (Motor Vehicles Law) definition for purposes of the search sections. Because of the wide acceptance of the Chapter 20 definition of a vehicle, the more broad definition was inserted.

The Commission resisted the tendency to define words or terms unnecessarily. Only when the Commission intended a distinction which it found might not be recognized in the text of the statute or where a "shorthand" term was employed for ease of drafting and economy of words were definitions included here. Terms which have a special meaning in one Article only are defined in the text of the Article without needless repetition here.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

Subdivisions (0.1) and (1) of this section were renumbered as subdivisions (1) and (1a), respectively, pursuant to Session Laws 1997-456, s. 27, which authorized the Revisor of Statutes to renumber or reletter sections and parts of sections having a number or letter designation that is incompatible with the General Assembly's computer database.

CASE NOTES

There are no cases which have construed subdivision (4a), which governs "entry of judgment" in criminal cases. However, § 1A-1, Rule 58 is sufficiently analogous to provide guidance in the area. State v. Boone, 310 N.C. 284, 311 S.E.2d 552 (1984).

Subdivision (4a) Should Apply to Judgments and Orders. — Although subdivision (4a) of this section does not specifically apply to orders, the Supreme Court thinks the same rule should apply to judgments and orders. State v. Boone, 310 N.C. 284, 311 S.E.2d 552 (1984).

Many rights relating to the appeals process are "keyed" to the time of "entry of judgment," and it is therefore imperative that the judge's decisions become part of the court's records and that all interested persons know the exact date on which judgment is entered. State v. Boone, 310 N.C. 284, 311 S.E.2d 552 (1984).

ARTICLE 2.

Jurisdiction.

Editor's Note. — As to jurisdiction, see the Official Commentary under Article 3 of this Chapter.

§§ 15A-102 through 15A-130: Reserved for future codification purposes.

ARTICLE 3.

Venue.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Criminal Code Commission in its 1973 proposal has left an Article vacant for later dealing with the question of jurisdiction. For now, jurisdiction of courts is still primarily covered in Chapter 7A of the General Statutes. See, e.g., § 7A-271 and § 7A-273.

With respect to venue, this Article gathers together various provisions concerning venue. The Article contains or refers to most of the provisions on venue set out in proposed Chapter 15A, though it is not fully inclusive. For example, the special waiver of venue described in § 15A-1011(c) is neither covered nor cross-referenced in this Article.

In general, venue in a criminal case remains in the county in which the crime was committed. A new provision is the placing of venue in the judicial district rather than the county for certain pretrial proceedings in cases in the original jurisdiction of the superior court.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-131. Venue generally.

(a) Venue for pretrial and trial proceedings in district court of cases within the original jurisdiction of the district court lies in the county where the charged offense occurred.

(b) Except for the probable cause hearing, venue for pretrial proceedings in cases within the original jurisdiction of the superior court lies in the superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1 embracing the county where the venue for trial proceedings lies.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, venue for probable cause hearings and trial proceedings in cases within the original jurisdiction of the superior court lies in the county where the charged offense occurred. If the alleged offense is committed within the corporate limits of a municipality which is the seat of superior court and is located in more than one county, venue lies in the superior court which sits within that municipality, but upon timely objection of the defendant or the district attorney in the county in which the alleged offense occurred the case must be transferred to the county in which the alleged offense occurred.

(d) Venue for misdemeanors appealed for trial de novo in superior court lies in the county where the misdemeanor was first tried.

(e) An offense occurs in a county if any act or omission constituting part of the offense occurs within the territorial limits of the county.

(f) For the purposes of this Article, pretrial proceedings are proceedings occurring after the initial appearance before the magistrate and prior to arraignment. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 134; 1983, c. 727; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 53.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) states the rule of venue applicable in district court. This subsection is not intended to effect any change of existing law, but does by implication clarify that trial in one county rather than the other in district court is a matter of venue rather than jurisdiction.

Subsections (b), (c), and (d) state the rules of venue applicable in superior court or to cases in the original jurisdiction of the superior court. The purpose of placing pretrial venue of superior court cases in the judicial district is to facilitate discovery procedures and pretrial motions practice, including the motion to suppress. This will be particularly important in rural areas with infrequent sessions of court. The venue for the probable cause hearing remains in the county in which the crime occurred. The Commission thought that witnesses should not be ordinarily required to leave the county to testify, and this district court proceeding should be easier to schedule than motions and hearings in the superior court.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

Venue is under the control of the legislature. State v. Woodard, 123 N.C. 710, 31 S.E. 219 (1898).

Right to be tried in county where charged crime allegedly occurred is statutorily based, and is not a right grounded in the federal or State Constitutions. State v. Hood, 294 N.C. 30, 239 S.E.2d 802 (1978).

Court's Jurisdiction Must Be Averred. — In an indictment for murder, the offense must be charged in the body of the bill, to have been committed within the district over which the court has jurisdiction; it is not sufficient that the caption names the district. State v. Adams, 1 N.C. 21 (1793).

Improper venue will not deprive the court of jurisdiction. State v. Bolt, 81 N.C. App. 133, 344 S.E.2d 51 (1986).

Want of averment of proper and perfect venue is not fatal to a bill of indictment. State v. Williamson, 81 N.C. 540 (1879).

Principles of venue, not jurisdiction, are involved when deciding the proper county in which to bring a criminal action. State v. Bolt, 81 N.C. App. 133, 344 S.E.2d 51 (1986).

Crime of offering bribe to juror is committed in the county where the offer is communicated to the juror, and the proper venue is the county in which the juror was serving and in which the defendant's offer was communicated to him by his wife, although defendant communicated with the juror's kinsmen and wife in the county of their residence. State v. Noland, 204 N.C. 329, 168 S.E. 412 (1933).

As to findings of facts and the totality of the circumstances justifying trial judge's transfer of venue in a sexual offense case involving children, see State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

§ 15A-132. Concurrent venue.

(a) If acts or omissions constituting part of the commission of the charged offense occurred in more than one county, each county has concurrent venue.

(b) If charged offenses which may be joined in a single criminal pleading under G.S. 15A-926 occurred in more than one county, each county has concurrent venue as to all charged offenses.

(c) When counties have concurrent venue, the first county in which a criminal process is issued in the case becomes the county with exclusive venue. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section on concurrent venue essentially states the prior practice. With its cross reference to the joinder provisions in § 15A-926, it clarifies the rules of venue in multi-county situations. In this connection it is also important to note the rule as to when an offense occurs in a county set out in § 15A-131(e). This subsection, in conjunction with § 15A-134, should solve many of the problems treated in § 15-130 through § 15-133, but as a matter of caution the Commission recommends leaving these statutes unrepealed until after the jurisdictional provisions in Article 2 of Chapter 15A have been drafted.

CASE NOTES

Reason for grant of exclusive venue to the first court in which charges are filed is to prevent confusion and contentions between different courts, each seeking to exercise jurisdiction, and not to shield one accused of crime from prosecution when the court in which a complaint is first lodged loses its exclusive venue by dismissal of the case. State v. Paige, 316 N.C. 630, 343 S.E.2d 848 (1986).

Loss of Exclusive Venue When Process Is Dismissed. — A county which has acquired exclusive venue pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of this section loses that exclusive venue when the criminal process upon which the exclusive venue is based is dismissed. State v. Paige, 316 N.C. 630, 343 S.E.2d 848 (1986).

An indictment returned "no true bill" does not involve the issuance of criminal process, since it lacks the force and effect to instigate criminal action against an individual. State v. Vines, 317 N.C. 242, 345 S.E.2d 169 (1986).

Cited in State v. Bolt, 81 N.C. App. 133, 344 S.E.2d 51 (1986); State v. Carter, 96 N.C. App. 611, 386 S.E.2d 620 (1989).

§ 15A-133. Waiver of venue; motion for change of venue; indictment may be returned in other county.

(a) A waiver of venue must be in writing and signed by the defendant and the prosecutor indicating the consent of all parties to the waiver. The waiver must specify what stages of the proceedings are affected by the waiver, and the county to which venue is changed. If the venue is to be laid in a county in another prosecutorial district, the consent in writing of the prosecutor in that district must be filed with the clerks of both counties.

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 688, s. 2.

(c) Motions for change of venue by the defendant are made under G.S. 15A-957. If venue is laid in a county in another prosecutorial district by order of the judge ruling on the motion, no consent of any prosecutor is required.

(d) If venue is changed to a county in another prosecutorial district, whether upon waiver of venue or by order of a judge, the prosecutor of the prosecutorial district where the case originated must prosecute the case unless the prosecutor of the district to which venue has been changed consents to conduct the prosecution.

(e) If venue is changed, whether upon waiver of venue or by order of a judge, the grand jury in the county to which venue has been transferred has the power to return an indictment in the case. If an indictment has already been returned before the change of venue, no new indictment is necessary and prosecution may be had in the new county under the original indictment. (1921, c. 12, ss. 1, 2; C.S., ss. 4606(a), 4606(b); 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 54; 1989, c. 688, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) sets out the procedure to be followed when there is a voluntary change of venue with the consent of all parties. The subsection makes clear that the waiver may be as to only a particular proceeding or stage of the proceedings rather than the more usual change of venue for all subsequent stages of a proceeding.

Subsection (b) ties in with the speedy trial provisions of Article 35.

Subsection (c) refers to the situation in which the defendant makes a motion for a change of venue because he cannot obtain a fair trial in the county in which venue is laid. If the judge orders the change of venue in accordance with § 15A-957, the judge may shift venue to another county in the judicial district or to another county in an adjoining judicial district.

In the past it has not always been clear, upon a change of venue to another district, which solicitor was responsible for prosecution of the case. Subsection (d) states the Commission's opinion that the solicitor who first had the case should remain primarily responsible for prosecuting it.

Subsection (e) is intended to carry forward the provisions of § 15-135 and § 15-136.

CASE NOTES

The trial court did not violate §§ 15A-957 and 15A-958 or this section by ordering a special venire from another county; as the defendant never moved for a change of venue, § 15A-957 did not apply and there was no violation of this section where the trial court ruled on the issue of venue for jury selection. Furthermore, given the nature and circumstances of the alleged crimes against two law enforcement officers and defendants' acquiescence to the stipulation and proposal at the hearing, the trial court had the inherent authority to order the change of venue for the limited purpose of jury selection. State v. Golphin, 352 N.C. 364, 533 S.E.2d 168 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1379, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1380, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001).

§ 15A-134. Offense occurring in part outside North Carolina.

If a charged offense occurred in part in North Carolina and in part outside North Carolina, a person charged with that offense may be tried in this State if he has not been placed in jeopardy for the identical offense in another state. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is new. It states the constitutional rule. Cf. Ashe v. Swenson, 397 U.S. 436, 90 S. Ct. 1189, 25 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1970); Waller v. Florida, 397 U.S. 387, 90 S. Ct. 1184, 25 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1970).

Cross References. — As to assault in this State, death in another, see § 15-131. As to person in this State injuring one in another, see § 15-132. As to offenses that may be prosecuted in county where death occurs, see § 15-133.

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction Where Any Part of Crime Occurred. — This section does not fix jurisdiction where the crime was completed, but where any part of the crime occurred. State v. First Resort Properties, 81 N.C. App. 499, 344 S.E.2d 354 (1986).

Fact that check was issued in North Carolina would support jurisdiction of worthless check charge under this section, even though an officer of defendant added the date and payee's name in Florida, and it was physically transferred in Florida, subject to the condition that payee hold it until officer got back in touch with him. Moreover, officer's call four days later from North Carolina authorizing payee to deposit the check also supported a conclusion that some part of the delivery occurred in North Carolina. State v. First Resort Properties, 81 N.C. App. 499, 344 S.E.2d 354 (1986).

Proof of State Offense Required. — In a prosecution for larceny and felonious possession of stolen goods, the bare fact that defendant possessed the car in the District of Columbia a few hours after its theft from an automobile dealership in North Carolina, without any supporting evidence was not sufficient to establish a prima facie showing of jurisdiction to warrant its submission to the jury. There was not a rational connection between the defendant's possession of the stolen vehicle in Washington and the inference which the jury would be allowed to draw, that being the defendant possessed the car in North Carolina, to meet due process standards. State v. Williams, 74 N.C. App. 131, 327 S.E.2d 300 (1985).

§ 15A-135. Allegation of venue conclusive in absence of timely motion.

Allegations of venue in any criminal pleading become conclusive in the absence of a timely motion to dismiss for improper venue under G.S. 15A-952. A defendant may move to dismiss for improper venue upon trial de novo in superior court, provided he did not in the district court with benefit of counsel stipulate venue or expressly waive his right to contest venue. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section carries forward the provisions contained in § 15-134 in modified form. The plea in abatement is replaced by the motion to dismiss for improper venue, and the requirement that the defendant allege the county in which venue should properly be laid is omitted.

The Commission's proposal would have made allegation of venue conclusive in misdemeanor cases tried in the district court absent timely motion to contest venue in that court. The purpose was to prevent use of the venue objection in superior court upon trial de novo, and accounts in part for the wording in §§ 15A-952(e) and 15A-953. This provision was in line with the thrust of § 15-134, and was sufficiently strong to cause the Commission to recommend repeal of § 15-129, which is being repealed upon the effective date of the new code. In the General Assembly, however, this section was rewritten to preserve the right to raise venue objections for the first time in superior court upon trial de novo; if the motion is not timely made there, of course, the allegation as to venue would become conclusive.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former § 15-134.

Effect of Section. — The allegation in a criminal pleading of the county where the charged offense occurred is not essentially one of venue. Under the common law a grand jury could only indict for crimes which allegedly occurred in its own county. The statement of the county where the offense took place established prima facie jurisdiction of the grand jury to return the indictment. Former § 15-134 did not change this. It merely limited a defendant's means of attacking the indictment on the ground that the offense occurred in a county other than that named in the indictment. Current § 15A-135, however, only limits a defendant's means of attacking venue. Since the statement in an indictment of the county where the crime allegedly occurred establishes prima facie jurisdiction, a challenge to this statement can be asserted at any time as stated in § 15A-952(d). State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

Purpose of Former § 15-134. — Former § 15-134 was intended to provide relief from difficulties originating in doubt, entertained in good faith, as to the county in which the offense was committed, and would not be construed to modify the common law beyond the reasonable scope of its manifest purpose. State v. Mitchell, 202 N.C. 439, 163 S.E. 581 (1932).

The purpose of former § 15-134 was to forestall the possibility that a criminal offender would escape punishment merely because of uncertainty as to the county in which the crime was committed. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The mischief intended to be remedied by former § 15-134 was the difficulty encountered by the court in effecting the conviction of persons who had violated the criminal law of the state where the offense was committed near the boundaries of counties which were undetermined or unknown. And it often happened that, where the boundaries were established and known, it was uncertain from the proof whether the offense was committed on the one or the other side of the line, and, in consequence of the uncertainty and the doubt arising from it, offenders went "unwhipped of justice." This was the evil intended to be remedied. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967), overruled on other grounds, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

Demurrer to Evidence Improper Remedy. — An objection to venue must be taken by plea in abatement (now motion to dismiss), and a demurrer to the evidence on this ground was properly overruled. State v. Burton, 138 N.C. 575, 50 S.E. 214 (1905).

Burden of Proof Is on State. — This section, like former § 15-134, is silent concerning the burden of proof with regard to proper venue. Hence, the common law controls and the burden of proof is upon the State to show that the offense occurred in the county named in the bill of indictment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

Former § 15-134 did not state which party had the burden of proof if a plea in abatement was filed. At common law, the burden of proof was upon the State to prove that the offense occurred in the county named in the bill of indictment. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967), overruled on other grounds, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

But Venue Need Not Be Shown beyond Reasonable Doubt. — Venue need not be shown beyond a reasonable doubt, since it does not affect the question of a defendant's guilt or the power of the court to try him. Proof of venue by a preponderance of the evidence is sufficient. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

When Objection to Venue Waived. — Objection to venue is waived unless objection is taken in apt time by plea in abatement (now motion to dismiss). State v. Lytle, 117 N.C. 799, 23 S.E. 476 (1895); State v. Woodard, 123 N.C. 710, 31 S.E. 219 (1898); State v. Holder, 133 N.C. 709, 45 S.E. 862 (1903).

Crime Deemed to Have Taken Place Where Alleged. — A criminal offense is deemed to have taken place in the county in which the indictment charges it occurred, unless the defendant deny the same by the plea in abatement (now motion to dismiss). State v. Allen, 107 N.C. 805, 11 S.E. 1016 (1890); State v. Oliver, 186 N.C. 329, 119 S.E. 370 (1923).

Where there is no challenge to the indictment prior to a plea of guilty, the offense is deemed to have been committed in the county alleged in the indictment. State v. McKeon, 223 N.C. 404, 26 S.E.2d 914 (1943).

An offense is deemed to have been committed in the county in which it is laid in the indictment unless the defendant shall deny the same by plea in abatement (now motion to dismiss). State v. Dozier, 277 N.C. 615, 178 S.E.2d 412 (1971).

Where a prisoner is charged with killing the deceased in the county in which the indictment is found, the State need not prove that the offense was committed in that county. Such allegation is to be taken as true unless the prisoner denies the same by plea in abatement (now motion to dismiss). State v. Outerbridge, 82 N.C. 617 (1880).

§ 15A-136. Venue for sexual offenses.

If a person is transported by any means, with the intent to violate any of the provisions of Article 7A of Chapter 14 (§ 14-27.1 et seq.) of the General Statutes and the intent is followed by actual violation thereof, the defendant may be tried in the county where transportation was offered, solicited, begun, continued or ended. (1979, c. 682, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was enacted by Session Laws 1979, c. 682, which provides in s. 13:

"Sec. 13. All laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed, provided however, nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal any portion of Article 26 of Chapter 14 which relates to offenses against public morality and decency."

CASE NOTES

This section addresses a matter of venue, i.e., the location of the tribunal where a defendant may be compelled to stand trial. State v. Flowers, 318 N.C. 208, 347 S.E.2d 773 (1986).

No provision of this section expands the power of grand juries to permit them to return indictments for criminal activity outside their territorial boundaries. State v. Flowers, 318 N.C. 208, 347 S.E.2d 773 (1986).

Article 4.

Entry and Withdrawal of Attorney in Criminal Case.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Several provisions of Chapter 15A add requirements that notice be given a defendant's attorney during pretrial stages of criminal proceedings. It became obvious from discussions within the Commission that in many instances the State will not know who is representing a defendant. The Commission therefore requested that a draft be prepared requiring counsel entering a case to file a notice of entry in the case.

Another problem reported by a number of members of the Commission was that caused by the defendant who said he would employ his own attorney but who shows up at a subsequent stage of the proceedings without counsel. Getting counsel, or continuing the case until he can retain counsel, causes a number of delays. The defendant in some instances has conferred with an attorney but has not yet been able to obtain the money for the fee and actually retain the attorney; in other cases, the defendant has never gotten around to employing a lawyer. In a few situations an attorney may have appeared for the defendant in a limited capacity, for example at a bail hearing or at preliminary hearing, but has declined to accept the case — either unconditionally or without the payment of additional remuneration. The Commission asked one of its committees to investigate this problem, and that committee studied a draft which would have placed fairly stringent conditions upon attorneys taking any part in a criminal case. The draft required filing with the clerk whenever entry in the case was made; it defined entry as acting on the defendant's behalf in any manner or accepting any compensation, including part payment or installment payments; and it required leave of the court for an attorney to withdraw from the case.

After reviewing a toned-down version of the original draft, the Commission made additional modifications. It realized the problems which uncounseled defendants cause the courts, but it felt that defense lawyers earning their livelihood from the practice of criminal law should not be boxed in with restrictions which might drastically affect their relations with clients and their modes of arranging for payment of fees. The resulting proposal is contained in this Article, as further liberalized by the General Assembly in the course of passage. Though relatively mild, it should still lead to substantial improvement over the former situation.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-141. When entry of attorney in criminal proceeding occurs.

An attorney enters a criminal proceeding when he:

(1) Files a written notice of entry with the clerk indicating an intent to represent a defendant in a specified criminal proceeding; or

(2) Appears in a criminal proceeding without limiting the extent of his representation; or

(3) Appears in a criminal proceeding for a limited purpose and indicates the extent of his representation by filing written notice thereof with the clerk; or

(4) Accepts assignment to represent an indigent defendant under the terms of Article 36 of Chapter 7A of the General Statutes; or

(5) Files a written waiver of arraignment, except that representation in this instance may not be limited pursuant to subdivision (3). (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 135.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section lists the ways in which an attorney enters a criminal case. Two of them involve filing written documents with the clerk. Filing is not required in two instances, but they are situations in which the clerk would either be involved in the entry (assignment of counsel) or would be able to observe the entry (appearance in a proceeding). The fifth situation concerns the attorney who limits the scope of his representation; he may either state the limitation orally in open court at his initial appearance or file a written notice as to what the limits are. It seems implicit that the written notice would be filed prior to or at the time of the initial appearance, for otherwise there would be a general appearance under subdivision (2).

There is no restriction on the attorney's right to enter the case for a limited purpose, if he files written notice of the limitation or orally notes it in open court, except as provided in subdivision (5).

CASE NOTES

§ 15A-142. Requirement that clerk record entry.

The clerk must note each entry by an attorney in the records of the proceeding. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

As indicated in the commentary to the preceding section, the clerk should be able to determine when an entry is made under the terms of this Article in order to perform his duty of noting this in the records. In district court the only effective record of the proceedings is the case record, and entry should be made there. In superior court, if entry is made for the first time, entry would have to be noted in the minutes of the proceeding, but the clerk should also note entry in the case records.

It may be of interest to compare the provisions of Rule 303(a) of the Pennsylvania Rules of Criminal Procedure:

"(a) Counsel for defendant shall enter his appearance in writing with the clerk of courts promptly after being retained or appointed and serve a copy thereof on the attorney for the Commonwealth. If a firm name is entered, the name of an individual lawyer shall be designated as being responsible for the conduct of the case.

"Counsel shall not be permitted to represent a defendant following a preliminary hearing unless his appearance is entered."

§ 15A-143. Attorney making general entry obligated to represent defendant at all subsequent stages.

An attorney who enters a criminal proceeding without limiting the extent of his representation pursuant to G.S. 15A-141(3) undertakes to represent the defendant for whom the entry is made at all subsequent stages of the case until entry of final judgment, at the trial stage. An attorney who appears for a limited purpose under the provisions of G.S. 15A-141(3) undertakes to represent the defendant only for that purpose and is deemed to have withdrawn from the proceedings, without the need for permission of the court, when that purpose is fulfilled. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 1117.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The purpose of this section is self-evident in the light of the general commentary for this Article. This section was modified after introduction to bind the lawyer's freedom to withdraw only in the particular division of the court in which he is appearing. Also added after introduction was the clarifying sentence concerning automatic withdrawal in the case of a limited appearance.

If circumstances do arise which make it necessary or desirable for an attorney to withdraw from a case, there should be no difficulty in obtaining permission from the court. Compare Rule 303(b) of the Pennsylvania Rules of Criminal Procedure:

"(b) Counsel for a defendant may not withdraw his appearance except by leave of court. Such leave shall be granted only upon application made and served on the attorney for the Commonwealth and the client, unless the interests of justice otherwise require."

CASE NOTES

Quoted in State v. Bailey, 145 N.C. App. 13, 548 S.E.2d 814 (2001).

§ 15A-144. Withdrawal of attorney with permission of court.

The court may allow an attorney to withdraw from a criminal proceeding upon a showing of good cause. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The court in this instance would be the judge presiding over the court having jurisdiction of the case. The statute does not specifically direct it, but it is assumed the clerk would note withdrawals of attorneys in the records of the case.

Legal Periodicals. — For note discussing failure to communicate and effective assistance of counsel in light of State v. Hutchins, 303 N.C. 321, 279 S.E.2d 788 (1981), see 13 N.C. Cent. L.J. 101 (1981).

CASE NOTES

Violation of Constitutional Right to Counsel Not Found. — Where the defendant failed to show that he was prejudiced by the court's denial of his counsel's motion to withdraw, his Sixth Amendment guarantee of effective assistance of counsel was not violated. State v. Cole, 343 N.C. 399, 471 S.E.2d 362 (1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1064, 117 S. Ct. 703, 136 L. Ed. 2d 624 (1997).

The fact that defense counsel attempted to withdraw from the case as a result of defendant's violent behavior did not deprive defendant of effective assistance of counsel, particularly as defendant would not show that he recieved anything less than professional representation. State v. Thomas, 350 N.C. 315, 514 S.E.2d 486 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 503, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1999).

Short-form indictment was not constitutionally defective simply because it did not allege any of the elements of first-degree murder that distinguished it from second-degree murder. State v. Nolen, 144 N.C. App. 172, 550 S.E.2d 783 (2001).

Applied in State v. Logner, 297 N.C. 539, 256 S.E.2d 166 (1979); State v. Bailey, 145 N.C. App. 13, 548 S.E.2d 814 (2001).

Article 5.

Expunction of Records.

§ 15A-145. Expunction of records for first offenders under the age of 18 at the time of conviction of misdemeanor; expunction of certain other misdemeanors.

(a) Whenever any person who has (i) not yet attained the age of 18 years and has not previously been convicted of any felony, or misdemeanor other than a traffic violation, under the laws of the United States, the laws of this State or any other state, pleads guilty to or is guilty of a misdemeanor other than a traffic violation, or (ii) not yet attained the age of 21 years and has not previously been convicted of any felony, or misdemeanor other than a traffic violation, under the laws of the United States, the laws of this State or any other state, pleads guilty to or is guilty of a misdemeanor possession of alcohol pursuant to G.S. 18B-302(b)(1), he may file a petition in the court where he was convicted for expunction of the misdemeanor from his criminal record. The petition cannot be filed earlier than two years after the date of the conviction or any period of probation, whichever occurs later, and the petition shall contain, but not be limited to, the following:

(1) An affidavit by the petitioner that he has been of good behavior for the two-year period since the date of conviction of the misdemeanor in question and has not been convicted of any felony, or misdemeanor other than a traffic violation, under the laws of the United States or the laws of this State or any other state.

(2) Verified affidavits of two persons who are not related to the petitioner or to each other by blood or marriage, that they know the character and reputation of the petitioner in the community in which he lives and that his character and reputation are good.

(3) A statement that the petition is a motion in the cause in the case wherein the petitioner was convicted.

(4) Affidavits of the clerk of superior court, chief of police, where appropriate, and sheriff of the county in which the petitioner was convicted and, if different, the county of which the petitioner is a resident, showing that the petitioner has not been convicted of a felony or misdemeanor other than a traffic violation under the laws of this State at any time prior to the conviction for the misdemeanor in question or during the two-year period following that conviction.

The petition shall be served upon the district attorney of the court wherein the case was tried resulting in conviction. The district attorney shall have 10 days thereafter in which to file any objection thereto and shall be duly notified as to the date of the hearing of the petition.

The judge to whom the petition is presented is authorized to call upon a probation officer for any additional investigation or verification of the petitioner's conduct during the two-year period that he deems desirable.

(b) If the court, after hearing, finds that the petitioner had remained of good behavior and been free of conviction of any felony or misdemeanor, other than a traffic violation, for two years from the date of conviction of the misdemeanor in question, and (i) petitioner was not 18 years old at the time of the conviction in question, or (ii) petitioner was not 21 years old at the time of the conviction of possession of alcohol pursuant to G.S. 18B-302(b)(1), it shall order that such person be restored, in the contemplation of the law, to the status he occupied before such arrest or indictment or information. No person as to whom such order has been entered shall be held thereafter under any provision of any laws to be guilty of perjury or otherwise giving a false statement by reason of his failure to recite or acknowledge such arrest, or indictment, information, or trial, or response to any inquiry made of him for any purpose.

(c) The court shall also order that the said misdemeanor conviction be expunged from the records of the court, and direct all law-enforcement agencies bearing record of the same to expunge their records of the conviction. The clerk shall forward a certified copy of the order to the sheriff, chief of police, or other arresting agency. The sheriff, chief or head of such other arresting agency shall then transmit the copy of the order with a form supplied by the State Bureau of Investigation to the State Bureau of Investigation, and the State Bureau of Investigation shall forward the order to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The cost of expunging such records shall be taxed against the petitioner.

(d) The clerk of superior court in each county in North Carolina shall, as soon as practicable after each term of court in his county, file with the Administrative Office of the Courts, the names of those persons granted a discharge under the provisions of this section, and the Administrative Office of the Courts shall maintain a confidential file containing the names of persons granted conditional discharges. The information contained in such file shall be disclosed only to judges of the General Court of Justice of North Carolina for the purpose of ascertaining whether any person charged with an offense has been previously granted a discharge. (1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 748; 1975, c. 650, s. 5; 1977, c. 642, s. 1; c. 699, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 431, ss. 1, 2; 1985, c. 636, s. 1; 1999-406, s. 8.)

Session Laws 1999-406, s. 18, states that this act, which added clause (ii) to subsections (a) and (b) and made other conforming amendments in this section, does not obligate the General Assembly to appropriate additional funds, and that this act shall be implemented with funds available or appropriated to the Department of Transportation and the Administrative Office of the Courts.

Section Applicable to Offenses Which Occurred at Any Time and Were Committed by Individual under Age 18. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Ray H. Garland, Deputy Director, State Bureau of Investigation, 43 N.C.A.G. 1 (1973).

Consolidation of Several Misdemeanor Offenses for Trial. — Where a person under the age of 18 years, who has not previously or subsequently been convicted of any offense, is charged with several misdemeanor offenses, the charges are consolidated for trial and judgment, and the sentence imposed is within the statutory limit for conviction of a single offense, the court may order expungement of the record pursuant to this section. See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Russell G. Walker, Jr., District Attorney, Nineteenth-B Prosecutorial District, 49 N.C.A.G. 17 (1979).

Expungement of Multiple Offenses. — Where a person is charged or convicted of several misdemeanor offenses, and the charges are not consolidated for trial and judgment, nor arise from the same transaction or occurrence, the court may not order an expungement of the multiple offenses pursuant to this section and § 15A-146. See opinion of Attorney General to James J. Coman, Director, State Bureau of Investigation, — N.C.A.G. — (January 3, 1996).

Construction. — This section and § 15A-146 which prescribe procedures for expunction of criminal records, operate as exceptions to the general prohibition to the alteration of records. Thus, the statutes should be strictly construed. See opinion of Attorney General to James J. Coman, Director, State Bureau of Investigation, — N.C.A.G. — (January 3, 1996).

Multiple Expunctions Not Authorized. — The precise language of this section clearly does not authorize multiple expunctions or one expunction of multiple offenses. See opinion of Attorney General to James J. Coman, Director, State Bureau of Investigation, — N.C.A.G. — (January 3, 1996).

§ 15A-146. Expunction of records when charges are dismissed or there are findings of not guilty.

(a) If any person is charged with a crime, either a misdemeanor or a felony, or was charged with an infraction under G.S. 18B-302(i) prior to December 1, 1999, and the charge is dismissed, or a finding of not guilty or not responsible is entered, that person may apply to the court of the county where the charge was brought for an order to expunge from all official records any entries relating to his apprehension or trial. The court shall hold a hearing on the application and, upon finding that the person had not previously received an expungement under this section, G.S. 15A-145, or G.S. 90-96, and that the person had not previously been convicted of any felony under the laws of the United States, this State, or any other state, the court shall order the expunction. No person as to whom such an order has been entered shall be held thereafter under any provision of any law to be guilty of perjury, or to be guilty of otherwise giving a false statement or response to any inquiry made for any purpose, by reason of his failure to recite or acknowledge any expunged entries concerning apprehension or trial.

(b) The court may also order that the said entries shall be expunged from the records of the court, and direct all law-enforcement agencies bearing record of the same to expunge their records of the entries. The clerk shall forward a certified copy of the order to the sheriff, chief of police, or other arresting agency. The sheriff, chief or head of such other arresting agency shall then transmit the copy of the order with the form supplied by the State Bureau of Investigation to the State Bureau of Investigation, and the State Bureau of Investigation shall forward the order to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The costs of expunging such records shall be taxed against the petitioner.

(b1) Any person entitled to expungement under this section may also apply to the court for an order expunging DNA records when the person's case has been dismissed by the trial court and the person's DNA record or profile has been included in the State DNA Database and the person's DNA sample is stored in the State DNA Databank. A copy of the application for expungement of the DNA record or DNA sample shall be served on the district attorney for the judicial district in which the felony charges were brought not less than 20 days prior to the date of the hearing on the application. If the application for expungement is granted, a certified copy of the trial court's order dismissing the charges shall be attached to an order of expungement. The order of expungement shall include the name and address of the defendant and the defendant's attorney and shall direct the SBI to send a letter documenting expungement as required by subsection (b2) of this section.

(b2) Upon receiving an order of expungement entered pursuant to subsection (b1) of this section, the SBI shall purge the DNA record and all other identifying information from the State DNA Database and the DNA sample stored in the State DNA Databank covered by the order, except that the order shall not apply to other offenses committed by the individual that qualify for inclusion in the State DNA Database and the State DNA Databank. A letter documenting expungement of the DNA record and destruction of the DNA sample shall be sent by the SBI to the defendant and the defendant's attorney at the address specified by the court in the order of expungement.

(c) The Clerk of Superior Court in each county in North Carolina shall, as soon as practicable after each term of court in his county, file with the Administrative Office of the Courts, the names of those persons granted an expungement under the provisions of this section and the Administrative Office of the Courts shall maintain a confidential file containing the names of persons granted such expungement. The information contained in such files shall be disclosed only to judges of the General Court of Justice of North Carolina for the purpose of ascertaining whether any person charged with an offense has been previously granted an expungement. (1979, c. 61; 1985, c. 636, ss. 1-7; 1991, c. 326, s. 1; 1997-138, s. 1; 1999-406, s. 9; 2001-108, s. 2; 2001-282, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-406, s. 18, states that this act, which amended the first sentence of subsection (a), does not obligate the General Assembly to appropriate additional funds, and that this act shall be implemented with funds available or appropriated to the Department of Transportation and the Administrative Office of the Courts.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-108, s. 2, effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to charges filed before, on, or after that date, inserted "under this section, G.S. 15A-145, or G.S. 90-96," in subsection (a).

Session Laws 2001-282, s. 1, effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to evidence, records, and samples in the possession of a governmental entity on or after that date, added subsections (b1) and (b2).

Expungement of Multiple Offenses. — Where a person is charged or convicted of several misdemeanor offenses, and the charges are not consolidated for trial and judgment, nor arise from the same transaction or occurrence, the court may not order an expungement of the multiple offenses pursuant to § 15A-145 and this section. See opinion of Attorney General to James J. Coman, Director, State Bureau of Investigation, — N.C.A.G. — (January 3, 1996).

An expungement should only be allowed for a singular offense and not for multiple offenses occurring over a period of time. See opinion of Attorney General to James J. Coman, Director, State Bureau of Investigation, — N.C.A.G. — (January 3, 1996).

Construction. — Section 15A-145 and this section which prescribe procedures for expunction of criminal records, operate as exceptions to the general prohibition to the alteration of records. Thus, the statutes should be strictly construed. See opinion of Attorney General to James J. Coman, Director, State Bureau of Investigation, — N.C.A.G. — (January 3, 1996).

§ 15A-147. Expunction of records when charges are dismissed or there are findings of not guilty as a result of identity fraud.

(a) If any person is named in a charge for an infraction or a crime, either a misdemeanor or a felony, as a result of another person using the identifying information of the named person to commit an infraction or crime and the charge against the named person is dismissed, a finding of not guilty is entered, or the conviction is set aside, the named person may apply by petition or written motion to the court where the charge was last pending on a form approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts supplied by the clerk of court for an order to expunge from all official records any entries relating to the person's apprehension, charge, or trial. The court, after notice to the district attorney, shall hold a hearing on the motion or petition and, upon finding that the person's identity was used without permission and the charges were dismissed or the person was found not guilty, the court shall order the expunction.

(b) No person as to whom such an order has been entered under this section shall be held thereafter under any provision of any law to be guilty of perjury, or to be guilty of otherwise giving a false statement or response to any inquiry made for any purpose, by reason of the person's failure to recite or acknowledge any expunged entries concerning apprehension, charge, or trial.

(c) The court shall also order that the said entries shall be expunged from the records of the court and direct all law enforcement agencies, the Division of Motor Vehicles, or any other State or local government agencies bearing record of the same to expunge their records of the entries. The clerk shall forward a certified copy of the order to the sheriff, chief of police, or other charging agency; and, when applicable, to the Division of Motor Vehicles and any other State or local agency. The sheriff, chief, or head of such other charging agency shall then transmit the copy of the order with the form supplied by the State Bureau of Investigation to the State Bureau of Investigation, and the State Bureau of Investigation shall forward the order to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Upon receipt of a certified copy of the order, the agency must purge its records as required by this section. The costs of expunging these records shall not be taxed against the petitioner.

(d) The Division of Motor Vehicles shall expunge from its records entries made as a result of the charge or conviction ordered expunged under this section. The Division of Motor Vehicles shall also reverse any administrative actions taken against a person whose record is expunged under this section as a result of the charges or convictions expunged, including the assessment of drivers license points and drivers license suspension or revocation. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Chapter, the Division of Motor Vehicles shall provide to the person whose motor vehicle record is expunged under this section a certified corrected driver history at no cost and shall reinstate at no cost any drivers license suspended or revoked as a result of a charge or conviction expunged under this section.

(e) Any other applicable State or local government agency shall expunge from its records entries made as a result of the charge or conviction ordered expunged under this section. The agency shall also reverse any administrative actions taken against a person whose record is expunged under this section as a result of the charges or convictions expunged. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the normal fee for any reinstatement of a license or privilege resulting under this section shall be waived.

(f) Any insurance company that charged any additional premium based on insurance points assessed against a policyholder as a result of a charge or conviction that was expunged under this section shall refund those additional premiums to the policyholder upon notification of the expungement. (2001-108, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-108, s. 3, makes this section effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to charges filed before, on, or after the effective date.

§ 15A-148. Expunction of DNA records when charges are dismissed on appeal or pardon of innocence is granted.

(a) Upon a motion by the defendant following the issuance of a final order by an appellate court reversing and dismissing a conviction of an offense for which a DNA analysis was done in accordance with Article 13 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes, or upon receipt of a pardon of innocence with respect to any such offense, the court shall issue an order of expungement of the DNA record and samples in accordance with subsection (b) of this section. The order of expungement shall include the name and address of the defendant and the defendant's attorney and shall direct the SBI to send a letter documenting expungement as required by subsection (b) of this section.

(b) When an order of expungement has been issued pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, the order of expungement, together with a certified copy of the final appellate court order reversing and dismissing the conviction or a certified copy of the instrument granting the pardon of innocence, shall be provided to the SBI by the clerk of court. Upon receiving an order of expungement for an individual whose DNA record or profile has been included in the State DNA Database and whose DNA sample is stored in the State DNA Databank, the DNA profile shall be expunged and the DNA sample destroyed by the SBI, except that the order shall not apply to other offenses committed by the individual that qualify for inclusion in the State DNA Database and the State DNA Databank. A letter documenting expungement of the DNA record and destruction of the DNA sample shall be sent by the SBI to the defendant and the defendant's attorney at the address specified by the court in the order of expungement. The SBI shall adopt procedures to comply with this subsection. (2001-282, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-282, s. 6, made this section effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to evidence, records, and samples in the possession of a governmental entity on or after that date.

Search and Seizure by Consent.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Article expresses the common-law authority to make searches upon consent. It requires no warnings to the person from whom consent is sought, thus making it necessary only that the consent be voluntary, under the decision in Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 93 S. Ct. 2041, 36 L. Ed. 2d 854 (1973).

§ 15A-221. General authorization; definition of "consent".

(a) Authority to Search and Seize Pursuant to Consent. — Subject to the limitations in the other provisions of this Article, a law-enforcement officer may conduct a search and make seizures, without a search warrant or other authorization, if consent to the search is given.

(b) Definition of "Consent". — As used in this Article, "consent" means a statement to the officer, made voluntarily and in accordance with the requirements of G.S. 15A-222, giving the officer permission to make a search. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article discussing the search and seizure provisions of Chapter 15A, see 52 N.C.L. Rev. 277 (1973).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

One may submit or consent to a warrantless search or seizure. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

The defendant voluntarily consented to the search of his person where the court found that after defendant agreed to speak with the officers, the officers noticed that defendant had an odor of alcohol about him and that his eyes appeared to be dilated and that when the officers asked defendant if they could search him, he agreed. State v. Steen, 352 N.C. 227, 536 S.E.2d 1 (2000), cert denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1131, 148 L. Ed. 2d 997 (2001).

And Miranda Warnings Are Not Required. — The warnings required by Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S. Ct. 1602, 16 L. Ed. 2d 694, 10 A.L.R.3d 974 (1966), in order to make competent a confession made in custody, need not be given by officers before obtaining the consent of the owner to a search of his premises. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 874, 94 S. Ct. 157, 38 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1973); State v. Lindquist, 14 N.C. App. 361, 188 S.E.2d 686 (1972).

Owner of premises may consent to a search thereof and thus waive the necessity of a valid search warrant so as to render the evidence obtained in the search competent, but to have such effect, the consent of the owner must be freely and intelligently given, without coercion, duress or fraud, and the burden is upon the State to prove that it was so, the presumption being against the waiver of fundamental constitutional rights. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971); State v. Lindquist, 14 N.C. App. 361, 188 S.E.2d 686 (1972).

Voluntariness Is Question of Fact. — The question whether a consent to a search was in fact "voluntary" or was the product of duress or coercion, expressed or implied, is a question of fact to be determined from the totality of all the circumstances. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Hearing as to Voluntariness. — When the validity of a consent to search is challenged, the trial court must conduct a voir dire hearing to determine whether the consent was in fact given voluntarily and without compulsion. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Consent Did Not Need to Be in Writing. — In its order, the trial court found that the defendant refused to sign a consent form and then concluded that the State had failed to satisfy its burden of proving that the defendant had given consent to search. The trial court's finding did not support its conclusion, and the conclusion appeared to be based on a legal misperception that consent must be in writing to be valid. There is no requirement that consent to search be made in writing, and the trial court's order simply did not resolve the issue of fact of whether the defendant gave his oral consent to search the vehicle. The evidence at the suppression hearing presented a question of fact which can be resolved only by the factfinder, largely on the credibility of the witnesses, and the case had to be remanded for a new hearing on defendant's motion to suppress. State v. Ghaffar, 93 N.C. App. 281, 377 S.E.2d 818 (1989).

Officer's threat to impound defendant's car if he would not consent to a search of the car did not constitute duress and negate the voluntary character of defendant's consent to search, since the officer had the legal right to impound the car, where the officer had probable cause to search. State v. Paschal, 35 N.C. App. 239, 241 S.E.2d 92 (1978).

Use of Evidence Obtained in Search by Consent. — Evidence obtained pursuant to the search of an automobile with the permission of the one in possession is competent against him and the occupants. State v. Jefferies, 41 N.C. App. 95, 254 S.E.2d 550, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Obtaining a search warrant does not negate prior consent to a search. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Person Without Title Without Standing to Object to Search of Car. — Burglary defendant had no standing to object to the search of a car from which evidence was taken by the FBI, where, although defendant had paid $3,500 of the $4,000 purchase price, the owner of the car dealership retained title and had given his consent to the search. State v. Mandina, 91 N.C. App. 686, 373 S.E.2d 155 (1988).

Applied in State v. Kellam, 48 N.C. App. 391, 269 S.E.2d 197 (1980); State v. McDaniels, 103 N.C. App. 175, 405 S.E.2d 358 (1991); State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

Stated in State v. Williams, 67 N.C. App. 519, 313 S.E.2d 236 (1984).

§ 15A-222. Person from whom effective consent may be obtained.

The consent needed to justify a search and seizure under G.S. 15A-221 must be given:

(1) By the person to be searched;

(2) By the registered owner of a vehicle to be searched or by the person in apparent control of its operation and contents at the time the consent is given;

(3) By a person who by ownership or otherwise is reasonably apparently entitled to give or withhold consent to a search of premises. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Consent by Person in Possession of Automobile. — Evidence obtained pursuant to the search of an automobile with the permission of the one in possession is competent against him and the occupants. State v. Faison, 17 N.C. App. 200, 193 S.E.2d 334 (1972); State v. Jefferies, 41 N.C. App. 95, 254 S.E.2d 550, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Registered Owner as Proper Person to Give Consent. — Defendant's mother, registered owner of car, and not defendant, who contended that as the "actual" owner/purchaser of the car, his consent was necessary as long as he was present, was the proper party to consent to search of automobile under this section. State v. Washington, 86 N.C. App. 235, 357 S.E.2d 419 (1987).

Tenant in possession of the premises is a person entitled to give consent to a search of the premises under subdivision (3) of this section. State v. Reagan, 35 N.C. App. 140, 240 S.E.2d 805 (1978).

The lessee of an apartment was a person authorized to give consent to a search of the premises. State v. McNeill, 33 N.C. App. 317, 235 S.E.2d 274 (1977).

Standing of Person "in Charge" of Premises. — Defendant, as agent of the lessee of the premises, and as a joint venturer with him in operating a gambling establishment thereon, was the person in charge of the premises at the time the search was made, and had sufficient standing to invoke protection against an unlawful search of the premises. State v. Miller, 16 N.C. App. 1, 190 S.E.2d 888 (1972), modified, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973), decided under prior law.

This statute places no express restriction on the authority of a wife to consent to a search of the premises she shares with her husband. Nor can such a restriction fairly be read into the broad language, since a wife clearly is "a person who by ownership or otherwise is reasonably apparently entitled to give or withhold consent to a search of [the] premises" she shares with her husband. State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

Third Party Must Possess Common Authority or Other Sufficient Relationship. — Permission to justify a search and seizure under § 15A-221 may be obtained from a third party who possessed common authority or other sufficient relationship to the premises or effects sought to be inspected. State v. Kellam, 48 N.C. App. 391, 269 S.E.2d 197 (1980).

A person may consent to a search of premises he or she jointly uses or occupies with another, and evidence found pursuant to such a search may constitutionally be used against the other if the person giving consent to the search has rights of use or occupation at least equal to those of the other. State v. Sturke, 91 N.C. App. 249, 371 S.E.2d 288, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 369, 323 N.C. 479, 373 S.E.2d 297, 373 S.E.2d 297 (1988).

Expectation of Privacy Not Relinquished by Lack of Possession. — In a prosecution for a drug offense where defendant entrusted the safekeeping of his suitcase with codefendant and codefendant told police he could not consent to the search of defendant's suitcase because it was not codefendant's, defendant had not relinquished his expectations of privacy in the contents of the suitcase through his lack of actual possession. State v. Cooke, 54 N.C. App. 33, 282 S.E.2d 800 (1981), aff'd, 306 N.C. 132, 291 S.E.2d 618 (1982).

Person Without Title Without Standing to Object to Search of Car. — Burglary defendant had no standing to object to the search of a car from which evidence was taken by the FBI, where, although defendant had paid $3,500 of the $4,000 purchase price, the owner of the car dealership retained title and had given his consent to the search. State v. Mandina, 91 N.C. App. 686, 373 S.E.2d 155 (1988).

Valid Third Party Consent for Search Shown. — Finding by the trial court that there was valid third party consent to search defendant's residence was supported by evidence where defendant's mother, who owned residence and lived there with him, gave police permission to search residence, including defendant's bedroom, and when asked if defendant was paying rent, she replied "No" but also said that defendant was "paying his way". State v. Russell, 92 N.C. App. 639, 376 S.E.2d 458 (1989).

Applied in State v. Carter, 56 N.C. App. 435, 289 S.E.2d 46 (1982); State v. McDaniels, 103 N.C. App. 175, 405 S.E.2d 358 (1991).

Quoted in State v. Moore, 316 N.C. 328, 341 S.E.2d 733 (1986).

§ 15A-223. Permissible scope of consent search and seizure.

(a) Search Limited by Scope of Consent. — A search conducted pursuant to the provisions of this Article may not exceed, in duration or physical scope, the limits of the consent given.

(b) Items Seizable as Result of Consent Search. — The things subject to seizure in the course of a search pursuant to this Article are the same as those specified in G.S. 15A-242. Upon completion of the search, the officer must make a list of the things seized, and must deliver a receipt embodying the list to the person who consented to the search and, if known, to the owner of the vehicle or premises searched. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the Supreme Court's stance on plain view searches and seizures, see 10 Campbell L. Rev. 331 (1988).

CASE NOTES

Failure to comply with subsection (b) has no constitutional significance within the meaning of § 15A-974(1). State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978).

Police officer's delivery of seizure inventory form to defendant was not an "initiation" of conversation. Indeed, law enforcement authorities are required to make a list of the things seized, and deliver a receipt embodying the list to the person who consented to the search. The fact that delivery of the receipt was made after a request for the presence of an attorney does not alter the routineness of such a delivery nor does it thereby constitute the initiation of questioning. State v. Williams, 314 N.C. 337, 333 S.E.2d 708 (1985).

Seizure of Contraband in Plain View. — In a prosecution for drug offenses where defendant consented to the search of his aircraft and during the search contraband was found in plain view, seizure of the contraband was not unconstitutional. State v. Mettrick, 54 N.C. App. 1, 283 S.E.2d 139 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 383, 289 S.E.2d 354 (1982).

Broadening of Consent. — Where the consent signed by defendant applied only to a search of his vehicle, the consent could not be broadened to include the defendant's person; thus, the search of defendant was unlawful. State v. Pearson, 348 N.C. 272, 498 S.E.2d 599 (1998).

Applied in State v. Williams, 67 N.C. App. 519, 313 S.E.2d 236 (1984).

Article 10.

Other Searches and Seizures.

§ 15A-231. Other searches and seizures.

Constitutionally permissible searches and seizures which are not regulated by the General Statutes of North Carolina are not prohibited. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Article makes clear that common-law search powers not regulated by the General Statutes are not thereby prohibited. Among the search powers not regulated are searches incident to arrest, frisks incident to lawful confrontation, and emergency searches.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

Probable cause to seize may be defined as a reasonable ground to believe that the object seized will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Mitchell, 300 N.C. 305, 266 S.E.2d 605 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1085, 101 S. Ct. 873, 66 L. Ed. 2d 810 (1981).

To establish probable cause the evidence need not amount to proof of guilt, or even to prima facie evidence of guilt, but it must be such as would actuate a reasonable man acting in good faith. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973); State v. Mitchell, 300 N.C. 305, 266 S.E.2d 605 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1085, 101 S. Ct. 873, 66 L. Ed. 2d 810 (1981).

Test Is Whether Warrant Would Issue. — One does not have probable cause unless he has information of facts which, if submitted to a magistrate, would require the issuance of an arrest warrant. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Probable Cause Determined from Factual and Practical Considerations. — The existence of "probable cause," justifying a search without a warrant is determined by factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent men, not legal technicians, act. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973); State v. Mitchell, 300 N.C. 305, 266 S.E.2d 605 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1085, 101 S. Ct. 873, 66 L. Ed. 2d 810 (1981).

Reasonableness of Search Determined from Facts. — Whether a search is unreasonable is determined by the court upon the facts of each individual case. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

The reasonableness of a search is a substantive determination to be made by the trial court from the facts and circumstances of the case and in the light of the criteria laid down by U.S. Const., Amend. IV and opinions which apply that amendment. State v. Turnbull, 16 N.C. App. 542, 192 S.E.2d 689 (1972).

Subjective Opinion and Mistaken Conclusion of Officer. — The officer's subjective opinion is not material, nor are the courts bound by an officer's mistaken legal conclusion as to the existence or nonexistence of probable cause or reasonable grounds for his actions; a search or seizure is valid when the objective facts known to the officer meet the standard required. State v. Peck, 305 N.C. 734, 291 S.E.2d 637 (1982).

Actions Not Constituting Search. — Where a petitioner's privacy was not invaded, and where there was no inspection or examination of his household, there was no search either in an actual or legal sense. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

When the evidence is delivered to a police officer upon request and without compulsion or coercion, there is no search within the constitutional prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

Where the circumstances require no search the constitutional immunity never arises, and the guarantee against unreasonable searches and seizures does not prohibit a warrantless seizure where the contraband subject matter is fully disclosed and open to the eye and hand. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976), aff'd, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

When Exclusionary Rule Applies. — Evidence is not rendered incompetent under the exclusionary rule unless it is obtained in the course of an illegal search. State v. Powell, 11 N.C. App. 465, 181 S.E.2d 754 (1971).

Seizure and Introduction of Evidence Not Prohibited Where No Search Required. — The constitutional and statutory guarantee against unreasonable search and seizure does not prohibit seizure of evidence and its introduction into evidence on a subsequent prosecution where no search is required. State v. Simmons, 278 N.C. 468, 180 S.E.2d 97 (1971).

The constitutional guarantee against unreasonable searches and seizures does not prohibit a seizure of evidence without a warrant where no search is required. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

Warrantless Search Must Fall Within Well-Delineated Exception. — The governing premise of U.S. Const., Amend. IV is that a governmental search and seizure of private property unaccompanied by prior judicial approval in the form of a warrant is per se unreasonable, unless the search falls within a well-delineated exception to the warrant requirement involving exigent circumstances. State v. Cooke, 306 N.C. 132, 291 S.E.2d 618 (1982).

Warrantless Search Never Required. — The laws of this State provide for searches made pursuant to a warrant and do not require a warrantless search under any circumstances. State v. Squire, 302 N.C. 112, 273 S.E.2d 688 (1981).

Burden of Justifying Warrantless Search. — One who seeks to justify a warrantless search has the burden of showing that the exigencies of the situation made search without a warrant imperative. State v. McCloud, 276 N.C. 518, 173 S.E.2d 753 (1970).

When the State seeks to admit evidence discovered by way of a warrantless search in a criminal prosecution, it must first show how the former intrusion was exempted from the general constitutional demand for a warrant. State v. Cooke, 306 N.C. 132, 291 S.E.2d 618 (1982).

Standing to Contest Warrantless Search. — Where victim's pocketbook was found in defendant's car and searched pursuant to a warrantless probable cause search, the contents of the pocketbook should not have been suppressed at trial since one may not object to a search or seizure of the premises or property of another because immunity to unreasonable searches and seizures is a privilege personal to those whose rights thereunder have been infringed; thus, absent ownership or possessory interest in the premises or property, a person has no standing to contest the validity of a search. State v. Greenwood, 301 N.C. 705, 273 S.E.2d 438 (1981).

Reasonable Cause for Seizure of Contraband Without Warrant. — When officers saw liquid in containers generally used to contain and transport nontaxpaid liquor, under the circumstances then existing, they had sufficient reasonable cause to believe that the jars contained nontaxpaid liquor to justify the seizure of the contraband without a search warrant. State v. Simmons, 278 N.C. 468, 180 S.E.2d 97 (1971).

Border Searches. — Searches made at the border, pursuant to the longstanding right of the sovereign to protect itself by stopping and examining persons and property crossing into this country, are reasonable simply by virtue of the fact that they occur at the border. State v. Rivard, 57 N.C. App. 672, 292 S.E.2d 174 (1982).

The single fact that the person or item in question has entered the United States from outside suffices to endow border searches with the reasonableness required by U.S. Const., Amend. IV; there is no additional requirement that there be a showing of probable cause or the prior procurement of a search warrant. State v. Rivard, 57 N.C. App. 672, 292 S.E.2d 174 (1982).

Searches of Open Fields. — There was no merit in defendant's contention that a search warrant was invalid on the ground that the affidavit for the warrant revealed that the affiant had illegally searched a cornfield in which marijuana was growing some distance behind defendant's residence prior to issuance of the warrant, since the constitutional guaranties against unreasonable search and seizure do not apply to open fields or other lands not an immediate part of the dwelling site. State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972).

Persons stopped pursuant to § 20-183 may not be indiscriminately searched or arrested without probable cause in contravention of recognized constitutional principles. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Applied in State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971); State v. Miller, 16 N.C. App. 1, 190 S.E.2d 888 (1972); State v. Jackson, 302 N.C. 101, 273 S.E.2d 666 (1981); State v. Peck, 54 N.C. App. 302, 283 S.E.2d 383 (1981).

II. SEARCH INCIDENT TO ARREST OR OTHER DETENTION.

Search Incident to Lawful Arrest. — A police officer may search the person of one whom he has lawfully arrested as an incident of such arrest. State v. Parker, 11 N.C. App. 648, 182 S.E.2d 264 (1971); State v. Jackson, 11 N.C. App. 682, 182 S.E.2d 271, aff'd, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971); State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Gibson, 15 N.C. App. 445, 190 S.E.2d 315 (1972); State v. Hughes, 27 N.C. App. 164, 218 S.E.2d 211 (1975); State v. Adkerson, 90 N.C. App. 333, 368 S.E.2d 434 (1988).

When a person is lawfully arrested, the police have the right, without a search warrant, to make a contemporaneous search of the person of the accused for weapons or for the fruits of or implements used to commit the crime. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Jackson, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971); State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973); State v. Young, 27 N.C. App. 308, 219 S.E.2d 261 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 455, 223 S.E.2d 164 (1976).

A warrantless search and seizure may be made when it is incident to a valid arrest. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Having every reason to believe that a defendant was an armed robber, fleeing from the scene of a crime just perpetrated, it is lawful for the officer, as an incident of the arrest, to search a defendant then and there for weapons and for the fruits of the robbery. State v. Woody, 277 N.C. 646, 178 S.E.2d 407 (1971).

Property Which May Be Taken in Course of Search Incident to Lawful Arrest. — In the course of a search incident to an arrest, an officer may lawfully take from the person arrested any property which such person has about him and which is connected with the crime charged or which may be required as evidence thereof; if such article is otherwise competent, it may properly be introduced in evidence by the State. State v. Parker, 11 N.C. App. 648, 182 S.E.2d 264 (1971); State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Jackson, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971); State v. Hart, 64 N.C. App. 699, 308 S.E.2d 474 (1983).

An arresting officer has the authority to seize and hold articles which he sees the accused trying to hide. State v. Fry, 13 N.C. App. 39, 185 S.E.2d 256 (1971), dismissed, 280 N.C. 495, 186 S.E.2d 514 (1972).

Weapon Need Not Be on Person Arrested. — In order to justify the seizure of a weapon as being incident to a lawful arrest it is not necessary that the weapon be on the person being arrested. State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Officer May Search Person Temporarily Detained. — When an officer temporarily detains a person because of suspicious circumstances and has reason to believe that the suspect is armed, he may conduct a weapons search which is limited to the protective purpose. State v. Streeter, 17 N.C. App. 48, 193 S.E.2d 347 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

And Other Evidence Found Need Not Be Disregarded. — If, in the conduct of the limited weapons search, contraband or evidence of a crime is of necessity exposed, the officer is not required by the Fourth Amendment to disregard such contraband or evidence of crime. State v. Streeter, 17 N.C. App. 48, 193 S.E.2d 347 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

Items So Obtained Are Not Excluded. — When law officers stopped to learn defendant's identity and his reason for being on deserted street near business establishments at 2:45 A.M., and the officers saw a bulge protruding from beneath defendant's shirt which appeared to be a gun, it was reasonable for the officers to conduct a limited protective search for weapons immediately, even if the officers had no probable cause to arrest defendant, and burglary tools necessarily exposed by the limited weapons search were lawfully obtained and not excluded by either U.S. Const., Amend. 4 or the State statute. State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

Absence of a stop-and-frisk statute is not fatal to the authority of law-enforcement officers in North Carolina to stop suspicious persons for questioning and to search those persons for dangerous weapons, since those practices are valid under the common law. State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

Arrest Without Warrant Must Be Valid for Search to Be Valid. — Although a search without a warrant is, within limits, permissible if incident to a lawful arrest, if an arrest without a warrant is to support an incidental search, the arrest must be made with probable cause. State v. Harris, 9 N.C. App. 649, 177 S.E.2d 445 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971).

Evidence Obtained Following Illegal Warrantless Arrest. — Nothing in State law requires the exclusion of evidence obtained following an arrest which is constitutionally valid but illegal for failure to first obtain an arrest warrant. Defendant may, if so advised, redress his grievance for the warrantless arrest by a civil action for damages. State v. Eubanks, 283 N.C. 556, 196 S.E.2d 706 (1973).

Search and Seizure Must Be Substantially Contemporaneous with Arrest. — For a search and seizure incident to a lawful arrest to be constitutionally permissible, it must be substantially contemporaneous with the arrest. State v. Jackson, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971).

Search Made After Defendant Is in Custody Is Not Incident to Arrest. — A search yielding burglary tools cannot be justified as a search incident to defendant's arrest where the search was made after defendant was under arrest and in custody at the police station. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Search Held Not Remote in Time or Place. — Neither the removal of a female defendant to the jail nor the delay of 30 to 45 minutes waiting for the matron to search her made a search too remote in time or place to be invalid as a search incident to a lawful arrest. State v. Jackson, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971).

Officer May Continue Search After Interruption by Hostile Crowd. — Where the officers cut short that initial search because of a growing and hostile crowd, and the danger from possible concealed weapons was not entirely eliminated by the initial quick search, it was reasonable to continue the search at the police station. State v. Gibson, 15 N.C. App. 445, 190 S.E.2d 315 (1972).

Search of Prison Escapees. — Once prison escapees are apprehended, it is entirely reasonable for the police to search them, and the fruits of that search are admissible in evidence in the case. State v. White, 21 N.C. App. 173, 203 S.E.2d 644, dismissed, 285 N.C. 595, 205 S.E.2d 726 (1974).

Arrest Held Complete for Purposes of Search Incident Thereto. — Where it was not clear whether the arresting officers stated to the defendant that he was under arrest when they took him into custody, but where it was clear that defendant was deprived of his liberty when he was detained and later taken to jail, then his arrest was complete for purposes of making a search incident to the arrest. State v. Jackson, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971).

Search Incident to Warrantless Arrest Held Proper. — Where facts fully support the conclusion that the arresting officers had reasonable grounds to believe that defendant had committed a felony and unless defendant was apprehended, he might escape and destroy any narcotic drugs he had on his person, the arrest without a warrant was justified, and a search incident to the arrest was proper. State v. Jackson, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971).

III. SEARCH OF VEHICLE.

Warrantless Searches of Automobiles Not Regulated by General Statutes. — Warrantless searches of automobiles and seizures of contraband therefrom without consent are not per se regulated by the North Carolina

General Statutes. State v. Summerlin, 35 N.C. App. 522, 241 S.E.2d 732, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 739, 244 S.E.2d 157 (1978).

When Vehicle May Be Searched Without Warrant. — Automobiles and other conveyances may be searched without a warrant under circumstances that would not justify the search of a house, and a police officer in the exercise of his duties may search an automobile or other conveyance without a search warrant when the existing facts and circumstances are sufficient to support a reasonable belief that the automobile or other conveyance carries contraband materials. State v. Simmons, 278 N.C. 468, 180 S.E.2d 97 (1971); State v. Faison, 17 N.C. App. 200, 193 S.E.2d 334 (1972).

A warrantless search of a vehicle capable of movement out of the location or jurisdiction may be conducted by officers when they have probable cause to search and exigent circumstances make it impracticable to secure a search warrant. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973); State v. Summerlin, 35 N.C. App. 522, 241 S.E.2d 732, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 739, 244 S.E.2d 157 (1978); State v. Mitchell, 300 N.C. 305, 266 S.E.2d 605 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1085, 101 S. Ct. 873, 66 L. Ed. 2d 810 (1981).

Automobiles, because of their mobility, may be searched without a warrant upon facts not justifying a warrantless search of a residence or office; however, the officers conducting the search must have reasonable or probable cause to believe that they will find the instrumentality of a crime or evidence pertaining to a crime before they begin their warrantless search. State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

In recognition of the mobility of automobiles, a search of an automobile without a warrant is constitutionally permissible if there is probable cause to make the search. State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

A warrantless search of an automobile may be constitutionally reasonable if there is probable cause to make the search. State v. Mackey, 56 N.C. App. 468, 291 S.E.2d 663 (1982).

Automobile Search Not Dependent on Right to Arrest. — The right to search an automobile on probable cause and the validity of the seizure are not dependent on the right to arrest. They are dependent on the reasonable cause the seizing officer has for belief that the contents of the automobile offend against the law. State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

And Proceeds on Different Theory. — The search of an automobile on probable cause proceeds on a theory entirely different from that justifying the search incident to an arrest. State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Automobile May Be Searched Without Warrant or Held Pending Issuance. — If there is probable cause to search an automobile, the officer may either seize and hold the vehicle before presenting the probable-cause issue to a magistrate, or he may carry out an immediate search without a warrant. State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Impoundment of Vehicle Pending Issuance of Warrant. — In a prosecution for rape, defendant could not complain that officers chose to afford defendant the protection of impounding his vehicle and keeping it locked and under custody until a search warrant could be obtained rather than seizing a knife which was in plain view on the dashboard of the car at the time the car was impounded. State v. Squire, 302 N.C. 112, 273 S.E.2d 688 (1981).

Reasonable Cause for Stop and Search of Vehicle. — In a prosecution for felonious possession of marijuana, there was no merit to defendants' contention that an officer did not have reasonable suspicions based upon definite facts that defendants were engaged in or had engaged in criminal conduct when he stopped their vehicle, where the evidence tended to show that the officer noticed the defendants late at night in a seasonably unoccupied residential area, that the officer knew only one of the residences was occupied at that time of the year, and that the officer was aware of reports of "fire-lighting" deer in that area on several occasions. State v. Tillett, 50 N.C. App. 520, 274 S.E.2d 361, appeal dismissed, 302 N.C. 633, 280 S.E.2d 448 (1981).

Absence of Connection Between Vehicle Searched and Evidence Sought. — Where from the facts as found by the trial court, officer knew of no connection between defendant's van and marijuana which had apparently been removed from a certain house, trial court properly concluded that officer did not have probable cause to search the van. State v. Mackey, 56 N.C. App. 468, 291 S.E.2d 663 (1982).

IV. EVIDENCE IN PLAIN VIEW OR INADVERTENTLY DISCOVERED.

Section Incorporates Plain View Doctrine. — This section incorporated the United States Supreme Court "plain view" exception to the warrant requirement, which permits inclusion in evidence of the fruit of a legal, warrantless presence. State v. Blackwelder, 34 N.C. App. 352, 238 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

Plain view doctrine is firmly established and consistently supported by both State and federal courts. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976), aff'd, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

Constitutional guaranty against unreasonable searches and seizures does not apply where a search is not necessary, and where the contraband subject matter is fully disclosed and open to the eye and the hand. State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

Warrant Not Required Where Article Seized Is in Plain View. — The law does not prohibit a seizure without a warrant by an officer in the discharge of his official duties where the article seized is in plain view. State v. Robbins, 275 N.C. 537, 169 S.E.2d 858 (1969); State v. Parks, 14 N.C. App. 97, 187 S.E.2d 462 (1972); State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976), aff'd, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

The "plain view" doctrine states that a law enforcement officer may properly seize evidence in plain view without a search warrant if the officer has prior justification for the intrusion onto the premises being searched, other than observing the object which is later contended to have been in plain view, and the incriminating evidence must be inadvertently discovered by the officer while on the premises. State v. Tillett, 50 N.C. App. 520, 274 S.E.2d 361, appeal dismissed, 302 N.C. 633, 280 S.E.2d 448 (1981).

It is lawful and proper for an officer to seize an article in the discharge of his official duties without a warrant where the article is in plain view. State v. Powell, 11 N.C. App. 465, 181 S.E.2d 754 (1971).

A search ordinarily involves prying into hidden places, and a seizure contemplates forcible dispossession. However, a police officer may seize and use what he sees in plain sight if he is at a place where he is lawfully entitled to be. State v. Fry, 13 N.C. App. 39, 185 S.E.2d 256 (1971), dismissed, 280 N.C. 495, 186 S.E.2d 514 (1972).

Evidence obtained by officers without a search warrant is admissible in evidence where the articles are seized in plain view without necessity of search. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973); In re Horne, 50 N.C. App. 97, 272 S.E.2d 905 (1980).

By being lawfully on the premises officers are entitled to seize such evidentiary objects connected with defendants as are in plain view. State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

Evidence of crime falling in the plain view of an officer who has a right to be in a position to have that view is subject to seizure and may be introduced into evidence. State v. Mitchell, 300 N.C. 305, 266 S.E.2d 605 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1085, 101 S. Ct. 873, 66 L. Ed. 2d 810 (1981).

Under § 15A-253, the statutory "plain view" doctrine is limited to the inadvertent discovery of items pursuant to a legal search under a valid warrant though these items are not specified in the search warrant. State v. Blackwelder, 34 N.C. App. 352, 238 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

Constitutionally permissible seizures under the "plain view" exception to U.S. Const., Amend. IV protection against warrantless searches and seizures have been restricted under § 15A-253 to those instances where the officer has legal justification to be at the place where he inadvertently sees a piece of evidence in plain view. The doctrine serves to supplement the prior justification. State v. Blackwelder, 34 N.C. App. 352, 238 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

Plain view alone is not enough to justify warrantless seizure of evidence. State v. Blackwelder, 34 N.C. App. 352, 238 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

Plain View Doctrine Applicable. — Where officer had legal justification to be at the place and in the position he was when he saw the evidence in plain view, the discovery of the evidence was inadvertent and clearly was not the result of a deliberate search, the evidence was immediately apparent and its discovery under the circumstances clearly would warrant a man of reasonable caution in believing that the defendant was in the possession of drugs and was hiding evidence which would incriminate him, and the officer's observation of the defendant's condition and the sight of part of the plastic bag which contained the white powdery substance was such as to give a reasonable man the belief that there was evidence of criminal activity present, to-wit, the possession of drugs, the trial court correctly denied defendant's motion to suppress, reasoning that the plain view doctrine was applicable and all elements were present. State v. Peck, 305 N.C. 734, 291 S.E.2d 637 (1982).

Items Inadvertently Uncovered During Search Pursuant to Warrant. — Where a lawful search pursuant to a search warrant is being conducted, items uncovered during the course of this search may be seized if the items would have been seizable under previously announced rationales for warrantless, plain view seizures (i.e., the items were the instrumentalities and means by which a crime is committed, the fruits of crime such as stolen property, weapons by which escape of the person arrested might be effected, and property the possession of which is a crime, or were items for which probable cause existed to believe that they were evidence of criminal activity and would aid in a particular apprehension or conviction), and the items are discovered "inadvertently." The meaning of the inadvertence requirement is that there must be no intent on the part of investigators to search for and seize the contested items not named in the warrant. State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Discovery of Other Contraband During Valid Search. — When officers are conducting a valid search for one type of contraband and find other types of contraband, the law is not so unreasonable as to require them to turn their heads. State v. Oldfield, 29 N.C. App. 131, 223 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 96, 225 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

Failure to Arrest for Crime Under Investigation When Evidence Is Discovered. — The failure of an officer to actually arrest a defendant for a traffic violation did not render inadmissible the evidence of possession of marijuana which was in plain view while the officer was investigating, before arrest, a crime that he had probable cause to believe had been committed in his presence. State v. Fry, 13 N.C. App. 39, 185 S.E.2d 256 (1971), dismissed, 280 N.C. 495, 186 S.E.2d 514 (1972).

Evidence Exposed in Attempt to Hide It. — Where the defendant, in an apparent attempt to voluntarily dispose of heroin, unintentionally exposed it to the view of the officers, who then obtained it, it was not obtained in the course of an illegal search. State v. Powell, 11 N.C. App. 465, 181 S.E.2d 754 (1971).

Seizure of contraband, such as burglary tools, does not require a warrant when its presence is fully disclosed without necessity of search. State v. Simmons, 278 N.C. 468, 180 S.E.2d 97 (1971).

Seizure of Car Found in Plain View. — A car reasonably believed to be the fruit, instrumentality or evidence of a crime can be seized whenever found in plain view. State v. Mitchell, 300 N.C. 305, 266 S.E.2d 605 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1085, 101 S. Ct. 873, 66 L. Ed. 2d 810 (1981).

Article 11.

Search Warrants.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The goal of the Commission in drafting the search warrant Article was to provide a set of search warrant application and execution procedures that would make the search warrant an effective and efficient investigative device while insuring that the Fourth Amendment "right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures," would continue to be respected in North Carolina.

Section 15A-242 replaces and expands upon the list of items subject to seizure under former § 15-25(a). The old North Carolina statute provided that a warrant may be issued "to search for any contraband, evidence, or instrumentality of crime ...." (Emphasis added.) The new provision expands upon "contraband" by making subject to seizure items which are contraband or unlawfully possessed, stolen or embezzled. The word "instrumentality" is expanded to encompass any item which "has been used or is possessed for the purpose of being used to commit or conceal the commission of a crime." The new proposed statute makes it clear that items may be seized if they constitute evidence either of an offense or of the identity of a person participating in an offense.

Section 15A-244, setting forth contents of a search warrant, is essentially a codification of present law and practice. Section 15A-245 provides that the official who issued the search warrant may consider information other than that contained in the affidavit, however, may not be considered unless it is either "recorded or contemporaneously summarized in the record or on the face of the warrant by the issuing official." This last provision is necessary in order to comply with one of the central functions of the warrant process: the maintaining of a factual record of the basis for the search recorded before the search occurs. Section 15A-245 also introduces a new provision requiring the issuing official to make a copy of the warrant and application and file it with the clerk soon after issuance of the warrant.

Section 15A-246 and § 15A-247, dealing with the form and content of the search warrant and identifying who may execute search warrants, codify existing law and practice.

Section 15A-248 provides that search warrants must be executed within 48 hours after issuance and that warrants not executed within this time must be returned to the issuing court. Formerly, North Carolina law provided no time limit for the execution of search warrants and did not require that unexecuted warrants be returned to the court. The Commission was informed that as a result of the absence of such provisions, there were a number of "stale" but facially valid warrants "floating around." If a search warrant is not promptly executed, there is a serious question whether the probable cause that existed at the time of issuance is still present. If a search warrant is not executed within 48 hours as this section provides, it does not mean that the search may not take place; the only effect of the provision is that the invalid warrant must be returned. A new warrant may then be obtained if the grounds for it can be demonstrated.

Section 15A-249 and § 15A-251 deal with an issue to which the most serious and close attention was given: whether search warrants may be executed without giving notice of the officer's identity and purpose. Section 15A-249 simply states the general rule: An officer executing a search warrant must, before entering the premises, give notice of his identity and purpose. The only exception is contained in § 15A-251(2). There was general agreement that an officer should have the authority to execute a warrant without notice and with the use of force whenever he had probable cause, either at the time of applying for or at the time of executing the warrant, to believe that notice would endanger the life or safety of any person. Under the terms of § 15A-251(1) the officer can also use force to enter, if after announcing his identity and purpose, he reasonably believes admittance is being denied or delayed.

Section 15A-253 deals with the question of whether an officer executing a search warrant may seize items not named in the warrant. In Marron v. United States, 275 U.S. 192, 48 S. Ct. 74, 72 L. Ed. 231 (1927), the Supreme Court indicated that only items named in the warrant could be seized. The weight of recent court decisions, however, appears to permit such seizures. The Commission provided that both contraband and noncontraband items not named in the warrant may be seized if inadvertently discovered in the course of a lawful search. The word "inadvertently" is incorporated to comply with the requirements of Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 403 U.S. 443, 91 S. Ct. 2022, 29 L. Ed. 2d 564 (1971). This is the same rule as that which obtains when a search is incident to an arrest: "When an article subject to lawful seizure properly comes into an officer's possession in the course of a lawful search it would be entirely unreasonable to say that he must return it because it was not one of the things it was his business to look for." Abel v. United States, 362 U.S. 217, 80 S. Ct. 683, 4 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1960). Of course, as the first sentence of § 15A-253 states, the scope of any search under a warrant must be limited to that which is reasonably necessary to discover the items specified in the warrant. Under a search warrant describing a refrigerator as the sole item sought, it would not be reasonable to look in small boxes and drawers. Any items discovered while searching outside the reasonable scope of the warrant could not be lawfully seized under this provision.

Section 15A-255 and § 15A-256 deal with the officer's authority with respect to persons present in the place to be searched. Under § 15A-255, a police officer may frisk any person present in the place designated in the warrant if he reasonably believes that his safety or that of others requires the frisk. And, of course, the officer may fully search any person who is designated in the warrant as an object of the search. But should persons not named in the warrant be subject to a full personal search if they happen to be present in a place that is the object of a search warrant? To forbid such searches would allow the search to be frustrated by quick transferring of small objects to persons present. To allow such searches, however, is arguably an undue infringement on the privacy of a person who happens to be in a particular place. The Commission sought to resolve these conflicting concerns by allowing searches of persons not named in the warrant only when two conditions are satisfied. First, the officers must have unsuccessfully searched the premises and persons designated in the warrant before searching those present who were not named in the warrant. And second, the authority to detain and search persons present who were not named in the warrant applies only to those present in private premises or vehicles. This second limitation is based upon the Commission's conclusion that it would be unreasonable to subject all those present in a public department store or on a common carrier to detention and searching. This concern is not sufficient, however, to immunize those who are present in a nonpublic place, such as a friend's residence where there is probable cause to believe that items subject to seizure are located. Section 15A-256 also denies the admissibility of evidence found in such a search of bystanders if the evidence is not of the "type" described in the warrant (but permitting its use of evidence the same type even though not specifically referred to in the warrant). Controlled substances (in Chapter 90, Article 5) are singled out as a class of things all of which are of the same type.

The search warrant Article also contains several miscellaneous provisions. Section 15A-252 provides that a copy of the warrant must be given to the person in control of the premises searched, or a copy left affixed to the premises. Section 15A-254 provides that the officers must leave a signed receipt of items taken with the person in control or leave one affixed to the premises. Section 15A-258 provides for the disposition of seized property. Section 15A-259 provides that the Article applies to all search warrants except those issued under the previously enacted statutes dealing with inspection warrants and warrants to inspect vehicles in certain riots or emergencies.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" set out above appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-241. Definition of search warrant.

A search warrant is a court order and process directing a law-enforcement officer to search designated premises, vehicles, or persons for the purpose of seizing designated items and accounting for any items so obtained to the court which issued the warrant. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

No Difference Between State Law and Requirements of U.S. Const., Amend. IV. — With regard to search warrants, there is no variance between the law of this State as declared by the decisions of the Supreme Court, and the requirements of U.S. Const., Amend. IV, as interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 874, 38 L. Ed. 2d 114, 94 S. Ct. 157 (1973); State v. Miller, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973).

Same Requirements for Federal and State Warrants. — The same probable-cause standards under U.S. Const., Amends. IV and XIV apply to both federal and State warrants. State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

"Search". — The term "search," as applied to searches and seizures, is an examination of a man's house or other buildings or premises, or of his person, with a view to the discovery of contraband or illicit or stolen property, or some evidence of guilt to be used in the prosecution of a criminal action for some crime or offense with which he is charged. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994); State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 269, 196 S.E.2d 603, appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 670, 197 S.E.2d 879 (1973).

The term "search" implies some exploratory investigation, or an invasion and quest, a looking for or seeking out. The quest may be secret, intrusive, or accomplished by force. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

A search implies some sort of force, either actual or constructive, much or little. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

A "search" implies a prying into hidden places for that which is concealed and that the object searched for has been hidden or intentionally put out of the way. State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

While it has been said that ordinarily searching is a function of sight, it is generally held that the mere looking at that which is open to view is not a "search." State v. Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

A "search" implies an examination of one's premises or person with a view to the discovery of contraband or evidence of guilt to be used in prosecution of a criminal action and implies exploratory investigation or quest. State v.

Reams, 277 N.C. 391, 178 S.E.2d 65 (1970), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 840, 92 S. Ct. 133, 30 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1971), overruled on other grounds, State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

It is not a "search" when a police officer, investigating a violation of the traffic laws, opens the door of the vehicle involved when necessary to see the occupants thereof. State v. Fry, 13 N.C. App. 39, 185 S.E.2d 256 (1971), appeal dismissed, 280 N.C. 495, 186 S.E.2d 514 (1972).

Applied in State v. Robbins, 275 N.C. 537, 169 S.E.2d 858 (1969); State v. Powell, 11 N.C. App. 465, 181 S.E.2d 754; State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972); State v. Parks, 14 N.C. App. 97, 187 S.E.2d 462 (1972); State v. Turnbull, 16 N.C. App. 542, 192 S.E.2d 689 (1972); State v. Faison, 17 N.C. App. 200, 193 S.E.2d 334 (1972); State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973); State v. Johnson, 29 N.C. App. 534, 225 S.E.2d 113 (1976).

An item is subject to seizure pursuant to a search warrant if there is probable cause to believe that it:

(1) Is stolen or embezzled; or

(2) Is contraband or otherwise unlawfully possessed; or

(3) Has been used or is possessed for the purpose of being used to commit or conceal the commission of a crime; or

(4) Constitutes evidence of an offense or the identity of a person participating in an offense. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 3, s. 38; Code, s. 1171; Rev., s. 3163; C.S., s. 4529; 1941, c. 53; 1949, c. 1179; 1955, c. 7; 1965, c. 377; 1969, c. 869, s. 8; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section Codifies Federal Constitutional Requirements. — Provisions of Chapter 15A, particularly this section and § 15A-253, are codifications of federal constitutional requirements. State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Nontestimonial Identification Evidence. — In addition to a nontestimonial identification order pursuant to § 15A-272 and this section, a search warrant is a proper method to obtain nontestimonial identification evidence from a defendant. State v. McLean, 47 N.C. App. 672, 267 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

Photographs and Letters Held Admissible as Evidence of Identity. — Where deputies searched a mobile home pursuant to a validly issued "occupant warrant" which specified heroin as the object of the search, and from the trailer's bathroom, a substance later determined to be heroin was seized, and after the heroin was discovered, letters and photographs which had been seen earlier were also taken from the adjoining bedroom, the photographs and letters were admissible into evidence pursuant to § 15A-253 since under subdivision (4) of this section they constituted evidence of the identity of a person participating in an offense. State v. Williams, 299 N.C. 529, 263 S.E.2d 571 (1980).

"Probable Cause" Defined. — Probable cause means that there must exist a reasonable ground to believe that the proposed search will reveal the presence upon the premises to be searched of the objects sought and that those objects will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Where probable cause existed to support issuance of the search warrant for defendant's hair, saliva, and blood pursuant to this section, the State did not violate the defendant's rights, under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20, by failing to obtain a nontestimonial identification order, pursuant to § 15A-273, or to provide defendant with the right to counsel during the execution of the search warrant, under § 15A-279(d). State v. Grooms, 353 N.C. 50, 540 S.E.2d 713 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 122 S. Ct. 93, 151 L. Ed. 2d 54 (2001).

Test for "staleness" of information on which a search warrant is based is whether the facts indicate that probable cause exists at the time the warrant is issued. State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Before a search warrant may be issued, proof of probable cause must be established by facts so closely related to the time of issuance of the warrant so as to justify a finding of probable cause at that time. The general rule is that no more than a "reasonable" time may have elapsed. State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Year-Old Information as to Possession of Marijuana. — As marijuana is a substance which can be easily concealed and moved about and which is likely to be disposed of or used, year-old information, which was the only evidence of residential possession by defendants was too stale to establish probable cause to search defendant's residence, even though the affidavit on which the search warrant was based also presented more recent information concerning defendant's drug activities. State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Recent Possession of Stolen Items. — If the informant had stated to the affiant that recently he personally had seen stolen items in defendant's possession at his residence, affidavit would clearly suffice. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

Applied in State v. Armstrong, 45 N.C. App. 40, 262 S.E.2d 370 (1980); State v. Tate, 58 N.C. App. 494, 294 S.E.2d 16 (1982); State v. Hyleman, 89 N.C. App. 424, 366 S.E.2d 530 (1988).

§ 15A-243. Who may issue a search warrant.

(a) A search warrant valid throughout the State may be issued by:
(1) A Justice of the Supreme Court.
(2) A judge of the Court of Appeals.
(3) A judge of the superior court.

(b) Other search warrants may be issued by:
(1) A judge of the district court as provided in G.S. 7A-291.
(2) A clerk as provided in G.S. 7A-180 and 7A-181.
(3) A magistrate as provided in G.S. 7A-273. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 3, s. 38; Code, s. 1171; Rev., s. 3163; C.S., s. 4529; 1941, c. 53; 1949, c. 1179; 1955, c. 7; 1965, c. 377; 1969, c. 869, s. 8; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

§ 15A-244. Contents of the application for a search warrant.

Each application for a search warrant must be made in writing upon oath or affirmation. All applications must contain:
(1) The name and title of the applicant; and
(2) A statement that there is probable cause to believe that items subject to seizure under G.S. 15A-242 may be found in or upon a designated or described place, vehicle, or person; and
(3) Allegations of fact supporting the statement. The statements must be supported by one or more affidavits particularly setting forth the facts and circumstances establishing probable cause to believe that the items are in the places or in the possession of the individuals to be searched; and
(4) A request that the court issue a search warrant directing a search for and the seizure of the items in question. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

Language of Application for Warrant. — Because applications are normally submitted by police officers who do not have legal training, the language is to be construed in a commonsensical, nontechnical and realistic way. State v. Windham, 57 N.C. App. 571, 291 S.E.2d 876 (1982).

Applications for search warrants, written by police officers often in haste, need not be drawn with syntactical precision which would try even the more learned grammarians. State v. Willis, 58 N.C. App. 617, 294 S.E.2d 330 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 461, 298 S.E.2d 388 (1983).

The warrant should describe with particularity the place to be searched since general warrants are repugnant to U.S. Const., Amend. IV, which has been applied to the states through incorporation in U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. State v. Atwell, 62 N.C. App. 643, 303 S.E.2d 402 (1983).

Warrant May Be Based on Information Not Competent as Evidence. — A valid search warrant may be issued on the basis of an affidavit setting forth information which may not be competent as evidence in a criminal trial. State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

The good faith exception to the exclusionary rule only arises upon the exclusion of evidence based upon federal constitutional grounds. State v. Hyleman, 324 N.C. 506, 379 S.E.2d 830 (1989).

Warrant held valid despite absence of magistrate's signature. See State v. Flynn, 33 N.C. App. 492, 235 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 237 S.E.2d 537 (1977).

II. PROBABLE CAUSE.

A search warrant can only be issued upon a determination of probable cause. The person who makes that determination must be a neutral and detached magistrate instead of the officer engaged in the often competitive enterprise of ferreting out crime. State v. Atwell, 62 N.C. App. 643, 303 S.E.2d 402 (1983).

The requirement that a search warrant be based on probable cause is grounded in both constitutional and statutory authority. State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

"Probable Cause" Defined. — Probable cause for a search can be defined to be a reasonable ground of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious man in believing the accused to be guilty. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Probable cause means a reasonable ground to believe that the proposed search will reveal the presence upon the premises to be searched of the objects sought and that those objects will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. Guffey, 31 N.C. App. 515, 229 S.E.2d 837 (1976); State v. Riddick, 291 N.C. 399, 230 S.E.2d 506 (1976), motion for reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977); State v. Gibson, 32 N.C. App. 584, 233 S.E.2d 84 (1977); State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977); State v. Bell, 36 N.C. App. 629, 244 S.E.2d 714 (1978); State v. Jones, 299 N.C. 298, 261 S.E.2d 860 (1980); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982); State v. Horne, 59 N.C. App. 576, 297 S.E.2d 788 (1982), overruled on other grounds, 320 N.C. 589, 359 S.E.2d 776 (1987); State v. Crawford, 104 N.C. 591, 410 S.E.2d 499 (1991); State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

Within the meaning of §§ 15A-243 through 15A-245, probable cause may be defined as a reasonable ground to believe that the proposed search will reveal the presence, upon the premises to be searched, of the objects sought and that those objects will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Probable cause, as used in U.S. Const., Amend. IV, subdivision (2) of this section, and § 15A-245, means a reasonable ground to believe that the proposed search will reveal the presence upon the premises to be searched of the objects sought and that those objects will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Harris, 43 N.C. App. 184, 258 S.E.2d 415 (1979).

If the apparent facts set out in an affidavit for a search warrant are such that a reasonably discreet and prudent man would be led to believe that there was a commission of the offense charged, there is probable cause justifying the issuance of a search warrant. State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

"Probable cause" and "reasonable ground to believe" are substantially equivalent terms. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Question Is Existence of Reasonable Grounds for Affiant's Belief. — The determination of the existence of probable cause is not concerned with the question of whether the offense charged has been committed in fact, or whether the accused is guilty or innocent, but only with whether the affiant has reasonable grounds for his belief. State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Probable Cause Determined in Light of Particular Circumstances. — Probable cause is a pragmatic question to be determined in each case in the light of the particular circumstances and the particular offense involved. State v. Allen, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Observations of fellow officers engaged in the same investigation are plainly a reliable basis for a warrant applied for by one of their number. State v. Horner, 310 N.C. 274, 311 S.E.2d 281 (1984).

Probable cause does not mean actual and positive cause, nor does it import absolute certainty. State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979); State v. Arrington, 311 N.C. 633, 319 S.E.2d 254 (1984).

Probable cause does not deal in certainties, but deals rather in probabilities which are factual and practical considerations of everyday life upon which reasonable and prudent men may act. State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Probable cause is concerned with probabilities, the practical considerations of everyday life upon which reasonable and prudent men act. State v. Horner, 310 N.C. 274, 311 S.E.2d 281 (1984).

Sworn Statement Required for Probable Cause Warrant. — A magistrate issuing a warrant can base a finding of probable cause only on statements of fact confirmed by oath or affirmation of the party making the statement, or on information which the magistrate records or contemporaneously summarizes in the record. The necessity of a sworn statement is consistent with existing case law. State v. Heath, 73 N.C. App. 391, 326 S.E.2d 640 (1985).

Probable cause may be based upon hearsay evidence. The officer making the affidavit may do so in reliance upon information reported to him by other officers in the performance of their duties. State v. Horner, 310 N.C. 274, 311 S.E.2d 281 (1984).

In applying the "totality of the circumstances" test, great deference should be paid a magistrate's determination of probable cause and after-the-fact scrutiny should not take the form of a de novo review. State v. Graham, 90 N.C. App. 564, 369 S.E.2d 615 (1988).

When Evidence of Previous Criminal Activity Supports Warrant. — Generally, two factors determine whether evidence of previous criminal activity is sufficient to later support search warrant: (1) the amount of the criminal activity, and (2) the time period over which the activity occurred. Absent additional facts tending to show otherwise, a one-shot type of crime, such as a single instance of possession or sale of some contraband, will support a finding of probable cause only for a few days at best. However, where affidavit properly recites facts indicating activity of protracted and continuous nature, a course of conduct, the passage of time becomes less significant. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Determination of Whether Evidence Is Stale. — When evidence of previous criminal activity is advanced to support a finding of probable cause, further examination must be made to determine if the evidence of prior activity is stale. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Continuity of offense may be the most important factor in determining whether probable cause is valid or stale. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

There was sufficient probable cause where search warrant was issued in reliance upon recitation in affidavit of a controlled purchase of cocaine six days prior to the date of application. State v. Ledbetter, 120 N.C. App. 117, 461 S.E.2d 341 (1995).

There was probable cause to issue warrants where affidavits were submitted by police officers and volunteers who played bingo and observed payoffs for bingo and slot machines. State v. Crabtree, 126 N.C. App. 729, 487 S.E.2d 575 (1997).

As to sufficiency of information concerning location of objects, see State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Inference Upheld. — Where suspect, previously convicted of selling drugs, had within a ten-day period rented three different motel rooms, each time for several days, in a city in which he had a local address, and at two of those locations he had sold cocaine, based on these facts, it was reasonable to infer that when suspect occupied third room, he still possessed the cocaine. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Sufficiency of Probable Cause. — For resolving questions arising under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20 with regard to the sufficiency of probable cause to support the issuance of a search warrant, the Supreme Court of North Carolina adopts the totality of circumstances test of Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 103 S. Ct. 2317, 76 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1983) and Massachusetts v. Upton, 466 U.S. 727, 104 S. Ct. 2085, 80 L. Ed. 2d 721 (1984) and rejects the two-pronged test of Aguilar v. Texas, 378 U.S. 108, 84 S. Ct. 1509, 12 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1964) and Spinelli v. United States, 393 U.S. 410, 89 S. Ct. 584, 21 L. Ed. 2d 637 (1969). State v. Arrington, 311 N.C. 633, 319 S.E.2d 254 (1984); State v. White, 87 N.C. App. 311, 361 S.E.2d 301 (1987), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 322 N.C. 770, 370 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 958, 109 S. Ct. 399, 102 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1988), modified on other grounds, 322 N.C. 770, 370 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 958, 109 S. Ct. 399, 102 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1988).

Where magistrate had before him evidence (1) that suspect had a pound of marijuana in her home a week earlier, (2) that suspect had sold marijuana the day warrant was issued, and (3) that suspect had a prior history of involvement with drugs (and was still on probation for violation of the Controlled Substances Act), there was a substantial basis to support a finding of probable cause for issuance of a search warrant. State v. Beam, 325 N.C. 217, 381 S.E.2d 327 (1989).

Facts were sufficient under the "totality of the circumstances" test to support a finding of probable cause when officers received information from an informant who admitted past use of cocaine and who had previously given information that led to the arrest of at least six people, since the information provided a substantial basis for the probability that cocaine was present in the described residence and had been sold there within the preceding 48 hours. State v. Graham, 90 N.C. App. 564, 369 S.E.2d 615 (1988).

A trained law enforcement officer need not swear to his ability to recognize an illegal substance in order for his observation to be deemed reliable by the issuing magistrate. State v. Leonard, 87 N.C. App. 448, 361 S.E.2d 397 (1987).

III. AFFIDAVITS AND INFORMANTS.

Sufficiency of Affidavit Generally. — The affidavit is sufficient if it supplies reasonable cause to believe that the proposed search for evidence of the commission of the designated criminal offense will reveal the presence upon the described premises of the objects sought and that they will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971); State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. English, 27 N.C. App. 545, 219 S.E.2d 549 (1975); State v. Riddick, 291 N.C. 399, 230 S.E.2d 506 (1976), motion for reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977); State v. Armstrong, 33 N.C. App. 52, 234 S.E.2d 197 (1977); State v. Windham, 57 N.C. App. 571, 291 S.E.2d 876 (1982); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982); State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982); State v. Warren, 59 N.C. App. 264, 296 S.E.2d 671, modified on other grounds, 309 N.C. 224, 306 S.E.2d 446 (1983); State v. Arrington, 311 N.C. 633, 319 S.E.2d 254 (1984).

The facts set forth in an affidavit for a search warrant must be such that a reasonably discreet and prudent person would rely upon them before they will be held to provide probable cause justifying the issuance of a search warrant. State v. Arrington, 311 N.C. 633, 319 S.E.2d 254 (1984).

Affidavit Must Indicate Underlying Circumstances. — To supply reasonable cause to believe the objects sought are on the described premises, the affidavit supporting a search warrant must provide the magistrate with underlying circumstances from which to judge the validity of the informant's conclusion that the articles sought are at the place to be searched. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

Affidavit need not contain all the evidence properly presented to the issuing official. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Bandy, 15 N.C. App. 175, 189 S.E.2d 771, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 759, 191 S.E.2d 357 (1972); State v. Hayes, 291 N.C. 293, 230 S.E.2d 146 (1976).

But It Should Contain Material and Essential Facts. — The better practice would be for the issuing official to require that the affidavit contain the material and essential facts (but not all the evidentiary details) necessary to support the finding of probable cause before issuing a search warrant. State v. Flowers, 12 N.C. App. 487, 183 S.E.2d 820, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 728, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971).

Section Does Not Require Separate Writing Labelled "Affidavit". — Although a separate paper identified as an affidavit was not submitted with officers' sworn application, statutory requirements were met and search warrant was properly issued; this section does not require that an officer submit a separate sworn writing labelled "Affidavit" even when its contents would be a verbatim duplication of the sworn statement in the application. State v. Marshall, 94 N.C. App. 20, 380 S.E.2d 360, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 275, 384 S.E.2d 526 (1989).

Purely Conclusory Affidavit Insufficient. — Probable cause cannot be shown by affidavits which are purely conclusory, stating only the affiant's or an informer's belief that probable cause exists without detailing any of the "underlying circumstances" upon which that belief is based. Recital of some of the underlying circumstances in the affidavit is essential if the magistrate is to perform his detached function and not serve merely as a rubber stamp for the police. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. Guffey, 31 N.C. App. 515, 229 S.E.2d 837 (1976).

Probable cause cannot be shown by affidavits which are purely conclusory and do not set forth any of the underlying circumstances upon which that conclusion is based. State v. English, 27 N.C. App. 545, 219 S.E.2d 549 (1975).

A search warrant cannot be issued upon affidavits which are purely conclusory and which do not state underlying circumstances upon which the affiant's belief of probable cause is founded; there must be facts or circumstances in the affidavit which implicate the premises to be searched. State v. Rook, 304 N.C. 201, 283 S.E.2d 732 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1038, 102 S. Ct. 1741, 72 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1982).

Probable cause cannot be shown by affidavits which are purely conclusory. An affidavit which merely states the affiant's belief that probable cause exists without detailing any of the underlying circumstances is insufficient. A recital of some of the underlying circumstances in the affidavit is necessary if the magistrate is to perform his proper function. State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

The application for the warrant must allege facts by which the magistrate can determine whether there is probable cause to support the warrant. Mere conclusions of the officer applying for the warrant or of the informant are not sufficient. State v. Willis, 58 N.C. App. 617, 294 S.E.2d 330 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 461, 298 S.E.2d 388 (1983).

There is a presumption of validity with respect to the affidavit supporting a search warrant. State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

The application for a search warrant submitted to the judge by a detective in the murder investigation, which eventually implicated the defendant, met the requirements of this section; although the application itself did not state on its face that it was sworn, the trial court found that the detective was sworn and signed the attached sworn affidavit in the judge's presence. State v. McCord, 140 N.C. App. 634, 538 S.E.2d 633 (2000), review denied, 353 N.C. 392 (2001).

Issuing Officer May Not Rely on Mere Conclusions. — The issuing officer must judge for himself the persuasiveness of the facts relied on by a complaining officer to show probable cause. He should not accept without question the complainant's mere conclusion. State v. Guffey, 31 N.C. App. 515, 229 S.E.2d 837 (1976); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

Affidavits must establish a nexus between the objects sought and the place to be searched. Usually this connection is made by showing that criminal activity actually occurred at the location to be searched or that fruits of a crime that occurred elsewhere are observed at certain place. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Application for a search warrant failed to comply with this section where the affiant failed to state what information he received from informants during and after purchase of cocaine; and where the affidavit failed to disclose any facts that would lead affiant or a magistrate to reasonably believe that identified currency and contraband were at defendant's residence. State v. Hyleman, 324 N.C. 506, 379 S.E.2d 830 (1989).

Requirements Where Affidavit Based on Hearsay. — The affidavit may be based on hearsay information and need not reflect the direct personal observations of the affiant; but the affidavit in such case must contain some of the underlying circumstances from which the affiant's informer concluded that the articles sought were where the informer claimed they were, and some of the underlying circumstances from which the affiant concluded that the informer was credible and his information reliable. State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

If the affidavit is based on hearsay information, then it must contain the circumstances underlying the informer's reliability and the basis for the informer's belief that a search will recover the objects sought by the police. State v. Crawford, 104 N.C. 591, 410 S.E.2d 499 (1991).

Insufficient Affidavit Invalidates Warrant. — The failure of the affidavit to establish reasonable grounds to believe that the crime was occurring on the premises to be searched invalidates the warrant issued thereon. State v.

Establishment of Informant's Reliability. — An officer's statement in an affidavit to obtain a search warrant that a reliable and confidential informant who furnished information to him has been used by (another named officer) in the past and that information given by the source has proven correct in all cases met the minimum standard for setting forth the circumstances from which the affiant concluded that the informant was reliable. State v. Williams, 49 N.C. App. 184, 270 S.E.2d 604 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 726, 276 S.E.2d 287 (1981).

Where the affidavit contained information to establish that the informant had been to defendants' residence within 48 hours before the application for the warrant was presented to the magistrate and had personally observed defendants' brother in possession of cocaine, and where the affidavit revealed that the informant was familiar with the appearance of cocaine prepared for sale, and where the informant was known to the affiants for a period of six months to one and one-half years and had provided reliable information which had resulted in numerous drug arrests, the affidavit contained sufficient details to support informant's credibility and a finding of probable cause. State v. King, 92 N.C. App. 75, 373 S.E.2d 566 (1988).

Police Officer May Rely on Information Reported by Other Officers. — The police officer making the affidavit may do so in reliance upon information reported to him by other officers in the performance of their duties. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971); State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

The police officer may state in his affidavit reports made to him by competent experts, such as the personnel of the FBI laboratories, concerning their examinations of materials forwarded by him to them for such examination and report. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971).

What Tip Must Show. — It is essential that the informant's tip reveal that the objects sought are on the premises to be searched. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

When the application for a search warrant is based on an informant's tip, however, it must meet the two-prong test developed by the Supreme Court in Spinelli v. United States, 393 U.S. 410, 89 S. Ct. 584, 21 L. Ed. 2d 637 (1969), and Aguilar v. Texas, 378 U.S. 108, 84 S. Ct. 1509, 12 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1964). First, the affidavit must set forth sufficient underlying circumstances to permit a neutral and detached magistrate to understand how the informant reached his conclusion. Second, the affidavit must establish the reliability of the informant. This can be done by showing prior use and reliability of the informant, a declaration against his penal interest, clear and precise details in the tip indicating personal observation and knowlege of the location of the evidence, or membership of the informant in a reliable group like the clergy. State v. Atwell, 62 N.C. App. 643, 303 S.E.2d 402 (1983).

Absent a statement claiming personal observation or otherwise detailing the manner in which the information was gathered, it is especially important that the tip describe the accused's criminal activity in sufficient detail that the magistrate may know that he is relying on something more substantial than a casual rumor or an accusation based merely on an individual's general reputation. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

If the informant has recently personally seen stolen items in defendant's possession at his residence, and states this to the affiant, the affidavit would clearly suffice. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

Bad Faith Required to Contest Validity of Warrant. — A claim is not established merely by evidence that contradicts assertions contained in the affidavit, or even that shows the affidavit contains false statements; rather, the evidence must establish facts from which the finder of fact might conclude that the affiant alleged the facts in bad faith. State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

(a) Before acting on the application, the issuing official may examine on oath the applicant or any other person who may possess pertinent information, but information other than that contained in the affidavit may not be considered by the issuing official in determining whether probable cause exists for the issuance of the warrant unless the information is either recorded or contemporaneously summarized in the record or on the face of the warrant by the issuing official.

(b) If the issuing official finds that the application meets the requirements of this Article and finds there is probable cause to believe that the search will discover items specified in the application which are subject to seizure under G.S. 15A-242, he must issue a search warrant in accordance with the requirements of this Article. The issuing official must retain a copy of the warrant and warrant application and must promptly file them with the clerk. If he does not so find, the official must deny the application. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

Former § 15-26 Compared. — It was not necessary under former § 15-26 that the affidavit contain within itself all the evidence properly presented to the magistrate. State v. Woods, 26 N.C. App. 584, 216 S.E.2d 492, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 396, 218 S.E.2d 469 (1975).

Sworn Statement Required for Probable Cause Warrant. — A magistrate issuing a warrant can base a finding of probable cause only on statements of fact confirmed by oath or affirmation of the party making the statement, or on information which the magistrate records or contemporaneously summarizes in the record. The necessity of a sworn statement is consistent with existing case law. State v. Heath, 73 N.C. App. 391, 326 S.E.2d 640 (1985).

Magistrate is required to determine presence or absence of probable cause upon the information before him. State v. Windham, 57 N.C. App. 571, 291 S.E.2d 876 (1982).

Independent Determination by Issuing Official Required. — A magistrate, by simply signing without reading the paper which a police officer places before him, utterly fails to perform the important judicial function which it is his duty to perform as a neutral and detached magistrate of making his own independent determination from the affidavit submitted to him whether probable cause exists for issuance of the search warrant. State v. Miller, 16 N.C. App. 1, 190 S.E.2d 888 (1972), modified, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973).

Sufficiency of Affidavit Not Determined by Affiant. — Whether the affidavit is sufficient to show probable cause must be determined by the issuing magistrate rather than the affiant. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

Facts Outside Written Affidavit May Be Considered. — The judicial officer's attention is not limited to those facts recited in a written affidavit taken under oath. State v. Howell, 18 N.C. App. 610, 197 S.E.2d 616 (1973).

When Testimony of Witnesses Necessary. — If the affidavit indicates the basis for the finding of probable cause, but is not in itself sufficient to establish probable cause, testimony of witnesses will be necessary to establish whether there was in fact sufficient evidence before the magistrate to justify his finding of probable cause to issue the search warrant. State v. Logan, 18 N.C. App. 557, 197 S.E.2d 238 (1973), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 666, 207 S.E.2d 752 (1974), overruled on other grounds, State v. Harris, 25 N.C. App. 404, 213 S.E.2d 414 (1975).

Evidence Properly Heard Under Subsection (a). — Albeit subsection (a) of this section places restrictions upon what information can be used by the magistrate in finding probable cause, the trial judge did not go beyond the permissible scope of inquiry when he heard evidence on the issue of a typographical error in the year date. State v. Beddard, 35 N.C. App. 212, 241 S.E.2d 83 (1978).

Magistrate's determination of probable cause should be paid great deference by reviewing court. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972).

Reviewing courts are to pay deference to judicial determinations of probable cause. State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

And Will Be Sustained Where There Was a Substantial Basis for It. — When a search is based upon a magistrate's rather than a police officer's, determination of probable cause, the reviewing court will accept evidence of a less judicially competent or persuasive character than would have justified an officer in acting on his own without a warrant, and will sustain the judicial determination so long as there was substantial basis for the magistrate to conclude that the articles searched for were probably present. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971).

The scope of the court's review of the magistrate's determination of probable cause is not confined to the affidavit alone. State v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 116, 298 S.E.2d 180 (1982), cert. denied, 300 N.C. 579, 300 S.E.2d 553 (1983).

It is always appropriate for the trial court to conduct a hearing on a motion to suppress. In such hearing the burden of proof is on the State. The State is not relegated to producing or introducing the search warrant alone, but may offer other evidence to show probable cause existed at the time of the issuing of the search warrant, if in truth it has any to offer. State v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 116, 298 S.E.2d 180 (1982), cert. denied, 300 N.C. 579, 300 S.E.2d 553 (1983).

Ordinarily, a search warrant will be presumed regular on appeal if irregularity does not appear on the face of the record, and when the search warrant does not appear of record, it is assumed in all respects regular on appeal. Furthermore, the wording of U.S. Const., Amend. IV would indicate that a valid search warrant is prima facie evidence of the reasonableness of the search. State v. Lombardo, 52 N.C. App. 316, 278 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 199, 285 S.E.2d 106 (1981), modified, 306 N.C. 594, 295 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

Corporations have never possessed the kind of protection under U.S. Const., Amend. IV accorded to persons and their homes. Corporations' special status as creatures of the state exposes them to exhaustive state scrutiny in exchange for the privilege of state recognition. In re Superior Court Order, 70 N.C. App. 63, 318 S.E.2d 843 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 378, 338 S.E.2d 307 (1986).

Failure to File with Clerk Did Not Require Suppression. — Although application and search warrant were not filed with the clerk as required by statute, the violation did not require that the seized evidence be suppressed; the failure to timely file these documents with the clerk after the warrant was issued did not rise to the level of a constitutional violation that would require suppression under § 15A-974(2). State v. Marshall, 94 N.C. App. 20, 380 S.E.2d 360, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 275, 384 S.E.2d 526 (1989).

Anticipatory Warrant. — An anticipatory warrant must set out, on its face, conditions that are explicit, clear, and narrowly drawn so as to avoid misunderstanding or manipulation by government agents. State v. Smith, 124 N.C. App. 565, 478 S.E.2d 237 (1996).

Triggering Event of Anticipatory Warrant. — An anticipatory warrant must minimize the officer's discretion in deciding whether or not the "triggering event" has occurred to almost ministerial proportions. State v. Smith, 124 N.C. App. 565, 478 S.E.2d 237 (1996).

Sure Course Rule. — The sure course rule is a stand-in for the actual presence of the illegal item at the locus to be searched. This proxy for actual presence ensures that no undue delegation of the power to find probable cause passes from magistrate to government agent. State v. Smith, 124 N.C. App. 565, 478 S.E.2d 237 (1996).

Under the sure and irreversible course to destination rule, the contraband must be on a sure, irreversible course to the situs of the intended search, and any future search of the destination must be made expressly contingent upon the contraband's arrival there. State v. Smith, 124 N.C. App. 565, 478 S.E.2d 237 (1996).

Applied in State v. Oldfield, 29 N.C. App. 131, 223 S.E.2d 569 (1976); State v. Armstrong, 33 N.C. App. 52, 234 S.E.2d 197 (1977); State v. Atwell, 62 N.C. App. 643, 303 S.E.2d 402 (1983); State v. Schiffer, 132 N.C. App. 22, 510 S.E.2d 165 (1999).

II. PROBABLE CAUSE.

"Probable Cause" Defined. — Probable cause under U.S. Const., Amend. IV exists where the facts and circumstances within the affiant's knowledge, and of which he has reasonably trustworthy information, are sufficient unto themselves to warrant a man of reasonable caution to believe that an offense has been or is being committed. State v. Flowers, 12 N.C. App. 487, 183 S.E.2d 820, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 728, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971).

If the apparent facts set out in an affidavit for a search warrant are such that a reasonably discreet and prudent man would be led to believe that there was a commission of the offense charged, there is probable cause justifying the issuance of a search warrant. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Within the meaning of U.S. Const., Amend. IV, and § 15A-243 through this section, probable cause means a reasonable ground to believe that the proposed search will reveal the presence, upon the premises to be searched, of the objects sought and that those objects will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Riddick, 291 N.C. 399, 230 S.E.2d 506 (1976), motion for reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977); State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977); State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979); State v. Jones, 299 N.C. 298, 261 S.E.2d 860 (1980); State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980); State v. Rook, 304 N.C. 201, 283 S.E.2d 732 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1038, 102 S. Ct. 1741, 72 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1982); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

Probable cause, as used in U.S. Const., Amend. IV, § 15A-244(2) and this section, means a reasonable ground to believe that the proposed search will reveal the presence upon the premises to be searched of the objects sought and that those objects will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Harris, 43 N.C. App. 184, 258 S.E.2d 415 (1979).

The probable cause prerequisite to the issuance of a search warrant exists when there is reasonable ground to believe that the proposed search will reveal the presence of objects which will aid in the apprehension or conviction of an offender. State v. Silhan, 302 N.C. 223, 275 S.E.2d 450 (1981), overruled in part by State v. Sanderson, 346 N.C. 669, 488 S.E.2d 133, State v. Adams, 347 N.C. 48, 490 S.E.2d 220 (1997); State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Probable cause to search and seize requires facts and circumstances within the police officer's knowledge based on reasonable and trustworthy information that a search of a particular area will reveal objects being sought in connection with criminal activity or objects which will aid the police in apprehending and convicting a criminal offender. State v. Cooke, 54 N.C. App. 33, 282 S.E.2d 800 (1981), aff'd, 306 N.C. 132, 291 S.E.2d 618 (1982).

Probable cause deals with probabilities which are factual and practical considerations of everyday life upon which reasonable and prudent men may act. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972); State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977); State v. Horne, 59 N.C. App. 576, 297 S.E.2d 788 (1982), overruled on other grounds, 320 N.C. 589, 359 S.E.2d 776 (1987).

In dealing with probable cause, as the very name implies, the Supreme Court deals with probabilities. These are not technical; they are the factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent men, not legal technicians, act. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971).

Probable cause does not mean actual and positive cause, nor does it import absolute certainty. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Probable Cause Depends on Circumstances. — Whether probable cause exists for the issuance of a search warrant depends upon a practical assessment of the relevant circumstances. State v. Jones, 299 N.C. 298, 261 S.E.2d 860 (1980); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

The standard for determining probable cause for issuance of a search warrant based on information from informants is the totality of the circumstances analysis that traditionally has informed probable cause determinations. State v. Craver, 70 N.C. App. 555, 320 S.E.2d 431 (1984).

The totality of the circumstances analysis mandates a practical, common sense determination of probable cause. State v. Craver, 70 N.C. App. 555, 320 S.E.2d 431 (1984).

Question Is Existence of Reasonable Grounds for Belief. — The determination of the existence of probable cause is not concerned with the question of whether the offense charged has been committed in fact, or whether the accused is guilty or innocent, but only with whether the affiant has reasonable grounds for his belief. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. Eutsler, 41 N.C. App. 182, 254 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

When Facts Furnish Sufficient Basis for Issuance of Warrant. — If the facts before the magistrate supply reasonable cause to believe that the proposed search for evidence of the commission of the designated criminal offense will reveal the presence upon the described premises of the objects sought and that they will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender, it is sufficient basis for the issuance of the search warrant. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972); State v. Riddick, 291 N.C. 399, 230 S.E.2d 506 (1976), motion for reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

Resolution of Doubtful Cases. — Although in a particular case it may not be easy to determine when an affidavit demonstrates the existence of probable cause, the resolution of doubtful or marginal cases in this area should be largely determined by the preference to be accorded to warrants. State v. Altman, 15 N.C. App. 257, 189 S.E.2d 793 (1972); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

Each case must be decided on its own facts and reviewing courts are to pay deference to judicial determinations of probable cause. The resolution of doubtful or marginal cases in this area should be largely determined by the preference to be accorded to warrants. State v. Jones, 299 N.C. 298, 261 S.E.2d 860 (1980).

When Evidence of Previous Criminal Activity Supports Warrant. — Generally, two factors determine whether evidence of previous criminal activity is sufficient to later support search warrant: (1) the amount of the criminal activity, and (2) the time period over which the activity occurred. Absent additional facts tending to show otherwise, a one-shot type of crime, such as a single instance of possession or sale of some contraband, will support a finding of probable cause only for a few days at best. However, where affidavit properly recites facts indicating activity of a protracted and continuous nature, a course of conduct, the passage of time becomes less significant. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Need to Determine If Evidence Is Stale. — When evidence of previous criminal activity is advanced to support finding of probable cause, further examination must be made to determine if evidence of prior activity is stale. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Continuity of offense may be the most important factor in determining whether probable cause is valid or stale. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Inference Upheld. — Where suspect, previously convicted of selling drugs, had within a ten-day period rented three different motel rooms, each time for several days, in a city in which he had a local address, and at two of those locations he had sold cocaine, based on these facts, it was reasonable to infer that when suspect occupied third room, he still possessed the cocaine. State v. McCoy, 100 N.C. App. 574, 397 S.E.2d 355 (1990).

Test for "staleness" of information on which a search warrant is based is whether the facts indicate that probable cause exists at the time the warrant is issued. State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Probable cause must be based on facts gathered in close enough proximity to the time of the issuance of the warrant as to justify a finding of probable cause at that time; but whether this test is met is to be determined on the facts of each case. State v. Windham, 57 N.C. App. 571, 291 S.E.2d 876 (1982).

Before a search warrant may be issued, proof of probable cause must be established by facts so closely related to the time of issuance of the warrant so as to justify a finding of probable cause at that time. The general rule is that no more than a "reasonable" time may have elapsed. State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Common sense is the ultimate criterion in determining the degree of evaporation of probable cause. The significance of the length of time between the point probable cause arose and when the warrant issued depends largely upon the property's nature, and should be contemplated in view of the practical consideration of everyday life. State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

Double Hearsay in Application. — Where the application for a warrant contained "double hearsay," but did not adequately explain why this "double hearsay" was credible, the information contained in the affidavit and on the face of the warrant was inadequate to establish that probable cause existed for the issuance of the warrant. State v. Styles, 116 N.C. App. 479, 448 S.E.2d 385, petition denied, 339 N.C. 620, 454 S.E.2d 265 (1995).

Twenty-four hour span between informant's contact with defendant and issuance of warrant did not render the information so stale as to fail to establish probable cause. State v. Windham, 57 N.C. App. 571, 291 S.E.2d 876 (1982).

Year-Old Information as to Possession of Marijuana. — As marijuana is a substance which can be easily concealed and moved about and which is likely to be disposed of or used, year-old information, which was the only evidence of residential possession by defendants was too stale to establish probable cause to search defendant's residence, even though the affidavit on which the search warrant was based also presented more recent information concerning defendant's drug activities. State v. Lindsey, 58 N.C. App. 564, 293 S.E.2d 833 (1982).

Probable Cause May Be Based on Evidence Not Competent in Trial. — A finding of probable cause for the issuance of search warrants may rest upon evidence which is not competent in a criminal trial. State v. Flowers, 12 N.C. App. 487, 183 S.E.2d 820, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 728, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971).

A valid search warrant may be issued upon the basis of an affidavit setting forth information which may not be competent as evidence. State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971); State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972); State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977); State v. Horne, 59 N.C. App. 576, 297 S.E.2d 788 (1982), overruled on other grounds, 320 N.C. 589, 359 S.E.2d 776 (1987).

As to use of electronic tracking beepers to establish probable cause, see State v. Hendricks, 43 N.C. App. 245, 258 S.E.2d 872

Probable Cause to Be Based Solely on Affidavit Where Witness Did Not Recall Speaking to Judge. — Where the sole witness who appeared before district judge at the time search warrant was issued had no independent recollection of speaking with the judge about this warrant, a finding of probable cause had to be based solely upon the allegations in the affidavit. State v. Campbell, 14 N.C. App. 493, 188 S.E.2d 560, aff'd, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Triggering Events for Anticipatory Warrant. — The magistrate must ensure that the "triggering events" for an anticipatory warrant, those events which form the basis for probable cause, are both ascertainable and preordained. State v. Smith, 124 N.C. App. 565, 478 S.E.2d 237 (1996).

III. AFFIDAVITS.

Sufficiency of Affidavit. — The test to determine the sufficiency of affidavits upon which search warrants are issued is that the magistrate must be informed of some of the underlying circumstances from which the informant concluded that what he stated to the affiant was correct, and some of the underlying circumstances from which the officer concluded that the informant whose identity need not be disclosed was "credible" or his information "reliable." State v. Chapman, 24 N.C. App. 462, 211 S.E.2d 489 (1975).

In an application for a search warrant, the affidavit is deemed sufficient if it supplies reasonable cause to believe that the proposed search for evidence of the commission of the designated criminal offense will reveal the presence upon the described premises of the objects sought and that they will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Hamlin, 36 N.C. App. 605, 244 S.E.2d 481 (1978); State v. Goforth, 65 N.C. App. 302, 309 S.E.2d 488 (1983).

The affidavit upon which a search warrant is issued is sufficient if it supplies reasonable cause to believe that the proposed search for evidence of the commission of the designated criminal offense will reveal the presence upon the described premises of the objects sought and that they will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980); State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

To supply reasonable cause to believe the objects sought are on the described premises, the affidavit supporting a search warrant must provide the magistrate with underlying circumstances from which to judge the validity of the informant's conclusion that the articles sought are at the place to be searched. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

The affidavit must furnish reasonable cause to believe that the search will reveal the presence of the articles sought on the premises described in the application of the warrant and that such objects will aid in the apprehension or conviction of the offender. State v. Bright, 301 N.C. 243, 271 S.E.2d 368 (1980).

Purely Conclusory Affidavit Insufficient. — A search warrant cannot be issued upon affidavits which are purely conclusory and which do not state underlying circumstances upon which the affiant's belief of probable cause is founded. Further, there must be facts or circumstances in the affidavit which implicate the premises to be searched. State v. Bright, 301 N.C. 243, 271 S.E.2d 368 (1980); State v. Goforth, 65 N.C. App. 302, 309 S.E.2d 488 (1983).

Probable cause for a search warrant cannot be established by affidavits which are purely conclusory in nature, and therefore, the affidavit must set forth enough of the underlying facts and circumstances so that the magistrate can perform his detached judicial function as a check upon intrusions by law-enforcement officials into the privacy of individuals. State v. Silhan, 302 N.C. 223, 275 S.E.2d 450 (1981), overruled in part State v. Sanderson, 346 N.C. 669, 488 S.E.2d 133, State v. Adams, 347 N.C. 48, 490 S.E.2d 220 (1997).

The allegation that agents have conducted an investigation which has disclosed evidence of irregularities which, if supported by evidence and found to be true, would constitute serious violations of the law on the part of the defendant, without the disclosure of facts from which the magistrate could ascertain the existence of irregularities that would constitute serious violations of the law, does not meet the constitutional standard for issuance of a search warrant. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980).

When Affidavit Is Sufficient in Itself. — If the facts set out in the affidavit are sufficient within themselves to justify the finding of probable cause, the affidavit is sufficient. State v. Wooten, 20 N.C. App. 139, 201 S.E.2d 89 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 623, 202 S.E.2d 277 (1974), overruled on other grounds, State v. Harris, 25 N.C. App. 404, 213 S.E.2d 414 (1975).

When Testimony of Witnesses Necessary. — Where the affidavit indicates the basis for the finding of probable cause, but is not in itself sufficient to establish probable cause, testimony of witnesses will be necessary to establish whether there was in fact sufficient evidence before the magistrate to justify his finding of probable cause to issue the search warrant. State v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 116, 298 S.E.2d 180 (1982), cert. denied, 300 N.C. 579, 300 S.E.2d 553 (1983).

Common-Sense Interpretation of Affidavits. — Affidavits for search warrants must be tested and interpreted by magistrates and courts in a common-sense and realistic fashion. State v. Flowers, 12 N.C. App. 487, 183 S.E.2d 820, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 728, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971); State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

Because applications are normally submitted by police officers who do not have legal training, the language is to be construed in a commonsensical, nontechnical and realistic way. State v. Windham, 57 N.C. App. 571, 291 S.E.2d 876 (1982).

Affidavits are normally drafted by nonlawyers in the midst and haste of a criminal investigation, and technical requirements of elaborate specificity once exacted under common-law pleadings have no proper place in this area. State v. Flowers, 12 N.C. App. 487, 183 S.E.2d 820, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 728, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971); State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

The commands of U.S. Const., Amend. IV, like all constitutional requirements, are practical and not abstract. If the teachings of the cases are to be followed and the constitutional policy served, affidavits for search warrants must be tested and interpreted by magistrates and courts in a common-sense and realistic fashion. Thus, when a search is based upon a magistrate's, rather than a police officer's, determination of probable cause, the reviewing courts will accept evidence of a less judicially competent or persuasive character than would have justified an officer in acting on his own without a warrant, and will sustain the judicial determination so long as there was substantial basis for (the magistrate) to conclude that narcotics were probably present. State v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 116, 298 S.E.2d 180 (1982), cert. denied, 300 N.C. 579, 300 S.E.2d 553 (1983).

Affidavit Must Implicate Premises. — It is necessary that an affidavit for a search warrant implicate the premises to be searched. State v. Silhan, 302 N.C. 223, 275 S.E.2d 450 (1981), overruled in part by State v. Sanderson, 346 N.C. 669, 488 S.E.2d 133, State v. Adams, 347 N.C. 48, 490 S.E.2d 220 (1997).

Affidavit failed to furnish an adequate basis for the finding of probable cause where nothing in the affidavit supported the conclusion that any of the events referred to occurred on or in connection with the premises to be searched. State v. Campbell, 14 N.C. App. 493, 188 S.E.2d 560, aff'd, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752, defendant's petition for cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 624, 190 S.E.2d 467 (1972).

Affidavit was held insufficient to support a finding of probable cause for issuance of a warrant to search defendant's premises for LSD, where the affidavit contained no allegation that either the affiant or the confidential informant had personal knowledge that LSD was on defendant's premises. State v. Graves, 16 N.C. App. 389, 192 S.E.2d 122 (1972).

Issuing Official May Rely on Sworn Statement of Affiant Appearing in Person. — A judicial official is entitled to rely upon the sworn statement of affiant, an A.B.C. officer, who appears before him in person, in concluding that the affiant is correctly reciting what has been told him by an informer. State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

A magistrate is entitled to rely upon the sworn statement of an affiant police officer who appears before the magistrate in person, in concluding that the affiant is correctly reciting what has been told him by his informant. State v. Shirley, 12 N.C. App. 440, 183 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 729, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971).

Affidavit Held Sufficient to Establish Probable Cause. — Affidavit describing the property to be seized, giving defendant's name and address, making reference to a confidential informer and his reliability, and stating the information given affiant by the informer was sufficient to establish probable cause to issue a search warrant as required by subsection (b) of this section. State v. Davis, 20 N.C. App. 739, 203 S.E.2d 91, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 375, 205 S.E.2d 726 (1974).

Where affidavit clearly stated that the residence to be searched was occupied by defendant and his brothers, that witnesses had identified one of defendant's brothers, and that a reliable informant had stated that a shotgun was at the residence, the affidavit disclosed sufficient information for a reviewing magistrate to determine that there was probable cause. State v. Colvin, 92 N.C. App. 152, 374 S.E.2d 126 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 249, 377 S.E.2d 758 (1989).

Affidavit Held Sufficient Notwithstanding Erroneous Statement. — Statement in an affidavit given to obtain a search warrant concerning defendant's prior narcotics conviction was error because it was based on erroneous information, though the error was not known to the officer making the affidavit; however, the error was immaterial because the trial court found that the affidavit was nevertheless sufficient on its face to support a finding of probable cause for the issuance of the search warrant for narcotics, and evidence obtained as a result of the search under the warrant was properly admitted. State v. Steele, 18 N.C. App. 126, 196 S.E.2d 379 (1973).

Affidavit may be based on hearsay information if the magistrate is informed of underlying circumstances upon which the informant bases his conclusion as to the whereabouts of the articles and the underlying circumstances upon which the officer concluded that the informant was credible. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Spencer, 281 N.C. 121, 187 S.E.2d 779 (1972).

Although an affidavit may be based on hearsay information and need not reflect the direct personal observations of the affiant, the magistrate must be informed of some of the underlying circumstances from which the informant concluded that the articles to be searched for were where he claimed they were, and some of the underlying circumstances from which the officer concluded that the informant, whose identity need not be disclosed, was "credible" or his information "reliable." State v. Vestal, 278 N.C. 561, 180 S.E.2d 755 (1971); State v. Hayes, 291 N.C. 293, 230 S.E.2d 146 (1976); State v. Dailey, 33 N.C. App. 600, 235 S.E.2d 917, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 362, 237 S.E.2d 849 (1977); State v. McKinnon, 306 N.C. 288, 293 S.E.2d 118 (1982).

The affidavit may be based on hearsay from an undisclosed informant and need not reflect the personal observations of affiant, but the magistrate must be informed of some of the underlying circumstances from which the informant concluded that the narcotics were present and some of the underlying circumstances from which the affiant concluded that the informant was credible and reliable. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. Altman, 15 N.C. App. 257, 189 S.E.2d 793 (1972); State v. Horne, 59 N.C. App. 576, 297 S.E.2d 788 (1982), overruled on other grounds, 320 N.C. 589, 359 S.E.2d 776 (1987).

While an affidavit does not have to reflect the personal observations of the affiant, a two-pronged test is required to sustain a search warrant. The first requirement is that the magistrate be informed of some of the underlying circumstances from which the informant drew his conclusions. The second standard is that the magistrate be informed of the underlying circumstances from which affiant concluded that the informant was credible and reliable. State v. McKoy, 16 N.C. App. 349, 191 S.E.2d 897 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 584, 193 S.E.2d 744 (1973).

Admission into Evidence of Warrant and Affidavit Containing Hearsay Held Erroneous. — Where the affidavit contained hearsay statements indicating defendant's complicity in another crime without showing that he had been convicted of that crime, the admission into evidence of the search warrant and the accompanying affidavit was erroneous and resulted in error prejudicial to defendant. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972).

Typographical Error Held Not Fatal. — Where the year had recently changed, a typographical error in the year date was not fatal to the sufficiency of the affidavit. State v. Beddard, 35 N.C. App. 212, 241 S.E.2d 83 (1978).

IV. INFORMANTS.

Mere characterization of informant as reliable might not, in itself, provide a sufficient factual basis for the magistrate to credit the report of the informer; there must be facts, recited and sworn to in the affidavit as being within the personal knowledge of the affiant, which furnish a sufficiently substantial basis to support the magistrate's independent finding crediting the report of the unidentified informer. State v. Shirley, 12 N.C. App. 440, 183 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 729, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971).

If an unidentified informant has supplied all or part of the information contained in the affidavit supplementing all application for a search warrant, some of the underlying facts and circumstances which show the informant is credible or that the information is reliable must be set forth before the issuing officer. State v. Craver, 70 N.C. App. 555, 320 S.E.2d 431 (1984).

Previous Reliability Need Not Be Averred. — In issuing a search warrant based upon the information of an informant, an averment of previous reliability of the informant is not necessary, but the inquiry is whether the informant's present information is truthful or reliable. State v. Chapman, 24 N.C. App. 462, 211 S.E.2d 489 (1975).

Statement of Past Reliability Is Not Mere Conclusion. — But the statement that the informant has proven reliable in the past is a statement of fact and not a mere conclusion. State v. Altman, 15 N.C. App. 257, 189 S.E.2d 793, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 759, 191 S.E.2d 362 (1972).

And Tends to Show That Informer Is Credible. — Where the affidavit stated that the informer had furnished information in the past which had resulted in the seizure of narcotic drugs and subsequent conviction, that tended to show that the informer was credible and his information reliable. State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

The statement in the affidavit that the informant had furnished reliable information in the past which had in fact led to the arrest of several persons and the testimony of the officer prior to the issuance of the warrant were sufficient to show the reliability of the informer. State v. Hayes, 291 N.C. 293, 230 S.E.2d 146 (1976).

And Meets Minimum Standards. — The statement that the informant has proven reliable in the past meets minimum standards.

State v. Altman, 15 N.C. App. 257, 189 S.E.2d 793, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 759, 191 S.E.2d 362 (1972); State v. McKoy, 16 N.C. App. 349, 191 S.E.2d 897 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 584, 193 S.E.2d 744 (1973).

Where the circumstances set forth in support of the informant's reliability were that he "has proven reliable and credible in the past," those circumstances were the irreducible minimum on which a warrant could be sustained. State v. Altman, 15 N.C. App. 257, 189 S.E.2d 793, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 759, 191 S.E.2d 362 (1972); State v. McKoy, 16 N.C. App. 349, 191 S.E.2d 897 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 584, 193 S.E.2d 744 (1973).

An affiant's statement that a confidential informant had given this agent good and reliable information in the past that had been checked by the affiant and found to be true meets the minimum standard to sustain a warrant. State v. McKoy, 16 N.C. App. 349, 191 S.E.2d 897 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 584, 193 S.E.2d 744 (1973).

An affidavit indicating the reliability of its information by naming an informant, indicating the value of his past assistance and corroborating that information with statements from other officers was sufficient to support the issuance of a search warrant for defendant's premises. State v. McCuien, 17 N.C. App. 109, 193 S.E.2d 349 (1972).

What Tip Must Reveal. — It is essential that the informant's tip reveal that the objects sought are on the premises to be searched. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

Absent a statement claiming personal observation or otherwise detailing the manner in which the information was gathered, it is especially important that the tip describe the accused's criminal activity in sufficient detail that the magistrate may know that he is relying on something more substantial than a casual rumor or an accusation based merely on an individual's general reputation. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

Personal and recent observations by an unidentified informer of criminal activity show that the information was gained in a reliable manner and are more than a bald and unilluminating assertion of suspicion. State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

Observation of Stolen Property in Defendants' Premises. — Information contained in affidavits was sufficient for the magistrate to find probable cause for issuance of search warrants for defendants' premises where such information included a statement that a reliable informer had seen part of the stolen property in defendants' premises. State v. Shanklin, 16 N.C. App. 712, 193 S.E.2d 341 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 674, 194 S.E.2d 154 (1973).

If the informant has recently seen stolen items in defendant's possession at his residence, and he states this to the affiant, affidavit would clearly suffice. State v. Whitley, 58 N.C. App. 539, 293 S.E.2d 838, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982).

§ 15A-246. Form and content of the search warrant.

A search warrant must contain:

(1) The name and signature of the issuing official with the time and date of issuance above his signature; and

(2) The name of a specific officer or the classification of officers to whom the warrant is addressed; and

(3) The names of the applicant and of all persons whose affidavits or testimony were given in support of the application; and

(4) A designation sufficient to establish with reasonable certainty the premises, vehicles, or persons to be searched; and

(5) A description or a designation of the items constituting the object of the search and authorized to be seized. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 3, s. 39; Code, s. 1172; Rev., s. 3164; C.S., s. 4530; 1961, c. 1069; 1969, c. 869, s. 8; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former § 15-26.

Constitutional Requirements. — A search warrant and affidavit meet the requirements of this section, as well as the requirements of U.S. Const., Amend. IV, where (1) the warrant describes with reasonable certainty the premises to be searched and the contraband for which the search was to be made, (2) the affidavit indicates the basis for a finding of probable cause, and (3) the warrant is signed by the magistrate and bears the date and hour of its issuance. State v. Bush, 10 N.C. App. 247, 178 S.E.2d 313, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 726, 178 S.E.2d 830 (1970).

Search warrant will be presumed regular if irregularity does not appear on the face of the record. State v. Spillars, 280 N.C. 341, 185 S.E.2d 881 (1972); State v. Travatello, 24 N.C. App. 511, 211 S.E.2d 467 (1975).

When Presumption of Regularity Applicable. — The presumption of regularity of a search warrant will operate only when the facts in the record do not indicate the occurrence of any irregularities and no objection to the validity of the warrant has been raised in a timely fashion. State v. Lombardo, 306 N.C. 594, 295 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

The presumption of regularity of a search warrant is applicable only in situations where the defendant challenges the validity of a search warrant that was not introduced into evidence on the ground that the warrant itself does not conform to technical statutory requirements. State v. Lombardo, 306 N.C. 594, 295 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

If nothing else appears and if no objection to the validity of the warrant had been raised in the superior court, an appellate court would be justified in presuming the officers of the law performed their legal duties and that the warrant was legal and valid. State v. Lombardo, 306 N.C. 594, 295 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

Common Sense Interpretation. — Search warrants must be tested and interpreted by magistrates and courts in a common sense and realistic fashion, as they are normally drafted by nonlawyers in the midst and haste of a criminal investigation. State v. Hansen, 27 N.C. App. 459, 219 S.E.2d 641 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 453, 223 S.E.2d 161 (1976).

Technical requirements of elaborate specificity once exacted under common-law pleadings have no proper place now in the area of search warrants. State v. Hansen, 27 N.C. App. 459, 219 S.E.2d 641 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 453, 223 S.E.2d 161 (1976).

Incorporation of Affidavit by Reference. — Under this section, it was permissible to incorporate the description of the items to be searched for and the place to be searched in the warrant by reference to the affidavit. State v. Flowers, 12 N.C. App. 487, 183 S.E.2d 820, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 728, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971); State v. Shanklin, 16 N.C. App. 712, 193 S.E.2d 341 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 674, 194 S.E.2d 154 (1973).

Where an affidavit complied with the provisions of this section and met the constitutional standard of reasonableness and probable cause requisite to the issuance of a search warrant, the search warrant, by reference to the affidavit, which was made a part of the warrant, described with reasonable certainty the premises to be searched, sufficiently indicated the basis for the finding of probable cause, and sufficiently described the contraband for which the search was to be conducted. State v. Murphy, 15 N.C. App. 420, 190 S.E.2d 361 (1972).

Purpose of Particularity Requirement. — The requirement that warrants shall particularly describe the things to be seized is to prevent the seizure of one thing under a warrant describing another and to leave nothing to the discretion of the officer executing the warrant in determining what is to be taken. State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972); State v. Shanklin, 16 N.C. App. 712, 193 S.E.2d 341 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 674, 194 S.E.2d 154 (1973).

Particularity Requirement Where Books Are Seized. — The particularity requirement is to be accorded the most scrupulous exactitude when the things are books, and the basis for the seizure is the ideas which they contain. But when rights under U.S. Const., Amend. I are not involved, the specificity requirement is more flexible. State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

Warrant Authorizing Seizure of Limited Class of Things Is Not Prohibited. — A warrant empowering officers to seize a limited class of things, i.e., unlawfully possessed narcotic drugs, is not prohibited. State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

Description of Drugs to Be Seized Held Sufficiently Particular. — The description in the search warrant was particular enough to prevent the warrant from being a general search warrant within the prohibition of U.S. Const., Amend. IV and of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20, where the affidavit upon which it was based referred only to "narcotic drugs, the possession of which is a crime" and did not describe the things to be seized with more particularity. State v. Foye, 14 N.C. App. 200, 188 S.E.2d 67 (1972).

The words "illegally held narcotic drugs" described the things to be seized with sufficient particularity to prevent the warrant from being a general search warrant within the prohibition of U.S. Const., Amend. IV and of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20. State v. Shirley, 12 N.C. App. 440, 183 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 729, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971).

Description of Premises Held Sufficient. — A description of the premises to be searched was not rendered uncertain by the fact that the affidavit incorrectly described the premises as "a brick structure" when in fact it was made of stone. State v. Shirley, 12 N.C. App. 440, 183 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 729, 184 S.E.2d 885 (1971).

A description of a mobile home to be searched was not fatally defective when the warrant named the son as owner when in fact it was rented to the son by his father or when there was another mobile home of the same color as that described in the warrant but which was not owned by either of these parties or occupied by the defendant. State v. Woods, 26 N.C. App. 584, 216 S.E.2d 492, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 396, 218 S.E.2d 469 (1975).

Search of Outbuildings. — The search of defendant's premises did not exceed the scope of the warrant by including a tool shed as well as the house itself. State v. Travatello, 24 N.C. App. 511, 211 S.E.2d 467 (1975).

Notation of Time of Issuance. — The search warrant failed to meet the requirements of subsection (1) where the time of issuance was not found above the signature of the magistrate. Such an omission could be significant, but in this case there is no prejudice since the time of issuance was noted elsewhere on the face of the warrant. State v. Hyleman, 89 N.C. App. 424, 366 S.E.2d 530 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 506, 379 S.E.2d 830 (1989).

Applied in State v. Leonard, 87 N.C. App. 448, 361 S.E.2d 397 (1987).

§ 15A-247. Who may execute a search warrant.

A search warrant may be executed by any law-enforcement officer acting within his territorial jurisdiction, whose investigative authority encompasses the crime or crimes involved. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 3, s. 38; Code, s. 1171; Rev., s. 3163; C.S., s. 4529; 1941, c. 53; 1949, c. 1179; 1955, c. 7; 1965, c. 377; 1969, c. 869, s. 8; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

§ 15A-248. Time of execution of a search warrant.

A search warrant must be executed within 48 hours from the time of issuance. Any warrant not executed within that time limit is void and must be marked "not executed" and returned without unnecessary delay to the clerk of the issuing court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Substantial Compliance. — A search warrant was not invalid, even though it was not executed within 48 hours, where the warrant was served on a bank within 48 hours, but the documents were not produced within that period because that the bank needed to locate and assemble the records. State v. Davidson, 131 N.C. App. 276, 506 S.E.2d 743 (1998).

§ 15A-249. Officer to give notice of identity and purpose.

The officer executing a search warrant must, before entering the premises, give appropriate notice of his identity and purpose to the person to be searched, or the person in apparent control of the premises to be searched. If it is unclear whether anyone is present at the premises to be searched, he must give the notice in a manner likely to be heard by anyone who is present. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Notice Requirement. — The notice requirement is for the protection of the officers as well as the protection of the occupants and their constitutional rights. State v. Gaines, 33 N.C. App. 66, 234 S.E.2d 42 (1977).

One of the purposes of this section is to protect the public from unreasonable searches and seizures and to guard the right to privacy in homes. State v. Brown, 35 N.C. App. 634, 242 S.E.2d 184 (1978).

Officers to Give Notice and Demand Entry Absent Invitation or Permission. — Even though police officers have a valid search or arrest warrant, absent invitation or permission, ordinarily they may not enter a private home unless they first give notice of their authority and purpose and make a demand for entry. State v. Miller, 16 N.C. App. 1, 190 S.E.2d 888 (1972), modified, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973), decided under prior law; State v. Gaines, 33 N.C. App. 66, 234 S.E.2d 42 (1977).

Time Between Notice and Entry. — The amount of time required to be given between notice and entry must depend on the particular circumstances. State v. Gaines, 33 N.C. App. 66, 234 S.E.2d 42 (1977).

Effect of Exigent Circumstances. — In a search and seizure case, where the exigent circumstances are adequate to justify the warrantless search of defendant's house by officers under the plain view doctrine, they would also be sufficient to excuse the officers from the knock and announce requirement. State v. Prevette, 43 N.C. App. 450, 259 S.E.2d 595 (1979), appeal dismissed, 299 N.C. 124, 261 S.E.2d 925, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 906, 100 S. Ct. 2988, 64 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1980).

Notice Held Sufficient. — See State v. Gaines, 33 N.C. App. 66, 234 S.E.2d 42 (1977); State v. Fruitt, 35 N.C. App. 177, 241 S.E.2d 125, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 93, 244 S.E.2d 261 (1978); State v. Trapper, 48 N.C. App. 481, 269 S.E.2d 680, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 405, 273 S.E.2d 450 (1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 997, 101 S. Ct. 2338, 68 L. Ed. 2d 856 (1981).

Police officers who wore search and raid jackets which identified them and their purpose when they entered defendant's business yelling "police officers, search warrant" complied with the requirements of this section. State v. Moose, 101 N.C. App. 59, 398 S.E.2d 898 (1990), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 575, 403 S.E.2d 519 (1991).

§ 15A-251. Entry by force.

An officer may break and enter any premises or vehicle when necessary to the execution of the warrant if:

(1) The officer has previously announced his identity and purpose as required by G.S. 15A-249 and reasonably believes either that admittance is being denied or unreasonably delayed or that the premises or vehicle is unoccupied; or

(2) The officer has probable cause to believe that the giving of notice would endanger the life or safety of any person. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Exigent Circumstances on Announcement Requirement. — In a search and seizure case, where the exigent circumstances are adequate to justify the warrantless search of defendant's house by officers under the plain view doctrine, they would also be sufficient to excuse the officers from the knock and announce requirement. State v. Prevette, 43 N.C. App. 450, 259 S.E.2d 595 (1979), appeal dismissed, 299 N.C. 124, 261 S.E.2d 925, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 906, 100 S. Ct. 2988, 64 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1980).

Announcement by Police Facing Exigent Circumstances. — The fact that officers did announce their identity and purpose does not mean entry by force cannot be justified; there is nothing in the statute to forbid an announcement of police presence and purpose when officers also face exigent circumstances. State v. Lyons, 340 N.C. 646, 459 S.E.2d 770 (1995).

Search Conducted in Accordance with Section. — The trial court had a reasonable basis for concluding that search was conducted in accordance with this section; where testimony from officer was that during time between announcement and opening of door, he heard the sounds of people running and faintly heard the word "police," and where officer testified that he ordered the door opened "because evidence of this nature ... is easily disposed of, and quick entry is safer for the officers," as such evidence indicated circumstances under which the officers could have reasonably believed that they were being denied access and that evidence could be destroyed. State v. Marshall, 94 N.C. App. 20, 380 S.E.2d 360, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 275, 384 S.E.2d 526 (1989).

Entry by force justified where officers knocked and announced, waited a few seconds before again knocking and announcing, and waited 10-15 seconds before forcing entry after hearing no sound from the interior of the apartment, and where the officers knew the defendant was in the apartment. State v. Vick, 130 N.C. App. 207, 502 S.E.2d 871 (1998).

Notice Held Sufficient. — See State v. Trapper, 48 N.C. App. 481, 269 S.E.2d 680, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 405, 273 S.E.2d 450 (1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 997, 101 S. Ct. 2338, 68 L. Ed. 2d 856 (1981).

Where method of entry renders search illegal, evidence obtained is not competent at defendants' trial. State v. Mitchell, 22 N.C. App. 663, 207 S.E.2d 263 (1974).

Applied in State v. Brown, 35 N.C. App. 634, 242 S.E.2d 184 (1978); State v. Willis, 58 N.C. App. 617, 294 S.E.2d 330 (1982); State v. Edwards, 70 N.C. App. 317, 319 S.E.2d 613 (1984); State v. Jones, 97 N.C. App. 189, 388 S.E.2d 213 (1990).

§ 15A-252. Service of a search warrant.

Before undertaking any search or seizure pursuant to the warrant, the officer must read the warrant and give a copy of the warrant application and affidavit to the person to be searched, or the person in apparent control of the premises or vehicle to be searched. If no one in apparent and responsible control is occupying the premises or vehicle, the officer must leave a copy of the warrant affixed to the premises or vehicle. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section must be construed with reference to other provisions of Chapter 15A relating to search warrants, as where possible statutes dealing with the same subject matter must be harmonized to give effect to each. State v. Jones, 97 N.C. App. 189, 388 S.E.2d 213 (1990).

Precautionary Measures Prior to Service of Warrant Not Proscribed. — To require officers to serve a warrant prior to taking the precautionary measures authorized by § 15A-255 and § 15A-256 would frustrate the purposes of the statutes; accordingly, this section does not prevent officers from locating, detaining, or frisking individuals on the premises prior to serving the warrant. State v. Jones, 97 N.C. App. 189, 388 S.E.2d 213 (1990).

As to compliance where actual reading of search warrant is rendered impossible because of active obstruction of officers, see State v. Rogers, 43 N.C. App. 475, 259 S.E.2d 572 (1979).

Suppression of Evidence Not Required For Failure to Comply. — Violation of this section did not require suppression of evidence, where officers who found cocaine in the defendant's apartment merely left a copy of the search warrant in the apartment after the search, rather than giving defendant a copy of the warrant application and affidavit before the search, because the evidence was not obtained "as a result" of the officers' failure to strictly comply with the language of this section. State v. Vick, 130 N.C. App. 207, 502 S.E.2d 871 (1998).

§ 15A-253. Scope of the search; seizure of items not named in the warrant.

The scope of the search may be only such as is authorized by the warrant and is reasonably necessary to discover the items specified therein. Upon discovery of the items specified, the officer must take possession or custody of them. If in the course of the search the officer inadvertently discovers items not specified in the warrant which are subject to seizure under G.S. 15A-242, he may also take possession of the items so discovered. CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Plain View.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section Codifies Federal Constitutional Requirements. — Provisions of Chapter 15A, particularly § 15A-242 and this section, are codifications of federal constitutional requirements. State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Exercise of Judgment by Investigators. — Investigators conducting a search will exercise some judgment and "discretion" in separating the innocuous from the incriminating. State v. Louchheim, 36 N.C. App. 271, 244 S.E.2d 195 (1978), aff'd, 296 N.C. 314, 250 S.E.2d 630, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 836, 100 S. Ct. 71, 62 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1979).

Places Held to Be Within Defendant's Premises. — The search of defendant's premises did not exceed the scope of the warrant by including a tool shed as well as the house itself. State v. Travatello, 24 N.C. App. 511, 211 S.E.2d 467 (1975).

The trial court in a prosecution for possession of heroin did not err in allowing testimony with respect to a box and its contents found in the trunk of defendant's automobile which was parked in defendant's driveway, since a search warrant authorized a search of the premises of defendant. State v. Logan, 27 N.C. App. 150, 218 S.E.2d 213 (1975).

Seizure of Weapons. — In order to justify the seizure of a weapon as being incident to a lawful arrest it is not necessary that the weapon be on the person being arrested. State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Applied in State v. Armstrong, 45 N.C. App. 40, 262 S.E.2d 370 (1980); State v. Williams, 299 N.C. 529, 263 S.E.2d 571 (1980); State v. White, 322 N.C. 770, 370 S.E.2d 390 (1988).

II. PLAIN VIEW.

Section Restricts "Plain View" Exception to U.S. Const., Amend. IV. — Constitutionally permissible seizures under the "plain view" exception to U.S. Const., Amend. IV protection against warrantless searches and seizures have been restricted under this section to those instances where the officer has legal justification to be at the place where he inadvertently sees a piece of evidence in plain view. The doctrine serves to supplement the prior justification. State v. Blackwelder, 34 N.C. App. 352, 238 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

Under this section, the statutory "plain view" doctrine is limited to the inadvertent discovery of items pursuant to a legal search under a valid warrant though these items are not specified in the search warrant. State v. Blackwelder, 34 N.C. App. 352, 238 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

When Items in Plain View May Be Seized. — Where a lawful search pursuant to a search warrant is being conducted, items uncovered during the course of this search may be seized if the items would have been seizable under previously announced rationales for warrantless, plain view seizures (i.e., the items were the instrumentalities and means by which a crime is committed, the fruits of crime such as stolen property, weapons by which escape of the person arrested might be effected, and property the possession of which is a crime, or were items for which probable cause existed to believe that they were evidence of criminal activity and would aid in a particular apprehension or conviction), and the items are discovered "inadvertently." State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

An item is lawfully seized even though it is not listed in the warrant if the officer is at a place where he has a legal right to be and if the item seized is in plain view. State v. Riddick, 291 N.C. 399, 230 S.E.2d 506 (1976), motion for reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977).

While conducting a lawful search where officers found in plain view property identified as that reported missing, these items were lawfully seized. State v. Travatello, 24 N.C. App. 511, 211 S.E.2d 467 (1975).

Plain view alone is not enough to justify warrantless seizure of evidence. State v. Blackwelder, 34 N.C. App. 352, 238 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

Inadvertant Discovery. — The North Carolina General Assembly has imposed an additional requirement, not mandated by the Constitution of the United States, that the evidence discovered in plain view must be discovered inadvertently. State v. Mickey, 347 N.C. App. 508, 495 S.E.2d 669 (1998).

Section requires inadvertence of discovery of items not specified in a search warrant. State v. Absher, 34 N.C. App. 197, 237 S.E.2d 749, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 741, 241 S.E.2d 514 (1977).

Meaning of the inadvertence requirement is that there must be no intent on the part of investigators to search for and seize the contested items not named in the warrant. State v. Richards, 294 N.C. 474, 242 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Mere suspicion of a thing's existence is clearly not destructive of inadvertence. Knowledge, presumable such as would generate probable cause, is required and a positive intent to search. State v. Absher, 34 N.C. App. 197, 237 S.E.2d 749, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 741, 241 S.E.2d 514 (1977).

A padlock found under telephone book on bedside table, which was relevant to murder case, was lawfully seized from motel room pursuant to a warrant authorizing search for bloody clothing. State v. Williams, 315 N.C. 310, 338 S.E.2d 75 (1986).

Seizure of Photographs Where Pornography Suspected. — Where defendant was engaged in illegal drug activity, it was reasonable that the officers could conclude that the large quantity of the photographs, showing women in various stages of dress and undress, could have been connected to pornography, and were properly seized under the plain view doctrine. State v. Cummings, 113 N.C. App. 368, 438 S.E.2d 453 (1994), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 336 N.C. 75, 445 S.E.2d 39 (1994).

§ 15A-254. List of items seized.

Upon seizing items pursuant to a search warrant, an officer must write and sign a receipt itemizing the items taken and containing the name of the court by which the warrant was issued. If the items were taken from a person, the receipt must be given to the person. If items are taken from a place or vehicle, the receipt must be given to the owner, or person in apparent control of the premises or vehicle if the person is present; or if he is not, the officer must leave the receipt in the premises or vehicle from which the items were taken. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

§ 15A-255. Frisk of persons present in premises or vehicle to be searched.

An officer executing a warrant directing a search of premises or of a vehicle may, if the officer reasonably believes that his safety or the safety of others then present so requires, search for any dangerous weapons by an external patting of the clothing of those present. If in the course of such a frisk he feels an object which he reasonably believes to be a dangerous weapon, he may take possession of the object. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Frisk of Lounge Patron. — Frisk procedure engaged in by Alcohol Law Enforcement agents and deputy sheriffs in the course of the search of a lounge pursuant to a valid search warrant did not violate the constitutional rights of patron of the lounge. State v. Davis, 94 N.C. App. 358, 380 S.E.2d 378 (1989).

Cited in State v. Jones, 97 N.C. App. 189, 388 S.E.2d 213 (1990).

§ 15A-256. Detention and search of persons present in private premises or vehicle to be searched.

An officer executing a warrant directing a search of premises not generally open to the public or of a vehicle other than a common carrier may detain any person present for such time as is reasonably necessary to execute the warrant. If the search of such premises or vehicle and of any persons designated as objects of the search in the warrant fails to produce the items named in the warrant, the officer may then search any person present at the time of the officer's entry to the extent reasonably necessary to find property particularly described in the warrant which may be concealed upon the person, but no property of a different type from that particularly described in the warrant may be seized or may be the basis for prosecution of any person so searched. For the purpose of this section, all controlled substances are the same type of property. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section Complies with Requirements of U.S. Const., Amend. IV. — Probable cause "particularized" to those present on the premises being searched, as required by U.S. Const., Amend. IV, can be clearly inferred from the circumstances under which the limited search pursuant to this section is authorized: Police officers have reason to believe that criminal activity has been or is occurring on the premises, the search pursuant to the warrant fails to uncover any evidence of such activity, and such evidence of the criminal activity could be concealed upon the person of those present at the time of the officer's entry. State v. Brooks, 51 N.C. App. 90, 275 S.E.2d 202, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 630, 280 S.E.2d 441 (1981).

The limited searches authorized by this section do not violate U.S. Const., Amend. IV. State v. Watlington, 30 N.C. App. 101, 226 S.E.2d 186, appeal dismissed, 290 N.C. 666, 228 S.E.2d 457 (1976).

All Buildings Within Curtilage Included in "Premises." — So long as probable cause exists to search buildings within curtilage, then those buildings must be included within the term "premises" under this section, especially where the warrant explicitly authorizes the search of the outbuildings. State v. Cutshall, 136 N.C. App. 756, 526 S.E.2d 187 (2000).

Search of Persons Present for Concealed Contraband Is Reasonable. — Where police officers have a warrant authorizing the search of a vehicle or premises, it is reasonable to permit a search of persons found in the vehicle or on the premises, within the restrictions of this section, to prevent those persons from concealing the contraband subject matter described in the search warrant. State v. Watlington, 30 N.C. App. 101, 226 S.E.2d 186, appeal dismissed, 290 N.C. 666, 228 S.E.2d 457 (1976).

Defendant, who arrived on the premises while officers were executing warrant, was subject to detention under this section. State v. Patrick, 88 N.C. App. 582, 364 S.E.2d 450 (1988).

Seizure Upheld. — Where officers were lawfully on the premises pursuant to a valid search warrant, and were authorized under this section to initially detain defendant in house, their discovery of a packet of cocaine which fell out of defendant's clothing was the result of their lawful detention and the seizure of that packet was authorized under the "plain view" doctrine. Moreover, once this packet had been discovered, the officers had probable cause to arrest defendant without benefit of a warrant under § 15A-401(b), and thus, second packet of cocaine found as a result of a search incident to defendant's arrest was properly seized and admissible at trial. State v. Patrick, 88 N.C. App. 582, 364 S.E.2d 450 (1988).

Seizure Illegal. — In the absence of probable cause or other warrant exception, the trial court should have suppressed evidence officers seized during search of defendant's person, because the officers' search yielded crack cocaine, the exact object of the investigation, and after the officers discovered cocaine in the outbuilding, their statutory authority to search the non-resident defendant ceased to exist. State v. Cutshall, 136 N.C. App. 756, 526 S.E.2d 187 (2000).

§ 15A-257. Return of the executed warrant.

An officer who has executed a search warrant must, without unnecessary delay, return to the clerk of the issuing court the warrant together with a written inventory of items seized. The inventory, if any, and return must be signed and sworn to by the officer who executed the warrant. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Primary purpose of the requirement that the return be sworn to by the officer who executed the warrant is to better insure the accuracy of the inventory of the property seized. This requirement has little, if anything, to do with protecting persons from unreasonable searches and seizures since the search and seizure already will have taken place. State v. Dobbins, 306 N.C. 342, 293 S.E.2d 162 (1982).

Statute does not state particular time for return of the inventory, and a delay of three and one-half days between execution and return of the inventory of items seized was not an undue delay in violation of this section. State v. Hyleman, 89 N.C. App. 424, 366 S.E.2d 530 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 506, 379 S.E.2d 830 (1989).

§ 15A-258. Disposition of seized property.

Property seized shall be held in the custody of the person who applied for the warrant, or of the officer who executed it, or of the agency or department by which the officer is employed, or of any other law-enforcement agency or person for purposes of evaluation or analysis, upon condition that upon order of the court the items may be retained by the court or delivered to another court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Release of Currency to Federal Drug Enforcement Administration. — This section does not require that a court order be obtained prior to any release of seized property, and it expressly authorizes property to be held by any law-enforcement agency; therefore, the release of currency to Federal Drug Enforcement Administration did not violate this section. State v. Jones, 97 N.C. App. 189, 388 S.E.2d 213 (1990).

Necessity of Court Order. — In the absence of a pre-existing valid court order directing that property seized pursuant to a search warrant or other lawful authority be retained by the court or delivered to another court, a law enforcement agency in possession of the property is not required to obtain a court order prior to releasing it. See opinion of Attorney General to Secretary Janice H. Faulkner, — N.C.A.G. — (July 19, 1994).

§ 15A-259. Application of Article to all warrants; exception as to inspection warrants and special riot situations.

The requirements of this Article apply to search warrants issued for any purpose, except that the contents of and procedure relating to inspection warrants are to be governed by the provisions of Article 4A of Chapter 15 and warrants to inspect vehicles in riot areas or approaching municipalities during emergencies are subject to the special procedures set out in G.S. 14-288.11. Nothing in this Article is intended to alter or affect the emergency search doctrine. (1957, c. 496; 1969, c. 869, s. 8; 1971, c. 872, s. 4; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Requirements of this Article apply only to searches made under warrants. State v. Prevette, 43 N.C. App. 450, 259 S.E.2d 595 (1979), appeal dismissed, 299 N.C. 124, 261 S.E.2d 925, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 906, 100 S. Ct. 2988, 64 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1980).

ARTICLE 12.

Pen Registers; Trap and Trace Devices.

§ 15A-260. Definitions.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Electronic communication," "electronic communication service," and "wire communication" shall have the meaning as set forth in Section 2510 of Title 18 of the United States Code;

(2) "Pen register" means a device which records or decodes electronic or other impulses which identify numbers dialed or otherwise transmitted on the telephone line to which such device is attached, but the term does not include any device used by a provider or customer of a wire or electronic service for billing, or recording as an incident to billing, for communication services provided by the provider or any device used by a provider or customer of a wire communication service for cost accounting or other like purposes in the ordinary course of its business, nor shall the term include any device which allows the listening or recording of communications transmitted on the telephone line to which the device is attached;

(3) "Trap and trace device" means a device which captures the incoming electronic or other impulses which identify the originating number of an instrument or device from which a wire or electronic communication was transmitted. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1104, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Cited in United States v. Suarez, 906 F.2d 977 (4th Cir. 1990); State v. Suggs, 117 N.C. App. 654, 453 S.E.2d 211 (1995).

§ 15A-261. Prohibition and exceptions.

(a) In General. — Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, no person may install or use a pen register or a trap and trace device without first obtaining a court order as provided in this Article.

(b) Exception. — The prohibition of subsection (a) of this section does not apply to the use of a pen register or a trap and trace device by a provider of wire or electronic communication service:

(1) Relating to the operation, maintenance, or testing of a wire or electronic communication service or to the protection of the rights or property of the provider, or to the protection of users of that service from abuse of service or unlawful use of service; or

(2) To record the fact that a wire or electronic communication was initiated or completed in order to protect the provider, another provider furnishing service toward the completion of the wire communication, or a user of that service, from fraudulent, unlawful or abusive use of service; or

(3) With the consent of the user of that service.

(c) Penalty. — A person who willfully and knowingly violates subsection (a) of this section is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1104, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 297; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 15A-262. Application for order for pen register or trap and trace device.

(a) Application. — A law enforcement officer may make an application for an order or an extension of an order under G.S. 15A-263 authorizing or approving the installation and use of a pen register or a trap and trace device, in writing under oath or affirmation, to a superior court judge.

(b) Contents of Application. — An application under subsection (a) of this section shall include:

(1) The identity of the law enforcement officer making the application and the identity of the law enforcement agency conducting the investigation; and

(2) A certification by the applicant that the information likely to be obtained is relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation being conducted by that agency. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1104, s. 1.)

§ 15A-263. Issuance of order for pen register or trap and trace device.

(a) In General. — Following application made under G.S. 15A-262, a superior court judge may enter an ex parte order authorizing the installation and use of a pen register or a trap and trace device within the State if the judge finds:

(1) That there is reasonable suspicion to believe that a felony offense, or a Class A1 or Class 1 misdemeanor offense has been committed;

(2) That there are reasonable grounds to suspect that the person named or described in the affidavit committed the offense, if that person is known and can be named or described; and

(3) That the results of procedures involving pen registers or trap and trace devices will be of material aid in determining whether the person named in the affidavit committed the offense.

(b) Contents of Order. — An order issued under this section:

(1) Shall specify:

a. The identity, if known, of the person to whom is leased or in whose name is listed the telephone line to which the pen register or trap and trace device is to be attached;

b. The identity, if known, of the person who is the subject of the criminal investigation;

c. The number and, if known, physical location of the telephone line to which the pen register or trap and trace device is to be attached and, in the case of a trap and trace device, the geographic limits of the trap and trace order; and

d. The offense to which the information likely to be obtained by the pen register or trap and trace device relates; and

(2) Shall direct, upon request of the applicant, the furnishing of information, facilities, or technical assistance necessary to accomplish the installation of the pen register or trap and trace device under G.S. 15A-264.

(c) Time Period and Extension.

(1) An order issued under this section shall authorize the installation and use of a pen register or a trap and trace device for a period not to exceed 60 days.

(2) An extension of an order issued under this section may be granted, but only upon an application for an order under G.S. 15A-262 and upon the judicial finding required by subsection (a) of this section. The period of extension shall not exceed 60 days.

(d) Nondisclosure of Existence of Pen Register or a Trap and Trace Device. — An order authorizing or approving the installation and use of a pen register or a trap and trace device shall direct that:

(1) The order be sealed until otherwise ordered by the judge; and

(2) The person owning or leasing the line to which the pen register or a trap and trace device is attached, or who has been ordered by the judge to provide assistance to the applicant, not disclose the existence of the pen register or trap and trace device or the existence of the investigation to the listed subscriber, or to any person, unless otherwise ordered by the judge.

The provisions of G.S. 15A-903 and 15A-904 shall apply to this Article. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1104, s. 1; 1997-80, s. 13.)

§ 15A-264. Assistance in installation and use of a pen register or a trap and trace device.

(a) Pen Registers. — Upon the request of a law enforcement officer authorized to install and use a pen register under this Article, a provider of wire or electronic communication service, a landlord, a custodian, or other person shall furnish the officer promptly with all information, facilities, or technical assistance necessary to accomplish the installation of the pen register unobtrusively and with a minimum of interference with the communication services, if the assistance is directed by a court order as provided in G.S. 15A-263(b)(2).

(b) Trap and Trace Devices. — Upon the request of a law enforcement officer authorized to receive the results of a trap and trace device under this Article, a provider of a wire or electronic communication service, a landlord, a custodian, or other person shall install the device immediately on the appropriate line and shall furnish the officer all additional information, facilities, or technical assistance, including installation and operation of the device unobtrusively and with a minimum of interference with the communication services, if the installation and assistance are directed by court order as provided in G.S. 15A-263(b)(2). Unless otherwise ordered by the judge, the results of the trap and trace device shall be furnished to the law enforcement officer designated in the court order at reasonable intervals during regular business hours for the duration of the order.

(c) Compensation. — A provider of a wire or electronic communication service, a landlord, a custodian, or other person who furnishes facilities or technical assistance pursuant to this section shall be compensated for the reasonable expenses incurred in providing the facilities and assistance.

(d) No Cause of Action Against a Provider Giving Information or Assistance Under this Article. — No cause of action shall be allowed in any court against any provider of a wire or electronic communication service, its officers, employees, agents, or other specified persons for providing information, facilities, or assistance in accordance with the terms of a court order under this Article.

(e) Defense. — A good faith reliance on a court order or a statutory authorization is a complete defense against any civil or criminal action brought under this Article or any other law. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1104, s. 1.)

Article 13.

DNA Database and Databank.

§ 15A-266. Short title.

This Article may be cited as the DNA Database and Databank Act of 1993. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 401, s. 2 makes this Article effective December 1, 1993, only if the General Assembly appropriates funds to implement the purposes of the act. Funds have been appropriated.

§ 15A-266.1. Policy.

It is the policy of the State to assist federal, State, and local criminal justice and law enforcement agencies in the identification, detection, or exclusion of individuals who are subjects of the investigation or prosecution of violent crimes against the person. Identification, detection, and exclusion is facilitated by the analysis of biological evidence that is often left by the perpetrator or is recovered from the crime scene. The analysis of biological evidence can also be used to identify missing persons and victims of mass disasters. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Drawing Blood for DNA Testing Constitutional. — Drawing of blood from prison inmates for deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) sampling did not violate the fourth amendment's prohibition of unreasonable search and seizure. Sanders v. Coman, 864 F. Supp. 496 (E.D.N.C. 1994).

Force Used to Obtain DNA Samples Was Not Excessive. — Ensuring compliance with a lawful order, such as the deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) sampling procedure, was a matter of institutional security and discipline; therefore, the actual force used did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment simply because it caused pain to the inmates involved. There were no facts or allegations that the force being used to obtain DNA samples from inmates was being applied with the intention of harming the inmates. Sanders v. Coman, 864 F. Supp. 496 (E.D.N.C. 1994).

As used in this Article, unless another meaning is specified or the context clearly requires otherwise, the following terms have the meanings specified:

(1) "CODIS" means the FBI's national DNA identification index system that allows the storage and exchange of DNA records submitted by State and local forensic DNA laboratories. The term "CODIS" is derived from Combined DNA Index System.

(2) "DNA" means deoxyribonucleic acid. DNA is located in the nucleus of cells and provides an individual's personal genetic blueprint. DNA encodes genetic information that is the basis of human heredity and forensic identification.

(3) "DNA Record" means DNA identification information stored in the State DNA Database or CODIS for the purpose of generating investigative leads or supporting statistical interpretation of DNA test results. The DNA record is the result obtained from the DNA typing tests. The DNA record is comprised of the characteristics of a DNA sample which are of value in establishing the identity of individuals. The results of all DNA identification tests on an individual's DNA sample are also collectively referred to as the DNA profile of an individual.

(4) "DNA Sample" in this Article means a blood sample provided by any person convicted of offenses covered by this Article or submitted to the SBI Laboratory for analysis pursuant to a criminal investigation.

(5) "FBI" means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(6) "SBI" means the State Bureau of Investigation. The SBI is responsible for the policy management and administration of the State DNA identification record system to support law enforcement, and for liaison with the FBI regarding the State's participation in CODIS.

(7) "State DNA Database" means the SBI's DNA identification record system to support law enforcement. It is administered by the SBI and provides DNA records to the FBI for storage and maintenance in CODIS. The SBI's DNA Database system is the collective capability provided by computer software and procedures administered by the SBI to store and maintain DNA records related to forensic casework, to convicted offenders required to provide a DNA sample under this Article, and to anonymous DNA records used for research or quality control.

(8) "State DNA Databank" means the repository of DNA samples collected under the provisions of this Article. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

§ 15A-266.3. Procedural compatibility with the FBI.

The DNA identification system as established by the SBI shall be compatible with the procedures specified by the FBI, including use of comparable test procedures, laboratory equipment, supplies, and computer software. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "DNA Databanks: Law Enforcement's Greatest Surveillance Tools?," see 34 Wake Forest L. Rev. 767 (1999).

§ 15A-266.4. Blood sample required for DNA analysis upon conviction.

(a) On or after 1 July 1994, a person who is convicted of any of the crimes listed in subsection (b) of this section shall have a DNA sample drawn upon intake to a jail or prison. In addition, every person convicted on or after 1 July 1994, of any of these crimes, but who is not sentenced to a term of confinement, shall provide a DNA sample as a condition of the sentence. A person who has been convicted and incarcerated as a result of a conviction of one or more of these crimes prior to 1 July 1994 shall have a DNA sample drawn before parole or release from the penal system.

(b) Crimes covered by this Article include:

G.S. 14-17	— Murder in the first and second degree.
G.S. 14-27.2	— First degree rape.
G.S. 14-27.3	— Second degree rape.
G.S. 14-27.4	— First degree sexual offense.
G.S. 14-27.5	— Second degree sexual offense.
G.S. 14-28	— Malicious castration.
G.S. 14-29	— Castration or other maiming.
G.S. 14-30	— Malicious maiming.
G.S. 14-30.1	— Malicious throwing of corrosive acid or alkali.
G.S. 14-31	— Malicious assault in secret manner.
G.S. 14-32	— Felonious assault with deadly weapon with intent to kill.
G.S. 14-32.1	— Assaults on handicapped persons.
G.S. 14-34.1	— Discharging barreled weapon or firearm into occupied property.
G.S. 14-34.2	— Assault with firearm or other deadly weapon upon law enforcement officer, fireman, or EMS personnel.
G.S. 14-39(a)(3)	— Kidnapping for the purpose of doing serious bodily harm to the person.
G.S. 14-49	— Malicious use of explosive or incendiary.
G.S. 14-58.2	— Burning of mobile home, manufactured-type house, or recreational trailer home.
G.S. 14-202.1	— Taking indecent liberties with children.
G.S. 14-87	— Robbery with a dangerous weapon.
G.S. 14-277.3	— Stalking.
G.S. 14-87.1	— Common law robbery.
G.S. 14-58	— First degree arson.

(1993, c. 401, s. 1; 2001-487, s. 46.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-487, s. 46, effective December 16, 2001, at the end of the table in subsection (b), added "G.S. 14-87.1" (opposite "Common law robbery") and "G.S. 14-58" (opposite "First degree arson") to correct their omission from the section as enacted.

§ 15A-266.5. Tests to be performed on blood sample.

(a) The tests to be performed on each blood sample are:
(1) To analyze and type the genetic markers contained in or derived from the DNA.
(2) For law enforcement identification purposes.
(3) For research and administrative purposes, including:
a. Development of a population database when personal identifying information is removed.
b. To support identification research and protocol development of forensic DNA analysis methods.
c. For quality control purposes.
d. To assist in the recovery or identification of human remains from mass disasters or for other humanitarian purposes, including identification of missing persons.

(b) The DNA record of identification characteristics resulting from the DNA testing shall be stored and maintained by the SBI in the State DNA Database. The DNA sample itself will be stored and maintained by the SBI in the State DNA Databank. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

§ 15A-266.6. Procedures for withdrawal of blood sample for DNA analysis.

Each DNA sample required to be drawn pursuant to G.S. 15A-266.4 from persons who are incarcerated shall be drawn at the place of incarceration. DNA samples from persons who are not sentenced to a term of confinement shall be drawn at a prison or jail unit to be specified by the sentencing court. Only a correctional health nurse technician, physician, registered professional nurse, licensed practical nurse, laboratory technician, phlebotomist, or other health care worker with phlebotomy training shall draw any DNA sample to be submitted for analysis. No civil liability shall attach to any person authorized to draw blood by this section as a result of drawing blood from any person if the blood was drawn according to recognized medical procedures. No person shall be relieved from liability for negligence in the drawing of any DNA sample. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Berry, 143 N.C. App. 187, 546 S.E.2d 145 (2001), review denied, 353 N.C. 729, 551 S.E.2d 439 (2001).

The SBI shall adopt rules governing the procedures to be used in the submission, identification, analysis, and storage of DNA samples and typing results of DNA samples submitted under this Article. The DNA sample shall be securely stored in the State Databank. The typing results shall be securely stored in the State Database. These procedures shall also include quality assurance guidelines to insure that DNA identification records meet standards and audit standards for laboratories which submit DNA records to the State Database. Records of testing shall be retained on file at the SBI. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

§ 15A-266.8. DNA database exchange.

(a) It shall be the duty of the SBI to receive DNA samples, to store, to analyze or to contract out the DNA typing analysis to a qualified DNA laboratory that meets the guidelines as established by the SBI, classify, and file the DNA record of identification characteristic profiles of DNA samples submitted pursuant to G.S. 15A-266.7 and to make such information available as provided in this section. The SBI may contract out DNA typing analysis to a qualified DNA laboratory that meets guidelines as established by the SBI. The results of the DNA profile of individuals in the State Database shall be made available to local, State, or federal law enforcement agencies, approved crime laboratories which serve these agencies, or the district attorney's office upon written or electronic request and in furtherance of an official investigation of a criminal offense. These records shall also be available upon receipt of a valid court order directing the SBI to release these results to appropriate parties not listed above, when the court order is signed by a superior court judge after a hearing. The SBI shall maintain a file of such court orders.

(b) The SBI shall adopt rules governing the methods of obtaining information from the State Database and CODIS and procedures for verification of the identity and authority of the requester.

(c) The SBI shall create a separate population database comprised of blood samples obtained under this Article, after all personal identification is removed. Nothing shall prohibit the SBI from sharing or disseminating population databases with other law enforcement agencies, crime laboratories that serve them, or other third parties the SBI deems necessary to assist the SBI with statistical analysis of the SBI's population databases. The population database may be made available to and searched by other agencies participating in the CODIS system. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

§ 15A-266.9. Cancellation of authority to exchange DNA records.

The SBI is authorized to revoke the right of a forensic DNA laboratory within the State to exchange DNA identification records with federal, State, or local criminal justice agencies if the required control and privacy standards specified by the SBI for the State DNA Database are not met by these agencies. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to expungement of DNA records, see now § 15A-146(b1), (b2) and § 15A-148.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-282, s. 6 provides that s. 3 of the act, which repealed this section, is effective October 1, 2001, and applies to evidence, records, and samples in the possession of a governmental entity on or after October 1, 2001.

§ 15A-266.11. Unauthorized uses of DNA Databank; penalties.

(a) Any person who, by virtue of employment, or official position, has possession of, or access to, individually identifiable DNA information contained in the State DNA Database or Databank and who willfully discloses it in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor in accordance with G.S. 14-3.

(b) Any person who, without authorization, willfully obtains individually identifiable DNA information from the State DNA Database or Databank is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor in accordance with G.S. 14-3. (1993, c. 401, s. 1; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 15.)

§ 15A-266.12. Confidentiality of records.

(a) All DNA profiles and samples submitted to the SBI pursuant to this Article shall be treated as confidential except as provided in G.S. 15A-266.8.

(b) Only DNA records that directly relate to the identification of individuals shall be collected and stored. These records shall not be used for any purpose other than to facilitate personal identification of an offender; provided that in appropriate circumstances such records may be used to identify potential victims of mass disasters or missing persons. (1993, c. 401, s. 1.)

§ 15A-267. Access to DNA samples from crime scene.

(a) A criminal defendant shall have access before trial to the following:

(1) Any DNA analyses performed in connection with the case in which the defendant is charged.

(2) Any biological material, that has not been DNA tested, that was collected from the crime scene, the defendant's residence, or the defendant's property.

(b) Access as provided for in subsection (a) of this section shall be governed by G.S. 15A-902 and G.S. 15A-952.

(c) Upon a defendant's motion made before trial in accordance with G.S. 15A-952, the court may order the SBI to perform DNA testing and DNA Database comparisons of any biological material collected but not DNA tested in connection with the case in which the defendant is charged upon a showing of all of the following:

(1) That the biological material is relevant to the investigation.

(2) That the biological material was not previously DNA tested.

(3) That the testing is material to the defendant's defense.

(d) The defendant shall be responsible for bearing the cost of any further testing and comparison of the biological materials, including any costs associated with the testing and comparison by the SBI in accordance with this section, unless the court has determined the defendant is indigent, in which event the State shall bear the costs. (2001-282, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-282, s. 6, made this section effective July 13, 2001, and applicable to persons charged with crimes on or after that date.

§ 15A-268. Preservation of samples of biological materials.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to subsection (b) of this section, a governmental entity that collects evidence containing DNA in the course of a criminal investigation shall preserve a sample of the evidence collected for the period of time a defendant convicted of a felony is incarcerated in connection with that case. The governmental entity may determine how the evidence is retained pursuant to this section, provided that the evidence is retained in a condition suitable for DNA testing.

(b) The governmental entity may dispose of the sample of evidence containing DNA preserved pursuant to subsection (a) of this section before the expiration of the period of time described in subsection (a) of this section if all of the following conditions are met:

(1) The governmental entity sent notice of its intent to dispose of the sample of evidence to the district attorney in the county in which the conviction was obtained.

(2) The district attorney gave to each of the following persons written notification of the intent of the entity governmental to dispose of the sample of evidence: any defendant convicted of a felony who is currently incarcerated in connection with the case, the current defendant's counsel of record, the Office of Indigent Defense Services, and the Attorney General. The notice shall be consistent with the provisions of this section, and the district attorney shall send a copy of the notice to the governmental entity. Delivery of written notification from the district attorney to the defendant was effectuated by the district attorney transmitting the written notification to the superintendent of the correctional facility where the defendant was assigned at the time and the superintendent's personal delivery of the written notification to the defendant. Certification of delivery by the superintendent to the defendant in accordance with this subdivision was in accordance with subsection (c) of this section.

(3) The written notification from the district attorney specified the following:

a. That the governmental entity would destroy the sample of evidence collected in connection with the case unless the governmental entity received a written request that the sample of evidence not be destroyed.

b. The address of the governmental entity where the written request was to be sent.

c. That the written request must be received by the governmental entity within 90 days of the date of receipt by the defendant of the district attorney's written notification.

d. That the written request must ask that the material not be destroyed or disposed of for one of the following reasons:

1. The case is currently on appeal.
2. The case is currently in postconviction proceedings.
3. The defendant will file within 180 days of the date of receipt by the defendant of the district attorney's written notification a motion for DNA testing pursuant to G.S. 15A-269, that is followed within 180 days of sending the request that the sample of evidence not be destroyed or disposed of, by a motion for DNA testing pursuant to G.S. 15A-269, unless a request for extension is requested by the defendant and agreed to by the governmental entity in possession of the evidence.

(4) The governmental entity did not receive a written request in compliance with the conditions set forth in sub-subdivision (3)d. of this subsection within 90 days of the date of receipt by the defendant of the district attorney's written notification.

(c) Upon receiving a written notification from a district attorney in accordance with subdivision (b)(3) of this section, the superintendent shall personally deliver the written notification to the defendant. Upon effectuating personal delivery on the defendant, the superintendent shall sign a sworn written certification that the written notification had been delivered to the defendant in compliance with this subsection indicating the date the delivery was made. The superintendent's certification shall be sent by the superintendent to the governmental entity that intends to dispose of the sample of evidence. The governmental entity may rely on the superintendent's certification as evidence of the date of receipt by the defendant of the district attorney's written notification. (2001-282, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-282, s. 6, made this section effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to evidence, records, and samples in the possession of a governmental entity on or after that date.

§ 15A-269. Request for postconviction DNA testing.

(a) A defendant may make a motion before the trial court that entered the judgment of conviction against the defendant for performance of DNA testing of any biological evidence that meets all of the following conditions:

(1) Is material to the defendant's defense.

(2) Is related to the investigation or prosecution that resulted in the judgment.

(3) Meets either of the following conditions:

a. It was not DNA tested previously.

b. It was tested previously, but the requested DNA test would provide results that are significantly more accurate and probative of the identity of the perpetrator or accomplice or have a reasonable probability of contradicting prior test results.

(b) The court shall grant the motion for DNA testing of the evidence upon its determination that:

(1) The conditions set forth in subdivisions (1), (2), and (3) of subsection (a) of this section have been met; and

(2) If the DNA testing being requested had been conducted on the evidence, there exists a reasonable probability that the verdict would have been more favorable to the defendant.

(c) The court shall appoint counsel for the person who brings a motion under this section if that person is indigent.

(d) The defendant shall be responsible for bearing the cost of any DNA testing ordered under this section unless the court determines the defendant is indigent, in which event the State shall bear the costs.

(e) DNA testing ordered by the court pursuant to this section shall be done as soon as practicable. However, if the court finds that a miscarriage of justice will otherwise occur and that DNA testing is necessary in the interests of justice, the court shall order a delay of the proceedings or execution of the sentence pending the DNA testing. (2001-282, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-282, s. 6, made this section effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to evidence, records, and samples in the possession of a governmental entity on or after that date.

§ 15A-270. Post-test procedures.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, upon receiving the results of the DNA testing conducted under G.S. 15A-269, the court shall conduct a hearing to evaluate the results and to determine if the results are unfavorable or favorable to the defendant.

(b) If the results of DNA testing conducted under this section are unfavorable to the defendant, the court shall dismiss the motion and, in the case of a defendant who is not indigent, shall assess the defendant for the cost of the testing.

(c) If the results of DNA testing conducted under this section are favorable to the defendant, the court shall enter any order that serves the interests of justice, including an order that does any of the following:

(1) Vacates and sets aside the judgment.

(2) Discharges the defendant, if the defendant is in custody.

(3) Resentences the defendant.

(4) Grants a new trial. (2001-282, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-282, s. 6, made this section effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to evidence, records, and samples in the possession of a governmental entity on or after that date.

Article 14.

Nontestimonial Identification.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Article provides an important investigative procedure not presently available under North Carolina statutes. Under this Article, a solicitor may make application to a judge for an order requiring suspects to submit to certain nontestimonial identification procedures such as fingerprints, measurements, blood and urine specimens, saliva, hair and voice samples, handwriting exemplars, photographs and lineups. To obtain such an order the solicitor must show that there is probable cause to believe that a crime punishable by more than one year's imprisonment has been committed and that there are reasonable grounds to suspect that one or more persons committed the offense. If a specific nontestimonial identification procedure will be of material aid in determining if the suspect committed the offense, the judge may issue an order requiring the person named to appear and submit to designated procedures. If the person named in the order either fails to appear or refuses to submit to the designated procedures, he may be punished for contempt of the court which issued the order.

The Commission inserted a number of significant safeguards to accompany this procedure, including the following:

(1) The order must be served at least 72 hours in advance of the time designated for the procedures (unless the judge finds that the nature of the evidence makes it likely that the delay will adversely affect its probative value). § 15A-274.

(2) The person named may seek modification of the time and place designated in the order. § 15A-275.

(3) No one may be detained longer than is necessary to accomplish the procedures. § 15A-279(c).

(4) Extraction of any bodily fluid must be conducted by a qualified member of the health professions; the judge may order medical supervision for any of the other procedures. § 15A-279(a).

(5) No unreasonable or unnecessary force may be used in conducting the procedures. § 15A-279(b).

(6) The person named has the right to have counsel present during any procedures conducted under this section and to have counsel appointed if he cannot afford to retain one. § 15A-279(d). The order must inform the named person of these rights. § 15A-278(5).

(7) No statement made by the named person while the procedures are being conducted may be used in evidence against him unless his attorney was actually present at the time the statement was made. § 15A-279(d).

(8) The subject of the procedures must be given a copy of the results as soon as they are available. § 15A-282.

In two recent decisions, the Supreme Court of the United States held that the compelled production of handwriting specimens and voice samples under orders of a grand jury do not infringe any legitimate Fourth or Fifth Amendment interests. United States v. Dionisio, 410 U.S. 1, 93 S. Ct. 764, 35 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1973), and United States v. Mara, 410 U.S. 19, 93 S. Ct. 774, 35 L. Ed. 2d 99 (1973). These decisions contain substantial indications that procedures such as those recommended by the Commission in the nontestimonial identification Article are constitutionally sound, and Davis v. Mississippi, 394 U.S. 721, 89 S. Ct. 1394, 22 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1969) contains a dictum inviting use of a procedure similar to this. The Article also permits defendants charged with serious crimes to initiate such procedures by the State.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-271. Authority to issue order.

A nontestimonial identification order authorized by this Article may be issued by any judge upon request of a prosecutor. As used in this Article, "nontestimonial identification" means identification by fingerprints, palm prints, footprints, measurements, blood specimens, urine specimens, saliva samples, hair samples, or other reasonable physical examination, handwriting exemplars, voice samples, photographs, and lineups or similar identification procedures requiring the presence of a suspect. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

CASE NOTES

This Article was enacted in response to dictum contained in Davis v. Mississippi, 394 U.S. 721, 89 S. Ct. 1394, 22 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1969) inviting the use of narrowly circumscribed procedures for obtaining the fingerprints of individuals for whom there is no probable cause to arrest. State v. Welch, 316 N.C. 578, 342 S.E.2d 789 (1986).

Purpose of Article. — The obvious purpose and intent of this Article, assuming its constitutionality, is to permit the examination of a suspect pursuant to nontestimonial identification order only if the results of such examination will be of material aid in determining whether such suspect actually committed the offense charged, assuming that a crime punishable by imprisonment for more than one year had been committed by some person. Manifestly, the focus of these statutes is identification of the suspect as the perpetrator, not a determination of whether the crime has been committed. State v. Whaley, 58 N.C. App. 233, 293 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

Article Inapplicable to In-Custody Accused. — A construction of §§ 15A-272, 15A-274, 15A-276 and 15A-502 so as to achieve a logical relationship and to effectuate apparent legislative intent mandates that this Article applies only to suspects and accused persons before arrest, and persons formally charged and arrested who have been released from custody pending trial. The Article does not apply to an in-custody accused. State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977); State v. Thompson, 37 N.C. App. 651, 247 S.E.2d 235 (1978); State v. Norris, 77 N.C. App. 525, 335 S.E.2d 764 (1985).

This Article does not apply to an in-custody accused and this restrictive interpretation applies even to a defendant in custody on other charges at the time of the lineup. State v. Puckett, 46 N.C. App. 719, 266 S.E.2d 48, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 561, 270 S.E.2d 115 (1980).

Although this section does not apply to an in-custody defendant, it does not follow that a trial judge is without authority to issue a nontestimonial identification order where the defendant is in custody. State v. Vereen, 312 N.C. 499, 324 S.E.2d 250 (1985), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1094, 105 S. Ct. 2170, 85 L. Ed. 2d 526 (1984).

This Article applies only to suspects and accused persons before arrest, and persons formally charged and arrested, who have been released from custody pending trial. The statute does not apply to an in-custody accused. State v. Welch, 316 N.C. 578, 342 S.E.2d 789 (1986); State v. Carter, 322 N.C. 709, 370 S.E.2d 553 (1988).

Article Permits Investigation Where Basis for Lawful Arrest Lacking. — This Article provides an investigative procedure, not previously available in this State, for use in cases where there are reasonable grounds to suspect that a particular person committed an offense punishable by imprisonment for more than one year but where there is yet lacking a sufficient basis for making a lawful arrest. State v. McDonald, 32 N.C. App. 457, 232 S.E.2d 467, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 469, 233 S.E.2d 925 (1977).

The thrust of this Article is to provide the State with a valuable new investigative tool to compel the presence of unwilling suspects for nontestimonial identification procedures, even though insufficient probable cause exists to permit their arrest. State v. Watson, 294 N.C. 159, 240 S.E.2d 440 (1978).

Consent of Defendant to Identification Procedures. — It was unnecessary for the police to utilize the procedures in this Article allowing involuntary detention for nontestimonial identification where the defendant voluntarily participated in the pretrial confrontation. State v. Watson, 294 N.C. 159, 240 S.E.2d 440 (1978).

Express Waiver of Right to Counsel Held Not Required. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder, the trial court's denial of defendant's motion to suppress nontestimonial identification evidence was without error where, pursuant to an order of the trial court, fingernail scrapings, samples of defendants head and pubic hair, saliva samples, blood samples, and photographs of any wounds on defendant's body were taken; the order stated defendant's right to counsel; the State stipulated that nothing defendant said during the procedure would be offered into evidence; defendant was fully advised of his constitutional right to the presence of counsel; and the State was not in violation of any provisions under this Article, by not procuring an express waiver from defendant, as the statute does not require an express waiver of the right to have counsel present at a nontestimonial identification procedure. State v. Temple, 302 N.C. 1, 273 S.E.2d 273 (1981).

Blood Sample Taken from Defendant Confined in County Jail. — Where defendant had been indicted for first-degree murder and was in custody at the county jail when nontestimonial identification order was issued upon the State's motion, it was error for the trial court to issue the order, and defendant's right under U.S. Const., Amend. IV to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures was violated when sample of his blood was drawn pursuant to this order in the absence of a search warrant. State v. Welch, 316 N.C. 578, 342 S.E.2d 789 (1986), declining, however, to apply the exclusionary rule to this good faith violation of U.S. Const., Amend. IV.

While gunshot residue evidence is nontestimonial identification, the evidence was still admissible where probable cause—based on the behavior and comments of the defendant coupled with the officer's knowledge of her stormy marriage—and exigent circumstances—the need for testing within four hours of the homicide—existed at the time of the gunshot residue test, and the warrantless search was, therefore, valid. State v. Coplen, 138 N.C. App. 48, 530 S.E.2d 313 (2000).

Hair Sample Admitted. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress evidence of hair samples taken in compliance with a nontestimonial identification order entered pursuant to this section. State v. Payne, 328 N.C. 377, 402 S.E.2d 582 (1991).

Applied in State v. Tucker, 329 N.C. 709, 407 S.E.2d 805 (1991).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Article Not Exclusive of Other Procedures. — After arrest of a defendant based upon probable cause, a law-enforcement officer may utilize normal investigative procedures including fingerprinting, photographing, lineups, etc., and need not follow exclusively the nontestimonial identification procedures of this Article. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Anthony Brannon, 45 N.C.A.G. 60 (1975).

§ 15A-272. Time of application; additional investigative procedures not precluded.

A request for a nontestimonial identification order may be made prior to the arrest of a suspect or after arrest and prior to trial. Nothing in this Article shall preclude such additional investigative procedures as are otherwise permitted by law. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note, "DNA Typing: A New Investigatory Tool," see 1989 Duke L.J. 474.

CASE NOTES

Juvenile Procedure Compared. — Under this section, the adult statute, time of application focuses on the arrest of the suspect, while § 7A-597 [see now § 7B-2104] focuses on taking the juvenile into custody, indicating an expanded time period when procedural protection of juveniles is necessary. State v. Norris, 77 N.C. App. 525, 335 S.E.2d 764 (1985).

Search Warrants. — In addition to a nontestimonial identification order pursuant to this section and § 15A-242, a search warrant is a proper method to obtain nontestimonial identification evidence from a defendant. State v. McLean, 47 N.C. App. 672, 267 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

While gunshot residue evidence is nontestimonial identification, the evidence was still admissible where probable cause—based on the behavior and comments of the defendant coupled with the officer's knowledge of her stormy marriage—and exigent circumstances—the need for testing within four hours of the homicide—existed at the time of the gunshot residue test, and the warrantless search was, therefore, valid. State v. Coplen, 138 N.C. App. 48, 530 S.E.2d 313 (2000).

§ 15A-273. Basis for order.

An order may issue only on an affidavit or affidavits sworn to before the judge and establishing the following grounds for the order:

(1) That there is probable cause to believe that a felony offense, or a Class A1 or Class 1 misdemeanor offense has been committed;

(2) That there are reasonable grounds to suspect that the person named or described in the affidavit committed the offense; and

(3) That the results of specific nontestimonial identification procedures will be of material aid in determining whether the person named in the affidavit committed the offense. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1997-80, s. 14.)

CASE NOTES

Blood Sample Taken from Defendant Confined in County Jail. — Where defendant had been indicted for first-degree murder and was in custody at the county jail when nontestimonial identification order was issued upon the State's motion, it was error for the trial court to issue the order, and defendant's right under U.S. Const., Amend. Welch, 316 N.C. 578, 342 S.E.2d 789 (1986), declining, however, to apply the exclusionary rule to this good faith violation of U.S. Const., Amend. IV.

Construction with § 15A-242(4). — Where probable cause existed to support issuance of the search warrant for defendant's hair, saliva, and blood pursuant to § 15A-242(4), the State did not violate the defendant's rights, under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20, by failing to obtain a nontestimonial identification order, pursuant to this section, or to provide defendant with the right to counsel during the execution of the search warrant, under § 15A-279(d). State v. Grooms, 353 N.C. 50, 540 S.E.2d 713 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 122 S. Ct. 93, 151 L. Ed. 2d 54 (2001).

§ 15A-274. Issuance of order.

Upon a showing that the grounds specified in G.S. 15A-273 exist, the judge may issue an order requiring the person named or described with reasonable certainty in the affidavit to appear at a designated time and place and to submit to designated nontestimonial identification procedures. Unless the nature of the evidence sought makes it likely that delay will adversely affect its probative value, or when it appears likely that the person named in the order may destroy, alter, or modify the evidence sought or may not appear, the order must be served at least 72 hours before the time designated for the nontestimonial identification procedure. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 832, s. 1.)

§ 15A-275. Modification of order.

At the request of a person ordered to appear, the judge may modify the order with respect to time and place of appearance whenever it appears reasonable under the circumstances to do so. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

§ 15A-276. Failure to appear.

Any person who fails without adequate excuse to obey an order to appear served upon him pursuant to this Article may be held in contempt of the court which issued the order. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Cited in State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

§ 15A-277. Service of order.

An order to appear pursuant to this Article may be served by a law-enforcement officer. The order must be served upon the person named or described in the affidavit by delivery of a copy to him personally. The order must be served at least 72 hours in advance of the time of compliance, unless the judge issuing the order has determined, in accordance with G.S. 15A-274, that delay will adversely affect the probative value of the evidence sought or when it appears likely that the person named in the order may destroy, alter, or modify the evidence sought, or may not appear. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 832, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Service of Order. — Under this section, an order to submit to nontestimonial identification procedures must be served at least 72 hours in advance of the time of compliance and may be served by a law enforcement officer. State v. Young, 317 N.C. 396, 346 S.E.2d 626 (1986).

Fact that service of a nontestimonial identification order occurs subsequent to invocation of right to counsel does not affect the routine nature of the service of the order, nor does it constitute the initiation of conversation. State v. Young, 317 N.C. 396, 346 S.E.2d 626 (1986).

An order to appear must be signed by the judge and must state:

(1) That the presence of the person named or described in the affidavit is required for the purpose of permitting nontestimonial identification procedures in order to aid in the investigation of the offense specified therein;

(2) The time and place of the required appearance;

(3) The nontestimonial identification procedures to be conducted, the methods to be used, and the approximate length of time such procedures will require;

(4) The grounds to suspect that the person named or described in the affidavit committed the offense specified therein;

(5) That the person is entitled to be represented by counsel at the procedure, and to the appointment of counsel if he cannot afford to retain one;

(6) That the person will not be subjected to any interrogation or asked to make any statement during the period of his appearance except that required for voice identification;

(7) That the person may request the judge to make a reasonable modification of the order with respect to time and place of appearance, including a request to have any nontestimonial identification procedure other than a lineup conducted at his place of residence; and

(8) That the person, if he fails to appear, may be held in contempt of court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Subdivision (5) Inapplicable Where Defendant Arrested on Misdemeanor Charge. — The provisions of subdivision (5) of this section were not applicable where the defendant was legally arrested on a misdemeanor charge, and therefore could be photographed without the aid of the nontestimonial order. State v. Carson, 296 N.C. 31, 249 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Applied in State v. Maccia, 311 N.C. 222, 316 S.E.2d 241 (1984).

§ 15A-279. Implementation of order.

(a) Nontestimonial identification procedures may be conducted by any law-enforcement officer or other person designated by the judge issuing the order. The extraction of any bodily fluid must be conducted by a qualified member of the health professions and the judge may require medical supervision for any other test ordered pursuant to this Article when he considers such supervision necessary.

(b) In conducting authorized identification procedures, no unreasonable or unnecessary force may be used.

(c) No person who appears under an order of appearance issued under this Article may be detained longer than is reasonably necessary to conduct the specified nontestimonial identification procedures, and in no event for longer than six hours, unless he is arrested for an offense.

(d) Any such person is entitled to have counsel present and must be advised prior to being subjected to any nontestimonial identification procedures of his right to have counsel present during any nontestimonial identification procedure and to the appointment of counsel if he cannot afford to retain counsel. Appointment of counsel shall be in accordance with rules adopted by the Office of Indigent Defense Services. No statement made during nontestimonial identification procedures by the subject of the procedures shall be admissible in any criminal proceeding against him, unless his counsel was present at the time the statement was made.

(e) Any person who resists compliance with the authorized nontestimonial identification procedures may be held in contempt of the court which issued the order pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 5A-12(a) and G.S. 5A-21(b).

(f) A nontestimonial identification order may not be issued against a person previously subject to a nontestimonial identification order unless it is based on different evidence which was not reasonably available when the previous order was issued.

(g) Resisting compliance with a nontestimonial identification order is not itself grounds for finding probable cause to arrest the suspect, but it may be considered with other evidence in making the determination whether probable cause exists. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 20; 2000-144, s. 28.)

CASE NOTES

Nontestimonial identification procedures are those procedures by which a suspect's fingerprints, palm prints, footprints, measurements, blood specimen, urine specimen, saliva sample, hair sample, handwriting exemplar, voice sample or photographs are obtained. State v. Young, 317 N.C. 396, 346 S.E.2d 626 (1986).

Showing to Obtain Suppression of Statement. — In order to obtain the suppression of his statement under subsection (d) of this section, a defendant must show: (1) That the statement was made during nontestimonial identification procedures, and (2) that the statement was made without the presence of counsel. State v. Young, 317 N.C. 396, 346 S.E.2d 626 (1986).

Statement When Served with Order. — Suppression of statement made by defendant when he was merely being served with a copy of an order requiring his submission to nontestimonial identification procedures, and not made during any nontestimonial identification procedure, was not required by subsection (d) of this section. State v. Young, 317 N.C. 396, 346 S.E.2d 626 (1986).

Admission of evidence that defendant did not submit a blood sample did not violate defendant's rights under subsection (d) of this section. State v. Kuplen, 316 N.C. 387, 343 S.E.2d 793 (1986).

Failure to Remind Defendant of Right to Counsel. — Given advance notice of his right to counsel in a nontestimonial identification order served on defendant three days before the withdrawal of fluid samples from defendant, any failure to remind defendant of his right to counsel prior to the taking of the fluid samples would not likely constitute a "substantial" violation of subsection (d) of this section requiring suppression of the evidence obtained. State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980).

The defendant's right to counsel under this section was not violated by the administering of the gunshot residue kit. No order was required in that probable cause and exigent circumstances existed which justified the search and the defendant sought to suppress the results of the test, not statements made during the procedure. State v. Coplen, 138 N.C. App. 48, 530 S.E.2d 313 (2000).

As to right to have counsel present during gunshot residue test by virtue of subsection (d), see State v. Odom, 303 N.C. 163, 277 S.E.2d 352, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1052, 102 S. Ct. 596, 70 L. Ed. 2d 587 (1981), rehearing denied, 454 U.S. 1165, 102 S. Ct. 1041, 71 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1982).

Evidence Admissible Despite Absence of Counsel. — Defendant who complied with a nontestimonial identification order without legal representation was protected from any statements he made during the procedure, but the results of the tests themselves were not inadmissible solely because he was uncounseled, since there were no allegations of unreasonable force or delay. State v. Pearson, — N.C. App. —, 551 S.E.2d 471, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 733 (2001).

This Section Not Applicable to Search Pursuant to § 15A-242(4). — Where probable cause existed to support issuance of the search warrant for defendant's hair, saliva, and blood pursuant to § 15A-242(4), the State did not violate the defendant's rights, under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20, by failing to obtain a nontestimonial identification order, pursuant to 15A-273, or to provide defendant with the right to counsel during the execution of the search warrant, under this section. State v. Grooms, 353 N.C. 50, 540 S.E.2d 713 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 122 S. Ct. 93, 151 L. Ed. 2d 54 (2001).

§ 15A-280. Return.

Within 90 days after the nontestimonial identification procedure, a return must be made to the judge who issued the order or to a judge designated in the order setting forth an inventory of the products of the nontestimonial identification procedures obtained from the person named in the affidavit. If, at the time of the return, probable cause does not exist to believe that the person has committed the offense named in the affidavit or any other offense, the person named in the affidavit is entitled to move that the authorized judge issue an order directing that the products and reports of the nontestimonial identification procedures, and all copies thereof, be destroyed. The motion must, except for good cause shown, be granted. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

§ 15A-281. Nontestimonial identification order at request of defendant.

A person arrested for or charged with a felony offense, or a Class A1 or Class 1 misdemeanor offense may request that nontestimonial identification procedures be conducted upon himself. If it appears that the results of specific nontestimonial identification procedures will be of material aid in determining whether the defendant committed the offense, the judge to whom the request was directed must order the State to conduct the identification procedures. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1997-80, s. 15.)

CASE NOTES

Defendant has no statutory right to demand a lineup when charges are no longer pending against him. State v. Jackson, 306 N.C. 642, 295 S.E.2d 383 (1982).

Failure to Hold Lineup after Voluntary Dismissal by State. — There was no impropriety in the State's failure to hold the lineup as ordered by the district court judge, where the State, for whatever reason, decided to take a voluntary dismissal in the case. State v. Jackson, 306 N.C. 642, 295 S.E.2d 383 (1982).

The unannounced, unexpected presence of robbery victim at defendant's arraignment did not deny the defendant the right to a neutral line up procedure. The defendant made no request for such a procedure, nor did he ask the trial court to find that he intended to request such a procedure and that the procedure could not be fairly conducted. State v. Latta, 75 N.C. App. 611, 331 S.E.2d 213, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 334, 333 S.E.2d 494 (1985).

§ 15A-282. Copy of results to person involved.

A person who has been the subject of nontestimonial identification procedures or his attorney must be provided with a copy of any reports of test results as soon as the reports are available. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

Article 15.

Urgent Necessity.

§ 15A-285. Non-law-enforcement actions when urgently necessary.

When an officer reasonably believes that doing so is urgently necessary to save life, prevent serious bodily harm, or avert or control public catastrophe, the officer may take one or more of the following actions:

(1) Enter buildings, vehicles, and other premises.
(2) Limit or restrict the presence of persons in premises or areas.
(3) Exercise control over the property of others.

An action taken to enforce the law or to seize a person or evidence cannot be justified by authority of this section. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Article grants specific authority to law-enforcement officers for taking various nonenforcement actions which are expected of them — actions which are necessary for public safety, but which do not necessarily deal with violations of the criminal law. The section would express the authority, for example, for an officer to enter a dwelling from which he heard cries for help from someone in distress or to order people from a building because of an explosive gas leak. The provision seeks to deter any possibility of its authority being used as a "cover" for searching for criminal evidence or suspects by specifying that no action taken to uncover evidence or suspects can be characterized as an action taken under this Article.

Article 16.

Electronic Surveillance.

§ 15A-286. Definitions.

As used in this Article, unless the context requires otherwise:

(1) "Aggrieved person" means a person who was a party to any intercepted wire, oral, or electronic communication or a person against whom the interception was directed.

(2) "Attorney General" means the Attorney General of the State of North Carolina, unless otherwise specified.

(3) "Aural transfer" means a transfer containing the human voice at any point between and including the point of origin and the point of reception.

(4) "Chapter 119 of the United States Code" means Chapter 119 of Part I of Title 18, United States Code, being Public Law 90-351, the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended by the Electronic Communications Privacy Act of 1986.

(5) "Communications common carrier" shall have the same meaning which is given the term "common carrier" by section 153(h) of Title 47 of the United States Code.

(6) "Contents" when used with respect to any wire, oral, or electronic communication means and includes any information concerning the substance, purport, or meaning of that communication.

(7) "Electronic, mechanical, or other device" means any device or apparatus which can be used to intercept a wire, oral, or electronic communication other than:

a. Any telephone or telegraph instrument, equipment, or facility, or any component thereof:

1. Furnished to the subscriber or user by a provider of wire or electronic communication service in the ordinary course of its business and being used by the subscriber or user in the ordinary course of its business or furnished by the subscriber or user for connection to the facilities of such service and used in the ordinary course of its business; or

2. Being used by a provider of wire or electronic communication service in the ordinary course of its business or by an investigative or law enforcement officer in the ordinary course of the officer's duties.

b. A hearing aid or similar device being used to correct subnormal hearing to not better than normal.

(8) "Electronic communication" means any transfer of signs, signals, writing, images, sounds, data, or intelligence of any nature transmitted in whole or in part by a wire, radio, electromagnetic, photoelectronic, or photooptical system that affects interstate or foreign commerce but does not include:

a. Any wire or oral communication;

b. Any communication made through a tone-only paging device; or

c. Any communication from a tracking device (as defined in section 3117 of Title 18 of the United States Code).

(9) "Electronic communication service" means any service which provides to users thereof the ability to send or receive wire or electronic communications.

(10) "Electronic communication system" means any wire, radio, electronic, magnetic, photooptical, or photoelectronic facilities for the transmission of electronic communications, and any computer facilities or related electronic equipment for the storage of such communications.

(11) "Electronic surveillance" means the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications as provided by this Article.

(12) "Electronic storage" means:

a. Any temporary, intermediate storage of a wire or electronic communication incidental to the electronic transmission thereof; and

b. Any storage of such communication by an electronic communication service for the purposes of backup protection of the communication.

(13) "Intercept" means the aural or other acquisition of the contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication through the use of any electronic, mechanical, or other device.

(14) "Investigative or law enforcement officer" means any officer of the State of North Carolina or any political subdivision thereof, who is empowered by the laws of this State to conduct investigations of or to make arrests for offenses enumerated in G.S. 15A-290, and any attorney authorized by the laws of this State to prosecute or participate in the prosecution of those offenses, including the Attorney General of North Carolina.

(15) "Judge" means any judge of the trial divisions of the General Court of Justice.

(16) "Judicial review panel" means a three-judge body, composed of such judges as may be assigned by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, which shall review applications for electronic surveillance orders and may issue orders valid throughout the State authorizing such surveillance as provided by this Article, and which shall submit a report of its decision to the Chief Justice.

(17) "Oral communication" means any oral communication uttered by a person exhibiting an expectation that such communication is not subject to interception under circumstances justifying such expectation, but the term does not include any electronic communication.

(18) "Person" means any employee or agent of the United States or any state or any political subdivision thereof, and any individual, partnership, association, joint stock company, trust, or corporation.

(19) "Readily accessible to the general public" means, with respect to a radio communication, that the communication is not:

a. Scrambled or encrypted;

b. Transmitted using modulation techniques whose essential parameters have been withheld from the public with the intention of preserving the privacy of the communication;

c. Carried on a subcarrier or other signal subsidiary to a radio transmission;

d. Transmitted over a communications system provided by a common carrier, unless the communication is a tone-only paging system communication; or

e. Transmitted on frequencies allocated under Part 25, Subpart D, E, or F or Part 94 of the Rules of the Federal Communications Commission as provided by 18 U.S.C. § 2510(16)(E).

(20) "User" means any person or entity who:

a. Uses an electronic communications service; and
b. Is duly authorized by the provider of the service to engage in the use.

(21) "Wire communication" means any aural transfer made in whole or in part through the use of facilities for the transmission of communications by the aid of wire, cable, or other like connection between the point of origin and the point of reception (including the use of such connection in a switching station) furnished or operated by any person engaged in providing or operating such facilities for the transmission of interstate or foreign communications or communications affecting interstate or foreign commerce and the term includes any electronic storage of such communication. (1995, c. 407, s. 1; 1997-435, s. 1.)

§ 15A-287. Interception and disclosure of wire, oral, or electronic communications prohibited.

(a) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this Article, a person is guilty of a Class H felony if, without the consent of at least one party to the communication, the person:

(1) Willfully intercepts, endeavors to intercept, or procures any other person to intercept or endeavor to intercept, any wire, oral, or electronic communication.
(2) Willfully uses, endeavors to use, or procures any other person to use or endeavor to use any electronic, mechanical, or other device to intercept any oral communication when:
a. The device is affixed to, or otherwise transmits a signal through, a wire, cable, or other like connection used in wire communications; or
b. The device transmits communications by radio, or interferes with the transmission of such communications.
(3) Willfully discloses, or endeavors to disclose, to any other person the contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication, knowing or having reason to know that the information was obtained through violation of this Article; or
(4) Willfully uses, or endeavors to use, the contents of any wire or oral communication, knowing or having reason to know that the information was obtained through the interception of a wire or oral communication in violation of this Article.

(b) It is not unlawful under this Article for any person to:

(1) Intercept or access an electronic communication made through an electronic communication system that is configured so that the electronic communication is readily accessible to the general public;
(2) Intercept any radio communication which is transmitted:
a. For use by the general public, or that relates to ships, aircraft, vehicles, or persons in distress;
b. By any governmental, law enforcement, civil defense, private land mobile, or public safety communication system, including police and fire, readily available to the general public;
c. By a station operating on any authorized band within the bands allocated to the amateur, citizens band, or general mobile radio services; or
d. By any marine or aeronautical communication system; or
(3) Intercept any communication in a manner otherwise allowed by Chapter 119 of the United States Code.

(c) It is not unlawful under this Article for an operator of a switchboard, or an officer, employee, or agent of a provider of electronic communication service, whose facilities are used in the transmission of a wire or electronic communication, to intercept, disclose, or use that communication in the normal course of employment while engaged in any activity that is a necessary incident to the rendition of his or her service or to the protection of the rights or property of the provider of that service, provided that a provider of wire or electronic communication service may not utilize service observing or random monitoring except for mechanical or service quality control checks.

(d) It is not unlawful under this Article for an officer, employee, or agent of the Federal Communications Commission, in the normal course of his employment and in discharge of the monitoring responsibilities exercised by the Commission in the enforcement of Chapter 5 of Title 47 of the United States Code, to intercept a wire or electronic communication, or oral communication transmitted by radio, or to disclose or use the information thereby obtained.

(e) Any person who, as a result of the person's official position or employment, has obtained knowledge of the contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication lawfully intercepted pursuant to an electronic surveillance order or of the pendency or existence of or implementation of an electronic surveillance order who shall knowingly and willfully disclose such information for the purpose of hindering or thwarting any investigation or prosecution relating to the subject matter of the electronic surveillance order, except as is necessary for the proper and lawful performance of the duties of his position or employment or as shall be required or allowed by law, shall be guilty of a Class G felony.

(f) Any person who shall, knowingly or with gross negligence, divulge the existence of or contents of any electronic surveillance order in a way likely to hinder or thwart any investigation or prosecution relating to the subject matter of the electronic surveillance order or anyone who shall, knowingly or with gross negligence, release the contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication intercepted under an electronic surveillance order, except as is necessary for the proper and lawful performance of the duties of his position or employment or as is required or allowed by law, shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

(g) Any public officer who shall violate subsection (a) or (d) of this section or who shall knowingly violate subsection (e) of this section shall be removed from any public office he may hold and shall thereafter be ineligible to hold any public office, whether elective or appointed. (1995, c. 407, s. 1.)

§ 15A-288. Manufacture, distribution, possession, and advertising of wire, oral, or electronic communication intercepting devices prohibited.

(a) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this Article, a person is guilty of a Class H felony if the person:

(1) Manufactures, assembles, possesses, purchases, or sells any electronic, mechanical, or other device, knowing or having reason to know that the design of the device renders it primarily useful for the purpose of the surreptitious interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications; or

(2) Places in any newspaper, magazine, handbill, or other publication, any advertisement of:

a. Any electronic, mechanical, or other device knowing or having reason to know that the design of the device renders it primarily useful for the purpose of the surreptitious interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications; or

b. Any other electronic, mechanical, or other device where the advertisement promotes the use of the device for the purpose of the surreptitious interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications.

(b) It is not unlawful under this section for the following persons to manufacture, assemble, possess, purchase, or sell any electronic, mechanical, or other device, knowing or having reason to know that the design of the device renders it primarily useful for the purpose of the surreptitious interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications:

(1) A communications common carrier or an officer, agent, or employee of, or a person under contract with, a communications common carrier, acting in the normal course of the communications common carrier's business, or

(2) An officer, agent, or employee of, or a person under contract with, the State, acting in the course of the activities of the State, and with the written authorization of the Attorney General.

(c) An officer, agent, or employee of, or a person whose normal and customary business is to design, manufacture, assemble, advertise and sell electronic, mechanical and other devices primarily useful for the purpose of the surreptitious interceptions of wire, oral, or electronic communications, exclusively for and restricted to State and federal investigative or law enforcement agencies and departments. (1995, c. 407, s. 1.)

§ 15A-289. Confiscation of wire, oral, or electronic communication interception devices.

Any electronic, mechanical, or other device used, sent, carried, manufactured, assembled, possessed, sold, or advertised in violation of G.S. 15A-288 may be seized and forfeited to this State. (1995, c. 407, s. 1.)

§ 15A-290. Offenses for which orders for electronic surveillance may be granted.

(a) Orders authorizing or approving the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications may be granted, subject to the provisions of this Article and Chapter 119 of the United States Code, when the interception:

(1) May provide or has provided evidence of the commission of, or any conspiracy to commit:

a. Any of the drug-trafficking violations listed in G.S. 90-95(h); or

b. A continuing criminal enterprise in violation of G.S. 90-95.1.

(2) May expedite the apprehension of persons indicted for the commission of, or any conspiracy to commit, an offense listed in subdivision (1) of this subsection.

(b) Orders authorizing or approving the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications may be granted, subject to the provisions of this Article and Chapter 119 of the United States Code, when the interception may provide, or has provided, evidence of any offense that involves the commission of, or any conspiracy to commit, murder, kidnapping, hostage taking, robbery, extortion, bribery, rape, or any sexual offense, or when the interception may expedite the apprehension of persons indicted for the commission of these offenses.

(c) Orders authorizing or approving the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications may be granted, subject to the provisions of this Article and Chapter 119 of the United States Code, when the interception may provide, or has provided, evidence of any of the following offenses, or any conspiracy to commit these offenses, or when the interception may expedite the apprehension of persons indicted for the commission of these offenses:

(1) Any felony offense against a minor, including any violation of G.S. 14-27.7 (Intercourse and sexual offenses with certain victims; consent no defense), G.S. 14-41 (Abduction of children), G.S. 14-190.16 (First degree sexual exploitation of a minor), G.S. 14-190.17 (Second degree sexual exploitation of a minor), G.S. 14-190.18 (Promoting prostitution of a minor), G.S. 14-190.19 (Participating in prostitution of a minor), or G.S. 14-202.1 (Taking indecent liberties with children).

(2) Any felony obstruction of a criminal investigation, including any violation of G.S. 14-221.1 (Altering, destroying, or stealing evidence of criminal conduct).

(3) Any felony offense involving interference with, or harassment or intimidation of, jurors or witnesses, including any violation of G.S. 14-225.2 or G.S. 14-226.

(4) Any felony offense involving assault or threats against any executive or legislative officer in violation of Article 5A of Chapter 14 of the General Statutes or assault with a firearm or other deadly weapon upon governmental officers or employees in violation of G.S. 14-34.2.

(5) Any offense involving the manufacture, assembly, possession, storage, transportation, sale, purchase, delivery, or acquisition of weapons of mass death or destruction in violation of G.S. 14- 288.8 or the adulteration or misbranding of food, drugs, cosmetics, etc., with the intent to cause serious injury in violation of G.S. 14-34.4.

(d) When an investigative or law enforcement officer, while engaged in intercepting wire, oral, or electronic communications in the manner authorized, intercepts wire, electronic, or oral communications relating to offenses other than those specified in the order of authorization or approval, the contents thereof, and evidence derived therefrom, may be disclosed or used as provided in G.S. 15A-294(a) and (b). Such contents and any evidence derived therefrom may be used in accordance with G.S. 15A-294(c) when authorized or approved by a judicial review panel where the panel finds, on subsequent application made as soon as practicable, that the contents were otherwise intercepted in accordance with this Article or Chapter 119 of the United States Code.

(e) No otherwise privileged wire, oral, or electronic communication intercepted in accordance with, or in violation of, the provisions of this Article or Chapter 119 of the United States Code, shall lose its privileged character. (1995, c. 407, s. 1.)

§ 15A-291. Application for electronic surveillance order; judicial review panel.

(a) The Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee may, pursuant to the provisions of section 2516(2) of Chapter 119 of the United States Code, apply to a judicial review panel for an order authorizing or approving the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications by investigative or law enforcement officers having responsibility for the investigation of the offenses as to which the application is made, and for such offenses and causes as are enumerated in G.S. 15A-290. A judicial review panel shall be composed of such judges as may be assigned by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina or an Associate Justice acting as the Chief Justice's designee, which shall review applications for electronic surveillance orders and may issue orders valid throughout the State authorizing such surveillance as provided by this Article, and which shall submit a report of its decision to the Chief Justice. A judicial review panel may be appointed by the Chief Justice or an Associate Justice acting as the Chief Justice's designee upon the notification of the Attorney General's Office of the intent to apply for an electronic surveillance order.

(b) A judicial review panel is hereby authorized to grant orders valid throughout the State for the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications. Applications for such orders may be made by the Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee. The Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee in applying for such orders, and a judicial review panel in granting such orders, shall comply with all procedural requirements of section 2518 of Chapter 119 of the United States Code. The Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee may make emergency applications as provided by section 2518 of Chapter 119 of the United States Code. In applying section 2518 the word "judge" in that section shall be construed to refer to the judicial review panel, unless the context otherwise indicates. The judicial review panel may stipulate any special conditions it feels necessary to assure compliance with the terms of this act.

(c) No judge who sits as a member of a judicial review panel shall preside at any trial or proceeding resulting from or in any manner related to information gained pursuant to a lawful electronic surveillance order issued by that panel.

(d) Each application for an order authorizing or approving the interception of a wire, oral, or electronic communication must be made in writing upon oath or affirmation to the judicial review panel. Each application must include the following information:

(1) The identity of the office requesting the application;

(2) A full and complete statement of the facts and circumstances relied upon by the applicant, to justify his belief that an order should be issued, including:

a. Details as to the particular offense that has been, or is being committed;

b. A particular description of the nature and location of the facilities from which or the place where the communication is to be intercepted;

c. A particular description of the type of communications sought to be intercepted; and

d. The identity of the person, if known, committing the offense and whose communications are to be intercepted;

(3) A full and complete statement as to whether or not other investigative procedures have been tried and failed or why they reasonably appear to be unlikely to succeed if tried or to be too dangerous;

(4) A statement of the period of time for which the interception is required to be maintained. If the nature of the investigation is such that the authorization for interception should not automatically terminate when the described type of communication has been obtained, a particular description of facts establishing probable cause to believe that additional communications of the same type will occur thereafter must be added;

(5) A full and complete statement of the facts concerning all previous applications known to the individual authorizing and making adjudication, made to a judicial review panel for authorization to intercept, or for approval of interceptions of wire, oral, or electronic communications involving any of the same persons, facilities, or places specified in the application, and the action taken by that judicial review panel on each such application; and

(6) Where the application is for the extension of an order, a statement setting forth the results thus far obtained from the interception, or a reasonable explanation of the failure to obtain such results.

(e) Before acting on the application, the judicial review panel may examine on oath the person requesting the application or any other person who may possess pertinent information, but information other than that contained in the affidavit may not be considered by the panel in determining whether probable cause exists for the issuance of the order unless the information is either recorded or contemporaneously summarized in the record or on the face of the order by the panel. (1995, c. 407, s. 1; 1997-435, s. 2.)

§ 15A-292. Request for application for electronic surveillance order.

(a) The head of any municipal, county, or State law enforcement agency or any district attorney may submit a written request to the Attorney General that the Attorney General apply to a judicial review panel for an electronic surveillance order to be executed within the requesting agency's jurisdiction. The written requests shall be on a form approved by the Attorney General and shall provide sufficient information to form the basis for an application for an electronic surveillance order. The head of a law enforcement agency shall also submit a copy of the request to the district attorney, who shall review the request and forward it to the Attorney General along with any comments he may wish to include. The Attorney General is authorized to review the request and decide whether it is appropriate to submit an application to a judicial review panel for an electronic surveillance order. If a request for an application is deemed inappropriate, the Attorney General shall send a signed, written statement to the person submitting the request, and to the district attorney, summarizing the reasons for failing to make an application. If the Attorney General decides to submit an application to a judicial review panel, he shall so notify the requesting agency head, the district attorney, and the head of the local law enforcement agency which has the primary responsibility for enforcing the criminal laws in the location in which it is anticipated the majority of the surveillance will take place, if not the same as the requesting agency head, unless the Attorney General has probable cause to believe that the latter notifications should substantially jeopardize the success of the surveillance or the investigation in general. If a judicial review panel grants an electronic surveillance order, a copy of such order shall be sent to the requesting agency head and the district attorney, and a summary of the order shall be sent to the head of the local law enforcement agency with primary responsibility for enforcing the criminal laws in the jurisdiction where the majority of the surveillance will take place, if not the same as the requesting agency head, unless the judicial review panel finds probable cause to believe that the latter notifications would substantially jeopardize the success of the surveillance or the investigation.

(b) This Article does not limit the authority of the Attorney General to apply for electronic surveillance orders independent of, or contrary to, the requests of law enforcement agency heads, nor does it limit the discretion of the Attorney General in determining whether an application is appropriate under any given circumstances.

§ 15A-293. Issuance of order for electronic surveillance; procedures for implementation.

(a) Upon application by the Attorney General pursuant to the procedures in G.S. 15A-291, a judicial review panel may enter an ex parte order, as requested or as modified, authorizing the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications, if the panel determines on the basis of the facts submitted by the applicant that:

(1) There is probable cause for belief that an individual is committing, has committed, or is about to commit an offense set out in G.S. 15A-290;
(2) There is probable cause for belief that particular communications concerning that offense will be obtained through such interception;
(3) Normal investigative procedures have been tried and have failed or reasonably appear to be unlikely to succeed if tried or to be too dangerous; and
(4) There is probable cause for belief that the facilities from which, or the place where, the wire, oral, or electronic communications are to be intercepted are being used, or are about to be used, in connection with the commission of such offense, or are leased to, listed in the name of, or commonly used by the individual described in subdivision (1) of this subsection.

(b) Each order authorizing the interception of any wire, oral, or electronic communications must specify:
(1) The identity of the person, if known, whose communications are to be intercepted;
(2) The nature and location of the communications facilities as to which, or the place where, authority to intercept is granted, and the means by which such interceptions may be made;
(3) A particular description of the type of communication sought to be intercepted and a statement of the particular offense to which it relates;
(4) The identity of the agency authorized to intercept the communications and of the person requesting the application; and
(5) The period of time during which such interception is authorized, including a statement as to whether or not the interception automatically terminates when the described communication has been first obtained.

(c) No order entered under this Article may authorize the interception of any wire, oral, or electronic communication for any period longer than is necessary to achieve the objective of the authorization, nor in any event longer than 30 days. Extensions of an order may be granted, but only upon application for an extension made in accordance with G.S. 15A-291 and the panel making the findings required by subsection (a) of this section. The period of extension may be no longer than the panel determines to be necessary to achieve the purpose for which it was granted and in no event for longer than 15 days. Every order and extension thereof must contain a provision that the authorization to intercept be executed as soon as practicable, be conducted in such a way as to minimize the interception of communications not otherwise subject to interception under this Article, and terminate upon attainment of the authorized objective, or in any event in 30 days or 15 days, as is appropriate.

(d) Whenever an order authorizing interception is entered pursuant to this Article, the order may require reports to be made to the issuing judicial review panel showing that progress has been made toward achievement of the authorized objective and the need for continued interception. Such reports must be made at such intervals as the panel may require.

(1) The contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication intercepted by any means authorized by this Article must be recorded on tape, wire, or electronic or other comparable device. The recording of the contents of any wire, electronic, or oral communication under this subsection must be done in such way as will protect the recording from editing or other alterations. Immediately upon the expiration of the period of the order, or extensions thereof, the recordings must be made available to the judicial review panel and sealed under its direction. Custody of the recordings is wherever the panel orders.

They may not be destroyed except upon an order of the issuing panel and in any event must be kept for 10 years. Duplicate recordings may be made for use or disclosure pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 15A-294(a) and (b) for investigations. The contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication or evidence derived therefrom may not be disclosed or used under G.S. 15A-294(c) unless they have been kept sealed.

(2) Applications made and orders granted under this Article must be sealed by the panel. Custody of the applications and orders may be disclosed only upon a showing of good cause before the issuing panel and may not be destroyed except on its order and in any event must be kept for 10 years.

(3) Any violation of the provisions of this subsection may be punished as for contempt.

(e) The State Bureau of Investigation shall own or control and may operate any equipment used to implement electronic surveillance orders issued by a judicial review panel and may operate or use, in implementing any electronic surveillance order, electronic surveillance equipment in which a local government or any of its agencies has a property interest.

(f) The Attorney General shall establish procedures for the use of electronic surveillance equipment in assisting local law enforcement agencies implementing electronic surveillance orders. The Attorney General shall supervise such assistance given to local law enforcement agencies and is authorized to conduct statewide training sessions for investigative and law enforcement officers regarding this Article. (1995, c. 407, s. 1; 1997-435, s. 2.1.)

§ 15A-294. Authorization for disclosure and use of intercepted wire, oral, or electronic communications.

(a) Any investigative or law enforcement officer who, by any means authorized by this Article or Chapter 119 of the United States Code, has obtained knowledge of the contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication, or evidence derived therefrom, may disclose such contents to another investigative or law enforcement officer to the extent that such disclosure is appropriate to the proper performance of the official duties of the officer making or receiving the disclosure.

(b) Any investigative or law enforcement officer, who by any means authorized by this Article or Chapter 119 of the United States Code, has obtained knowledge of the contents of any wire, oral, or electronic communication, or evidence derived therefrom, may use such contents to the extent such use is appropriate to the proper performance of the officers' official duties.

(c) Any person who has received, by any means authorized by this Article or Chapter 119 of the United States Code, any information concerning a wire, oral, or electronic communication, or evidence derived therefrom, intercepted in accordance with the provisions of this Article, may disclose the contents of that communication or such derivative evidence while giving testimony under oath or affirmation in any proceeding in any court or before any grand jury in this State, or in any court of the United States or of any state, or in any federal or state grand jury proceeding.

(d) Within a reasonable time, but no later than 90 days after the filing of an application for an order or the termination of the period of an order or the extensions thereof, the issuing judicial review panel must cause to be served on the persons named in the order or the application and such other parties as the panel in its discretion may determine, an inventory that includes notice of:

(1) The fact of the entry of the order or the application;

(2) The date of the entry and the period of the authorized interception; and

(3) The fact that during the period wire, oral, or electronic communications were or were not intercepted.

(d1) The notification required pursuant to G.S. 15A-294(d) may be delayed if the judicial review panel has probable cause to believe that notification would substantially jeopardize the success of an electronic surveillance or a criminal investigation. Delay of notification shall be only by order of the judicial review panel. The period of delay shall be designated by the judicial review panel and may be extended from time to time until the jeopardy to the electronic surveillance or the criminal investigation dissipates.

(e) The issuing judicial review panel, upon the filing of a motion, may in its discretion, make available to such person or his counsel for inspection, such portions of the intercepted communications, applications, and orders as the panel determines to be required by law or in the interest of justice.

(f) The contents of any intercepted wire, oral, or electronic communication, or evidence derived therefrom, may not be received in evidence or otherwise disclosed in any trial, hearing, or other proceeding in any court of this State unless each party, not less than 20 working days before the trial, hearing, or other proceeding, has been furnished with a copy of the order and accompanying application, under which the interception was authorized.

(g) Any aggrieved person in any trial, hearing, or proceeding in or before any court, department, officer, agency, regulatory body, or other authority of this State, or a political subdivision thereof, may move to suppress the contents of any intercepted wire, oral, or electronic communication, or evidence derived therefrom, on the grounds that:

(1) The communication was unlawfully intercepted;

(2) The order of authorization under which it was intercepted is insufficient on its face; or

(3) The interception was not made in conformity with the order of authorization.

Such motion must be made before the trial, hearing, or proceeding unless there was no opportunity to make such motion or the person was not aware of the grounds of this motion. If the motion is granted, the contents of the intercepted wire, oral, or electronic communication, or evidence derived therefrom, must be treated as having been obtained in violation of this Article.

(h) In addition to any other right to appeal, the State may appeal:

(1) From an order granting a motion to suppress made under subdivision (1) of this subsection, if the district attorney certifies to the judge granting the motion that the appeal is not taken for purposes of delay. The appeal must be taken within 30 days after the date the order of suppression was entered and must be prosecuted as are other interlocutory appeals; or

(2) From an order denying an application for an order of authorization, and the appeal may be made ex parte and must be considered in camera and in preference to all other pending appeals. (1995, c. 407, s. 1; 1997-435, s. 3.)

§ 15A-295. Reports concerning intercepted wire, oral, or electronic communications.

In January of each year, the Attorney General of this State must report to the Administrative Office of the United States Court the information required to be filed by section 2519 of Title 18 of the United States Code, as heretofore or hereafter amended, and file a copy of the report with the Administrative Office of the Courts of North Carolina. (1995, c. 407, s. 1.)

§ 15A-296. Recovery of civil damages authorized.

(a) Any person whose wire, oral, or electronic communication is intercepted, disclosed, or used in violation of this Article, has a civil cause of action against any person who intercepts, discloses, uses, or procures any other person to intercept, disclose, or use such communications, and is entitled to recover from any other person:

(1) Actual damages, but not less than liquidated damages, computed at the rate of one hundred dollars ($100.00) a day for each day of violation or one thousand dollars ($1,000), whichever is higher;
(2) Punitive damages; and
(3) A reasonable attorneys' fee and other litigation costs reasonably incurred.

(b) Good faith reliance on a court order or on a representation made by the Attorney General or a district attorney is a complete defense to any civil or criminal action brought under this Article. (1995, c. 407, s. 1.)

§ 15A-297. Conformity to provisions of federal law.

It is the intent of this Article to conform the requirements of all interceptions of wire, oral, or electronic communications conducted by investigative or law enforcement officers in this State to provisions of Chapter 119 of the United States Code, except where the context indicates a purpose to provide safeguards even more protective of individual privacy and constitutional rights. (1995, c. 407, s. 1.)

§ 15A-298. Subpoena authority.

Pursuant to rules issued by the Attorney General, the Director of the State Bureau of Investigation or the Director's designee may issue an administrative subpoena to a communications common carrier or an electronic communications service to compel production of business records if the records:

(1) Disclose information concerning local or long-distance toll records or subscriber information; and
(2) Are material to an active criminal investigation being conducted by the State Bureau of Investigation. (1995, c. 407, s. 1; 1997-435, s. 4.)

Article 16A.

Discontinuation of Telecommunications Services.

§ 15A-299. Discontinuation of telecommunications services used for unlawful purposes.

(a) The legislature finds that some persons use telecommunications services to violate State or federal criminal law. The legislature further finds that some persons use telecommunications services or technology, such as call forwarding and cellular radio transmission, to avoid detection or arrest.

(b) A customer of a telecommunications company operating within the State may use telecommunications services only for lawful purposes.

(c) If a local, State, or federal law enforcement officer acting within the scope of the officer's duties obtains evidence that telecommunications services are being used or have been used by a customer or by the employee or agent of the customer to violate State or federal criminal law, the officer may request either the district attorney or the Attorney General as appropriate to apply to the district court of the county in which the suspected violation of State or federal criminal law occurred for an order requiring the telecommunications company to discontinue service to the customer. The court shall hold a hearing on the application as soon as possible, but no sooner than 48 hours after notice of the application for discontinuation of service is delivered to the address at which the telecommunications services are furnished or to the address to which bills for telecommunications services are mailed, according to the telecommunications company records. Notice must also be given to the registered agent for the service of process upon the telecommunications company at least 48 hours prior to the hearing. Notices required under this section shall be given pursuant to the provisions of Rule 4 of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure. If the court finds clear and convincing evidence that the telecommunications services are being used or have been used to violate State or federal criminal law, the court may order the telecommunications company to discontinue such service immediately.

(d) Telecommunications services discontinued under this section may be reinstated only by court order, and call forwarding or message referrals, whether recorded or live, may not be provided until reinstatement of service is ordered by the court. The court may order reinstatement of telecommunications services if it finds that the customer is not likely to use the services to violate State or federal criminal law. The standard of proof shall be the same as that used for the disconnect order.

(e) A telecommunications company shall be held harmless from liability to any person when complying with any court order issued under this section. (1997-372, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-372, s. 2, made this Article effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date.

SUBCHAPTER III. CRIMINAL PROCESS.

ARTICLE 17.

Criminal Process.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Criminal process includes the citation, criminal summons, warrant for arrest, and order for arrest. They all serve the function of requiring a person to come to court. Each is issued by an official for some specific cause.

An attempt has been made here to standardize the component parts of the different instruments, varying a particular component only as it serves a different function. For example, a warrant for arrest contains a statement of the crime based upon a showing of probable cause and an order directing a law-enforcement officer to arrest the defendant. The criminal summons contains the same components except the order directed to the officer to arrest, which is replaced by an order to the defendant to appear. This should serve to emphasize the similarities and differences in the various types of process with resultant accuracy in usage. In addition, this should facilitate the further development of multiple purpose forms, with components which can be selected as desired, resulting in both convenience and economy.

The warrant is the key instrument, both because of frequency of usage and the impact of decisions of the courts. The commentary there explains the development of some differences from present process.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-301. Criminal process generally.

(a) Formal Requirements. —

(1) A record of each criminal process issued in the trial division of the General Court of Justice must be maintained in the office of the clerk.

(2) Criminal process, other than a citation, must be signed and dated by the justice, judge, magistrate, or clerk who issues it. The citation must be signed and dated by the law-enforcement officer who issues it.

(b) To Whom Directed. — Warrants for arrest and orders for arrest must be directed to a particular officer, a class of officers, or a combination thereof, having authority and territorial jurisdiction to execute the process. A criminal summons must be directed to the person summoned to appear and must be delivered to and may be served by any law-enforcement officer having authority and territorial jurisdiction to make an arrest for the offense charged, except that in those instances where the defendant is called into a law-enforcement agency to receive a summons, any employee so designated by the agency's chief executive officer may serve a criminal summons at the agency's office. The citation must be directed to the person cited to appear.

(c) Service. —

(1) A law-enforcement officer or other employee designated as provided in subsection (b) receiving criminal process for service or execution must note thereon the date of its receipt. Upon execution or service, a copy of the process must be delivered to the person arrested or served.

(2) A corporation may be served with criminal summons as provided in G.S. 15A-773.

(d) Return. —

(1) The officer or other employee designated as provided in subsection (b) who serves or executes criminal process must enter the date of the service or execution on the process and return it to the clerk of court in the county in which issued.

(2) If criminal process is not served or executed within a number of days indicated below, it must be returned to the clerk of court in the county in which it was issued, with a reason for the failure of service or execution noted thereon.

a. Warrant for arrest — 180 days.

b. Order for arrest — 180 days.

c. Criminal summons — 90 days or the date the defendant is directed to appear, whichever is earlier.

(3) Failure to return the process to the clerk does not invalidate the process, nor does it invalidate service or execution made after the period specified in subdivision (2).

(4) The clerk to which return is made may redeliver the process to a law-enforcement officer or other employee designated as provided in subsection (b) for further attempts at service. If the process is a criminal summons, he may reissue it only upon endorsement of a new designated time and date of appearance.

(e) Copies to Be Made by Clerk. —

(1) The clerk may make a certified copy of any criminal process filed in his office pursuant to subsection (a) when the original process has been lost or when the process has been returned pursuant to subdivision (d)(2). The copy may be executed as effectively as the original process whether or not the original has been redelivered as provided in G.S. 15A-301(d)(4).

(2) When criminal process is returned to the clerk pursuant to subdivision (d)(1) and it appears that the appropriate venue is in another county, the clerk must make and retain a certified copy of the process and transmit the original process to the clerk in the appropriate county.
(3) Upon request of a defendant, the clerk must make and furnish to him without charge one copy of every criminal process filed against him.
(4) Nothing in this section prevents the making and retention of uncertified copies of process for information purposes under G.S. 15A-401(a)(2) or for any other lawful purpose.

(f) Protection of Process Server. — An officer or other employee designated as provided in subsection (b), and serving process as provided in subsection (b), receiving criminal process which is complete and regular on its face may serve the process in accordance with its terms and need not inquire into its regularity or continued validity, nor does he incur criminal or civil liability for its due service. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 3, s. 4; Code, s. 1135; Rev., s. 3159; C.S., s. 4525; 1957, c. 346; 1969, c. 44, s. 28; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, ss. 136, 137; 1979, c. 725, ss. 1-3; 1989, c. 262, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Several self-explanatory directory provisions are gathered here, familiar to all who have dealt with service and return of process. The new provisions for mandatory return contained in subsection (d), "Return," are designed to reduce the number of unaccounted-for "floating" warrants and other process. It should be noted that the requirements for 90-day return do not invalidate the process or its service after that time, or in any respect create a limitation on prosecution of the crime. These provisions are administrative and the process may be returned to the officer for further attempts at service.

Subsection (a) provides for the filing of a copy of criminal process in the office of the clerk of superior court. At times an arrest warrant may be issued in one county when the crime has been committed in another and must be tried there. Subsection (e)(2) provides that in that circumstance the clerk keeps a certified copy and forwards the original to the county of appropriate venue.

Subsection (f), "Protection of Officer," is new, added to insure that an officer may execute criminal process promptly without fear or danger of encountering difficulty because of some deficiency not apparent to him.

§ 15A-302. Citation.

(a) Definition. — A citation is a directive, issued by a law enforcement officer or other person authorized by statute, that a person appear in court and answer a misdemeanor or infraction charge or charges.

(b) When Issued. — An officer may issue a citation to any person who he has probable cause to believe has committed a misdemeanor or infraction.

(c) Contents. — The citation must:
(1) Identify the crime charged, including the date, and where material, identify the property and other persons involved,
(2) Contain the name and address of the person cited, or other identification if that cannot be ascertained,

(3) Identify the officer issuing the citation, and

(4) Cite the person to whom issued to appear in a designated court, at a designated time and date.

(d) Service. — A copy of the citation shall be delivered to the person cited who may sign a receipt on the original which shall thereafter be filed with the clerk by the officer. If the cited person refuses to sign, the officer shall certify delivery of the citation by signing the original, which shall thereafter be filed with the clerk. Failure of the person cited to sign the citation shall not constitute grounds for his arrest or the requirement that he post a bond. When a citation is issued for a parking offense, a copy shall be delivered to the operator of a vehicle who is present at the time of service, or shall be delivered to the registered owner of the vehicle if the operator is not present by affixing a copy of the citation to the vehicle in a conspicuous place.

(e) Dismissal by Prosecutor. — If the prosecutor finds that no crime or infraction is charged in the citation, or that there is insufficient evidence to warrant prosecution, he may dismiss the charge and so notify the person cited. An appropriate entry must be made in the records of the clerk. It is not necessary to enter the dismissal in open court or to obtain consent of the judge.

(f) Citation No Bar to Criminal Summons or Warrant. — If the offense is a misdemeanor, a criminal summons or a warrant may issue notwithstanding the prior issuance of a citation for the same offense.

(g) Preparation of Form. — The form and content of the citation is as prescribed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts. The form of citation used for violation of the motor vehicle laws must contain a notice that the driving privilege of the person cited may be revoked for failure to appear as cited, and must be prepared as provided in G.S. 7A-148(b). (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, ss. 3, 27; 1983, c. 327, s. 4; 1985, c. 385; c. 764, s. 4; 1989, c. 243, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Although the use of a citation is quite familiar in North Carolina for traffic cases, it previously has not had statutory sanction as criminal process. Actually, there has not been a citation, but rather a warrant form not acted upon by a judicial officer. (There has been an authorization in § 7A-148 for the chief district judges to prescribe a multicopy uniform traffic ticket, and that is reflected in subsection (g) of this section.)

This statute provides for a separate criminal process, applicable to any misdemeanor. It is issued by a law-enforcement officer to direct the appearance in court of the person charged when the officer lacks authority or deems it inappropriate to make an arrest and take the defendant into custody.

Since the citation is issued by a law-enforcement officer, contempt of court may not be used to enforce obedience to its direction to appear. Thus, other criminal process may be issued if the defendant does not appear.

Subsection (f)(2) refers to a proposed section of the Criminal Code Commission's proposal which would have inserted provisions in Chapter 20 of the General Statutes. The amendment to Chapter 20 was deleted in the General Assembly, but subsection (f)(2) was not deleted.

It should be noted that in certain circumstances the citation can serve as the pleading upon which the trial is based. See § 15A-922 and Article 49, Pleadings and Joinder.

CASE NOTES

Officer had probable cause to stop vehicle in which defendant was a passenger where officer observed that neither the driver nor the defendant passenger were wearing seat belts. Likewise, the officer was allowed to ask defendant passenger to exit the vehicle. State v. Hamilton, 125 N.C. § 15A-303. Criminal summons.

(a) Definition. — A criminal summons consists of a statement of the crime or infraction of which the person to be summoned is accused, and an order directing that the person so accused appear and answer to the charges made against him. It is based upon a showing of probable cause supported by oath or affirmation.

(b) Statement of the Crime or Infraction. — The criminal summons must contain a statement of the crime or infraction of which the person summoned is accused. No criminal summons is invalid because of any technicality of pleading if the statement is sufficient to identify the crime or infraction.

(c) Showing of Probable Cause; Record. — The showing of probable cause for the issuance of a criminal summons, and the record thereof, is the same as provided in G.S. 15A-304(d) for the issuance of a warrant for arrest.

(d) Order to Appear. — The summons must order the person named to appear in a designated court at a designated time and date and answer to the charges made against him and advise him that he may be held in contempt of court for failure to appear. Except for cause noted in the criminal summons by the issuing official, an appearance date may not be set more than one month following the issuance or reissuance of the criminal summons.

(e) Enforcement. —

(1) If the offense charged is a criminal offense, a warrant for arrest, based upon the same or another showing of probable cause, may be issued by the same or another issuing official, notwithstanding the prior issuance of a criminal summons.

(2) If the offense charged is a criminal offense, an order for arrest, as provided in G.S. 15A-305, may issue for the arrest of any person who fails to appear as directed in a duly executed criminal summons.

(3) A person served with criminal summons who willfully fails to appear as directed may be punished for contempt as provided in G.S. 5A-11.

(4) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 166, s. 4.

(f) Who May Issue. — A criminal summons, valid throughout the State, may be issued by any person authorized to issue warrants for arrest. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, ss. 4, 5; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 138; 1983, c. 294, s. 3; 1985, c. 764, s. 5.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Former § 15-20 authorized the criminal summons, but it was little used. There appears to be no good reason, for in many cases in which a criminal summons could have been used, the law-enforcement officer simply "served" the warrant and did not take the defendant into custody.

The criminal summons can appropriately be used in any case in which it appears that it is not necessary to arrest the defendant and take him into custody to ensure his appearance in court. This should be true in many misdemeanors and in a number of felonies. If the defendant simply is directed to appear in court on the appropriate date, the entire machinery of arrest, processing, and bail can be avoided with resultant savings to the system of criminal justice. This section is separated from the warrant provisions (unlike the former statute), and placed first, in order to call it to the attention of readers of the statutes and encourage its use.

Note that due to the interchangeability of parts of process a warrant for arrest may be based on the criminal summons (it needs only the order to the officer), and the same is true of an order for arrest. Since the summons is issued by a judicial officer, the contempt power also is available.

Subsection (e)(4) refers to a proposed section of the Criminal Code Act which would have inserted provisions in Chapter 20 of the General Statutes. The amendment to Chapter 20 was deleted in the General Assembly, but subsection (e)(4) was not deleted.

§ 15A-304. Warrant for arrest.

(a) Definition. — A warrant for arrest consists of a statement of the crime of which the person to be arrested is accused, and an order directing that the person so accused be arrested and held to answer to the charges made against him. It is based upon a showing of probable cause supported by oath or affirmation.

(b) When Issued. — A warrant for arrest may be issued, instead of or subsequent to a criminal summons, when it appears to the judicial official that the person named should be taken into custody. Circumstances to be considered in determining whether the person should be taken into custody may include, but are not limited to, failure to appear when previously summoned, facts making it apparent that a person summoned will fail to appear, danger that the person accused will escape, danger that there may be injury to person or property, or the seriousness of the offense.

(c) Statement of the Crime. — The warrant must contain a statement of the crime of which the person to be arrested is accused. No warrant for arrest, nor any arrest made pursuant thereto, is invalid because of any technicality of pleading if the statement is sufficient to identify the crime.

(d) Showing of Probable Cause. — A judicial official may issue a warrant for arrest only when he is supplied with sufficient information, supported by oath or affirmation, to make an independent judgment that there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and that the person to be arrested committed it. The information must be shown by one or more of the following:

(1) Affidavit;

(2) Oral testimony under oath or affirmation before the issuing official; or

(3) Oral testimony under oath or affirmation presented by a sworn law enforcement officer to the issuing official by means of an audio and video transmission in which both parties can see and hear each other. Prior to the use of audio and video transmission pursuant to this subdivision, the procedures and type of equipment for audio and video transmission shall be submitted to the Administrative Office of the Courts by the senior regular resident superior court judge and the chief district court judge for a judicial district or set of districts and approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

If the information is insufficient to show probable cause, the warrant may not be issued.

(e) Order for Arrest. — The order for arrest must direct that a law-enforcement officer take the defendant into custody and bring him without unnecessary delay before a judicial official to answer to the charges made against him.

(f) Who May Issue. — A warrant for arrest, valid throughout the State, may be issued by:

(1) A Justice of the Supreme Court.

(2) A judge of the Court of Appeals.

(3) A judge of the superior court.

(4) A judge of the district court, as provided in G.S. 7A-291.

(5) A clerk, as provided in G.S. 7A-180 and 7A-181.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The standard format for a warrant for arrest in North Carolina has been an affidavit charging the crime, sworn before a judicial officer, followed by an order to a law-enforcement officer directing the arrest of the defendant. The warrant, consisting of the affidavit and the order, is then used as a pleading for trial.

In Whiteley v. Warden of Wyo. State Penitentiary, 401 U.S. 560, 91 S. Ct. 1031, 28 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1971), the Supreme Court of the United States said: "The decisions of this Court concerning Fourth Amendment probable cause requirements before a warrant for either arrest or search can issue require that the judicial officer issuing such a warrant be supplied with sufficient information to support an independent judgment that probable cause exists for the warrant." Thus it is clear that the judicial officer must be furnished information and our old conclusory affidavit in the form of a charge of the crime is not sufficient for the purpose. We still need a statement of the crime — for notification to the defendant and for a pleading, and that is provided for in this section.

This section provides for the showing of probable cause by an affidavit (which necessarily will be longer and more detailed if no other evidence in taken) or by the taking of evidence by the judicial officer. It should be emphasized that the judicial officer must have presented to him information from which he can decide that there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and that the person to be arrested committed it — and if the warrant is not based upon such a factual showing, it is invalid under the decisions of the Supreme Court.

In order to emphasize the desirability of utilizing the criminal summons when arrest and custody are not needed, subsection (b) states the circumstances for the use of a warrant for arrest. That subsection is directory and does not require a finding by the judicial officer, and of course would not invalidate the warrant if the circumstances in fact were absent.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

U.S. Const., Amend. IV Applies to Both Arrest Warrants and Search Warrants. — The requirement under U.S. Const., Amend. IV that no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the persons or things to be seized, applies to arrest warrants as well as to search warrants. State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972); State v. Freeman, 31 N.C. App. 335, 229 S.E.2d 238 (1976).

Issuance of a warrant of arrest is a judicial act. State v. Matthews, 270 N.C. 35, 153 S.E.2d 791 (1967).

Section vests discretionary power in officials authorized to issue warrants. State v. Furmage, 250 N.C. 616, 109 S.E.2d 563 (1959).

When Warrant May Be Issued. — After the required examination on oath of the complainant and any witnesses who may be produced by him, the justice of the peace is authorized to issue the warrant upon his determination that there is sufficient ground for the arrest and prosecution of the accused person for the described criminal offense. State v. Matthews, 270 N.C. 35, 153 S.E.2d 791 (1967).

Requirements for Valid Warrant. — A valid warrant of arrest must be based on an examination of the complainant under oath; it must identify the person charged; it must contain directly or by proper reference at least a defective statement of the crime charged; and it must be directed to a lawful officer or to a class of officers commanding the arrest of the accused. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

A warrant of arrest is sufficient if it clearly gives the defendant notice of the charge against him, so that he may prepare his defense, and if it enables him to plead former acquittal or former conviction should he again be brought to trial for the same offense. It must also enable the court to pronounce judgment in case of conviction. State v. Teasley, 9 N.C. App. 477, 176 S.E.2d 838, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 459, 177 S.E.2d 900 (1970).

A warrant must allege lucidly and accurately all the essential elements of the offense endeavored to be charged in order that the defendant may be duly informed of the charges against him, protected from double jeopardy, and able to prepare for trial, and that the trial court may be able to pronounce an appropriate sentence upon a conviction or plea. State v. Camp, 59 N.C. App. 38, 295 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 216 (1982).

"Probable Cause" Defined. — Probable cause under this section refers to the existence of a reasonable suspicion in the mind of a prudent person, considering the facts and circumstances presently known. State v. Sturdivant, 304 N.C. 293, 283 S.E.2d 719 (1981).

Duty of Magistrate. — It is the duty of a magistrate, before issuing a warrant on a criminal charge, except in cases super visum, to require evidence on oath amounting to a direct charge or creating a strong suspicion of guilt. Welch v. Scott, 27 N.C. 72 (1844).

Must Appear to Magistrate That Offense Was Committed. — A warrant will issue only if it appears to the magistrate from his examination that a criminal offense has been committed. Sutton v. Figgatt, 280 N.C. 89, 185 S.E.2d 97 (1971).

It must appear by the examination that an offense has been committed before any warrant is issued. State v. Moore, 136 N.C. 581, 48 S.E. 573 (1904).

Sufficient Charge Is Essential to Jurisdiction. — It is an essential of jurisdiction that a criminal offense shall be sufficiently charged in a warrant or indictment. State v. Green, 251 N.C. 40, 110 S.E.2d 609 (1959); State v. Jones, 17 N.C. App. 54, 193 S.E.2d 314 (1972).

But Issuance of Warrant Prior to Arrest Is Not. — But it is not an essential of jurisdiction that a warrant be issued prior to arrest and that the defendant be initially arrested thereunder. State v. Green, 251 N.C. 40, 110 S.E.2d 609 (1959); State v. Broome, 269 N.C. 661, 153 S.E.2d 384 (1967); State v. Jones, 17 N.C. App. 54, 193 S.E.2d 314 (1972).

Warrant should not be quashed or judgment arrested for mere informalities or absence of refinements. State v. Teasley, 9 N.C. App. 477, 176 S.E.2d 838, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 459, 177 S.E.2d 900 (1970).

Rules Less Strict Than for Indictments. — A warrant and the affidavit upon which it is based are tested by rules less strict than those applicable to indictments. State v. Teasley, 9 N.C. App. 477, 176 S.E.2d 838, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 459, 177 S.E.2d 900 (1970).

No Special Form of Affidavit or Complaint Required. — It is not expected nor required, in the absence of special provision to the contrary, that an affidavit or complaint should be in any particular form, or should charge the crime with the fullness or particularity necessary in an information or indictment. State v. Gupton, 166 N.C. 257, 80 S.E. 989 (1914); State v. Higgins, 266 N.C. 589, 146 S.E.2d 681 (1966).

Signature of Affiant Not Essential. — Where the warrant discloses that the affiant was duly sworn before a competent official and is signed by such official, and the name of the affiant is set forth, the fact that the affiant does not subscribe the affidavit is not a fatal defect. State v. Higgins, 266 N.C. 589, 146 S.E.2d 681 (1966).

Uniform Traffic Ticket as Warrant. — The Court of Appeals disapproves the use of the Uniform Traffic Ticket as a warrant of arrest. State v. Teasley, 9 N.C. App. 477, 176 S.E.2d 838, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 459, 177 S.E.2d 900 (1970).

Information received from a reliable informant is sufficient to support a conclusion that probable cause for arrest exists. State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

Police Officer May Rely on Information Reported by Other Officers. — A police officer making the affidavit for issuance of a warrant may do so in reliance upon information reported to him by other officers in the performance of their duties. State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

State Bureau of Investigation agent's affidavit and testimony before a magistrate that another State Bureau of Investigation agent had purchased heroin from defendant furnished sufficient evidence to support the magistrate's determination that probable cause existed for defendant's arrest. State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

In order to properly charge an assault, there must be a victim named, since by failing to name the particular person assaulted, the defendant would not be protected from a subsequent prosecution for assault upon a named person. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Motion to Quash Warrant Made After Pleading and Participating in Trial. — By pleading and participating in a trial, defendant waives any defect incident to the authority of the person issuing a warrant, and a motion to quash made after the State has rested is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge. State v. Teasley, 9 N.C. App. 477, 176 S.E.2d 838, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 459, 177 S.E.2d 900 (1970).

Arrest of Judgment Where Warrant Altered. — Where defendant was arrested, tried and convicted in district court for permitting a person under the influence of intoxicating liquor to operate his automobile, but the warrant was altered after trial in district court and before any evidence was heard in superior court so that defendant was tried and convicted in superior court on a warrant charging him with driving while under the influence, judgment of the superior court must be arrested since a defendant may be tried upon a warrant in superior court only after there has been a trial and appeal from a conviction by an inferior court having jurisdiction. State v. Chappell, 18 N.C. App. 288, 196 S.E.2d 558 (1973).

Appellate Court Cannot Look Behind Warrant. — The appellate court can only look at the warrant, which is the complaint, and cannot look behind the warrant for objections lying in the defects or irregularities of the preliminary evidence. State v. Peters, 107 N.C. 876, 12 S.E. 74 (1890). See State v. Bryson, 84 N.C. 780 (1881).

Issuance of Warrant Is Discretionary Act. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Gerard J. Anderson, Director, Alamance County Department of Social Services, 40 N.C.A.G. 191 (1970), rendered under former §§ 15-19 and 15-20.

Complainant Need Not Have Personal Knowledge of Facts. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable H.M. Shelton, Sheriff of Polk County, 40 N.C.A.G. 176 (1969), rendered under former §§ 15-19 and 15-20.

§ 15A-305. Order for arrest.

(a) Definition. — As used in this section, an order for arrest is an order issued by a justice, judge, clerk, or magistrate that a law-enforcement officer take a named person into custody.

(b) When Issued. — An order for arrest may be issued when:

(1) A grand jury has returned a true bill of indictment against a defendant who is not in custody and who has not been released from custody pursuant to Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail, to answer to the charges in the bill of indictment.

(2) A defendant who has been arrested and released from custody pursuant to Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail, fails to appear as required.

(3) The defendant has failed to appear as required by a duly executed criminal summons issued pursuant to G.S. 15A-303.

(4) A defendant has violated the conditions of probation.

(5) In any criminal proceeding in which the defendant has become subject to the jurisdiction of the court, it becomes necessary to take the defendant into custody.

(6) It is authorized by G.S. 15A-803 in connection with material witness proceedings.

(7) The common-law writ of capias has heretofore been issuable.

(8) When a defendant fails to appear as required in a show cause order issued in a criminal proceeding.

(9) It is authorized by G.S. 5A-16 in connection with contempt proceedings.

(c) Statement of Cause and Order; Copy of Indictment. —

(1) The process must state the cause for its issuance and order an officer described in G.S. 15A-301(b) to take the person named therein into custody and bring him before the court. If the defendant is to be held without bail, the order must so provide.

(2) When the order is issued pursuant to subdivision (b)(1), a copy of the bill of indictment must be attached to each copy of the order for arrest.

(d) Who May Issue. — An order for arrest, valid throughout the State, may be issued by any person authorized to issue warrants for arrest. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 6; 1977, c. 711, s. 21.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section provides a new term and more formality for our former "capias." Other than the change in the name, which substitutes English for Latin and should lend clarity, the most striking provision is the statutory requirement that the cause for the issuance of the process be stated. Some "capias" forms already follow this practice. It was felt that in addition to limiting issuance to proper circumstances, this device leads to more ready compliance by the person to be taken into custody. The format would follow that of the summons and the warrant for arrest, both of which contain a statement of the crime (for which we here substitute "cause for arrest") followed by an order. The following is a suggested format for the body of the process:

"CAUSE FOR ARREST OF John Doe
The person named above having been charged with the crime of embezzlement and having been released on his own recognizance to appear at the July 14, 1975, Session of the Superior Court of Wake County, failed to appear.
ORDER: You are commanded to arrest the person named above and bring him before this session of this court. Should you be unable to execute this process before the end of this session, you are directed to:
X secure his/her appearance at the next session by taking bail in the sum of $5,000.00, or in default thereof, by committing him/her to the county jail of this county.
commit him/her to the county jail of this county to be held without bail."

CASE NOTES

Order of Arrest Referring to Attached Affidavit or Complaint. — When the order of arrest referred to attached affidavit or complaint, the affidavit or complaint became a part of the warrant of arrest. State v. Teasley, 9 N.C. App. 477, 176 S.E.2d 838, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 459, 177 S.E.2d 900 (1970), decided under prior law.

New Bond. — Additional $30,000 bond and second arrest order that were issued after defendant had been released on $1,000 bond were not improper as the additional bond was not a modification to the prior bond, but was a new bond for a new felony indictment. State v. Hunt, 123 N.C. App. 762, 475 S.E.2d 722 (1996).

SUBCHAPTER IV. ARREST.

Article 20.

Arrest.

§ 15A-401. Arrest by law-enforcement officer.

(a) Arrest by Officer Pursuant to a Warrant. —

(1) Warrant in Possession of Officer. — An officer having a warrant for arrest in his possession may arrest the person named or described therein at any time and at any place within the officer's territorial jurisdiction.

(2) Warrant Not in Possession of Officer. — An officer who has knowledge that a warrant for arrest has been issued and has not been executed, but who does not have the warrant in his possession, may arrest the person named therein at any time. The officer must inform the person arrested that the warrant has been issued and serve the warrant upon him as soon as possible. This subdivision applies even though the arrest process has been returned to the clerk under G.S. 15A-301.

(b) Arrest by Officer Without a Warrant. —

(1) Offense in Presence of Officer. — An officer may arrest without a warrant any person who the officer has probable cause to believe has committed a criminal offense in the officer's presence.

(2) Offense Out of Presence of Officer. — An officer may arrest without a warrant any person who the officer has probable cause to believe:

a. Has committed a felony; or

b. Has committed a misdemeanor, and:

1. Will not be apprehended unless immediately arrested, or

2. May cause physical injury to himself or others, or damage to property unless immediately arrested; or

c. Has committed a misdemeanor under G.S. 14-72.1, 14-134.3, 20-138.1, or 20-138.2; or

d. Has committed a misdemeanor under G.S. 14-33(a), 14-33(c)(1), 14-33(c)(2), or 14-34 when the offense was committed by a person with whom the alleged victim has a personal relationship as defined in G.S. 50B-1; or

e. Has committed a misdemeanor under G.S. 50B-4.1(a).

(3) Repealed by Session Laws 1991, c. 150.

(c) How Arrest Made. —

(1) An arrest is complete when:

a. The person submits to the control of the arresting officer who has indicated his intention to arrest, or

b. The arresting officer, with intent to make an arrest, takes a person into custody by the use of physical force.

(2) Upon making an arrest, a law-enforcement officer must:

a. Identify himself as a law-enforcement officer unless his identity is otherwise apparent,

b. Inform the arrested person that he is under arrest, and

c. As promptly as is reasonable under the circumstances, inform the arrested person of the cause of the arrest, unless the cause appears to be evident.

(d) Use of Force in Arrest. —

(1) Subject to the provisions of subdivision (2), a law-enforcement officer is justified in using force upon another person when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary:

a. To prevent the escape from custody or to effect an arrest of a person who he reasonably believes has committed a criminal offense, unless he knows that the arrest is unauthorized; or

b. To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of physical force while effecting or attempting to effect an arrest or while preventing or attempting to prevent an escape.

(2) A law-enforcement officer is justified in using deadly physical force upon another person for a purpose specified in subdivision (1) of this subsection only when it is or appears to be reasonably necessary thereby:

a. To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force;

b. To effect an arrest or to prevent the escape from custody of a person who he reasonably believes is attempting to escape by means of a deadly weapon, or who by his conduct or any other means indicates that he presents an imminent threat of death or serious physical injury to others unless apprehended without delay; or

c. To prevent the escape of a person from custody imposed upon him as a result of conviction for a felony.

Nothing in this subdivision constitutes justification for willful, malicious or criminally negligent conduct by any person which injures or endangers any person or property, nor shall it be construed to excuse or justify the use of unreasonable or excessive force.

(e) Entry on Private Premises or Vehicle; Use of Force. —

(1) A law-enforcement officer may enter private premises or a vehicle to effect an arrest when:

a. The officer has in his possession a warrant or order or a copy of the warrant or order for the arrest of a person, provided that an officer may utilize a copy of a warrant or order only if the original warrant or order is in the possession of a member of a law enforcement agency located in the county where the officer is employed and the officer verifies with the agency that the warrant is current and valid; or the officer is authorized to arrest a person without a warrant or order having been issued,

b. The officer has reasonable cause to believe the person to be arrested is present, and

c. The officer has given, or made reasonable effort to give, notice of his authority and purpose to an occupant thereof, unless there is reasonable cause to believe that the giving of such notice would present a clear danger to human life.

(2) The law-enforcement officer may use force to enter the premises or vehicle if he reasonably believes that admittance is being denied or unreasonably delayed, or if he is authorized under subsection (e)(1)c to enter without giving notice of his authority and purpose.

(f) Use of Deadly Weapon or Deadly Force to Resist Arrest. —

(1) A person is not justified in using a deadly weapon or deadly force to resist an arrest by a law-enforcement officer using reasonable force, when the person knows or has reason to know that the officer is a law-enforcement officer and that the officer is effecting or attempting to effect an arrest.

(2) The fact that the arrest was not authorized under this section is no defense to an otherwise valid criminal charge arising out of the use of such deadly weapon or deadly force.

(3) Nothing contained in this subsection (f) shall be construed to excuse or justify the unreasonable or excessive force by an officer in effecting an arrest. Nothing contained in this subsection (f) shall be construed to bar or limit any civil action arising out of an arrest not authorized by this Article. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 1, ss. 3, 5; Code, ss. 1126, 1128; Rev., ss. 3178, 3180; C.S., ss. 4544, 4546; 1955, c. 58; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1979, c. 561, s. 3; c. 725, s. 4; 1983, c. 762, s. 1; 1985, c. 548; 1991, c. 150, s. 1; 1995, c. 506, s. 10; 1997-456, s. 3; 1999-23, s. 7; 1999-399, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

(a) Arrest by law-enforcement officer. As has been true, a law-enforcement officer may arrest at any place with an arrest warrant in his possession. The former rule is modified by providing that when an officer knows that there is a warrant but does not have it in his possession, the officer is permitted to arrest pursuant to the warrant and serve the warrant as soon as possible.

(b) Arrest by officer without warrant. In addition to the usual authorization to arrest without a warrant for crimes committed in his presence, the officer is given broadened authority to arrest for crimes committed out of his presence when he has probable cause to make the arrest. North Carolina law has limited arrest without a warrant for crimes not committed in the presence of the officer to felonies, when there is reasonable ground to believe that the person will evade arrest if not immediately taken into custody. Here the authority is broadened, as is the case in a number of other states, to include felonies generally and misdemeanors when there exists one of the "emergency" situations of danger of escape or danger of injury or property damage.

In connection with this expanded arrest authority, it should be noted that "peace warrant" provisions have been repealed and a new crime of "communicating threats" has been created in § 14-277.1. This combination should be more effective in dealing with situations in which peace warrants have been used.

(c) How arrest made. For convenience the existing law of North Carolina as to when an arrest is complete is codified and states more fully the requirements for notification to the person arrested (compare the former § 15-47).

(d) Use of force in arrest. This section codifies an area not heretofore mentioned in our statutes. While the officer is authorized to use force to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary to effect an arrest, prevent an escape, or defend himself or another from imminent physical force, the authorization to utilize deadly force is substantially more limited. That force is permitted only in the defense situation or when necessary to prevent the risk of death or serious physical injury to others, made manifest by the use of a deadly weapon or other conduct or means, or to prevent the escape of a convicted felon.

It should be noted that the last paragraph makes it clear that the law-enforcement officer cannot act with indifference to the safety of others in the use of force. Shooting into a crowded street would be an obvious example of criminally negligent conduct, and this section would not justify such action.

(e) Entry on private premises or vehicle; use of force. In State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), the court said: "In North Carolina, under G.S. 15-44, even where there is reasonable ground to believe that a person guilty of a felony is concealed in a house, there exists no right, in the absence of special and emergency circumstances, to break into the house and arrest the person unless and until admittance has been demanded and denied." This statute codifies that idea and states that the emergency which will justify the omission of the demand is that which presents clear danger to human life. Subdivision (2) provides that the officer may use force concomitant with his right to enter.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Whether an arrest warrant must be obtained is determined by State law. State v. Wooten, 34 N.C. App. 85, 237 S.E.2d 301 (1977).

Formal declaration of arrest by the officer is not a prerequisite to the making of an arrest. State v. Tippett, 270 N.C. 588, 155 S.E.2d 269 (1967).

Burden on State to Show Legality of Arrest. — It was incumbent upon the State to satisfy the jury from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant committed a crime in the presence of the officer, or that the officer had reasonable grounds to believe the defendant had done so, in order to establish the authority and duty of the officer to make the arrest without a warrant. State v. Fenner, 263 N.C. 694, 140 S.E.2d 349 (1965).

Officer's Statement as to Whether Defendant Under Arrest. — Just as a formal declaration of arrest is not essential to the making of an arrest, an officer's statement that a defendant was or was not under arrest is not conclusive. When a law-enforcement officer, by word or actions, indicates that an individual must remain in the officer's presence or come to the police station against his will, the person is for all practical purposes under arrest if there is a substantial imposition of the officer's will over the person's liberty. State v. Sanders, 295 N.C. 361, 245 S.E.2d 674 (1978), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 973, 102 S. Ct. 523, 70 L. Ed. 2d 392 (1981).

Custody Tantamount to Arrest for Search Purposes. — A finding and conclusion that defendant was taken into custody is tantamount to finding and concluding that defendant was under arrest at the time of a search. State v. Jackson, 11 N.C. App. 682, 182 S.E.2d 271, aff'd, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971).

It was not necessary to read defendant the Miranda rights in order to make lawful arrest, where defendant was advised by the arresting officers that he was being arrested on a charge of rape in compliance with subdivision (c)(2)c. State v. Kinch, 314 N.C. 99, 331 S.E.2d 665 (1985).

For purposes of a false arrest tort action under State law, the existence of legal justification for a deprivation of liberty is determined in accordance with this section; thus, it is possible, in some instances, for an arrest to be constitutionally valid and yet illegal under State law. Myrick v. Cooley, 91 N.C. App. 209, 371 S.E.2d 492, petition denied as to additional issues, 323 N.C. 477, 373 S.E.2d 865 (1988).

Civil Liability of Arresting Officer for Mistaken Identity. — As to the civil liability for false imprisonment of an arresting officer, acting under a valid arrest warrant, who arrests the wrong person because of a mistake in the identity of the person arrested, see Robinson v. City of Winston-Salem, 34 N.C. App. 401, 238 S.E.2d 628 (1977).

Conviction Establishes Existence of Probable Cause. — In the absence of a showing that the district court's conviction of the defendant for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest was obtained improperly, the conviction establishes, as a matter of law, the existence of probable cause for his arrest and defeated both his federal and State claims for false arrest or imprisonment, even though on appeal to the superior court the disorderly conduct and resisting arrest charges were dismissed at the close of the State's evidence. Myrick v. Cooley, 91 N.C. App. 209, 371 S.E.2d 492, petition denied as to additional issues, 323 N.C. 477, 373 S.E.2d 865 (1988).

Search and Seizure Upheld. — Where officers were lawfully on the premises pursuant to a valid search warrant, and were authorized under § 15A-256 to initially detain defendant in house, their discovery of a packet of cocaine which fell out of defendant's clothing was the result of their lawful detention and the seizure of that packet was authorized under the "plain view" doctrine. Moreover, once this packet had been discovered, the officers had probable cause to arrest defendant without benefit of a warrant under subsection (b) of this section, and thus, second packet of cocaine found as a result of a search incident to defendant's arrest was properly seized and admissible at trial. State v. Patrick, 88 N.C. App. 582, 364 S.E.2d 450 (1988).

Applied in State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 237, 229 S.E.2d 63 (1976); Autry v. Mitchell, 420 F. Supp. 967 (E.D.N.C. 1976); In re Johnson, 32 N.C. App. 492, 232 S.E.2d 486 (1977); State v. Bradley, 32 N.C. App. 666, 233 S.E.2d 603 (1977); In re Jacobs, 33 N.C. App. 195, 234 S.E.2d 639 (1977); State v. Cunningham, 34 N.C. App. 72, 237 S.E.2d 334 (1977); State v. Thompson, 37 N.C. App. 628, 246 S.E.2d 827 (1978); State v. Allison, 298 N.C. 135, 257 S.E.2d 417 (1979); State v. Whitehead, 42 N.C. App. 506, 257 S.E.2d 131 (1979); State v. Collins, 44 N.C. II. WARRANT NOT IN POSSESSION OF OFFICER.

Probable Cause Exists When Officer Has Personal Knowledge of Warrant. — Probable cause to believe that the person has committed a felony exists without question where the officer has personal knowledge that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of such person, which warrant charges a felony. State v. Denton, 17 N.C. App. 684, 195 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 586, 196 S.E.2d 810 (1973).

Service of Warrants After Request for Attorney. — When a defendant is arrested pursuant to an arrest warrant, subdivision (a)(2) of this section requires the arrest warrant to be served upon the defendant as soon as possible. The fact that delivery and reading of warrants was made after defendant's request for an attorney did not alter the routineness of such delivery, nor did it constitute the initiation of questioning. State v. Underwood, 84 N.C. App. 408, 352 S.E.2d 898 (1987), overruled on other grounds, State v. Thompson, 328 N.C. 477, 402 S.E.2d 386 (1991).

Defendant was not guilty of resisting arrest by closing his door to officers who were arresting him on a civil warrant which was not in their possession, and they entered his home illegally to arrest him. State v. Hewson, 88 N.C. App. 128, 362 S.E.2d 574 (1987).

III. ARREST WITHOUT WARRANT.

A. In General.

Constitution does not dictate circumstances under which arrest warrants are required. Whether an arrest warrant must be obtained is determined by State law alone. Likewise, State law alone determines the sanction to be applied for failure to obtain an arrest warrant where one is required. State v. Eubanks, 283 N.C. 556, 196 S.E.2d 706 (1973).

Power of arrest without warrant is defined and limited entirely by legislative enactments in this State. And the rule is that where the right and power of arrest without warrant is regulated by statute, an arrest without warrant except as authorized by statute is illegal. State v. Mobley, 240 N.C. 476, 83 S.E.2d 100 (1954).

Subsection (b) broadened the authority of a law-enforcement officer to make a warrantless arrest for crimes not committed in his presence. In re Gardner, 39 N.C. App. 567, 251 S.E.2d 723 (1979).

Former Law Compared. — Prior to this section North Carolina law limited arrest without a warrant for crimes not committed in the presence of the officer to felonies, when there was reasonable ground to believe that the person will evade arrest if not immediately taken into custody. This section broadens the authority to arrest for crimes committed out of an officer's presence to include felonies generally and misdemeanors when the officer has probable cause to believe the person (1) has committed a misdemeanor and (2) will not be apprehended unless immediately arrested, or may cause physical injury to himself or others, or damage to property unless immediately arrested. In re Pinyatello, 36 N.C. App. 542, 245 S.E.2d 185 (1978).

Statute Applies Only to State Officers. — The statute governing arrests without warrant applies only to peace officers of the State and in the enforcement of the State law, and does not affect the conduct or powers of federal officers unless the principles therein are extended to such officers by a federal statute, when in the enforcement of a valid federal law. State v. Burnett, 183 N.C. 703, 110 S.E. 588 (1922).

Superintendent of a convict gang was not such an officer as was contemplated by the statute, relating to arrest without warrant. State v. Stancill, 128 N.C. 606, 38 S.E. 926 (1901).

Arrest without warrant except as authorized by statute is illegal. State v. Moore, 275 N.C. 141, 166 S.E.2d 53 (1969); State v. Jacobs, 277 N.C. 151, 176 S.E.2d 744 (1970); State v. Harris, 9 N.C. App. 649, 177 S.E.2d 445 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Cooper, 17 N.C. App. 184, 193 S.E.2d 352 (1972); State v. Denton, 17 N.C. App. 684, 195 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 586, 196 S.E.2d 810 (1973); State v. Little, 27 N.C. App. 54, 218 S.E.2d 184, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 347 (1975); State v. Small, 293 N.C. 646, 239 S.E.2d 429 (1977).

Where the right and power of arrest without warrant is regulated by statute, an arrest without warrant except as authorized by statute is illegal. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Statute Not Intended to Legalize Warrantless Entry. — The statute was never intended to legalize a warrantless entry upon premises which could not otherwise be lawfully entered except under authority of a valid warrant. State v. Miller, 16 N.C. App. 1, 190 S.E.2d 888 (1972), modified, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973).

Information Must Be Sufficient to Have Required Issuance of Warrant. — One does not have probable cause unless he has information of facts which, if submitted to a magistrate, would require the issuance of an arrest warrant. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Alexander, 279 N.C. 527, 184 S.E.2d 274 (1971); State v. Cooper, 17 N.C. App. 184, 193 S.E.2d 352 (1972); State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980).

"Probable Cause" Defined. — Probable cause exists if the facts and circumstances known to the officer warrant a prudent man in believing that the offense has been committed. State v. Harris, 9 N.C. App. 649, 177 S.E.2d 445 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

Probable cause for an arrest has been defined to be a reasonable ground of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious man in believing the accused to be guilty. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Alexander, 279 N.C. 527, 184 S.E.2d 274 (1971); State v. Cooper, 17 N.C. App. 184, 193 S.E.2d 352 (1972); State v. Shore, 285 N.C. 328, 204 S.E.2d 682 (1974); State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1050, 97 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 2d 766, 429 U.S. 1123, 97 S. Ct. 1160, 51 L. Ed. 2d 573 (1977); State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980); State v. Thompson, 313 N.C. 157, 326 S.E.2d 19 (1985); State v. Adkerson, 90 N.C. App. 333, 368 S.E.2d 434 (1988); State v. Hoskins, 36 N.C. App. 92, 242 S.E.2d 900, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 469, 246 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

An arrest without a warrant is based upon probable cause if the facts and circumstances known to the arresting officer warrant a prudent man in believing that a felony has been committed and the person to be arrested is the felon. State v. Alexander, 279 N.C. 527, 184 S.E.2d 274 (1971); State v. Shore, 285 N.C. 328, 204 S.E.2d 682 (1974); State v. Campbell, 30 N.C. App. 652, 228 S.E.2d 52, appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 324, 230 S.E.2d 677 (1976); State v. Rudolph, 39 N.C. App. 293, 250 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 179, 254 S.E.2d 40 (1979); State v. Patrick, 88 N.C. App. 582, 364 S.E.2d 450 (1988).

A warrantless arrest is based on probable cause if the facts and circumstances known to the arresting officer warrant a prudent man in believing that a felony has been committed and the person to be arrested is the felon. The standard is the same as that required by the United States Constitution. State v. Mathis, 295 N.C. 623, 247 S.E.2d 919 (1978).

Whether probable cause exists depends upon whether at that moment the facts and circumstances within the officer's knowledge and of which he has reasonably trustworthy information are sufficient to warrant a prudent man in believing that the suspect has committed or is committing an offense. State v. Matthews, 40 N.C. App. 41, 251 S.E.2d 897 (1979).

Existence of probable cause depends upon whether at the time of the arrest there were facts and circumstances within the knowledge of the arresting officer which would justify a prudent man's belief that a suspect had committed an offense. State v. Rinck, 303 N.C. 551, 280 S.E.2d 912 (1981).

One does not have probable cause unless he has information of facts which, if submitted to a magistrate, would require the issuance of an arrest warrant. State v. Thompson, 313 N.C. 157, 326 S.E.2d 19 (1985).

"Probable cause" and "reasonable ground to believe" are substantially equivalent terms. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Cooper, 17 N.C. App. 184, 193 S.E.2d 352 (1972); State v. Hardy, 31 N.C. App. 67, 228 S.E.2d 487 (1976), appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 713, 232 S.E.2d 202 (1977); State v. Small, 293 N.C. 646, 239 S.E.2d 429 (1977); In re Gardner, 39 N.C. App. 567, 251 S.E.2d 723 (1979); State v. Matthews, 40 N.C. App. 41, 251 S.E.2d 897 (1979).

"Reasonable ground" and "probable cause" are basically equivalent terms with similar meanings. State v. Young, 27 N.C. App. 308, 219 S.E.2d 261 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 455, 223 S.E.2d 164 (1976).

Existence of probable cause is a pragmatic question to be determined in each case in the light of the particular circumstances and the particular offense involved. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Cooper, 17 N.C. App. 184, 193 S.E.2d 352 (1972); State v. Young, 27 N.C. App. 308, 219 S.E.2d 261 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 455, 223 S.E.2d 164 (1976); State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980); State v. Thompson, 313 N.C. 157, 326 S.E.2d 19 (1985); State v. Patrick, 88 N.C. App. 582, 364 S.E.2d 450 (1988); State v. Adkerson, 90 N.C. App. 333, 368 S.E.2d 434 (1988).

And Is Determined by Factual and Practical Considerations. — The existence of probable cause justifying an arrest without a warrant is determined by factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent men, not legal technicians, act. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Gibson, 15 N.C. App. 445, 190 S.E.2d 315 (1972); State v. Cooper, 17 N.C. App. 184, 193 S.E.2d 352 (1972); State v. Young, 27 N.C. App. 308, 219 S.E.2d 261 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 455, 223 S.E.2d 164 (1976); State v. Small, 293 N.C. 646, 239 S.E.2d 429 (1977); In re Gardner, 39 N.C. App. 567, 251 S.E.2d 723 (1979); State v. Thompson, 313 N.C. 157, 326 S.E.2d 19 (1985).

To establish probable cause, the evidence need not amount to proof of guilt, or even to prima facie evidence of guilt, but it must be such as would actuate a reasonable man acting in good faith. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971); State v. Alexander, 279 N.C. 527, 184 S.E.2d 274 (1971); State v. Cooper, 17 N.C. App. 184, 193 S.E.2d 352 (1972); State v. Shore, 285 N.C. 328, 204 S.E.2d 682 (1974); State v. Young, 27 N.C. App. 308, 219 S.E.2d 261 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 455, 223 S.E.2d 164 (1976); State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1050, 97 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 2d 766, 429 U.S. 1123, 97 S. Ct. 1160, 51 L. Ed. 2d 573 (1977); State v. Small, 293 N.C. 646, 239 S.E.2d 429 (1977); State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980); State v. Hart, 64 N.C. App. 699, 308 S.E.2d 474 (1983); State v. Thompson, 313 N.C. 157, 326 S.E.2d 19 (1985).

Proof of Actual Commission of Crime Not Necessary. — A peace officer may justify an arrest without a warrant when he shows satisfactory reasons for his belief of the fact and the guilt of the suspected party, and that delay in procuring a warrant might enable the party to escape. In such case, proof of actual commission of the crime is not necessary. Neal v. Joyner, 89 N.C. 287 (1883).

Same — Verdict of Not Guilty Not Tantamount to Finding of No Reasonable Grounds. — Verdict of not guilty of the misdemeanor for which defendant was arrested was not tantamount to a finding that the arresting officer did not have reasonable grounds to believe that defendant had committed such offense in his presence and that defendant therefore could lawfully resist the arrest. State v. Jefferies, 17 N.C. App. 195, 193 S.E.2d 388 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 153 (1973).

The failure of the State to satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt of the offense charged is a far cry from a failure to satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the arresting officer had reasonable ground to believe defendant had committed the offense in the officer's presence. In order to justify an officer in making an arrest without a warrant, it is not essential that the offense be shown to have been actually committed. It is only necessary that the officer have reasonable ground to believe such offense has been committed. State v. Jefferies, 17 N.C. App. 195, 193 S.E.2d 388 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 153 (1973).

Same — Question for Jury. — The reasonableness of the officer's grounds to believe the defendant had committed a misdemeanor in the officer's presence, when properly raised, is a factual question to be decided by the jury. State v. Jefferies, 17 N.C. App. 195, 193 S.E.2d 388

(1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 673, 194 S.E.2d 153 (1973).

Only Reasonable Ground for Belief Need Be Shown. — In order to justify an arrest without warrant, it is not required that a felony be shown actually to have been committed; it is only necessary that the officer have reasonable ground to believe that such an offense has been committed. State v. Alexander, 279 N.C. 527, 184 S.E.2d 274 (1971); State v. Shore, 285 N.C. 328, 204 S.E.2d 682 (1974); State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1050, 97 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 2d 766, 429 U.S. 1123, 97 S. Ct. 1160, 51 L. Ed. 2d 573 (1977).

An officer need not show that a felony has actually been committed. It is only necessary for the officer to have reasonable ground to believe that such an offense has been committed. State v. Campbell, 30 N.C. App. 652, 228 S.E.2d 52, appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 324, 230 S.E.2d 677 (1976).

Totality of Circumstances Considered. — The basis of reasonable ground for belief that felony has been committed is drawn from the totality of facts and circumstances surrounding the arrest, known to the officers. State v. Little, 27 N.C. App. 54, 218 S.E.2d 184, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 512, 219 S.E.2d 347 (1975).

Description as Furnishing Reasonable Ground for Belief. — A description of either a person or an automobile furnishes reasonable ground for arresting and detaining a criminal suspect. State v. Jacobs, 277 N.C. 151, 176 S.E.2d 744 (1970).

A description of an assailant's physical characteristics and his clothing may supply reasonable grounds for believing that he had committed a felony. State v. Dickens, 278 N.C. 537, 180 S.E.2d 844 (1971).

Evidence That Person May Injure Self or Others. — The same evidence that provides probable cause for a belief that a misdemeanor had been committed is sufficient to provide probable cause to believe that defendant might injure himself or others if allowed to leave the police station at that time. State v. Matthews, 40 N.C. App. 41, 251 S.E.2d 897 (1979).

When Flight May Be Considered in Assessing Probable Cause. — Flight is a strong indicia of mens rea, and when coupled with other relevant facts or the specific knowledge on the part of the arresting officer relating the subject to the evidence of the crime, it may properly be considered in assessing probable cause. State v. Williams, 32 N.C. App. 204, 231 S.E.2d 282, appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 470, 233 S.E.2d 924 (1977).

Flight from unlawful arrest cannot be added to other relevant facts to give the officer probable cause for making a warrantless arrest. State v. Williams, 32 N.C. App. 204, 231 S.E.2d 282, appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 470, 233 S.E.2d 924 (1977).

Likelihood of Escape. — The likelihood of evasion of arrest, frequently referred to as the likelihood of escape, by the person to be arrested is not a factor to be considered in determining the right of a police officer to arrest without a warrant when the offense, felony or misdemeanor, has been committed in the presence of the officer, or when the officer has reasonable ground to believe that the offense has been committed in his presence by the person to be arrested. State v. Roberts, 276 N.C. 98, 171 S.E.2d 440 (1970).

Same — Factors Considered. — In determining whether officers had reasonable grounds to believe that the defendant would evade arrest if not taken into immediate custody, the nature of the felony, the hour of the day or night, the character and reputation of the neighborhood where the arrest was made, the number of suspects, and of the officers available for assistance, and the likely consequences of the officers' failure to act promptly must necessarily be taken into consideration. State v. Roberts, 6 N.C. App. 312, 170 S.E.2d 193 (1969), aff'd, 276 N.C. 98, 171 S.E.2d 440 (1970); State v. Kennon, 20 N.C. App. 195, 201 S.E.2d 80 (1973).

Factual Findings on Issue of Probable Cause. — In determining whether probable cause exists in any particular case, it is the function of the trial court, if there be conflicting evidence, to find the relevant facts. Such factual findings, if supported by competent evidence, are binding on appeal. However, whether the facts so found by the trial court or shown by uncontradicted evidence are such as to establish probable cause in a particular case, is a question of law as to which the trial court's ruling may be reviewed on appeal. In re Gardner, 39 N.C. App. 567, 251 S.E.2d 723 (1979).

Arresting Officer May Act on Information Supplied by Others. — It is elemental that an arresting officer may act on information supplied by others relating that a felony has been committed and describing the suspected felon. Although the arresting officers may not have had personal knowledge of all the facts justifying arrest, probable cause can be imputed from one officer to others acting at his request. State v. Hart, 64 N.C. App. 699, 308 S.E.2d 474 (1983).

Information from Reliable Informant. — Where an informant is reliable, probable cause may be based upon information given to police by such informant. State v. Andrews, 52 N.C. App. 26, 277 S.E.2d 857 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 306 N.C. 144, 291 S.E.2d 581, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 946, 103 S. Ct. 263, 74 L. Ed. 2d 205 (1982).

Information Given Officer by Another. — Reasonable ground for belief, which is an element of the officer's right to arrest without a warrant, may be based upon information given to the officer by another, the source of such information being reasonably reliable. Upon this question it is immaterial that such information, being hearsay, is not, itself, competent in evidence at the trial of the person arrested. State v. Roberts, 276 N.C. 98, 171 S.E.2d 440 (1970); State v. McMillan, 19 N.C. App. 721, 200 S.E.2d 339 (1973); State v. Shore, 285 N.C. 328, 204 S.E.2d 682 (1974); State v. Hardy, 31 N.C. App. 67, 228 S.E.2d 487 (1976), appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 713, 232 S.E.2d 202 (1977).

Information given by one officer to another officer is reasonably reliable information to provide probable cause. State v. Matthews, 40 N.C. App. 41, 251 S.E.2d 897 (1979).

Reasonable grounds for belief can be based upon information given to an officer by another, the source of such information being reasonably reliable. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

Probable cause may be based upon information given to the officer by another, the source of such information being reasonably reliable. State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1050, 97 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 2d 766, 429 U.S. 1123, 97 S. Ct. 1160, 51 L. Ed. 2d 573 (1977); In re Gardner, 39 N.C. App. 567, 251 S.E.2d 723 (1979).

Knowledge of police officers that an informant had told one of them that he had heard defendant discuss a robbery gave them probable cause to believe defendant had committed a felony, and they could therefore arrest him without a warrant. State v. White, 68 N.C. App. 671, 316 S.E.2d 112 (1984).

Probable cause for arrest can be imputed from one officer to others acting at his request. The officers receiving the request are entitled to assume that the officer requesting aid had probable cause to believe that a crime had been committed. If the transmitting officer did not have probable cause, the arrest would be illegal. State v. Tilley, 44 N.C. App. 313, 260 S.E.2d 794 (1979).

Authority to Briefly Detain Citizens. — It is permissible for police officers to make, in the course of a routine investigation, a brief detention of citizens upon a reasonable suspicion that criminal activity has taken place. State v. Rudolph, 39 N.C. App. 293, 250 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 179, 254 S.E.2d 40 (1979).

A law officer may lawfully detain a person where there is a need for immediate action, if, upon personal observation or reliable information, he has an honest and reasonable suspicion that the suspect either has committed or is preparing to commit a crime. In re Horne, 50 N.C. App. 97, 272 S.E.2d 905 (1980).

Temporary Detention to Determine If Criminal Activity Is Afoot. — If, from the totality of circumstances, a law enforcement officer has reasonable grounds to believe that criminal activity may be afoot, he may temporarily detain an individual, and if upon detaining the individual, the officer's personal observations confirm that criminal activity may be afoot and suggest that the person detained may be armed, the officer may frisk him as a matter of self-protection. State v. Rinck, 303 N.C. 551, 280 S.E.2d 912 (1981).

When incriminating evidence comes to the officer's attention during detention, such evidence may establish a reasonable basis for finding the probable cause necessary for effecting a warrantless arrest. State v. Rudolph, 39 N.C. App. 293, 250 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 179, 254 S.E.2d 40 (1979).

Mistaken Arrest Excused If Officer Had Reasonable Belief. — In making an arrest upon personal observation and without a warrant an officer will be excused, though no offense was perpetrated, if the circumstances are such as to reasonably warrant the belief that it had been. State v. McNinch, 90 N.C. 695 (1884); State v. Campbell, 182 N.C. 911, 110 S.E. 86 (1921), aff'd, 262 U.S. 728, 43 S. Ct. 519, 67 L. Ed. 1203 (1923).

B. Illustrative Cases.

1. Offense in Presence of Officer.

Misdemeanor. — In contrast to the rule for searches, police generally need not obtain a warrant before arresting a person in a public place; an officer may make a warrantless arrest for a misdemeanor committed in his or her presence. State v. Brooks, 337 N.C. 132, 446 S.E.2d 579 (1994).

Violation of Motor Vehicle Act. — An officer has a right to make an arrest without a warrant if a violation of the Motor Vehicle Act is actually committed in his presence. State v. McCaskill, 270 N.C. 788, 154 S.E.2d 907 (1967).

If the officer saw the commission of a violation of the Motor Vehicle Act, a misdemeanor, he would have the right to enter the premises where the defendant lived in order to make an arrest without a warrant. State v. McCaskill, 270 N.C. 788, 154 S.E.2d 907 (1967).

Driving Motor Vehicle While Under Influence of Intoxicants. — A highway patrolman apprehending a person driving a motor vehicle on the public highway while under the influence of intoxicating liquor is authorized to arrest such person without a warrant, and such arrest is legal. State v. Broome, 269 N.C. 661, 153 S.E.2d 384 (1967).

The petitioner's driving privilege was properly revoked because of his unwillingness to take the breathalyzer test, whether or not his warrantless arrest was legal under this section, where the arrest was constitutionally valid by virtue of the fact that the arresting officer had ample information to provide him with probable cause to arrest the petitioner for operating a motor vehicle upon a public highway while under the influence of intoxicants. In re Gardner, 39 N.C. App. 567, 251 S.E.2d 723 (1979).

Before making the stop of a vehicle the arresting officer noticed defendant weaving back and forth and once running off the highway. After he made the stop, the officer noticed that defendant's eyes were extremely red and glassy and that he appeared to be in a daze. He stated that defendant moved sort of slowly and appeared to be nervous and in the officer's opinion he was not normal. Finally, the officer testified that he detected a moderate odor of alcohol about his breath. As a result probable cause existed for placing defendant under arrest for driving while impaired. State v. Adkerson, 90 N.C. App. 333, 368 S.E.2d 434 (1988).

Threats and Profane Language in Presence of Officer. — The evidence was sufficient to sustain the legality of defendant's arrest without a warrant for disorderly conduct, where, although the arresting officer did not quote the defendant's precise language to the jury, he did testify that the defendant was cursing and threatening a cab driver and that the threats and profane language were continued in the presence of the officer. State v. Raynor, 33 N.C. App. 698, 236 S.E.2d 307 (1977).

Trespass. — Sheriff may arrest anyone committing crime of trespass in his presence. State v. Brown, 264 N.C. 191, 141 S.E.2d 311 (1965).

As to window breaking, see State v. Gibson, 15 N.C. App. 445, 190 S.E.2d 315 (1972).

Carrying Concealed Weapon. — Where police officers stopped defendant's car to make a routine driver's license check and defendant removed revolver from a bag in the back seat, the police properly arrested him without a warrant inasmuch as they had reasonable ground to believe defendant was committing a misdemeanor, namely, carrying a concealed weapon in violation of § 14-269, in their presence. State v. White, 18 N.C. App. 31, 195 S.E.2d 576, appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 587, 196 S.E.2d 811 (1973).

Where a fully justified frisk by a police officer revealed that defendant was carrying a revolver, and the officer had probable cause to arrest him for carrying a concealed weapon in violation of § 14-269, at that point, the officer had absolute knowledge that defendant was violating the statute and that he was committing a misdemeanor in his presence. Thus, defendant's arrest for carrying a concealed weapon was not in violation of his constitutional rights, and the police officer did not exceed his authority nder State law to arrest without a warrant. State v. McZorn, 288 N.C. 417, 219 S.E.2d 201 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Possession of Heroin. — Once the arresting agent corroborated the description of the defendant provided by an informant by observing the defendant at the named location, the agent had reasonable grounds to believe the defendant was in possession of heroin, a felony, thereby committing an offense in the agent's presence, and creating probable cause to arrest. State v. Wooten, 34 N.C. App. 85, 237 S.E.2d 301 (1977).

Manufacture of Whiskey. — An alcoholic beverage control officer who saw defendant at a still unlawfully engaged in the manufacture of whiskey had a lawful right to arrest defendant there without a warrant. State v. Taft, 256 N.C. 441, 124 S.E.2d 169 (1962).

As to arrest of participants in indecent show, see Brewer v. Wynne, 163 N.C. 319, 79 S.E. 629 (1913).

Violation of Curfew. — The presence of the defendant and his driver upon the streets while curfew was in effect was a violation of an ordinance, and declared thereby to be a misdemeanor, unless they were traveling for an excepted purpose. The arresting officer having, at least, reasonable ground to believe that the defendant had committed a misdemeanor in his presence, the arrest without a warrant was lawful. State v. Dobbins, 277 N.C. 484, 178 S.E.2d 449 (1971).

Use of Body-Bug Transmitter. — Knowledge of an offense acquired through officer's sense of hearing as he monitored conversations and a drug transaction through body-bug transmitter worn by informant held to have occurred in presence of the officer. State v. Narcisse, 90 N.C. App. 414, 368 S.E.2d 654, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 368, 373 S.E.2d 553 (1988).

Where detective had given informant money to make drug purchase from defendant, he listened to the drug purchase transaction take place through the use of a body-bug transmitter worn by informant, and immediately following the transaction, informant delivered the drugs to the officer and gave him a detailed account of the transaction, the officer had probable cause to believe that defendant had committed a felony. State v. Narcisse, 90 N.C. App. 414, 368 S.E.2d 654, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 368, 373 S.E.2d 553 (1988).

2. Offense Out of Presence of Officer.

Investigatory Stop Justified. — Circumstances known to police officers when they stopped defendant's car created a reasonable suspicion of criminal activity, thus justifying a brief investigatory stop. State v. Williams, 87 N.C. App. 261, 360 S.E.2d 500 (1987).

Drunken Driving. — Where, based upon his own observation, officer had probable cause to believe that defendant was intoxicated, and based upon statement of security guard, officer also had probable cause to believe that defendant had driven in that intoxicated state, and further, as defendant's car was nearby, knowing that defendant had come and gone once already, the officer had probable cause to believe that defendant would get back in his car and drive in an intoxicated condition, defendant's arrest was entirely proper and legal. State v. White, 84 N.C. App. 111, 351 S.E.2d 828, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 227, 353 S.E.2d 404, appeal dismissed, 319 N.C. 409, 354 S.E.2d 887 (1987).

Deputy had authority to arrest defendant without a warrant where the deputy was alone at the scene, and there was no evidence that the intoxicated driver's car was inoperable, giving the deputy probable cause to believe the driver may cause injury to himself or others. State v. Crawford, 125 N.C. App. 279, 480 S.E.2d 422 (1997).

Manslaughter. — Probable cause to believe defendant had committed the felony of manslaughter was present where, through his investigation, the officer had reasonable cause to believe the defendant had driven his vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and that he had driven his vehicle across the median of the highway, struck one vehicle and crashed into a second vehicle, killing the two occupants. State v. Stewardson, 32 N.C. App. 344, 232 S.E.2d 308, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 64 (1977).

Robbery. — Where arresting officer knew that a robbery had been committed by one who had fled and had a general description of the felon, and his clothing and injury, and defendant was found at the location described in the officer's information and had property on his person similar to that taken in the robbery, such information in possession of the officers was amply sufficient to authorize the arrest without a warrant. State v. Grier, 268 N.C. 296, 150 S.E.2d 443 (1966); State v. Dickens, 278 N.C. 537, 180 S.E.2d 844 (1971).

Where the police officer first saw defendant on a bank near a wooded area, defendant matched the general description the officer had received of a robbery suspect, defendant's appearance gave rise to a reasonable inference that he had been through a wooded area, and the officer was aware that suspects in the robbery had escaped into woods less than one mile from the spot the officer was patrolling, the officer had probable cause to believe that a felony had been committed and that defendant had committed it. Defendant's arrest was therefore legal under subsection (b)(2) of this section. State v. Mathis, 295 N.C. 623, 247 S.E.2d 919 (1978).

When police officers stopped an automobile fitting the description of one used in conjunction with a robbery and observed a pistol on the seat of the automobile, they had reasonable ground to believe that defendant had committed a felony and would evade arrest if not taken into custody. State v. Bell, 270 N.C. 25, 153 S.E.2d 741 (1967); State v. Dickens, 278 N.C. 537, 180 S.E.2d 844 (1971).

Where the police had a description of defendants, including their height, weight, estimated age, clothing, color and complexion, one defendant had been identified from photographs by two eyewitnesses and one informer, a second informer whose information had led to the conviction of seven persons within the past two years, had told police that defendants were the individuals involved in this robbery, had told police how he came into possession of this information and how it was revealed to him, the totality of these facts and circumstances would warrant a prudent man in believing that the felony of armed robbery had been committed and that these defendants participated in commission of the crime, the Supreme Court held that the officers acted on reasonable grounds and with probable cause. State v. Alexander, 279 N.C. 527, 184 S.E.2d 274 (1971).

Where although the officer had not personally participated in investigation of the robbery for which defendant was arrested, but the record showed that at the time he made the arrest he knew that defendant had been identified from a photograph by one of the eyewitnesses as the man who was involved in the robbery, the arresting officer had probable cause to believe defendant had committed a felony. State v. McDonald, 32 N.C. App. 457, 232 S.E.2d 467, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 469, 233 S.E.2d 925 (1977).

When the victim in an assault and robbery charge pointed out the defendant to an officer as being one of his assailants, the officer not only had the right but the duty to arrest the defendant. State v. Grant, 248 N.C. 341, 103 S.E.2d 339 (1958).

Where the victim of a robbery gave officers a description of the men who robbed him and the vehicle in which they were riding, and where on the same night men fitting the description given the officers and riding in a vehicle similar to the one described to the officers were apprehended and arrested by the officers, the Supreme Court held that the officers had ample evidence of probable cause to authorize the making of the arrest. State v. Jacobs, 277 N.C. 151, 176 S.E.2d 744 (1970).

Discovery by police of a bag of money, together with previous observations of the defendants and a defendant's resulting flight gave officers sufficient probable cause to believe that a felony had been committed and subsequently to place all three defendants under arrest without a warrant. State v. Allen, 15 N.C. App. 670, 190 S.E.2d 714 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 503, 194 S.E.2d 9 (1973).

Where defendant was in an automobile traveling away from the scene of the crime, the arresting officers were warranted in the belief that the defendant would not be apprehended unless immediately arrested. Thus, in arresting the defendant without a warrant for a misdemeanor offense not committed in their presence, the arresting officers complied with subsection (b) of this section, and the arrest was both constitutionally valid and legal. State v. Tilley, 44 N.C. App. 313, 260 S.E.2d 794 (1979).

Breaking and Entering. — Where a felonious breaking and entering and a felonious larceny had occurred, and footprints led from the scene of the felonies to a wooded area, and the stolen items were found in that wooded area, and later the police saw a person enter that area and look around, then the police had reasonable ground upon which to believe that person had committed the two felonies; that he would evade arrest if not immediately taken into custody; and thus the search of his person (which produced positive evidence of his guilt) was legal. State v. Harris, 279 N.C. 307, 182 S.E.2d 364 (1971).

An arrest without warrant was upheld when the evidence disclosed that the officer had information that the felony of breaking and entering had been committed, and the defendants fitted the description of the perpetrators of the crimes. State v. Roberts, 6 N.C. App. 312, 170 S.E.2d 193 (1969), aff'd, 276 N.C. 98, 171 S.E.2d 440 (1970).

Possession of Illegal Drugs. — The warrantless arrest of a defendant for the felonious possession of LSD and the subsequent warrantless searches of his person were held lawful, where (1) the arresting officer received information from a reliable informant that two unknown persons, accompanied by the defendant, were on a certain street and that the two unknown persons had narcotic drugs in their possession; (2) the officer briefly observed the three suspects walking on the sidewalk; (3) the officer arrested the defendant on the street for the possession of narcotic drugs, but the search of defendant's person at that time uncovered no drugs; and (4) a subsequent "strip search" at the police station resulted in the finding of LSD tablets in defendant's clothing. State v. Parker, 11 N.C. App. 648, 182 S.E.2d 264, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 396, 183 S.E.2d 247 (1971).

Sale of Illegal Drugs. — Where the officer received information from an informant of known reliability that a described person was at that time at a particular location engaged in selling LSD, went to the scene accompanied by another officer and found the defendant, dressed in the manner described by the second informant, observed the defendant for several minutes, during which time his actions were consistent with the activity of selling LSD, and where, when the officers approached, defendant started walking rapidly away, the officer's own observations and defendant's activities in the officer's presence served to verify the information furnished by the reliable informant, and thus, it was lawful for the officer to effect a warrantless arrest. State v. Hardy, 31 N.C. App. 67, 228 S.E.2d 487 (1976), appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 713, 232 S.E.2d 202 (1977).

Possession of Heroin for Purpose of Sale. — A police officer had reasonable grounds to arrest defendant without a warrant for the felony of possessing heroin for purpose of sale, where a person suffering from a narcotics overdose told the officer that the defendant had administered hypodermically narcotic drugs to him and that the defendant had narcotic drugs on his person. State v. Jackson, 11 N.C. App. 682, 182 S.E.2d 271, aff'd, 280 N.C. 122, 185 S.E.2d 202 (1971).

Rearrest of Escaped Convict. — An escaped convict may be rearrested in any county of the State without new process, by the officer in charge of him, to compel him to complete the service of the sentence imposed by the court. State v. Finch, 177 N.C. 599, 99 S.E. 409 (1919).

An escapee from the State's prison system may be lawfully seized and held in custody by the police, with or without probable cause. State v. White, 21 N.C. App. 173, 203 S.E.2d 644, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 595, 205 S.E.2d 726 (1974).

As to escapees who lacked standing to challenge probable cause for arrest, see State v. White, 21 N.C. App. 173, 203 S.E.2d 644, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 595, 205 S.E.2d 726 (1974).

Driver's willful refusal to submit to a chemical analysis could be used to revoke his drivers license even though the arrest was not in compliance with subdivision (b)(2). Quick v. North Carolina DMV, 125 N.C. App. 123, 479 S.E.2d 226 (1997).

IV. USE OF FORCE IN ARREST.

Purpose of Deadly Force Provision. — Subdivision (d)(2) was designed solely to codify and clarify those situations in which a police officer may use deadly force without fear of incurring criminal or civil liability. State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

Discretion of Officer in Use of Force. — Within reasonable limits, the officer is properly left with the discretion to determine the amount of force required under the circumstances as they appeared to him at the time of the arrest. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Assault on Law Officer. — In all cases where the charge is assault on a law officer in violation of former § 14-33(b)(4), or assault of a law officer with a firearm (§ 14-34.2), the use of excessive force by the law officer in making an arrest or preventing escape from custody does not take the officer outside the performance of his duties, nor does it make the arrest unlawful. State v. Mensch, 34 N.C. App. 572, 239 S.E.2d 297 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 845 (1978).

In a prosecution for assault on a police officer it is not incumbent upon the State to prove that the law officer did not use excessive force in making an arrest, but where there is evidence tending to show the use of such excessive force by the law officer, the trial court should instruct the jury that the assault by the defendant upon the law officer was justified or excused if the assault was limited to the use of reasonable force by the defendant in defending himself from that excessive force. State v. Mensch, 34 N.C. App. 572, 239 S.E.2d 297 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 443, 241 S.E.2d 845 (1978).

Murder of Law Enforcement Officer Making Illegal Arrest. — Murder committed against a law enforcement officer was an aggravating factor in a capital trial, even though the defendant argued that the officer was killed after making an illegal entry into the defendant's home to arrest the defendant, because the defendant had no right to use deadly force. State v. Guevara, 349 N.C. 243, 506 S.E.2d 711 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1133, 119 S. Ct. 1809, 143 L. Ed. 2d 1013 (1999).

Officer Cannot Shoot at Fleeing Misdemeanant. — Where a person charged with a misdemeanor is fleeing from arrest, and is out of the control of the officer, such officer is guilty of an assault if he shoots at said person. And indeed the use of a pistol in attempting to arrest for a misdemeanor is excessive force. Sossamon v. Cruse, 133 N.C. 470, 45 S.E. 757 (1903).

One resisting an illegal arrest is not resisting an officer within the discharge of his official duties. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Right to Defend Against Excessive Force and to Resist Unlawful Arrest. — The right to defend oneself from the excessive use of force by a police officer must be carefully distinguished from the well-guarded right to resist an arrest which is unlawful. The right to use force to defend oneself against the excessive use of force during an arrest may arise despite the lawfulness of the arrest, and the use of excessive force does not render the arrest illegal. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Bystander Defending Arrestee from Excessive Force. — The bystander coming to the aid of an arrestee is entitled to use only such force as is reasonably necessary to defend the arrestee from the excessive use of force. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

The privilege to intervene in the context of a supposed felonious assault upon an arrestee by a person known or reasonably believed to be a police officer must be more limited than the traditionally recognized right to come to the defense of a third party. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

One who comes to the aid of an arrestee must do so at his own peril and should be excused only when the individual would himself be justified in defending himself from the conduct of the arresting officers. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Reasonableness of Grounds for Using Force a Jury Question. — In an action for wrongful death growing out of the mortal wounding of intestate in a scuffle while a police officer was attempting to arrest him, the court should have instructed the jury that the jury and not the officer must be the judge of the reasonableness of the grounds on which the officer acted. Perry v. Gibson, 247 N.C. 212, 100 S.E.2d 341 (1957), aff'd, 249 N.C. 134, 105 S.E.2d 277 (1958).

Instruction on Use of Force to Resist Excessive Force. — When there is evidence tending to show the excessive use of force by a law enforcement officer in making an arrest, the trial court is required to instruct the jury that the force used against the law enforcement officer was justified or excused if the assault was limited to the use of reasonable force by defendant in defending himself from excessive force. State v. Anderson, 40 N.C. App. 318, 253 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Defendant Not Justified in Resisting. — The court did not err by refusing to give defendant's requested special jury instruction that if the officer was beyond his jurisdiction, the defendant had a right to resist; even if the entry was illegal or the arrest unauthorized, defendant was not justified in using a deadly weapon against a law enforcement officer attempting to effect an arrest. State v. Locklear, 136 N.C. App. 716, 525 S.E.2d 813 (2000).

When a person has been placed under arrest by an officer, the person does not have the right to kill the officer. State v. Cunningham, 344 N.C. 341, 474 S.E.2d 772 (1996).

Interlocutory appeal of denial of police officer's motion for summary judgment on the issue of whether he was entitled to public officer immunity under subsection (d) in wrongful death action against him was permissible. Thompson v. Farmer, 945 F. Supp. 109 (W.D.N.C. 1996).

V. ENTRY ON PREMISES.

Purpose of Demand and Denial Requirement. — The requirement that a police officer, armed with an arrest warrant or search warrant, must demand and be denied admittance before making forcible entry, serves to identify his official status and to protect both the officer and the occupant. State v. Shue, 16 N.C. App. 696, 193 S.E.2d 481 (1972); State v. Gagne, 22 N.C. App. 615, 207 S.E.2d 384, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 761, 209 S.E.2d 285 (1974).

Demand and Denial Where Officers Have Warrant. — The requirement that admittance be demanded and denied would seem to apply even though the officers have a search warrant or warrant of arrest. State v. Covington, 273 N.C. 690, 161 S.E.2d 140 (1968); State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972); State v. Rudisill, 20 N.C. App. 313, 201 S.E.2d 368 (1973).

Forcible Entry Where Admittance Demanded and Denied. — Compliance with the requirement of the statute that admittance be "demanded and denied" serves to identify the official status of those seeking admittance. The requirement is for the protection of the officers as well as for the protection of the occupant and the recognition of his constitutional rights. State v. Covington, 273 N.C. 690, 161 S.E.2d 140 (1968); State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

Where an officer comes armed with process founded on a breach of the peace, he may, after demand of admittance for the purpose of making the arrest, and refusal of the occupant to open the doors of a house, lawfully break them in order to effect an entrance and if he acts in good faith in doing so, both he and his posse comitatus will be protected. See State v. Mooring, 115 N.C. 709, 20 S.E. 182 (1894), commented on in 15 N.C.L. Rev. 125.

Length of Time Prior to Forcible Entry Must Be Reasonable. — The length of time an officer must wait before breaking in to serve a valid warrant must be reasonable under the circumstances as they appear to him. State v. Watson, 19 N.C. App. 160, 198 S.E.2d 185, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 124, 199 S.E.2d 662 (1973).

Failure to Receive Reply Before Entering Residence. — There was sufficient compliance with the requirement that entrance be demanded and denied before a police officer can forcibly enter a dwelling for the purpose of making an arrest, where defendant had observed the officer's uniform and was aware of his official status, the officer had seen defendant looking out a door and knew that defendant had observed him, and the officer twice called out defendant's name and received no reply before he opened the door to defendant's residence. State v. Harvey, 281 N.C. 1, 187 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

The fact that silence greeted the officers' demands for entrance and that defendant was not found in the house did not make their entry illegal. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

Open door obviates the demand for admittance by first knocking. State v. Rudisill, 20 N.C. App. 313, 201 S.E.2d 368 (1973).

Entry Without Notice May Be Proper Under Special and Emergency Conditions. — While under ordinary circumstances the officers must announce their purpose and demand admittance before making a forcible entry to conduct a search pursuant to a valid search warrant, such an entry may be proper under special and emergency conditions when it reasonably appears that such an announcement and demand by the officer and the delay consequent thereto would provoke the escape of the suspect, place the officer in peril, or cause the destruction or disposition of critical evidence. State v. Watson, 19 N.C. App. 160, 198 S.E.2d 185, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 124, 199 S.E.2d 662 (1973).

Question of whether there was an actual breaking of the door is not determinative of the issue of whether or not the statute is applicable. State v. Turnbull, 16 N.C. App. 542, 192 S.E.2d 689 (1972).

Officers Admitted by Owner of House. — The arrest without warrant of the defendant for armed robbery, the defendant having been discovered hiding in the attic of a house, is lawful where the discovery and arrest of the defendant occurred after the owner of the house had admitted the officers by the front door. State v. Basden, 8 N.C. App. 401, 174 S.E.2d 613 (1970).

Entry of Other Officers to Assist Officers Voluntarily Admitted. — Where a law officer makes a lawful entry of a home with consent of the owner to apprehend and arrest a suspect, then other officers may enter the home to assist those officers who have been voluntarily admitted. State v. Rhodes, 54 N.C. App. 193, 282 S.E.2d 809 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 294, 287 S.E.2d 898 (1982).

Demand and Denial Where Person Reasonably Believed to Be on Premises. — Even where there is reasonable ground to believe that a person guilty of a felony is concealed in a house, there exists no right, in the absence of special and emergency circumstance, to break into the house and arrest the person unless and until admittance has been demanded and denied. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

Entry Held Lawful. — The entry of police officers into the house in which the defendant and his companions were hiding, and the arrest without warrant of the occupants therein for the offense of armed robbery, was proper and lawful where (1) the felony of armed robbery had been committed at an ABC store, (2) within a few minutes after the robbery the officers discovered in the driveway of the house the automobile which they reasonably believed had been used in the robbery, (3) all curtains on the windows of the house were drawn, and (4) the occupants of the house failed to respond to the officers' knock at the front door. State v. Basden, 8 N.C. App. 401, 174 S.E.2d 613 (1970).

The fact that officers were standing under a light on a porch of a house from which a short time previously two shots had been fired, killing one person and seriously wounding another, was such an exigent circumstance that the officers were justified in entering the home and searching it to make sure no one else, including the officers, would be shot; and since the officers saw a shotgun in the house in plain view, evidence in regard to the gun was admissible. State v. Mackins, 47 N.C. App. 168, 266 S.E.2d 694, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 102 (1980).

Where there was evidence that after a police officer made a lawful entry into defendant's home and read an order for his arrest, but defendant did not submit peacefully, and that the officer called for assistance and another officer came to defendant's home to assist the first officer, the evidence failed to indicate an illegal entry into defendant's home. State v. Rhodes, 54 N.C. App. 193, 282 S.E.2d 809 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 294, 287 S.E.2d 898 (1982).

Subdivision (e)(1) of this section outlines the situations when a law-enforcement officer may enter on private premises to arrest someone. Three requirements must be met. The officer must possess a warrant for the arrest of a person, he must have reasonable cause to believe that the person to be arrested is present, and he has given, or made a reasonable effort to give, notice of his authority and purpose to an occupant of the premises. Kuykendall v. Turner, 61 N.C. App. 638, 301 S.E.2d 715 (1983).

There was sufficient compliance with the requirements that entrance be demanded and denied before a police officer can forcibly enter a dwelling for the purpose of making an arrest, where the officer knocked, identified himself twice, heard a lot of scrambling and running noises coming from within the dwelling, and received no reply before he forcibly opened the door. State v. Narcisse, 90 N.C. App. 414, 368 S.E.2d 654, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 368, 373 S.E.2d 553 (1988).

Evidence in Plain View Admissible. — In a prosecution for first degree rape and first degree kidnapping, evidence was properly admitted, where officers possessing valid arrest warrants were permitted to enter trailer by defendant's brother, the officers had reason to suspect that defendant was present in the trailer, the officers informed defendant's brother of their purpose, and the items seized and admitted into evidence were seen in plain view. State v. Hill, 116 N.C. App. 573, 449 S.E.2d 573, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 670, 453 S.E.2d 183 (1994).

Entry into trailer was lawful and bloody T-shirt and cowboy boots were properly admitted where they were in plain view and were later seized pursuant to a search warrant. State v. Workman, 344 N.C. 482, 476 S.E.2d 301 (1996).

Knock and Announce Requirement. — The requirements of subsection (e) were satisfied where plaintiff was well aware of police officer's identities and their reason for being at her house; defendants were uniformed Highway Patrolmen who had arrived on the scene in patrol cars and who had been involved in an altercation with plaintiff minutes before the alleged unlawful entry; and, moreover, defendants were about to apprehend plaintiff as she entered the kitchen and attempted to close the door; in such a case, compliance with the knock and announce requirement was not required. Lee v. Greene, 114 N.C. App. 580, 442 S.E.2d 547 (1994).

Notice Held Proper. — Where the searching officer made the announcement to the person at the door and repeated it to the other occupants as soon as he came upon them, the requirement that such notice be given as will identify the officer and protect the occupants and the officer is satisfied. State v. Rudisill, 20 N.C. App. 313, 201 S.E.2d 368 (1973).

VI. UNLAWFUL ARREST.

Person has the right to resist an unlawful arrest. State v. Williams, 32 N.C. App. 204, 231 S.E.2d 282, appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 470, 233 S.E.2d 924 (1977); State v. Raynor, 33 N.C. App. 698, 236 S.E.2d 307 (1977).

And may flee from an unlawful arrest. State v. Williams, 32 N.C. App. 204, 231 S.E.2d 282, appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 470, 233 S.E.2d 924 (1977).

Arrest Not Complete Where Defendant Fled from Unlawful Attempt to Arrest. — Where the defendant fled from the unlawful attempt to arrest him, the arrest was not complete under subdivision (c)(1) because the defendant did not "submit to the control" of the officer, nor had the officer taken him "into custody by the use of physical force." State v. Williams, 32 N.C. App. 204, 231 S.E.2d 282, appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 470, 233 S.E.2d 924 (1977).

Illegal arrest, unaccompanied by violent or oppressive circumstances, would not be more coercive than a legal arrest. State v. Faulkner, 5 N.C. App. 113, 168 S.E.2d 9 (1969).

Unlawful Arrest Does Not Discharge Defendant from Liability. — The law does not discharge a defendant from criminal liability merely because his arrest is not lawful, unless the offense charged stems from such arrest. State v. Jones, 17 N.C. App. 54, 193 S.E.2d 314 (1972).

Arrest May Be Constitutionally Valid But Illegal Under State Law. — The words "illegal" and "unconstitutionally" are not synonymous. An arrest is constitutionally valid when the officers have probable cause to make it. Thus an arrest may be constitutionally valid and yet "illegal" under State law. State v. Eubanks, 283 N.C. 556, 196 S.E.2d 706 (1973).

And Evidence Not Excluded When Arrest Only Constitutionally Valid. — When an arrest is constitutionally valid but illegal under the law of North Carolina, the facts discovered or the evidence obtained as a result of the arrest need not be excluded as evidence in the trial of the action. State v. Eubanks, 283 N.C. 556, 196 S.E.2d 706 (1973).

Mere failure to comply with the letter of this section in making an arrest does not require that evidence discovered as a result of the arrest be excluded. State v. Sutton, 34 N.C. App. 371, 238 S.E.2d 305 (1977), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 294 N.C. 186, 241 S.E.2d 521 (1978).

Identification Evidence Subsequently Obtained Not Excluded. — Nothing in the law of this State requires that identification evidence, obtained subsequent to an illegal arrest, be excluded. State v. Finch, 293 N.C. 132, 235 S.E.2d 819 (1977).

Evidence in Action for Unlawful Arrest. — In an action against an officer for malicious and unlawful arrest, evidence that a robbery had been committed is held competent upon the issue, and defendant's evidence tending to show good faith and that he was acting within the provisions of the statute in arresting plaintiffs, was properly submitted to the jury. Hicks v. Nivens, 210 N.C. 44, 185 S.E. 469 (1936).

Summary judgment was improper on the grounds that the defendant police officer "did not commit the common law torts of false imprisonment, assault and/or battery" where the trier of fact had yet to decide whether this section was applicable. Glenn-Robinson v. Acker, 140 N.C. App. 606, 538 S.E.2d 601 (2000).

False Imprisonment Claim Properly Dismissed. — Summary judgment was properly granted for the defendants, a sheriff and his officers, as to the plaintiff's false imprisonment claim where the evidence indicated that the sheriff had probable cause to believe plaintiff obstructed, resisted and delayed him in carrying out his duties when he caused the plaintiff to be arrested after repeatedly warning him to turn over some equipment which the plaintiff held pursuant to a mechanic's lien. Thomas v. Sellers, 142 N.C. App. 130, 542 S.E.2d 283 (2001).

§ 15A-402. Territorial jurisdiction of officers to make arrests.

(a) Territorial Jurisdiction of State Officers. — Law-enforcement officers of the State of North Carolina may arrest persons at any place within the State.

(b) Territorial Jurisdiction of County and City Officers. — Law-enforcement officers of cities and counties may arrest persons within their particular cities or counties and on any property and rights-of-way owned by the city or county outside its limits.

(c) City Officers, Outside Territory. — Law-enforcement officers of cities may arrest persons at any point which is one mile or less from the nearest point in the boundary of such city. Law enforcement officers of cities may transport a person in custody to or from any place within the State for the purpose of that person attending criminal court proceedings. While engaged in the transportation of persons for the purpose of attending criminal court proceedings, law enforcement officers of cities may arrest persons at any place within the State for offenses occurring in connection with and incident to the transportation of persons in custody.

(d) County and City Officers, Immediate and Continuous Flight. — Law-enforcement officers of cities and counties may arrest persons outside the territory described in subsections (b) and (c) when the person arrested has committed a criminal offense within that territory, for which the officer could have arrested the person within that territory, and the arrest is made during such person's immediate and continuous flight from that territory.

(e) County Officers, Outside Territory, for Felonies. — Law-enforcement officers of counties may arrest persons at any place in the State of North Carolina when the arrest is based upon a felony committed within the territory described in subsection (b).

(f) Campus Police Officers, Immediate and Continuous Flight. — A campus police officer: (i) appointed by a campus law-enforcement agency established pursuant to G.S. 116-40.5(a); (ii) appointed by a campus law enforcement agency established under G.S. 115D-21.1(a); or (iii) commissioned by the Attorney General pursuant to Chapter 74E and employed by a college or university which is licensed, or exempted from licensure, by G.S. 116-15 may arrest a person outside his territorial jurisdiction when the person arrested has committed a criminal offense within the territorial jurisdiction, for which the officer could have arrested the person within that territory, and the arrest is made during such person's immediate and continuous flight from that territory. (1935, c. 204; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1987, c. 671, s. 3; 1989, c. 518, s. 4; 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 1043, s. 3; 1995, c. 206, s. 1; 1999-68, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission here provides a straightforward statement of the territorial jurisdiction of officers to make arrests, bringing together the provisions previously split between Chapter 15 and Chapter 160A. Although it is generally conceded that there is a power of "hot pursuit" for going beyond normal territorial jurisdiction, there has been little authority on the subject in North Carolina, and no statutory coverage other than that referred to in § 15-42 and in Chapter 160A. The Commission here proposed a statement of that authority and uses the term "immediate and continuous flight," a term more commonly used in statutes and which conveys the requisite idea without the undesirable connotations of dangerous chases inherent in the phrase "hot pursuit."

Local Modification. — Gaston County: 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 836, s. 1; Town of Norwood: 1983, c. 91.

CASE NOTES

This section and § 160A-286 must be analyzed to determine the territorial jurisdiction of a municipal law-enforcement officer. State v. Treants, 60 N.C. App. 203, 298 S.E.2d 438 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 702, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983).

Section 160A-286 extends the extraterritorial power of city police officers beyond the mere power to arrest found in subsection (c) of this section. State v. Treants, 60 N.C. App. 203, 298 S.E.2d 438 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 702, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983).

Where police officer is acting within his territorial jurisdiction as extended by § 160A-286, the defendant has no right to resist, delay, or obstruct a search being conducted pursuant to a warrant. State v. Treants, 60 N.C. App. 203, 298 S.E.2d 438 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 702, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983).

State Has Burden to Show Officer Was a Government Officer. — The State did not meet its burden of showing that officer was a government officer at the time of the incident because the officer was outside the jurisdiction of his city police department pursuant to this section, and the State failed to show that the requirements of § 160A-288 and the emergency assistance provisions of the Mutual Aid Agreement were followed. State v. Locklear, 136 N.C. App. 716, 525 S.E.2d 813 (2000).

Technical violation of this section does not necessarily require exclusion of evidence obtained in the search incident to the arrest. State v. Mangum, 30 N.C. App. 311, 226 S.E.2d 852 (1976).

Violation of Section Held Not to Require Exclusion of Evidence. — Even if a deputy sheriff's investigatory stop of defendant was illegal because it was made outside the limits of his territorial jurisdiction, the stop was not unconstitutional so as to require the exclusion from the evidence of a pistol seized during the stop. Furthermore, even if the stop were an arrest in terms of subsection (b) of this section, this is not a substantial violation of this Chapter which would require exclusion of the evidence under § 15A-974. State v. Harris, 43 N.C. App. 346, 258 S.E.2d 802 (1979), appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 808, 261 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Evidence obtained in the search and seizure of an automobile in which defendant was a passenger was properly admitted even though the arresting police officers were outside their territorial jurisdiction as prescribed by this section and defendant's arrest may have been unlawful. State v. Melvin, 53 N.C. App. 421, 281 S.E.2d 97 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 762, 292 S.E.2d 578 (1982).

Applied in State v. Carr, 61 N.C. App. 402, 301 S.E.2d 430 (1983).

§ 15A-403. Arrest by officers from other states.

(a) Any law-enforcement officer of a state contiguous to the State of North Carolina who enters this State in fresh pursuit and continues within this State in such fresh pursuit of a person who is in immediate and continuous flight from the commission of a criminal offense, has the same authority to arrest and hold in custody such person on the ground that he has committed a criminal offense in another state which is a criminal offense under the laws of the State of North Carolina as law-enforcement officers of this State have to arrest and hold in custody a person on the ground that he has committed a criminal offense in this State.

(b) If an arrest is made in this State by a law-enforcement officer of another state in accordance with the provisions of subsection (a), he must, without unnecessary delay, take the person arrested before a judicial official of this State, who must conduct a hearing for the purpose of determining the lawfulness of the arrest. If the judicial official determines that the arrest was lawful, he must commit the person arrested to await a reasonable time for the issuance of an extradition warrant by the Governor of this State or release him pursuant to Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail. If the judicial official determines that the arrest was unlawful, he must discharge the person arrested.

(c) This section applies only to law-enforcement officers of a state which by its laws has made similar provision for the arrest and custody of persons closely pursued within its territory. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is based upon the "Uniform Fresh Pursuit Act," and permits officers from other states in fresh pursuit of a person who has committed an offense to make the arrest in North Carolina. The Commission has restricted the act by limiting it to officers from contiguous states, requiring reciprocal provisions, requiring that the offender be taken before a judicial officer in this State for determination of lawfulness of the arrest, and requiring extradition proceedings for his removal.

§ 15A-404. Detention of offenders by private persons.

(a) No Arrest; Detention Permitted. — No private person may arrest another person except as provided in G.S. 15A-405. A private person may detain another person as provided in this section.

(b) When Detention Permitted. — A private person may detain another person when he has probable cause to believe that the person detained has committed in his presence:

(1) A felony,

(2) A breach of the peace,

(3) A crime involving physical injury to another person, or

(4) A crime involving theft or destruction of property.

(c) Manner of Detention. — The detention must be in a reasonable manner considering the offense involved and the circumstances of the detention.

(d) Period of Detention. — The detention may be no longer than the time required for the earliest of the following:

(1) The determination that no offense has been committed.

(2) Surrender of the person detained to a law-enforcement officer as provided in subsection (e).

(e) Surrender to Officer. — A private person who detains another must immediately notify a law-enforcement officer and must, unless he releases the person earlier as required by subsection (d), surrender the person detained to the law-enforcement officer. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section would replace the old concept of "citizen's arrest" with a concept of "citizen's detention." North Carolina has authorized the private citizen to make arrests in certain limited circumstances — essentially felonies and breaches of the peace in his presence. To those two situations are added crimes involving physical injury to another person and a general authorization with regard to crimes involving theft or destruction of property.

The important conceptual change is from "arrest" to "detention." The notion of a private citizen "arresting" another in certain circumstances had led persons at times to act without authority and at times to place themselves or others in unjustified danger. Perhaps a safer idea is that the private citizen may detain the offender sufficiently long to turn him over to a law-enforcement officer. Though there may be little or no difference in the physical actions taken, it is hoped that this will be a clearer and safer concept for the private citizen.

This section has no effect on the 1971 addition to § 14-72.1 which provides that a merchant is not civilly liable for reasonably detaining persons believed to have violated the "shoplifting" statute.

CASE NOTES

"Detain". — The ordinary meaning of the word "detain," and the meaning the legislature intended when it enacted this section, is "to hold or keep in or as if in custody." State v. Wall, 304 N.C. 609, 286 S.E.2d 68 (1982).

Use of Deadly Force. — A private citizen is not allowed to employ deadly force to detain a fleeing misdemeanant in circumstances under which an officer of the law could not have employed similar force to effect such an arrest. State v. Wall, 304 N.C. 609, 286 S.E.2d 68 (1982).

Blocking Exit. — Where plaintiff was restrained for a very brief time and the restraint consisted of having her exit from office temporarily blocked, and no defendant used actual force to keep her in office, the simple act of standing in front of a door for a few seconds was not an unreasonable detention. Caldwell v. Linker, 901 F. Supp. 1010 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Instruction on Reasonableness. — Defendant was entitled to requested instruction concerning the reasonableness of his armed detention of homicide victim only if there was evidence that: (1) defendant had probable cause to believe that one or more of the crimes enumerated in subsection (b) of this section had been committed; (2) defendant was trying to "detain" the offender until the police arrived; and (3) the manner of detention was reasonable under the circumstances. State v. Ataei-Kachuei, 68 N.C. App. 209, 314 S.E.2d 751, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 763, 321 S.E.2d 146 (1984).

Illustrative Cases. — Individual who was shot attempting to stop defendants from leaving scene had cause to believe the felony of burglary was being committed in his presence, where evidence showed that at the time of his arrival he knew only that his daughter had telephoned at approximately 2:15 a.m. to report that someone was breaking into her home and that the call was then cut off, that he observed a strange vehicle in the driveway and two individuals in the process of removing certain components of an entertainment center from the home, and that the two individuals ran from the dwelling. State v. Gilreath, 118 N.C. App. 200, 454 S.E.2d 871 (1995).

Where community college president requested that instructor return the keys belonging to college and she refused, this refusal was sufficient to justify president in temporarily restraining plaintiff and attempting to have the college's property returned. Caldwell v. Linker, 901 F. Supp. 1010 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Applied in Autry v. Mitchell, 420 F. Supp. 967 (E.D.N.C. 1976); State v. Gilliam, 71 N.C. App. 83, 321 S.E.2d 553 (1984).

§ 15A-405. Assistance to law-enforcement officers by private persons to effect arrest or prevent escape; benefits for private persons.

(a) Assistance upon Request; Authority. — Private persons may assist law-enforcement officers in effecting arrests and preventing escapes from custody when requested to do so by the officer. When so requested, a private person has the same authority to effect an arrest or prevent escape from custody as the officer making the request. He does not incur civil or criminal liability for an invalid arrest unless he knows the arrest to be invalid. Nothing in this subsection constitutes justification for willful, malicious or criminally negligent conduct by such person which injures or endangers any person or property, nor shall it be construed to excuse or justify the use of unreasonable or excessive force.

(b) Benefits to Private Persons. — A private person assisting a law-enforcement officer pursuant to subsection (a) is:

(1) Repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 290, s. 1.

(2) Entitled to the same benefits as a "law-enforcement officer" as that term is defined in G.S. 143-166.2(d) (Law-Enforcement Officers', Firemen's and Rescue Squad Workers' Death Benefit Act); and

(3) To be treated as an employee of the employer of the law-enforcement officer within the meaning of G.S. 97-2(2) (Workers' Compensation Act).

The Governor and the Council of State are authorized to allocate funds from the Contingency and Emergency Fund for the payment of benefits under subdivision (3) when no other source is available for the payment of such benefits and when they determine that such allocation is necessary and appropriate. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 1, s. 2; Code, s. 1125; Rev., s. 3181; C.S., s. 4547; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1979, c. 714, s. 2; 1989, c. 290, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Source: §§ 15-45, 14-224. Subsection (a) of this section changes the former law making it the duty of the private citizen to assist a law-enforcement officer in making arrests and preventing escapes under certain circumstances when requested to do so. Here there is substituted a broader, but permissive, statute. Thus the criminal sanction provided by § 14-224 is repealed. When so requested, the private citizen has the same authority, both as to extent and as to limitation, as the officer making the request, but he is protected from civil or criminal liability, if the arrest is invalid, unless he knows it is invalid.

Subsection (b) of this section brings together several benefits available to law-enforcement officers and makes them available to private citizens assisting law-enforcement officers pursuant to subsection (a). Except for the Death Benefit Act, these benefits have already been available to private citizens in some circumstances.

(1) Section 143-166(m) makes the Law-Enforcement Officers' Benefit and Retirement Fund available to "any citizen duly deputized as a deputy by a sheriff or other law-enforcement officer in an emergency." The effect here is to dispense with any formalities.

(2) The Law-Enforcement Officers' Death Benefit Act is applicable only to full-time officers, § 143-166.2(4). No funding problem is created by making the act applicable to the private citizen under these circumstances, for the benefits are payable from the Contingency and Emergency Fund.

(3) The Workmen's Compensation Act, § 97-2(2), defines "employee" to include "deputy sheriffs appointed to serve in an emergency, but as to those so appointed, only during the continuation of the emergency." We here again dispense with the formalities and make the act applicable to private persons acting pursuant to subsection (a). Of course, that subsection is limited to requested help in effecting arrests and preventing escapes, thus generally presenting an emergency situation.

(By way of comparison, note that § 160A-282 makes the benefits of the North Carolina Workmen's Compensation Act applicable to auxiliary police.)

The last sentence of subsection (b) makes the Contingency and Emergency Fund available, if necessary, to assist in payments under subdivisions (1) and (3) — unnecessary as to subdivision (2) for those benefits are paid from the Contingency and Emergency Fund. While it should not ordinarily be necessary, it was thought advisable to grant this authority in order to prevent loss to the citizen in the event of the failure of other funding. Compare the provisions for the State Volunteer Fire Department in §§ 69-24 and 69-25.

§ 15A-406. Assistance by federal officers.

(a) For purposes of this section, "federal law enforcement officer" means any of the following persons who are employed as full-time law enforcement officers by the federal government and who are authorized to carry firearms in the performance of their duties:

(1) United States Secret Service special agents;
(2) Federal Bureau of Investigation special agents;
(3) Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms special agents;
(4) United States Naval Investigative Service special agents;
(5) Drug Enforcement Administration special agents;
(6) United States Customs Service officers;
(7) United States Postal Service inspectors;
(8) Internal Revenue Service special agents;
(9) United States Marshals Service marshals and deputies;
(10) United States Forest Service officers;
(11) National Park Service officers;
(12) United States Fish and Wildlife Service officers;
(13) Immigration and Naturalization Service officers; and
(14) Tennessee Valley Authority officers.

(b) A federal law enforcement officer is authorized under the following circumstances to enforce criminal laws anywhere within the State:

(1) If the federal law enforcement officer is asked by the head of a state or local law enforcement agency, or his designee, to provide temporary assistance and the request is within the scope of the state or local law enforcement agency's subject matter and territorial jurisdiction; or
(2) If the federal law enforcement officer is asked by a state or local law enforcement officer to provide temporary assistance when at the time of the request the state or local law enforcement officer is acting within the scope of his subject matter and territorial jurisdiction.

(c) A federal law enforcement officer shall have the same powers as those invested by statute or common law in a North Carolina law enforcement officer, and shall have the same legal immunity from personal civil liability as a North Carolina law enforcement officer, while acting pursuant to this section.

(d) A federal law enforcement officer who acts pursuant to this section shall not be considered an officer, employee, or agent of any state or local law enforcement agency.

(e) For purposes of the Federal Tort Claims Act, a federal law enforcement officer acts within the scope of his office or employment while acting pursuant to this section.

(f) Nothing in this section shall be construed to expand the authority of federal officers to initiate or conduct an independent investigation into violation of North Carolina law. (1991, c. 262, s. 1; 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 1030, s. 8; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 571, s. 1; 2001-257, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-257, s. 1, effective October 1, 2001, deleted "and" at the end of subdivision (a)(12); inserted "and" at the end of subdivision (a)(13); and added subdivision (a)(14).

Article 23.

Police Processing and Duties upon Arrest.

§ 15A-501. Police processing and duties upon arrest generally.

Upon the arrest of a person, with or without a warrant, but not necessarily in the order hereinafter listed, a law-enforcement officer:

(1) Must inform the person arrested of the charge against him or the cause for his arrest.

(2) Must, with respect to any person arrested without a warrant and, for purpose of setting bail, with respect to any person arrested upon a warrant or order for arrest, take the person arrested before a judicial official without unnecessary delay.

(3) May, prior to taking the person before a judicial official, take the person arrested to some other place if the person so requests.

(4) May, prior to taking the person before a judicial official, take the person arrested to some other place if such action is reasonably necessary for the purpose of having that person identified.

(5) Must without unnecessary delay advise the person arrested of his right to communicate with counsel and friends and must allow him reasonable time and reasonable opportunity to do so. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 1, s. 7; Code, s. 1130; Rev., s. 3182; C.S., s. 4548; 1937, c. 257, ss. 1, 2; 1955, c. 889; 1969, c. 296; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, ss. 7, 8.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is similar to former § 15-47. Some of the provisions of that statute are separately covered, and it has been possible to simplify the format of this section.

Subdivisions (3) and (4) are based upon the American Law Institute's Model Code of Pre-Arraignment Procedure, Tentative Draft No. 1, Section 3.09 (1) (Alternate Provision) and Stovall v. Denno, 388 U.S. 293, 87 S. Ct. 1967, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1199 (1967). North Carolina statutes formerly did not provide such a section. See § 15-24 (Arrest with a warrant) and § 15-46 (Arrest without a warrant).

IV. Right of Communication.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Statute Implements Constitutional Rights. — The General Assembly enacted the statute to implement the constitutional rights under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Statute does not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting validity of trial. State v. Hargett, 255 N.C. 412, 121 S.E.2d 589 (1961); Carroll v. Turner, 262 F. Supp. 486 (E.D.N.C. 1966), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 969, 88 S. Ct. 1085, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1176 (1968); State v. McCloud, 276 N.C. 518, 173 S.E.2d 753 (1970); State v. Able, 13 N.C. App. 365, 185 S.E.2d 422 (1971), cert. denied, 281 N.C. 514, 189 S.E.2d 36 (1972).

The failure of law-enforcement personnel in complying with the provisions of this section and § 15A-511 can result in the violation of a person's constitutional rights. However, these statutes do not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting the validity of a trial. State v. Reynolds, 298 N.C. 380, 259 S.E.2d 843 (1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 941, 100 S. Ct. 2164, 64 L. Ed. 2d 795 (1980).

Object of a preliminary hearing is to effect a release for one who is held in violation of his rights. State v. Chamberlain, 263 N.C. 406, 139 S.E.2d 620 (1965).

Rights of Intoxicated Persons. — One who is detained by police officers under a charge of driving while under the influence of an intoxicant has the same constitutional and statutory rights, including the rights given under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23, as any other accused. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Effect of Violation of Section on Voluntary Confession. — The violation of the statute, in regard to bail and the manner of detention of defendant under arrest, would not render defendant's voluntary confession incompetent. State v. Exum, 213 N.C. 16, 195 S.E. 7 (1938).

Where any delay in arrest was at the request of defendant's counsel and was unquestionably not caused by anything the deputies did, and after the arrest warrant was served, there was no delay in presenting defendant before the magistrate, there was no "unnecessary delay" and therefore no breach of duty by the arresting officer. Clark v. Link, 855 F.2d 156 (4th Cir. 1988).

Delay Not Error Since Confession Not Result of Violation. — Where there was nothing in the record that showed that the defendant's confession resulted from any delay in taking him before a magistrate, any unnecessary delay, if any occurred, in violation of this section would not result in error, since a confession must be suppressed only if the confession was obtained as a result of a violation. State v. Allen, 323 N.C. 208, 372 S.E.2d 855 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 1463, 108 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1990), in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), rehearing denied, 507 U.S. 1046, 113 S. Ct. 1885, 123 L. Ed. 2d 503 (1993).

Confession Held Involuntary. — Defendant's youth, his low mentality, and limited education, his incommunicado detention and interrogation for 19 hours by a number of different police officers who allowed him only scant time to rest, the inadequate explanation of his constitutional rights and the suggestions that it would be better for him to confess, the failure of the police to notify his parents or to afford him the opportunity to consult with a lawyer, and the delay in producing him before a magistrate — all of these elements combined to establish that defendant's confession could not be deemed a voluntary act and that its admission into evidence denied him due process of law. Thomas v. North Carolina, 447 F.2d 1320 (4th Cir. 1971).

Applied in State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978); State v. Jordan, 49 N.C. App. 561, 272 S.E.2d 405 (1980); State v. Beaty, 306 N.C. 491, 293 S.E.2d 760 (1982).

Transfer After High-Speed Chase Upheld. — Where defendant was arrested in Chatham County solely because he was trying to evade police in a chase that began in Randolph County and, consequently, was brought before a Randolph County magistrate without "unnecessary delay," the "seizure and transfer" of defendant and his car did not violate his statutory and constitutional rights. State v. Chavis, 134 N.C. App. 546, 518 S.E.2d 241 (1999).

Quoted in State v. Sanders, 303 N.C. 608, 281 S.E.2d 7 (1981).

Cited in State v. Watson, 294 N.C. 159, 240 S.E.2d 440 (1978); State v. Jolly, 297 N.C. 121, 254 S.E.2d 1 (1979); State v. McCoy, 303 N.C. 1, 277 S.E.2d 515 (1981); State v. Hunter, 305 N.C. 106, 286 S.E.2d 535 (1982); State v. Webb, 309 N.C. 549, 308 S.E.2d 252 (1983); State v. Gilbert, 85 N.C. App. 594, 355 S.E.2d 261 (1987); State v. Simpson, 320 N.C. 313, 357 S.E.2d 332 (1987); State v. Jones, 112 N.C. App. 337, 435 S.E.2d 574 (1993); State v. Daniels, 337 N.C. 243, 446 S.E.2d 298 (1994).

II. TAKING PERSON BEFORE JUDICIARY OFFICIAL.

"Unnecessary Delay" Under Subdivision (2). — Subdivision (2) of this section and § 15A-511(a)(1) only require that an arrested person be taken before a magistrate "without unnecessary delay," and a delay of only one hour after the defendant had been taken into custody and advised of his rights could not be considered undue delay. State v. Wheeler, 34 N.C. App. 243, 237 S.E.2d 874 (1977), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 294 N.C. 187, 241 S.E.2d 522 (1978).

Homicide defendant's clothes were not taken as a result of an unnecessarily long delay in his appearance before a magistrate where he was taken before a magistrate within 90 minutes of his arrest and his clothing was taken within a few hours thereafter. State v. Payne, 328 N.C. 377, 402 S.E.2d 582 (1991).

Duty of Officer Making Arrest Without Warrant. — A police officer within the limits of his city may summarily and without warrant arrest a person for a misdemeanor committed in his presence. But in such case it is the duty of the officer to inform the person arrested of the charge against him and immediately take him before someone authorized to issue criminal warrants and have warrant issued, giving him opportunity to provide bail and communicate with counsel and friends. Perry v. Hurdle, 229 N.C. 216, 49 S.E.2d 400 (1948).

Liability for Delay in Procuring Warrant. — A warrant must be procured as soon after the arrest as possible and, where it appears that this was not done, the officer responsible for the arrest is personally answerable in damages. Hobbs v. City of Washington, 168 N.C. 293, 84 S.E. 391 (1915).

When required bail bond is given and approved, accused is to be released. State v. Hill, 9 N.C. App. 279, 176 S.E.2d 41 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Delay Held Necessary and Reasonable. — The delay between the arrest of the defendant and his appearance before a magistrate was necessary and reasonable where the interim period was spent by the arresting officers in recovering the stolen goods and attempting to locate a person arrested with a defendant who had escaped. State v. Sings, 35 N.C. App. 1, 240 S.E.2d 471 (1978).

Defendant failed to show that police investigators violated this section by waiting nineteen hours to take defendant before a magistrate after his arrest, taking him to the Law Enforcement Center (LEC) for questioning prior to his appearance before a magistrate, and waiting three and a half hours after questioning began before advising him of his Miranda rights where his confession was not a result of the delay; his confession necessarily took a lot of time because it involved nine murders; the police accommodated his request to sleep, and he was advised of his rights at the outset. State v. Wallace, 351 N.C. 481, 528 S.E.2d 326 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1018, 121 S. Ct. 581, 148 L. Ed. 2d 498 (2000).

Delay Was Not Unnecessary Where Defendant Advised of His Rights. — Thirteen-hour delay between the time defendant was taken into custody and the time he was taken before a magistrate was not an unnecessary delay where police officers interrogated the defendant for ten hours before he confessed; the officers fully advised him of his constitutional rights before the interrogation began and if he had been taken before a magistrate, he would have been advised of those same rights. The court could not hold that the defendant would have exercised his right to remain silent if he had been warned of this right by a magistrate rather than the officer. State v. Littlejohn, 340

N.C. 750, 459 S.E.2d 629 (1995).

Delay Not Unnecessary. — Where the defendant was arrested at 9:30 a.m., and was not taken before the magistrate until 8 p.m., his right to be taken before a magistrate without unnecessary delay was not violated as a large part of that time was spent in interrogating the defendant about several crimes. State v. Chapman, 343 N.C. 495, 471 S.E.2d 354 (1996).

III. IDENTIFICATION OF PERSON.

Meaning of "Reasonably Necessary" in Subdivision (4). — Based on the official commentary provided by the legislature, the words "reasonably necessary" in subdivision (4) have a stricter meaning than would ordinarily apply. Only exigent circumstances, such as were present in Stovall v. Denno, 388 U.S. 293, 87 S. Ct. 1967, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1199 (1967), where the only eyewitness was critically injured, will suffice as "reasonably necessary." State v. Sanders, 33 N.C. App. 284, 235 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 257, 237 S.E.2d 539 (1977).

Subdivision (4) Held Violated. — Police officers violated subdivision (4) of this section by taking defendant to the town in which the crime was committed for a show-up after they had first prepared to take him before a magistrate in the town in which he was arrested. State v. Sanders, 33 N.C. App. 284, 235 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 257, 237 S.E.2d 539 (1977).

IV. RIGHT OF COMMUNICATION.

Rights of communication go with a man into jail, and reasonable opportunity to exercise them must be afforded by the restraining authorities. The denial of the opportunity to exercise that right is a denial of the right. State v. Wheeler, 249 N.C. 187, 105 S.E.2d 615 (1958); State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Right to Communication Includes Right of Access. — A defendant is entitled to consult with friends and relatives and to have them make observations of his person. The right to communicate with counsel and friends necessarily includes the right of access to them. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Communication Not Limited to Professional Advice. — Under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23 and the statute, a defendant's communication and contacts with the outside world are not limited to receiving professional advice from his attorney. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Fact that a person is defendant's lawyer as well as his friend does not impair his right to see the defendant at a critical time of the proceedings. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Defendant is entitled to counsel at every critical stage of the proceedings against him. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

When Critical Stage Reached in Prosecution for Driving While Intoxicated. — A critical stage has been reached in a defendant's case when, immediately after officers have interrogated the defendant and conducted their test for sobriety, they charge him with the offense of driving while intoxicated, and the denial of counsel at this point makes it impossible for a defendant to have disinterested witnesses observe his condition and to obtain a blood test by a doctor, the only means by which defendant might prove his innocence. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Right to Communication When Intoxication Is Essential Element of Offense. — When one is taken into police custody for an offense of which intoxication is an essential element, time is of the essence. Intoxication does not last. Ordinarily a drunken man will "sleep it off" in a few hours. Thus, if one accused of driving while intoxicated is to have witnesses for his defense, he must have access to his counsel, friends, relatives, or some disinterested person within a relatively short time after his arrest. He is entitled to communicate with them immediately, and this is true whether he is arrested at 2:00 in the morning or 2:00 in the afternoon. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

The denial of request for permission to contact counsel as soon as a person is charged with a crime involving the element of intoxication is a denial of a constitutional right resulting in irreparable prejudice to his defense. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

A defendant's guilt or innocence under § 20-138 (see now § 20-138.1) depends upon whether he is intoxicated (now under the influence) at the time of his arrest. His condition then is the crucial and decisive fact to be proven. Permission to communicate with counsel and friends is of no avail if those who come to the jail in response to a prisoner's call are not permitted to see for themselves whether he is intoxicated. In this situation, the right of a defendant to communicate with counsel and friends implies, at the very least, the right to have them see him, observe and examine him, with reference to his alleged intoxication. State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971).

Subdivision (5) Not Applicable to Breathalyzer Tests. — The legislature did not intend for the "reasonable time" contemplated by subdivision (5) of this section to apply to the specialized situation contemplated by § 20-16.2, a civil matter involving the administrative removal of driving privileges as a result of refusing to submit to a breathalyzer test. Seders v. Powell, 298 N.C. 453, 259 S.E.2d 544 (1979).

Denial of Communication Rights Held Not Prejudicial. — Where the defendant was informed of his Miranda rights, waived those rights, and voluntarily submitted his statement admitting guilt to police, the defendant could not have suffered prejudice had he been denied his statutory right to communicate with friends. State v. Curmon, 295 N.C. 453, 245 S.E.2d 503 (1978).

Defendant was not prejudiced by the failure of the police to advise him of his right to communicate with his friends where he waived his Miranda rights and voluntarily submitted his statement to the police. State v. Chapman, 343 N.C. 495, 471 S.E.2d 354 (1996).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Duty of Jailer to Receive Prisoner Before Warrant Issued. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Lee J. Greer, Prosecutor, Thirteenth Judicial District, 40 N.C.A.G. 351 (1969), rendered under former law.

§ 15A-502. Photographs and fingerprints.

(a) A person charged with the commission of a felony or a misdemeanor may be photographed and his fingerprints may be taken for law-enforcement records only when he has been:

(1) Arrested or committed to a detention facility, or

(2) Committed to imprisonment upon conviction of a crime, or

(3) Convicted of a felony.

It shall be the duty of the arresting law-enforcement agency to cause a person charged with the commission of a felony to be fingerprinted and to forward those fingerprints to the State Bureau of Investigation.

(b) This section does not authorize the taking of photographs or fingerprints when the offense charged is a Class 2 or 3 misdemeanor under Chapter 20 of the General Statutes, "Motor Vehicles."

(c) This section does not authorize the taking of photographs or fingerprints of a juvenile alleged to be delinquent except under Article 21 of Chapter 7B of the General Statutes.

(d) This section does not prevent the taking of photographs, moving pictures, video or sound recordings, fingerprints, or the like to show a condition of intoxication or for other evidentiary use.

(e) Fingerprints or photographs taken pursuant to subsection (a) may be forwarded to the State Bureau of Investigation, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or other law-enforcement agencies. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 22; 1979, c. 850; 1981, c. 862, s. 3; 1993, c. 539, s. 298; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c); 1996, 2nd Ex. Sess., c. 18, s. 23.2(b); 1998-202, s. 13(f).)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section carries forward the concept of the present provisions of the former first two paragraphs of § 114-19 in a more logical location than in the Chapter dealing with the Department of Justice. Those provisions have been simplified and broadened in some respects, but restricted as to motor vehicle and juvenile offenses.

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent. — It was the intent of the legislature that photographs taken under the authority of this section could be used for any law enforcement purpose. State v. Carson, 296 N.C. 31, 249 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Official Commentary correctly states the legislature's intent that this section carries forward the concept of the present provisions of the former first two paragraphs of § 114-19. Those provisions have been simplified and broadened in some respects, but restricted as to motor vehicle and juvenile offenses. State v. Wilson, 296 N.C. 298, 250 S.E.2d 621 (1979).

Use of Photograph in Subsequent Identification Procedure. — Where a defendant was legally arrested for a misdemeanor and photographed under the authority of this section, the photograph could be used in a photographic identification procedure in connection with defendant's first-degree rape case. State v. Carson, 296 N.C. 31, 249 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

Photograph taken prior to the defendant's arrest for rape was not illegally taken in contravention of the provisions of this section. State v. Wilson, 296 N.C. 298, 250 S.E.2d 621 (1979).

Section does not create an exclusionary rule of evidence. State v. Wilson, 296 N.C. 298, 250 S.E.2d 621 (1979).

Effect of 1979 Amendment of Subsection (c). — The amendment of subsection (c) of this section to allow fingerprinting of juveniles pursuant to § 7A-596 [see now § 7B-2103] constitutes a narrowing of an exclusionary rule of evidence. In re Stedman, 305 N.C. 92, 286 S.E.2d 527 (1982), overruled on other grounds, State v. Dellinger, 343 N.C. 93, 468 S.E.2d 218 (1996).

Fingerprinting of Juvenile Committing Crime Prior to Effective Date of Procedural Change. — Application of the provisions of §§ 7A-596 and 7A-598 [see now §§ 7B-2103 and 7B-2105] to take the fingerprints of a juvenile accused of a crime committed prior to their effective date did not offend N.C. Const., Art. I, § 16, which forbids the enactment of any ex post facto law or a like prohibition found in U.S. Const., Art. I, § 10. In re Stedman, 305 N.C. 92, 286 S.E.2d 527 (1982), overruled on other grounds, State v. Dellinger, 343 N.C. 93, 468 S.E.2d 218 (1996).

Subsection (c) of this section and § 7A-596 [see now § 7B-2103] are procedural statutes, and a change in the evidentiary or procedural law between the time of the offense and the time of trial did not preclude the State from utilizing the new procedure even though at the time of the offense it was unavailable. In re Stedman, 305 N.C. 92, 286 S.E.2d 527 (1982), overruled on other grounds, State v. Dellinger, 343 N.C. 93, 468 S.E.2d 218 (1996).

§ 15A-503. Police assistance to persons arrested while unconscious or semiconscious.

(a) Whenever a law-enforcement officer arrests a person who is unconscious, semiconscious, or otherwise apparently suffering from some disabling condition, and who is unable to provide information on the causes of the condition, the officer should make a reasonable effort to determine if the person arrested is wearing a bracelet or necklace containing the Medic Alert Foundation's emergency alert symbol to indicate that the person suffers from diabetes, epilepsy, a cardiac condition, or any other form of illness which would cause a loss of consciousness. If such a symbol is found indicating that the person being arrested suffers from one of those conditions, the officer must make a reasonable effort to have appropriate medical care provided.

(b) Failure of a law-enforcement officer to make a reasonable effort to discover an emergency alert symbol, as required by this section, does not by itself establish negligence of the officer, but may be considered along with other evidence to determine if the officer took reasonable precautions to ascertain the emergency medical needs of the person in his custody.

(c) A person who is provided medical care under the provisions of this section is liable for the reasonable costs of that care unless he is indigent.

(d) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 818, s. 1. (1975, c. 306, s. 1; c. 818, s. 1.)

§ 15A-504. Return of released person.

(a) Upon a magistrate's finding under G.S. 15A-511(c)(2) of no probable cause for a warrantless arrest, a law-enforcement officer may return the person previously arrested and any other person accompanying him to the scene of the arrest.

(b) No officer acting pursuant to this section may be held to answer in any civil or criminal action for injury to any person or damage to any property when damage results, whether directly or indirectly, from the actions of the person so released or transported.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to supersede the provisions of G.S. 122C-301. (1981, c. 928; 1987, c. 282, s. 3.)

§ 15A-505. Notification of parent and school.

(a) A law enforcement officer who charges a minor with a criminal offense shall notify the minor's parent or guardian of the charge, as soon as practicable, in person or by telephone. If the minor is taken into custody, the law enforcement officer or the officer's immediate superior shall notify a parent or guardian in writing that the minor is in custody within 24 hours of the minor's arrest. If the parent or guardian of the minor cannot be found, then the officer or the officer's immediate superior shall notify the minor's next-of-kin of the minor's arrest as soon as practicable.

(b) The notification provided for by subsection (a) of this section shall not be required if:

(1) The minor is emancipated;

(2) The minor is not taken into custody and has been charged with a motor vehicle moving violation for which three or fewer points are assessed under G.S. 20-16(c), except an offense involving impaired driving, as defined in G.S. 20-4.01(24a); or

(3) The minor has been charged with a motor vehicle offense that is not a moving violation.

(c) A law enforcement officer who charges a person with a criminal offense that is a felony, except for a criminal offense under Chapter 20 of the General Statutes, shall notify the principal of any school the person attends of the charge as soon as practicable but at least within five days. The notification may be made in person or by telephone. If the person is taken into custody, the law enforcement officer or the officer's immediate supervisor shall notify the principal of any school the person attends. This notification shall be in writing and shall be made within five days of the person's arrest. If a principal receives notification under this subsection, a representative from the district attorney's office shall notify that principal of the final disposition at the trial court level. This notification shall be in writing and shall be made within five days of the disposition. As used in this subsection, the term "school" means any public or private school in the State that is authorized under Chapter 115C of the General Statutes. (1983, c. 681, s. 1; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 26, s. 1; 1997-443, s. 8.29(g).)

§§ 15A-506 through 15A-510: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 24.

Initial Appearance.

§ 15A-511. Initial appearance.

(a) Appearance before Magistrate. —

(1) A law-enforcement officer making an arrest with or without a warrant must take the arrested person without unnecessary delay before a magistrate as provided in G.S. 15A-501.

(2) The magistrate must proceed in accordance with this section, except in those cases in which he has the power to determine the matter pursuant to G.S. 7A-273. In those cases, if the arrest has been without a warrant, the magistrate must prepare a magistrate's order containing a statement of the crime with which the defendant is charged.

(3) If the defendant brought before a magistrate is so unruly as to disrupt and impede the proceedings, becomes unconscious, is grossly intoxicated, or is otherwise unable to understand the procedural rights afforded him by the initial appearance, upon order of the magistrate he may be confined or otherwise secured. If this is done, the magistrate's order must provide for an initial appearance within a reasonable time so as to make certain that the defendant has an opportunity to exercise his rights under this Chapter.

(a1) A proceeding for initial appearance in a noncapital case under this section may be conducted by an audio and video transmission between the magistrate or other authorized judicial official and the defendant in which the parties can see and hear each other. If the defendant has counsel, the defendant shall be allowed to communicate fully and confidentially with his attorney during the proceeding. Prior to the use of audio and video transmission pursuant to this subsection, the procedures and type of equipment for audio and video transmission shall be submitted to the Administrative Office of the Courts by the senior regular resident superior court judge and the chief district court judge for a judicial district or set of districts and approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(b) Statement by the Magistrate. — The magistrate must inform the defendant of:

(1) The charges against him;

(2) His right to communicate with counsel and friends; and

(3) The general circumstances under which he may secure release under the provisions of Article 26, Bail.

(c) Procedure When Arrest Is without Warrant; Magistrate's Order. — If the person has been arrested, for a crime, without a warrant:

(1) The magistrate must determine whether there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and that the person arrested committed it, and in the manner provided by G.S. 15A-304(d).

(2) If the magistrate determines that there is no probable cause the person must be released.

(3) If the magistrate determines that there is probable cause, he must issue a magistrate's order:

a. Containing a statement of the crime of which the person is accused in the same manner as is provided in G.S. 15A-304(c) for a warrant for arrest, and

b. Containing a finding that the defendant has been arrested without a warrant and that there is probable cause for his detention.

(4) Following the issuance of the magistrate's order, the magistrate must proceed in accordance with subsection (e) and must file the order with any supporting affidavits and records in the office of the clerk.

(d) Procedure When Arrest Is Pursuant to Warrant. — If the arrest is made pursuant to a warrant, the magistrate must proceed in accordance with subsection (e).

(e) Commitment or Bail. — If the person arrested is not released pursuant to subsection (c), the magistrate must release him in accordance with Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail, or commit him to an appropriate detention facility pursuant to G.S. 15A-521 pending further proceedings in the case.

(f) Powers Not Limited to Magistrate. — Any judge, justice, or clerk of the General Court of Justice may also conduct an initial appearance as provided in this section. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 1, s. 7; Code, s. 1130; Rev., s. 3182; C.S., s. 4548; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, ss. 9-11; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 141; 1997-268, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

When an arrested person is brought before a magistrate, the magistrate may try the matter if it is within his jurisdiction. Otherwise, there are two possibilities. If the person has been arrested without a warrant, and there has been no judicial determination of probable cause, the magistrate should make that determination, and release the defendant if it is lacking. The determination is made in the same manner as when a warrant is sought. Section 15-46 provided for the issuance of a warrant in such a case — even though the defendant had already been arrested. The new procedure utilizes all of the statements in the warrant format, but eliminates the actual order for arrest. At this point an order of commitment or bail is appropriate if the defendant is not released.

Of course, if the defendant has been arrested under a warrant there already has been an initial determination of probable cause, and it is not necessary to repeat the step. If the defendant is continued in custody, the magistrate must proceed to set bail.

While the steps in this section ordinarily will be performed by a magistrate, it was thought prudent also to authorize other judicial officers to perform these steps (subsection (f)).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

Statute does not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting validity of trial. Carroll v. Turner, 262 F. Supp. 486 (E.D.N.C. 1966), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 969, 88 S. Ct. 1085, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1176 (1968); State v. Broome, 269 N.C. 661, 153 S.E.2d 384 (1967); State v. McCloud, 276 N.C. 518, 173 S.E.2d 753 (1970); State v. Able, 13 N.C. App. 365, 185 S.E.2d 422 (1971), cert. denied, 281 N.C. 514, 189 S.E.2d 36 (1972).

The failure of law enforcement personnel in complying with the provisions of § 15A-501 and this section can result in the violation of a person's constitutional rights. However, these statutes do not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting the validity of a trial. State v. Reynolds, 298 N.C. 380, 259 S.E.2d 843 (1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 941, 100 S. Ct. 2164, 64 L. Ed. 2d 795 (1980).

This section does not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting the validity of a trial. For a violation of this section to be substantial, defendant must show that the delay in some way prejudiced him, for example, by causing a violation of his constitutional rights, or by resulting in a confession that would not have been obtained but for the delay. State v. Martin, 315 N.C. 667, 340 S.E.2d 326 (1986), involving a delay of less than two hours.

The officers' failure to procure a magistrate's signature on the citation for driving without a valid license indicated that the defendant was never arrested for that violation; a perimeter canine sniff which turned up narcotics was, therefore, not justified; defendant's detention during the canine sniff was an illegal seizure; and the trial court properly suppressed evidence subsequently pursuant to the sniff. State v. Fisher, 141 N.C. App. 448, 539 S.E.2d 677 (2000).

Absent Showing of Prejudice. — This section does not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting the validity of the trial in the absence of a showing that defendant was prejudiced thereby. State v. Burgess, 33 N.C. App. 76, 234 S.E.2d 40 (1977).

Deputy sheriffs may not conduct bail hearings nor may they decide on the granting or denying of bail under North Carolina law; that authority is vested in a judicial officer. Clark v. Link, 855 F.2d 156 (4th Cir. 1988).

Requirement That Person Be Taken Before Magistrate "Without Unnecessary Delay". — Subdivision (a)(1) of this section and § 15A-501(2) only require that an arrested person be taken before a magistrate "without unnecessary delay" and a delay of only one hour after the defendant had been taken into custody and advised of his rights could not be considered undue delay. State v. Wheeler, 34 N.C. App. 243, 237 S.E.2d 874 (1977), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 294 N.C. 187, 241 S.E.2d 522 (1978).

Delay Held Necessary and Reasonable. — The delay between the arrest of the defendant and his appearance before a magistrate was necessary and reasonable where the interim period was spent by the arresting officers in recovering the stolen goods and attempting to locate a person arrested with the defendant who had escaped. State v. Sings, 35 N.C. App. 1, 240 S.E.2d 471 (1978).

Where any delay in arrest was at the request of defendant's counsel and was unquestionably not caused by anything the deputies did, and after the arrest warrant was served, there was no delay in presenting defendant before the magistrate, there was no "unnecessary delay" and therefore no breach of duty by the arresting officer. Clark v. Link, 855 F.2d 156 (4th Cir. 1988).

Where defendant contended that the four and one-half hour delay in taking him before a judicial official after service of warrants was a coercive factor which rendered his confession involuntary, but he did not show any causal connection between the confession and the delay, no constitutional provision required exclusion of his statement on this ground. State v. Leak, 90 N.C. App. 351, 368 S.E.2d 430 (1988).

Failure to Take Person Before Magistrate Where Arrested Without Warrant. — Court did not err in not allowing defendant's motion to quash the warrant charging him with resisting arrest for the reason that he was arrested without a warrant and was not taken before a magistrate as provided by the statute, because it did not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting the validity of a trial. State v. Foust, 18 N.C. App. 138, 196 S.E.2d 375 (1973).

Effect of Failure to Issue Magistrate's Order. — Compliance with subdivision (c)(3) of this section is not mandatory, and a failure to comply will not affect the validity of a trial. State v. Matthews, 40 N.C. App. 41, 251 S.E.2d 897 (1979).

Defendant's Right to Communicate With Counsel and Friends. — A defendant arrested for impaired driving was properly informed of his right to communicate with friends and counsel, as required by subsection (b), where the magistrate and the jailer informed defendant that a telephone was available for him to call family, friends, counsel, and others to help with his pretrial release. State v. Haas, 131 N.C. App. 113, 505 S.E.2d 311 (1998).

Failure to Advise Defendants of Their Rights. — Defendants made a sufficient showing of a substantial statutory violation and of the prejudice arising therefrom to warrant relief where the evidence showed that magistrates failed to advise defendants of their rights under subsection (b) of this section, §§ 15A-533(b) and 15A-534(c) and deprived defendants of their rights to secure their liberty for a significant time during a critical period. State v. Knoll, 322 N.C. 535, 369 S.E.2d 558 (1988).

Statutory violations by magistrate, who failed to inform defendant of his rights to pretrial release under either the general provisions of this section or the more specific provisions of § 15A-534.2, did not justify dismissal of driving while impaired charges. State v. Gilbert, 85 N.C. App. 594, 355 S.E.2d 261 (1987). But see, State v. Knoll, 322 N.C. 535, 369 S.E.2d 558 (1988).

Effect of Violation of Subsection (e) on Confession. — Assuming, arguendo, that magistrate denied bail in violation of subsection (e) of this section, the trial court was not required to suppress a voluntary confession given thereafter by defendant. State v. Simpson, 320 N.C. 313, 357 S.E.2d 332 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 963, 108 S. Ct. 1230, 99 L. Ed. 2d 430 (1988).

Delay Not Unreasonable. — Defendant's argument that four hour interval between arrest and appearance before a magistrate violated the requirement that an officer take an arrested person before a magistrate without unnecessary delay was without merit. State v. Dickens, 346 N.C. 26, 484 S.E.2d 553 (1997).

Applied in State v. Williams, 65 N.C. App. 498, 309 S.E.2d 721 (1983).

Article 25.

Commitment.

§ 15A-521. Commitment to detention facility pending trial.

(a) Commitment. — Every person charged with a crime and held in custody who has not been released pursuant to Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail, must be committed by a written order of the judicial official who conducted the initial appearance as provided in Article 24 to an appropriate detention facility as provided in this section.

(b) Order of Commitment; Modification. — The order of commitment must:

(1) State the name of the person charged or identify him if his name cannot be ascertained.

(2) Specify the offense charged.

(3) Designate the place of confinement.

(4) If release is authorized pursuant to Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail, state the conditions of release. If a separate order stating the conditions has been entered, the commitment may make reference to that order, a copy of which must be attached to the commitment.

(5) Subject to the provisions of subdivision (4), direct, as appropriate, that the defendant be:

a. Produced before a district court judge pursuant to Article 29 of this Chapter, First Appearance before District Court Judge,

b. Produced before a district court judge for a probable cause hearing as provided in Article 30 of this Chapter, Probable-Cause Hearing,

c. Produced for trial in the district or superior court, or

d. Held for other specified purposes.

(6) State the name and office of the judicial official making the order and be signed by him.

The order of commitment may be modified or continued by the same or another judicial official by supplemental order.

(c) Copies and Use of Order, Receipt of Prisoner. —

(1) The order of commitment must be delivered to a law-enforcement officer, who must deliver the order and the prisoner to the detention facility named therein.

(2) The jailer must receive the prisoner and the order of commitment, and note on the order of commitment the time and date of receipt. As used in this subdivision, "jailer" includes any person having control of a detention facility.

(3) Upon releasing the prisoner pursuant to the terms of the order, or upon delivering the prisoner to the court, the jailer must note the time and date on the order and return it to the clerk.

(4) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 142.

(d) Commitment of Witnesses. — If a court directs detention of a material witness pursuant to G.S. 15A-803, the court must enter an order in the manner provided in this section, except that the order must:

(1) State the reason for the detention in lieu of the description of the offense charged, and

(2) Direct that the witness be brought before the appropriate court when his testimony is required. (1868-9, c. 178, subch. 3, ss. 24, 32; Code, ss. 1155, 1163; Rev., ss. 3230, 3232; C.S., ss. 4597, 4599; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 142.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section essentially carries forward the provisions of Article 12 of Chapter 15, Commitment to Prison (§§ 15-125, 126, and 127).

Changes from the old law involve first tying the new statute in with the modifications in the bail provisions and in the provisions relating to probable cause hearings. In addition specific designation of the county jail as the place of confinement is omitted, and provision is made for modification or continuation of the order.

The subsection relating to copies of the order is new. The former statute did not in terms require an order, but rather contained a directive as to the contents of an order for pretrial commitment. In some counties the practice had arisen of omitting the order of commitment, and simply writing the amount of the bond on the face of the warrant. Subsection (a) will require the order, and subsection (c) will ensure that the officer having the prisoner in custody will have the original order, that a copy of every order of commitment issued by a judicial officer will be on file in the clerk's office in which it was issued, and that if the prisoner is transferred to another county, the copy of the order of commitment will go to the clerk's office in that county. This will provide a source of information in the clerk's office about the population of the local detention facilities.

CASE NOTES

Verbal Order Invalid. — A verbal order of a magistrate sending a prisoner to jail, whether made before or after the examination on the warrant, is not a sufficient authority for the officer to whom the order is given. State v. James, 78 N.C. 455 (1878), decided under former law.

Article 26.

Bail.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

In formulating its bail provisions, the Commission referred to several sources, among them D.C. Code, Sections 23-1321 to 23-1332, as enacted by the District of Columbia Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act of 1970, and A.B.A. Project on Standards for Criminal Justice, Standards Relating to Pretrial Release (1968). The Commission worked upon several successive drafts quite extensively, however, and the final product is not recognizably similar to the provisions of any other jurisdiction.

The major changes proposed in our bail laws are:

(1) Making bail on appeal from superior court discretionary in all cases.

(2) Inserting a carefully worked out procedure which is designed to result in more efficient handling of bond forfeitures. No person as to whom a judgment on a forfeiture remains outstanding for more than 10 days may become surety on any bail bond in the judicial district so long as the judgment remains unsatisfied.

A proposal of the Commission to give the bail-setting official the option of authorizing release on a bail bond to be secured with a deposit of 10% of the amount of the bond with the clerk was removed in the course of passage by the General Assembly.

The Commission discussed the professional bail bondsman. It finally decided that he still provides a service in a number of counties, and except for § 15A-541 the Article does not mention the professional bondsman. He is treated in law as any other person acting as a surety upon a bail bond, although certain restrictive provisions are obviously written with the bondsman in mind. The Commission also discussed the advisability of revising the provisions relating to licensing of professional bondsmen in Chapter 85A of the General Statutes, and making that Chapter applicable to all counties. In the press of its work, however, the Commission never found time to develop this as part of its 1973 proposal.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

Part 1. General Provisions.

§ 15A-531. Definitions.

As used in this Article the following definitions apply unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

(1) "Accommodation bondsman" means a natural person who has reached the age of 18 years and is a bona fide resident of this State and who, aside from love and affection and release of the person concerned, receives no consideration for action as surety and who endorses the bail bond after providing satisfactory evidences of ownership, value, and marketability of real or personal property to the extent necessary to reasonably satisfy the official taking bond that such real or personal property will in all respects be sufficient to assure that the full principal sum of the bond will be realized in the event of breach of the conditions thereof. "Consideration" as used in this subdivision does not include the legal rights of a surety against a defendant by reason of breach of the conditions of a bail bond nor does it include collateral furnished to and securing the surety so long as the value of the surety's rights in the collateral do not exceed the defendant's liability to the surety by reason of a breach in the conditions of said bail bond.

(2) "Address of record" means:
   a. For a defendant or an accommodation bondsman, the address entered on the bail bond under G.S. 15A-544.2, or any later address filed by that person with the clerk of superior court.
   b. For an insurance company, the address of the insurance company as it appears on the power of appointment of the company's bail agent registered with the clerk of superior court under G.S. 58-71-140.
   c. For a bail agent, the address shown on the bail agent's license from the Department of Insurance registered with the clerk of superior court under G.S. 58-71-140.
   d. For a professional bondsman, the address shown on that bondsman's license from the Department of Insurance, as registered with the clerk of superior court under G.S. 58-71-140.

(3) "Bail agent" means any person who is licensed by the Commissioner as a surety bondsman under Article 71 of Chapter 58 of the General Statutes, is appointed by an insurance company by power of attorney to execute or countersign bail bonds for the insurance company in connection with judicial proceedings, and receives or is promised consideration for doing so.

(4) "Bail bond" means an undertaking by the defendant to appear in court as required upon penalty of forfeiting bail to the State in a stated amount. Bail bonds include an unsecured appearance bond, an appearance bond secured by a cash deposit of the full amount of the bond, an appearance bond secured by a mortgage under G.S. 58-74-5, and an appearance bond secured by at least one solvent surety. A bail bond for which the surety is a bail agent acting on behalf of an insurance company is considered the same as a cash deposit for all purposes in this Article. A bail bond signed by a professional bondsman who is not a bail agent is not considered the same as a cash deposit under this Article. Cash bonds set in child support contempt proceedings shall not be satisfied in any manner other than the deposit of cash.

(5) "Defendant" means a person obligated to appear in court as required upon penalty of forfeiting bail under a bail bond.

(6) "Insurance company" means any domestic, foreign, or alien surety company which has qualified under Chapter 58 of the General Statutes generally to transact surety business and specifically to transact bail bond business in this State.

(7) "Professional bondsman" means any person who is approved and licensed by the Commissioner of Insurance under Article 71 of Chapter 58 of the General Statutes and who pledges cash or approved securities with the Commissioner as security for bail bonds written in connection with a judicial proceeding and receives or is promised money or other things of value therefor.

(8) "Surety" means:
   a. The insurance company, when a bail bond is executed by a bail agent on behalf of an insurance company.
   b. The professional bondsman, when a bail bond is executed by a professional bondsman or by a runner on behalf of a professional bondsman.
   c. The accommodation bondsman, when a bail bond is executed by an accommodation bondsman. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 12; 1995, c. 290, s. 1; c. 503, s. 1; 2000-133, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The reference in § 15A-531(1) to "premium-secured appearance bond" is to the bond issued by the clerk upon a deposit of 10% of the face amount. In amending Article 26 to delete provisions pertaining to this type of bond, the General Assembly overlooked the phrase in subdivision (1).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases below were decided under former similar provisions of Chapter 15 and earlier statutes.

Recognizance Binds to Three Things. — A recognizance (or bail bond) in general binds to three things: (1) To appear and answer either to a specified charge or to such matters as may be objected; (2) to stand and abide by the judgment of the court; and (3) not to depart without leave of the court; and that each of these particulars is distinct and independent. State v. Schenck, 138 N.C. 560, 49 S.E. 917 (1905); State v. Eure, 172 N.C. 874, 89 S.E. 788 (1916); State v. Mallory, 266 N.C. 31, 145 S.E.2d 335 (1965), cert. denied, 384 U.S. 928, 86 S. Ct. 1443, 16 L. Ed. 2d 531 (1966).

Defendant Must Appear Until Discharged. — An appearance bond by its terms, and under the uniform ruling of the court, requires that the defendant appear term after term until he is discharged on a verdict of acquittal or by order of the court. An appearance bond is in lieu of custody in jail, in which case the defendant could not be released until discharged by order of the court. State v. Eure, 172 N.C. 874, 89 S.E. 788 (1916).

Recognizance for the appearance of the defendant at the next term of the court to be held for a given county is valid and binds the defendant to appear at the next term and at the courthouse, although neither time nor place is specifically named; because everyone knows, or is presumed to know, the time and place of holding the court. State v. Houston, 74 N.C. 174 (1876).

Failure to Appear at Time and Place Other Than That Specified. — If the recognizance specifies time and place, the defendant cannot be held to be in default for not appearing at some other time or place. State v. Houston, 74 N.C. 174 (1876).

Continuance Does Not Release Recognizance. — The continuance of a criminal case does not release the recognizance given for the appearance of the defendant. State v. Morgan, 136 N.C. 593, 48 S.E. 604 (1904).

Agreement by Prosecutor to Discharge Will Not Relieve Defendant. — An agreement by a solicitor (now prosecutor) for the State to discharge a defendant if he would become a State's witness against codefendant will not relieve such defendant from a forfeited recognizance. State v. Moody, 69 N.C. 529 (1873).

Liability of a surety upon an appearance bond is a continuing one until discharged by renewal of bond or production and surrender of principal. He is not released by the principal's having been drunk and under arrest when his case was called in court and continued, and by the principal's having since become a fugitive from justice under charge of a different offense. State v. Holt, 145 N.C. 450, 59 S.E. 64 (1907).

Propriety of Sentence Reflecting That Defendant Was on Pretrial Release When Crime Was Committed. — Whether or not one on pretrial release on another felony charge is in fact guilty, it is to be expected that he would, while the question of his guilt is pending, be particularly cautious to avoid commission of another criminal offense. If he is not and is convicted of another offense, his status as a pretrial releasee in a pending case is a legitimate circumstance to be considered in imposing sentence. The legislature may constitutionally require that it be considered. One demonstrates disdain for the law by committing an offense while on release pending trial of an earlier charge, and this may indeed be considered an aggravating circumstance. State v. Webb, 309 N.C. 549, 308 S.E.2d 252 (1983).

Applied in State v. Cronauer, 65 N.C. App. 449, 310 S.E.2d 78 (1983).

Quoted in State v. Cox, 90 N.C. App. 742, 370 S.E.2d 260 (1988).

§ 15A-532. Persons authorized to determine conditions for release; use of two-way audio and video transmission.

(a) Judicial officials may determine conditions for release of persons brought before them or as provided in subsection (b) of this section, in accordance with this Article.

(b) Any proceeding under this Article to determine, modify, or revoke conditions of pretrial release in a noncapital case may be conducted by an audio and video transmission between the judicial official and the defendant in which the parties can see and hear each other. If the defendant has counsel, the defendant shall be allowed to communicate fully and confidentially with his attorney during the proceeding. Upon motion of the defendant, the court may not use an audio and video transmission.

(c) Prior to the use of audio and video transmission pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, the procedures and type of equipment for audio and video transmission shall be submitted to the Administrative Office of the Courts by the senior regular resident superior court judge for a judicial district or set of districts and approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1993, c. 30, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section builds upon the definition of "judicial official" in § 15A-101(5).

§ 15A-533. Right to pretrial release in capital and noncapital cases.

(a) A defendant charged with any crime, whether capital or noncapital, who is alleged to have committed this crime while still residing in or subsequent to his escape or during an unauthorized absence from involuntary commitment in a mental health facility designated or licensed by the Department of Health and Human Services, and whose commitment is determined to be still valid by the judge or judicial officer authorized to determine pretrial release to be valid, has no right to pretrial release. In lieu of pretrial release, however, the individual shall be returned to the treatment facility in which he was residing at the time of the alleged crime or from which he escaped or absented himself for continuation of his treatment pending the additional proceedings on the criminal offense.

(b) A defendant charged with a noncapital offense must have conditions of pretrial release determined, in accordance with G.S. 15A-534.

(c) A judge may determine in his discretion whether a defendant charged with a capital offense may be released before trial. If he determines release is warranted, the judge must authorize release of the defendant in accordance with G.S. 15A-534.

(d) Subject to rebuttal by the person, it shall be presumed that no condition of release will reasonably assure the appearance of the person as required and the safety of the community if a judicial official finds the following:

(1) There is reasonable cause to believe that the person committed an offense involving trafficking in a controlled substance;

(2) The drug trafficking offense was committed while the person was on pretrial release for another offense; and

(3) The person has been previously convicted of a Class A through E felony or an offense involving trafficking in a controlled substance and not more than five years has elapsed since the date of conviction or the person's release from prison for the offense, whichever is later.

Such person may only be released by a district or superior court judge upon a finding that there is a reasonable assurance that the person will appear and release does not pose an unreasonable risk of harm to the community. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1981, c. 936, s. 2; 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a); 1998-208, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The shift to the word "judge" in subsection (b) is intentional. The section restates in simplified fashion the provisions of former § 15-102 and § 15-103.

CASE NOTES

Bail Discretionary for Capital Offense. — Whether a defendant charged with a capital offense is entitled to a bail bond is a matter in the discretion of the trial judge. State v. Oliver, 302 N.C. 28, 274 S.E.2d 183 (1981).

First-Degree Murder Is "Capital Offense" Regardless of Date Committed. — Whether or not a particular defendant, depending upon the date his crime was committed, faces the death penalty, the crime of first-degree murder is a "capital offense" within the meaning of subsection (b) of this section, so that the release of such defendant on bail is a matter to be determined within the discretion of the trial judge. This is so notwithstanding that the trial itself may not be a "capital case" within the meaning of the jury selection statute, § 15A-1217. State v. Sparks, 297 N.C. 314, 255 S.E.2d 373 (1979).

Failure to Advise Defendants of Their Rights. — Defendants made a sufficient showing of a substantial statutory violation and of the prejudice arising therefrom to warrant relief where the evidence showed that magistrates failed to advise defendants of their rights under § 15A-511(b), subsection (b) of this section and § 15A-534(c) and deprived defendants of their rights to secure their liberty for a significant time during a critical period. State v. Knoll, 322 N.C. 535, 369 S.E.2d 558 (1988).

Applied in State v. Ham, 105 N.C. App. 658, 414 S.E.2d 577 (1992).

§ 15A-534. Procedure for determining conditions of pretrial release.

(a) In determining conditions of pretrial release a judicial official must impose one of the following conditions:

(1) Release the defendant on his written promise to appear.

(2) Release the defendant upon his execution of an unsecured appearance bond in an amount specified by the judicial official.

(3) Place the defendant in the custody of a designated person or organization agreeing to supervise him.

(4) Require the execution of an appearance bond in a specified amount secured by a cash deposit of the full amount of the bond, by a mortgage pursuant to G.S. 58-74-5, or by at least one solvent surety.

If condition (3) is imposed, however, the defendant may elect to execute an appearance bond under subdivision (4). The judicial official may also place restrictions on the travel, associations, conduct, or place of abode of the defendant as conditions of pretrial release.

(b) The judicial official in granting pretrial release must impose condition (1), (2), or (3) in subsection (a) above unless he determines that such release will not reasonably assure the appearance of the defendant as required; will pose a danger of injury to any person; or is likely to result in destruction of evidence, subornation of perjury, or intimidation of potential witnesses. Upon making the determination, the judicial official must then impose condition (4) in subsection (a) above instead of condition (1), (2), or (3), and must record the reasons for so doing in writing to the extent provided in the policies or requirements issued by the senior resident superior court judge pursuant to G.S. 15A-535(a).

(c) In determining which conditions of release to impose, the judicial official must, on the basis of available information, take into account the nature and circumstances of the offense charged; the weight of the evidence against the defendant; the defendant's family ties, employment, financial resources, character, and mental condition; whether the defendant is intoxicated to such a degree that he would be endangered by being released without supervision; the length of his residence in the community; his record of convictions; his history of flight to avoid prosecution or failure to appear at court proceedings; and any other evidence relevant to the issue of pretrial release.

(d) The judicial official authorizing pretrial release under this section must issue an appropriate order containing a statement of the conditions imposed, if any; inform the defendant in writing of the penalties applicable to violations of the conditions of his release; and advise him that his arrest will be ordered immediately upon any violation. The order of release must be filed with the clerk and a copy given the defendant.

(d1) When conditions of pretrial release are being imposed on a defendant who has failed on one or more prior occasions to appear to answer one or more of the charges to which the conditions apply, the judicial official shall at a minimum impose the conditions of pretrial release that are recommended in any order for the arrest of the defendant that was issued for the defendant's most recent failure to appear. If no conditions are recommended in that order for arrest, the judicial official shall require the execution of a secured appearance bond in an amount at least double the amount of the most recent previous secured or unsecured bond for the charges or, if no bond has yet been required for the charges, in the amount of at least five hundred dollars ($500.00). The judicial official shall also impose such restrictions on the travel, associations, conduct, or place of abode of the defendant as will assure that the defendant will not again fail to appear. The judicial official shall indicate on the release order that the defendant was arrested or surrendered after failing to appear as required under a prior release order. If the information available to the judicial official indicates that the defendant has failed on two or more prior occasions to appear to answer the charges, the judicial official shall indicate that fact on the release order.

(e) A magistrate or a clerk may modify his pretrial release order at any time prior to the first appearance before the district court judge. At or after such first appearance, except when the conditions of pretrial release have been reviewed by the superior court pursuant to G.S. 15A-539, a district court judge may modify a pretrial release order of the magistrate or clerk or any pretrial release order entered by him at any time prior to:

(1) In a misdemeanor case tried in the district court, the noting of an appeal; and

(2) In a case in the original trial jurisdiction of the superior court, the binding of the defendant over to superior court after the holding, or waiver, of a probable-cause hearing.

After a case is before the superior court, a superior court judge may modify the pretrial release order of a magistrate, clerk, or district court judge, or any such order entered by him, at any time prior to the time set out in G.S. 15A-536(a).

(f) For good cause shown any judge may at any time revoke an order of pretrial release. Upon application of any defendant whose order of pretrial release has been revoked, the judge must set new conditions of pretrial release in accordance with this Article.

(g) In imposing conditions of pretrial release and in modifying and revoking orders of release under this section, the judicial official must take into account all evidence available to him which he considers reliable and is not strictly bound by the rules of evidence applicable to criminal trials.

(h) A bail bond posted pursuant to this section is effective and binding upon the obligor throughout all stages of the proceeding in the trial division of the General Court of Justice until the entry of judgment in the district court from which no appeal is taken or the entry of judgment in the superior court. The obligation of an obligor, however, is terminated at an earlier time if:

(1) A judge authorized to do so releases the obligor from his bond; or

(2) The principal is surrendered by a surety in accordance with G.S. 15A-540; or

(3) The proceeding is terminated by voluntary dismissal by the State before forfeiture is ordered under G.S. 15A-544(b); or

(4) Prayer for judgment has been continued indefinitely in the district court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 13; 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1134, s. 5; 1987, c. 481, s. 1; 1989, c. 259; 2001-487, s. 46.5(b).)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section differs from the prior law in expressly favoring the policy that pretrial release of the defendant should be effected under the three conditions that do not depend upon the defendant's financial condition. Subsection (b). Only if the official determines that none of those conditions will assure the appearance of the defendant or protect against other possible harm may he impose the requirement that the defendant post a secured bond. Although the other possible harm may affect which conditions are imposed, the Commission steered clear of the preventive-detention controversy. The proposal allows the defendant to elect to post a secured bail bond rather than to be subjected to release in someone's custody, and his dangerousness and potential for harm, other than the risk of nonappearance, are not factors to be considered in setting the conditions of release on the secured bail bond. See subsection (a).

Subsection (d) requires the defendant to be given a copy of the pretrial release order. Thus the defendant will have in written form a statement of the conditions imposed on him and notice of the penalties for failure to appear as required.

There are special provisions relating to modification or revocation of pretrial release orders tailored to the various pretrial stages in subsection (e). The general modification or revocation provisions as to all release orders are in § 15A-538 to § 15A-540. Because of the need on occasion to act swiftly to revoke conditions of release which may not be adequate to keep a defendant from fleeing prior to trial, subsection (f) allows revocation by any judge at any time. Presumably a district court judge would not revoke an order of release of a superior court judge without excellent cause.

Subsection (h) carries forward in modified form the provisions of § 15-104.1(a).

Editor's Note. — G.S. 15A-544, referred to in subdivision (h)(3) of this section, was repealed by Session Laws 2000-133, s. 4, effective January 1, 2001. See now § 15A-544.1 et seq.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-487, s. 46.5(b), effective December 16, 2001, added subsection (d1).

CASE NOTES

Primary purpose of an appearance bond is to insure the defendant's presence at trial. State v. Jones, 295 N.C. 345, 245 S.E.2d 711 (1978).

Appearance bond is a contract of the defendant and the surety with the State. General rules for construction of contracts thus determine liability thereon. A contract must be construed as a whole, considering each clause and word with reference to other provisions and giving effect to each if possible by any reasonable construction. The heart of a contract is the intention of the parties as determined from its language, purposes, and subject matter, and the situation of the parties at the time of execution. State v. Corl, 58 N.C. App. 107, 293 S.E.2d 264 (1982).

Deputy sheriffs may not conduct bail hearings, nor may they decide on the granting or denying of bail under North Carolina law; that authority is vested in a judicial officer. Clark v. Link, 855 F.2d 156 (4th Cir. 1988).

Amount of bail pending trial is a matter within the trial judge's discretion. State v. Jones, 295 N.C. 345, 245 S.E.2d 711 (1978).

Accused May Deposit Cash. — The law contemplates that a defendant in a criminal prosecution may give security for his appearance to answer to the charge and the fact that defendant of his own volition, chooses to deposit the amount of the bond required in cash is not a violation of the statute, but a compliance with its spirit and meaning. White v. Ordille, 229 N.C. 490, 50 S.E.2d 499 (1948), decided under prior law.

Cash deposited by accused as security for his appearance remains his property, subject to the conditions of a recognizance, the magistrate becoming the custodian of the cash for the benefit of the State only insofar as the debt of accused to the State is concerned. If defendant fails to perform the conditions, the deposit will be subject to forfeiture. But if he performs the conditions, the cash deposit would be returnable to him. This is a right which he may enforce against the custodian of the deposit. White v. Ordille, 229 N.C. 490, 50 S.E.2d 499 (1948), decided under prior law.

And Is Liable to Attachment. — A defendant in a criminal prosecution who is a nonresident of the State, and who voluntarily deposits cash in lieu of bond for his appearance for a preliminary hearing, has such property right and interest in the deposit as is liable to attachment and garnishment at the instance of his creditor pending such preliminary hearing. White v. Ordille, 229 N.C. 490, 50 S.E.2d 499 (1948), decided under prior law.

Failure to Advise Defendants of Their Rights. — Defendants made a sufficient showing of a substantial statutory violation and of the prejudice arising therefrom to warrant relief where the evidence showed that magistrates failed to advise defendants of their rights under §§ 15A-511(b), 15A-533(b) and subsection (c) of this section and deprived defendants of their rights to secure their liberty for a significant time during a critical period. State v. Knoll, 322 N.C. 535, 369 S.E.2d 558 (1988).

Consideration of Defendant's Mental and Physical Condition. — In determining the conditions of release or the propriety of revoking a defendant's bond, the trial court may consider not only the question of whether the defendant will appear for trial but may also consider whether he will appear for trial in such mental and physical condition as to be able to proceed. State v. Brooks, 38 N.C. App. 445, 248 S.E.2d 369 (1978).

Where the defendant had specifically indicated to the court in his motion for a continuance that his illness and the medication it necessitated directly impaired his mental capacity, and the defendant's evidence additionally indicated that, absent hospitalization and definitive treatment, the condition might well continue to impair his mental ability beyond the next criminal term of court, the trial court's order granting the defendant's motion for a continuance and revoking his appearance bond in order to insure that he would be both present and able to proceed with trial was without error. State v. Brooks, 38 N.C. App. 445, 248 S.E.2d 369 (1978).

Modification of Pretrial Release Orders. — After a case is before the superior court, a superior court judge may modify the pretrial release order of a magistrate, clerk or district court judge or any such order entered by him at any time before defendant's guilt has been established in superior court. Section 15A-536 imposes additional restrictions upon the modification of pretrial release orders after a defendant has been convicted in superior court. State v. Perry, 316 N.C. 87, 340 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

Bond provision that defendant appear "whenever required" and render himself amenable to court orders "at all times" must be considered only "until the entry of judgment in the superior court." Where the bond is derived in haec verba from subsection (h) of this section, the bond and that subsection dictate that the sureties' liability terminates upon entry of judgment. State v. Corl, 58 N.C. App. 107, 293 S.E.2d 264 (1982).

Increase in Bond During Trial. — Where, during trial, the trial judge noted defendant's misconduct in the presence of jurors and the court, and he was aware that defendant faced serious punishment if convicted and that defendant had just lost the aid of one of his prime witnesses, and in light of these circumstances, the court expressed doubt as to the sufficiency of the bond to bring defendant to court until a final determination of his guilt or innocence, the trial judge did not err by increasing defendant's bond during the course of the trial. State v. Perry, 316 N.C. 87, 340 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

Commitment of Defendant During Trial. — In addition to modification of a bail bond, a trial judge has discretionary power to order a defendant taken into custody during the progress of a trial. State v. Perry, 316 N.C. 87, 340 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

Factors Guiding Court's Discretion to Order Defendant into Custody. — Before exercising its discretionary power to order a criminal defendant into custody, a trial court should consider whether there is some indication the defendant will fail to reappearwhether there is a danger of injury to, or intimidation of, witnesses if the defendant remains free, whether there are less restrictive alternatives to incarceration, and whether incarceration of the defendant would unduly interfere with the ability of the defendant to consult with counsel or to prepare his defense. State v. Suggs, 130 N.C. App. 140, 502 S.E.2d 383 (1998).

Failure to Consider Statutory Factors. — Defendant was not prejudiced by the magistrate's failure to inquire into every individual statutory factor in determining the conditions of his pretrial release, where the defendant resided outside the county and none of the other factors would have required the magistrate to depart from the $500 bond he had set. State v. Haas, 131 N.C. App. 113, 505 S.E.2d 311 (1998).

Pretrial Assignment to Division of Adult Probation. — The legislature has provided for pretrial assignment of a defendant to the Division of Adult Probation and Parole only upon deferred prosecution, and upon the agreement to assume supervision of the person. State v. Gravette, 327 N.C. 114, 393 S.E.2d 856 (1990).

Court Had No Authority to Order Supervision of Defendant. — Superior court had no authority to enter order requiring Division of Adult Probation and Parole, without its consent, to provide supervision of defendant, who had been determined incompetent to stand trial but not subject to involuntary commitment, while defendant was in custody of his former wife. State v. Gravette, 327 N.C. 114, 393 S.E.2d 856 (1990).

Stay of commitment is appropriate and customary under certain circumstances. Provision should be made, however, to assure the defendant's appearance when ordered. This section and bonds entered pursuant thereto do not make such provision. State v. Corl, 58 N.C. App. 107, 293 S.E.2d 264 (1982).

Claim of Prejudice Due to Excessive Bail. — A claim that excessive bail prejudiced the efforts of the accused to prepare for trial will not be sustained on mere unsupported and conclusory allegations. State v. Jones, 295 N.C. 345, 245 S.E.2d 711 (1978).

Burden on Defendant to Demonstrate Judge's Failure to Consider Appropriate Factors. — Absent some evidence from the defendant indicating that the trial judge did not consider the appropriate factors in either the initial establishment of the bond, in the later modification, or in subsequent refusals to modify, the court concluded that the law relating to pretrial release was properly applied to him although there was no indication that the judge did, in fact, consider the factors in this section. State v. Gilbert, 139 N.C. App. 657, 535 S.E.2d 94 (2000).

Compliance with Statute Shown. — Where neither the transcript from a pretrial hearing, nor anything else in the record, indicated that the judge did not consider the appropriate factors in either the initial establishment of defendant's bond, in the later modification, or in subsequent refusals to modify, absent some evidence to the contrary from the defendant, it was concluded that the law relating to pretrial release was properly applied to him. State v. O'Neal, 108 N.C. App. 661, 424 S.E.2d 680 (1993).

Substantial Violation of Statute Not Shown. — Where magistrate failed to inquire into defendant's character and mental condition, and proceeded without information regarding his financial resources, length of residence in the community and family ties, (though defendant did inform magistrate that he was married) before he was taken from the magistrate's office to the jail, defendant did not make a sufficient showing of any substantial statutory violation which would warrant dismissal of the charges against him based on a failure to inquire into every individual factor, given all the other information which the magistrate had before her in setting the bond; defendant also failed to show how inquiry into these considerations would have required the magistrate to proceed any differently in setting the conditions of pretrial release. State v. Eliason, 100 N.C. App. 313, 395 S.E.2d 702 (1990).

Applied in State v. Overton, 60 N.C. App. 1, 298 S.E.2d 695 (1982); State v. Cronauer, 65 N.C. App. 449, 310 S.E.2d 78 (1983); State v. Jefferson, 68 N.C. App. 725, 315 S.E.2d 744 (1984); State v. Ham, 105 N.C. App. 658, 414 S.E.2d 577 (1992); State v. Jarman, 140 N.C. App. 198, 535 S.E.2d 875 (2000).

§ 15A-534.1. Crimes of domestic violence; bail and pretrial release.

(a) In all cases in which the defendant is charged with assault on, communicating a threat to, or committing a felony provided in Articles 7A, 8, 10, or 15 of Chapter 14 of the General Statutes upon a spouse or former spouse or a person with whom the defendant lives or has lived as if married, with domestic criminal trespass, or with violation of an order entered pursuant to Chapter 50B, Domestic Violence, of the General Statutes, the judicial official who determines the conditions of pretrial release shall be a judge, and the following provisions shall apply in addition to the provisions of G.S. 15A-534:

(1) Upon a determination by the judge that the immediate release of the defendant will pose a danger of injury to the alleged victim or to any other person or is likely to result in intimidation of the alleged victim and upon a determination that the execution of an appearance bond as required by G.S. 15A-534 will not reasonably assure that such injury or intimidation will not occur, a judge may retain the defendant in custody for a reasonable period of time while determining the conditions of pretrial release.

(2) A judge may impose the following conditions on pretrial release:

a. That the defendant stay away from the home, school, business or place of employment of the alleged victim;

b. That the defendant refrain from assaulting, beating, molesting, or wounding the alleged victim;

c. That the defendant refrain from removing, damaging or injuring specifically identified property;

d. That the defendant may visit his or her child or children at times and places provided by the terms of any existing order entered by a judge.

The conditions set forth above may be imposed in addition to requiring that the defendant execute a secured appearance bond.

(3) Should the defendant be mentally ill and dangerous to himself or others or a substance abuser and dangerous to himself or others, the provisions of Article 5 of Chapter 122C of the General Statutes shall apply.

(b) A defendant may be retained in custody not more than 48 hours from the time of arrest without a determination being made under this section by a judge. If a judge has not acted pursuant to this section within 48 hours of arrest, the magistrate shall act under the provisions of this section. (1979, c. 561, s. 4; 1989, c. 290, s. 2; 1995, c. 527, s. 3; 2001-518, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-518, s. 2, effective March 1, 2002, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, substituted "assault on, communicating a threat to, or committing a felony provided in Articles 7A, 8, 10, or 15 of Chapter 14 of the General Statutes upon" for "assault on or communicating a threat to" in the introductory language of subsection (a).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section does not violate procedural due process. State v. Thompson, 128 N.C. App. 547, 496 S.E.2d 597 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

Under either strict scrutiny or the rational relation test, this section cannot be said to violate substantive due process. State v. Thompson, 128 N.C. App. 547, 496 S.E.2d 597 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

Subsection (b) of this section is not facially unconstitutional as violative of substantive due process rights, because the subsection serves the regulatory purpose of having a judge, rather than a magistrate, determine the conditions of pretrial release in domestic violence situations. State v. Thompson, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

Subsection (b) of this section is not facially unconstitutional as violative of procedural due process rights, because the subsection provides that the detainee shall appear before a magistrate to have conditions set if pretrial release conditions are not set by a judge within 48 hours. State v. Thompson, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

Subsection (b) of this section does not violate the double jeopardy rights of defendants in providing both a pretrial detention period and a prosecution, because the subsection's purpose is regulatory: to allow a judge to set release conditions in alleged domestic violence cases. State v. Thompson, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

Subsection (b), as applied, violated the defendant's procedural due process rights, where he was taken before a magistrate, who ordered a hearing to be held almost exactly 48 hours later as there were judges available to hear the matter more quickly. State v. Thompson, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

This section does not violate the North Carolina Constitution on due process or double-jeopardy grounds (whether generally or as applied). State v. Gilbert, 139 N.C. App. 657, 535 S.E.2d 94 (2000).

Defendant had standing to challenge the constitutionality of this section's application where it was applied to him, whether improperly or not. State v. Gilbert, 139 N.C. App. 657, 535 S.E.2d 94 (2000).

Intent. — It is evident the intent of this section is to protect victims of domestic violence from further harm by their abusers and to provide a period of time in which inflamed tempers may abate. State v. Thompson, 128 N.C. App. 547, 496 S.E.2d 597 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

This section applied to defendant's arrest for assault but not to his subsequent arrest for kidnapping. State v. Gilbert, 139 N.C. App. 657, 535 S.E.2d 94 (2000).

This section is regulatory, and not punitive in nature and therefore does not constitute punishment for purposes of double jeopardy. State v. Thompson, 128 N.C. App. 547, 496 S.E.2d 597 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

Conditions of Pretrial Release. — The conditions of pretrial release found in subdivision (a)(2) are also intended to shield victims from further harm, as evidenced by the restrictions they impose on a defendant's contact with a victim's person and property. State v. Thompson, 128 N.C. App. 547, 496 S.E.2d 597 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998).

The Defendant's Procedural Due Process Rights Were Violated. — This section was unconstitutionally applied to a defendant charged with assault on a female according to State v. Thompson, 349 N.C. 483, 508 S.E.2d 277 (1998); defendant's release order specified that he was to be held 48 hours and brought before the court prior to that time, but, despite the availability of judges earlier in the day, defendant was not taken in front of a judge until sometime between 2:00 p.m. and 5:00 p.m., approximately thirty-nine hours after he was placed in custody. State v. Clegg, 142 N.C. App. 35, 542 S.E.2d 269 (2001), cert. denied, 353 N.C. 453, 548 S.E.2d 529 (2001).

The defendant's procedural due process rights were not violated under this section where there was a session of district court at approximately 9:30 a.m., but his bond hearing was delayed until 1:30 p.m. that afternoon, resulting in his being detained for approximately seven hours; his bond hearing occurred in a reasonably feasible time and promoted the efficient administration of the court system. State v. Jenkins, 137 N.C. App. 367, 527 S.E.2d 672 (2000).

Neither the delay in receiving a bond hearing nor the additional time defendant was required to remain in custody after the hearing violated the defendant's due process rights or this section. The defendant was taken into custody in the evening and brought before a judge the next day and then detained another five hours before being released on a $1,000 unsecured bond. There was no evidence that an arbitrary limit was placed on the time defendant would be held in detention before seeing a judge; defendant was brought before a judge as soon as one was available; and the additional five-hour detention was not unreasonable. State v. Gilbert, 139 N.C. App. 657, 535 S.E.2d 94 (2000).

Applied in State v. Malette, 350 N.C. 52, 509 S.E.2d 776 (1999).

§ 15A-534.2. Detention of impaired drivers.

(a) A judicial official conducting an initial appearance for an offense involving impaired driving, as defined in G.S. 20-4.01(24a), must follow the procedure in G.S. 15A-511 except as modified by this section. This section may not be interpreted to impede a defendant's right to communicate with counsel and friends.

(b) If at the time of the initial appearance the judicial official finds by clear and convincing evidence that the impairment of the defendant's physical or mental faculties presents a danger, if he is released, of physical injury to himself or others or damage to property, the judicial official must order that the defendant be held in custody and inform the defendant that he will be held in custody until one of the requirements of subsection (c) is met; provided, however, that the judicial official must at this time determine the appropriate conditions of pretrial release in accordance with G.S. 15A-534.

(c) A defendant subject to detention under this section has the right to pretrial release under G.S. 15A-534 when the judicial official determines either that:

(1) The defendant's physical and mental faculties are no longer impaired to the extent that he presents a danger of physical injury to himself or others or of damage to property if he is released; or

(2) A sober, responsible adult is willing and able to assume responsibility for the defendant until his physical and mental faculties are no longer impaired. If the defendant is released to the custody of another, the judicial official may impose any other condition of pretrial release authorized by G.S. 15A-534, including a requirement that the defendant execute a secured appearance bond.

The defendant may be denied pretrial release under this section for a period no longer than 24 hours, and after such detention may be released only upon meeting the conditions of pretrial release set in accordance with G.S. 15A-534. If the defendant is detained for 24 hours, a judicial official must immediately determine the appropriate conditions of pretrial release in accordance with G.S. 15A-534.

(d) In making his determination whether a defendant detained under this section remains impaired, the judicial official may request that the defendant submit to periodic tests to determine his alcohol concentration. Instruments acceptable for making preliminary breath tests under G.S. 20-16.3 may be used for this purpose as well as instruments for making evidentiary chemical analyses. Unless there is evidence that the defendant is still impaired from a combination of alcohol and some other impairing substance or condition, a judicial official must determine that a defendant with an alcohol concentration less than 0.05 is no longer impaired. The results of any periodic test to determine alcohol concentration may not be introduced in evidence:

(1) Against the defendant by the State in any criminal, civil, or administrative proceeding arising out of an offense involving impaired driving; or

(2) For any purpose in any proceeding if the test was not performed by a method approved by the Commission for Health Services under G.S. 20-139.1 and by a person licensed to administer the test by the Department of Health and Human Services.

The fact that a defendant refused to comply with a judicial official's request that he submit to a chemical analysis may not be admitted into evidence in any criminal action, administrative proceeding, or a civil action to review a decision reached by an administrative agency in which the defendant is a party. (1983, c. 435, s. 4; 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1983, c. 435, which enacted this section, provided in section 41.1: "The original inclusion and ultimate deletion in the course of passing this act of statutory liability for certain persons who sell or furnish alcoholic beverages to intoxicated persons does not reflect any legislative intent one way or the other with respect to the issue of civil liability for negligence by persons who sell or furnish those beverages to such persons."

CASE NOTES

Effect of Magistrate's Failure to Inform of Rights to Pretrial Release. — Statutory violations by magistrate, who failed to inform defendant of his rights to pretrial release under either the general provisions of § 15A-511 or the more specific provisions of this section, did not justify dismissal of driving while impaired charges. State v. Gilbert, 85 N.C. App. 594, 355 S.E.2d 261 (1987). But see, State v. Knoll, 322 N.C. 535, 369 S.E.2d 558 (1988).

Release into Custody of Another. — Magistrate had no duty to grant request to be released into friend's custody, where there was sufficient evidence that the friend was not sober and was not a responsible adult at the time in question. State v. Haas, 131 N.C. App. 113, 505 S.E.2d 311 (1998).

Defendant's Rights Not Violated. — Where magistrate correctly imposed pretrial release restriction requiring a sober responsible adult to take custody of defendant pursuant to this section, there was no constitutional violation of defendant's constitutional right to secure witnesses. State v. Bumgarner, 97 N.C. App. 567, 389 S.E.2d 425, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 326 N.C. 599, 393 S.E.2d 873 (1990).

Applied in State ex rel. Edmisten v. Tucker, 312 N.C. 326, 323 S.E.2d 294 (1984).

§ 15A-534.3. Detention for communicable diseases.

If a judicial official conducting an initial appearance or first appearance hearing finds probable cause that an individual was exposed to the defendant in a manner that poses a significant risk of transmission of the AIDS virus or Hepatitis B by such defendant, the judicial official shall order the defendant to be detained for a reasonable period of time, not to exceed 24 hours, for investigation by public health officials and for testing for AIDS virus infection and Hepatitis B infection if required by public health officials pursuant to G.S. 130A-144 and G.S. 130A-148. (1989, c. 499, s. 1.)

§ 15A-534.4. Sex offenses and crimes of violence against child victims: bail and pretrial release.

In all cases in which the defendant is charged with felonious or misdemeanor child abuse, with taking indecent liberties with a minor in violation of G.S. 14-202.1, with rape or any other sex offense in violation of Article 7A, Chapter 14 of the General Statutes, against a minor victim, with incest with a minor in violation of G.S. 14-178, with kidnapping, abduction, or felonious restraint involving a minor victim, with a violation of G.S. 14-320.1, with assault or any other crime of violence against a minor victim, or with communicating a threat against a minor victim, in addition to the provisions of G.S. 15A-534 a judicial official may impose the following conditions on pretrial release;

(1) That the defendant stay away from the home, temporary residence, school, business, or place of employment of the alleged victim.

(2) That the defendant refrain from communicating or attempting to communicate, directly or indirectly, with the victim, except under circumstances specified in an order entered by a judge with knowledge of the pending charges.

(3) That the defendant refrain from assaulting, beating, intimidating, stalking, threatening, or harming the alleged victim.

The conditions set forth above may be imposed in addition to any other conditions that the judicial official may impose on pretrial release. (1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 723, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 723, which enacted this section, in s. 6 provides: "Nothing in this act obligates the General Assembly to appropriate any funds to implement this act."

§ 15A-535. Issuance of policies on pretrial release.

(a) Subject to the provisions of this Article, the senior resident superior court judge for each district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in consultation with the chief district court judge or judges of all the district court districts in which are located any of the counties in the senior resident superior court judge's district or set of districts, must devise and issue recommended policies to be followed within each of those counties in determining whether, and upon what conditions, a defendant may be released before trial and may include in such policies, or issue separately, a requirement that each judicial official who imposes condition (4) in G.S. 15A-534(a) must record the reasons for doing so in writing.

(b) In any county in which there is a pretrial release program, the senior resident superior court judge may, after consultation with the chief district court judge, order that defendants accepted by such program for supervision shall, with their consent, be released by judicial officials to supervision of such programs, and subject to its rules and regulations, in lieu of releasing the defendants on conditions (1), (2), or (3) of G.S. 15A-534(a). (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 791, s. 1; 1987, c. 481, s. 2; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 55.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The section changes the provision of § 15-103.1 that the chief district court judge in each district issues policies on bail matters. The bill puts this duty upon the senior resident superior court judge of the district, after consultation with the chief district court judge.

Editor's Note. — Subsection (a) was amended by Session Laws 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 55, in the coded bill drafting format provided by § 120-20.1. It has been set out in the form above at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

§ 15A-536. Release after conviction in the superior court.

(a) A defendant whose guilt has been established in the superior court and is either awaiting sentence or has filed an appeal from the judgment entered may be ordered released upon conditions in accordance with the provisions of this Article.

(b) If release is ordered, the judge must impose the conditions set out in G.S. 15A-534(a) which will reasonably assure the presence of the defendant when required and provide adequate protection to persons and the community. If no single condition gives the assurance, the judge may impose the condition in G.S. 15A-534(a)(3) in addition to any other condition and may also, or in lieu of the condition in G.S. 15A-534(a)(3), place restrictions on the travel, associations, conduct, or place of abode of the defendant.

(c) In determining what conditions of release to impose, the judge must, on the basis of available information, consider the appropriate factors set out in G.S. 15A-534(c).

(d) A judge authorizing release of a defendant under this section must issue an appropriate order containing a statement of the conditions imposed, if any; inform the defendant in writing of the penalties applicable to violations of the conditions of his release; and advise him that his arrest will be ordered immediately upon any such violation. The order of release must be filed with the clerk and a copy given the defendant.

(e) An order of release may be modified or revoked by any superior court judge who has ordered the release of a defendant under this section or, if that judge is absent from the superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1, by any other superior court judge. If the defendant is placed in custody as the result of a revocation or modification of an order of release, the defendant is entitled to an immediate hearing on whether he is again entitled to release and, if so, upon what conditions.

(f) In imposing conditions of release and in modifying and revoking orders of release under this section, the judge must take into account all evidence available to him which he considers reliable and is not strictly bound by the rules of evidence applicable to criminal trials. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 56.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section parallels § 15A-534, except that after conviction in superior court release is discretionary with the judge. Section 15-183 granted absolute right to bail on appeal in noncapital cases, and gave a discretionary right on appeal when a sentence of life imprisonment had been imposed in a capital case. This section would authorize bail to be set or denied in a judge's discretion in all cases — including capital cases.

It should be noted that § 15A-534(h) continues the original bail bond in force until final judgment in superior court unless the judge sooner releases the obligor. Presumably, in a case in which there would be a delay between the verdict or plea of guilty and the sentencing, and the judge determined that the risk of flight had materially increased, the judge would terminate the original conditions of pretrial release and allow release, if at all, under this section.

CASE NOTES

Right to Bail Pending Appeal Is Statutory. — In the absence of statute, an accused would have no right to bail pending an appeal. State v. Bradsher, 189 N.C. 401, 127 S.E. 349 (1925), decided under prior law.

No Such Right Under U.S. Constitution. — There is no right under the United States Constitution to have bond pending appeal, either in State or federal court. Reddy v. Snepp, 357 F. Supp. 999 (W.D.N.C. 1973).

Grant or Denial of Bail in Discretion of Trial Court. — Under this section it is within the discretion of the trial court to grant or deny bail while a case is pending on appeal following conviction of defendant in superior court. State v. Sparks, 297 N.C. 314, 255 S.E.2d 373 (1979).

This section permits but does not require a judge to order release of a convicted defendant pending appeal. The matter of granting or denying post-trial bond is within the trial court's discretion. State v. Keaton, 61 N.C. App. 279, 300 S.E.2d 471, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 463, 307 S.E.2d 369 (1983).

The terms of defendant's release pending appeal are within the discretion of the court. State v. Crabtree, 66 N.C. App. 662, 312 S.E.2d 219 (1984).

Amount of Bail Is in Discretion of Court. — The question of the amount to be fixed for bond pending appeal is largely in the discretion of the court below. State v. Parker, 220 N.C. 416, 17 S.E.2d 475 (1941); Reddy v. Snepp, 357 F. Supp. 999 (W.D.N.C. 1973).

Modification of Pretrial Release Orders. — After a case is before the superior court, a superior court judge may modify the pretrial release order of a magistrate, clerk or district court judge or any such order entered by him at any time before defendant's guilt has been established in superior court. This section imposes additional restrictions upon the modification of pretrial release orders after a defendant has been convicted in superior court. State v. Perry, 316 N.C. 87, 340 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

Conditions of Release Held Proper. — The trial court had authority under subsection (d) of this section to require defendant to post a secured appearance bond for his post-conviction release while his appeal was pending and to consign defendant to the custody of the county probation office and to order that defendant report to the probation office by noon each Monday, and the trial court was authorized by § 15A-544(c) to enter a judgment of forfeiture of the bond upon determining that defendant failed to comply with the condition requiring him to report to the probation office and that defendant had failed to satisfy the court that his appearance in compliance with the condition was impossible or that his failure to appear was without his fault. State v. Cooley, 50 N.C. App. 544, 274 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 631, 280 S.E.2d 442 (1981).

§ 15A-537. Persons authorized to effect release.

(a) Following any authorization of release of any person in accordance with the provisions of this Article, any judicial official must effect the release of that person upon satisfying himself that the conditions of release have been met. In the absence of a judicial official, any law-enforcement officer or custodial official having the person in custody must effect the release upon satisfying himself that the conditions of release have been met, but law-enforcement and custodial agencies may administratively direct which officers or officials are authorized to effect release under this section. Satisfying oneself whether conditions of release are met includes determining if sureties are sufficiently solvent to meet the bond obligation, but no judicial official, officer, or custodial official may be held civilly liable for actions taken in good faith under this section.

(b) Upon release of the person in question, the person effecting release must file any bond, deposit, or mortgage and other papers pertaining to the release with the clerk of the court in which release was authorized.

(c) For the limited purposes of this section, any law-enforcement officer or custodial official may administer oaths to sureties and take other actions necessary in carrying out the duties imposed by this section. Any surety bond so taken is to be regarded in every respect as any other bail bond. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 23.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) as introduced concerned only judicial officials and made it plain that in addition to the order setting conditions of release that there must also, except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), be an order of the judicial official directing release from custody. As revised in the General Assembly, however, the subsection seems to authorize law-enforcement officers to effect release at any time after conditions of release have been set and a judicial official is absent — upon the officer's determination that the conditions of release are met. This makes the part of subsection (b) restricting that type of release to situations after imprisonment redundant.

Subsections (b) and (c) carry forward in modified form the provisions of § 15-108.

§ 15A-538. Modification of order on motion of person detained; substitution of surety.

(a) A person who is detained or objects to the conditions required for his release which were imposed or allowed to stand by order of a district court judge may apply in writing to a superior court judge to modify the order.

(b) The power to modify an order includes the power to substitute sureties upon any bond. Substitution or addition of acceptable sureties may be made at the request of any obligor on a bond or, in the interests of justice, at the request of a prosecutor under the provisions of G.S. 15A-539. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Traditionally a defendant sought to have bail reduced or the conditions of release modified by the habeas corpus procedure. The Commission's policy as reflected in this section is to build into the procedure at various stages a requirement that conditions of release be reviewed. In addition, this section permits the defendant or any other obligor to request modification, including a substitution of sureties.

CASE NOTES

Cited in State v. Rudolph, 39 N.C. App. 293, 250 S.E.2d 318 (1979).

§ 15A-539. Modification upon motion of prosecutor.

A prosecutor may at any time apply to an appropriate district court judge or superior court judge for modification or revocation of an order of release under this Article. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section ties in with the previous one. If a solicitor believes that conditions of release imposed are not adequate to insure the defendant's appearance, or that the surety on defendant's bond is not solvent, he may apply to the appropriate judge for an order modifying the conditions. If modification is sought, and the order has been made or allowed to stand by a district court judge, subsection (a) indicates that the solicitor must apply to a superior court judge. In other cases, the modification and revocation provisions in § 15A-534(e) and (f) should be consulted. Compare § 15A-536(e).

§ 15A-540. Surrender of a defendant by a surety; setting new conditions of release.

(a) Going Off the Bond Before Breach. — Before there has been a breach of the conditions of a bail bond, the surety may surrender the defendant as provided in G.S. 58-71-20. Upon application by the surety after such surrender, the clerk must exonerate the surety from the bond.

(b) Surrender After Breach of Condition. — After there has been a breach of the conditions of a bail bond, a surety may surrender the defendant as provided in this subsection. A surety may arrest the defendant for the purpose of returning the defendant to the sheriff. After arresting a defendant, the surety may surrender the defendant to the sheriff of the county in which the defendant is bonded to appear or to the sheriff where the defendant was bonded. Alternatively, a surety may surrender a defendant who is already in the custody of any sheriff by appearing in person and informing the sheriff that the surety wishes to surrender the defendant. Before surrendering a defendant to a sheriff, the surety must provide the sheriff with a certified copy of the bail bond. Upon surrender of the defendant, the sheriff shall provide a receipt to the surety.

(c) New Conditions of Pretrial Release. — When a defendant is surrendered by a surety under subsection (b) of this section, the sheriff shall without unnecessary delay take the defendant before a judicial official, along with a copy of the undertaking received from the surety and a copy of the receipt provided to the surety. The judicial official shall then determine whether the defendant is again entitled to release and, if so, upon what conditions. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1995, c. 290, s. 2; 2000-133, s. 2; 2001-487, s. 46.5(a).)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section carries forward the provisions of § 15-122 and § 15-123. The Commission debated whether to retain the arrest provision, and decided that in some cases the professional bondsman would be more effective in tracking down an absent defendant than regular law-enforcement officers. The power of the judge to reduce the amount of the bond forfeiture provides an incentive to the bondsman to bring the defendant to court even though he has once failed to appear.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-133, s. 2, effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to all bail bonds executed and all forfeiture proceedings initiated on and after that date, rewrote the section.

Session Laws 2001-487, s. 46.5(a), effective December 16, 2001, deleted the last three sentences in subsection (c), which read, "The judicial official determining conditions of pretrial release under this subsection shall impose any conditions set by the court in any order for arrest issued for the defendant's failure to appear. If no conditions have been set, the judicial official shall require the execution of a secured appearance bond in an amount at least double the amount of the previous bond, and shall impose such restrictions on the travel, associations, conduct, or place of abode of the defendant as will assure that the defendant will not again fail to appear. The magistrate shall also indicate on the release order that the defendant was surrendered after failing to appear as required under a prior release order."

CASE NOTES

Compliance with Section Protects Surety. — Where a surety surrenders his principal in open court in discharge of himself as bail, he is acting in the clear exercise of an undoubted legal right. The entry of the fact made upon the records of the court was therefore proper, and the court could not by their subsequent action deprive the surety of the benefit of it. Underwood v. McLaurin, 49 N.C. 17 (1856), decided under prior law.

Force to Overcome Resistance of Third Party. — Sureties or their agents may use such force as is reasonably necessary to overcome the resistance of a third party who attempts to impede their privileged capture of their principal, although they may use only such force as is reasonably necessary under the circumstances to accomplish the arrest. State v. Mathis, 349 N.C. 503, 509 S.E.2d 155 (1998).

§ 15A-541. Persons prohibited from becoming surety.

(a) No sheriff, deputy sheriff, other law-enforcement officer, judicial official, attorney, parole officer, probation officer, jailer, assistant jailer, employee of the General Court of Justice, other public employee assigned to duties relating to the administration of criminal justice, or spouse of any such person may in any case become surety on a bail bond for any person other than a member of his immediate family. In addition no person covered by this section may act as agent for any bonding company or professional bondsman. No such person may have an interest, directly or indirectly, in the financial affairs of any firm or corporation whose principal business is acting as bondsman.

(b) A violation of this section is a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 299; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section expands upon the provisions contained in § 15-107.1.

CASE NOTES

As to the rationale behind the prohibition of this section, see State v. Rogers, 68 N.C. App. 358, 315 S.E.2d 492, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 767, 319 S.E.2d 284 (1984), appeal dismissed, 469 U.S. 1101, 105 S. Ct. 769, 83 L. Ed. 2d 766 (1985).

The mental state required under this section is nothing more than the general intent to do the proscribed act; that is, for the attorney to intend or knowingly to become surety on a bail bond for any person other than a member of the attorney's immediate family. State v. Rogers, 68 N.C. App. 358, 315 S.E.2d 492, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 767, 319 S.E.2d 284 (1984), appeal dismissed, 469 U.S. 1101, 105 S. Ct. 769, 83 L. Ed. 2d 766 (1985).

§ 15A-542. False qualification by surety.

(a) No person may sign an appearance bond as surety knowing or having reason to know that he does not own sufficient property over and above his exemption allowed by law to enable him to pay the bond should it be ordered forfeited.

(b) A violation of this section is a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1993, c. 539, s. 300; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission decided against freighting its 1973 bail recommendations with any proposals concerning direct regulation or licensing of commercial bondsmen. However, certain abuses sought to be cured by licensing may be eliminated by the misdemeanor of false qualification by surety.

§ 15A-543. Penalties for failure to appear.

(a) In addition to forfeiture imposed under Part 2 of this Article, any person released pursuant to this Article who willfully fails to appear before any court or judicial official as required is subject to the criminal penalties set out in this section.

(b) A violation of this section is a Class I felony if:

(1) The violator was released in connection with a felony charge against him; or

(2) The violator was released under the provisions of G.S. 15A-536.

(c) If, except as provided in subsection (b) above, a violator was released in connection with a misdemeanor charge against him, a violation of this section is a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1983, c. 294, s. 4; 1993, c. 539, s. 301; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 14, s. 16; c. 24, s. 14(c); 2000-133, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section makes willful failure to appear a criminal offense in a bail bond case as well as when a defendant was released on his own recognizance. If the violator was released in connection with a felony, or a misdemeanor after conviction in superior court, the failure to appear is a felony.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-133, s. 3, effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to all bail bonds executed and all forfeiture proceedings initiated on and after that date, substituted "Part 2 of this Article" for "G.S. 15A-544" in subsection (a).

§ 15A-544: Repealed by Session Laws 2000-133, s. 4, effective January 1, 2001.

Cross References. — For present provisions as to bail bond forfeiture, see § 15A-544.1 et seq.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2000-133, s. 9, made the repeal of this section effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to to all bail bonds executed and all forfeiture proceedings initiated on and after that date.

Part 2. Bail Bond Forfeiture.

§ 15A-544.1. Forfeiture jurisdiction.

By executing a bail bond the defendant and each surety submit to the jurisdiction of the court and irrevocably consent to be bound by any notice given in compliance with this Part. The liability of the defendant and each surety may be enforced as provided in this Part, without the necessity of an independent action. (2000-133, s. 6.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2000-133, s. 9, made this Part effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to to all bail bonds executed and all forfeiture proceedings initiated on and after that date.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under prior law.

Purpose. — The purpose of former § 15A-544, regulating the forfeiture of bonds in criminal proceedings, is to establish an orderly procedure for forfeiture. State v. Moore, 57 N.C. App. 676, 292 S.E.2d 153 (1982).

The requirement that a complaint filed pursuant to former § 15A-544 be verified was jurisdictional; therefore, a court order remitting the bond forfeiture was invalid where it was based upon an unverified petition for relief in violation of this section. State v. Moraitis, 141 N.C. App. 538, 540 S.E.2d 756 (2000).

Remission Denied. — Under former § 15A-544(e), the decision to remit surety's bond was a discretionary one where the judge had to determine whether justice required remission; trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying surety's petition for remission of $40,000 bond when surety failed to produce defendant and thus failed to ensure the production of the defendant for trial. State v. Robinson, — N.C. App. —, 551 S.E.2d 460, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 728 (2001).

Extraordinary Cause—Interaction with Other Statutes. — Trial court erred in ruling that §§ 1-52 and 1-46 established a statute of limitations of three years for an action involving bail and in failing to apply the "extraordinary cause" standard when petitioner sought remission of bonds. State v. Harkness, 133 N.C. App. 641, 516 S.E.2d 166 (1999).

§ 15A-544.2. Identifying information on bond.

(a) The following information shall be entered on each bail bond executed under Part 1 of this Article:

(1) The name and mailing address of the defendant.

(2) The name and mailing address of any accommodation bondsman executing the bond as surety.

(3) The name and license number of any professional bondsman executing the bond as surety and the name and license number of the runner executing the bail bond on behalf of the professional bondsman.

(4) The name of any insurance company executing the bond as surety, and the name, license number, and power of appointment number of the bail agent executing the bail bond on behalf of the insurance company.

(b) If a defendant is released upon execution of a bail bond that does not contain all the information required by subsection (a) of this section, the defendant's order of pretrial release may be revoked as provided in G.S. 15A-534(f). (2000-133, s. 6.)

§ 15A-544.3. Entry of forfeiture.

(a) If a defendant who was released under Part 1 of this Article upon execution of a bail bond fails on any occasion to appear before the court as required, the court shall enter a forfeiture for the amount of that bail bond in favor of the State against the defendant and against each surety on the bail bond.

(b) The forfeiture shall contain the following information:

(1) The name and address of record of the defendant.

(2) The file number of each case in which the defendant's appearance is secured by the bail bond.

(3) The amount of the bail bond.

(4) The date on which the bail bond was executed.

(5) The name and address of record of each surety on the bail bond.

(6) The name, address of record, license number, and power of appointment number of any bail agent who executed the bail bond on behalf of an insurance company.

(7) The date on which the forfeiture is entered.

(8) The date on which the forfeiture will become a final judgment under G.S. 15A-544.6 if not set aside before that date.

(9) The following notice: "TO THE DEFENDANT AND EACH SURETY NAMED ABOVE: The defendant named above has failed to appear as required before the court in the case identified above. A forfeiture for the amount of the bail bond shown above was entered in favor of the State against the defendant and each surety named above on the date of forfeiture shown above. This forfeiture will be set aside if, on or before the final judgment date shown above, satisfactory evidence is presented to the court that one of the following events has occurred: (i) the defendant's failure to appear has been stricken by the court in which the defendant was required to appear and any order for arrest that was issued for that failure to appear is recalled, (ii) all charges for which the defendant was bonded to appear have been finally disposed by the court other than by the State's taking a voluntary dismissal with leave, (iii) the defendant has been surrendered by a surety or bail agent to a sheriff of this State as provided by law, (iv) the defendant has been served with an Order for Arrest for the Failure to Appear on the criminal charge in the case in question, (v) the defendant died before or within the period between the forfeiture and the final judgment as demonstrated by the presentation of a death certificate, or the defendant was incarcerated in a unit of the Department of Correction and is serving a sentence or in a unit of the Federal Bureau of Prisons located within the borders of the State at the time of the failure to appear. The forfeiture will not be set aside for any other reason. If this forfeiture is not set aside on or before the final judgment date shown above, and if no motion to set it aside is pending on that date, the forfeiture will become a final judgment on that date. The final judgment will be enforceable by execution against the defendant and any accommodation bondsman and professional bondsman on the bond. The final judgment will also be reported to the Department of Insurance. Further, no surety will be allowed to execute any bail bond in the above county until the final judgment is satisfied in full." (2000-133, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under prior law.

Purpose — The purpose of former § 15A-544(b) relating to entry of an order of forfeiture was to regulate the forfeiture of bonds in criminal proceedings and to establish an orderly procedure for forfeiture. State v. Cox, 90 N.C. App. 742, 370 S.E.2d 260 (1988).

Mandatory Requirements. — Requirements of former § 15A-544(b), relating to entry of an order of forfeiture, were not discretionary but mandatory. State v. Cox, 90 N.C. App. 742, 370 S.E.2d 260 (1988).

Independent Proceeding Unneces- sary. — The judgment that the recognizance has been forfeited must be entered in the court, and in the cause, in which said recognizance was filed and it is not required that the prosecution for the forfeiture of such recognizance shall be taken by an independent proceeding. State v. Sanders, 153 N.C. 624, 69 S.E. 272 (1910).

Discretion of Court. — The power given by former § 15A-544 and predecessor statutes, relating to forfeiture, was a matter of judicial discretion in the judges below, which could not be reviewed except for some error in a matter of law or legal inference. State v. Moody, 74 N.C. 73 (1876); State v. Morgan, 136 N.C. 593, 48 S.E. 604 (1904); State v. Hawkins, 14 N.C. App. 129, 187 S.E.2d 417 (1972).

Discretion of Court. — Whether a judgment will be made absolute, or whether it will be stricken out, either upon condition or otherwise, rests in the discretion of the judge of the superior court. State v. Clarke, 222 N.C. 744, 24 S.E.2d 619 (1943); State v. Wiggins, 228 N.C. 76, 44 S.E.2d 471 (1947).

Forfeiture for Failure to Report to Probation Office. — The trial court had authority under § 15A-536(d) to require defendant to post a secured appearance bond for his post-conviction release while his appeal was pending and to consign defendant to the custody of the county probation office, and to order that defendant report to the probation office by noon each Monday, and the trial court was authorized by former § 15A-544(c) to enter a judgment of forfeiture of the bond upon determining that defendant failed to comply with the condition requiring him to report to the probation office and that defendant had failed to satisfy the court that his appearance in compliance with the condition was impossible or that his failure to appear was without his fault. State v. Cooley, 50 N.C. App. 544, 274 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 631, 280 S.E.2d 442 (1981).

Judgment Against Bond on Same Day Defendant Failed to Appear Held Error. — The trial court erred in entering judgment absolute against defendant's cash bond on the same day that defendant was called and failed to appear. State v. Hawkins, 14 N.C. App. 127, 187 S.E.2d 418 (1972).

§ 15A-544.4. Notice of forfeiture.

(a) The court shall give notice of the entry of forfeiture by mailing a copy of the forfeiture to the defendant and to each surety whose name appears on the bail bond.

(b) The notice shall be sent by first-class mail to the defendant and to each surety named on the bond at the surety's address of record.

(c) If a bail agent on behalf of an insurance company executed the bond, the court shall also provide a copy of the forfeiture to the bail agent, but failure to provide notice to the bail agent shall not affect the validity of any notice given to the insurance company.

(d) Notice given under this section is effective when the notice is mailed.

(e) Notice under this section shall be mailed not later than the thirtieth day after the date on which the forfeiture is entered. If notice under this section is not given within the prescribed time, the forfeiture shall not become a final judgment and shall not be enforced or reported to the Department of Insurance. (2000-133, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under prior law.

Surety Entitled to Notice. — Surety on an appearance bond was an obligor and therefore was entitled to notice as required under former § 15A-544(b). State v. Cox, 90 N.C. App. 742, 370 S.E.2d 260 (1988).

Forfeiture Vacated. — Where surety on appearance bond was not personally served, nor was he mailed a copy of the order of forfeiture or notice, although the sheriff had a record of the surety's address throughout the proceedings, and he had no knowledge of the order of forfeiture and notice, that the judgment was made absolute, or that the matter was transferred to the sheriff's department for execution, the sheriff's department did not comply with the statutory requirements of former § 15A-544(b), and the judgment of forfeiture was null and void and would be vacated. State v. Cox, 90 N.C. App. 742, 370 S.E.2d 260 (1988).

§ 15A-544.5. Setting aside forfeiture.

(a) Relief Exclusive. — There shall be no relief from a forfeiture except as provided in this section. The reasons for relief are those specified in subsection (b) of this section. The procedures for obtaining relief are those specified in subsections (c) and (d) of this section. Subsections (f), (g), (h), and (i) of this section apply regardless of the reason for relief given or the procedure followed.

(b) Reasons for Set Aside. — A forfeiture shall be set aside for any one of the following reasons, and none other:

(1) The defendant's failure to appear has been set aside by the court and any order for arrest issued for that failure to appear has been recalled, as evidenced by a copy of an official court record, including an electronic record.

(2) All charges for which the defendant was bonded to appear have been finally disposed by the court other than by the State's taking dismissal with leave, as evidenced by a copy of an official court record, including an electronic record.

(3) The defendant has been surrendered by a surety on the bail bond as provided by G.S. 15A-540, as evidenced by the sheriff's receipt provided for in that section.

(4) The defendant has been served with an Order for Arrest for the Failure to Appear on the criminal charge in the case in question.

(5) The defendant died before or within the period between the forfeiture and the final judgment as demonstrated by the presentation of a death certificate.

(6) The defendant was incarcerated in a unit of the Department of Correction and is serving a sentence or in a unit of the Federal Bureau of Prisons located within the borders of the State at the time of the failure to appear.

(c) Procedure When Failure to Appear Is Stricken. — If the court before which a defendant's appearance was secured by a bail bond enters an order striking the defendant's failure to appear and recalling any order for arrest issued for that failure to appear, that court may simultaneously enter an order setting aside any forfeiture of that bail bond. When an order setting aside a forfeiture is entered, the defendant's further appearances shall continue to be secured by that bail bond unless the court orders otherwise.

(d) Motion Procedure. — If a forfeiture is not set aside under subsection (c) of this section, the only procedure for setting it aside is as follows:

(1) At any time before the expiration of 150 days after the date on which notice was given under G.S. 15A-544.4, the defendant or any surety on a bail bond may make a written motion that the forfeiture be set aside, stating the reason and attaching the evidence specified in subsection (a) of this section.

(2) The motion is filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county in which the forfeiture was entered, and a copy is served, under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5, on the district attorney for that county and the county board of education.

(3) Either the district attorney or the county board of education may object to the motion by filing a written objection in the office of the clerk and serving a copy on the moving party.

(4) If neither the district attorney nor the board of education has filed a written objection to the motion by the tenth day after the motion is served, the clerk shall enter an order setting aside the forfeiture.

(5) If either the district attorney or the county board of education files a written objection to the motion, then not more than 30 days after the objection is filed a hearing on the motion and objection shall be held in the county, in the trial division in which the defendant was bonded to appear.

(6) If at the hearing the court allows the motion, the court shall enter an order setting aside the forfeiture.

(7) If at the hearing the court does not enter an order setting aside the forfeiture, the forfeiture shall become a final judgment of forfeiture on the later of:

a. The date of the hearing.

b. The date of final judgment specified in G.S. 15A-544.6.

(e) Only One Motion Per Forfeiture. — No more than one motion to set aside a specific forfeiture may be considered by the court.

(f) No More Than Two Forfeitures May Be Set Aside Per Case. — In any case in which the State proves that the surety or the bail agent had notice or actual knowledge, before executing a bail bond, that the defendant had already failed to appear on two or more prior occasions, no forfeiture of that bond may be set aside for any reason.

(g) No Final Judgment After Forfeiture Is Set Aside. — If a forfeiture is set aside under this section, the forfeiture shall not thereafter ever become a final judgment of forfeiture or be enforced or reported to the Department of Insurance.

(h) Appeal. — An order on a motion to set aside a forfeiture is a final order or judgment of the trial court for purposes of appeal. Appeal is the same as provided for appeals in civil actions. When notice of appeal is properly filed, the court may stay the effectiveness of the order on any conditions the court considers appropriate. (2000-133, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under prior law.

Authority to Review Another Judge's Forfeiture Order. — A superior court judge had authority to review an order of bond forfeiture entered by another superior court judge. State v. Hawkins, 14 N.C. App. 129, 187 S.E.2d 417 (1972).

Injunction to Restrain Enforcement of Execution. — A motion by the surety asking that the forfeiture theretofore entered upon the appearance bond be stricken out, due to the fact that defendant had been subsequently arrested, is addressed to the sound discretion of the court in the exercise of its power to remit the forfeiture, and does not serve to stay execution on the judgment entered against the surety; therefore, the court, while the motion is pending, may hear and determine the surety's application for injunction to restrain enforcement of the execution issued on the judgment. The remedy for a reduction or remission of the forfeiture was by application under former statute. Tar Heel Bond Co. v. Krider, 218 N.C. 361, 11 S.E.2d 291 (1940), followed in State v. Brown, 218 N.C. 368, 11 S.E.2d 294 (1940).

Apprehension and Delivery of Defendant after Judgment. — Where judgment absolute has been entered against the surety on an appearance bond, the surety is entitled, upon the later apprehension and delivery of the defendant to the authorities of that county for trial, to be heard upon its motion to modify or vacate the judgment absolute. State v. Dew, 240 N.C. 595, 83 S.E.2d 482 (1954).

Subsequent Arrest Does Not Automatically Discharge Forfeiture. — The arrest of defendant in a criminal proceeding and his trial and conviction does not discharge the original forfeiture of his appearance bond, and judgment absolute against the surety may be entered after defendant has been arrested. In such case the defendant is not arrested and surrendered by the surety. Surrender by the bail after recognizance is forfeited does not discharge the bail, but is merely addressed to the discretionary power of the court to reduce or remit the forfeiture. Tar Heel Bond Co. v. Krider, 218 N.C. 361, 11 S.E.2d 291 (1940), followed in State v. Brown, 218 N.C. 368, 11 S.E.2d 294 (1940).

Where surety's answer amounts to nothing more than a plea for additional time, without allegation of facts disclosing excusable neglect or constituting a legal defense or appealing to the conscience and sense of fair play, the surety is not entitled to a hearing as a matter of right, and judgment absolute against the surety is proper. State v. Dew, 240 N.C. 595, 83 S.E.2d 482 (1954).

Authority of Court. — Superior courts have authority to lessen or remit forfeited recognizances upon the petition of the party aggrieved, either before or after final judgment. State v. Moody, 74 N.C. 73 (1876); State v. Hawkins, 14 N.C. App. 129, 187 S.E.2d 417 (1972).

Court May Remit Penalty Without Setting Aside Forfeiture. — Where a motion is made to set aside the entry of forfeiture of a recognizance, its refusal does not prevent the court from reducing or remitting the penalty. State v. Morgan, 136 N.C. 593, 48 S.E. 604 (1904).

Imprisonment in Mexico No Excuse. — Fact that principal was prevented from appearing in superior court by reason of his own criminal acts, committed after his pretrial release, rendering him subject to imprisonment pursuant to the criminal laws of Mexico, did not excuse him from appearing, and the liability of the sureties being correspondent with that of their principal, would afford no excuse to sureties for his failure to appear. State v. Vikre, 86 N.C. App. 196, 356 S.E.2d 802 (1987).

Court's Discretion Not Abused. — Where the facts conclusively showed that defendant was not incarcerated, and there was no evidence of personal sickness or death, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to recognize the sureties' defense of excusable absence because of defendant's inability to attend court. State v. Horne, 68 N.C. App. 480, 315 S.E.2d 321 (1984).

§ 15A-544.6. Final judgment of forfeiture.

A forfeiture entered under G.S. 15A-544.3 becomes a final judgment of forfeiture without further action by the court and may be enforced under G.S. 15A-544.7, on the one hundred fiftieth day after notice is given under G.S. 15A-544.4, if:

(1) No order setting aside the forfeiture under G.S. 15A-544.5 is entered on or before that date; and

(2) No motion to set aside the forfeiture is pending on that date. (2000-133, s. 6.)

§ 15A-544.7. Docketing and enforcement of final judgment of forfeiture.

(a) Final Judgment Docketed As Civil Judgment. — When a forfeiture has become a final judgment under this Part, the clerk of superior court, under G.S. 1-234, shall docket the judgment as a civil judgment against the defendant and against each surety named in the judgment.

(b) Judgment Lien. — When a final judgment of forfeiture is docketed, the judgment shall become a lien on the real property of the defendant and of each surety named in the judgment, as provided in G.S. 1-234.

(c) Execution; Copy to Commissioner of Insurance. — After docketing a final judgment under this section, the clerk shall:

(1) Issue execution on the judgment against the defendant and against each accommodation bondsman and professional bondsman named in the judgment and shall remit the clear proceeds to the county finance officer as provided in G.S. 115C-452.

(2) If an insurance company or professional bondsman is named in the judgment, send the Commissioner of Insurance a copy of the judgment, showing the date on which the judgment was docketed.

(d) Sureties May Not Execute Bonds in County. — After a final judgment is docketed as provided in this section, no surety named in the judgment shall become a surety on any bail bond in the county in which the judgment is docketed until the judgment is satisfied in full. (2000-133, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

When Execution Mandatory. — Execution was mandatory under former § 15A-544(f) if a judgment was not remitted within the period provided in former § 15A-544 (e). State v. Moore, 57 N.C. App. 676, 292 S.E.2d 153 (1982).

§ 15A-544.8. Relief from final judgment of forfeiture.

(a) Relief Exclusive. — There is no relief from a final judgment of forfeiture except as provided in this section.

(b) Reasons. — The court may grant the defendant or any surety named in the judgment relief from the judgment, for the following reasons, and none other:

(1) The person seeking relief was not given notice as provided in G.S. 15A-544.4.

(2) Other extraordinary circumstances exist that the court, in its discretion, determines should entitle that person to relief.

(c) Procedure. — The procedure for obtaining relief from a final judgment under this section is as follows:

(1) At any time before the expiration of three years after the date on which a judgment of forfeiture became final, the defendant or any surety named in the judgment may make a written motion for relief under this section, stating the reasons and setting forth the evidence in support of each reason.

(2) The motion is filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county in which the final judgment was entered, and a copy shall be served, under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5, on the district attorney for that county and the county board of education.

(3) A hearing on the motion shall be scheduled within a reasonable time in the trial division in which the defendant was bonded to appear.

(4) At the hearing the court may grant the party any relief from the judgment that the court considers appropriate, including the refund of all or a part of any money paid to satisfy the judgment.

(d) Only One Motion. — No more than one motion by any party for relief under this section may be considered by the court.

(e) Finality of Judgment as to Other Parties Not Affected. — The finality of a final judgment of forfeiture shall not be affected, as to any party to the judgment, by the filing of a motion by, or the granting of relief to, any other party.

(f) Appeal. — An order on a motion for relief from a final judgment of forfeiture is a final order or judgment of the trial court for purposes of appeal. Appeal is the same as provided for appeals in civil actions. When notice of appeal is properly filed, the court may stay the effectiveness of the order on any conditions it considers appropriate. (2000-133, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under prior law.

Constitutionality of Former Remission Provision. — Former § 15A-544(h) did not violate the constitutional provision that the proceeds of forfeitures are to remain in the several counties and be used in the public schools. State v. Locklear, 42 N.C. App. 486, 256 S.E.2d 830, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 302, 259 S.E.2d 303 (1979).

Extraordinary Cause Standard. — Trial court erred in ruling that §§ 1-52 and 1-46 established a statute of limitations of three years for an action involving bail, and in failing to apply the "extraordinary cause" standard of former § 15A-544(h) when petitioner sought remission of bonds. State v. Harkness, 133 N.C. App. 641, 516 S.E.2d 166 (1999).

Petition for Relief After Final Judgment. — A surety on a bail bond may present a petition for relief to the judge of the superior court, notwithstanding that a final judgment has been rendered. State v. Bradsher, 189 N.C. 401, 127 S.E. 349 (1925); State v. Dew, 240 N.C. 595, 83 S.E.2d 482 (1954).

Error of Court in Failing to Make Findings. — Trial court erred in failing to make any findings of fact and conclusions of law in its order denying the petition for remission of a judgment of forfeiture where petitioner-surety submitted affidavits and some 20 pages of exhibits detailing the time, effort and expense its agents incurred in finding, arresting and returning the defendant to the proper authorities; judge's observation that the school board needed the funds more than the surety did not fulfill the required test as to whether "extraordinary cause" was shown. State v. Lanier, 93 N.C. App. 779, 379 S.E.2d 109 (1989).

Authority of Court. — Superior courts have authority to lessen or remit forfeited recognizances upon the petition of the party aggrieved, either before or after final judgment. State v. Moody, 74 N.C. 73 (1876); State v. Hawkins, 14 N.C. App. 129, 187 S.E.2d 417 (1972).

Court May Remit Penalty Without Setting Aside Forfeiture. — Where a motion is made to set aside the entry of forfeiture of a recognizance, its refusal does not prevent the court from reducing or remitting the penalty. State v. Morgan, 136 N.C. 593, 48 S.E. 604 (1904).

When Remission Authorized. — After entry of judgment of forfeiture, former § 15A-544 (e) and (h) provided two situations in which the court was authorized to order remission. State v. Moore, 57 N.C. App. 676, 292 S.E.2d 153 (1982).

Discretion of Court to Order Remission. — Since former § 15A-544 (e) said "may" remit, the decision to do so or not was a discretionary one. In order to exercise judicial discretion in a manner favorable to a surety, the judge had to determine in his discretion that justice required remission. State v. Horne, 68 N.C. App. 480, 315 S.E.2d 321 (1984).

Justice Guides Judge's Discretion. — Under former § 15A-544 (e), the court is guided in its discretion as "justice requires." State v. Moore, 57 N.C. App. 676, 292 S.E.2d 153 (1982).

Findings and Conclusions as to "Extraordinary Cause" Required. — Even if the record contains ample evidence to support a conclusion that "extraordinary cause" has been shown, the trial court should make brief, definite, pertinent findings and conclusions to that effect. State v. Moore, 57 N.C. App. 676, 292 S.E.2d 153 (1982).

"Extraordinary Cause" Shown. — The trial court did not err in finding that the surety on a forfeited criminal appearance bond had shown "extraordinary cause" for remission to the surety of a portion of the amount forfeited where, after defendant was arrested for driving under the influence, the surety's personal efforts led to denial of any further bond for the defendant and resulted in defendant's detention on the assault charge for which the bondsman had secured defendant's appearance. State v. Locklear, 42 N.C. App. 486, 256 S.E.2d 830, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 302, 259 S.E.2d 303 (1979).

Expenses Incurred May Not Constitute Extraordinary Cause — The fact that sureties incurred expenses in connection with a forfeiture does not necessarily constitute extraordinary cause. State v. Vikre, 86 N.C. App. 196, 356 S.E.2d 802 (1987).

SUBCHAPTER VI. PRELIMINARY PROCEEDINGS.

Article 29.

First Appearance Before District Court Judge.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

In cases in the original jurisdiction of the superior court, primarily felonies, the defendant must be brought as soon as possible before a district court judge. No witnesses are required at this first appearance. The main purposes of it are:

(1) To make sure the defendant's right to counsel is assured for the further proceedings.

(2) To determine the sufficiency of the charge.

(3) To review or determine the conditions of pretrial release.

(4) Set the date for, or secure a waiver of, the probable-cause hearing.

A defendant may not waive this first appearance before the judge, but he may appear through counsel. Section 15A-601(a) states that it is not a critical stage of the proceedings.

This step in the procedure is a new one so far as our statutes are concerned, though something of this nature has been utilized in several districts. It is considered important to have a district court judge process cases slated for trial in superior court at an early stage. Many delays are caused now when a defendant shows up at subsequent proceedings without counsel; a prime responsibility of the judge is to make sure the defendant has or gets counsel. Also, a date set by a judge for a probable-cause hearing is more likely to be met by the parties, without a continuance, than one set by a magistrate.

In drafting this Article and Article 30, Probable-Cause Hearing, the Commission consulted, among others, the following: Article 180 of the New York Criminal Procedure Law; a preliminary draft of what is now American Law

Institute, A Model Code of Pre-Arraignment Procedure — Tentative Draft No. 5, Article 310, First Appearance (1972); and Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States, Preliminary Draft of Proposed Amendments to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, Rules 5 (Initial Appearance Before the Magistrate) and 5.1 (Preliminary Examination) (January 1970).

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-601. First appearance before a district court judge; right in felony and other cases in original jurisdiction of superior court; consolidation of first appearance before magistrate and before district court judge; first appearance before clerk of superior court; use of two-way audio and video transmission.

(a) Any defendant charged in a magistrate's order under G.S. 15A-511 or criminal process under Article 17 of this Chapter, Criminal Process, with a crime in the original jurisdiction of the superior court must be brought before a district court judge in the district court district as defined in G.S. 7A-133 in which the crime is charged to have been committed. This first appearance before a district court judge is not a critical stage of the proceedings against the defendant.

(a1) A first appearance in a noncapital case may be conducted by an audio and video transmission between the judge and the defendant in which the parties can see and hear each other. If the defendant has counsel, the defendant shall be allowed to communicate fully and confidentially with his attorney during the proceeding.

(a2) Prior to the use of audio and video transmission pursuant to subsection (a1) of this section, the procedures and type of equipment for audio and video transmission shall be submitted to the Administrative Office of the Courts by the senior regular resident superior court judge for a judicial district or set of districts and approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(b) When a district court judge conducts an initial appearance as provided in G.S. 15A-511, he may consolidate those proceedings and the proceedings under this Article.

(c) Unless the defendant is released pursuant to Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail, first appearance before a district court judge must be held within 96 hours after the defendant is taken into custody or at the first regular session of the district court in the county, whichever occurs first. If the defendant is not taken into custody, or is released pursuant to Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail, within 96 hours after being taken into custody, first appearance must be held at the next session of district court held in the county. This subsection does not apply to a defendant whose first appearance before a district court judge has been set in a criminal summons pursuant to G.S. 15A-303(d).

(d) Upon motion of the defendant, the first appearance before a district court judge may be continued to a time certain. The defendant may not waive the holding of the first appearance before a district court judge but he need not appear personally if he is represented by counsel at the proceeding.

(e) The clerk of the superior court in the county in which the defendant is taken into custody may conduct a first appearance as provided in this Article if a district court judge is not available in the county within 96 hours after the defendant is taken into custody. The clerk, in conducting a first appearance, shall proceed under this Article as would a district court judge. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, ss. 139, 140; 1979, c. 651; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 58; 1993, c. 30, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The first appearance is required to occur in all events within 96 hours if the defendant is in custody. In some counties with infrequent regular sessions of court, this will require that a district court judge come into the county for a special session or that the defendant be taken to another county in the district to appear before a district court judge. It should be noted that Article 3, Venue, sets pretrial venue except for the probable-cause hearing in the judicial district rather than the county.

For survey of 1979 law on criminal procedure, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1404 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — This statute was designed not only to ensure the protection of a defendant's constitutional rights, but also to ensure the orderly progression of a criminal proceeding. The first appearance is a clear and specific directive of the General Statutes and the appropriate officials would be well advised to abide by the prescribed procedures. Indeed, the State runs the risk, in failing to provide the first appearance, of being forced to trial again for an obviously guilty, but prejudiced, defendant. State v. Pruitt, 42 N.C. App. 240, 256 S.E.2d 249 (1979).

Right to Counsel Attached During First Appearance. — Where defendant in a murder case made his first appearance within 96 hours of when he was taken into custody, although the initial appearance itself was not a critical stage of criminal judicial proceedings at which a defendant was entitled to counsel, defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel attached during his first appearance when the state's position against him solidified as to the murder charges and counsel was appointed. State v. Gibbs, 335 N.C. 1, 436 S.E.2d 321 (1993), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1246, 114 S. Ct. 2767, 129 L. Ed. 2d 881 (1994).

Section does not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting the validity of the trial in the absence of a showing that defendant was prejudiced thereby. State v. Burgess, 33 N.C. App. 76, 234 S.E.2d 40 (1977); State v. Pruitt, 42 N.C. App. 240, 256 S.E.2d 249 (1979); State v. Collins, 44 N.C. App. 27, 259 S.E.2d 802 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 332, 265 S.E.2d 399 (1980).

Cummings, 346 N.C. 291, 488 S.E.2d 550 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1092, 118 S. Ct. 886, 139 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1998).

§ 15A-602. Warning of right against self-incrimination.

Except when he is accompanied by his counsel, the judge must inform the defendant of his right to remain silent and that anything he says may be used against him. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Section 15-89 required that a defendant at a preliminary hearing be advised of his right to silence; this provision, borrowing from the Miranda warnings, also tells him that anything he does say can be used against him.

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

§ 15A-603. Assuring defendant's right to counsel.

(a) The judge must determine whether the defendant has retained counsel or, if indigent, has been assigned counsel.

(b) If the defendant is not represented by counsel, the judge must inform the defendant that he has important legal rights which may be waived unless asserted in a timely and proper manner and that counsel may be of assistance to the defendant in advising him and acting in his behalf. The judge must inform the defendant of his right to be represented by counsel and that he will be furnished counsel if he is indigent. The judge shall also advise the defendant that if he is convicted and placed on probation, payment of the expense of counsel assigned to represent him may be made a condition of probation, and that if he is acquitted, he will have no obligation to pay the expense of assigned counsel.

(c) If the defendant asserts that he is indigent and desires counsel, the judge must proceed in accordance with the provisions of Article 36 of Chapter 7A of the General Statutes.

(d) If the defendant is found not to be indigent and indicates that he desires to be represented by counsel, the judge must inform him that he should obtain counsel promptly.

(e) If the defendant desires to waive representation by counsel, the waiver must be in writing in accordance with the provisions of Article 36 of Chapter 7A of the General Statutes except as otherwise provided in this Article. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1981, c. 409, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This provision is intended to place responsibility on the judge to take the necessary steps to see that the defendant secures counsel for the next stages of the proceedings — or to see that a valid waiver of counsel is entered.

CASE NOTES

Section 7A-457 presupposes that a defendant has been informed of his rights and given an opportunity to act on the information as provided in this section. This involves a determination of defendant's indigency and entitlement to court appointed counsel. However, whether or not a defendant is indigent, any waiver must be in accordance with § 7A-457, notwithstanding the limiting language thereof. State v. Williams, 65 N.C. App. 498, 309 S.E.2d 721 (1983).

A defendant who appears without counsel at his arraignment must be properly informed of his rights in the manner required by this section. Where the defendant nevertheless wishes to waive counsel, the court must find that this section has been complied with before a valid waiver can be made. State v. Williams, 65 N.C. App. 498, 309 S.E.2d 721 (1983).

Applied in State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

Cited in State v. Brown, 325 N.C. 427, 383 S.E.2d 910 (1989).

§ 15A-604. Determination of sufficiency of charge.

(a) The judge must examine each criminal process or magistrate's order and determine whether each charge against the defendant charges a criminal offense within the original jurisdiction of the superior court.

(b) If the judge determines that the process or order fails to charge a criminal offense within the original jurisdiction of the superior court, he must notify the prosecutor and take further appropriate action, including one or more of the following:

(1) Dismiss the charge.

(2) Permit the State to amend the statement of the crime in the process or order.

(3) Continue the proceedings, for not more than 24 hours, to permit the State to initiate new charges.

(4) With the consent of the prosecutor, set the case for trial in the district court if the charge is found to be within the original jurisdiction of the district court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The judge must review the charge to make sure it is properly stated. Doing this here may save much trouble later. The section contains two new provisions.

(1) If there is a technical defect in the charge but the facts indicate the defendant has committed an offense, the judge may continue the proceedings up to 24 hours. This is to keep the defendant from taking this opportunity to flee the jurisdiction. See the commentary to § 15A-956.

(2) The section allows the case to be set for trial in district court if it turns out to be in the jurisdiction of the district court. The consent of the solicitor is required for this type of diversion of the case.

CASE NOTES

Sufficiency of the charges is not determined in an adversarial setting through the introduction of evidence with examination and cross-examination of witnesses. Instead, this section simply recognizes that much time and trouble can be saved if the district court judge has the authority at the initial appearance to dispose of cases where it is obvious from the relevant process papers that they are insufficient on their face to adequately bring a charge against the defendant. State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

§ 15A-605. Additional proceedings at first appearance before judge.

The judge must:

(1) Inform the defendant of the charges against him;

(2) Determine that the defendant or his counsel has been furnished a copy of the process or order; and

(3) Determine or review the defendant's eligibility for release under Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

Stated in State v. Hudson, 295 N.C. 427, 245 S.E.2d 686 (1978).

§ 15A-606. Demand or waiver of probable-cause hearing.

(a) The judge must schedule a probable-cause hearing unless the defendant waives in writing his right to such hearing. A defendant represented by counsel, or who desires to be represented by counsel, may not before the date of the scheduled hearing waive his right to a probable-cause hearing without the written consent of the defendant and his counsel.

(b) Evidence of a demand or waiver of a probable-cause hearing may not be admitted at trial.

(c) If the defendant waives a probable-cause hearing, the district court judge must bind the defendant over to the superior court for further proceedings in accordance with this Chapter.

(d) If the defendant does not waive a probable-cause hearing, the district court judge must schedule a hearing not later than 15 working days following the initial appearance before the district court judge; if no session of the district court is scheduled in the county within 15 working days, the hearing must be scheduled for the first day of the next session. The hearing may not be scheduled sooner than five working days following such initial appearance without the consent of the defendant and the prosecutor.

(e) If an unrepresented defendant is not indigent and has indicated his desire to be represented by counsel, the district court judge must inform him that he has a choice of appearing without counsel at the probable-cause hearing or of securing the attendance of counsel to represent him at the hearing. The judge must further inform him that the judge presiding at the hearing will not continue the hearing because of the absence of counsel except for extraordinary cause.

(f) Upon a showing of good cause, a scheduled probable-cause hearing may be continued by the district court upon timely motion of the defendant or the State. Except for extraordinary cause, a motion is not timely unless made at least 48 hours prior to the time set for the probable-cause hearing.

(g) If after the first appearance before a district court judge a defendant with consent of counsel desires to waive his right to a probable-cause hearing, he may do so in writing filed with the court signed by defendant and his counsel. Upon waiver the defendant must be bound over to the superior court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

If a defendant fully apprised of his rights does not wish to have a lawyer and also wishes to waive the probable-cause hearing, he may do so. But if he has counsel or wishes to have counsel, whether appointed or retained, waiver is only allowed if the defendant and his counsel waive in writing — either at the first appearance before the judge, or at a later time prior to the scheduled date of the probable-cause hearing. The purpose is to put more certainty in the scheduling, and holding, of probable-cause hearings.

A fairly strict time period of three weeks (15 working days) is set as the outside limit for scheduling the probable-cause hearing. In order to give the parties time to prepare, it may not be set sooner than a week (five working days) without the consent of both parties.

To prevent the common problem of inconveniencing witnesses who show up at a hearing only to discover that it is continued and they must return at a later time, a motion for continuance of the probable-cause hearing by either party must be made at least 48 hours in advance of the scheduled hearing except in highly unusual cases. If the continuance is granted, a 48-hour period should be sufficient to allow the witnesses to be notified not to come to the hearing until the later date.

CASE NOTES

Hearing Not Required Prior to Enactment of Section. — See State v. Branch, 288 N.C. 514, 220 S.E.2d 495 (1975), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 907, 97 S. Ct. 2971, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1091 (1977).

Purpose of a probable cause hearing is to determine whether the accused should be discharged or whether sufficient probable cause exists to bind the case over to superior court and to seek an indictment against the defendant. State v. Sellars, 52 N.C. App. 380, 278 S.E.2d 907, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 304 N.C. 200, 285 S.E.2d 108 (1981).

No Right to Hearing After Indictment. — This section does not entitle a criminal defendant to a probable-cause hearing as a matter of right after a bill of indictment has been returned. State v. Dangerfield, 32 N.C. App. 608, 233 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 642, 235 S.E.2d 63 (1977).

There is nothing in this Chapter or its legislative history which demonstrates the legislature's intention to alter the preexisting rule which dispensed with the requirement for a preliminary, or probable-cause, hearing when the defendant has been charged by indictment. State v. Sutton, 31 N.C. App. 697, 230 S.E.2d 572 (1976).

Subsection (a) of this section requires a probable-cause hearing only in those situations in which no indictment has been returned by a grand jury. State v. Lester, 294 N.C. 220, 240 S.E.2d 391 (1978); State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979); State v. Sellars, 52 N.C. App. 380, 278 S.E.2d 907, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 304 N.C. 200, 285 S.E.2d 108 (1981).

A probable-cause hearing is unnecessary after the grand jury finds an indictment. State v. Lester, 294 N.C. 220, 240 S.E.2d 391 (1978).

Denial of post-indictment motions for a probable-cause hearing did not violate subsection (a) of this section or deprive defendants of equal protection and due process of law. State v. Oliver, 302 N.C. 28, 274 S.E.2d 183 (1981).

Hearing Within Specific Time Not Required by Due Process. — Due process does not require that a probable-cause hearing be held within a specific number of days following arrest. State v. Siler, 292 N.C. 543, 234 S.E.2d 733 (1977).

Effect of Waiver. — A defendant may waive the preliminary hearing and consent to be bound over to the superior court to await grand jury action without forfeiting any defense or right available to him. Gasque v. State, 271 N.C. 323, 156 S.E.2d 740 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1030, 88 S. Ct. 1423, 20 L. Ed. 2d 888 (1968), decided before enactment of this section.

The preliminary hearing may be waived, in which case the defendant is bound over to the superior court to await grand jury action without forfeiting any right or defense available to him. State v. Hairston, 280 N.C. 220, 185 S.E.2d 633, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 888, 93 S. Ct. 194, 34 L. Ed. 2d 145 (1972), decided before enactment of this section.

Purpose of Subsection (f). — Subsection (f) of this section is designed to prevent unnecessary delay in the procedure leading to charges or dismissal of charges against a defendant. State v. Sellars, 52 N.C. App. 380, 278 S.E.2d 907, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 304 N.C. 200, 285 S.E.2d 108 (1981).

Court Determines "Good Cause" and "Extraordinary Cause". — The determinations of "good cause" and "extraordinary cause" for purposes of a continuance are for the trial court. State v. Siler, 292 N.C. 543, 234 S.E.2d 733 (1977).

It is the trial court's duty to determine good cause and extraordinary cause. State v. Rotenberry, 54 N.C. App. 504, 284 S.E.2d 197 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 306, 290 S.E.2d 705 (1982).

Denial of Motion Upheld. — Where there was no evidence in the record to support a finding of prejudicial error other than the passage of time following defendant's arrest and defendant did not explain how he was prejudiced by this passage of time, there was no prejudicial error in the denial of defendant's motions for a probable cause hearing. State v. Wiggins, 334 N.C. 18, 431 S.E.2d 755 (1993).

Applied in State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979); State v. Beam, 70 N.C. App. 181, 319 S.E.2d 616 (1984).

Article 30.

Probable-Cause Hearing.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The procedure in Article 9 of Chapter 15 was called a "preliminary examination"; it was more commonly known as the "preliminary hearing." This code has two preliminary hearings before a judge in district court: the first appearance before a district court judge and the probable-cause hearing. "Probable-cause hearing" was chosen deliberately to emphasize that the purpose is to screen the case to make sure it warrants being bound over to superior court; affording discovery opportunities to the defendant is not a purpose of the proceeding.

Although the Article does not specifically so state, it is clear from the provisions of Article 29, First Appearance before District Court Judge, that probable-cause hearings are only held in cases within the original jurisdiction of the superior court.

Several of the sources consulted by the Commission in drafting this Article are cited at the end of the general commentary to Article 29, First Appearance before District Court Judge.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-611. Probable-cause hearing procedure.

(a) At the probable-cause hearing:

(1) A prosecutor must represent the State.

(2) The defendant may be represented by counsel.

(3) The defendant may testify as a witness in his own behalf and call and examine other witnesses, and produce other evidence in his behalf.

(4) Each witness must testify under oath or affirmation and is subject to cross-examination.

(b) The State must by nonhearsay evidence, or by evidence that satisfies an exception to the hearsay rule, show that there is probable cause to believe that the offense charged has been committed and that there is probable cause to believe that the defendant committed it, except:

(1) A report or copy of a report made by a physicist, chemist, firearms identification expert, fingerprint technician, or an expert or technician in some other scientific, professional, or medical field, concerning the results of an examination, comparison, or test performed by him in connection with the case in issue, when stated by such person in a report made by him, is admissible in evidence.

(2) If there is no serious contest, reliable hearsay is admissible to prove value, ownership of property, possession of property in another than the defendant, lack of consent of the owner, possessor, or custodian of property to its taking or to the breaking or entering of premises, chain of custody, authenticity of signatures, and the existence and text of a particular ordinance or regulation of a governmental unit or agency.

The district court judge is not required to exclude evidence on the ground that it was acquired by unlawful means.

(c) If a defendant appears at a probable-cause hearing without counsel, the judge must determine whether counsel has been waived. If he determines that counsel has been waived, he may proceed without counsel. If he determines that counsel has not been waived, except in a situation covered by G.S. 15A-606(e) he must take appropriate action to secure the defendant's right to counsel.

(d) A probable-cause hearing may not be held if an information in superior court is filed upon waiver of indictment before the date set for the hearing. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Section 15-89 appeared to provide that a magistrate examine the defendant at a preliminary hearing, and the defendant was not put under oath. Under the new procedure, it is specified that a solicitor must appear for the State and that the defendant may, but obviously need not, testify. If the defendant testifies, however, it must be upon oath, and he is subject to cross-examination.

Section 15-87 indicated that prosecution witnesses must testify upon oath in preliminary hearings, but did not specify the nature of admissible evidence. This section stipulates that the evidence must be nonhearsay except for (1) traditional exceptions to the hearsay rule, (2) reports by certain technical experts, and (3) certain types of hearsay when there is no serious contest. There was some controversy within the Commission on this point, and the provision is a compromise between those who wished to require evidence that would be competent at a trial and those who wished to allow reliable hearsay generally. The Commission believes that its compromise would prevent the State from holding back a truly key witness, for example, the victim in a rape case, but would not force the State to bring all its witnesses to the probable-cause hearing and in effect turn it into a mini-trial.

Another controversial provision on which a compromise position was reached deals with the exclusion of evidence at the probable-cause hearing on the ground that it was unlawfully obtained. Some felt that the State simply should not be permitted at any stage to use unconstitutionally obtained evidence, and that the district court judge, should be forced to rule on the matter. Others noted that some of the most difficult five-to-four decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States have involved the exclusion of evidence assertedly acquired by unlawful means, and that the district court judge should not take the time and trouble to decide such an issue — as it almost inevitably would have to be decided again at the superior court level. (If no probable cause were found after exclusion of vital evidence, the solicitor would be free to reopen the case through submission of an indictment to the grand jury; if probable cause were found, it is clear that neither party would consider himself bound by the district court judge's ruling on the motion to suppress.) The compromise wording states that the district court judge is not required to exclude the evidence. In a difficult case involving close questions of law or fact, the judge could decline to exclude and pass the matter on to the superior court if he otherwise found probable cause. In a clear-cut or flagrant case, however, the district court would be free to exclude the evidence and likely wash out at an early stage a case doomed to be lost in any event. The Commission searched for language that would embody the ideas here expressed, but the several drafts studied raised more problems than they solved. It finally decided to leave the matter in the discretion of the district court judge.

Subsection (c) allows a defendant to appear without counsel if a proper, knowing waiver has been effected in writing. If a defendant who can afford to retain counsel appears without counsel, despite the warning given him as provided in § 15A-606(e), the probable-cause hearing may proceed without counsel for the defendant.

The Commission's proposal contained a subsection stating that once the judge heard sufficient evidence to make out probable cause, he could decline to hear further evidence. This refusal to hear further evidence applied to witnesses of the State and the defense. An exception was made for the defendant himself if he desired to testify. In the General Assembly this passage was deleted because it was thought district court judges might be encouraged by it to cut proceedings too short. In answer to objections that deletion would prolong probable-cause hearing unduly, the proponents of deletion pointed out that under the rules of evidence a judge may bar testimony that is repetitious or merely cumulative.

Another matter governing witnesses may be appropriate at this point. Section 15-90 permitted sequestration of witnesses. This provision is omitted from this Article because the Commission deemed it unnecessary. The judge already has discretionary power to sequester witnesses if the need arises.

Subsection (d) as introduced expressed the theory embraced by a majority of the Commission that the district court loses jurisdiction if an indictment or information is filed in superior court — therefore rendering null any further proceedings in the district court. At one stage, however, a legislative committee amended the proposal to restrict the power of a solicitor to bypass the probable-cause hearing and deleted reference to the indictment. Subsequently this restriction on the power to submit indictments was itself deleted, but there was a failure to restore mention of the indictment in subsection (d). In view of the preexisting jurisdictional law and the fairly clear legislative intent, however, it seems certain that no probable-cause hearing may be held in district court once the superior court has gained jurisdiction through the return of a true bill of indictment.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Purpose of a preliminary hearing is to determine whether there has been an offense committed, and, if so, whether there is probable cause to believe that the accused committed it. Vance v. North Carolina, 432 F.2d 984 (4th Cir. 1970).

A probable-cause hearing may afford the opportunity for a defendant to discover the strengths and weaknesses of the State's case. However, discovery is not the purpose for such a hearing. The function of a probable-cause hearing is to determine whether there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and that the defendant committed it. The establishment of probable cause ensures that a defendant will not be unjustifiably put to the trouble and expense of trial. State v. Hudson, 295 N.C. 427, 245 S.E.2d 686 (1978).

Preliminary hearing is not a constitutional requirement, nor is it essential to the finding of an indictment. State v. Hairston, 280 N.C. 220, 185 S.E.2d 633, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 888, 93 S. Ct. 194, 34 L. Ed. 2d 145 (1972).

There is no constitutional requirement for a preliminary hearing. State v. Hudson, 295 N.C. 427, 245 S.E.2d 686 (1978); State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

There is no provision in the North Carolina Constitution or United States Constitution requiring a preliminary hearing. Carroll v. Turner, 262 F. Supp. 486 (E.D.N.C. 1966), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 969, 88 S. Ct. 1085, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1176 (1968); State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972).

Not Required Absent Statute. — The general rule in the United States is that in absence of a statute, a preliminary hearing is not a prerequisite or an indispensable step in the prosecution of a person accused with crime, and an accused person is not entitled to a preliminary hearing as a matter of substantive right. Carroll v. Turner, 262 F. Supp. 486 (E.D.N.C. 1966), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 969, 88 S. Ct. 1085, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1176 (1968); State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972).

Statute does not prescribe mandatory procedures affecting the validity of a trial. State v. Hargett, 255 N.C. 412, 121 S.E.2d 589 (1961); State v. Able, 13 N.C. App. 365, 185 S.E.2d 422 (1971), cert. denied, 281 N.C. 514, 189 S.E.2d 36 (1972).

Hearing Not Means of Discovery. — A probable-cause hearing is not designed to afford a means of discovery to defendant. Its function is to determine whether there is probable cause to believe the crime has been committed and that defendant committed it. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Preliminary hearing is not an arraignment. Carroll v. Turner, 262 F. Supp. 486 (E.D.N.C. 1966), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 969, 88 S. Ct. 1085, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1176 (1968).

Nor is it a trial. Carroll v. Turner, 262 F. Supp. 486 (E.D.N.C. 1966), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 969, 88 S. Ct. 1085, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1176 (1968).

It is merely a course of procedure whereby a possible abuse of power may be prevented. Carroll v. Turner, 262 F. Supp. 486 (E.D.N.C. 1966), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 969, 88 S. Ct. 1085, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1176 (1968).

Preliminary hearing is a critical stage in a criminal proceeding. Vance v. North Carolina, 432 F.2d 984 (4th Cir. 1970).

At which assistance of counsel for an indigent accused is required. Vance v. North Carolina, 432 F.2d 984 (4th Cir. 1970).

Under § 7A-451(b)(4), a preliminary hearing is a critical stage in a criminal proceeding and an indigent person is entitled to services of counsel at such hearing. State v. Hairston, 280 N.C. 220, 185 S.E.2d 633, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 888, 93 S. Ct. 194, 34 L. Ed. 2d 145 (1972).

Person Charged Must Be Present. — There can be no examination in the absence of the person charged. Lovick v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 129 N.C. 427, 40 S.E. 191 (1901).

Not Essential to Finding Indictment. — A preliminary hearing is not an essential prerequisite to the finding of an indictment in this jurisdiction. State v. Hargett, 255 N.C. 412, 121 S.E.2d 589 (1961); Gasque v. State, 271 N.C. 323, 156 S.E.2d 740 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1030, 88 S. Ct. 1423, 20 L. Ed. 2d 888 (1968), quoting State v. Hackney, 240 N.C. 230, 81 S.E.2d 778 (1954); State v. Able, 13 N.C. App. 365, 185 S.E.2d 422 (1971), cert. denied, 281 N.C. 514, 189 S.E.2d 36 (1972); State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972).

The State may dispense with the proceeding, since it is not essential to the finding of an indictment. Vance v. North Carolina, 432 F.2d 984 (4th Cir. 1970).

The hearing of probable cause before a committing magistrate or inferior judge can be readily dispensed with by the State in this jurisdiction, since a preliminary hearing is not an essential prerequisite to the finding of an indictment. Gasque v. State, 271 N.C. 323, 156 S.E.2d 740 (1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 1030, 88 S. Ct. 1423, 20 L. Ed. 2d 888 (1968).

And Hearing Not Required If Indictment Found. — If the grand jury finds an indictment, there is no need to conduct a preliminary examination. State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972).

A probable-cause hearing is unnecessary after the grand jury finds an indictment. State v. Lester, 294 N.C. 220, 240 S.E.2d 391 (1978); State v. Hudson, 295 N.C. 427, 245 S.E.2d 686 (1978); State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979); State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

This section does not require a preliminary hearing after defendant is indicted for a felony and the superior court acquires jurisdiction. State v. Page, 32 N.C. App. 478, 232 S.E.2d 460, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 64 (1977).

It is proper to try the defendant upon a bill of indictment without a preliminary hearing. State v. Hargett, 255 N.C. 412, 121 S.E.2d 589 (1961); State v. Able, 13 N.C. App. 365, 185 S.E.2d 422 (1971), cert. denied, 281 N.C. 514, 189 S.E.2d 36 (1972); State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972).

There is nothing in this Chapter or its legislative history which demonstrates the legislature's intention to alter the preexisting rule which dispensed with the requirement for a preliminary, or probable-cause, hearing when the defendant has been charged by indictment. State v. Sutton, 31 N.C. App. 697, 230 S.E.2d 572 (1976).

Accused may introduce his own witnesses. Vance v. North Carolina, 432 F.2d 984 (4th Cir. 1970).

Cross-examination of Witnesses. — The testimony of witnesses at the hearing is subject to cross-examination by the accused, or by his lawyer should he have counsel. Vance v. North Carolina, 432 F.2d 984 (4th Cir. 1970).

Waiver by Defendant. — A preliminary hearing may be held unless waived by defendant. State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972).

Failure to Provide Hearing Held Not to Preclude Prosecution. — Where nothing in the record disclosed that defendant was adversely affected at trial on account of the postponement of the scheduled preliminary hearings and the eventual abandonment of this procedure after the grand jury had returned the indictments, those irregularities as may have occurred in connection with the failure to provide a preliminary hearing for defendant were insufficient to preclude prosecution of defendant for the crimes for which he was indicted. State v. Foster, 282 N.C. 189, 192 S.E.2d 320 (1972).

Cited in State v. Murchinson, 39 N.C. App. 163, 249 S.E.2d 871 (1978); State v. Byrd, 67 N.C. App. 168, 312 S.E.2d 528 (1984).

§ 15A-612. Disposition of charge on probable-cause hearing.

(a) At the conclusion of a probable-cause hearing the judge must take one of the following actions:

(1) If he finds that the defendant probably committed the offense charged, or a lesser included offense of such offense within the original jurisdiction of the superior court, he must bind the defendant over to a superior court for further proceedings in accordance with this Chapter. The judge must note his findings in the case records.

(2) If he finds no probable cause as to the offense charged but probable cause with respect to a lesser included offense within the original jurisdiction of the district court, he may set the case for trial in the district court in accordance with the terms of G.S. 15A-613. In the absence of a new pleading, the judge may not set a case for trial in the district court on any offense which is not lesser included.

(3) If he finds no probable cause pursuant to subdivisions (1) or (2) as to any charge, he must dismiss the proceedings in question.

(b) No finding made by a judge under this section precludes the State from instituting a subsequent prosecution for the same offense. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 14.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section sets out the options a judge has after conducting a probable-cause hearing. The provision in subsection (b) simply states existing law. According to prevailing custom, neither the solicitor nor anyone else would attempt to start the case again in district court through issuance of a warrant or other process unless there was new evidence. The solicitor, if he disagreed with the decision of the district court judge, would also have the option of submitting a bill to the grand jury despite the finding in district court.

CASE NOTES

Preliminary hearing is not a trial; and the district judge, in his capacity as committing magistrate, passes only on the narrow question of whether probable cause exists and, if so, the fixing of bail if the offense is bailable. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972), decided under former law.

Discharge of Accused by District Judge Sitting as Committing Magistrate Is Not Acquittal. — The district judge, when sitting as a committing magistrate as authorized by § 7A-272(b), does not render a verdict; and a discharge of the accused is not an acquittal and does not bar a later indictment. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972), decided under former law.

Subsequent Prosecution Not Precluded by State's Voluntary Dismissal. — Voluntary dismissal taken by the State at a probable cause hearing does not preclude the State from instituting a subsequent prosecution for the same offense. State v. Coffer, 54 N.C. App. 78, 282 S.E.2d 492 (1981).

Former § 15A-701(a1)(3) Not an Exception to Subsection (b) of This Section. — Where there was a finding of no probable cause at a probable cause hearing, and where the State instituted a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, the period for computation of the time within which trial had to be commenced under former § 15A-701(a1)(3) began to run from the date of defendant's indictment on the new charge rather than from the date of his arrest on the original charge, since the General Assembly did not intend by the 1979 amendment to former § 15A-701(a1)(3), where the phrase "or a finding of no probable cause pursuant to § 15A-612" was inserted, to carve out an exception to the clear intent of subsection (b) of this section to permit subsequent prosecution for the same offense where a finding of no probable cause had been entered. State v. Boltinhouse, 49 N.C. App. 665, 272 S.E.2d 148 (1980).

Under former § 15A-701(a1)(3), when a charge was dismissed pursuant to this section as a result of a finding of no probable cause, the computation of time for the purpose of applying the former Speedy Trial Act commenced with the last of the items listed in former § 15A-701(a1)(3) ("arrested, served with criminal process, waived an indictment, or was indicted") relating to the new charge rather than the original charge. Otherwise, the clearly expressed intent of the Legislature, that no finding made by a judge in a probable cause hearing will preclude the State from instituting a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, would have been defeated. State v. Koberlein, 309 N.C. 601, 308 S.E.2d 442 (1983).

Applied in State v. Simpson, 60 N.C. App. 436, 299 S.E.2d 257 (1983); State v. Gross, 66 N.C. App. 364, 311 S.E.2d 41 (1984).

§ 15A-613. Setting offense for trial in district court.

If an offense set for trial in the district court under the terms of G.S. 15A-604(b)(4) or any provision of G.S. 15A-612 is a lesser included offense of the charge before the court on a pleading, the judge may:

(1) Accept a plea of guilty or no contest, with the consent of the prosecutor; or

(2) Proceed to try the offense immediately, with the consent of both the defendant and the prosecutor.

Otherwise, the judge must enter an appropriate order for subsequent calendaring of the case for trial in the district court. The trial so ordered may not be earlier than five working days nor later than 15 working days from the date of the order. The judge must note in the case records the new offense with which the defendant is charged, has been tried, or to which he entered a plea of guilty or no contest. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section governs district court disposition of charges on lesser included offenses of those in the criminal pleadings before the court. At the probable-cause hearing, the district court judge may then and there accept a guilty plea or plea of no contest to an included offense in the district court's trial jurisdiction, with the consent of the solicitor. If both parties are ready, trial on the included misdemeanor may be held immediately. If both parties do not consent, however, the included offense must be set for trial at a later date. The minimum time period of a week (five working days) should permit the solicitor to dismiss and secure appropriate new charges at the felony or misdemeanor level if he believes the district court judge was mistaken in finding no probable cause as to any higher offense. This time would even permit him to secure a superior court judge's order convening a special session of the grand jury if he thought the case warranted this action.

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Joyner, 33 N.C. App. 361, 235 S.E.2d 107 (1977).

§ 15A-614. Review of eligibility for pretrial release.

Upon binding a defendant in custody over to the superior court for trial or upon entering an order for subsequent calendaring of the case of such a defendant for trial in the district court, the judge must again review the eligibility of the defendant for release under Article 26 of this Chapter, Bail. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

§ 15A-615. Testing of certain persons for sexually transmitted infections.

(a) After a finding of probable cause pursuant to the provisions of Article 30 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes or indictment for an offense that involves nonconsensual vaginal, anal, or oral intercourse, an offense that involves vaginal, anal, or oral intercourse with a child 12 years old or less, or an offense under G.S. 14-202.1 that involves vaginal, anal, or oral intercourse with a child less than 16 years old, the victim or the parent, guardian, or guardian ad litem of a minor victim may request that a defendant be tested for the following sexually transmitted infections:

(1) Chlamydia;
(2) Gonorrhea;
(3) Hepatitis B;
(3a) Herpes;
(4) HIV; and
(5) Syphilis.

In the case of herpes, the defendant, pursuant to the provisions of this section, shall be examined for oral and genital herpetic lesions and, if a suggestive but nondiagnostic lesion is present, a culture for herpes shall be performed.

(b) Upon a request under subsection (a) of this section, the district attorney shall petition the court on behalf of the victim for an order requiring the defendant to be tested. Upon finding that there is probable cause to believe that the alleged sexual contact involved in the offense would pose a significant risk of transmission of a sexually transmitted infection listed in subsection (a) of this section, the court shall order the defendant to submit to testing for these infections.

(c) If the defendant is in the custody of the Department of Correction, the defendant shall be tested by the Department of Correction. If the defendant is not in the custody of the Department of Correction, the defendant shall be tested by the local health department. The Department of Correction shall inform the local health director of all test results. The local health director shall ensure that the victim is informed of the results of the tests and counseled appropriately. The agency conducting the tests shall inform the defendant of the results of the tests and ensure that the defendant is counseled appropriately. The results of the tests shall not be admissible as evidence in any criminal proceeding. (1993, c. 489, s. 1; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 8, s. 1.)

Article 31.

The Grand Jury and Its Proceedings.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Although a clear majority of the Commission believed that the grand jury as presently constituted serves little in the way of a truly functional purpose in the administration of criminal justice, the Commission determined early that it should not burden its 1973 recommendations with a proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the grand jury in whole or in part. Among the reasons for favoring retention of the grand jury was that it brings desirable citizen participation into the administration of the criminal justice system.

Following the decision to retain the grand jury, the Commission studied drafts based on New York law that would have greatly expanded various powers of the grand jury. For various reasons most of the provisions working an expansion of powers were eliminated. The result was a grand jury very much like the present one so far as processing bills of indictment is concerned; as for its other duties, the Article generally restricts the grand jury even more than before.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-621. "Grand jury" defined.

A grand jury is a body consisting of not less than 12 nor more than 18 persons, impaneled by a superior court and constituting a part of such court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is intended to restate existing law.

CASE NOTES

Grand Jury Transcripts. — Federal courts will not require North Carolina Superior Courts to have grand jury transcripts produced to defendants; to do so would be to act as a state appellate court and reverse an order by the Superior Court and to intrude into what is a statutorily defined part of the state court. Shell v. Wall, 760 F. Supp. 545 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

Quoted in State v. House, 295 N.C. 189, 244 S.E.2d 654 (1978); State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978).

§ 15A-622. Formation and organization of grand juries; other preliminary matters.

(a) The mode of selecting grand jurors and of drawing and impaneling grand jurors is governed by this Article and Chapter 9 of the General Statutes, Jurors. Challenges to the panel from which grand jurors were drawn are governed by the procedure in G.S. 15A-1211.

(b) To impanel a new grand jury, the presiding judge must direct that the names of all persons returned as jurors be separately placed in a container. The clerk must draw out the names of 18 persons to serve as grand jurors. Of these 18, the first nine drawn serve until the first session of court at which criminal cases are heard held in the county after the following January 1, and thereafter until their replacements are selected and sworn. The next nine serve until the first session of court at which criminal cases are heard held in the county after the following July 1, and thereafter until their replacements are selected and sworn. If this formula results in any term likely to be shorter than two months or longer than 15 months, the presiding judge impaneling the grand jury may modify the terms. Thereafter, beginning with the first session of superior court at which criminal cases are heard held in the county following January 1 and July 1 of each year, nine new grand jurors must be selected in the manner provided above to replace the jurors whose terms have expired. All new grand jurors so selected serve until the first session of court at which criminal cases are heard held after January 1 or July 1 which most nearly results in a 12-month term, and thereafter until their replacements are selected and sworn. If a vacancy occurs in the membership of the grand jury, the superior court judge next convening the jury or next holding a session of court at which criminal cases are heard in the county may order that a new juror be drawn in the manner provided above to fill the vacancy.

The senior resident superior court judge of the district may impanel a second grand jury in any county of the district to serve concurrently with the first. The second grand jury shall be impaneled as provided in the first paragraph of this subsection. The court shall continue to have two grand juries until the senior resident superior court judge orders the second grand jury to terminate.

In any county the senior resident superior court judge, if he finds that grand jury service is placing a disproportionate burden on grand jurors and their employers, may fix the term of service of a grand juror at six months rather than 12 months. In doing so, he shall prescribe procedures, consistent with this section, for replacement of half of the jurors of the grand jury or grand juries approximately every three months.

(c) Neither the grand jury panel nor any individual grand juror may be challenged, but a superior court judge may:

(1) At any time before new grand jurors are sworn, discharge them, or discharge the grand jury, and cause new grand jurors or a new grand jury to be drawn if he finds that jurors have not been selected in accordance with law or that the grand jury is illegally constituted; or

(2) At any time after a grand juror is drawn, refuse to swear him, or discharge him after he has been sworn, upon a finding that he is disqualified from service, incapable of performing his duties, or guilty of misconduct in the performance of his duties so as to impair the proper functioning of the grand jury.

(d) The presiding judge may excuse a grand juror from service of the balance of his term, upon his own motion or upon the juror's request for good cause shown. The foreman may excuse individual jurors from attending particular sessions of the grand jury, except that he may not excuse more than two jurors for any one session.

(e) After the impaneling of a new grand jury, or the impaneling of nine new jurors under the terms of this section, the presiding judge must appoint one of the grand jurors as foreman and may appoint another to act as foreman during any absence or disability of the foreman. Unless removed for cause by a superior court judge, the foreman serves until his successor is appointed and sworn.

(f) The foreman and other new grand jurors must take the oath prescribed in G.S. 11-11. After new grand jurors have been sworn, the presiding judge may give the grand jurors written or oral instructions relating to the performance of their duties. At subsequent sessions of court, the presiding judge is not required to give any additional instructions to the grand jurors.

(g) At any time when a grand jury is in recess, a superior court judge may, upon application of the prosecutor or upon his own motion, order the grand jury reconvened for the purpose of dealing with a matter requiring grand jury action.

(h) A written petition for convening of grand jury under this section may be filed by the district attorney, the district attorney's designated assistant, or a special prosecutor requested pursuant to G.S. 114-11.6, with the approval of a committee of at least three members of the North Carolina Conference of District Attorneys, and with the concurrence of the Attorney General, with the Clerk of the North Carolina Supreme Court. The Chief Justice shall appoint a panel of three judges to determine whether to order the grand jury convened. A grand jury under this section may be convened if the three-judge panel determines that:

(1) The petition alleges the commission of or a conspiracy to commit a violation of G.S. 90-95(h) or G.S. 90-95.1, any part of which violation or conspiracy occurred in the county where the grand jury sits, and that persons named in the petition have knowledge related to the identity of the perpetrators of those crimes but will not divulge that knowledge voluntarily or that such persons request that they be allowed to testify before the grand jury; and

(2) The affidavit sets forth facts that establish probable cause to believe that the crimes specified in the petition have been committed and reasonable grounds to suspect that the persons named in the petition have knowledge related to the identity of the perpetrators of those crimes.

The affidavit shall be based upon personal knowledge or, if the source of the information and basis for the belief are stated, upon information and belief. The panel's order convening the grand jury as an investigative grand jury shall direct the grand jury to investigate the crimes and persons named in the petition, and shall be filed with the Clerk of the North Carolina Supreme Court. A grand jury so convened retains all powers, duties, and responsibilities of a grand jury under this Article. The contents of the petition and the affidavit shall not be disclosed. Upon receiving a petition under this subsection, the Chief Justice shall appoint a panel to determine whether the grand jury should be convened as an investigative grand jury.

A grand jury authorized by this subsection may be convened from an existing grand jury or grand juries authorized by subsection (b) of this section or may be convened as an additional grand jury to an existing grand jury or grand juries. Notwithstanding subsection (b) of this section, grand jurors impaneled pursuant to this subsection shall serve for a period of 12 months, and, if an additional grand jury is convened, 18 persons shall be selected to constitute that grand jury. At any time for cause shown, the presiding superior court judge may excuse a juror temporarily or permanently, and in the latter event the court may impanel another person in place of the juror excused. OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section replaces certain procedural provisions relating to grand jurors in Article 4 of Chapter 9, Grand Jurors, which is slated for repeal. The rest of Chapter 9, though, is left intact and is cross-referenced in subsection (a). The provisions as to length of tenure are essentially similar to the former statute in Chapter 9, though it is rewritten and modified in minor ways.

Subsection (c) embodies a change, as § 9-22(b) authorized a superior court judge to discharge an entire grand jury panel in his discretion. This section requires him to find cause for discharging either a panel or individual jurors. The kinds of sufficient cause are set out in the subsection.

The procedural provisions of subsection (d) have never been codified before.

Subsection (f) for the first time grants the judge explicit authority to give a written charge to the grand jury. It also specifies that at subsequent sessions after the installation of nine new members the judge need not charge the grand jurors further.

Subsection (g) states the underlying purposes of that part of § 9-22(b) which authorized the judge to order the grand jurors assembled at any time for the purpose of hearing his charge.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1991, c. 686, s. 3 amended Session Laws 1985, c. 843, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1987, c. 1040, so as to delete an October 1, 1991 expiration provision. The 1991 act, which is in the coded bill drafting format set out in § 120-20.1, did not mention Session Laws 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1039, s. 4, which amended the 1985 act, as amended, to change the expiration date to October 1, 1993.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Discrimination in Selecting Jurors.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Always 18 Grand Jurors Serving. — Nine grand jurors are drawn in January of each year and nine grand jurors are drawn in July of each year, but there are always 18 grand jurors serving. State v. Ray, 274 N.C. 556, 164 S.E.2d 457 (1968).

Noncompliance with Directory Procedure Does Not Void Indictment. — Noncompliance with a procedure merely directory for the preparation of the jury list does not void a bill of indictment returned by a grand jury drawn from a jury box so composed. State v. Rogers, 275 N.C. 411, 168 S.E.2d 345 (1969), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1024, 90 S. Ct. 599, 24 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1970).

Written Order to Reconvene Not Required. — Defendant could show no prejudice from the lack of a written application or order of the trial court to have the grand jury reconvened. State v. Parker, 119 N.C. App. 328, 459 S.E.2d 9 (1995).

Issue of Discrimination Raised for First Time on Appeal. — Capital murder defendant waived any claim that his constitutional rights were denied because of racial discrimination in selection of foreman to the grand jury that indicted him where the defendant made no motion challenging any aspect of the indictment and only raised the issue for the first time on appeal. State v. Robinson, 327 N.C. 346, 395 S.E.2d 402 (1990).

Complete Exclusion of Class from Eligibility. — Even the complete exclusion, by State law, of a group or class of persons from eligibility for jury service will not make invalid an indictment by a grand jury, selected in accordance with such State law, so long as there is no reasonable basis for the conclusion that the ineligible group or class would bring to the deliberations of the jury a point of view not otherwise represented upon it, at least where the defendant is not a member of the excluded group. State v. Knight, 269 N.C. 100, 152 S.E.2d 179 (1967).

Erroneously Summoned Juror. — While, generally, the provisions of the statute for drawing and summoning jurors are directory, the grand jury is illegally constituted when one whose name was not drawn from the boxes was summoned by mistake, and served by mistake. State v. Paramore, 146 N.C. 604, 60 S.E. 502 (1908).

Qualifications Judged at Time of Service. — The fact that a grand juror was a minor when his name was put on the jury list is immaterial if he was of age at the time he served. State v. Perry, 122 N.C. 1018, 29 S.E. 384 (1898).

Son of Prosecutor Member of Grand Jury. — The fact that the son of the prosecutor in an indictment for larceny was a member of the grand jury, and actively participated in finding the bill, did not vitiate the indictment, and it was error to quash it on that ground. State v. Sharp, 110 N.C. 604, 14 S.E. 504 (1892).

Foreman Interested in Prosecution. — A motion to quash a bill of indictment on the ground that the foreman of the grand jury was interested in the prosecution was denied when it appeared that the foreman took no part in passing upon the indictment and signed the bill under the direction of the grand jury and returned it in open court. State v. Pitt, 166 N.C. 268, 80 S.E. 1060 (1914).

Grand Juror on Perjury Indictment Also Member of Petit Jury. — The fact that a member of the grand jury which returned a true bill for perjury was one of the petit jury that tried the issues in an action wherein it was charged the perjury was committed, is not good ground for abating or quashing the indictment. He was bound by his oath as a grand juror to communicate to his fellows the information he had acquired as a petit juror. State v. Wilcox, 104 N.C. 847, 10 S.E. 453 (1889).

Court May Exercise Discretion. — The trial court made findings in support of its conclusion that defendants were not entitled to investigative grand jury documents. Although the court concluded that defendants were not entitled to the documents as a matter of law, there was no indication in the record that the court reached this conclusion under the mistaken belief that it was required to so hold as a matter of law, i.e., that it had no discretion. Thus, defendant's assignment of error was overruled. State v. Crummy, 107 N.C. App. 305, 420 S.E.2d 448, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 669, 424 S.E.2d 411 (1992).

Applied in State v. Rankins, 133 N.C. App. 607, 515 S.E.2d 748 (1999).

Stated in State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978).

Cited in State v. Cofield, 324 N.C. 452, 379 S.E.2d 834 (1989).

II. DISCRIMINATION IN SELECTING JURORS.

Racial discrimination in the selection of a grand jury foreman from a panel of grand jurors selected in a nondiscriminatory manner violates N.C. Const., Art. 1, §§ 19 and 26. State v. Cofield, 320 N.C. 297, 357 S.E.2d 622 (1987).

A black defendant may make out a prima facie case of racial discrimination in the grand jury foreman's selection by showing either (1) that the selection procedure itself was not racially neutral, or (2) that for a substantial period in the past relatively few blacks had served in the position of foreman, even though a substantial number had been selected to serve as members of grand juries. The State may rebut such a prima facie case on remand by offering evidence that the process used in selecting the grand jury foreman was in fact racially neutral. State v. Cofield, 320 N.C. 297, 357 S.E.2d 622 (1987).

Exclusion of Members of Defendant's Race. — The selection of a legally constituted grand jury is a constitutionally protected right, and the indictment of a defendant by a grand jury from which members of his race have been systematically excluded is a denial of his right to equal protection of the laws. Parker v. Ross, 330 F. Supp. 13 (E.D.N.C. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 470 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1972).

Burden of Showing Discrimination in Selecting Jurors. — U.S. Const., Amend. XIV forbids any discrimination against blacks in the selection of a grand jury, and the burden is on the defendants to establish the discrimination against their race. State v. Arnold, 258 N.C. 563, 129 S.E.2d 229 (1963), rev'd on other grounds, 376 U.S. 773, 84 S. Ct. 1032, 12 L. Ed. 2d 77 (1964).

Objection to Discriminatory Selection Not Waived by Guilty Plea. — Under North Carolina law, a guilty plea does not waive objections to racial exclusion in the selection of the grand jury if, before the plea of guilty, the defendant raises his objection in a motion to quash the indictment. Parker v. North Carolina, 397 U.S. 790, 90 S. Ct. 1458, 25 L. Ed. 2d 785 (1970).

Right to Constitutionally Selected Jury Held Not Waived. — Where there is no evidence that petitioner, after intelligent consultation with his attorney, had understandingly and knowingly waived the right of trial by an indictment returned by a constitutionally selected grand jury, there is no basis to support a finding that he has waived that right by his failure to enter a timely motion to quash the indictment. Parker v. Ross, 330 F. Supp. 13 (E.D.N.C. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 470 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1972).

Question of racial exclusion in the selection of a state grand jury is cognizable in federal habeas corpus, despite the fact that under former § 9-23 an objection to the composition of the grand jury was waived unless raised by motion to quash the indictment prior to the entry of the guilty plea. Parker v. Ross, 330 F. Supp. 13 (E.D.N.C. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 470 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1972).

Role of the foreman of a North Carolina grand jury is not so significant to the administration of justice that discrimination in the appointment of that office impugns the fundamental fairness of the process itself so as to undermine the integrity of the indictment. State v. Gary, 78 N.C. App. 29, 337 S.E.2d 70 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 197, 341 S.E.2d 586 (1986).

§ 15A-623. Grand jury proceedings and operation in general.

(a) The finding of an indictment, the return of a presentment, and every other affirmative official action or decision of the grand jury requires the concurrence of at least 12 members of the grand jury.

(b) The foreman presides over all hearings and has the power to administer oaths or affirmations to all witnesses.

(c) The foreman must indicate on each bill of indictment or presentment the witness or witnesses sworn and examined before the grand jury. Failure to comply with this provision does not vitiate a bill of indictment or presentment.

(d) During the deliberations and voting of a grand jury, only the grand jurors may be present in the grand jury room. During its other proceedings, the following persons, in addition to a witness being examined, may, as the occasion requires, also be present:

(1) An interpreter, if needed.

(2) A law-enforcement officer holding a witness in custody.

Any person other than a witness who is permitted in the grand jury room must first take an oath before the grand jury that he will keep secret all matters before it within his knowledge.

(e) Grand jury proceedings are secret and, except as expressly provided in this Article, members of the grand jury and all persons present during its sessions shall keep its secrets and refrain from disclosing anything which transpires during any of its sessions.

(f) The presiding judge may direct that a bill of indictment be kept secret until the defendant is arrested or appears before the court. The clerk must seal the bill of indictment and no person including a witness may disclose the finding of the bill of indictment, or the proceedings leading to the finding, except when necessary for the issuance and execution of an order of arrest.

(g) Any grand juror or other person authorized to attend sessions of the grand jury and bound to keep its secrets who discloses, other than to his attorney, matters occurring before the grand jury other than in accordance with the provisions of this section is in contempt of court and subject to proceedings in accordance with law.

(h) If a grand jury is convened pursuant to G.S. 15A-622(h), notwithstanding subsection (d) of this section, a prosecutor shall be present to examine witnesses, and a court reporter shall be present and record the examination of witnesses. The record shall be transcribed. If the prosecutor determines that it is necessary to compel testimony from the witness, he may grant use immunity to the witness. The grant of use immunity shall be given to the witness in writing by the prosecutor and shall be signed by the prosecutor. The written grant of use immunity shall also be read into the record by the prosecutor and shall include an explanation of use immunity as provided in G.S. 15A-1051. A witness shall have the right to leave the grand jury room to consult with his counsel at reasonable intervals and for a reasonable period of time upon the request of the witness. Notwithstanding subsection (e) of this section, the record of the examination of witnesses shall be made available to the examining prosecutor, and he may disclose contents of the record to other investigative or law-enforcement officers, the witness or his attorney to the extent that the disclosure is appropriate to the proper performance of his official duties. The record of the examination of a witness may be used in a trial to the extent that it is relevant and otherwise admissible. Further disclosure of grand jury proceedings convened pursuant to this act may be made upon written order of a superior court judge if the judge determines disclosure is essential:

(1) To prosecute a witness who appeared before the grand jury for contempt or perjury; or

(2) To protect a defendant's constitutional rights or statutory rights to discovery pursuant to G.S. 15A-903.

Upon the convening of the investigative grand jury pursuant to approval by the three-judge panel, the district attorney shall subpoena the witnesses. The subpoena shall be served by the investigative grand jury officer, who shall be appointed by the court. The name of the person subpoenaed and the issuance and service of the subpoena shall not be disclosed, except that a witness so subpoenaed may divulge that information. The presiding superior court judge shall hear any matter concerning the investigative grand jury in camera to the extent necessary to prevent disclosure of its existence. The court reporter for the investigative grand jury shall be present and record and transcribe the in camera proceeding. The transcription of any in camera proceeding and a copy of all subpoenas and other process shall be returned to the Chief Justice or to such member of the three-judge panel as the Chief Justice may designate, to be filed with the Clerk of the North Carolina Supreme Court. The subpoena shall otherwise be subject to the provisions of G.S. 15A-801 and Article 43 of Chapter 15A. When an investigative grand jury has completed its investigation of the crimes alleged in the petition, the investigative functions of the grand jury shall be dissolved and such investigation shall cease. The District Attorney shall file a notice of dissolution of the investigative functions of the grand jury with the Clerk of the North Carolina Supreme Court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 843, ss. 3, 6; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1040, ss. 1, 4; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1039, s. 4; 1991, c. 686, ss. 2, 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

In general the provisions of this section spell out procedural provisions that were observed through custom, common law, or provisions of Article 4 of Chapter 9 of the General Statutes. Among the new provisions are:

(1) Express permission for interpreters and law-enforcement officers keeping witnesses in custody to enter the grand jury room. The Commission quite deliberately decided against authorizing any bailiff or deputy sheriff attending the grand jury any authority to enter the grand jury room at any time the jurors are in session.

(2) Express direction to swear the nonwitnesses to secrecy.

(3) An express bar against disclosure.

(4) The procedure for sealing a bill of indictment until a defendant can be brought within the control or custody of the court.

The Commission's proposal allowed disclosure of grand jury proceedings in certain instances, e.g., a witness could disclose his own testimony or a court could order disclosure if a case involved alleged contempt or perjury before a grand jury. The General Assembly, however, was fearful of opening the door at all in a manner to enhance the use of the grand jury as an investigative tool of the prosecutor's office, and rewrote subsection (e). It is not clear to what extent, if at all, a court could invoke the common law to override the statutory command, though if a defendant's constitutional rights were compromised by the statutory bar it seems obvious that the statute should be disregarded.

The Commission debated the idea of allowing the solicitor in the grand jury room to examine witnesses at least when investigations were being undertaken. It finally decided in all cases to preserve the present arrangement whereby all questioning is by the jurors — and unrecorded.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Public Policy Underlying Subsection (e). — The public policy of this State against allowing a defendant at trial to cross-examine the witnesses before the grand jury in order to show the nature and character of the evidence upon which the bill of indictment was founded is codified in subsection (e) of this section. State v. Phillips, 297 N.C. 600, 256 S.E.2d 212 (1979).

It is against the public policy of this state to allow a defendant to expose the nature of the evidence upon which a true bill was returned; for this reason a defendant is not allowed to cross-examine the witnesses before a grand jury. State v. Jones, 85 N.C. App. 56, 354 S.E.2d 251, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 173, 358 S.E.2d 61, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 969, 108 S. Ct. 465, 98 L. Ed. 2d 404 (1987).

A grand jury hearing constitutes a judicial proceeding within the meaning of the absolute privilege rule. Houpe v. City of Statesville, 128 N.C. App. 334, 497 S.E.2d 82 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 72, 505 S.E.2d 871 (1998).

Failure to Mark Names of Witnesses on Bill. — The provision that the foreman of the grand jury shall mark on the indictment the names of the witnesses sworn and examined before the jury, was directory merely, and the omission of the foreman to comply therewith was no ground for quashing the bill, where the proof was that the witnesses were sworn. State v. Hines, 84 N.C. 810 (1881); State v. Avant, 202 N.C. 680, 163 S.E. 806 (1932); State v. Lancaster, 210 N.C. 584, 187 S.E. 802 (1936); State v. Mitchell, 260 N.C. 235, 132 S.E.2d 481 (1963).

The statute requiring the foreman of the grand jury, when the oath is administered by him, to mark on the bill the names of the witnesses sworn and examined before the jury is directory, and the fact that it does not appear by endorsement on a bill that the witness had been sworn and examined is no ground for quashing the indictment or arresting the judgment. State v. Hollingsworth, 100 N.C. 535, 6 S.E. 417 (1888).

The statutory requirement that the foreman of the grand jury shall mark on the bill the names of the witnesses sworn and examined before the jury is directory and not mandatory, and the mere absence of such an endorsement is not sufficient to overcome the presumption of validity of the indictment arising from its return by the grand jury as "a true bill." State v. Tudor, 14 N.C. App. 526, 188 S.E.2d 583 (1972).

Mere absence of an endorsement on a bill of indictment indicating that the witnesses were duly examined is not sufficient to overcome the presumption of the validity of the indictment arising from its return by the grand jury as "a true bill." State v. Mitchell, 260 N.C. 235, 132 S.E.2d 481 (1963).

No endorsement on a bill of indictment by the grand jury is necessary. The record that it was presented by the grand jury is sufficient in the absence of evidence to impeach it. State v. Sultan, 142 N.C. 569, 54 S.E. 841 (1906).

Witnesses Sworn by Clerk. — The statute, authorizing the foreman of the grand jury to swear witnesses to be examined before the jury is directory merely. The fact that witnesses are sworn by the clerk of court rather than by the foreman is not grounds for arresting judgment or quashing an indictment. State v. Allen, 83 N.C. 680 (1880); State v. White, 88 N.C. 698 (1883).

Return of New Bill After Quashal Without Reexamination of Witnesses. — Where an indictment upon which witnesses had been examined was returned by the grand jury "a true bill," and quashed because it did not sufficiently charge the offense intended, and thereupon a new bill for the offense was sent and returned into court, "a true bill," without a reexamination of the witnesses, this bill should be quashed. State v. Ivey, 100 N.C. 539, 5 S.E. 407 (1888).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's request for a transcript of the grand jury proceedings concerning his indictment, since such proceedings are considered secret, and defendant is adequately protected by his right to object to improper evidence and to cross-examine the witnesses presented against him at trial. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

Transcripts Not Required by Federal Courts. — Federal courts will not require North Carolina Superior Courts to have grand jury transcripts produced to defendants; to do so would be to act as a state appellate court and reverse an order by the Superior Court and to intrude into what is a statutorily defined part of the state court. Shell v. Wall, 760 F. Supp. 545 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

Applied in State v. Dukes, 305 N.C. 387, 289 S.E.2d 561 (1982); State v. Gary, 78 N.C. App. 29, 337 S.E.2d 70 (1985).

§ 15A-624. Grand jury the judge of facts; judge the source of legal advice.

(a) The grand jury is the exclusive judge of the facts with respect to any matter before it.

(b) The legal advisor of the grand jury is the presiding or convening judge. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) states the common law followed in North Carolina. Subsection (b) reflects a policy decision of the Commission. In many jurisdictions the prosecuting attorney may advise the grand jury on matters of law, but these of course are jurisdictions in which the prosecutor routinely enters the grand jury room to examine the witnesses.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

For comment on the section here deleted, see the commentary under § 15A-1053.

§ 15A-626. Who may call witnesses before grand jury; no right to appear without consent of prosecutor or judge.

(a) Except as provided in this section, no person has a right to call a witness or appear as a witness in a grand jury proceeding.

(b) In proceedings upon bills of indictment submitted by the prosecutor to the grand jury, the clerk must call as witnesses the persons whose names are listed on the bills by the prosecutor. If the grand jury desires to hear any witness not named on the bill under consideration, it must through its foreman request the prosecutor to call the witness. The prosecutor in his discretion may call, or refuse to call, the witness.

(c) In considering any matter before it a grand jury may swear and hear the testimony of a member of the grand jury.

(d) Any person not called as a witness who desires to testify before the grand jury concerning a criminal matter which may properly be considered by the grand jury must apply to the district attorney or to a superior court judge. The judge or the district attorney in his discretion may call the witness to appear before the grand jury.

(e) An official who is required or authorized to call a witness before the grand jury does so by issuing a subpoena for the witness or by causing one to be issued. If the official is assured that the witness will appear when requested without issuance of a subpoena, he may call the witness simply by notifying him of the time and place his presence is requested before the grand jury. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is a key one in placing restrictions on any independent powers the grand jury may possess. The grand jury may not call its own witnesses; in fact, even volunteer witnesses may not appear before the grand jury without the permission of the solicitor or the judge.

As originally drafted this section stated that a grand jury investigating a matter expressly referred to it by a solicitor or a judge had the right to secure all necessary witnesses; otherwise, it was within the discretion of the judge or the solicitor. The General Assembly deleted these provisions and in fact left no specific provision for the jurors to request that witnesses be called. Nevertheless, from the overall context of the section it is clear that either a judge or a solicitor would have the discretion to call, or refuse to call, any person as a witness upon the request of the grand jurors.

Subsection (e) authorizes witnesses to be called without the formality of a subpoena when it is clear that the witness will come at the time requested.

CASE NOTES

Purpose of subsection (b) of this section is to provide that the clerk only call as witnesses persons whose names appear on the indictment. State v. McLain, 64 N.C. App. 571, 307 S.E.2d 769 (1983).

The logical purpose of subsection (b) of this section is not to insure that all witnesses must be called by the clerk. State v. McLain, 64 N.C. App. 571, 307 S.E.2d 769 (1983).

Applied in State v. Gary, 78 N.C. App. 29, 337 S.E.2d 70 (1985).

§ 15A-627. Submission of bill of indictment to grand jury by prosecutor.

(a) When a defendant has been bound over for trial in the superior court upon any charge in the original jurisdiction of such court, the prosecutor, unless he dismisses the charge under the terms of Article 50 of this Chapter, Voluntary Dismissal by the State, or proceeds upon a bill of information, must submit a bill of indictment charging the offense to the grand jury for its consideration.

(b) A prosecutor may submit a bill of indictment charging an offense within the original jurisdiction of the superior court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) codifies existing practice. The Commission determined that it was not necessary to complicate this section by setting time limits in which the solicitor must act. It was believed that the rights granted defendants elsewhere to assure speedy trials would be sufficient to cover this matter.

Subsection (b) originally restricted the power of solicitors to submit a bill of indictment to the grand jury on a charge as to which a district court judge had found no probable cause without the written consent of a superior court judge. As amended, it merely states the solicitor's unrestricted common-law power to submit a bill of indictment within the jurisdictional limits of § 7A-271(a).

CASE NOTES

State may bypass the preliminary hearing entirely, and initially seek an indictment from the grand jury. State v. Lay, 56 N.C. App. 796, 290 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 390, 294 S.E.2d 216 (1982).

Finding of probable cause by district court is not a prerequisite to the returning of a true bill of indictment. State v. McGee, 47 N.C. App. 280, 267 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 101, 273 S.E.2d 306 (1980).

Actions of grand jury are not limited by charges presented or determined at a probable cause hearing in the district court. State v. McGee, 47 N.C. App. 280, 267 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 101, 273 S.E.2d 306 (1980).

Effect of Finding of No Probable Cause. — Despite a finding of no probable cause made by a district court, the State may subsequently seek an indictment on the same felony charge. State v. Lay, 56 N.C. App. 796, 290 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 390, 294 S.E.2d 216 (1982).

§ 15A-628. Functions of grand jury; record to be kept by clerk.

(a) A grand jury:

(1) Must return a bill submitted to it by the prosecutor as a true bill of indictment if it finds from the evidence probable cause for the charge made.

(2) Must return a bill submitted to it by the prosecutor as not a true bill of indictment if it fails to find probable cause for the charge made. Upon returning a bill of indictment as not a true bill, the grand jury may request the prosecutor to submit a bill of indictment as to a lesser included or related offense.

(3) May return the bill to the court with an indication that the grand jury has not been able to act upon it because of the unavailability of witnesses.

(4) May investigate any offense as to which no bill of indictment has been submitted to it by the prosecutor and issue a presentment accusing a named person or named persons with one or more criminal offenses if it has found probable cause for the charges made. An investigation may be initiated upon the concurrence of 12 members of the grand jury itself or upon the request of the presiding or convening judge or the prosecutor.

(5) Must inspect the jail and may inspect other county offices or agencies and must report the results of its inspections to the court.

(b) In proceeding under subsection (a), the grand jury may consider any offense which may be prosecuted in the courts of the county, or in the courts of the superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1 when there has been a waiver of venue in accordance with Article 3 of this Chapter, Venue.

(c) Bills of indictment submitted by the prosecutor to the grand jury, whether found to be true bills or not, must be returned by the foreman of the grand jury to the presiding judge in open court. Presentments must also be returned by the foreman of the grand jury to the presiding judge in open court.

(d) The clerk must keep a permanent record of all matters returned by the grand jury to the judge under the provisions of this section. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 59.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

An early draft of this section within the Commission permitted the grand jury to issue critical reports of public officials following investigations of them or their offices. This was coupled with some fairly elaborate additional sections allowing officials to see critical reports and defend themselves against any false charges before the reports could be made public. Reports about public agencies that were not critical of identifiable persons were also permitted. The Commission finally decided that the grand jury is an unwieldly investigative body; there is simply too much danger that through ignorance of budgetary and other restraints it could by general or specific criticism unfairly ruin the career of conscientious public officials who are doing the best that can be expected. The draft reflected the Commission's policy choice: The grand jury's investigations may only result in indictments (with the cooperation of the solicitor) or presentments. The section as introduced did not explicitly prohibit reports; it said they were not necessary. The tenor of the entire Article, though, was such that the courts would undoubtedly rule out of order any report of the grand jury that criticized any identifiable person unless that report was accompanied with an indictment or presentment against the person. These careful limitations of the grand jury's powers, however, were thrown awry by amendatory language of the General Assembly in subdivision (a)(5), which requires the grand jury to inspect the jail, in keeping with the provisions of § 9-26, and to permit inspection of "other county offices or agencies"; as for reports, if inspections are made, the jury must report to the court.

This leaves the question of critical reports of county officials and employees not specifically settled, but would probably authorize any criticism that was a necessary part of the report. Critical reports of other persons would apparently, now that the statute has been amended to the point that it is ambiguous on the question, be a question of decision under North Carolina's common law.

A new feature of the section is in subdivision (a)(3), providing that a grand jury may return a bill of indictment without acting upon it if witnesses are unavailable.

Subsection (c) as introduced provided that its procedure applied in capital cases as well as noncapital cases. This was designed to abolish the custom now followed that all the grand jurors must come into open court upon the return of an indictment in a capital case. The General Assembly removed that specification, but did not address the question whether the old procedure should be retained in capital cases. One minor change might be noted: The foreman must now return indictments and presentments to the court; it has been customary in noncapital cases to send them to the judge by a bailiff or deputy sheriff or deputy sheriff assigned to the grand jury.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Indictment to Be Returned in Open Court. — It is the returning of the bill of indictment, publicly, in open court and its being there recorded, that makes it effectual. State v. Cox, 28 N.C. 440 (1846).

Presence of Defendant When Indictment Returned. — Defendant is not entitled to be present in court, either in person or by his attorney, when the indictments are returned as true bills by the grand jury, and his motion to quash the indictments because neither he nor his attorney was present in court when the indictments were returned was properly overruled. State v. Childs, 269 N.C. 307, 152 S.E.2d 453 (1967), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2278, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971), citing State v. Stanley, 227 N.C. 650, 44 S.E.2d 196 (1947).

It is not mandatory that the foreman personally deliver bills of indictment to the court. State v. Reep, 12 N.C. App. 125, 182 S.E.2d 623 (1971).

A bill of indictment was not improperly delivered to the court where the foreman delivered it to the officer serving the grand jury, and the officer gave the indictment to the solicitor (now prosecutor) who carried it into the courtroom. State v. Reep, 12 N.C. App. 125, 182 S.E.2d 623 (1971).

Minutes of Court as Evidence of Compliance. — The minutes of the court show that statutory requirements as to return of an indictment in a capital case in open court were strictly complied with. State v. Childs, 269 N.C. 307, 152 S.E.2d 453 (1967), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2278, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Grand jury does not have authority to compel county commissioners to repair county buildings. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. R. Wendel Hutchins, County Attorney, Plymouth, N.C., 46 N.C.A.G. 221 (1977).

§ 15A-629. Procedure upon finding of not a true bill; release of defendant, etc.; institution of new charge.

(a) Upon the return of a bill of indictment as not a true bill, the presiding judge must immediately examine the case records to determine if the defendant is in custody or subject to bail or conditions of pretrial release. If so, except as provided in subsection (b), the judge must immediately order release from custody, exoneration of bail, or release from conditions of pretrial release, as the case may be.

(b) Upon the return of a bill of indictment as not a true bill but with a request that the prosecutor submit a bill of indictment to a lesser included or related offense, the judge may defer the action required in subsection (a) for a reasonable period, not to extend past the end of that session of superior court, to allow the institution of the new charge. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section contains a new provision. It authorizes the judge to defer a defendant's release from custody or bail obligations until new process, or a new indictment, may be secured when the jury finds not a true bill to the offense charged but recommends prosecution for a lesser included or related offense. (See the commentary to § 15A-956.) The General Assembly removed a provision from this section which restricted the solicitor's discretionary power to submit a new bill of indictment upon the same charge to the same or a new grand jury following the return of a bill as not a true bill.

CASE NOTES

Cited in In re Superior Court Order, 70 N.C. App. 63, 318 S.E.2d 843 (1984).

§ 15A-630. Notice to defendant of true bill of indictment.

Upon the return of a bill of indictment as a true bill the presiding judge must immediately cause notice of the indictment to be mailed or otherwise given to the defendant unless he is then represented by counsel of record. The notice must inform the defendant of the time limitations upon his right to discovery under Article 48 of this Chapter, Discovery in the Superior Court, and a copy of the indictment must be attached to the notice. If the judge directs that the indictment be sealed as provided in G.S. 15A-623(f), he may defer the giving of notice under this section for a reasonable length of time. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 143.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

In its provisions as to timeliness of discovery requests, the Commission started the clock running for most defendants when the probable-cause hearing is held or waived. But, defendants not then represented by counsel, or for whom the probable-cause hearing is bypassed, require a different starting point. The Commission determined that at or shortly after the issuance of an indictment was the appropriate time, and this necessitated giving those defendants notice of the indictment. This section is drafted to conform with the provisions of § 15A-902(d).

CASE NOTES

Mailing Not Jurisdictional. — There is nothing in this section to indicate that the mailing of the return of indictment is jurisdictional. State v. Williams, 77 N.C. App. 136, 334 S.E.2d 491 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 396, 338 S.E.2d 877 (1986).

Defendant Held Not Entitled to Notice. — Where counsel was appointed for a defendant on November 14, 1978, and a bill of indictment was returned on December 11, 1978, clearly defendant was not entitled to the benefits of the notice requirement of this section, since a reading of the statute reveals that its provisions are applicable to defendants "unless [they are] then represented by counsel of record." State v. Miller, 42 N.C. App. 342, 256 S.E.2d 512 (1979).

Service of Superseding Indictments on Defendants Not Required Where They Were Represented by Counsel. — Allegation that superseding indictments were not "filed" within the meaning of § 15A-646, because they were not served on defendants prior to trial, was without merit, as there was no requirement that defendants be served with copies of superseding indictments, where they were represented by counsel at the time those indictments were returned by the grand jury. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 328, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

Indictments with Dates Different from Those of the Arrest Warrants Not Prejudicial to Defendant. — The trial court committed no error, plain or otherwise, with respect to defendant not having been served with the bills of indictment or with respect to the State offering evidence that the offenses occurred on dates different from those alleged in the arrest warrants where the defendant alleged sex offender was represented by counsel of record on the date of the return of the true bills of indictment, where he and his counsel waived formal arraignment, at which they would have been informed of the allegations contained in the bills of indictment, where the defendant presented evidence that he was never alone with the victim during any of the times during which the State's evidence showed the offenses occurred, and where he did not rely solely upon alibi but also presented evidence through his own testimony and the testimony of others directly contradicting the victim's account of the incidents. State v. Hutchings, 139 N.C. App. 184, 533 S.E.2d 258 (2000).

Applied in State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825 (1982).

§ 15A-631. Grand jury venue.

In the General Court of Justice, the place for returning a presentment or indictment is a matter of venue and not jurisdiction. A grand jury shall have venue to present or indict in any case where the county in which it is sitting has venue for trial pursuant to the laws relating to trial venue. (1985, c. 553, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Under law prior to enactment of this section, grand jury had no jurisdiction to indict defendants for rapes committed in another county. State v. Flowers, 318 N.C. 208, 347 S.E.2d 773 (1986).

Return of Indictment Is Matter of Venue, Not Jurisdiction. — The enactment of this section has changed the common law rule regarding a county's jurisdiction to indict. It states that the place for returning a presentment or indictment is a matter of venue, not jurisdiction. State v. Brown, 85 N.C. App. 583, 355 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 172, 358 S.E.2d 57 (1987).

Even if trafficking indictment failed to name Wake County as a county in which offense occurred, and venue was therefore technically incorrect in Wake County, the Superior Court of Wake County nevertheless had jurisdiction to try the offense, as under this section the return of an indictment is a matter of venue, not jurisdiction. State v. Carter, 96 N.C. App. 611, 386 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 365, 389 S.E.2d 817 (1989).

Indictment in County Other Than Where Offense Occurred Not a Material Variance. — Where a defendant is charged with felonious possession of stolen property, and is indicted in one county, and proof of the offense indicates that it occurred in another county, the variance is not material. State v. Brown, 85 N.C. App. 583, 355 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 172, 358 S.E.2d 57 (1987).

Questions of venue are waived by the failure to make a pre-trial motion, even if the problem of venue arises from a variance between the indictment and the proof at trial. State v. Brown, 85 N.C. App. 583, 355 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 172, 358 S.E.2d 57 (1987).

Applied in State v. Chavis, 134 N.C. App. 546, 518 S.E.2d 241 (1999).

ARTICLE 32.

Indictment and Related Instruments.

§ 15A-641. Indictment and related instruments; definitions of indictment, information, and presentment.

(a) Any indictment is a written accusation by a grand jury, filed with a superior court, charging a person with the commission of one or more criminal offenses.

(b) An information is a written accusation by a prosecutor, filed with a superior court, charging a person represented by counsel with the commission of one or more criminal offenses.

(c) A presentment is a written accusation by a grand jury, made on its own motion and filed with a superior court, charging a person, or two or more persons jointly, with the commission of one or more criminal offenses. A presentment does not institute criminal proceedings against any person, but the district attorney is obligated to investigate the factual background of every presentment returned in his district and to submit bills of indictment to the grand jury dealing with the subject matter of any presentments when it is appropriate to do so. (1797, c. 474, s. 3, P.R.; R.C., c. 35, s. 6; 1879, c. 12; Code, s. 1175; Rev., s. 3240; C.S., s. 4607; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is intended to set out the North Carolina common law relating to the definitions of indictment, information, and presentment. One change was made in conformity with the commission's decision to require a separate pleading for each defendant. Indictments and informations may charge only a single person. Presentments, as they are not pleadings, may charge two or more persons jointly.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Effect on § 15-1. — There is no stated purpose in this section that indicates the legislature intended to repeal § 15-1. Furthermore this section appears to be an effort by the legislature to codify the common law that permitted the use of presentments by grand juries but prohibited the arrest and trial of defendants on a presentment. Thus, § 15-1 has not been repealed and remains a part of the law of this State; it would support the order of the trial court denying defendant's motion to dismiss. State v. Whittle, 118 N.C. App. 130, 454 S.E.2d 688 (1995).

There can be no trial, conviction, or punishment without a formal and sufficient accusation. In the absence of an accusation the court acquires no jurisdiction whatever, and if it assumes jurisdiction a trial and conviction are a nullity. McClure v. State, 267 N.C. 212, 148 S.E.2d 15 (1966); State v. Cassada, 6 N.C. App. 629, 170 S.E.2d 575 (1969).

Court not required to instruct indicting grand jury on elements of crime in question. State v. Treadwell, 99 N.C. App. 769, 394 S.E.2d 245 (1990).

Sentencing of Defendant Who Pleaded Guilty But Who Was Not Formally Accused. — When the court sentenced petitioner, who had been indicted for one offense upon his plea of guilty of another offense, when there was no formal and sufficient accusation against him for the offense to which he pleaded guilty, it would seem to be without precedent, and the sentence of imprisonment was a nullity, and violated petitioner's rights as guaranteed by N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, and by U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, and would be vacated in post-conviction proceedings. McClure v. State, 267 N.C. 212, 148 S.E.2d 15 (1966).

"Presentment". — A presentment is an accusation of crime made by a grand jury on its own motion upon its own knowledge or observation, or upon information from others without any bill of indictment. State v. Elledge, 13 N.C. App. 462, 186 S.E.2d 192 (1972).

Presentment does not institute a criminal proceeding, but is only a device whereby the grand jury brings to the attention of the district attorney subject matter which requires investigation by the district attorney and the submission of a properly drawn indictment by him to the grand jury when the facts so warrant. State v. Cole, 294 N.C. 304, 240 S.E.2d 355 (1978).

Trials upon presentments have been abolished, and a presentment amounts to nothing more than an instruction by the grand jury to the public prosecuting attorney to frame a bill of indictment. State v. Elledge, 13 N.C. App. 462, 186 S.E.2d 192 (1972).

The experience of early days proved the practice of trying criminal cases upon the presentments of grand jurors to be wholly impracticable. As a consequence, the General Assembly of 1797 outlawed the practice by a statute. Since the adoption of the action of 1797, a presentment is regarded as nothing more than an instruction by the grand jury to the public prosecuting attorney for framing a bill of indictment for submission to them. State v. Thomas, 236 N.C. 454, 73 S.E.2d 283 (1952).

Applied in State v. Cole, 294 N.C. 304, 240 S.E.2d 355 (1978).

§ 15A-642. Prosecutions originating in superior court to be upon indictment or information; waiver of indictment.

(a) Prosecutions originating in the superior court must be upon pleadings as provided in Article 49 of this Chapter, Pleadings and Joinder.

(b) Indictment may not be waived in a capital case or in a case in which the defendant is not represented by counsel.

(c) Waiver of indictment must be in writing and signed by the defendant and his attorney. The waiver must be attached to or executed upon the bill of information. (1907, c. 71; C.S., s. 4610; 1951, c. 726, ss. 1, 2; 1971, c. 377, s. 30.1; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section simplifies somewhat the waiver provisions in § 15-140 and § 15-140.1. The provisions of § 15-140.2 were omitted as unnecessary.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

New Indictment Not Required for Lesser Included Offense. — It is not necessary that accused be tried under a new indictment charging him with assault with intent to commit rape, since assault with intent to commit rape is a lesser included offense of rape and accused therefore could be tried on the original indictment. Godlock v. Ross, 259 F. Supp. 659 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

A defendant may waive a defect within an indictment if he does so expressly and intelligently. For example, numerous North Carolina courts have held that an indictment defective for duplicity may be waived by a plea of guilty. Burgess v. Griffin, 585 F. Supp. 1564 (W.D.N.C.), aff'd, 743 F.2d 1064 (4th Cir. 1984).

Under North Carolina law, an accused may waive a defect within an indictment if the facts of the case unmistakably indicate that the purpose of the indictment to protect the accused has been accomplished, and that the accused expressly and intelligently waived the defect. Burgess v. Griffin, 585 F. Supp. 1564 (W.D.N.C.), aff'd, 743 F.2d 1064 (4th Cir. 1984).

Prerequisites for Waiver. — A defendant can waive a bill of indictment in a felony case only when represented by counsel and when both the defendant and his counsel sign a written waiver of indictment. State v. Hayes, 261 N.C. 648, 135 S.E.2d 653 (1964); State v. Daniel, 19 N.C. App. 313, 198 S.E.2d 464 (1973).

Sufficiency of Waiver. — The North Carolina courts, in applying subsection (c), have held that neither a tendering of a guilty plea by defendant, nor the tendering to the trial court of an unsigned waiver, could be considered sufficient waivers of a defendant's right to a formal indictment. State v. Wilson, 128 N.C. App. 688, 497 S.E.2d 416 (1998).

Request for an Instruction Not a Waiver. — Defendant's request for an instruction on felonious restraint did not constitute a formal waiver of his right to be charged under a sufficient indictment. State v. Wilson, 128 N.C. App. 688, 497 S.E.2d 416 (1998).

"Represented by Counsel". — The provision that a defendant can waive a bill of indictment in a felony case only when represented by counsel, and when both defendant and his counsel sign a written waiver of indictment, presupposes counsel selected and employed by the defendant himself or assigned to him by the judge, and certainly does not include counsel assigned by the prosecuting attorney. State v. Hayes, 261 N.C. 648, 135 S.E.2d 653 (1964).

Waiver of finding of indictment also includes waiver of return. State v. Hodge, 267 N.C. 238, 147 S.E.2d 881 (1966).

Applied in State v. Ragland, 80 N.C. App. 496, 342 S.E.2d 532 (1986); State v. Garner, 330 N.C. 273, 410 S.E.2d 861 (1991); State v. Taylor, 354 N.C. 28, 550 S.E.2d 141 (2001).

Quoted in State v. Neville, 108 N.C. App. 330, 423 S.E.2d 496 (1992).

Stated in State v. Chase, 117 N.C. App. 686, 453 S.E.2d 195 (1995).

§ 15A-643. Joinder of offenses and defendants and consolidation of indictments and informations.

The rules with respect to joinder of offenses and defendants and the consolidation of charges in indictments and informations are provided in Article 49 of this Chapter, Pleadings and Joinder. (1917, c. 168; C.S., s. 4622; 1921, c. 100; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

§ 15A-644. Form and content of indictment, information or presentment.

(a) An indictment must contain:

(1) The name of the superior court in which it is filed;

(2) The title of the action;

(3) Criminal charges pleaded as provided in Article 49 of this Chapter, Pleadings and Joinder;

(4) The signature of the prosecutor, but its omission is not a fatal defect; and

(5) The signature of the foreman or acting foreman of the grand jury attesting the concurrence of 12 or more grand jurors in the finding of a true bill of indictment.

(b) An information must contain everything required of an indictment in subsection (a) except that the accusation is that of the prosecutor and the provisions of subdivision (a)(5) do not apply. The information must also contain or have attached the waiver of indictment pursuant to G.S. 15A-642(c).

(c) A presentment must contain everything required of an indictment in subsection (a) except that the provisions of subdivisions (a)(4) and (5) do not apply and the foreman must by his signature attest the concurrence of 12 or more grand jurors in the presentment. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Purpose of Indictment. — The office of an indictment is to inform the defendant of the charge against him with sufficient certainty to enable him to prepare his defense. State v. Gates, 107 N.C. 832, 12 S.E. 319 (1890).

Power of Legislature as to Form of Indictment. — The legislature has the undoubted right to modify old forms of bills of indictment, or establish new ones, provided the form established is sufficient to apprise the defendant with reasonable certainty of the nature of the crime of which he stands charged. State v. Harris, 145 N.C. 456, 59 S.E. 115 (1907).

Technical and useless refinements of the common law, formerly required in drawing bills of indictment in criminal cases, have been all abolished by statute. State v. Hawley, 186 N.C. 433, 119 S.E. 888 (1923). See also, State v. Morrison, 202 N.C. 60, 161 S.E. 725 (1932).

Language of Statute Sufficient. — An indictment for a statutory offense is sufficient as a general rule when it charges the offense in the language of the statute. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

Indictment must charge all the essential elements of the alleged criminal offense. State v. Lewis, 58 N.C. App. 348, 293 S.E.2d 638 (1982), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 766, 321 S.E.2d 152 (1984).

When Indictment Sufficient. — If an indictment charges the offense in a plain, intelligible and explicit manner and contains averments sufficient to enable the court to proceed to judgment, and to bar a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, it is sufficient. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

In every indictment, the facts and circumstances must be stated with such certainty that the defendant may judge whether they constitute an indictable offense or not. Thus where an indictment sets forth the substance of the offense charged in a plain, intelligible and explicit manner, with such fullness that the court can see that it is charged, and it gives the defendant such information as it is necessary to enable him to make defense on the trial and in case of a subsequent prosecution, it is sufficient. State v. Murphy, 101 N.C. 697, 8 S.E. 142 (1888).

Effect of Unnecessary Averment. — An averment in an indictment or warrant not necessary in charging the offense may be treated as exceeding what is requisite and should be disregarded. State v. Lewis, 58 N.C. App. 348, 293 S.E.2d 638 (1982), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 766, 321 S.E.2d 152 (1984).

Evidence Describing Manner and Means of Commission Is Unnecessary. — The bill is complete without evidentiary matters descriptive of the manner and means by which the offense was committed. A verdict of guilty, or not guilty, is only as to the offense charged, not of surplus or evidential matters alleged. State v. Lewis, 58 N.C. App. 348, 293 S.E.2d 638 (1982), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 766, 321 S.E.2d 152 (1984).

Lack of Expression "True Bill." — An indictment is not invalid merely because there is no specific expression in the indictment that it is "a true bill." State v. Midyette, 45 N.C. App. 87, 262 S.E.2d 353 (1980).

The grand jury foreman's failure to check boxes on the indictments designating "True Bill" or not a "True Bill" did not render the indictments defective or invalid, where both indictments were signed by the foreman and they clearly indicated the charges against the defendant, and neither the state nor the defendant provided the appellate court with any evidence of presentation of the bill of indictment to the trial court. State v. Hall, 131 N.C. App. 427, 508 S.E.2d 8 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 303, 513 S.E.2d 561 (1999).

Mistake in Caption. — A misrecital of the county in the caption is not ground for arrest of judgment. State v. Sprinkle, 65 N.C. 463 (1871); State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E. 990 (1890).

Omission of Caption. — While every indictment properly should have a caption, it is no part of the indictment, and its omission is no ground for arresting judgment. State v. Wasden, 4 N.C. 596 (1816); State v. Brickell, 8 N.C. 354 (1821); State v. Lane, 26 N.C. 113 (1843); State v. Dula, 61 N.C. 437 (1868); State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E. 990 (1890).

Indictment need not necessarily be signed by anyone. State v. Cox, 28 N.C. 440 (1846); State v. Mace, 86 N.C. 668 (1882); State v. Pitt, 166 N.C. 268, 80 S.E. 1060 (1914).

Signature of Prosecutor Not Essential. — It is regular and orderly for the bill to be signed by the solicitor (now prosecutor), but such signing is not essential to its validity. State v. Cox, 28 N.C. 440 (1846); State v. Mace, 86 N.C. 668 (1882); State v. Arnold, 107 N.C. 861, 11 S.E. 990 (1890).

Subdivision (a)(5) is merely directory; an indictment is not invalid because it contained no attestation clause that 12 or more grand jurors concurred in the findings of a true bill. State v. Midyette, 45 N.C. App. 87, 262 S.E.2d 353 (1980).

Although it is better practice for the foreman's entry upon the bill of indictment, over his signature, to state expressly that 12 or more grand jurors concurred in such finding, since even a directory provision of a statute should be obeyed, this is not necessary to the validity of the bill of indictment where the foreman's statement upon the bill is clearly so intended and there is nothing to indicate the contrary. State v. House, 295 N.C. 189, 244 S.E.2d 654 (1978).

No endorsement by the foreman or otherwise was essential to the validity of an indictment which had been duly returned into court by the grand jury and entered upon its records. State v. Avant, 202 N.C. 680, 163 S.E. 806 (1932).

Lack of Endorsement Held Not to Support Motion to Quash. — When a bill of indictment in a capital case had been returned in open court by a majority of the grand jury as a true bill, and the action of the grand jury was duly recorded in the court's records, the lack of endorsement on the bill would not support a motion to quash. State v. Cox, 280 N.C. 689, 187 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

Indictment for burglary is fatally defective if it fails to identify the premises broken and entered with sufficient certainty to enable the defendant to prepare his defense and to offer him protection from another prosecution for the same incident. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

It is not required that the indictment for first-degree burglary describe the property which the defendant intended to steal, or that which he did steal. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

In an indictment for burglary the felony intended need not be set out as fully and specifically as would be required in an indictment for the actual commission of that felony. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

The indictment for burglary must specify the particular felony which the defendant is alleged to have intended to commit at the time of the breaking and entering, and it is not sufficient to charge generally an intent to commit an unspecified felony. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

Kidnapping. — An indictment charging that defendant "unlawfully, did feloniously and forcibly kidnap" a person named is not defective or violative of N.C. Const., Art. I, §§ 22 and 23 for failure to charge additionally that the victim was forcibly carried away against her will. State v. Norwood, 289 N.C. 424, 222 S.E.2d 253 (1976).

Failure to Allege Specific Dates of Offenses Not Fatal. — Indictments for embezzlement were not invalid because they failed to allege the specific dates on which the offenses occurred but instead alleged that they occurred on or about January 1 of each year for which an indictment was returned since defendant presented no statute of limitations or alibi defense, and the time of the offenses was therefore not an essential fact; furthermore, defendant was not prejudiced by the issuance of one indictment for each year rather than separate indictments for each offense committed during that year. State v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 484, 274 S.E.2d 381, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 633, 280 S.E.2d 448 (1981).

Evidence in a criminal case must correspond with the allegations of the indictment which are essential and material to charge the offense. State v. Simmons, 57 N.C. App. 548, 291 S.E.2d 815 (1982).

Changes to Indictment. — Where initial indictment was changed by superseding habitual felon indictment so that there was a substitution, with two of the three felonies remaining the same, there was a substantial change to the indictment. State v. Little, 126 N.C. App. 262, 484 S.E.2d 835 (1997).

Applied in State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978); State v. Bradsher, 49 N.C. App. 507, 271 S.E.2d 915 (1980); State v. Gary, 78 N.C. App. 29, 337 S.E.2d 70 (1985).

§ 15A-644.1. Filing of information when plea of guilty or no contest in district court to Class H or I felony.

A defendant who pleads guilty or no contest in district court pursuant to G.S. 7A-272(c)(1) shall enter that plea to an information complying with G.S. 15A-644(b), except it shall contain the name of the district court in which it is filed. (1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 725, s. 3.)

§ 15A-645. Allegations of previous convictions.

Trial upon indictments and informations involving allegation of previous convictions is subject to the provisions of G.S. 15A-928. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

See the commentary under § 15A-928.

§ 15A-646. Superseding indictments and informations.

If at any time before entry of a plea of guilty to an indictment or information, or commencement of a trial thereof, another indictment or information is filed in the same court charging the defendant with an offense charged or attempted to be charged in the first instrument, the first one is, with respect to the offense, superseded by the second and, upon the defendant's arraignment upon the second indictment or information, the count of the first instrument charging the offense must be dismissed by the superior court judge. The first instrument is not, however, superseded with respect to any count contained therein which charged an offense not charged in the second indictment or information. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The provisions of this section are based on a section in the New York Criminal Procedure Law. This section must be compared with Article 3, Venue. If a crime chargeable in two or more counties is charged in one county, the county in which the charge is first laid becomes the county with exclusive venue. See § 15A-132. This section does not change that rule; it applies to superseding indictments and informations filed in the same court.

CASE NOTES

Existence of former bills of indictment for an offense constitutes no legal impediment to putting defendant on trial upon the last and more perfect bill. Adoption of this section did not modify such time honored practices in any way. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 328, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

Dismissal of Prior Indictments as Ministerial Act. — The legislative mandate that prior indictments for an offense be dismissed at the time of a defendant's arraignment upon a superseding indictment or information was intended solely to require a ministerial act. Failure of the trial court to do so does not render the superseding indictment void or defective. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 328, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

Service of Superseding Indictments on Defendants Not Required Where They Were Represented by Counsel. — Allegation that superseding indictments were not "filed" within the meaning of this section, because they were not served on defendants prior to trial, was without merit, as there was no requirement that defendants be served with copies of superseding indictments, where they were represented by counsel at the time those indictments were returned by the grand jury. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 328, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

Due Process Not Violated. — Where the state obtained a second indictment charging the defendant as a violent habitual felon after the first indictment was quashed, so that the second indictment replaced the technically-deficient first indictment, the second indictment attached to the ongoing armed robbery proceeding, because the defendant had not been sentenced and because the first indictment placed him on notice that he was being tried as a violent habitual felon. State v. Mewborn, 131 N.C. App. 495, 507 S.E.2d 906 (1998).

Reservation of Ruling on Validity of Superseding Indictments. — Argument that valid superseding indictments were not "filed" within the meaning of this section, because the trial court failed to rule on defendants' objections to proceeding on those indictments until all of the evidence in the case had been presented, was without merit, as the fact that the trial court reserved its ruling on the validity vel non of the indictments until after the trial had commenced could not make such indictments void or defective. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 328, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

Applied in State v. Moore, 51 N.C. App. 26, 275 S.E.2d 257 (1981).

SUBCHAPTER VII. SPEEDY TRIAL; ATTENDANCE OF DEFENDANTS.

Article 35.

Speedy Trial.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article has been omitted in light of the extensive rewriting of this Article by Session Laws 1977, c. 787, s. 1, and subsequent repeal by Session Laws 1989, c. 688, s. 1.

Article 36.

Special Criminal Process for Attendance of Defendants.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

There are included here provisions with regard to securing the presence of the defendant for trial when he is confined in a State or federal institution. In addition, in sections 16 and 22 of the act inserting this Chapter, there are sections which will transfer to Subchapter VII the provisions of the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act and the Interstate Agreement on Detainers.

§ 15A-711. Securing attendance of criminal defendants confined in institutions within the State; requiring prosecutor to proceed.

(a) When a criminal defendant is confined in a penal or other institution under the control of the State or any of its subdivisions and his presence is required for trial, the prosecutor may make written request to the custodian of the institution for temporary release of the defendant to the custody of an appropriate law-enforcement officer who must produce him at the trial. The period of the temporary release may not exceed 60 days. The request of the prosecutor is sufficient authorization for the release, and must be honored, except as otherwise provided in this section.

(b) If the defendant whose presence is sought is confined pursuant to another criminal proceeding in a different prosecutorial district as defined in G.S. 7A-60, the defendant and the prosecutor prosecuting the other criminal action must be given reasonable notice and opportunity to object to the temporary release. Objections must be heard by a superior court judge having authority to act in criminal cases in the superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1 in which the defendant is confined, and he must make appropriate orders as to the precedence of the actions.

(c) A defendant who is confined in an institution in this State pursuant to a criminal proceeding and who has other criminal charges pending against him may, by written request filed with the clerk of the court where the other charges are pending, require the prosecutor prosecuting such charges to proceed pursuant to this section. A copy of the request must be served upon the prosecutor in the manner provided by the Rules of Civil Procedure, G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5(b). If the prosecutor does not proceed pursuant to subsection (a) within six months from the date the request is filed with the clerk, the charges must be dismissed.

(d) Detainer. —

(1) When a criminal defendant is imprisoned in this State pursuant to prior criminal proceedings, the clerk upon request of the prosecutor, must transmit to the custodian of the institution in which he is imprisoned, a copy of the charges filed against the defendant and a detainer directing that the prisoner be held to answer to the charges made against him. The detainer must contain a notice of the prisoner's right to proceed pursuant to G.S. 15A-711(c).

(2) Upon receipt of the charges and the detainer, the custodian must immediately inform the prisoner of its receipt and furnish him copies of the charges and the detainer, must explain to him his right to proceed pursuant to G.S. 15A-711(c).

(3) The custodian must notify the clerk who transmitted the detainer of the defendant's impending release at least 30 days prior to the date of release. The notice must be given immediately if the detainer is received less than 30 days prior to the date of release. The clerk must direct the sheriff to take custody of the defendant and produce him for trial. The custodian must release the defendant to the custody of the sheriff, but may not hold the defendant in confinement beyond the date on which he is eligible for release.

(4) A detainer may be withdrawn upon request of the prosecutor, and the clerk must notify the custodian, who must notify the defendant. (1949, c. 303; 1953, c. 603; 1957, c. 349, s. 10; c. 1067, ss. 1, 2; 1967, c. 996, ss. 13, 15; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1979, c. 107, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 61; 1989, c. 688, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Rather than requiring the solicitor to go through the traditional, and cumbersome, "habeas corpus ad prosequendum," the Commission here provides for a simple request by the solicitor, made directly to the official having custody of the defendant. In case of a problem with regard to a defendant whose presence is desired by two solicitors, subsection (b) provides for a judge of superior court to settle the matter.

The right of the defendant to require the solicitor to proceed pursuant to this section should be read in conjunction with Article 35, Speedy Trial.

Notwithstanding the right of the defendant to a speedy trial, and his right to require the solicitor to proceed, there will doubtless remain occasions for the placing of a detainer, so that the defendant will be released to a law-enforcement officer, to be held for trial. Thus subsection (d) provides for the placing of a detainer, with notice to the defendant, but also provides that the detainer will not prolong his period of confinement in the institution in which he has been imprisoned.

CASE NOTES

Filing Requirement Not Waived by Statement in Handbook for Inmates. — Where the defendant did not comply with subsection (c), by serving a copy of his request for trial on the prosecutor in the manner provided by § 1A-1, Rule 5(b), he was not entitled to have his case dismissed under this section. The State did not waive the provisions of subsection (c) by the issuance of a handbook by the North Carolina Department of Corrections which instructed inmates that they had to file the request for a trial only with the clerk of superior court. State v. Hege, 78 N.C. App. 435, 337 S.E.2d 130 (1985).

Legislature envisioned that trial following a request under subsection (c) would be held within eight months, i.e., the six-month period provided by subsection (c) of this section plus the 60-day release period provided by subsection (a) of this section. This coincides with the eight-month period set out in § 15-10.2(a). State v. Dammons, 293 N.C. 263, 237 S.E.2d 834 (1977).

State Must Proceed Within Six Months to Request Defendant's Release for Trial. — Subsection (c) provides that following defendant's request the State must proceed within six months "pursuant to subsection (a)," that is, not to trial but to request a defendant's temporary release for trial, which "temporary release may not exceed 60 days." State v. Dammons, 293 N.C. 263, 237 S.E.2d 834 (1977).

Effect of Request for Delivery of Defendant. — The fact that the defendant's trial was not held within the six-month period was not a violation of subsection (c) of this section, where the State proceeded within the six-month period by making a request for delivery of the defendant for trial. State v. Turner, 34 N.C. App. 78, 237 S.E.2d 318 (1977).

Subsection (c) did not give a superior court judge the power to require a trial at a certain session or order a dismissal. The statute requires that the request for speedy trial be served on the solicitor (prosecutor), who then has six months to proceed. State v. Turner, 34 N.C. App. 78, 237 S.E.2d 318 (1977).

Applied in State v. Davis, 66 N.C. App. 137, 310 S.E.2d 424 (1984).

Cited in State v. Pickens, 346 N.C. 628, 488 S.E.2d 162 (1997).

ARTICLE 37.

Uniform Criminal Extradition Act.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Transferred by section 16 of the act from its previous location in the General Statutes, Article 8 of Chapter 15.

§ 15A-721. Definitions.

Where appearing in this Article the term "Governor" includes any person performing the functions of Governor by authority of the law of this State. The term "executive authority" includes the Governor, and any person performing the functions of governor in a state other than this State. The term "state," referring to a state other than this State, includes any other state or territory, organized or unorganized, of the United States of America. (1937, c. 273, s. 1; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

An extradition proceeding is intended to be a summary and mandatory executive proceeding. State v. Carter, 42 N.C. App. 325, 256 S.E.2d 535, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 301, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979); State v. Owen, 53 N.C. App. 121, 280 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 200, 285 S.E.2d 107 (1981).

Constitutionality of Section. — Former § 15-48 was procedurally deficient under the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, in these respects: (1) It was not required that an impartial judicial officer determine probable cause, i.e., that a felony had been committed and that the person proposed to be outlawed probably committed it. (2) Alternatively, it was not required that an arrest warrant be issued or an indictment returned by a grand jury. (3) It was not required that an arrest warrant or other process be served, or an attempt made to serve it, and a return made that the accused is not to be found within the county. (4) There was no provision for notice and opportunity to be heard. Autry v. Mitchell, 420 F. Supp. 967 (E.D.N.C. 1976).

The State failed to demonstrate a compelling governmental interest in the apprehension of all fleeing accused felons, and former § 15-48 as drawn and as administered violates the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Autry v. Mitchell, 420 F. Supp. 967 (E.D.N.C. 1976).

"Fugitive from Justice" Defined. — A fugitive from justice is one who, having committed a crime in one jurisdiction, flees therefrom in order to evade the law and escape punishment. State v. Hall, 115 N.C. 811, 20 S.E. 729 (1894).

Former § 15-48 only applied so long as defendant remained at large. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

But Rescission of Order Not Required Once in Custody. — Neither statutory provision nor necessity required the rescission of an order declaring defendant an outlaw once defendant is in custody. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

§ 15A-722. Duty of Governor as to fugitives from justice of other states.

Subject to the provisions of this Article, the provisions of the Constitution of the United States controlling, and any and all acts of Congress enacted in pursuance thereof, it is the duty of the Governor of this State to have arrested and delivered up to the executive authority of any other state of the United States any person charged in that state with treason, felony or other crime, who has fled from justice and is found in this State. (1937, c. 273, s. 2; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

The necessity for a Governor's warrant is a procedural requirement for proceedings under the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act and is expressly exempted as a procedural right in proceedings under the Interstate Agreement on Detainers (see § 15A-761 Article IV(d)). In re Morris, 563 F. Supp. 1289 (W.D.N.C. 1983), certificate of probable cause denied and dismissed, 718 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1983).

Governor's grant of extradition is prima facie evidence that the constitutional and statutory requirements have been met. State v. Owen, 53 N.C. App. 121, 280 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 200, 285 S.E.2d 107 (1981).

Power of Court Considering Release on Habeas Corpus. — Once the Governor has granted extradition, a court considering release on habeas corpus can do no more than decide (a) whether the extradition documents on their face are in order; (b) whether the petitioner has been charged with a crime in the demanding state; (c) whether the petitioner is the person named in the request for extradition; and (d) whether the petitioner is a fugitive. State v. Owen, 53 N.C. App. 121, 280 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 200, 285 S.E.2d 107 (1981).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Requirements of Agents' Commission Form. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mrs. Claire Nickels, Office of the Governor, 40 N.C.A.G. 169 (1970), rendered under former law.

§ 15A-723. Form of demand for extradition.

No demand for the extradition of a person charged with crime in another state shall be recognized by the Governor unless in writing alleging, except in cases arising under G.S. 15A-726, that the accused was present in the demanding state at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, and that thereafter he fled from the state, and accompanied by a copy of an indictment found or by information supported by affidavit in the state having jurisdiction of the crime, or by a copy of an affidavit made before a magistrate there, together with a copy of any warrant which was issued thereupon; or by a copy of a judgment of conviction or of a sentence imposed in execution thereof, together with a statement by the executive authority of the demanding state that the person claimed has escaped from confinement or has broken the terms of his bail, probation or parole. The indictment, information, or affidavit made before the magistrate must substantially charge the person demanded with having committed a crime under the law of that state; and the copy of indictment, information, affidavit, judgment of conviction or sentence must be authenticated by the executive authority making the demand. (1937, c. 273, s. 3; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

What Law Determines Whether Indictment Charges Crime. — The law of the demanding State furnishes the test of whether the indictment has substantially charged a crime. Dodd v. State, 56 N.C. App. 214, 287 S.E.2d 435 (1982).

Affidavit Requirement. — The provision of this section requiring a demand for extradition to be accompanied by information support by affidavit in the state having jurisdiction of the crime does not require that the supporting affidavits be dated prior to or contemporaneous with the information, and the trial information, the bench warrant, and the fugitive warrant, coupled with affidavits dated subsequent to the information, gave adequate assurance that the person sought was substantially charged with a crime in the demanding state as required by this section. In re Armstrong, 49 N.C. App. 175, 270 S.E.2d 619 (1980).

Petitioner had the burden of showing beyond a reasonable doubt that she was not the person named in the extradition papers. Dodd v. State, 56 N.C. App. 214, 287 S.E.2d 435 (1982).

§ 15A-724. Governor may cause investigation to be made.

When a demand shall be made upon the Governor of this State by the executive authority of another state for the surrender of a person so charged with crime, the Governor may call upon the Attorney General or any prosecuting officer in this State to investigate or assist in investigating the demand, and to report to him the situation and circumstances of the person so demanded, and whether he ought to be surrendered. (1937, c. 273, s. 4; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-725. Extradition of persons imprisoned or awaiting trial in another state or who have left the demanding state under compulsion.

When it is desired to have returned to this State a person charged in this State with a crime, and such person is imprisoned or is held under criminal proceedings then pending against him in another state, the Governor of this State may agree with the executive authority of such other state for the extradition of such person before the conclusion of such proceedings or his term of sentence in such other state, upon condition that such person be returned to such other state at the expense of this State as soon as the prosecution in this State is terminated.

The Governor of this State may also surrender on demand of the executive authority of any other state any person in this State who is charged in the manner provided in G.S. 15A-743 with having violated the laws of the state whose executive authority is making the demand, even though such person left the demanding state involuntarily. (1937, c. 273, s. 5; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-726. Extradition of persons not present in demanding state at time of commission of crime.

The Governor of this State may also surrender, on demand of the executive authority of any other state, any person in this State charged in such other state in the manner provided in G.S. 15A-723 with committing an act in this State, or in a third state, intentionally resulting in a crime in the state whose executive authority is making the demand, and the provisions of this Article, not otherwise inconsistent, shall apply to such cases, even though the accused was not in that state at the time of the commission of the crime, and has not fled therefrom. (1937, c. 273, s. 6; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-727. Issue of Governor's warrant of arrest; its recitals.

If the Governor decides that the demand should be complied with, he shall sign a warrant of arrest, which shall be sealed with the State seal, and be directed to any peace officer or other person whom he may think fit to entrust with the execution thereof. The warrant must substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of its issuance. (1937, c. 273, s. 7; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-728. Manner and place of execution of warrant.

Such warrant shall authorize the peace officer or other person to whom directed to arrest the accused at any time and any place where he may be found within the State, and to command the aid of all peace officers or other persons in the execution of the warrant, and to deliver the accused, subject to the provisions of this Article, to the duly authorized agent of the demanding state. (1937, c. 273, s. 8; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-729. Authority of arresting officer.

Every such peace officer or other person empowered to make the arrest shall have the same authority, in arresting the accused, to command assistance therein as peace officers have by law in the execution of any criminal process directed to them, with like penalties against those who refuse their assistance. (1937, c. 273, s. 9; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-730. Rights of accused person; application for writ of habeas corpus.

No person arrested upon such warrant shall be delivered over to the agent whom the executive authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of a court of record in this State, who shall inform him of the demand made for his surrender and of the crime with which he is charged, and that he has the right to demand and procure legal counsel; and if the prisoner or his counsel shall state that he or they desire to test the legality of his arrest, the judge of such court of record shall fix a reasonable time to be allowed him within which to apply for a writ of habeas corpus. When such writ is applied for, notice thereof, and of the time and place of hearing thereon, shall be given to the prosecuting officer of the county in which the arrest is made and in which the accused is in custody, and to the said agent of the demanding state. (1937, c. 273, s. 10; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

Failure to Comply with Technical Procedures. — This Article contains no provision requiring dismissal of an underlying indictment where technical procedures are not complied with. State v. Love, 296 N.C. 194, 250 S.E.2d 220 (1978).

Assertion of Right Under Law of Another State. — The trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to dismiss on the ground that he was detained in New York beyond the period provided for by New York law, since the courts of North Carolina are not the place for the defendant to assert alleged rights under New York law. State v. Love, 296 N.C. 194, 250 S.E.2d 220 (1978).

Findings in adult and juvenile proceedings need not be the same; however, § 7A-689 [see now § 7B-2805] requires some findings of fact to protect a juvenile in this State from being improperly returned to the demanding state. In re Teague, 91 N.C. App. 242, 371 S.E.2d 510, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 624, 374 S.E.2d 588 (1988).

§ 15A-731. Penalty for noncompliance with § 15A-730.

Any officer who shall deliver to the agent for extradition of the demanding state a person in his custody under the Governor's warrant, in willful disobedience to G.S. 15A-730, shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. (1937, c. 273, s. 11; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16; 1993, c. 539, s. 302; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 15A-732. Confinement in jail when necessary.

The officer or person executing the Governor's warrant of arrest, or the agent of the demanding state to whom the prisoner may have been delivered, may, when necessary, confine the prisoner in the jail of any county or city through which he may pass; and the keeper of such jail must receive and safely keep the prisoner until the officer or person having charge of him is ready to proceed on his route, such officer or person being chargeable with the expense of keeping.

The officer or agent of a demanding state to whom a prisoner may have been delivered following extradition proceedings in another state, or to whom a prisoner may have been delivered after waiving extradition in such other state, and who is passing through this State with such a prisoner for the purpose of immediately returning such prisoner to the demanding state may, when necessary, confine the prisoner in the jail of any county or city through which he may pass; and the keeper of such jail must receive and safely keep the prisoner until the officer or agent having charge of him is ready to proceed on his route, such officer or agent, however, being chargeable with the expense of keeping: Provided, however, that such officer or agent shall produce and show to the keeper of such jail satisfactory written evidence of the fact that he is actually transporting such prisoner to the demanding state after a requisition by the executive authority of such demanding state. Such prisoner shall not be entitled to demand a new requisition while in this State. (1937, c. 273, s. 12; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-733. Arrest prior to requisition.

Whenever any person within this State shall be charged on the oath of any credible person before any judge or magistrate of this State with the commission of any crime in any other state and, except in cases arising under G.S. 15A-726, with having fled from justice, or with having been convicted of a crime in that state and having escaped from confinement, or having broken the terms of his bail, probation or parole, or whenever complaint shall have been made before any judge or magistrate in this State, setting forth on the affidavit of any credible person in another state that a crime has been committed in such other state, and that the accused has been charged in such state with the commission of the crime, and, except in cases arising under G.S. 15A-726, has fled from justice, or with having been convicted of a crime in that state and having escaped from confinement, or having broken the terms of his bail, probation or parole, and is believed to be in this State, the judge or magistrate shall issue a warrant directed to any peace officer commanding him to apprehend the person named therein, wherever he may be found in this State, and to bring him before the same or any other judge, magistrate or court who or which may be available in or convenient of access to the place where the arrest may be made, to answer the charge or complaint and affidavit, and a certified copy of the sworn charge or complaint and affidavit upon which the warrant is issued shall be attached to the warrant. (1937, c. 273, s. 13; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Cronauer, 65 N.C. App. 449, 310 S.E.2d 78 (1983).

§ 15A-734. Arrest without a warrant.

The arrest of a person may be lawfully made also by any peace officer or a private person, without a warrant, upon reasonable information that the accused stands charged in the courts of a state with a crime punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year, but when so arrested the accused must be taken before a judge or magistrate with all practicable speed, and complaint must be made against him under oath setting forth the ground for the arrest as in G.S. 15A-733; and thereafter his answer shall be heard as if he had been arrested on a warrant. (1937, c. 273, s. 14; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-735. Commitment to await requisition; bail.

If from the examination before the judge or magistrate it appears that the person held is the person charged with having committed the crime alleged and, except in cases arising under G.S. 15A-726, that he has fled from justice, the judge or magistrate must, by a warrant reciting the accusation, commit him to the county jail for such a time, not exceeding 30 days and specified in the warrant, as will enable the arrest of the accused to be made under a warrant of the Governor on a requisition of the executive authority of the state having jurisdiction of the offense, unless the accused give bail as provided in G.S. 15A-736, or until he shall be legally discharged. (1937, c. 273, s. 15; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Cronauer, 65 N.C. App. 449, 310 S.E.2d 78 (1983).

§ 15A-736. Bail in certain cases; conditions of bond.

Unless the offense with which the prisoner is charged is shown to be an offense punishable by death or life imprisonment under the laws of the state in which it was committed, a judge or magistrate in this State may admit the person arrested to bail by bond, with sufficient sureties, and in such sum as he deems proper, conditioned for his appearance before him at a time specified in such bond, and for his surrender, to be arrested upon the warrant of the Governor of this State. (1937, c. 273, s. 16; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Cronauer, 65 N.C. App. 449, 310 S.E.2d 78 (1983).

§ 15A-737. Extension of time of commitment; adjournment.

If the accused is not arrested under warrant of the Governor by the expiration of the time specified in the warrant or bond, a judge or magistrate may discharge him or may recommit him for a further period not to exceed 60 days, or a judge or magistrate may again take bail for his appearance and surrender, as provided in G.S. 15A-736, but within a period not to exceed 60 days after the date of such new bond. (1937, c. 273, s. 17; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-738. Forfeiture of bail.

If the prisoner is admitted to bail and fails to appear and surrender himself according to the conditions of his bond, the judge, or magistrate by proper order, shall declare the bond forfeited and order his immediate arrest without warrant if he be within this State. Recovery may be had on such bond in the name of the State as in the case of other bonds given by the accused in criminal proceedings within this State. (1937, c. 273, s. 18; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in State v. Cronauer, 65 N.C. App. 449, 310 S.E.2d 78 (1983).

§ 15A-739. Persons under criminal prosecution in this State at time of requisition.

If a criminal prosecution has been instituted against such person under the laws of this State and is still pending, the Governor, in his discretion, either may surrender him on demand of the executive authority of another state or hold him until he has been tried and discharged or convicted and punished in this State. (1937, c. 273, s. 19; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-740. Guilt or innocence of accused, when inquired into.

The guilt or innocence of the accused as to the crime of which he is charged may not be inquired into by the Governor or in any proceeding after the demand for extradition accompanied by a charge of crime in legal form as above provided shall have been presented to the Governor, except as it may be involved in identifying the person held as the person charged with the crime. (1937, c. 273, s. 20; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in Ewing v. Waldrop, 397 F. Supp. 509 (W.D.N.C. 1975); State v. Cronauer, 65 N.C. App. 449, 310 S.E.2d 78 (1983).

§ 15A-741. Governor may recall warrant or issue alias.

The Governor may recall his warrant of arrest or may issue another warrant whenever he deems proper. (1937, c. 273, s. 21; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-742. Fugitives from this State; duty of governors.

Whenever the Governor of this State shall demand a person charged with a crime or with escaping from confinement or breaking the terms of his bail, probation or parole in this State from the executive authority of any other state, or from the chief justice or an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia authorized to receive such demand under the laws of the United States, he shall issue a warrant under the seal of this State, to some agent, commanding him to receive the person so charged if delivered to him and convey him to the proper officer of the county in this State in which the offense was committed. (1937, c. 273, s. 22; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

Procedure Not Exclusive. — While this section provides a procedure for the Governor to demand the return of a person charged with a crime in this state, nothing in this statute, or the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act as a whole, suggests that this procedure is exclusive and precludes the voluntary return of the accused for formal arraignment and trial. State v. Speller, 345 N.C. 600, 481 S.E.2d 284 (1997).

Voluntary Return to State. — Where defendant was advised of his rights, including the right to issuance and service of a warrant of extradition, and he voluntarily consented to return to North Carolina, his voluntary return to the state conferred jurisdiction on the Superior court as fully and effectively as a Governor's warrant would have. State v. Speller, 345 N.C. 600, 481 S.E.2d 284 (1997).

§ 15A-743. Application for issuance of requisition; by whom made; contents.

(a) When the return to this State of a person charged with crime in this State is required, the prosecuting attorney shall present to the Governor his written application for a requisition for the return of the person charged, in which application shall be stated the name of the person so charged, the crime charged against him, the approximate time, place and circumstances of its commission, the state in which he is believed to be, including the location of the accused therein, at the time the application is made and certifying that, in the opinion of the said prosecuting attorney, the ends of justice require the arrest and return of the accused to this State for trial and that the proceeding is not instituted to enforce a private claim.

(b) When the return to this State is required of a person who has been convicted of a crime in this State and has escaped from confinement or broken the terms of his bail, probation or parole, the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the offense was committed, the parole board, or the Director of Prisons or sheriff of the county from which escape was made, shall present to the Governor a written application for a requisition for the return of such person, in which application shall be stated the name of the person, the crime of which he was convicted, the circumstances of his escape from confinement or of the breach of the terms of his bail, probation or parole, the state in which he is believed to be, including the location of the person therein at the time application is made.

(c) The application shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the indictment returned, or information and affidavit filed, or of the complaint made to the judge or magistrate, stating the offense with which the accused is charged, or of the judgment of conviction or of the sentence. The prosecuting officer, parole board, warden or sheriff may also attach such further affidavits and other documents in duplicate as he shall deem proper to be submitted with such application. A copy of all papers shall be forwarded with the Governor's requisition. (1937, c. 273, s. 23; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16; 1975, c. 132; 1993, c. 83, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Findings in adult and juvenile proceedings need not be the same; however, § 7A-689 [see now § 7B-2805] requires some findings of fact to protect a juvenile in this State from being improperly returned to the demanding state. In re Teague, 91 N.C. App. 242, 371 S.E.2d 510, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 624, 374 S.E.2d 588 (1988).

§ 15A-744. Costs and expenses.

Subject to the requirements and restrictions set forth in this section, if the crime is a felony or if a person convicted in this State of a misdemeanor has broken the terms of his probation or parole, reimbursements for expenses shall be paid out of the State treasury on the certificate of the Governor. In all other cases, such expenses or reimbursements shall be paid out of the county treasury of the county wherein the crime is alleged to have been committed according to such regulations as the board of county commissioners may promulgate. In all cases, the expenses, for which repayment or reimbursement may be claimed, shall consist of the reasonable and necessary travel expense and subsistence costs of the extradition agent or fugitive officer, as well as the fugitive, together with such legal fees as were paid to the officials of the state on whose governor the requisition is made. The person or persons designated to return the fugitive shall not be allowed, paid or reimbursed for any expenses in connection with any requisition or extradition proceeding unless the expenses are itemized, the statement of same be sworn to under oath, and shall not then be paid or reimbursed unless a receipt is obtained showing the amount, the purpose for which said item or sum was expended, the place, date and to whom paid, and said receipt or receipts attached to said sworn statement and filed with the Governor. The Governor shall have the authority, upon investigation, to increase or decrease any item or expenses shown in said sworn statement, or to include items of expenses omitted by mistake or inadvertence. The decision or determination of the Governor as to the correct amount to be paid for such expenses or reimbursements shall be final. When it is deemed necessary for more than one agent, extradition agent, fugitive officer or person, to be designated to return a fugitive from another state to this State, the district attorney or prosecuting officer shall file with his written application to the Governor of this State an affidavit setting forth in detail the grounds or reasons why it is necessary to have more than one extradition agent, fugitive officer or person to be so designated. Among other things, and not by way of limitation, the affidavit shall set forth whether or not the alleged fugitive is a dangerous person, his previous criminal record if any, and any record of said fugitive on file with the Federal Bureau of Investigation or with the prison authorities of this State. As a further ground or reason for more than one extradition agent or fugitive officer to be designated, it may be shown in said affidavit the number of fugitives to be returned to this State and any other grounds or reasons for which more than one extradition agent or fugitive officer is desired. If the Governor finds or determines from his own investigation and from the information made available to him that more than one extradition agent or fugitive officer is necessary for the return of a fugitive or fugitives to this State, he may designate more than one extradition agent or fugitive officer for such purpose. All travel for which expenses or reimbursements are paid or allowed under this section shall be by the nearest, direct, convenient route of travel. If the extradition agent or agents or person or persons designated to return a fugitive or fugitives from another state to this State shall elect to travel by automobile, a sum not exceeding seven cents (7¢) per mile may be allowed in lieu of all travel expense, and which shall be paid upon a basis of mileage for the complete trip. The Governor may promulgate executive orders, rules and regulations governing travel, forms of statements, receipts or any other matter or objective provided for in this section. The Governor may delegate any or all of the duties, powers and responsibilities conferred upon him by this section to any executive agent or executive clerk on his staff or in his office, and such executive agent or executive clerk, when properly authorized, may perform any or all of the duties, powers and responsibilities conferred upon the Governor. Provided that if the fugitive from justice is an alleged felon, and he be returned without the service of extradition papers by the sheriff or the agent of the sheriff of the county in which the felony was alleged to have been committed, the expense of said return shall be borne by the State of North Carolina under the rules and regulations made and promulgated by the Governor of North Carolina or the executive agent or the executive clerk to whom the said Governor may have delegated his duties under this section. (1937, c. 273, s. 24; 1953, c. 1203; 1955, c. 289; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1981, c. 859, s. 13.9.)

§ 15A-745. Immunity from service of process in certain civil actions.

A person brought into this State by, or after waiver of, extradition based on a criminal charge shall not be subject to service of personal process in civil actions arising out of the same facts as the criminal proceedings to answer which he is being or has been returned until he has been convicted in the criminal proceeding or, if acquitted, until he has had reasonable opportunity to return to the state from which he was extradited. (1937, c. 273, s. 25; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-746. Written waiver of extradition proceedings.

Any person arrested in this State charged with having committed any crime in another state or alleged to have escaped from confinement, or broken the terms of his bail, probation or parole may waive the issuance and service of the warrant provided for in G.S. 15A-727 and 15A-728 and all other procedure incidental to extradition proceedings, by executing or subscribing in the presence of a judge of any court of record within this State or a clerk of the superior court a writing which states that he consents to return to the demanding state: Provided, however, that before such waiver shall be executed or subscribed by such person it shall be the duty of such judge or clerk of superior court to inform such person of his rights to the issuance and service of a warrant of extradition and to obtain a writ of habeas corpus as provided for in G.S. 15A-730.

If and when such consent has been duly executed it shall forthwith be forwarded to the office of the Governor of this State and filed therein. The judge or clerk of superior court shall direct the officer having such person in custody to deliver forthwith such person to the duly accredited agent or agents of the demanding state, and shall deliver or cause to be delivered to such agent or agents a copy of such consent: Provided, however, that nothing in this section shall be deemed to limit the rights of the accused person to return voluntarily and without formality to the demanding state, nor shall this waiver procedure be deemed to be an exclusive procedure or to limit the powers, rights or duties of the officers of the demanding state or of this State. (1937, c. 273, s. 25a; 1959, c. 271; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

This section governs the procedure for securing the delivery of an accused from North Carolina to a demanding state, not for returning someone accused in North Carolina to this state. State v. Speller, 345 N.C. 600, 481 S.E.2d 284 (1997).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Waiver May Not Be Made Before Magistrate. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. E. Maurice Braswell, 42 N.C.A.G. 267 (1973).

§ 15A-747. Nonwaiver by this State.

Nothing in this Article contained shall be deemed to constitute a waiver by this State of its right, power or privilege to try such demanded person for crime committed within this State, or of its right, power or privilege to regain custody of such person by extradition proceedings or otherwise for the purpose of trial, sentence or punishment for any crime committed within this State, nor shall any proceedings had under this Article which result in, or fail to result in, extradition be deemed a waiver by this State of any of its rights, privileges or jurisdiction in any way whatsoever. (1937, c. 273, s. 25b; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-748. No right of asylum; no immunity from other criminal prosecution while in this State.

After a person has been brought back to this State by, or after waiver of, extradition proceedings, he may be tried in this State for other crimes which he may be charged with having committed here as well as that specified in the requisition for his extradition. (1937, c. 273, s. 26; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-749. Interpretation.

The provisions of this Article shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purposes to make uniform the law of those states which enact it. (1937, c. 273, s. 27; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§ 15A-750. Short title.

This Article may be cited as the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act. (1937, c. 273, s. 30; 1973, c. 1286, s. 16.)

§§ 15A-751 through 15A-760: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 38.

Interstate Agreement on Detainers.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Transferred by Section 22 of the act from its previous location in the General Statutes, Article 10 of Chapter 148.

§ 15A-761. Agreement on Detainers entered into; form and contents.

This Agreement on Detainers is hereby enacted into law and entered into by this State with all other jurisdictions legally joining therein in the form substantially as follows: The contracting states solemnly agree:

Article I

The party states find that charges outstanding against a prisoner, detainers based on untried indictments, informations or complaints, and difficulties in securing speedy trial of persons already incarcerated in other jurisdictions, produce uncertainties which obstruct programs of prisoner treatment and rehabilitation. Accordingly, it is the policy of the party states and the purpose of this agreement to encourage the expeditious and orderly disposition of such charges and determination of the proper status of any and all detainers based on untried indictments, informations or complaints. The party states also find that proceedings with reference to such charges and detainers, when emanating from another jurisdiction, cannot properly be had in the absence of cooperative procedures. It is the further purpose of this agreement to provide such cooperative procedures.

Article II

As used in this agreement:

(a) "State" shall mean a state of the United States; the United States of America; a territory or possession of the United States; the District of Columbia; the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

(b) "Sending state" shall mean a state in which a prisoner is incarcerated at the time that he initiates a request for final disposition pursuant to Article III hereof or at the time that a request for custody or availability is initiated pursuant to Article IV hereof.

(c) "Receiving state" shall mean the state in which trial is to be had on an indictment, information or complaint pursuant to Article III or Article IV hereof.

Article III

(a) Whenever a person has entered upon a term of imprisonment in a penal or correctional institution of a party state, and whenever during the continuance of the term of imprisonment there is pending in any other party state any untried indictment, information or complaint on the basis of which a detainer has been lodged against the prisoner, he shall be brought to trial within 180 days after he shall have caused to be delivered to the prosecuting officer and the appropriate court of the prosecuting officer's jurisdiction written notice of the place of his imprisonment and his request for a final disposition to be made of the indictment, information or complaint: Provided that for good cause shown in open court, the prisoner or his counsel being present, the court having jurisdiction of the matter may grant any necessary or reasonable continuance. The request of the prisoner shall be accompanied by a certificate of the appropriate official having custody of the prisoner, stating the term of commitment under which the prisoner is being held, the time already served, the time remaining to be served on the sentence, the amount of good time earned, the time of parole eligibility of the prisoner, and any decisions of the state parole agency relating to the prisoner.

(b) The written notice and request for final disposition referred to in paragraph (a) hereof shall be given or sent by the prisoner to the warden, commissioner of corrections or other official having custody of him, who shall promptly forward it together with the certificate to the appropriate prosecuting official and court by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested.

(c) The warden, commissioner of corrections or other official having custody of the prisoner shall promptly inform him of the source and contents of any detainer lodged against him and shall also inform him of his right to make a request for final disposition of the indictment, information or complaint on which the detainer is based.

(d) Any request for final disposition made by a prisoner pursuant to paragraph (a) hereof shall operate as a request for final disposition of all untried indictments, informations or complaints on the basis of which detainers have been lodged against the prisoner from the state to whose prosecuting official the request for final disposition is specifically directed. The warden, commissioner of corrections or other official having custody of the prisoner shall forthwith notify all appropriate prosecuting officers and courts in the several jurisdictions within the state to which the prisoner's request for final disposition is being sent of the proceeding being initiated by the prisoner. Any notification sent pursuant to this paragraph shall be accompanied by copies of the prisoner's written notice, request and the certificate. If trial is not had on any indictment, information or complaint contemplated hereby prior to the return of the prisoner to the original place of imprisonment, such indictment, information or complaint shall not be of any further force or effect, and the court shall enter an order dismissing the same with prejudice.

(e) Any request for final disposition made by a prisoner pursuant to paragraph (a) hereof shall also be deemed to be a waiver of extradition with respect to any charge or proceeding contemplated thereby or included therein by reason of paragraph (d) hereof, and a waiver of extradition to the receiving state to serve any sentence there imposed upon him, after completion of his term of imprisonment in the sending state. The request for final disposition shall also constitute a consent by the prisoner to the production of his body in any court where his presence may be required in order to effectuate the purposes of this agreement and a further consent voluntarily to be returned to the original place of imprisonment in accordance with the provisions of this agreement. Nothing in this paragraph shall prevent the imposition of a concurrent sentence if otherwise permitted by law.

(f) Escape from custody by the prisoner subsequent to his execution of the request for final disposition referred to in paragraph (a) hereof shall void the request.

Article IV

(a) The appropriate officer of the jurisdiction in which an untried indictment, information or complaint is pending shall be entitled to have a prisoner against whom he has lodged a detainer and who is serving a term of imprisonment in any party state made available in accordance with Article V(a) hereof upon presentation of a written request for temporary custody or availability to the appropriate authorities of the state in which the prisoner is incarcerated: Provided that the court having jurisdiction of such indictment, information or complaint shall have duly approved, recorded and transmitted the request: And provided further that there shall be a period of 30 days after receipt by the appropriate authorities before the request be honored, within which period the governor of the sending state may disapprove the request for temporary custody or availability, either upon his own motion or upon motion of the prisoner.

(b) Upon receipt of the officer's written request as provided in paragraph (a) hereof, the appropriate authorities having the prisoner in custody shall furnish the officer with a certificate stating the term of commitment under which the prisoner is being held, the time already served, the time remaining to be served on the sentence, the amount of good time earned, the time of parole eligibility of the prisoner, and any decisions of the state parole agency relating to the prisoner. Said authorities simultaneously shall furnish all other officers and appropriate courts in the receiving state who have lodged detainers against the prisoner with similar certificates and with notices informing them of the request for custody or availability and of the reasons therefor.

(c) In respect of any proceeding made possible by this Article, trial shall be commenced within 120 days of the arrival of the prisoner in the receiving state, but for good cause shown in open court, the prisoner or his counsel being present, the court having jurisdiction of the matter may grant any necessary or reasonable continuance.

(d) Nothing contained in this Article shall be construed to deprive any prisoner of any right which he may have to contest the legality of his delivery as provided in paragraph (a) hereof, but such delivery may not be opposed or denied on the ground that the executive authority of the sending state has not affirmatively consented to or ordered such delivery.

(e) If trial is not had on any indictment, information or complaint contemplated hereby prior to the prisoner's being returned to the original place of imprisonment pursuant to Article V(e) hereof, such indictment, information or complaint shall not be of any further force or effect, and the court shall enter an order dismissing the same with prejudice.

Article V

(a) In response to a request made under Article III or Article IV hereof, the appropriate authority in a sending state shall offer to deliver temporary custody of such prisoner to the appropriate authority in the state where such indictment, information or complaint is pending against such person in order that speedy and efficient prosecution may be had. If the request for final disposition is made by the prisoner, the offer of temporary custody shall accompany the written notice provided for in Article III of this agreement. In the case of a federal prisoner, the appropriate authority in the receiving state shall be entitled to temporary custody as provided by this agreement or to the prisoner's presence in federal custody at the place for trial, whichever custodial arrangement may be approved by the custodian.

(b) The officer or other representative of a state accepting an offer of temporary custody shall present the following upon demand:

(1) Proper identification and evidence of his authority to act for the state into whose temporary custody the prisoner is to be given.

(2) A duly certified copy of the indictment, information or complaint on the basis of which the detainer has been lodged and on the basis of which the request for temporary custody of the prisoner has been made.

(c) If the appropriate authority shall refuse or fail to accept temporary custody of said person, or in the event that an action on the indictment, information or complaint on the basis of which the detainer has been lodged is not brought to trial within the period provided in Article III or Article IV hereof, the appropriate court of the jurisdiction where the indictment, information or complaint has been pending shall enter an order dismissing the same with prejudice, and any detainer based thereon shall cease to be of any force or effect.

(d) The temporary custody referred to in this agreement shall be only for the purpose of permitting prosecution on the charge or charges contained in one or more untried indictments, informations or complaints which form the basis of the detainer or detainers or for prosecution on any other charge or charges arising out of the same transaction. Except for his attendance at court and while being transported to or from any place at which his presence may be required, the prisoner shall be held in a suitable jail or other facility regularly used for persons awaiting prosecution.

(e) At the earliest practicable time consonant with the purposes of this agreement, the prisoner shall be returned to the sending state.

(f) During the continuance of temporary custody or while the prisoner is otherwise being made available for trial as required by this agreement, time being served on the sentence shall continue to run but good time shall be earned by the prisoner only if, and to the extent that, the law and practice of the jurisdiction which imposed the sentence may allow.

(g) For all purposes other than that for which temporary custody as provided in this agreement is exercised, the prisoner shall be deemed to remain in the custody of and subject to the jurisdiction of the sending state and any escape from temporary custody may be dealt with in the same manner as an escape from the original place of imprisonment or in any other manner permitted by law.

(h) From the time that a party state receives custody of a prisoner pursuant to this agreement until such prisoner is returned to the territory and custody of the sending state, the state in which the one or more untried indictments, informations or complaints are pending or in which trial is being had shall be responsible for the prisoner and shall also pay all costs of transporting, caring for, keeping and returning the prisoner. The provisions of this paragraph shall govern unless the states concerned shall have entered into a supplementary agreement providing for a different allocation of costs and responsibilities as between or among themselves. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter or affect any internal relationship among the departments, agencies and officers of and in the government of a party state, or between a party state and its subdivisions, as to the payment of costs, or responsibilities therefor.

Article VI

(a) In determining the duration and expiration dates of the time periods provided in Articles III and IV of this agreement, the running of said time periods shall be tolled whenever and for as long as the prisoner is unable to stand trial, as determined by the court having jurisdiction of the matter.

(b) No provision of this agreement, and no remedy made available by this agreement, shall apply to any person who is adjudged to be mentally ill.

Article VII

Each state party to this agreement shall designate an officer who, acting jointly with like officers of other party states, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more effectively the terms and provisions of this agreement, and who shall provide, within and without the state, information necessary to the effective operation of this agreement.

Article VIII

This agreement shall enter into full force and effect as to a party state when such state has enacted the same into law. A state party to this agreement may withdraw herefrom by enacting a statute repealing the same. However, the withdrawal of any state shall not affect the status of any proceedings already initiated by inmates or by state officers at the time such withdrawal takes effect, nor shall it affect their rights in respect thereof.

Article IX

This agreement shall be liberally construed so as to effectuate its purposes. The provisions of this agreement shall be severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence or provision of this agreement is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any party state or of the United States or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this agreement and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If this agreement shall be held contrary to the constitution of any state party hereto, the agreement shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining states and in full force and effect as to the state affected as to all severable matters. (1965, c. 295, s. 1; 1973, c. 1286, s. 22.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

When Agreement on Detainers Inapplicable. — The Agreement on Detainers has no application to proceedings which involve a North Carolina prosecution and a defendant incarcerated in North Carolina. State v. Dammons, 293 N.C. 263, 237 S.E.2d 834 (1977).

Agreement clearly relates only to those charges which are the basis for the issuance of the detainer. State v. Parr, 65 N.C. App. 415, 308 S.E.2d 881 (1983).

Defendant cannot complain of delay in his trial when caused by his own motion. State v. George, 271 N.C. 438, 156 S.E.2d 845 (1967), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

The delay of 121 days in bringing the defendant to trial after arrival in North Carolina was "for good cause shown," where it was due to defendant's own motion for continuance due to his inability to obtain witnesses. State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979).

Fugitive Warrant Held Not to Be "Untried Indictment, Information or Complaint". — Where a fugitive warrant was not based upon a warrant charging the offense of escape, but was to secure the return of the defendant to serve the unexpired portion of sentences already imposed, the defendant had no "untried indictment, information or complaint" pending against him. State v. Pfeifer, 11 N.C. App. 183, 180 S.E.2d 469 (1971).

The guarantee of a disposition of a defendant's case within 180 days is not a constitutional requirement but rather it is mandated by the General Assembly. State v. Treece, 129 N.C. App. 93, 497 S.E.2d 124 (1998), appeal dismissed, 348 N.C. 290, 501 S.E.2d 924 (1998).

Interpretation of 180 Day Language. — The 180 day language in Article III of this section cannot be interpreted as requiring the district attorney to inquire as to whether a defendant has mailed written notice of his request for final disposition of his case. State v. Treece, 129 N.C. App. 93, 497 S.E.2d 124 (1998), appeal dismissed, 348 N.C. 290, 501 S.E.2d 924 (1998).

Petition Must Comply with Article III. — A petition for a speedy trial will not be considered as a request for final disposition under Article III, unless the prisoner complies with the terms of that provision in order to put the appropriate authorities on notice that he is proceeding thereunder. State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979).

Inability of Jury to Agree on Verdict. — Article III(a) of this section requires that the defendant be brought to trial within 180 days after he has given the appropriate notice to the solicitor. The State, of course, cannot control the fact that a jury is unable to agree upon a verdict and is not chargeable with responsibility under these conditions. State v. George, 271 N.C. 438, 156 S.E.2d 845 (1967), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Prosecutor's Knowledge of Place of Imprisonment Irrelevant Where Petition for Speedy Trial Insufficient. — Defendant's argument that the prosecutor had knowledge of the place of his imprisonment is irrelevant to the fact that the bare motion for a speedy trial, filed without any of the accompanying information required by Article III(a), was insufficient to put the prosecutor on notice that the defendant was availing himself of the benefits of the provision and that the prosecutor would be required to put him to trial within 180 days. State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979).

Speedy Trial Held Not Denied. — Defendant was not denied his right to a speedy trial under Article III(a) of this section because he was not brought to trial within 180 days of his first request for a speedy trial where defendant first requested a speedy trial while he was in custody in New York awaiting trial in that state but before a detainer had been filed against him, and the period from the date a detainer was filed against defendant after his conviction in New York and his trial was less than 180 days. State v. Ferdinando, 298 N.C. 737, 260 S.E.2d 423 (1979).

Applicability of Article IV(c). — Article IV(c), requiring a prisoner to be tried within 120 days after his arrival in North Carolina, can be invoked only when the prisoner has been returned to the State at the request of the solicitor. It does not apply where the prisoner was brought back to North Carolina upon his own request and not that of the solicitor. State v. George, 271 N.C. 438, 156 S.E.2d 845 (1967), overruled on other grounds, State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Time Limit Inapplicable Absent Evidence of Compliance by Foreign State. — Where the record contained no evidence establishing compliance by a foreign state with the requirements of Article IV(b) of this section, there was no showing that the trial court erred in concluding that defendant's return to North Carolina was not procured pursuant to the Interstate Agreement on Detainers and that the provision requiring trial within 120 days of defendant's return to North Carolina was thus inapplicable. State v. Rose, 53 N.C. App. 608, 281 S.E.2d 404 (1981).

As to effect of mistrial on 120-day limit in Article IV(c), see State v. Williams, 33 N.C. App. 344, 235 S.E.2d 269 (1977), cert. denied, 303 N.C. 712, 283 S.E.2d 138 (1981).

The necessity for a Governor's warrant is a procedural requirement for proceedings under the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act and is expressly exempted as a procedural right in proceedings under Article IV(d) of this section. In re Morris, 563 F. Supp. 1289 (W.D.N.C. 1983), certificate of probable cause denied and dismissed, 718 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1983).

Good Cause for Continuance Held to Exist. — Where the State had some, but not all, of its witnesses available, and where it was approximately six years after the crime for which defendant was apprehended, there was "good cause" within the meaning of Article IV(c) of this section to extend the date of defendant's trial beyond the 120-day period. State v. Collins, 29 N.C. App. 478, 224 S.E.2d 647 (1976).

Applied in State v. McQueen, 295 N.C. 96, 244 S.E.2d 414 (1978); State v. Capps, 61 N.C. App. 225, 300 S.E.2d 819 (1983); State v. Lyszaj, 314 N.C. 256, 333 S.E.2d 288 (1985); State v. Schirmer, 104 N.C. App. 472, 409 S.E.2d 704 (1991).

§ 15A-762. Meaning of "appropriate court."

The phrase "appropriate court" as used in the Agreement on Detainers shall, with reference to the courts of this State, mean court of record with criminal jurisdiction. (1965, c. 295, s. 2; 1973, c. 1286, s. 22.)

§ 15A-763. Cooperation in enforcement.

All courts, departments, agencies, officers and employees of this State and its political subdivisions are hereby directed to enforce the Agreement on Detainers and to cooperate with one another and with other party states in enforcing the agreement and effectuating its purpose. (1965, c. 295, s. 3; 1973, c. 1286, s. 22.)

§ 15A-764. Escape from temporary custody.

Any prisoner released to temporary custody under the provisions of the Agreement on Detainers from a place of imprisonment in North Carolina who shall escape or attempt to escape from such temporary custody, whether within or without the borders of this State, shall be dealt with in the same manner as if the escape or attempt to escape were from the original place of imprisonment. (1965, c. 295, s. 4; 1973, c. 1286, s. 22.)

§ 15A-765. Authority and duty of official in charge of institution.

It shall be lawful and mandatory upon the warden or other official in charge of a penal or correctional institution in this State to give over the person of any inmate thereof whenever so required by the operation of the Agreement on Detainers. (1965, c. 295, s. 5; 1973, c. 1286, s. 22.)

§ 15A-766. Designation of central administrator of and information agent for agreement.

The Governor is hereby authorized and empowered to designate the officer who shall serve as central administrator of and information agent for the Agreement on Detainers, pursuant to the provisions of Article VII of the agreement. (1965, c. 295, s. 6; 1973, c. 1286, s. 22.)

§ 15A-767. Distribution of copies of Article.

Copies of this Article shall, upon its approval, be transmitted to the governor of each state, the Attorney General and the Administrator of General Services of the United States, and the Council of State Governments. (1965, c. 295, s. 7; 1973, c. 1286, s. 22.)

§§ 15A-768 through 15A-770: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 39.

Other Special Process for Attendance of Defendants.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Since corporations are amenable to the criminal law, it was thought convenient to set out this system of service of criminal process and appearance. The section is similar to New York Criminal Procedure Law, § 600.10.

§ 15A-771. Securing attendance of defendants confined in federal prisons.

(a) A defendant against whom a criminal action is pending in this State, and who is confined in a federal prison or custody either within or outside the State, may, with the consent of the Attorney General of the United States, be produced in such court for the purpose of criminal prosecution, pursuant to the provisions of:

(1) Section 4085 of Title 18 of the United States Code; or

(2) Subsection (b) of this section.

(b) When such a defendant is in federal custody as specified in subsection (a), a superior court may, upon application of the prosecutor, issue a certificate, addressed to the Attorney General of the United States, certifying the charges and the court in which they are pending, and that attendance of the defendant in such court for the purpose of criminal prosecution thereon is necessary in the interest of justice, and requesting the Attorney General of the United States to cause such defendant to be produced in such court, under custody of a federal public servant, upon a designated date and for a period of time necessary to complete the prosecution. Upon issuing such a certificate, the court may deliver it, or cause or authorize it to be delivered, together with a certified copy of the charges upon which it is based, to the Attorney General of the United States or to his representative authorized to entertain the request. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

§ 15A-772. Securing attendance of defendants who are outside the United States.

(a) When a criminal action for an offense committed in this State is pending in a criminal court of this State against a defendant who is in a foreign country with which the United States has an extradition treaty, and when the offense charged is one which is declared in such treaty to be an extraditable one, the prosecutor may make an application to the Governor, requesting him to make an application to the President of the United States to institute extradition proceedings for the return of the defendant to this country and State for the purpose of prosecution of such action. The prosecutor's application must comply with rules, regulations, and guidelines established by the Governor for such applications and must be accompanied by all the charges, affidavits, and other documents required thereby.

(b) Upon receipt of the prosecutor's application, the Governor, if satisfied that the defendant is in the foreign country in question, that the offense charged is an extraditable one pursuant to the treaty in question, and that there are no factors or impediments which in law preclude such an extradition, may in his discretion make an application, addressed to the Secretary of State of the United States, requesting that the President of the United States institute extradition proceedings for the return of the defendant from such foreign country. The Governor's application must comply with applicable treaties and acts of Congress and with rules, regulations, and guidelines established by the Secretary of State for such applications and must be accompanied by all the charges, affidavits, and other documents required thereby.

(c) The provisions of this section apply equally to extradition or attempted extradition of a person who is a fugitive following the entry of a judgment of conviction against him in a criminal court of this State. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

§ 15A-773. Securing attendance of organizations; appearance.

(a) The court attendance of an organization for purposes of commencing or prosecuting a criminal action against it may be accomplished by:

(1) Issuance and service of a criminal summons; or

(2) Issuance of an information and waiver of indictment by an authorized officer or agent of the organization and by counsel for the organization, as provided in G.S. 15A-642(c); or

(3) Service of the notice of the indictment, as provided in G.S. 15A-630.

The criminal summons or notice of indictment must be directed to the organization, and must be served by delivery to an officer, director, managing or general agent, cashier or assistant cashier of the organization, or to any other agent of the organization authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process.

(b) At all stages of a criminal action, an organization may appear by counsel or agent having authority to transact the business of the organization.

(c) For purposes of this section, "organization" means corporation, unincorporated association, partnership, body politic, consortium, or other group, entity, or organization. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 557.)

SUBCHAPTER VIII. ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES; DEPOSITIONS.

ARTICLE 42.

Attendance of Witnesses Generally.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Article provides generally for the bringing of witnesses or their testimony before the court. In addition to the provisions for subpoenas, material witness orders, and the like set out here, other sections of the Act (Section 9) will transfer the Uniform Act to Secure Attendance of Witnesses from without a State in Criminal Proceedings to a location in Article 43.

§ 15A-801. Subpoena for witness.

The presence of a person as a witness in a criminal proceeding may be obtained by subpoena, which must be issued and served in the manner provided in Rule 45 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, G.S. 1A-1. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 15.)

CASE NOTES

Right to compulsory process is not absolute, and a state may require that a defendant requesting such process at state expense establish some colorable need for the person to be summoned, lest the right be abused by those who would make frivolous requests. State v. House, 295 N.C. 189, 244 S.E.2d 654 (1978).

Cited in State v. Taylor, 327 N.C. 147, 393 S.E.2d 801 (1990).

§ 15A-802. Subpoena for the production of documentary evidence.

The production of records, books, papers, documents, or tangible things in a criminal proceeding may be obtained by subpoena which must be issued and served in the manner provided in Rule 45 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, G.S. 1A-1. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 15.)

CASE NOTES

Subpoenas are not available by statute until an action has been commenced. In re Superior Court Order, 70 N.C. App. 63, 318 S.E.2d 843 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 378, 338 S.E.2d 307 (1986).

Person named in the subpoena duces tecum merely authenticates the records produced. State v. Richardson, 59 N.C. App. 558, 297 S.E.2d 921 (1982), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

Documents Relating to Offer of Reward. — This section governs motions to produce documents relating to the offer of a reward. State v. Bowden, 290 N.C. 702, 228 S.E.2d 414 (1976).

Corporations have never possessed the kind of protection under U.S. Const., Amend. IV accorded to persons and their homes. Corporations' special status as creatures of the State exposes them to exhaustive State scrutiny in exchange for the privilege of State recognition. In re Superior Court Order, 70 N.C. App. 63, 318 S.E.2d 843 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 378, 338 S.E.2d 307 (1986).

Cited in State v. Taylor, 327 N.C. 147, 393 S.E.2d 801 (1990).

§ 15A-803. Attendance of witnesses.

(a) Material Witness Order Authorized. — A judge may issue an order assuring the attendance of a material witness at a criminal proceeding. This material witness order may be issued when there are reasonable grounds to believe that the person whom the State or a defendant desires to call as a witness in a pending criminal proceeding possesses information material to the determination of the proceeding and may not be amenable or responsive to a subpoena at a time when his attendance will be sought.

(b) When Order Issued. — A material witness order may be issued by a judge of superior court at any time after the initiation of criminal proceedings. A judge of district court may issue a material witness order only at the time that a defendant is bound over to superior court at a probable-cause hearing.

(c) How Long Effective. — A material witness order remains in effect during the period indicated in the order by the issuing judge unless it is sooner modified or vacated by a judge of superior court. In no event may a material witness order which provides for incarceration of the material witness be issued for a period longer than 20 days, but upon review a superior court judge in his discretion may renew an order one or more times for periods not to exceed five days each.

(d) Procedure. — A material witness order may be obtained upon motion supported by affidavit showing cause for its issuance. The witness must be given reasonable notice, opportunity to be heard and present evidence, and the right of representation by counsel at a hearing on the motion. Counsel for a material witness may be appointed and compensated in the same manner as counsel for an indigent defendant. Appointment of counsel shall be in accordance with rules adopted by the Office of Indigent Defense Services. The order must be based on findings of fact supporting its issuance.

(e) Order. — If the court makes a material witness order:

(1) It may direct release of the witness in the same manner that a defendant may be released under G.S. 15A-534.

(2) It may direct the detention of the witness.

(f) Modification or Vacation. — A material witness order may be modified or vacated by a judge of superior court upon a showing of new or changed facts or circumstances by the witness, the State, or any defendant.

(g) Securing Attendance or Custody of Material Witness. — The witness may be required to attend the hearing by subpoena, or if the court considers it necessary, by order for arrest. An order for arrest also may be issued if it becomes necessary to take the witness into custody after issuance of a material witness order. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 2000-144, s. 29.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Former statutes provided for a witness to be placed under bond at a preliminary hearing (§ 15-97), and for him to be placed in jail if he failed to post bond (§ 15-127). This section specifies the grounds for the entry of a new "material witness order" under which a witness can be held in custody, and provides for bail.

Editor's Note. — For the Indigent Defense Services Act, see Chapter 7A, Subchapter IX, Article 39B, § 7A-498 et seq.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-144, s. 29, effective July 1, 2001, added the next-to-last sentence in subsection (d), relating to the Office of Indigent Defense Services.

CASE NOTES

Discretion of Court. — The use of the term "may" suggests that the granting or denial of a motion for a material witness order is a matter committed largely to the discretion of the judge. Such discretion must, however, be exercised in a manner not inconsistent with guaranty under U.S. Const., Amend. VI that a criminal defendant be afforded "compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor." State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

A trial judge may not exercise his discretion to issue an order to secure the attendance of a material witness in a manner inconsistent with the guarantee under U.S. Const., Amend. VI that an accused be afforded compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor. State v. Coen, 78 N.C. App. 778, 338 S.E.2d 784 (1986).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion and did not violate defendant's right to compulsory process in denying motion to issue an order under subsection (d) of this section, where defense counsel was dilatory in advising the court of any problem he was having with witness. State v. Coen, 78 N.C. App. 778, 338 S.E.2d 784 (1986).

The court properly declined to subpoena certain witnesses where the pro se defendant was unable to provide any information to the court as to the anticipated testimony of 11 individuals on the witness list, including a district attorney, a judge, two other attorneys, and various law enforcement officers. State v. Love, 131 N.C. App. 350, 507 S.E.2d 577 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 586, 516 S.E.2d 382 (1999).

Limitations on Authority to Compel Attendance. — There are well recognized limitations on the authority of a state court to compel the attendance of witnesses who are not residents of the state, not present therein and who lack any contact therewith. That such limitations are of constitutional stature may be inferred from the United States Supreme Court's opinions. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Court May Refrain from Issuing Ineffectual Process. — The trial judge's denial of the defendant's motion for material witness orders to compel the attendance of New York residents who had no contact with North Carolina did not infringe upon the defendant's right under U.S. Const., Amend. VI to compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor. A state court need not engage in the futile issuance of ineffectual process in order to satisfy the requirements of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Residents of Other States. — The General Assembly, in enacting this section, did not seek to confer upon judges of this State the novel and seemingly unconstitutional authority to issue material witness orders to compel the attendance of New York residents who have no contact with this jurisdiction. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Burden on Accused. — An accused may not place the burden on the officers of the law and the court to see that he procures the attendance of witnesses and makes preparation for his defense. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

No Duty to Suggest Alternative Procedure to Defendant. — Where the trial court properly denied defendant's request under this section for a material witness order to compel attendance of witnesses from New York, the court was under no duty to search the statutes and suggest to defense counsel that § 15A-813 might provide a procedure for obtaining the result which he sought, but could not obtain, under this section. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Effect of Failure to Request Material Witness Order on Appeal. — The defendant waived his right to raise on appeal the trial court's failure to ensure the presence of a defense witness, where after hearing the trial court's statements concerning the absence of the witness, the defense did not request a recess, move for a continuance, or request the issuance of a material witness order. State v. Smith, 130 N.C. App. 71, 502 S.E.2d 390 (1998).

Applied in State v. Poindexter, 69 N.C. App. 691, 318 S.E.2d 329 (1984).

§ 15A-804. Voluntary protective custody.

(a) Upon request of a witness, a judge of superior court may determine whether he is a material witness, and may order his protective custody. The order may provide for confinement, custody in other than a penal institution, release to the custody of a law-enforcement officer or other person, or other provisions appropriate to the circumstances.

(b) A person having custody of the witness may not release him without his consent unless directed to do so by a superior court judge, or unless the order so provides.

(c) The issuance of either a material witness order or an order for voluntary protective custody does not preclude the issuance of the other order.

(d) An order for voluntary protective custody may be modified or vacated as appropriate by a superior court judge upon the request of the witness or upon the court's own motion. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Although it may seem farfetched in North Carolina, the basis for this section sprang from the fear that members of organized crime might attempt to obtain the release of a witness who would prefer to remain in custody.

§ 15A-805. Securing attendance of witnesses confined in institutions within the State.

(a) Upon motion of the State or any defendant, the judge of a court in which a criminal proceeding is pending must, for good cause shown, enter an order requiring that any person confined in an institution in this State be produced and compelled to attend as a witness in the action or proceeding.

(b) If the witness is confined pursuant to another pending criminal proceeding, and the judge determines that the production of the witness would result in an unreasonable interference with the conduct of the prior proceeding, he may deny the order. If an order for production is issued, a judge or justice of the appellate division of the General Court of Justice may, upon application of a defendant or prosecutor in the other district for good cause shown, vacate the order for production.

(c) The costs of production of the witness are assessed as are other witness fees. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section replaces the old "habeas corpus ad testificandum" with a simple motion and order for the production of a prisoner (or other person confined in an institution). If a conflict arises between two cases, and it cannot be resolved at the trial level, provision is made for resort to the appellate division. The statutes in Article 8, Chapter 17 of the General Statutes are left untouched because of their preexisting applicability to other proceedings.

CASE NOTES

This section does not require that affidavits be submitted to show good cause; neither must a witness have testified in a previous trial in order to be subject to production as a witness for any other given trial. However, a trial judge has the duty to supervise and control the course and conduct of a trial, and in order to discharge that duty he is invested with broad discretionary powers. State v. Rankin, 312 N.C. 592, 324 S.E.2d 224 (1985).

Applied in State v. Jackson, 64 N.C. App. 715, 308 S.E.2d 360 (1983).

ARTICLE 43.

Uniform Act to Secure Attendance of Witnesses from Without a State in Criminal Proceedings.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Transferred by section 9 of the act from its previous location in Article 9 of Chapter 8 of the General Statutes.

§ 15A-811. Definitions.

The word "state" shall include any territory of the United States and District of Columbia.

The word "summons" shall include a subpoena, order or other notice requiring the appearance of a witness.

"Witness" as used in this Article shall include a person whose testimony is desired in any proceeding or investigation by a grand jury or in a criminal action, prosecution or proceeding. (1937, c. 217, s. 1; 1973, c. 1286, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The Uniform Act to secure attendance of witnesses from without a state in criminal proceedings is constitutional. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Article is available to the defense as well as the prosecution. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

This Article gives the trial court the means to compel a nonresident witness to attend and testify at criminal proceedings in this State. State v. Cyrus, 60 N.C. App. 774, 300 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

Under this Article, the officers and the court have a duty to see that defendant has an opportunity for securing material witnesses. They are placed under no burden to demand that he do so. State v. Cyrus, 60 N.C. App. 774, 300 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

The North Carolina Supreme Court has identified three questions which are presented for review when a party attempts to invoke this Article's procedures: (1) whether the defendant has made an adequate showing that the prospective witness' testimony is material; (2) whether the defendant has adequately designated the witness' location; and (3) whether the trial judge's discretion to grant the motion was exercised in accord with the guarantee under U.S. Const., Amend. VI that the accused be afforded compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor. State v. Cyrus, 60 N.C. App. 774, 300 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

A trial judge must not issue a material witness order in a manner inconsistent with U.S. Const., Amend. VI. State v. Cyrus, 60 N.C. App. 774, 300 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

Waiver. — While the right to compulsory process is a fundamental right and neither the statute nor the Constitution prescribes time limits within which to exercise that right, rights can be waived. State v. Cyrus, 60 N.C. App. 774, 300 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

An accused may not be less than diligent in his own behalf in preparing for trial. He may not place the burden on the officers of the law and the court to see that he procures the attendance of witnesses and makes preparation for his defense. But the officers and the court have a duty to see that he has opportunity for so doing. State v. Cyrus, 60 N.C. App. 774, 300 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

Applied in State v. Locklear, 41 N.C. App. 292, 254 S.E.2d 653 (1979).

§ 15A-812. Summoning witness in this State to testify in another state.

If a judge of a court of record in any state which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within that state to attend and testify in this State certifies, under the seal of such court, that there is a criminal prosecution pending in such court, or that a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, that a person being within this State is a material witness in such prosecution, or grand jury investigation, and that his presence will be required for a specified number of days, upon presentation of such certificate to any judge of a court of record in the county in which such person is, such judge shall fix a time and place for a hearing, and shall make an order directing the witness to appear at a time and place certain for the hearing.

If at a hearing the judge determines that the witness is material and necessary, that it will not cause undue hardship to the witness to be compelled to attend and testify in the prosecution or a grand jury investigation in the other state, and that the laws of the state in which the prosecution is pending, or grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, and of any other state through which the witness may be required to pass by ordinary course of travel, will give to him protection from arrest and the service of civil and criminal process, he shall issue a summons, with a copy of the certificate attached, directing the witness to attend and testify in the court where the prosecution is pending, or where a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, at a time and place specified in the summons. In any such hearing the certificate shall be prima facie evidence of all the facts stated therein.

If said certificate recommends that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting state to assure his attendance in the requesting state, such judge may, in lieu of notification of the hearing, direct that such witness be forthwith brought before him for said hearing; and the judge at the hearing, being satisfied of the desirability of such custody and delivery, for which determination the certificate shall be prima facie proof of such desirability may, in lieu of issuing subpoena or summons, order that said witness be forthwith taken into custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting state.

If the witness, who is summoned as above provided, after being paid or tendered by some properly authorized person the sum of ten cents (10¢) a mile for each mile by the ordinary traveled route to and from the court where the prosecution is pending and five dollars ($5.00) for each day that he is required to travel and attend as a witness, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he shall be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any witness who disobeys a summons issued from a court of record in this State. (1937, c. 217, s. 2; 1973, c. 1286, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence Insufficient to Show Witness Not a Material Witness. — Where the trial court failed to make findings of fact or conclusions of law, there was insufficient competent evidence to support the trial court's order finding that individual sought to be subpoenaed from out-of-state was not a material witness and that enforcement of the subpoena duces tecum would cause an undue hardship to her. In re McKinny, 462 S.E.2d 530 (1995).

Applied in State v. Tolley, 290 N.C. 349, 226 S.E.2d 353 (1976).

§ 15A-813. Witness from another state summoned to testify in this State.

If a person in any state which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within its borders to attend and testify in criminal prosecutions, or grand jury investigations commenced or about to commence in this State, is a material witness in a prosecution pending in a court of record in this State, or in a grand jury investigation which has commenced or is about to commence, a judge of such court may issue a certificate under the seal of the court, stating these facts and specifying the number of days the witness will be required. Said certificate may include a recommendation that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of this State to assure his attendance in this State. This certificate shall be presented to a judge of a court of record in the county in which the witness is found.

If the witness is summoned to attend and testify in this State he shall be compensated at the rate allowed to State officers and employees by subdivisions (1) and (2) of G.S. 138-6(a) for each mile by the ordinary traveled route to and from the court where the prosecution is pending, and five dollars ($5.00) for each day that he is required to travel and attend as a witness. A witness who has appeared in accordance with the provisions of the summons shall not be required to remain within this State a longer period of time than the period mentioned in the certificate unless otherwise ordered by the court. If such a witness is required to appear more than one day, he is also entitled to reimbursement for actual expenses incurred for lodging and meals, not to exceed the maximum currently authorized for State employees when traveling in the State. If such witness, after coming into this State, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he shall be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any witness who disobeys a summons issued from a court of record in this State. (1937, c. 217, s. 3; 1973, c. 1286, s. 9; 1998-212, s. 16.25(b).)

CASE NOTES

Defendant Has Burden of Procuring Attendance. — An accused may not place the burden on the officers of the law and the court to see that he procures the attendance of witnesses and makes preparation for his defense. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Absence of Witness as Grounds for Continuance. — Ordinarily, the absence of a witness who could have been served with a subpoena does not constitute grounds for continuance. State v. Lee, 293 N.C. 570, 238 S.E.2d 299 (1977).

No Duty to Suggest Procedures to Defendant. — Where the trial court properly denied defendant's request under § 15A-803 for a material witness order to compel attendance of witnesses from New York, the court was under no duty to search the statutes and suggest to defense counsel that this section might provide a procedure for obtaining the result which he sought, but could not obtain, under § 15A-803. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Applied in State v. Tolley, 290 N.C. 349, 226 S.E.2d 353 (1976).

Cited in Jackson v. Garrison, 677 F.2d 371 (4th Cir. 1981); State v. Cyrus, 60 N.C. App. 774, 300 S.E.2d 58 (1983); State v. Bowie, 340 N.C. 199, 456 S.E.2d 771 (1995).

§ 15A-814. Exemption from arrest and service of process.

If a person comes into this State in obedience to a summons directing him to attend and testify in this State he shall not, while in this State pursuant to such summons, be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with matters which arose before his entrance into this State under the summons.

If a person passes through this State while going to another state in obedience to a summons to attend and testify in that state, or while returning therefrom, he shall not while so passing through this State be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with matters which arose before his entrance into this State under the summons. (1937, c. 217, s. 4; 1973, c. 1286, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Exemption from Service Is Personal Privilege. — The privilege of claiming an exemption from service of civil process granted by this section is personal. The service is not void. It is merely voidable, and, until the defendant elects to exercise his privilege by claiming his exemption and establishing his nonresidence, the service is binding. Thrush v. Thrush, 246 N.C. 114, 97 S.E.2d 472 (1957), decided under former law.

Nonresident defendant while in the State in compliance with conditions of a bail bond is not exempt from the service of process. Hare v. Hare, 228 N.C. 740, 46 S.E.2d 840 (1948), decided under former law.

Decisions That Nonresident Exempt from Process Held Res Judicata in Subsequent Proceeding. — In an action against the driver of a car upon whom service of summons was had while he was in the State in obedience to a summons from a coroner to testify at an inquest, motion to vacate the service was allowed upon the court's finding from the evidence that defendant was a nonresident and that therefore he was exempt from service of process in connection with matters which arose before his entrance into the State in obedience to the coroner's summons. In a subsequent action arising out of the same collision, brought in another county by the administrator of a party killed in the collision, service was had upon the defendant at the same time and in the same manner. It was held that the prior adjudication that defendant was a nonresident and was exempt from service under this section was in the nature of a judgment in rem and is res judicata as to the status and residence of the defendant, and is binding upon the administrator under the maxim res judicata pro veritate accipitur, and the holding of the court in the second action upon substantially the same evidence that defendant was a resident of this State and that the service of summons on him was valid must be reversed on appeal even though supported by evidence. Current v. Webb, 220 N.C. 425, 17 S.E.2d 614 (1941), decided under former law.

§ 15A-815. Uniformity of interpretation.

This Article shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of the states which enact it. (1937, c. 217, s. 5; 1973, c. 1286, s. 9.)

§ 15A-816. Title of Article.

This Article may be cited as "Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from without a State in Criminal Proceedings." (1937, c. 217, s. 6; 1973, c. 1286, s. 9.)

§§ 15A-817 through 15A-820: Reserved for future codification purposes.

ARTICLE 44.

Securing Attendance of Prisoners as Witnesses.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The three sections in this Article provide for exchange of prisoners as witnesses between North Carolina and other states and the federal authorities. The three sections are based on New York Criminal Procedure Law, §§ 650.10 and 650.30.

§ 15A-821. Securing attendance of prisoner in this State as witness in proceeding outside the State.

(a) If a judge of a court of general jurisdiction in any other state, which by its laws has made provision for commanding a prisoner within that state to attend and testify in this State, certifies under the seal of that court that there is a criminal prosecution pending in the court or that a grand jury investigation has commenced, and that a person confined in an institution under the control of the State Department of Correction of North Carolina, other than a person confined as criminally insane, is a material witness in the prosecution or investigation and that his presence is required for a specified number of days, upon presentment of the certificate to a superior court judge in the superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1 where the person is confined, upon notice to the Attorney General, the judge must fix a time and place for a hearing and order the person having custody of the prisoner to produce him at the hearing.

(b) If at the hearing the judge determines that the prisoner is a material and necessary witness in the requesting state, the judge must order that the prisoner attend in the court where the prosecution or investigation is pending, upon such terms and conditions as the judge prescribes, including among other things, provision for the return of the prisoner at the conclusion of his testimony, proper safeguard for his custody, and proper financial reimbursement or other payment, including payment in advance, by the demanding jurisdiction for all expenses incurred in the production and return of the prisoner.

(c) The Attorney General may, as agent for the State of North Carolina, enter into such agreements with the demanding jurisdiction as necessary to ensure proper compliance with the order of the court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 62.)

§ 15A-822. Securing attendance of prisoner outside the State as witness in proceeding in the State.

(a) When

(1) A criminal action or proceeding is pending in a court of this State, and

(2) There is reasonable cause to believe that a person confined in a correctional institution or prison of another state, other than a person confined as mentally ill, possesses information material to such criminal action or proceeding, and

(3) The attendance of the person as a witness in such proceeding is desired by a party thereto, and

(4) The state in which such person is confined possesses a statute equivalent to G.S. 15A-821, the court in which such proceeding is pending may issue a certificate under the seal of the court, certifying all such facts and certifying that the attendance of the person as a witness in such court is required for a specified number of days.

(b) The certificate may be issued upon application of either the State or a defendant setting forth the facts specified in subsection (a).

(c) Upon issuing such a certificate, the court may cause it to be delivered to a court of such other state which is authorized to initiate or undertake action for the delivery of such prisoners to this State as witnesses. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

§ 15A-823. Securing attendance of prisoner in federal institution as witness in proceeding in the State.

(a) When

(1) A criminal proceeding is pending in a court of this State; and

(2) There is reasonable cause to believe that a person confined in a federal prison or other federal custody, either within or outside this State, possesses information material to such criminal proceeding; and

(3) His attendance as a witness in such action or proceeding is desired by a party thereto, the court may issue a certificate, known as a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum, addressed to the Attorney General of the United States certifying all such facts and requesting the Attorney General of the United States to cause the attendance of such person as a witness in such court for a specified number of days under custody of a federal public servant.

(b) The certificate may be issued upon application of either the State or a defendant, setting forth the facts specified in subsection (a).

(c) Upon issuing the certificate, the court may cause it to be delivered to the Attorney General of the United States or to his representative authorized to entertain the request. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

SUBCHAPTER VIII-A. RIGHTS OF CRIME VICTIMS AND WITNESSES.

ARTICLE 45.

Fair Treatment for Certain Victims and Witnesses.

§ 15A-824. Definitions.

As used in this Article, unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

(1) "Crime" means a felony or serious misdemeanor as determined in the sole discretion of the district attorney, except those included in Article 46 of this Chapter, or any act committed by a juvenile that, if committed by a competent adult, would constitute a felony or serious misdemeanor.

(2) "Family member" means a spouse, child, parent or legal guardian, or the closest living relative.

(3) "Victim" means a person against whom there is probable cause to believe a crime has been committed.

(4) "Witness" means a person who has been or is expected to be summoned to testify for the prosecution in a criminal action concerning a felony, or who by reason of having relevant information is subject to being called or is likely to be called as a witness for the prosecution in such an action, whether or not an action or proceeding has been commenced. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 998, s. 1; 1989, c. 596, s. 1; 1998-212, s. 19.4(a), (b).)

§ 15A-825. Treatment due victims and witnesses.

To the extent reasonably possible and subject to available resources, the employees of law-enforcement agencies, the prosecutorial system, the judicial system, and the correctional system should make a reasonable effort to assure that each victim and witness within their jurisdiction:

(1) Is provided information regarding immediate medical assistance when needed and is not detained for an unreasonable length of time before having such assistance administered.

(2) Is provided information about available protection from harm and threats of harm arising out of cooperation with law-enforcement prosecution efforts, and receives such protection.

(2a) Is provided information that testimony as to one's home address is not relevant in every case, and that the victim or witness may request the district attorney to raise an objection should he/she deem it appropriate to this line of questioning in the case at hand.

(3) Has any stolen or other personal property expeditiously returned by law-enforcement agencies when it is no longer needed as evidence, and its return would not impede an investigation or prosecution of the case. When feasible, all such property, except weapons, currency, contraband, property subject to evidentiary analysis, and property whose ownership is disputed, should be photographed and returned to the owner within a reasonable period of time of being recovered by law-enforcement officials.

(4) Is provided appropriate employer intercession services to seek the employer's cooperation with the criminal justice system and minimize the employee's loss of pay and other benefits resulting from such cooperation whenever possible.

(5) Is provided, whenever practical, a secure waiting area during court proceedings that does not place the victim or witness in close proximity to defendants and families or friends of defendants.

(6) Is informed of the procedures to be followed to apply for and receive any appropriate witness fees or victim compensation.

(6a) Is informed of the right to be present throughout the entire trial of the defendant, subject to the right of the court to sequester witnesses.

(7) Is given the opportunity to be present during the final disposition of the case or is informed of the final disposition of the case, if he has requested to be present or be informed.

(8) Is notified, whenever possible, that a court proceeding to which he has been subpoenaed will not occur as scheduled.

(9) Has a victim impact statement prepared for consideration by the court.

(9a) Prior to trial, is provided information about plea bargaining procedures and is told that the district attorney may recommend a plea bargain to the court.

(10) Is informed that civil remedies may be available and that statutes of limitation apply in civil cases.

(11) Upon the victim's written request, is notified before a proceeding is held at which the release of the offender from custody is considered, if the crime for which the offender was placed in custody is a Class G or more serious felony.

(12) Upon the victim's written request, is notified if the offender escapes from custody or is released from custody, if the crime for which the offender was placed in custody is a Class G or more serious felony.

(13) Has family members of a homicide victim offered all the guarantees in this section, except those in subdivision (1).

Nothing in this section shall be construed to create a cause of action for failure to comply with its requirements. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 998, s. 1; 1989, c. 596, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

In Camera Hearing with Victim. — The trial courts should exercise extreme caution in conducting in camera hearings and insure that all information received by the court relating to punishment is made known to the defendant and his counsel and that he be given the opportunity to explain or refute it. State v. Midyette, 87 N.C. App. 199, 360 S.E.2d 507 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 108, 366 S.E.2d 440 (1988).

Sympathy for Victims, Not Bias. — The trial judge's comment that "the court system needs to become [victims'] friends, not their enemy" did not manifests a bias against defendant but rather illustrated an affinity for the use of victim impact statements, a procedure specifically endorsed by North Carolina's statutes. State v. Hendricks, 138 N.C. App. 668, 531 S.E.2d 896 (2000).

Use of Victim Impact Statements at Sentencing Hearings. — Victim impact statements may be used at sentencing hearings, except in capital cases. State v. Phillips, 325 N.C. 222, 381 S.E.2d 325 (1989).

Victim's or Witness' View of Evidence Has No Proper Place in Impact Statement. — What a victim or a witness thinks the evidence in a case shows or what the defendant's punishment should be is not an effect of crime, but advocacy, and such thoughts have no place in a proper impact statement, but holding that statements by victim's sisters on Victim Impact Statement forms as to the sentence which they believed defendant should receive were harmless under the circumstances. State v. Jackson, 91 N.C. App. 124, 370 S.E.2d 687 (1988).

Introduction of Victim Impact Statements Not Prejudicial. — Where court found no aggravating factor based on evidence adduced by victim impact statements introduced at defendant's sentencing hearing, defendant was shown the statements at the hearings and objected to their admission but did not move for a continuance to seek evidence in rebuttal or to issue subpoenas for the persons who made the statements, and the matters contained in the statements had been brought to the court's attention during the actual trial, defendant failed to show how he was prejudiced by introduction of the statements. State v. Phillips, 325 N.C. 222, 381 S.E.2d 325 (1989).

The trial court properly admitted a victim impact statement into evidence at a sentencing hearing for second-degree murder, where the trial court found no aggravating factors based on the statement, and where defendant failed to show that the result of the hearing would have been materially more favorable to him had the statements not been admitted. State v. Rice, 129 N.C. App. 715, 501 S.E.2d 665 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 374, 525 S.E.2d 189 (1998).

§ 15A-826. Assistants for administrative and victim and witness services.

In addition to providing administrative and legal support to the district attorney's office, assistants for administrative and victim and witness services are responsible for coordinating efforts within the law-enforcement and judicial systems to assure that each victim and witness is treated in accordance with this Article. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 998, s. 1; 1997-443, s. 18.7(e).)

§ 15A-827. Scope.

This Article does not create any civil or criminal liability on the part of the State of North Carolina or any criminal justice agency, employee, or volunteer. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 998, s. 1.)

Article 46.

Crime Victims' Rights Act.

§ 15A-830. Definitions.

(a) The following definitions apply in this Article:

(1) Accused. — A person who has been arrested and charged with committing a crime covered by this Article.

(2) Arresting law enforcement agency. — The law enforcement agency that makes the arrest of an accused.

(3) Custodial agency. — The agency that has legal custody of an accused or defendant arising from a charge or conviction of a crime covered by this Article including, but not limited to, local jails or detention facilities, regional jails or detention facilities, facilities designated under G.S. 122C-252 for the custody and treatment of involuntary clients, or the Department of Correction.

(4) Investigating law enforcement agency. — The law enforcement agency with primary responsibility for investigating the crime committed against the victim.

(5) Law enforcement agency. — An arresting law enforcement agency, a custodial agency, or an investigating law enforcement agency.

(6) Next of kin. — The victim's spouse, children, parents, siblings, or grandparents. The term does not include the accused unless the charges are dismissed or the person is found not guilty.

(7) Victim. — A person against whom there is probable cause to believe one of the following crimes was committed:

a. A Class A, B1, B2, C, D, or E felony.

b. A Class F felony if it is a violation of one of the following: G.S. 14-16.6(b); 14-16.6(c); 14-18; 14-32.1(e); 14-32.2(b)(3); 14-32.3(a); 14-32.4; 14-34.2; 14-34.6(c); 14-41; 14-43.2; 14-43.3; 14-190.17; 14-190.19; 14-202.1; 14-277.3; 14-288.9; or 20-138.5.

c. A Class G felony if it is a violation of one of the following: G.S. 14-32.3(b); 14-51; 14-58; 14-87.1; or 20-141.4.

d. A Class H felony if it is a violation of one of the following: G.S. 14-32.3(a); 14-32.3(c); 14-33.2, or 14-277.3.

e. A Class I felony if it is a violation of one of the following: G.S. 14-32.3(b); 14-34.6(b); or 14-190.17A.

f. An attempt of any of the felonies listed in this subdivision if the attempted felony is punishable as a felony.

g. Any of the following misdemeanor offenses when the offense is committed between persons who have a personal relationship as defined in G.S. 50B-1(b): G.S. 14-33(c)(1); 14-33(c)(2); 14-33(a); 14-34; 14-134.3; or 14-277.3.

(b) If the victim is deceased, then the next of kin, in the order set forth in the definition contained in this section, is entitled to the victim's rights under this Article. However, the right contained in G.S. 15A-834 may only be exercised by the personal representative of the victim's estate. An individual entitled to exercise the victim's rights as a member of the class of next of kin may designate anyone in the class to act on behalf of the class. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 2001-433, s. 1; 2001-487, s. 120; 2001-518, s. 2A.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-212, s. 19.4(c), enacted this Article as Article 45A. It was recodified as Article 46 at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 19.4(r), made this Article effective July 1, 1999, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, with the exception of sections 15A-830, 15A-833, and 15A-834, which it made effective December 1, 1998, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date.

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 1.1 provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations Appropriations and Capital Improvement Appropriations Act of 1998'."

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 30.5 contains a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-433, s. 1, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, effective December 1, 2001, inserted "facilities designated under G.S. 122C-252 for the custody and treatment of involuntary clients" in subdivision (a)(3).

Session Laws 2001-518, s. 2A, effective March 1, 2002, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, inserted "14-277.3" in subdivision (a)(7)b; substituted "14-33.2, or 14-277.3" for "or 14-33.2" at the end of subdivision (a)(7)d; and deleted "14-277.3" following "G.S." in subdivision (a)(7)e.

§ 15A-831. Responsibilities of law enforcement agency.

(a) As soon as practicable but within 72 hours after identifying a victim covered by this Article, the investigating law enforcement agency shall provide the victim with the following information:

(1) The availability of medical services, if needed.

(2) The availability of crime victims' compensation funds under Chapter 15B of the General Statutes and the address and telephone number of the agency responsible for dispensing the funds.

(3) The address and telephone number of the district attorney's office that will be responsible for prosecuting the victim's case.

(4) The name and telephone number of an investigating law enforcement agency employee whom the victim may contact if the victim has not been notified of an arrest in the victim's case within six months after the crime was reported to the law enforcement agency.

(5) Information about an accused's opportunity for pretrial release.

(6) The name and telephone number of an investigating law enforcement agency employee whom the victim may contact to find out whether the accused has been released from custody.

(b) As soon as practicable but within 72 hours after the arrest of a person believed to have committed a crime covered by this Article, the arresting law enforcement agency shall inform the investigating law enforcement agency of the arrest. As soon as practicable but within 72 hours of being notified of the arrest, the investigating law enforcement agency shall notify the victim of the arrest.

(c) As soon as practicable but within 72 hours after receiving notification from the arresting law enforcement agency that the accused has been arrested, the investigating law enforcement agency shall forward to the district attorney's office that will be responsible for prosecuting the case the defendant's name and the victim's name, address, date of birth, social security number, race, sex, and telephone number, unless the victim refuses to disclose any or all of the information, in which case, the investigating law enforcement agency shall so inform the district attorney's office.

(d) Upon receiving the information in subsection (a) of this section, the victim shall, on a form provided by the investigating law enforcement agency, indicate whether the victim wishes to receive any further notices from the investigating law enforcement agency on the status of the accused during the pretrial process. If the victim elects to receive further notices during the pretrial process, the victim shall be responsible for notifying the investigating law enforcement agency of any changes in the victim's name, address, and telephone number. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 2001-433, s. 2; 2001-487, s. 120.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-433, s. 2, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, effective December 1, 2001, inserted "the defendant's name and" in subsection (c); and in subsection (d), inserted "on the status of the accused during the pretrial process" at the end of the first sentence and inserted "during the pretrial process" in the second sentence.

§ 15A-832. Responsibilities of the district attorney's office.

(a) Within 21 days after the arrest of the accused, but not less than 24 hours before the accused's first scheduled probable-cause hearing, the district attorney's office shall provide to the victim a pamphlet or other written material that explains in a clear and concise manner the following:

(1) The victim's rights under this Article, including the right to confer with the attorney prosecuting the case about the disposition of the case and the right to provide a victim impact statement.
(2) The responsibilities of the district attorney's office under this Article.
(3) The victim's eligibility for compensation under the Crime Victims Compensation Act and the deadlines by which the victim must file a claim for compensation.
(4) The steps generally taken by the district attorney's office when prosecuting a felony case.
(5) Suggestions on what the victim should do if threatened or intimidated by the accused or someone acting on the accused's behalf.
(6) The name and telephone number of a victim and witness assistant in the district attorney's office whom the victim may contact for further information.

(b) Upon receiving the information in subsection (a) of this section, the victim shall, on a form provided by the district attorney's office, indicate whether the victim wishes to receive notices of some, all, or none of the trial and posttrial proceedings involving the accused. If the victim elects to receive notices, the victim shall be responsible for notifying the district attorney's office or any other department or agency that has a responsibility under this Article of any changes in the victim's address and telephone number. The victim may alter the request for notification at any time by notifying the district attorney's office and completing the form provided by the district attorney's office.

(c) The district attorney's office shall notify a victim of the date, time, and place of all trial court proceedings of the type that the victim has elected to receive notice. All notices required to be given by the district attorney's office shall be given in a manner that is reasonably calculated to be received by the victim prior to the date of the court proceeding.

(d) Whenever practical, the district attorney's office shall provide a secure waiting area during court proceedings that does not place the victim in close proximity to the defendant or the defendant's family.

(e) When the victim is to be called as a witness in a court proceeding, the court shall make every effort to permit the fullest attendance possible by the victim in the proceedings. This subsection shall not be construed to interfere with the defendant's right to a fair trial.

(f) Prior to the disposition of the case, the district attorney's office shall offer the victim the opportunity to consult with the prosecuting attorney to obtain the views of the victim about the disposition of the case, including the victim's views about dismissal, plea or negotiations, sentencing, and any pretrial diversion programs.

(g) At the sentencing hearing, the prosecuting attorney shall submit to the court a copy of a form containing the identifying information set forth in G.S. 15A-831(c) about any victim's electing to receive further notices under this Article. The clerk of superior court shall include the form with the final judgment and commitment, or judgment suspending sentence, transmitted to the Department of Correction or other agency receiving custody of the defendant and shall be maintained by the custodial agency as a confidential file. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 2001-433, s. 3; 2001-487, s. 120.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-433, s. 3, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, effective December 1, 2001, substituted "that" for "which" following "of the type" in subsection (c); and in the second sentence of subsection (g), substituted "The clerk of superior court shall include the form" for "The form shall be included" and inserted "or judgment suspending sentence."

§ 15A-832.1. Responsibilities of judicial officials issuing arrest warrants.

(a) In issuing a warrant for the arrest of an offender for any of the misdemeanor offenses set forth in G.S. 15A-830(a)(7)g., based on testimony or evidence from a complaining witness rather than from a law enforcement officer, a judicial official shall record the defendant's name and the victim's name, address, and telephone number electronically or on a form separate from the warrant and developed by the Administrative Office of the Courts for the purpose of recording that information, unless the victim refuses to disclose any or all of the information, in which case the judicial official shall so indicate.

(b) A judicial official issuing a warrant for the arrest of an offender for any of the misdemeanor offenses set forth in G.S. 15A-830(a)(7)g. shall deliver the court's copy of the warrant and the victim-identifying information to the office of the clerk of superior court by the close of the next business day. As soon as practicable, but within 72 hours, the office of the clerk of superior court shall forward to the district attorney's office the victim-identifying information set forth in subsection (a) of this section. (2001-433, s. 4; 2001-487, s. 120.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-433, s. 11, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, makes this section effective December 1, 2001.

§ 15A-833. Evidence of victim impact.

(a) A victim has the right to offer admissible evidence of the impact of the crime, which shall be considered by the court or jury in sentencing the defendant. The evidence may include the following:

(1) A description of the nature and extent of any physical, psychological, or emotional injury suffered by the victim as a result of the offense committed by the defendant.

(2) An explanation of any economic or property loss suffered by the victim as a result of the offense committed by the defendant.

(3) A request for restitution and an indication of whether the victim has applied for or received compensation under the Crime Victims Compensation Act.

(b) No victim shall be required to offer evidence of the impact of the crime. No inference or conclusion shall be drawn from a victim's decision not to offer evidence of the impact of the crime. At the victim's request and with the consent of the defendant, a representative of the district attorney's office or a law enforcement officer may proffer evidence of the impact of the crime to the court. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 2001-433, s. 5; 2001-487, s. 120.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-433, s. 5, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, effective December 1, 2001, added the last sentence in subsection (b).

CASE NOTES

The court upheld the victim's brother's restrained testimony, which did no more than describe the emotional or psychological effect of his sister's death on him, as being well within the parameters of this section. State v. Smith, 352 N.C. 531, 532 S.E.2d 773 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1419, 149 L. Ed. 2d 360 (2001).

§ 15A-834. Restitution.

A victim has the right to receive restitution as ordered by the court pursuant to Article 81C of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c).)

§ 15A-835. Posttrial responsibilities.

(a) Within 30 days after the final trial court proceeding in the case, the district attorney's office shall notify the victim, in writing, of:

(1) The final disposition of the case.
(2) The crimes of which the defendant was convicted.
(3) The defendant's right to appeal, if any.
(4) The telephone number of offices to contact in the event of nonpayment of restitution by the defendant.

(b) Upon a defendant's giving notice of appeal to the Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court, the district attorney's office shall forward to the Attorney General's office the defendant's name and the victim's name, address, and telephone number. Upon receipt of this information, and thereafter as the circumstances require, the Attorney General's office shall provide the victim with the following:

(1) A clear and concise explanation of how the appellate process works, including information about possible actions that may be taken by the appellate court.
(2) Notice of the date, time, and place of any appellate proceedings involving the defendant. Notice shall be given in a manner that is reasonably calculated to be received by the victim prior to the date of the proceedings.
(3) The final disposition of an appeal.

(c) If the defendant has been released on bail pending the outcome of the appeal, the agency that has custody of the defendant shall notify the investigating law enforcement agency as soon as practicable, and within 72 hours of receipt of the notification the investigating law enforcement agency shall notify the victim that the defendant has been released.

(d) If the defendant's conviction is overturned, and the district attorney's office decides to retry the case or the case is remanded to superior court for a new trial, the victim shall be entitled to the same rights under this Article as if the first trial did not take place.

(e) Repealed by Session Laws 2001-302, s. 1, effective July 21, 2001. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 2001-302, s. 1; 2001-433, s. 6; 2001-487, s. 120.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-302, s. 1, effective July 21, 2001, repealed subsection (e), which read: "The Conference of District Attorneys shall maintain a repository relating to victims' identities, addresses, and other appropriate information for use by agencies charged with responsibilities under this Article."

Session Laws 2001-433, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, effective December 1, 2001, inserted subdivision (a)(4); and inserted "the defendant's name and" in the first sentence of subsection (b). In addition, the act deleted subsection (e), which had already been repealed by Session Laws 2001-302, s. 1.

§ 15A-836. Responsibilities of agency with custody of defendant.

(a) When a form is included with the final judgment and commitment pursuant to G.S. 15A-832(g), or when the victim has otherwise filed a written request for notification with the custodial agency, the custodial agency shall notify the victim of:

(1) The projected date by which the defendant can be released from custody. The calculation of the release date shall be as exact as possible, including earned time and disciplinary credits if the sentence of imprisonment exceeds 90 days.

(2) An inmate's assignment to a minimum custody unit and the address of the unit. This notification shall include notice that the inmate's minimum custody status may lead to the inmate's participation in one or more community-based programs such as work release or supervised leaves in the community.

(3) The victim's right to submit any concerns to the agency with custody and the procedure for submitting such concerns.

(4) The defendant's escape from custody, within 72 hours, except that if a victim has notified the agency in writing that the defendant has issued a specific threat against the victim, the agency shall notify the victim as soon as possible and within 24 hours at the latest.

(5) The defendant's capture, within 24 hours.

(6) The date the defendant is scheduled to be released from the facility. Whenever practical, notice shall be given 60 days before release. In no event shall notice be given less than seven days before release.

(7) The defendant's death.

(b) Notifications required in this section shall be provided within 60 days of the date the custodial agency takes custody of the defendant or within 60 days of the event requiring notification, or as otherwise specified in subsection (a) of this section. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 2001-433, s. 7; 2001-487, s. 120.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-433, s. 7, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, effective December 1, 2001, added "except that ... at the latest" at the end of subdivision (a)(4); substituted "24 hours" for "72 hours" in subdivision (a)(5); and substituted "60 days" for "30 days" twice in subsection (b).

§ 15A-837. Responsibilities of Division of Community Corrections.

(a) The Division of Community Corrections shall notify the victim of:

(1) The defendant's regular conditions of probation or post-release supervision, special or added conditions, supervision requirements, and any subsequent changes.

(2) The date and location of any hearing to determine whether the defendant's supervision should be revoked, continued, modified, or terminated.

(3) The final disposition of any hearing referred to in subdivision (2) of this subsection.

(4) Any restitution modification.

(5) The defendant's movement into or out of any intermediate sanction as defined in G.S. 15A-1340.11(6).

(6) The defendant's absconding supervision, within 72 hours.
(7) The capture of a defendant described in subdivision (6) of this subsection, within 72 hours.
(8) The date when the defendant is terminated or discharged.
(9) The defendant's death.

(b) Notifications required in this section shall be provided within 30 days of the event requiring notification, or as otherwise specified in subsection (a) of this section. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 2001-433, s. 8; 2001-487, ss. 47(a), 120.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-433, s. 8, as amended by Session Laws 2001-487, s. 120, effective December 1, 2001, substituted "date and location of any hearing" for "date of a hearing" in subdivision (a)(2).

Session Laws 2001-487, s. 47(a), effective December 16, 2001, substituted "Community Corrections" for "Adult Probation and Parole" in the section catchline and in the introductory language of subsection (a); and substituted "this subsection" for "this section" in subdivisions (a)(3) and (a)(7).

§ 15A-838. Notice of commuted sentence or pardon.

The Governor's Clemency Office shall notify a victim when it is considering commuting the defendant's sentence or pardoning the defendant. The Governor's Clemency Office shall also give notice that the victim has the right to present a written statement to be considered by the Office before the defendant's sentence is commuted or the defendant is pardoned. The Governor's Clemency Office shall notify the victim of its decision. Notice shall be given in a manner that is reasonably calculated to allow for a timely response to the commutation or pardon decision. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c).)

§ 15A-839. No money damages.

This Article, including the provision of a service pursuant to this Article through the Statewide Automated Victim Assistance and Notification System established by the Governor's Crime Commission, does not create a claim for damages against the State, a county, or a municipality, or any of its agencies, instrumentalities, officers, or employees. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 1999-169, s. 1.)

§ 15A-840. No ground for relief.

The failure or inability of any person to provide a right or service under this Article, including a service provided through the Statewide Automated Victim Assistance and Notification System established by the Governor's Crime Commission, may not be used by a defendant in a criminal case, by an inmate, by any other accused, or by any victim, as a ground for relief in any criminal or civil proceeding, except in suits for a writ of mandamus by the victim. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c); 1999-169, s. 2.)

§ 15A-841. Incompetent victim's rights exercised.

When a victim is mentally or physically incompetent or when the victim is a minor, the victim's rights under this Article, other than the rights provided by G.S. 15A-834, may be exercised by the victim's next of kin or legal guardian. (1998-212, s. 19.4(c).)

SUBCHAPTER IX. PRETRIAL PROCEDURE.

Article 48.

Discovery in the Superior Court.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission recommended this Article dealing with reciprocal discovery in the belief that jury trials will be more orderly and that ultimately truth will more likely prevail if the parties are prepared to meet the case that the other side will present. Trial by ambush has been generally eliminated, with beneficial effects, in civil cases, and the Commission believed this philosophy should also extend to criminal cases. Another important benefit of liberal discovery is to enhance the likelihood of honorable and realistic plea negotiations, avoiding trial altogether.

Some persons have protested that discovery in criminal cases may lead defendants and unscrupulous counsel to fabricate defenses custom-tailored to the disclosed weaknesses of the State's case, but the Commission did not believe this risk was great enough to warrant avoidance of the benefits of discovery. There are other methods which may be utilized to prevent abuse of discovery by unscrupulous persons.

Until recently it was widely claimed that discovery of the defendant's case on the part of the State was a violation of the privilege against self-incrimination. These claims have been largely silenced by Williams v. Florida, 399 U.S. 78, 90 S. Ct. 1893, 26 L. Ed. 2d 446 (1970), upholding a statute requiring the defendant to give notice of alibi. The Commission considered making the State's right to discovery independent of whether the defendant requested discovery, but finally settled upon a reciprocal right to the State on a category-by-category basis. The Commission decided this would be the wisest way to introduce discovery by the State into the law of North Carolina; there was no thought that the reciprocity feature was constitutionally necessary.

The Commission consulted a number of discovery provisions in formulating its proposals, including Article 240 of the New York Criminal Procedure Law and A.B.A. Project on Standards for Criminal Justice, Standards Relating to Discovery and Procedure Before Trial (1970). The model used in drafting, however, was Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure of the Judicial Conference of the United States, Preliminary Draft of Proposed Amendments to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, Rule 16 (January 1970).

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-901. Application of Article.

This Article applies to cases within the original jurisdiction of the superior court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

As cases in district court are tried before the judge, and usually on a fairly expeditious basis, the Commission decided there was no need at present to provide for discovery procedures prior to trial in district court. As misdemeanors tried in superior court on trial de novo have already had a full trial in district court, there is little reason for requiring discovery after that trial and prior to the new trial in superior court.

This Article, then, applies to felonies and misdemeanors in the original jurisdiction of the superior court. The statute concerning this jurisdiction is not in Chapter 15A. Section 7A-271, governing the superior court's criminal jurisdiction, is not affected by this Article.

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Rules of Discovery. — The rules of discovery contained in the Criminal Procedure Act were enacted by the General Assembly to ensure, insofar as possible, the defendants received a fair trial and not be taken by surprise. They were not enacted to serve as mandatory rules of exclusion for trivial defects in the State's mode of compliance. State v. Thomas, 291 N.C. 687, 231 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

The purpose of the discovery procedure authorized by this Article was not to protect a defendant from the consequences of perjury. It was intended only to protect him from the consequences of unfair surprise and to enable him to have available at the trial any evidence which he could legitimately offer in his defense. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978); State v. Taylor, 332 N.C. 372, 420 S.E.2d 414 (1992).

The purpose of the discovery procedures authorized by Art. 48, is to protect the defendant from unfair surprise. When the court is not informed of any potential unfair surprise, the defendant cannot properly contend that the trial court's failure to impose a sanction is an abuse of discretion. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

Court's Power to Compel Disclosure Regarding Post-Trial Motion. — The judiciary must and does have the inherent power to compel disclosure of relevant facts regarding a post-trial motion and may order such disclosure prior to a hearing on such motion. State v. Taylor, 327 N.C. 147, 393 S.E.2d 801 (1990).

Criminal Investigatory Reports. — Plaintiff was precluded by this Article from obtaining copies of recordings which were unquestionably gathered by a city police department in the course of a criminal investigation and were part of the State's file in a pending criminal action. Piedmont Publishing Co. v. City of Winston-Salem, 334 N.C. 595, 434 S.E.2d 176 (1993).

Applied in State v. McMillian, 59 N.C. App. 396, 297 S.E.2d 164 (1982).

Cited in State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976); State v. Mason, 295 N.C. 584, 248 S.E.2d 241 (1978); State v. Williams, 304 N.C. 394, 284 S.E.2d 437 (1981); State v. Alston, 91 N.C. App. 707, 373 S.E.2d 306 (1988).

§ 15A-902. Discovery procedure.

(a) A party seeking discovery under this Article must, before filing any motion before a judge, request in writing that the other party comply voluntarily with the discovery request. Upon receiving a negative or unsatisfactory response, or upon the passage of seven days following the receipt of the request without response, the party requesting discovery may file a motion for discovery under the provisions of this Article concerning any matter as to which voluntary discovery was not made pursuant to request.

(b) To the extent that discovery authorized in this Article is voluntarily made in response to a request, the discovery is deemed to have been made under an order of the court for the purposes of this Article.

(c) A motion for discovery under this Article must be heard before a superior court judge.

(d) If a defendant is represented by counsel, he may as a matter of right request voluntary discovery from the State under subsection (a) above not later than the tenth working day after either the probable-cause hearing or the date he waives the hearing. If a defendant is not represented by counsel, or is indicted or consents to the filing of a bill of information before he has been afforded or waived a probable-cause hearing, he may as a matter of right request voluntary discovery from the State under subsection (a) above not later than the tenth working day after

(1) The defendant's consent to be tried upon a bill of information, or the service of notice upon him that a true bill of indictment has been found by the grand jury, or

(2) The appointment of counsel — whichever is later.

For the purposes of this subsection a defendant is represented by counsel only if counsel was retained by or appointed for him prior to or during a probable-cause hearing or prior to execution by him of a waiver of a probable-cause hearing.

(e) The State may as a matter of right request voluntary discovery from the defendant, when authorized under this Article, at any time not later than the tenth working day after disclosure by the State with respect to the category of discovery in question.

(f) A motion for discovery made at any time prior to trial may be entertained if the parties so stipulate or if the judge for good cause shown determines that the motion should be allowed in whole or in part. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission contemplated that after the parties become accustomed to discovery procedures they will be followed voluntarily without the necessity of motions before the judge. To facilitate this practice, the section requires that a party seeking discovery first request voluntary discovery. That the request be in writing is simply to make sure there is something tangible in the record if questions arise later. The written request need not be elaborate, but of course should be dated.

If the other party complies with a request for voluntary discovery, the request and the compliance will for the later procedural provisions of the Article be treated as if effected upon motion and order of the court.

The reference in subsection (c) is to trigger the special definition of superior court judge contained in § 15A-101(10).

Because the request for voluntary discovery must precede any motion for discovery by at least seven days, subsections (d) and (e) in setting out the time limits for discovery speak of the period during which a party "may as a matter of right request voluntary discovery...." If a defendant has counsel the period in which discovery can be requested as a matter of right is 10 working days following the holding, or waiver, of the probable-cause hearing. If he does not have counsel or is charged in the superior court before a probable-cause hearing is held or waived, the time is extended to a later period as noted in this section. In implementing this later time period, the complementary provisions of § 15A-630 should be noted.

CASE NOTES

Subsection (d) Gives Right to Defendant, Not Defense Counsel. — In a criminal prosecution, there was no merit to the defendant's contention that the trial judge's denial of the opportunity to conduct discovery after counsel was appointed violated this section, since the section did not guarantee defense counsel at least 10 days after he was appointed in which to conduct discovery, but instead gave the defendant the right to seek discovery not later than the tenth day after appointment of counsel; the defendant did this during his vigorous representation of himself; and the defendant therefore could not argue that, since the State did not comply with the statutory discovery procedure, he had 10 more days to conduct discovery. State v. Berry, 51 N.C. App. 97, 275 S.E.2d 269, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 182, 280 S.E.2d 454 (1981).

Waiver of Discovery. — The failure to seek discovery pursuant to the terms of this section and § 15A-903 constitutes a waiver of the right to discovery pursuant to those statutes. State v. Hoskins, 36 N.C. App. 92, 242 S.E.2d 900, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 469, 246 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Where defendant has made neither a written request nor a motion to compel discovery as required by subsection (a) of this section, the State has no duty to produce a defendant's statement or to notify defendant of its intention to use a defendant's oral statement at trial. State v. Lang, 46 N.C. App. 138, 264 S.E.2d 821, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 508, 272 S.E.2d 123 (1980).

Voluntary Disclosure Not Required. — Under the statutory discovery scheme neither the State nor the defendant is required to respond voluntarily to a request for discovery.

The request for voluntary disclosure is merely a prerequisite to the filing of a motion for an order requiring disclosure. State v. Anderson, 303 N.C. 185, 278 S.E.2d 238 (1981), overruled on other grounds, State v. Shank, 322 N.C. 243, 367 S.E.2d 639 (1988).

Thus, Motion for Order Is Remedy for Failure of Voluntary Disclosure. — Ordinarily one party in a criminal action may not complain of the other's failure to respond voluntarily to a request for disclosure. The remedy for such a failure is to move for a compulsory order. State v. Anderson, 303 N.C. 185, 278 S.E.2d 238 (1981), overruled on other grounds, State v. Shank, 322 N.C. 243, 367 S.E.2d 639 (1988).

Duty of Party Offering Voluntary Disclosure. — Discovery statutes are designed to encourage voluntary disclosures of items which ultimately a party may be ordered to disclose. Thus if either party unequivocally advises the other that it will respond voluntarily to the other's request for disclosure, that party thereby assumes the duty fully to disclose all of those items which could be obtained by court order. State v. Anderson, 303 N.C. 185, 278 S.E.2d 238 (1981), overruled on other grounds, State v. Shank, 322 N.C. 243, 367 S.E.2d 639 (1988).

Where the State undertook to make voluntary discovery when it responded to the request by one defendant for any statements made by his codefendant, the State's voluntary response was deemed under subsection (b) to have been made under an order of court. As a result, the trial court properly could have invoked the sanctions provided in § 15A-910 for the State's failure to provide defendant with a copy of the pretrial statement of his codefendant in a timely manner. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 328, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

State did not waive its right to receive a written request for defendant's oral statement by voluntarily producing defendant's written statement pursuant to an informal oral agreement between the prosecutor and defense counsel. State v. Lang, 46 N.C. App. 138, 264 S.E.2d 821, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 508, 272 S.E.2d 123 (1980).

Contention That Prosecution Failed to Comply with Section Held Without Merit. — Where there was no showing in the record by the defendant that investigatory evidence of the prosecution not supplied to the defendant following a motion under this section was material or exculpatory, and the defendant was afforded the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses regarding the evidence, the defendant's contention that the prosecution failed to comply with this section was without merit. State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 928, 98 S. Ct. 414, 54 L. Ed. 2d 288, reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 261, 247 S.E.2d 234 (1977).

Arraignment does not affect the time for discovery for a defendant represented by counsel. State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

Imposition of Sanctions Not Mandated. — Neither §§ 15A-902 to 15A-910 nor the case of Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), requires the trial court to impose any sanctions for failure to comply with discovery. State v. McClintick, 315 N.C. 649, 340 S.E.2d 41 (1986).

Failure to Impose Sanctions Not Improper. — Where although the trial judge did not impose any sanctions for State's failure to comply with discovery, he expressed his displeasure with State's tactics with respect to discovery, and employed several of the curative actions suggested by § 15A-910, and at no time did he determine that defendant was not provided items to which he was entitled, that defendant was harmed by the delay in receiving them, that defendant was subjected to unfair surprise at trial, or that State had failed to comply with the law, the court's failure to impose sanctions was not an abuse of discretion. State v. McClintick, 315 N.C. 649, 340 S.E.2d 41 (1986).

In prosecution for first-degree sexual offense and taking indecent liberties with children, the defendant was not prejudiced by the admission of the deputy's testimony that the defendant stated his birthdate during the booking procedure, where there was ample evidence aside from defendant's statement from which the jury could have found that defendant was at least 16 years of age at the time of the crimes; therefore, even assuming that the statement was discoverable, that the state should have produced it pursuant to defendant's discovery request and that the trial court should have imposed sanctions pursuant to § 15A-910, the error was harmless. State v. Banks, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 398 (1988).

Court's Choice of Sanction Found Appropriate. — Even if the State's failure to inform defendant about a second fingerprint in existence did not comply with the discovery article, the court's refusal to either suppress the evidence or continue the trial was not necessarily error, since the court did sanction the State in one of the ways authorized by the statute (by granting a recess and requiring the State's witness to confer with defense counsel and to be interrogated under oath before he testified) and that way was neither inappropriate nor beyond the court's discretion. State v. Hall, 93 N.C. App. 236, 377 S.E.2d 280, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 579, 381 S.E.2d 777 (1989).

Substantial Compliance with Statutory Requirements. — Where the record on appeal indicated that the State was unsure of the status or the probative value of a check due to its illegibility, the trial court also found the check to be illegible, and when a clear copy of the check was obtained by the State, defense counsel was present and was given the legible copy at that time, the State substantially complied with the requirements of the discovery statutes in regard to the check. State v. Speckman, 92 N.C. App. 265, 374 S.E.2d 419 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 340, 391 S.E.2d 165 (1990).

Where the record indicated that the State did not intend to use a partnership breakdown initially but decided to use it after admission of other evidence was denied, the evidence did not appear to have been obtained directly from defendant or to belong to defendant, nor did it appear to have been material to the preparation of defendant's defense, and at the time the State decided to use the evidence it was made available to defendant for examination, the State substantially complied with the discovery statutes. State v. Speckman, 92 N.C. App. 265, 374 S.E.2d 419 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 340, 391 S.E.2d 165 (1990).

§ 15A-903. Disclosure of evidence by the State — Information subject to disclosure.

(a) Statement of Defendant. — Upon motion of a defendant, the court must order the prosecutor:

(1) To permit the defendant to inspect and copy or photograph any relevant written or recorded statements made by the defendant, or copies thereof, within the possession, custody, or control of the State the existence of which is known or by the exercise of due diligence may become known to the prosecutor; and

(2) To divulge, in written or recorded form, the substance of any oral statement relevant to the subject matter of the case made by the defendant, regardless of to whom the statement was made, within the possession, custody or control of the State, the existence of which is known to the prosecutor or becomes known to him prior to or during the course of trial; except that disclosure of such a statement is not required if it was made to an informant whose identity is a prosecution secret and who will not testify for the prosecution, and if the statement is not exculpatory. If the statement was made to a person other than a law-enforcement officer and if the statement is then known to the State, the State must divulge the substance of the statement no later than 12 o'clock noon, on Wednesday prior to the beginning of the week during which the case is calendared for trial. If disclosure of the substance of defendant's oral statement to an informant whose identity is or was a prosecution secret is withheld, the informant must not testify for the prosecution at trial.

(b) Statement of a Codefendant. — Upon motion of a defendant, the court must order the prosecutor:

(1) To permit the defendant to inspect and copy or photograph any written or recorded statement of a codefendant which the State intends to offer in evidence at their joint trial; and

(2) To divulge, in written or recorded form, the substance of any oral statement made by a codefendant which the State intends to offer in evidence at their joint trial.

(c) Defendant's Prior Record. — Upon motion of the defendant, the court must order the State to furnish to the defendant a copy of his prior criminal record, if any, as is available to the prosecutor.

(d) Documents and Tangible Objects. — Upon motion of the defendant, the court must order the prosecutor to permit the defendant to inspect and copy or photograph books, papers, documents, photographs, motion pictures, mechanical or electronic recordings, buildings and places, or any other crime scene, tangible objects, or copies or portions thereof which are within the possession, custody, or control of the State and which are material to the preparation of his defense, are intended for use by the State as evidence at the trial, or were obtained from or belong to the defendant.

(e) Reports of Examinations and Tests. — Upon motion of a defendant, the court must order the prosecutor to provide a copy of or to permit the defendant to inspect and copy or photograph results or reports of physical or mental examinations or of tests, measurements or experiments made in connection with the case, or copies thereof, within the possession, custody, or control of the State, the existence of which is known or by the exercise of due diligence may become known to the prosecutor. In addition, upon motion of a defendant, the court must order the prosecutor to permit the defendant to inspect, examine, and test, subject to appropriate safeguards, any physical evidence, or a sample of it, available to the prosecutor if the State intends to offer the evidence, or tests or experiments made in connection with the evidence, as an exhibit or evidence in the case.

(f) Statements of State's Witnesses.

(1) In any criminal prosecution brought by the State, no statement or report in the possession of the State that was made by a State witness or prospective State witness, other than the defendant, shall be the subject of subpoena, discovery, or inspection until that witness has testified on direct examination in the trial of the case.

(2) After a witness called by the State has testified on direct examination, the court shall, on motion of the defendant, order the State to produce any statement of the witness in the possession of the State that relates to the subject matter as to which the witness has testified. If the entire contents of that statement relate to the subject matter of the testimony of the witness, the court shall order it to be delivered directly to the defendant for his examination and use.

(3) If the State claims that any statement ordered to be produced under this section contains matter that does not relate to the subject matter of the testimony of the witness, the court shall order the State to deliver that statement for the inspection of the court in camera. Upon delivery the court shall excise the portions of the statement that do not relate to the subject matter of the testimony of the witness. With that material excised, the court shall then direct delivery of the statement to the defendant for his use. If, pursuant to this procedure, any portion of the statement is withheld from the defendant and the defendant objects to the withholding, and if the trial results in the conviction of the defendant, the entire text of the statement shall be preserved by the State and, in the event the defendant appeals, shall be made available to the appellate court for the purpose of determining the correctness of the ruling of the trial judge. Whenever any statement is delivered to a defendant pursuant to this subsection, the court, upon application of the defendant, may recess proceedings in the trial for a period of time that it determines is reasonably required for the examination of the statement by the defendant and his preparation for its use in the trial.

(4) If the State elects not to comply with an order of the court under subdivision (2) or (3) to deliver a statement to the defendant, the court shall strike from the record the testimony of the witness, and direct the jury to disregard the testimony, and the trial shall proceed unless the court determines that the interests of justice require that a mistrial be declared.

(5) The term "statement," as used in subdivision (2), (3), and (4) in relation to any witness called by the State means a. A written statement made by the witness and signed or otherwise adopted or approved by him;

b. A stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording, or a transcription thereof, that is a substantially verbatim recital or an oral statement made by the witness and recorded contemporaneously with the making of the oral statements.

(g) DNA Laboratory Reports. — The defendant shall have the right to obtain a copy of DNA laboratory reports provided to the district attorney revealing that there was a DNA match to the defendant that was derived from a CODIS match during a comparison search involving the defendant's DNA sample, in accordance with the procedure set forth in G.S. 15A-902. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1983, c. 759, ss. 1-3; 1983, Ex. Sess., c. 6, s. 1; 2001-282, s. 5.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Departing from the statutory breakdown, there are seven different categories of discovery of the State's case available to the defendant. They are:

(1) Written or recorded statements made by the defendant in the State's control. This type of statement is subject to discovery even if the State does not intend to offer it in evidence.

(2) Oral statements made by the defendant which the State intends to offer in evidence.

(3) Written, recorded, or oral statements of a codefendant which the State intends to offer at their joint trial.

(4) The prior criminal record of the defendant available to the solicitor. This criterion of availability is less stringent than the one used in several other subsections: "the existence of which is known or by the exercise of due diligence may become known to the solicitor." The subsection thus does not require the solicitor to take extreme pains to search out the criminal record of the defendant from all possible sources, but any sort of record that is normally or easily available to him must be produced. Several defense attorneys on the Commission commented that it is often difficult to find out from the defendant the full particulars of his criminal history, and a number of law-enforcement agencies will not provide criminal histories to defense counsel.

(5) Books, papers, documents, photographs, motion pictures, mechanical or electronic recordings, and tangible objects in the control of the State and which are:

a. Material to the preparation of the defense; or

b. Intended for use by the State as evidence; or

c. Were obtained from or belong to the defendant.

(6) Results or reports of physical or mental examinations or of tests, measurements, or experiments made in connection with the case and in the control of the State.

(7) Physical evidence, or a sample of it, available to the solicitor if the State intends to offer the evidence as an exhibit or evidence in the case, or if the State intends to introduce at trial the results of tests or experiments made in connection with the physical evidence. This provision is similar to that in present § 15-155.4 and § 15-155.5, except that it does not go as far as those sections. Those sections, which are scheduled for deletion under this proposal, also allow the defendant to interview prospective expert witnesses of the State.

The discovery provisions as introduced in the General Assembly contained a requirement for discovery of the names and addresses of witnesses the State intended to call plus their criminal records. Because witnesses may easily be subject to harassment or intimidation, a special provision was inserted, in addition to the general one set out in § 15A-908, to empower the judge to deny disclosure or take other appropriate protective measures. The whole proposal was controversial enough, though, that the General Assembly resolved the matter by deleting it.

The Commission followed the draft of the proposed amendment to Rule 16 and provided only for discovery of the State's case upon request of the defendant. The American Bar Association Standards would require the State to disclose virtually all of the information covered by this discovery Article automatically, whether requested or not. See A.B.A. Project on Standards for Criminal Justice, Standards Relating to Discovery and Procedure Before Trial, § 2.1 (1970). In certain instances, of course, the State may be under an obligation to disclose information discoverable under this Article whether there is a request or not. See Giles v. Maryland, 386 U.S. 66, 87 S. Ct. 793, 17 L. Ed. 2d 737 (1967); Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963). The Commission grappled with the question whether to attempt to codify Giles and Brady and finally decided to leave this matter to case law development. Parenthetically, it should be noted that § 15A-975 does require the State to disclose certain types of evidence if it wants to force a motion to suppress prior to trial, but there is no penalty attached to the failure to do so other than loss of this advantage.

Another issue concerned the extent to which the solicitor would be chargeable with knowledge of information in police files. The Commission finally decided not to go beyond the language copied from the proposed amendment to Rule 16, and leave further ramifications of the matter to case law. See Moore v. Illinois, 408 U.S. 786, 92 S. Ct. 2562, 33 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1972).

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-282, s. 5, effective July 13, 2001, and applicable to persons charged with crimes on or after that date, added subsection (g).

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law. All of the cases were decided prior to the 1983 amendments to this section.

The purpose of discovery under the statutes is to protect the defendant from unfair surprise by the introduction of evidence he cannot anticipate. State v. Payne, 327 N.C. 194, 394 S.E.2d 158 (1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1092, 111 S. Ct. 977, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1062 (1991).

A major purpose of the discovery procedures of Chapter 15A is to protect the defendant from unfair surprise. When the defendant does not inform the trial court of any potential unfair surprise, the defendant cannot properly contend that the trial court's failure to impose sanctions is an abuse of discretion. State v. Taylor, 332 N.C. 372, 420 S.E.2d 414 (1992).

This section was patterned after F.R. Crim. P., Rule 16, which was initially adopted in 1946 and amended several times thereafter. State v. Cunningham, 108 N.C. App. 185, 423 S.E.2d 802 (1992).

The categories of information discoverable from the State are contained in this section. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

This section and § 15A-904 must be construed jointly. State v. Waters, 308 N.C. 348, 302 S.E.2d 188 (1983).

This Section Restricted by § 15A-904(a). — State did not have a duty to provide defendant with a complete copy of the police investigatory report pursuant to this section; this section is restricted by § 15A-904(a), and therefore, defendant lacked the requisite statutory authority to request the production of the police investigatory report. State v. Lineberger, 100 N.C. App. 307, 395 S.E.2d 716 (1990).

This section, in conjunction with § 15A-904, limits the extent of disclosure of evidence by the State to the persons and things mentioned. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

Subsection (e) of this section replaced former §§ 15-155.4 and 15-155.5, which although similar to the current statute, were more liberal in that they also allowed the defendant to interview prospective expert witnesses. State v. Jones, 85 N.C. App. 56, 354 S.E.2d 251, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 173, 358 S.E.2d 61, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 969, 108 S. Ct. 465, 98 L. Ed. 2d 404 (1987).

Applicability. — The "elects" language in this statute indicates that this section only applies to willful failures to produce evidence. State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

Where a statute expressly restricts pretrial discovery, as does subsection (a) of § 15A-904, the trial court has no authority to order discovery. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

Common law recognizes no right to discovery in criminal cases. State v. Davis, 282 N.C. 107, 191 S.E.2d 664 (1972); State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1080, 96 S. Ct. 868, 47 L. Ed. 2d 91, appeal dismissed, 287 N.C. 261, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1976); State v. Spaulding, 288 N.C. 397, 219 S.E.2d 178 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

No right of discovery in criminal cases existed at common law. State v. Carter, 289 N.C. 35, 220 S.E.2d 313 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976); State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977); State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982); State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

Questions concerning discovery must be resolved by reference to statutes and due process principles, as no right to pretrial discovery existed at common law. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979).

No discovery statute requires the State "to investigate" matters sought by the defendant to be investigated. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

Defendant is not entitled to the granting of his motion for a fishing expedition. State v. Davis, 282 N.C. 107, 191 S.E.2d 664 (1972); State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

Procedure Following Request for Disclosure. — When a specific request is made at trial for disclosure of evidence in the State's possession, the judge must at a minimum, order an in camera inspection and make appropriate findings of fact, and if the judge, after the examination, rules against the defendant, the judge should order the sealed statement placed in the record for appellate review. State v. Voncannon, 49 N.C. App. 637, 272 S.E.2d 153 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 619, 276 S.E.2d 370 (1981).

Justice requires the judge to order an in camera inspection when a specific request is made at trial for disclosure of evidence in the State's possession that is obviously relevant, competent and not privileged. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Internal Policies of District Attorney's Office. — This section does not entitle defendant to information on the internal policies of the district attorney's office. State v. Rudolph, 39 N.C. App. 293, 250 S.E.2d 318, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 179, 254 S.E.2d 40 (1979).

Information on Prosecution of Repeat Offenders. — The prosecution was not required to provide the defendant with a full written description of a "career criminal" program pursued by a district attorney's office, consisting of a policy of vigorous prosecution of repeat offenders, since these documents were not material to the preparation of the defense, intended for use by the State as evidence, or obtained from the defendant. State v. Rudolph, 39 N.C. App. 293, 250 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 179, 254 S.E.2d 40 (1979).

Work-Product Not Discoverable. — Subsection (d) of this section does not alter the general rule that the work product or investigative files of the district attorney, law-enforcement agencies, and others helping to prepare the case are not open to discovery. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

The statutory provisions set out in this section do not alter the general rule that the work product or investigative files of the district attorney, law enforcement agencies, and others assisting in the preparation of a case are not open to discovery. State v. Brewer, 325 N.C. 550, 386 S.E.2d 569 (1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 951, 110 S. Ct. 2215, 109 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1990).

Internal police reports and memoranda pertaining to a criminal case are not made discoverable by this section. State v. Gillespie, 33 N.C. App. 684, 236 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

To the extent that defendant's discovery motion seeking notes taken or reports made by investigating officers which would tend to exculpate the defendant, mitigate the degree of the offense, or contradict other evidence to be presented by the State sought information beyond that which the State was required to disclose under disclose under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), it sought "work product" not subject to discovery. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Police Investigatory Work. — There is no constitutional requirement that the prosecution make a complete and detailed accounting to the defense of all police investigatory work on a case. State v. Davis, 282 N.C. 107, 191 S.E.2d 664 (1972); State v. Blue, 20 N.C. App. 386, 201 S.E.2d 548 (1974).

Statements to Police Officers. — Standing alone, subsection (d) of this section would appear to require the State to disclose at least any written statements. Such provision is, however, restricted by subsection (a) of § 15A-904. Therefore, any statements made to law-enforcement officers are expressly excluded from the discoverable evidence. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

Notes of Investigating Officer. — The trial court did not err in refusing to afford defendant access to notes carried to the witness stand by the investigating officer, where the officer never referred to the notes during his testimony and in fact never read the notes at all, and where a witness on the stand does not use or attempt to use the writings sought to be produced, even though the writings are under his control, opposing counsel cannot compel their production. State v. Jackson, 302 N.C. 101, 273 S.E.2d 666 (1981).

Criminal records of witnesses other than the defendant are not made discoverable by this section. State v. Gillespie, 33 N.C. App. 684, 236 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

Duty Not to Obstruct Interviews of Witnesses by Defense. — A prosecutor has an implicit duty not to obstruct defense attempts to conduct interviews with any witnesses; however, a reversal for this kind of professional misconduct is only warranted when it is clearly demonstrated that the prosecutor affirmatively instructed a witness not to cooperate with the defense. State v. Pinch, 306 N.C. 1, 292 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1056, 103 S. Ct. 474, 74 L. Ed. 2d 622 (1982), rehearing denied, 459 U.S. 1189, 103 S. Ct. 839, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1031 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Benson, 323 N.C. 318, 372 S.E.2d 517 (1988); State v. Robinson, 336 N.C. 78, 443 S.E.2d 306 (1994), cert. denied, 115 S. Ct. 750, 130 L. Ed. 2d 650 (1995); State v. Rouse, 339 N.C. 59, 451 S.E.2d 543 (1994), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 832, 116 S. Ct. 107, 133 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1995).

State Not Required to Introduce Writings in Precise Form Inspected by Defense. — While this section requires the State, upon proper motion, to divulge certain writings or documents, there is nothing that requires the State to offer the writings into evidence at trial in the precise form that they were in when inspected by defense counsel. State v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 319, 224 S.E.2d 250 (1976).

Open File Policy. — While the prosecutor may, in his or her discretion, proceed under an open file policy, he or she may not be forced to do so. State v. Moore, 335 N.C. 567, 440 S.E.2d 797, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 898, 115 S. Ct. 253, 130 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1994).

Refusal to Comply with Discovery Orders. — A district attorney's refusal to comply with a discovery order under this section does not automatically require the exclusion of the undisclosed evidence. A variety of sanctions is authorized by § 15A-910, and the choice of which to apply—if any—rests entirely within the discretion of the trial judge. His decision will not be reversed except for abuse of that discretion. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Sanction Within Trial Court's Discretion. — Because the trial court is not required to impose any sanctions for abuse of discovery orders, the question of what sanctions to impose, if any, is within the trial court's discretion, including whether to admit or exclude evidence not disclosed in accordance with a discovery order. State v. Weeks, 322 N.C. 152, 367 S.E.2d 895 (1988).

Sanctions for failure to comply with discovery procedures are permissive and are imposed in the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. King, 311 N.C. 603, 320 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Exclusion Not Automatically Required. — The State's failure to comply with a discovery order pursuant to this section will not automatically require the exclusion of the undisclosed evidence. State v. Gladden, 315 N.C. 398, 340 S.E.2d 673, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1986).

Trial judge did not err by overruling defendant's objection to certain testimony on the ground of failure to comply with this section, where defendant was given timely notice of the substance of the statement, and those portions of the testimony as to which notice was not given related to an explanation of why the witness came forward with the evidence. State v. Kuplen, 316 N.C. 387, 343 S.E.2d 793 (1986).

When Refusal to Grant Discovery Is Reversible Error. — A refusal to grant a pretrial motion for discovery is not reversible error unless the movant shows that evidence favorable to him was suppressed. State v. Branch, 288 N.C. 514, 220 S.E.2d 495 (1975), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 907, 97 S. Ct. 2971, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1091 (1977).

Error in Failing to Examine Withheld Records to Determine If Material Evidence Withheld. — Where state failed to inform defendant about the existence of PEN register recording calls made by defendant despite defendant's discovery motion and subsequent court order enforcing that motion until well into the trial, the trial court erred in failing to examine the records in camera to determine if material and favorable evidence had been withheld or to seal them for the inspection of the appellate court. State v. Jones, 85 N.C. App. 86, 354 S.E.2d 251, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 173, 358 S.E.2d 61, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 969, 108 S. Ct. 465, 98 L. Ed. 2d 404 (1987).

No Duty to Provide Discovery. — The State has no statutory duty to provide discovery absent a request from defendant. State v. Cummings, 346 N.C. 291, 488 S.E.2d 550 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1092, 118 S. Ct. 886, 139 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1998).

Waiver of Discovery. — The failure to seek discovery pursuant to the terms of § 15A-902 and this section constitutes a waiver of the right to discovery pursuant to those statutes. State v. Hoskins, 36 N.C. App. 92, 242 S.E.2d 900, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 469, 246 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Defendants waived their statutory right to have the trial court order the prosecutor to permit discovery where defendants did not argue or make any other showing in support of their discovery motion at the hearing before the trial judge, no objection was made upon his conclusion that the motion had been abandoned, and the judge never ruled on the motion. State v. Jones, 295 N.C. 345, 245 S.E.2d 711 (1978).

Where defendant "slept on his rights" the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a continuance. State v. Elam, 19 N.C. App. 451, 199 S.E.2d 45, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 256, 200 S.E.2d 656 (1973).

Defendant could not contend he was deprived of his right to test evidence where he made no attempt to do so during the many months preceding the trial. State v. Graham, 118 N.C. App. 231, 454 S.E.2d 878 (1995).

Where defendant did not move for discovery, relying on what he considered to be an open file policy of the district attorney, he could not complain that he did not know in advance of trial of the statement of a certain witness which had not been reduced to writing. State v. Abbott, 320 N.C. 475, 358 S.E.2d 365 (1987).

Preservation of Discovery Issue for Appeal. — While this section requires the trial judge on proper motion to order the prosecutor to permit certain kinds of discovery, the right must be asserted and the issue raised before the trial court. Further, the issue must be passed upon by the trial court in order for the right to be asserted in the appellate courts. State v. Jones, 295 N.C. 345, 245 S.E.2d 711 (1978).

Compliance with Agreement Entered into in Other District. — The District Attorney in one district may not be compelled to comply with an agreement pertaining to discovery entered into by the District Attorney in another district once venue has been changed in the case. State v. Moore, 335 N.C. 567, 440 S.E.2d 797, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 898, 115 S. Ct. 253, 130 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1994).

The "elects" language in the statute indicates that this section only applies to willful failures to produce evidence. State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

II. STATEMENT OF DEFENDANT.

Duty of State to Disclose. — Subdivision (a)(2) of this section requires the State to disclose to the defendant the substance of any relevant statement made by the defendant which is in the possession of the State and the existence of which is known to the prosecutor. State v. Bearthes, 329 N.C. 149, 405 S.E.2d 170 (1991).

"Substance" Requirement of Subdivision (a)(2) Met. — Delivery of a synopsis of a defendant's oral statements in response to discovery requests complies with the "substance" requirement of subdivision (a)(2); because detective did not testify that defendant made a statement in response to the reading of his rights at the top of the juvenile rights and waiver of rights form, the State could not have provided a recorded statement by the defendant in response to the reading of these rights. State v. Johnson, 136 N.C. App. 683, 525 S.E.2d 830 (2000).

Duty of State to Disclose. — Where the trial court allowed the defendant, accused of murdering her grandmother in a nursing home, to recall witnesses after the prosecutor used her undisclosed statement, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in not declaring a mistrial. State v. Smith, 135 N.C. App. 649, 522 S.E.2d 321 (1999).

Nothing in this section requires the prosecutor to disclose the name of the individual to whom the defendant has made a statement regarding a murder. State v. Strickland, 346 N.C. 443, 488 S.E.2d 194 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1078, 118 S. Ct. 858, 139 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1998).

As used in subdivision (a)(2), "substance" means essence; the material or essential part of a thing, as distinguished from form; that which is essential. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Facts and Circumstances Surrounding Statement. — Nothing in this section entitles a defendant to have the trial court order the prosecutor to provide him with a description of the facts and circumstances surrounding his statements. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Where the State complied with subsection (a)(2) of this section by disclosing that portion of state's witness' statement which recited defendant's own words from a jailhouse conversation, defendant was not entitled to a description of the facts and circumstances surrounding these statements. State v. Harris, 323 N.C. 112, 371 S.E.2d 689 (1988).

Subsection (b) of this section is limited to joint trials of codefendants. State v. Brooks, 83 N.C. App. 179, 349 S.E.2d 630 (1986).

Burden Is on Defendant to Request Discovery. — Subdivision (a)(2) of this section makes it clear that the burden is on defendant to request discovery in writing prior to a motion to compel discovery. State v. Lang, 46 N.C. App. 138, 264 S.E.2d 821, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 508, 272 S.E.2d 123 (1980).

A defendant has the burden of making a written request for voluntary discovery and making a motion to compel discovery where voluntary discovery does not occur, before the State's duty arises to produce oral statements made by defendant. State v. Keaton, 61 N.C. App. 279, 300 S.E.2d 471, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 463, 307 S.E.2d 369 (1983).

Defendant's Recorded Statement. — Defendant was not entitled, under this section, to review tape recorded interviews of himself; he had previously been provided with a written transcript of the tapes and that transcript was a "substantially verbatim" copy of the recording. State v. Ferguson, 140 N.C. App. 699, 538 S.E.2d 217 (2000).

When defendant's statement is oral rather than recorded, the statute requires only that the substance of that statement be provided to a defendant. State v. Weeks, 322 N.C. 152, 367 S.E.2d 895 (1988).

Written and Oral Statements. — Disclosure by the State held sufficient where the State informed the defendant that his written statement was substantially similar to his oral statement, which was summarized, even though the former referred to the murder weapon as a "stick," and the latter referred to the weapon as a "board." State v. Hipps, 348 N.C. 377, 501 S.E.2d 625 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1180, 119 S. Ct. 1119, 143 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1999).

Pretrial Statement. — The trial court acted within its discretion in refusing to impose sanctions against the State for introducing the defendant's pretrial statement, even though he was not provided with the tape recorded version of the statement, where the defendant was furnished the substance of the defendant's statement by way of a copy of the officer's written report months before trial the defense counsel became aware of the existence of the tape recording three days before the introduction of the written report, and on the same date, defense counsel was given an opportunity to listen to the tape, but she neither had the tape recording analyzed nor scheduled a future date upon which to have it analyzed, nor did the defense counsel call the officer, who was present throughout the interview, in an attempt to clarify any inaudible portions of the recording. State v. Herring, 322 N.C. 733, 370 S.E.2d 363 (1988).

Use of Statement After Defendant Raised Matter. — In a trial for sexual abuse of a child, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by allowing the State to introduce defendant's statements to the Department of Social Services (DSS) about his prior acts of sexual abuse of a different child in an unrelated case where defendant "opened the door" to the matter by cross-examining the DSS witness about DSS files containing the statement. Although the State did not reveal the statement in response to defendant's motion under this section, neither did the State attempt to use the statement prior to defendant's questions of the DSS witness. State v. Moore, 103 N.C. App. 87, 404 S.E.2d 695 (1991).

Organization of Statements. — The prosecutor adequately provided the defendant's oral statements where the prosecutor provided the substance of both inculpatory and exculpatory statements, the names of the witnesses and whether each witness was with law enforcement, and the estimated time frame of each statement. State v. Murillo, 349 N.C. 573, 509 S.E.2d 752 (1998), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 838, 120 S. Ct. 103, 145 L. Ed. 2d 87 (1999).

III. STATEMENT OF CODEFENDANT.

Separate Trials. — Where there is no joint trial, defendant has no right under subsection (b) of this section to discovery statements made by a codefendant. State v. Moore, 301 N.C. 262, 271 S.E.2d 242 (1980), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ramey, 318 N.C. 457, 349 S.E.2d 566 (1986); State v. Lake, 305 N.C. 143, 286 S.E.2d 541 (1982).

Defendant Not Entitled to Statement of Accomplice Who Was State Witness. — Defendants were not entitled to receive a written copy of the oral statement made by a State witness, an admitted accomplice, to an S.B.I. agent or a list of the State's witnesses. State v. Abernathy, 295 N.C. 147, 244 S.E.2d 373 (1978).

IV. STATEMENTS OF WITNESSES.

The term "statement," as used in subdivision (f)(2) of this section, includes statements signed or otherwise adopted by the witness and substantially verbatim recitals or oral statements which are contemporaneously recorded. State v. Vandiver, 321 N.C. 570, 364 S.E.2d 373 (1988).

Statements Before Grand Jury. — Defendant was not prejudiced by the actions of the trial judge in providing defendant with excerpts from grand jury testimony given by witnesses rather than with all of the witnesses' statements, as defendant had requested. State v. Baker, 112 N.C. App. 410, 435 S.E.2d 812 (1993), cert. denied, 335 N.C. 561, 441 S.E.2d 123 (1994).

Officer's field report, which contained only a narrative of the offense and did not attribute oral statements to any of the three witnesses mentioned therein, did not contain a witness' prior "statement" for purposes of this section. State v. Vandiver, 321 N.C. 570, 364 S.E.2d 373 (1988).

Where State did not know of statements of certain witnesses within time frame, there was no abuse of discretion in trial court's admitting the statements, since it could have determined that the State's disclosure of these statements was within a reasonable time. State v. Weeks, 322 N.C. 152, 367 S.E.2d 895 (1988).

No Violation of Defendant's Rights. — Where the trial court followed the requirements of subdivision (f)(1) in making the witnesses' statements available to the defense after the witnesses had testified on direct, and where the court afforded defense counsel sufficient time to examine and study the statements and to prepare for cross-examination, there was no constitutional violation of defendant's rights. State v. Batts, 93 N.C. App. 404, 378 S.E.2d 211 (1989).

Sanctions on Abuse of Discretion. — Court abused its discretion for dismissing murder case under § 15A-910 where there was no evidence that witness made a statement as defined in this section. State v. Shedd, 117 N.C. App. 122, 450 S.E.2d 13 (1994).

Substance of Statement Sufficient. —

Where the State divulged the "substance" of a defendant's oral statement, the defendant was not entitled to a description of the facts and circumstances surrounding the statements. State v. Workman, 344 N.C. 482, 476 S.E.2d 301 (1996).

The State complied with the requirements of this section by providing defendant with the substance of witness' statement; nothing in the discovery statute or North Carolina Rules of Evidence Rule 404(b) obligated the State to provide defendant with witness' written statement prior to trial. State v. Ocasio, 344 N.C. 568, 476 S.E.2d 281 (1996).

Witnesses' Criminal Histories Undiscoverable. — Where defendant did not allege that any witness had a significant criminal record or that the State suppressed impeaching information concerning any witness, defendant did not have the right to discover criminal histories of witnesses in case of first and second degree murder against him, and State did not violate defendant's due process rights. State v. Kilpatrick, 343 N.C. 466, 471 S.E.2d 624 (1996).

Lost Statements. — The record did not establish that the State willfully "elected" not to comply with order in violation of subsection (f) where the State diligently and repeatedly attempted to locate witness' written statement in its files, but the statement was simply lost. State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

Testimony Property Allowed. — Defendants contention that the trial court erred, by allowing testimony that defendant offered another prisoner $18,000 and a gold chain to plead guilty to the charges that defendant faced, was without merit. State v. Caporasso, 128 N.C. App. 236, 495 S.E.2d 157 (1998), appeal dismissed, 347 N.C. 674, 500 S.E.2d 91 (1998).

V. STATE WITNESSES.

No Right to List of State Witnesses. — Neither this section nor common law requires the State to furnish a defendant with the names and addresses of all the witnesses the State intends to call. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

No right to discover the names and addresses of State's witnesses exists by statute in this State. Neither former § 15-155.4 nor this section requires the State to furnish the accused with a list of witnesses who are to testify against him. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977); State v. Harden, 42 N.C. App. 677, 257 S.E.2d 635 (1979).

In the absence of a statute requiring the State to furnish it, the defendant in a criminal case is not entitled to a list of the State's witnesses who are to testify against him. State v. Spaulding, 288 N.C. 397, 219 S.E.2d 178 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976); State v. Moore, 301 N.C. 262, 271 S.E.2d 242 (1980), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ramey, 318 N.C. 457, 349 S.E.2d 566 (1986).

Absent a statutory requirement, the defendant in a criminal case is not entitled to a list of witnesses who are to testify against him, and neither former § 15-155.4 nor this section requires this. State v. Carter, 289 N.C. 35, 220 S.E.2d 313 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

North Carolina law does not grant defendant the right to discover the criminal record of a State's witness. This right did not exist at common law and this section does not grant the defendant the right to discover the names, addresses, or criminal records of the State's witnesses. State v. Ford, 297 N.C. 144, 254 S.E.2d 14 (1979).

This section affords an accused no right to discover the names and addresses of the State's witnesses and does not require the State to furnish the accused a list of the witnesses who will be called to testify against him. State v. Sledge, 297 N.C. 227, 254 S.E.2d 579 (1979); State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

Defendant in a criminal case is not entitled to a list of the State's witnesses who are to testify against him. State v. Rinck, 303 N.C. 551, 280 S.E.2d 912 (1981).

A defendant is not entitled to a list of the State's witnesses. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

A provision requiring disclosure to a defendant of the names and addresses of witnesses to be called by the State was omitted from Art. 48 because the witnesses may be subject to harassment or intimidation. State v. Mills, 307 N.C. 504, 299 S.E.2d 203 (1983).

This section and § 15A-904 do not require the State to disclose its witnesses' statements prior to trial. State v. Williams, 308 N.C. 339, 302 S.E.2d 441 (1983).

Defendant had no right to a list of the State's witnesses, and defendant did not show specific prejudice so as to constitute an abuse of discretion by the trial court in denying his request. State v. Godwin, 336 N.C. 499, 444 S.E.2d 206 (1994).

Legislature Expressly Rejected Such Right. — The legislature has expressly rejected a proposal to require the State to disclose even the names and addresses of the witnesses it intends to call and also rejected a proposal to require the production of a proposed witness's criminal record. State v. Chappel, 36 N.C. App. 608, 244 S.E.2d 483, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 553, 248 S.E.2d 731 (1978).

The legislature has expressly refused to adopt a requirement that the State furnish the accused with the names of its witnesses. State v. Harris, 323 N.C. 112, 371 S.E.2d 689 (1988).

And Trial Judges Should Not Encourage It. — It was never the intention of the General Assembly when it enacted this Article to require the district attorney to furnish the names and addresses of witnesses the State intended to call. It follows that trial judges should not encourage, by court order, what the legislature specifically rejected during consideration of the legislation. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

State has no initial duty to disclose the names of witnesses. State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

Procedure Where State Calls Witness Not on List Furnished by Order of Court. — Where the State has substantially complied with the order of the court to furnish the names and addresses of the State's witnesses and where such a list has been furnished and the State subsequently seeks to call a witness not on that list, the court will look to see whether the district attorney acted in bad faith, and whether the defendant was prejudiced thereby. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

Identity of Confidential Informant. — Generally the State has the privilege of withholding a confidential informant's identity from a defendant, but there are exceptions. State v. Jackson, 103 N.C. App. 239, 405 S.E.2d 354 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 114, 413 S.E.2d 798 (1992).

Test for Disclosure of Informant's Identity. — Roviaro v. United States, 353 U.S. 53, 77 S. Ct. 623, 1 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1957), sets forth the test to be applied when the disclosure of an informant's identity is requested. The trial court must balance the government's need to protect an informant's identity (to promote disclosure of crimes) with the defendant's right to present his case. State v. Jackson, 103 N.C. App. 239, 405 S.E.2d 354 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 114, 413 S.E.2d 798 (1992).

Refusal to Compel Disclosure of Informant's Identity Upheld. — Where defendant offered no defense on the merits, so there was no contradiction between his evidence and the State's evidence for informant's testimony to clarify, and no testimony by the informant was admitted at trial (as the testimony of three law enforcement officers established defendant's guilt), and the State asserted that disclosure of the informant's identity would jeopardize pending investigations, it was not error to deny the defendant's motion to compel disclosure of the informant's identity. State v. Jackson, 103 N.C. App. 239, 405 S.E.2d 354 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 114, 413 S.E.2d 798 (1992).

Interviews of State Witnesses. — Nothing in the statutory discovery provisions would require the State to compel its witnesses to submit to any form of interview or questioning by the defense prior to trial; the State does not even have to afford the defense pretrial access to a list of its potential witnesses or copies of any statements they may have made. State v. Pinch, 306 N.C. 1, 292 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1056, 103 S. Ct. 474, 74 L. Ed. 2d 622 (1982), rehearing denied, 459 U.S. 1189, 103 S. Ct. 839, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1031 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Benson, 323 N.C. 318, 372 S.E.2d 517 (1988); State v. Robinson, 336 N.C. 78, 443 S.E.2d 306 (1994), cert. denied, 115 S. Ct. 750, 130 L. Ed. 2d 650 (1995); State v. Rouse, 339 N.C. 59, 451 S.E.2d 543 (1994), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 832, 116 S. Ct. 107, 133 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1995).

Nothing in this Article compels State witnesses to subject themselves to questioning by the defense before trial. State v. Phillips, 328 N.C. 1, 399 S.E.2d 293, cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1208, 111 S. Ct. 2804, 115 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1991).

Request for Names of Persons Interviewed or Having Information. — Requests by defendant to have the prosecutor ordered to disclose the "names of all persons known by the State to have information regarding the above-captioned matter and/or all persons interviewed regarding the matter" amounted to a request for a list of the state's witnesses and others having knowledge of the cases against the defendant; such information simply is not discoverable. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

Pathologist's Testimony. — Where defendant contended it was error to allow a pathologist to testify that a knife which had belonged to the defendant was consistent with the size and shape of the wounds inflicted on the victim and the pathologist did not do any particular tests on the knife, but simply opened it, looked at the blade, and measured it, this was not the type of test whose result must be given to the defendant pursuant to subsection (e). This testimony had some probative value and it was not error to admit it. State v. Moseley, 336 N.C. 710, 445 S.E.2d 906 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1120, 115 S. Ct. 923, 130 L. Ed. 2d 802 (1995).

Testimony Regarding Overheard Telephone Conversation Admissable. — Where the State immediately relayed the substance of detective's statement regarding overheard telephone conversation, wherein defendant admitted guilt to a third party, to the defense upon learning of it, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in refusing the requested sanctions and no error in the admission of the testimony; the trial court did grant the defendant a continuance from Thursday until Monday to allow the defense time to prepare for testimony concerning the telephone conversation. State v. Jackson, 340 N.C. 301, 457 S.E.2d 862 (1995).

Changes in police officers' report omitting racial phraseology and substituting acceptable terminology did not impermissibly violate this section. State v. Swann, 115 N.C. App. 92, 443 S.E.2d 740 (1994).

Defendant was not entitled to pretrial discovery of victim's statements. State v. Alston, 81 N.C. App. 459, 344 S.E.2d 339 (1986).

Relevancy for impeachment purposes of a prior statement of a material State's witness is obvious. This State's discovery procedures, unlike the federal statute, do not automatically entitle the defendant to such statements at trial. Instead, since realistically a defendant cannot know if a statement of a material State's witness covering the matters testified to at trial would be material and favorable to his defense, the judge is required to, at a minimum, order an in camera inspection and make appropriate findings of fact. As an additional measure, if the judge, after the in camera examination, rules against the defendant on his motion, the judge should order the sealed statement placed in the record for appellate review. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Impeachment value in the victim's statements goes to the weight of the victim's identification of the defendant rather than to its admissibility. State v. Jean, 310 N.C. 157, 311 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

Pretrial Statement Which Would Have Revealed Perjury. — Where the prosecution failed to disclose to the defendants the corrected pretrial statement of the State's most crucial witness, whose credibility was the most basic issue in the case, the failure to disclose it constituted a violation of the defendants' due process rights and invalidated their convictions, since the amended statement would have revealed the witness' perjury and the production of the amended statement was requested at least six times in specific terms. Chavis v. North Carolina, 637 F.2d 213 (4th Cir. 1980).

Where witness had not made a specific statement prior to his testimony, the State could not reasonably have been expected to relate the statement to defendant as it had no knowledge of such. State v. Godwin, 336 N.C. 499, 444 S.E.2d 206 (1994).

Examination by Witness Made for First Time at Trial. — While this section requires the State to allow defendant access to any results, reports of physical or mental examinations, tests, measurements or experiments made in connection with the case, detective called as expert on fingerprint analysis did not conduct any tests in preparation for this trial and did not testify regarding any test results or examinations specific to the case; he formulated his opinion as to the cellophane bag based on an examination made for the first time at trial and was therefore not subject to discovery requirements. State v. Lane, 119 N.C. App. 197, 458 S.E.2d 19 (1995).

Criminal Records of State Witnesses. — This section nowhere provides for discovery of the criminal records of the State's witnesses. Indeed, a provision authorizing the discovery of such material was included in the draft of the original bill and was subsequently deleted. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Copies of prior criminal records of any state witness or prospective witness, and any additional information which could reflect on the credibility of such witnesses, is not subject to discovery. State v. Bruce, 315 N.C. 273, 337 S.E.2d 510 (1985).

This section does not grant the defendant the right to discover the names and addresses, let alone the criminal records, of the State's witnesses. State v. Wingard, 317 N.C. 590, 346 S.E.2d 638 (1986).

Where no request was made for a copy of defendant's criminal record, failure to make such a request constitutes a waiver by defendant of his right to discovery of his record under subsection (c). State v. Payne, 337 N.C. 505, 448 S.E.2d 93 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1038, 115 S. Ct. 1405, 131 L. Ed. 2d 292 (1995).

Parole Record of State Witness. — Neither this statute nor the common law gives a defendant the right to discover the parole record of a witness for the state. State v. Mandina, 91 N.C. App. 686, 373 S.E.2d 155 (1988).

No Authority to Order Disclosure of State Witnesses or Persons Interrogated. — The trial court does not have the authority to order the state to disclose to defendant either the names of the state's witnesses or the statements of all persons interrogated or interviewed during the investigation. State v. McLaughlin, 323 N.C. 68, 372 S.E.2d 49 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 1463, 108 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990).

No Requirement to Make Available State Investigation Files, Agents, or Criminal Records. — No statutory provision or constitutional principle requires the trial court to order the state to make available to a defendant all of its investigative files relating to his case or the names of all agents who participated in the investigation, or to disclose the criminal records of the state's witnesses. State v. McLaughlin, 323 N.C. 68, 372 S.E.2d 49 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 1463, 108 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990).

VI. DOCUMENTS, TANGIBLE OBJECTS, AND REPORTS.

Meaning of "Within the Possession, Custody, or Control of the State". — "Within the possession, custody, or control of the State" as used in subsections (d) and (e) of this section means within the possession, custody or control of the prosecutor or those working in conjunction with him and his office. State v. Crews, 296 N.C. 607, 252 S.E.2d 745 (1979).

There is no statute that grants a defendant in a criminal trial access as of right to any documents unless they are within the possession, custody or control of the State, which means within the prosecutor's possession, custody or control. State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

Subpoena Duces Tecum. — Documents not subject to this section may still be subject to a subpoena duces tecum. State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

Denial of Discovery Held Harmless Error. — The trial court's denial of the defendant's request for information and data related to testing performed by the SBI and for copies of the State's photographs was harmless error where the defendant could point to nothing in the record to support his assertion that the State failed to comply with the statute vis-a-vis the photographs and where the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming, including the evidence indicating the presence of gasoline in the victim's home. State v. McKeithan, 140 N.C. App. 422, 537 S.E.2d 526 (2000).

Independent Chemical Analysis of Seized Substances. — Due process requires that defendants have the opportunity to have an independent chemical analysis performed upon seized substances. State v. Jones, 85 N.C. App. 56, 354 S.E.2d 251, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 173, 358 S.E.2d 61, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 969, 108 S. Ct. 465, 98 L. Ed. 2d 404 (1987), holding that the trial court's refusal to allow defendants further access to drugs did not violate that due process requirement.

A defendant enjoys a concomitant statutory right to inspect the crime scene and to independently analyze seized substances. State v. Cunningham, 108 N.C. App. 185, 423 S.E.2d 802 (1992).

Prior Recorded Statement of State Witness. — Standing alone, subsection (d) of this section would allow discovery of a prior recorded statement of a State witness. On its face, subsection (d) would permit the discovery of any recorded or written statement that is material to the preparation of the defense. However, the statutory scheme must be construed in its entirety. The very next section, § 15A-904, limits this section and is dispositive of the issue of prosecution witnesses' statements. Section 15A-904(a) provides that production of statements made by witnesses or prospective witnesses of the State to anyone acting on behalf of the State is not required. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

A trial judge's pretrial discovery order contemplating pretrial discovery by a defendant of a prosecution witness's prior statements would exceed the judge's authority. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Applicability of Subsection (d) Where Documents Used Only in Cross-Examination. — The fact that the State did not offer the documents in question into evidence but merely used them on cross-examination does not mean that it was not error under subsection (d) of this section for the State to fail to disclose where disclosure of the documents in the possession of the State and which were intended to be used by the State in any manner was also essential to the preparation of defendant's defense. State v. Hill, 45 N.C. App. 136, 263 S.E.2d 14, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 377, 267 S.E.2d 680 (1980).

Section does not require preservation of all physical evidence. State v. Anderson, 57 N.C. App. 602, 292 S.E.2d 163, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 559, 294 S.E.2d 372 (1982).

Destruction of Evidence for Lack of Storage Facilities. — In prosecution under § 90-95, destruction of 2,700 pounds of marijuana by State for lack of storage facilities did not violate defendant's discovery rights under subsection (e) of this section where the State made random samples, photographs and a copy of the laboratory report of the State Bureau of Investigation available to defendants. State v. Anderson, 57 N.C. App. 602, 292 S.E.2d 163, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 559, 294 S.E.2d 372 (1982).

"Tangible objects" does not include such objects as an apartment. As used in this statute, that term refers only to tangible, movable objects, and not to buildings or rooms. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Bill of Sale and Odometer Statement. — The court did not err in allowing the State to introduce a document to show that defendant owned car allegedly used in bank robbery, the contents of which had been suppressed by a prior order, where before the trial started the bill of sale and the odometer statement were not within the possession, custody, or control of the State, but when the car dealer arrived in court with the documents they were promptly made available to defendants. Since defendants had no right to learn ahead of time, by discovery, who would testify against them and the substance of their testimony, § 15A-907 was not violated. State v. Alston, 80 N.C. App. 540, 342 S.E.2d 573, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 707, 347 S.E.2d 441 (1986).

Trial judge would have discretionary power to permit second physical examination of alleged sexual-abuse victim if defendant showed court that examination would be probative, that it was necessary to defendant's preparation of his defense, and if the victim or the victim's guardian consented to examination. State v. Hewett, 93 N.C. App. 1, 376 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to sanction the State for failure to disclose the results of footprint comparisons, where when the State offered footprint comparison evidence, the defendant did not object or request sanctions against the State. State v. Herring, 322 N.C. 733, 370 S.E.2d 363 (1988).

Refusal to Have Children Examined by Second Expert Held Proper. — In child abuse case where defendant argued that children's bodies are physical evidence susceptible to objective tests and examinations like any other physical evidence which is to be used at trial, trial judge did not err in his refusal to grant defendant opportunity to have children examined by a second expert since defendant did not make credible showing to trial judge that additional examinations he requested would have been probative. State v. Hewett, 93 N.C. App. 1, 376 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

Identification Procedure Held Not Experiment. — In a prosecution for murder, a procedure in which a witness for the State identified defendant's van as being the vehicle which she had seen near the crime scene did not constitute an experiment; therefore, testimony concerning the van identification was not rendered inadmissible because of the State's failure to comply with established procedures governing the admission into evidence of experiments or because the prosecutor failed to inform defense counsel of the results of the identification procedure pursuant to subsection (e) of this section. State v. Silhan, 302 N.C. 223, 275 S.E.2d 450 (1981), overruled in part by State v. Sanderson, 346 N.C. 669, 488 S.E.2d 133, State v. Adams, 347 N.C. 48, 490 S.E.2d 220 (1997).

Letter Written by Defendant to Victim's Mother — In prosecution for first degree rape, court properly permitted testimony regarding a letter from defendant to victim's mother, and the State did not violate subdivision (a)(1) of this section when it failed to produce this letter, since it was never in the State's possession and defendant failed to show that the original was destroyed in bad faith, as required by § 8C-1, Rule 1004. State v. Jarrell, 133 N.C. App. 264, 515 S.E.2d 247 (1999).

Photographs of Defendant Taken by Officer in Charge. — Despite prosecutor's personal ignorance of their existence, photographs of defendant showing scratches on his hands, arms and body, which had been taken at the direction of the officer in charge of the investigation a couple of days after defendant's arrest, were nevertheless in the State's "possession, custody or control" within the meaning of this section at the time of defendant's discovery request. State v. Pigot, 320 N.C. 96, 357 S.E.2d 631 (1987).

Subsection (d) of this section does not require the State to furnish defendant copies of photographs. State v. James, 321 N.C. 676, 365 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

Entitlement to Pretrial Discovery of Laboratory Tests. — Like F.R. Crim. P., Rule 16(a)(1)(D), subsection (e) of this section must be construed as entitling a criminal defendant to pretrial discovery of not only conclusory laboratory reports, but also of any tests performed or procedures utilized by chemists to reach such conclusions. However, unlike the federal rule, no requirement exists under this section that such information be material to the preparation of the defense or intended for use by the State in its case in chief. State v. Cunningham, 108 N.C. App. 185, 423 S.E.2d 802 (1992).

Trial court did not err in admitting slides depicting the medical examination of victim, since State was unaware of existence of slides and defendant viewed them prior to conclusion of evidence. State v. Jarrell, 133 N.C. App. 264, 515 S.E.2d 247 (1999).

Defendant was entitled to pretrial discovery of chemist's laboratory form indicating the various tests performed on the substance at issue, the results thereof, and the graph of the infrared scan, as the information sought by defendant was discoverable pursuant to subsection (e) of this section and the North Carolina Constitution. State v. Cunningham, 108 N.C. App. 185, 423 S.E.2d 802 (1992).

Recess to Allow Inspection by Defendant Proper After Failure to Comply with Subsection (e). — Even if it is assumed that the State failed to comply with subsection (e) of this section in failing to notify defense counsel of tests performed upon the deceased's bedcovers and a bullet removed from her body until three days before trial, the trial court properly acted within its discretion in refusing to suppress evidence of the tests and in ordering a recess to permit defendant to examine the evidence and question the State's witnesses and offering to continue the recess to allow defendant to locate a ballistics expert, especially since the district attorney notified defendant of the tests as soon as he became aware of them. State v. McCoy, 303 N.C. 1, 277 S.E.2d 515 (1981).

Where photographs were not available to defendant before trial, even though defendant filed a pre-trial motion for discovery requesting a listing and description of any photographs within the State's possession which pertained to defendant's alleged crime, but the photographs were made available to defendant before they were introduced into evidence, and defendant did not request that the court allow her additional time to examine these photographs after she had obtained access to them and did not allege that the prosecuting attorney acted in bad faith, trial court did not err in admitting the photographs as evidence. State v. Drewyore, 95 N.C. App. 283, 382 S.E.2d 825 (1989).

Currency, Serial Number List And Photocopy Used to Identify the Currency. — The State's failure to inform the defendant of the existence of, and its failure to provide him with, copies of the currency obtained from the defendant or the serial number list and photocopy used to identify the currency and to charge the defendant with the drug offenses was not condoned where the State had destroyed the photocopies and serial number list and recirculated the money for other drug buys. However, the defendant did not show substantial and irreparable prejudice to his case due to the overwhelming evidence on the charges stemming from one of the drug buys, including a recording of the drug buy obtained from the wire-tapped informant, testimony of the informant, surveillance of the area by officers, and seizure of defendant just after the transaction, when a substantial amount of cocaine was found on his person. State v. Manning, 139 N.C. App. 454, 534 S.E.2d 219 (2000), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 353 N.C. 273, 546 S.E.2d 385 (2000), aff'd, 353 N.C. 449, 545 S.E.2d 211 (2001).

And Were Erroneously Admitted. — The trial court's denial of defendant's motion for mistrial after the State erroneously admitted a prior arrest photograph which was not disclosed during discovery, despite a proper discovery request by defendant pursuant to this section, did not result in substantial or irreparable prejudice to defendant's case where no evidence suggested that the State's improper admission was intentional, or that it admitted the photograph in an attempt to improperly suggest that the defendant had been previously arrested, where the State's focus in admitting the photograph was the absence of scratches or bruises on defendant's body; and where the trial judge withdrew the evidence and provided a curative instruction for the jury to strike the photograph from their minds and give it no consideration. State v. Allen, 141 N.C. App. 610, 541 S.E.2d 490 (2000), cert. denied, 353 N.C. 382, 547 S.E.2d 816 (2001).

Alcohol Screening Test. — The State violated discovery rules in failing to provide defendant with the results of his alcohol screening test, which the State sought to admit into evidence in the defendant's prosecution for driving while his license was revoked. State v. Bartlett, 130 N.C. App. 79, 502 S.E.2d 53 (1998).

A polygraph does not fall within the category of "physical or mental examinations" contemplated under subsection (e) of this section. State v. Brewington, 352 N.C. 489, 532 S.E.2d 496 (2000), cert denied, 531 U.S. 1165, 121 S. Ct. 1126, 148 L. Ed. 2d 992 (2001).

No Blood Samples Available for Defendant. — Where all blood taken from automobile to be tested by the State was consumed in conducting the test so that there was no blood available to furnish to the defendant for testing, the court did not err in admitting the results of State's tests absent any evidence of bad faith on the part of the State. State v. Barnes, 333 N.C. 666, 430 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 946, 114 S. Ct. 387, 126 L. Ed. 2d 336 (1993).

Denial of defendant's pretrial motion for discovery of victim police officer's personnel files did not violate this section. Although the defendant argued the files might have revealed prior acts of lethal force which might have impacted the jury on the issue of whether he had a reasonable belief that his brother was the victim of excessive force by the law enforcement officers, the list of discoverable items in the statute did not include victims' personnel files and the personnel files were not in the prosecutor's possession, custody, or control. State v. Golphin, 352 N.C. 364, 533 S.E.2d 168 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1379, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1380, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001).

Parole Records Not In Prosecutor's Custody. — The court did not order the State to provide defendant's probation and parole records under subsection (d) of this section because these records were not in the "possession, custody or control" of the prosecutor or those working in conjunction with him or his office. State v. Clark, 128 N.C. App. 87, 493 S.E.2d 770 (1997), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 285, 501 S.E.2d 913 (1998).

Written Report Prepared During Proceeding. — The trial court did not show partiality to the State when it required the state's expert witness to prepare a written report during the sentencing proceeding of a capital murder trial, although the report was already supposed to have been prepared, to provide the defendant with a copy of the report, and by postponing the witness' testimony one day so that defendant could prepare. State v. Fleming, 350 N.C. 109, 512 S.E.2d 720 (1999), cert.

denied, 528 U.S. 941, 120 S. Ct. 351, 145 L. Ed. 2d 274 (1999).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Scope of Subsection (a). — The requirement in subsection (a) of this section that the State furnish to the defense copies of statements of the defendant which the State intends to offer at trial does not extend to remarks or conversation by the defendant to or in the presence of witnesses who are subsequently interviewed by persons acting on behalf of the State. Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Anthony Brannon, 45 N.C.A.G. 60 (1975), decided prior to 1983 amendment.

§ 15A-904. Disclosure of evidence by the State — Certain reports not subject to disclosure.

(a) Except as provided in G.S. 15A-903(a), (b), (c) and (e), this Article does not require the production of reports, memoranda, or other internal documents made by the prosecutor, law-enforcement officers, or other persons acting on behalf of the State in connection with the investigation or prosecution of the case, or of statements made by witnesses or prospective witnesses of the State to anyone acting on behalf of the State.

(b) Nothing in this section prohibits a prosecutor from making voluntary disclosures in the interest of justice. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is included to emphasize the general rule that the work product or investigative files of the solicitor, law-enforcement agencies, and others helping prepare the case are not open to discovery. Subsection (b) is added to indicate that a solicitor in his discretion may make fuller disclosure than is required if he believes this would assist in plea negotiations, otherwise speed the disposition of the case, or be in the interests of justice.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. State Witnesses.
III. Attorney's Work Product.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section 15A-903 and this section must be construed jointly. State v. Waters, 308 N.C. 348, 302 S.E.2d 188 (1983).

Section Limits § 15A-903. — Standing alone, subsection (d) of § 15A-903 would appear to require the State to disclose at least any written statements. Such provision is, however, restricted by subsection (a) of this section. Therefore, any statements made to law-enforcement officers are expressly excluded from the discoverable evidence. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

Section 15A-903 in conjunction with this section limits the extent of disclosure of evidence by the State to the persons and things mentioned. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

Section 15A-903 and this section do not require the State to disclose its witnesses' statements prior to trial. State v. Williams, 308 N.C. 339, 302 S.E.2d 441 (1983).

State did not have a duty to provide defendant with a complete copy of the police investigatory report pursuant to § 15A-903; the above-mentioned section is restricted by subsection (a), and therefore, defendant lacked the requisite statutory authority to request the production of the police investigatory report.

State v. Lineberger, 100 N.C. App. 307, 395 S.E.2d 716 (1990).

Trial Court Has No Authority to Order Discovery Contrary to Section. — Where a statute expressly restricts pretrial discovery, as does subsection (a) of this section, the trial court has no authority to order discovery. This holding is in accordance with the federal courts' interpretation of their analogous provisions found in Fed. R. Crim. P. 16, and the Jencks Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3500. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977); State v. Crandell, 322 N.C. 487, 369 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

A trial judge's pretrial discovery order contemplating pretrial discovery by a defendant of a prosecution witness's prior statements would exceed the judge's authority. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Where a statute expressly restricts pretrial discovery, as does subsection (a) of this section, the trial court has no authority to order discovery. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

Internal police reports and memoranda prepared by law-enforcement officers are not made discoverable by this section. State v. Brewer, 325 N.C. 550, 386 S.E.2d 569 (1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 951, 110 S. Ct. 2215, 109 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1990).

Investigative Files of Those Preparing State's Case. — The investigative files of the district attorney, law enforcement agencies, and others helping to prepare the case were not open to discovery. State v. Hunt, 339 N.C. 622, 457 S.E.2d 276 (1994).

No discovery statute requires the State "to investigate" matters sought by the defendant to be investigated. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

Laboratory Report Prepared During Investigation. — In a first-degree rape case, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for mistrial based on the discovery by defendant, on the fourth day of trial, of a previously undisclosed laboratory report which revealed that an expert had found insufficient characteristics present in the photographs of shoeprints at the crime scene to enable the examiner to render an opinion as to whether defendant's shoes could have made the heel impressions shown in the photographs, where the existence of that report in no way affected the competency of the investigating officer's testimony concerning his personal observation of the shoeprints; where defendant did not take advantage of the trial court's offer to assist in locating the expert if defendant thought his testimony would be helpful and where, although defendant obtained possession of the report before the State rested its case, he made no effort to introduce the report into evidence; inasmuch as the report was prepared in connection with the investigation of the case, the report was not statutorily discoverable except by voluntary disclosure. State v. Jackson, 302 N.C. 101, 273 S.E.2d 666 (1981).

Evidence of State's Failure to Uncover Evidence of Defendant's Use of Public Transportation Held Not Discoverable. — The failure of the State to offer any evidence that the defendant used the public transportation system to return from Atlanta to Rocky Mount at or about the time the victim's body was found in Atlanta may have been a proper matter for jury argument, but evidence of the State's failure to develop such proof, was not subject to discovery. State v. Crandell, 322 N.C. 487, 369 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

Open File Policy. — While the prosecutor may, in his or her discretion, proceed under an open file policy, he or she may not be forced to do so. State v. Moore, 335 N.C. 567, 440 S.E.2d 797, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 898, 115 S. Ct. 253, 130 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1994).

Discovery Agreement from Other District. — The District Attorney in one district may not be compelled to comply with an agreement pertaining to discovery entered into by the District Attorney in another district once venue has been changed in the case. State v. Moore, 335 N.C. 567, 440 S.E.2d 797, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 898, 115 S. Ct. 253, 130 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1994).

Applied in State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978); State v. Hill, 45 N.C. App. 136, 263 S.E.2d 14 (1980); State v. Corbett, 307 N.C. 169, 297 S.E.2d 553 (1982); State v. Lefever, 67 N.C. App. 419, 313 S.E.2d 599 (1984); State v. Williams, 71 N.C. App. 136, 321 S.E.2d 561 (1984); State v. Hunt, 339 N.C. 622, 457 S.E.2d 276 (1994).

Quoted in State v. Brackett, 55 N.C. App. 410, 285 S.E.2d 852 (1982); State v. Bates, 348 N.C. 29, 497 S.E.2d 276 (1998).

Stated in State v. Thomas, 52 N.C. App. 186, 278 S.E.2d 535 (1981); State v. Conner, 53 N.C. App. 87, 280 S.E.2d 14 (1981); State v. McNicholas, 322 N.C. 548, 369 S.E.2d 569 (1988).

Cited in State v. Rudolph, 39 N.C. App. 293, 250 S.E.2d 318 (1979); State v. Silhan, 297 N.C. 660, 256 S.E.2d 702 (1979); State v. Adcock, 310 N.C. 1, 310 S.E.2d 587 (1983).

II. STATE WITNESSES.

Identity of State Witnesses Is Shielded Prior to Trial. — Subsection (a) of this section is consistent with the legislature's desire, elsewhere expressed, to have the identity of State's witnesses shielded prior to trial. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Section Limits § 15A-903 as to Statements of Prosecution Witnesses. — Standing alone, § 15A-903(d) would allow discovery of a prior recorded statement of a State witness.

On its face, § 15A-903(d) would permit the discovery of any recorded or written statement that is material to the preparation of the defense. However, the statutory scheme must be construed in its entirety. This section limits § 15A-903 and is dispositive of the issue of prosecution witnesses' statements. Subsection (a) of this section provides that production of statements made by witnesses or prospective witnesses of the State to anyone acting on behalf of the State is not required. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Subsection (a) is an express restriction on pretrial discovery of witnesses' statements that a trial judge has no authority to exceed in his discovery order. State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

Defendant was not entitled to pretrial discovery of victim's statements. State v. Alston, 81 N.C. App. 459, 344 S.E.2d 339 (1986).

State can properly resist discovery of its witness's statement under subsection (a). State v. Lake, 305 N.C. 143, 286 S.E.2d 541 (1982).

No Authority to Order Disclosure of State Witnesses or Persons Interrogated. — Trial court does not have the authority to order the state to disclose to defendant either the names of the state's witnesses or the statements of all persons interrogated or interviewed during the investigation. State v. McLaughlin, 323 N.C. 68, 372 S.E.2d 49 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 1463, 108 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990).

State is not required to furnish defendant before trial any statement made by a witness of the State to anyone acting on behalf of the State. If the statement in question is material and favorable to the defendant, the State is required to disclose it to the defense at trial. State v. Harris, 323 N.C. 112, 371 S.E.2d 689 (1988).

But subsection (a) does not bar discovery of prosecution witnesses' statements at trial. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977); State v. Miller, 37 N.C. App. 163, 245 S.E.2d 561, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 651, 248 S.E.2d 255 (1978).

Subsection (a) of this section shields oral statements by a defendant other than those made by him to persons acting on behalf of the State only from pretrial discovery. It does not bar the discovery of prosecution witnesses' statements at trial. State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979); State v. Boone, 307 N.C. 198, 297 S.E.2d 585 (1982).

Under subsection (a) of this section, the State is not required to give to defendant before trial any statements made by witnesses of the State. If such evidence is material and favorable to the defendant, the State is required to disclose it to defense counsel at trial. State v. Jackson, 309 N.C. 26, 305 S.E.2d 703 (1983).

Statement by Accomplice to S.B.I. Agent. — Defendants in a prosecution for burglary and armed robbery were not entitled to receive a written copy of the oral statement made by an accomplice to an S.B.I. agent. State v. Abernathy, 295 N.C. 147, 244 S.E.2d 373 (1978).

Election to Use Person as Witness Waives Privilege. — By electing to use a person as a witness the State waived any privilege it might have had with respect to matters covered in his testimony. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Impeachment value of victim's statements goes to the weight of the victim's identification of the defendant rather than to its admissibility. State v. Jean, 310 N.C. 157, 311 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

Denial of Discovery of Witnesses' Statements at Trial Held Harmless. — The trial court in an armed robbery case erred in the denial of defendants' motions at trial for discovery of statements given by the State's witnesses to police regarding their descriptions of the robber; however, such error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt where such statements were revealed to defendant during cross-examination of the police officers and were used by defendant in his cross-examination of the other State's witnesses. State v. Miller, 37 N.C. App. 163, 245 S.E.2d 561, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 651, 248 S.E.2d 255 (1978).

State Need Not Compel Witnesses to Submit to Interview or Questioning. — Nothing in the statutory discovery provisions would require the State to compel its witnesses to submit to any form of interview or questioning by the defense prior to trial; the State does not even have to afford the defense pretrial access to a list of its potential witnesses or copies of any statements they may have made. State v. Pinch, 306 N.C. 1, 292 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1056, 103 S. Ct. 474, 74 L. Ed. 2d 622 (1982), rehearing denied, 459 U.S. 1189, 103 S. Ct. 839, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1031 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Benson, 323 N.C. 318, 372 S.E.2d 517 (1988); State v. Robinson, 336 N.C. 78, 443 S.E.2d 306 (1994), cert. denied, 115 S. Ct. 750, 130 L. Ed. 2d 650 (1995); State v. Rouse, 339 N.C. 59, 451 S.E.2d 543 (1994), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 832, 116 S. Ct. 107, 133 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1995).

Duty Not to Obstruct Interview of Witnesses by Defense. — A prosecutor has an implicit duty not to obstruct defense attempts to conduct interviews with any witnesses; however, a reversal for this kind of professional misconduct is only warranted when it is clearly demonstrated that the prosecutor affirmatively instructed a witness not to cooperate with the defense. State v. Pinch, 306 N.C. 1, 292 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1056, 103 S. Ct. 474, 74 L. Ed. 2d 622 (1982), rehearing denied, 459 U.S. 1189, 103 S. Ct. 839, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1031 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Benson, 323 N.C. 318, 372 S.E.2d 517 (1988); State v. Robinson, 336 N.C. 78, 443 S.E.2d 306 (1994), cert. denied, 115 S. Ct. 750, 130 L. Ed. 2d 650 (1995); State v. Rouse, 339 N.C. 59, 451 S.E.2d 543 (1994), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 832, 116 S. Ct. 107, 133 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1995).

Criminal records of witnesses other than the defendant are not compelled. State v. Gillespie, 33 N.C. App. 684, 236 S.E.2d 190 (1977).

III. ATTORNEY'S WORK PRODUCT.

Work Product Not Discoverable. — The statutory provisions set out in § 15A-903 do not alter the general rule that the work product or investigative files of the district attorney, law enforcement agencies, and others assisting in the preparation of a case are not open to discovery. State v. Brewer, 325 N.C. 550, 386 S.E.2d 569 (1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 951, 110 S. Ct. 2215, 109 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1990).

Work product doctrine applies in criminal as well as civil cases. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Purpose of Work Product Doctrine. — The work product doctrine was designed to protect the mental processes of the attorney from outside interference and provide a privileged area in which he can analyze and prepare his client's case. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Work product doctrine is a qualified privilege for certain materials prepared by an attorney acting on behalf of his client in anticipation of litigation. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

And Can Be Waived. — The work product privilege, like any other qualified privilege, can be waived. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

The work product privilege is certainly waived when the defendant or the State seeks at trial to make a testimonial use of the work product. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

What Constitutes Work Product. — Only roughly and broadly speaking can a statement of a witness that is reduced verbatim to a writing or a recording by an attorney be considered work product, if at all. It is work product only in the sense that it was prepared by the attorney or his agent in anticipation of trial. Such a statement is not work product in the same sense that an attorney's impressions, opinions and conclusions or his legal theories and strategies are work product. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

The work product doctrine has been extended to protect materials prepared for the attorney by his agents as well as those prepared by the attorney himself. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Defense Counsel Not Allowed to Review Investigative File. — The trial court did not err in not allowing defense counsel to review the entire investigative file compiled in the case since the investigative file requested by defendant consisted of internal documents made by law enforcement officers, and none of it was subject to discovery by defendant. State v. Alverson, 91 N.C. App. 577, 372 S.E.2d 729 (1988).

§ 15A-905. Disclosure of evidence by the defendant — Information subject to disclosure.

(a) Documents and Tangible Objects. — If the court grants any relief sought by the defendant under G.S. 15A-903(d), the court must, upon motion of the State, order the defendant to permit the State to inspect and copy or photograph books, papers, documents, photographs, motion pictures, mechanical or electronic recordings, tangible objects, or copies or portions thereof which are within the possession, custody, or control of the defendant and which the defendant intends to introduce in evidence at the trial.

(b) Reports of Examinations and Tests. — If the court grants any relief sought by the defendant under G.S. 15A-903(e), the court must, upon motion of the State, order the defendant to permit the State to inspect and copy or photograph results or reports of physical or mental examinations or of tests, measurements or experiments made in connection with the case, or copies thereof, within the possession and control of the defendant which the defendant intends to introduce in evidence at the trial or which were prepared by a witness whom the defendant intends to call at the trial, when the results or reports relate to his testimony. In addition, upon motion of a prosecutor, the court must order the defendant to permit the prosecutor to inspect, examine, and test, subject to appropriate safeguards, any physical evidence or a sample of it available to the defendant if the defendant intends to offer such evidence, or tests or experiments made in connection with such evidence, as an exhibit or evidence in the case. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Based on the breakdown of categories in the commentary to § 15A-903, there are three categories of discovery available to the State if the defense has sought discovery with respect to a similar category. The statute lumps two of these categories together, so the State may seek discovery as follows:

(1) If the defendant seeks discovery as to books, papers, documents, photographs, motion pictures, mechanical or electronic recordings, or tangible objects, then the State may seek discovery as to any or all of these items which the defendant intends to introduce as evidence.

(2) If the defendant seeks discovery as to results or reports of the tests noted previously or seeks discovery as to physical evidence, then the State may seek discovery as to results or reports of physical or mental examinations or of tests, measurements, or experiments made in connection with the case, in the control of the defendant, and which:

a. The defendant intends to introduce into evidence; or

b. Were prepared by a witness whom the defendant intends to call.

(3) If the defendant seeks discovery as to results or reports of the tests noted previously or seeks discovery as to physical evidence, then the State may seek discovery as to any physical evidence, or a sample of it, available to the defendant if the defendant intends to offer it as an exhibit or evidence, or results or reports of tests or experiments made in connection with the evidence.

To balance the deletion of discovery of the names and addresses of State's witnesses, the General Assembly deleted from this section a proposal allowing the State to seek the names and addresses of defense witnesses.

CASE NOTES

Discovery statutes do not require a defendant to furnish the State with a list of proposed witnesses. State v. Smith, 320 N.C. 404, 358 S.E.2d 329 (1987).

But court did not abuse its discretion in requiring list of defense witnesses so that jurors, during voir dire, could look at the list and answer questions concerning their knowledge of and relationship to any of the witnesses who might be called to testify. State v. Smith, 320 N.C. 404, 358 S.E.2d 329 (1987).

The trial court properly denied the admission of defendant's mental examination reports and testimony thereof where the defense had failed to comply with the court's order to disclose said reports prepared by witnesses whom defendant planned to call to testify five working days in advance of testimony. State v. Braxton, 352 N.C. 158, 531 S.E.2d 428 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 890, 148 L. Ed. 2d 797 (2001).

Defendant Not Required To Inform State Why Scientific Evidence Not Offered. — In a prosecution for discharging a firearm into an occupied building, since the defendant never intended to introduce his ballistics report or put the preparer of it on the stand, the judge had no authority to require that a copy of the report be sent to the district attorney, as the purpose of subsection (b) is not to inform the state why scientific evidence will not be offered by the defendant, but to acquaint it with scientific evidence that will be offered during the trial. State v. King, 75 N.C. App. 618, 331 S.E.2d 291, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 545, 335 S.E.2d 24, appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 672, 335 S.E.2d 900 (1985).

Meaningful, Useful Report. — Within the meaning of this statute is the requirement that the State be provided in advance of the witness' testimony with a meaningful report which the State can use in preparation for trial. State v. Lee, 335 N.C. 244, 439 S.E.2d 547 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 891, 115 S. Ct. 239, 130 L. Ed. 2d 162 (1994).

The State was entitled to inspect and copy incomplete personality test which provided expert witness with some "raw data," and to cross-examine expert witness on that subject. State v. McCarver, 341 N.C. 364, 462 S.E.2d 25 (1995), cert denied, 517 U.S. 1110, 116 S. Ct. 1332, 134 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1996).

The trial court's reciprocal discovery order was upheld in light of clear statutory requirements, precedent upholding those requirements, and defendant's own request for a court order. State v. Cummings, 352 N.C. 600, 536 S.E.2d 36 (2000), cert denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1660, 149 L. Ed. 2d 641 (2001).

No Time Limitation for Discovery. —

Where the trial court ordered the prosecution to provide discovery to defendant and also ordered reciprocal discovery by defendant to the State within two weeks after the State met its deadline, as subsection (b) sets no time limitation by which a defendant must furnish the State with discovery, and defendant made no showing that the time set by the trial court was unreasonable, the trial court did not exceed its authority. State v. Godwin, 336 N.C. 499, 444 S.E.2d 206 (1994).

Probation and Parole Records. — The trial court did not violate subsection (a) of this section in ordering the Department of Corrections to provide the State with the defendant's probation and parole records. State v. Clark, 128 N.C. App. 87, 493 S.E.2d 770 (1997), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 285, 501 S.E.2d 913 (1998).

Report of Expert's Examination. — By stating in its order that defense counsel must prepare a report if the expert's examination was to be used at trial, the trial court was ensuring fairness to both sides in the preparation of their case. State v. Bacon, 337 N.C. 66, 446 S.E.2d 542 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1159, 115 S. Ct. 1120, 130 L. Ed. 2d 1083 (1995).

Discovery of Report Not Used by Defendant. — The State was entitled to discover a copy of a psychiatrist's report on murder defendant's psychiatric condition, even though the defendant neither called the witness nor introduced the report into evidence, as the defendant had indicated his intent to call the witness. State v. Williams, 350 N.C. 1, 510 S.E.2d 626 (1999), cert. denied 528 U.S. 880, 120 S. Ct. 193, 145 L. Ed. 2d 162 (1999).

Intent to Use Evidence. — The defendant is required to disclose evidence that he "intends" to use as of the time of the ordered disclosure; thus, the fact that he changes his mind and does not call that witness is not controlling. State v. Williams, 350 N.C. 1, 510 S.E.2d 626 (1999), cert. denied 528 U.S. 880, 120 S. Ct. 193, 145 L. Ed. 2d 162 (1999).

Report of Psychological Examination. — The trial court acted properly in ordering production of results of an oral report of a psychological examination in the form of a written report to the State. State v. East, 345 N.C. 535, 481 S.E.2d 652 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 918, 118 S. Ct. 306, 139 L. Ed. 2d 236 (1997).

Where defendant did not intend to introduce psychologist's report regarding the defendant at trial, the State did not have a right to discover the report. State v. Warren, 347 N.C. 309, 492 S.E.2d 609 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1681, 140 L. Ed. 2d 818 (1998).

Once defendant admitted guilt and the capital sentencing proceeding was underway the trial court could compel defendant to disclose psychologist's report regarding the defendant to the State. State v. Warren, 347 N.C. 309, 492 S.E.2d 609 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1681, 140 L. Ed. 2d 818 (1998).

Psychiatric Test Results and Notes. — A discovery order properly required a defense psychiatrist to produce "all of his notes," where the psychiatrist had relied on the requested materials at the defendant's competency hearing and at the sentencing hearing. State v. Atkins, 349 N.C. 62, 505 S.E.2d 97 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1147, 119 S. Ct. 2025, 143 L. Ed. 2d 1036 (1999).

The trial court's order that defendant's mental health expert prepare and disclose to the State a written report of his findings and a copy of his handwritten notes of interviews with defendant did not exceed the scope of reciprocal discovery requirements of this section nor violate defendant's attorney-client and Fifth Amendment privileges. State v. Davis, 353 N.C. 1, 539 S.E.2d 243 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 122 S. Ct. 95, 151 L. Ed. 2d 55 (2001).

Reports Improperly Provided. — Although the court erred by ordering defendant's experts to provide to the State written reports of tests performed on the defendant, the error was not prejudicial to defendant's case. State v. Clark, 128 N.C. App. 87, 493 S.E.2d 770 (1997), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 285, 501 S.E.2d 913 (1998).

Voir Dire in Lieu of Report. — Where defendant failed to comply with the court's order to produce a written mental health report, court properly allowed the State to conduct voir dire in lieu of the report, as it had forewarned that it would. State v. Morganherring, 350 N.C. 701, 517 S.E.2d 622 (1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1024, 120 S. Ct. 1432, 146 L. Ed. 2d 322 (2000).

Applied in State v. McMahon, 67 N.C. App. 181, 312 S.E.2d 526 (1984); State v. White, 331 N.C. 604, 419 S.E.2d 557 (1992).

§ 15A-906. Disclosure of evidence by the defendant — Certain evidence not subject to disclosure.

Except as provided in G.S. 15A-905(b) this Article does not authorize the discovery or inspection of reports, memoranda, or other internal defense documents made by the defendant or his attorneys or agents in connection with the investigation or defense of the case, or of statements made by the defendant, or by prosecution or defense witnesses, or by prospective prosecution witnesses or defense witnesses, to the defendant, his agents, or attorneys. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is substantially similar in its purpose to § 15A-904.

CASE NOTES

Work product doctrine applies in criminal as well as civil cases. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Purpose of Work Product Doctrine. — The work product doctrine was designed to protect the mental processes of the attorney from outside interference and provide a privileged area in which he can analyze and prepare his client's case. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Work product doctrine is a qualified privilege for certain materials prepared by an attorney acting on behalf of his client in anticipation of litigation. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

And Can Be Waived. — The work product privilege, like any other qualified privilege, can be waived. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

The work product privilege is certainly waived when the defendant or the State seeks at trial to make a testimonial use of the work product. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

What Constitutes Work Product. — Only roughly and broadly speaking can a statement of a witness that is reduced verbatim to a writing or a recording by an attorney be considered work product, if at all. It is work product only in the sense that it was prepared by the attorney or his agent in anticipation of trial. Such a statement is not work product in the same sense that an attorney's impressions, opinions and conclusions or his legal theories and strategies are work product. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

The work product doctrine has been extended to protect materials prepared for the attorney by his agents as well as those prepared by the attorney himself. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Court's Disclosure Order Held Overbroad. — By alleging in his amended motion for appropriate relief that his court-appointed attorney, the Public Defender, rendered ineffective assistance of counsel during the trial and direct appeal of his cases, defendant waived the benefits of both the attorney-client privilege and the work product privilege, but only with respect to matters relevant to his allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel; therefore, as the order of the Superior Court directed the defendant to provide the state access to "all files relating to these cases" without limiting the ordered disclosure to matters relevant to issues raised by the defendant's allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel, the order of the Superior Court was overbroad and exceeded its authority. State v. Taylor, 327 N.C. 147, 393 S.E.2d 801 (1990).

Where defendant did not intend to introduce psychologist's report regarding the defendant at trial, the State did not have a right to discover the report. State v. Warren, 347 N.C. 309, 492 S.E.2d 609 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1681, 140 L. Ed. 2d 818 (1998).

Once defendant admitted guilt and the capital sentencing proceeding was underway the trial court could compel defendant to disclose psychologist's report regarding the defendant to the State. State v. Warren, 347 N.C. 309, 492 S.E.2d 609 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1681, 140 L. Ed. 2d 818 (1998).

§ 15A-907. Continuing duty to disclose.

If a party, subject to compliance with an order issued pursuant to this Article, discovers prior to or during trial additional evidence or decides to use additional evidence, and the evidence is or may be subject to discovery or inspection under this Article, he must promptly notify the attorney for the other party of the existence of the additional evidence. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 16.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This important provision requires a party subject to a discovery request or order to disclose all additional information of the type requested or ordered that comes to his attention after first compliance with the discovery provisions of this Article.

The phrase "or the name of each additional witness" was left in this section inadvertently. It was not omitted when discovery of the names and addresses of witnesses was stripped from the bill.

CASE NOTES

State's affirmative duty of voluntary disclosure applies to evidence that is exculpatory from a constitutional standpoint. State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

Relevant inquiry under a statutory disclosure duty is prejudice to the defendant resulting from either surprise on a material issue or where the nondisclosure hampers the preparation and presentation of the defendant's case. State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

Failure to Disclose Statement Which Would Have Revealed Perjury. — Where the prosecution failed to disclose to the defendants the corrected pretrial statement of the State's most crucial witness, whose credibility was the most basic issue in the case, the failure to disclose it constituted a violation of the defendants' due process rights and invalidated their convictions, since the amended statement would have revealed the witness' perjury and the production of the amended statement was requested at least six times in specific terms. Chavis v. North Carolina, 637 F.2d 213 (4th Cir. 1980).

Failure to Disclose Past Conviction. — Where the State failed to disclose a 1972 conviction for credit card theft, this fact was actually known by defendant and the State's nondisclosure could not have hampered defendant's preparation or presentation of his defense. Additionally, defendant's testimony opened the door for the State's inquiry about that conviction, thereby negating any allegation of surprise. This violation did not rise to the level necessary to forbid the State's use of the evidence. State v. Blankenship, 89 N.C. App. 465, 366 S.E.2d 509 (1988).

Remedy for Failure to Comply Within Discretion of Court. — Although it appeared that the prosecution failed to comply with this section, it did not follow that the court was thereby required to prohibit the State from introducing the evidence which it had failed to disclose or that defendant was entitled to a new trial because the court permitted introduction of such evidence. Which of the several remedies available under § 15A-910 should be applied in a particular case is a matter within the trial court's sound discretion. State v. Kessack, 32 N.C. App. 536, 232 S.E.2d 859 (1977).

Belated Disclosure of Hypnosis. — The State's failure to disclose that a witness was hypnotized was improper but was mitigated by the fact that disclosure came prior to identification testimony and comprehensive voir dire, and that the identification was not improperly tainted by the hypnosis. State v. Hall, 134 N.C. App. 417, 517 S.E.2d 907 (1999).

Section Not Violated. — The court did not err in allowing the State to introduce a document to show that defendant owned car allegedly used in bank robbery, the contents of which had been suppressed by a prior order, where before the trial started the bill of sale and the odometer statement were not within the possession, custody, or control of the State, but when the car dealer arrived in court with the documents they were promptly made available to defendants. Since defendants had no right to learn ahead of time, by discovery, who would testify against them and the substance of their testimony, this section was not violated. State v. Alston, 80 N.C. App. 540, 342 S.E.2d 573, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 707, 347 S.E.2d 441 (1986).

Defendant was not prejudiced by the trial testimony which corrected newly discovered typographical error in the ballistic report. State v. Stephens, 347 N.C. 352, 493 S.E.2d 435 (1997).

Applied in State v. Morrow, 31 N.C. App. 654, 230 S.E.2d 568 (1976); State v. Martin, 294 N.C. 702, 242 S.E.2d 762 (1978); State v. Moore, 301 N.C. 262, 271 S.E.2d 242 (1980); State v. Misenheimer, 304 N.C. 108, 282 S.E.2d 791 (1981); State v. Williams, 71 N.C. App. 136, 321 S.E.2d 561 (1984); State v. Murillo, 349 N.C. 573, 509 S.E.2d 752 (1998), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 838, 120 S. Ct. 103, 145 L. Ed. 2d 87 (1999).

Stated in State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 75, 248 S.E.2d 858 (1978); State v. Godwin, 336 N.C. 499, 444 S.E.2d 206 (1994).

Cited in State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977); State v. Siler, 292 N.C. 543, § 15A-908. Regulation of discovery — Protective orders.

(a) Upon written motion of a party and a finding of good cause, which may include, but is not limited to a finding that there is a substantial risk to any person or physical harm, intimidation, bribery, economic reprisals, or unnecessary annoyance or embarrassment, the court may at any time order that discovery or inspection be denied, restricted, or deferred, or may make other appropriate orders.

(b) The court may permit a party seeking relief under subsection (a) to submit supporting affidavits or statements to the court for in camera inspection. If thereafter the court enters an order granting relief under subsection (a), the material submitted in camera must be sealed and preserved in the records of the court to be made available to the appellate court in the event of an appeal. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1983, Ex. Sess., c. 6, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section gives a superior court judge broad scope to deny, restrict, or defer discovery or to make other appropriate orders of a protective nature for good cause shown. Because sources for believing that harm may occur if full discovery is granted are often confidential, the section provides for submitting supporting affidavits or statements to the court for in camera inspection, and for sealing the material submitted.

§ 15A-909. Regulation of discovery — Time, place, and manner of discovery and inspection.

An order of the court granting relief under this Article must specify the time, place, and manner of making the discovery and inspection permitted and may prescribe appropriate terms and conditions. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

A defendant may petition the court to declare a specific time, place and manner for completing discovery. If the defendant pursues this available course of action, then, of course, the statutory time begins to run again upon the court ordered date of compliance. State v. Marlow, 310 N.C. 507, 313 S.E.2d 532 (1984).

Exclusion of discovery time does not force the defendant to anxiously await, at the mercy of the State, the completion of discovery within a reasonable time. The State remains bound not only by requirements of good faith to proceed in a timely manner, but also by the defendant's ability to compel earlier discovery, pursuant to this section. State v. Marlow, 310 N.C. 507, 313 S.E.2d 532 (1984).

§ 15A-910. Regulation of discovery — Failure to comply.

If at any time during the course of the proceedings the court determines that a party has failed to comply with this Article or with an order issued pursuant to this Article, the court in addition to exercising its contempt powers may

(1) Order the party to permit the discovery or inspection, or
(2) Grant a continuance or recess, or
(3) Prohibit the party from introducing evidence not disclosed, or
(3a) Declare a mistrial, or
(3b) Dismiss the charge, with or without prejudice, or
(4) Enter other appropriate orders. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 17; 1983, Ex. Sess., c. 6, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) gives the judge broad and flexible powers to rectify the situation if a party fails to comply with discovery orders or provisions of the discovery Article.

Subsections (b) and (c) are meaningless, as the General Assembly elsewhere deleted the right of discovery of the names and addresses of witnesses.

CASE NOTES

Clarification was the purpose of the 1983 amendment to this section. It thus should not be construed to have changed the law so as to permit a previously prohibited sanction, but rather to have made explicit a previously implicit intent that the sanction of dismissal be among those which could be implemented by other appropriate orders. State v. Adams, 67 N.C. App. 116, 312 S.E.2d 498 (1984).

Particular Remedy Within Discretion of Trial Court. — Which of the several remedies available under this section should be applied in a particular case is a matter within the trial court's sound discretion. State v. Morrow, 31 N.C. App. 654, 230 S.E.2d 568 (1976), further review denied, 297 N.C. 178, 254 S.E.2d 37 (1979), overruled on other grounds, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984); State v. Kessack, 32 N.C. App. 536, 232 S.E.2d 859 (1977); State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979); State v. Moore, 301 N.C. 262, 271 S.E.2d 242 (1980); State v. McCoy, 303 N.C. 1, 277 S.E.2d 515 (1981); State v. Taylor, 311 N.C. 266, 316 S.E.2d 225 (1984); State v. Herring, 74 N.C. App. 326, 328 S.E.2d 23, discretionary review denied as to additional issues, 314 N.C. 671, 335 S.E.2d 324 (1985), aff'd, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

The choice of sanction, if any, rests within the discretion of the trial court. State v. Carter, 55 N.C. App. 192, 284 S.E.2d 733 (1981); State v. Browning, 321 N.C. 535, 364 S.E.2d 376 (1988).

Imposition of the sanctions found in subdivisions (1) through (4) rests entirely within the discretion of the trial judge. State v. Thomas, 291 N.C. 687, 231 S.E.2d 585 (1977); State v. Jones, 295 N.C. 345, 245 S.E.2d 711 (1978); State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

Regulation of discovery and failure to comply determinations are within the sound discretion of the trial court. The court has broad and flexible powers to rectify the situation if a party fails to comply with discovery orders or provisions of the discovery article. State v. Artis, 31 N.C. App. 193, 228 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 449, 230 S.E.2d 766 (1976).

Where a discovery order to supply defendant with certain information had been issued and the State had purported to comply with it, and no evidence of bad faith on the part of the State was shown, permitting witnesses whose names the State had failed to supply to defendant to testify and accepting photographs into evidence which also had not been supplied to defendant, were matters within the discretion of the trial judge, not reviewable on appeal in the absence of a showing of an abuse of discretion. State v. Carter, 289 N.C. 35, 220 S.E.2d 313 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

It is important to note that while the statute sets out possible curative actions, it does not require the court to impose any sanction. Which sanction, if any, is the appropriate response to a party's failure to comply with a discovery order is entirely within the sound discretion of the trial court. The decision of the trial court will not be reversed absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

Sanctions for failure to comply with the discovery procedures are permissive and are imposed in the sound discretion of the trial judge.

State v. King, 311 N.C. 603, 320 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

The decision to employ remedies available under this section is a matter within the discretion of the trial judge and, absent abuse, is not reviewable on appeal. State v. Martin, 67 N.C. App. 265, 313 S.E.2d 15, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 311 N.C. 405, 319 S.E.2d 278 (1984).

Because the trial court is not required to impose any sanctions for abuse of discovery orders, the question of what sanctions to impose, if any, is within the trial court's discretion, including whether to admit or exclude evidence not disclosed in accordance with a discovery order. State v. Weeks, 322 N.C. 152, 367 S.E.2d 895 (1988).

The imposition of sanctions for failure to comply with discovery is entirely within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be reversed absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. State v. Pigott, 320 N.C. 96, 357 S.E.2d 631 (1987).

The decision as to which sanctions to apply, or whether to apply any sanctions at all, rests with the discretion of the trial court. The trial court may be reversed for an abuse of discretion in this regard only upon a showing that its ruling was so arbitrary that it could not have been the result of a reasoned decision. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 297, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

The determination of what are appropriate sanctions for violation of a discovery order is within the sound discretion of the trial court. State v. Lopez, 101 N.C. App. 217, 398 S.E.2d 886 (1990).

Even if a prosecutor's actions constitute a discovery violation, a trial judge still retains broad discretion to determine if sanctions are appropriate; unless the trial judge abuses that discretion, the decision will not be reversed. State v. Nolen, 144 N.C. App. 172, 550 S.E.2d 783 (2001).

And is not reviewable on appeal in the absence of a showing of abuse. State v. Morrow, 31 N.C. App. 654, 230 S.E.2d 568 (1976), further review denied, 297 N.C. 178, 254 S.E.2d 37 (1979), overruled on other grounds, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984); State v. Thomas, 291 N.C. 687, 231 S.E.2d 585 (1977); State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978); State v. Moore, 301 N.C. 262, 271 S.E.2d 242 (1980); State v. McCoy, 303 N.C. 1, 277 S.E.2d 515 (1981); State v. Carter, 55 N.C. App. 192, 284 S.E.2d 733 (1981); State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982); State v. Taylor, 311 N.C. 266, 316 S.E.2d 225 (1984); State v. Waller, 77 N.C. App. 184, 334 S.E.2d 796 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 396, 338 S.E.2d 886 (1986).

As this section is permissive and not mandatory and the remedy for failure to provide discovery rests within the trial court's discretion, its ruling is not reviewable on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. State v. Dukes, 305 N.C. 387, 289 S.E.2d 561 (1982).

The choice of which sanction to apply, if any, rests in the sound discretion of the trial court and is not reviewable absent a showing of an abuse of that discretion. State v. Gladden, 315 N.C. 398, 340 S.E.2d 673, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1986).

Defendant's Duty to Inform Trial Court of Potential Unfair Surprise. — A major purpose of the discovery procedures of this chapter is to protect the defendant from unfair surprise. When the defendant does not inform the trial court of any potential unfair surprise, the defendant cannot properly contend that the trial court's failure to impose sanctions is an abuse of discretion. State v. Taylor, 332 N.C. 372, 420 S.E.2d 414 (1992).

Exclusionary Sanction Is Permissive. — The exclusionary sanction imposed by the Criminal Procedure Act for failure to comply with discovery orders is permissive rather than mandatory. State v. Conner, 53 N.C. App. 87, 280 S.E.2d 14 (1981).

By its express terms, this section authorizes, but does not require, the trial court to prohibit the party offering nondisclosed evidence from introducing it. This is left to the discretion of the trial court. State v. Shaw, 293 N.C. 616, 239 S.E.2d 439 (1977), overruled on other grounds, State v. Weaver, 306 N.C. 629, 295 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

The admission or exclusion of evidence not disclosed in accordance with a discovery order is left in the discretion of the trial court. State v. Braxton, 294 N.C. 446, 242 S.E.2d 769 (1978).

The exclusion of evidence for the reason that the party offering it has failed to comply with statutes granting the right of discovery, or with an order of the court issued pursuant thereto, rests in the discretion of the trial court. State v. Dollar, 292 N.C. 344, 233 S.E.2d 521 (1977); State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978); State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

While this section provides for several possible curative actions, the trial court is not required to impose any sanctions. State v. Taylor, 311 N.C. 266, 316 S.E.2d 225 (1984); State v. Waller, 77 N.C. App. 184, 334 S.E.2d 796 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 396, 338 S.E.2d 886 (1986).

Sanction for failure to make discovery when required is within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Herring, 322 N.C. 733, 370 S.E.2d 363 (1988).

Discretionary rulings of a trial court will not be disturbed on the issue of failure to make discovery absent a showing of bad faith by the State in its noncompliance with the discovery requirements. State v. Nolen, 144 N.C. App. 172, 550 S.E.2d 783 (2001).

Failure to Impose Sanctions Not Improper. — Where although the trial judge did not impose any sanctions for State's failure to comply with discovery, he expressed his displeasure with State's tactics with respect to discovery, and employed several of the curative actions suggested by this section, and at no time did he determine that defendant was not provided items to which he was entitled, that defendant was harmed by the delay in receiving them, that defendant was subjected to unfair surprise at trial, or that State had failed to comply with the law, the court's failure to impose sanctions was not an abuse of discretion. State v. McClintick, 315 N.C. 649, 340 S.E.2d 41 (1986).

In prosecution for first-degree sexual offense and taking indecent liberties with children, the defendant was not prejudiced by the admission of the deputy's testimony that the defendant stated his birthdate during the booking procedure, where there was ample evidence aside from defendant's statement from which the jury could have found that defendant was at least 16 years of age at the time of the crimes; therefore, even assuming that the statement was discoverable, that the state should have produced it pursuant to defendant's discovery request and that the trial court should have imposed sanctions pursuant to this section, the error was harmless. State v. Banks, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 398 (1988).

Trial court did not err in allowing medical technician to testify concerning a matter not provided in discovery; this section gives the trial court broad discretionary powers, and since the court granted a recess in order to allow counsel time to meet the evidence, no abuse of discretion was committed by the trial court. State v. Fenn, 94 N.C. App. 127, 379 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 548, 385 S.E.2d 504 (1989).

The courts are bound by the discretionary decision of a local board of education in selecting and determining the land necessary to construct a school, school building, school bus garage, a parking area, an access road suitable for school buses or "other school facilities" unless that decision is an arbitrary abuse of discretion or disregard of law. Dare County Bd. of Educ. v. Sakaria, 118 N.C. App. 609, 456 S.E.2d 842 (1995), aff'd, 342 N.C. 648, 466 S.E.2d 717, rehearing denied, 343 N.C. 128, 468 S.E.2d 778 (1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 976, 117 S. Ct. 412, 136 L. Ed. 2d 325 (1996).

Where defendant could not use duress as a defense to the charge of first-degree murder and where he failed to produce sufficient evidence that he was coerced into participating in the kidnapping and robbery of the victim, the trial court correctly concluded that a diary which indicated that the accomplice was a violent person did not contain any exculpatory evidence which could aid defendant and, therefore, denied his motions to compel production and to sanction the State for failure to preserve and disclose exculpatory evidence pursuant to this section. State v. Cheek, 351 N.C. 48, 520 S.E.2d 545 (1999), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1245, 120 S. Ct. 2694, 147 L. Ed. 2d 965 (2000).

Trial court acted within its discretion in refusing to impose sanctions against the State for introducing the defendant's pretrial statement, even though he was not provided with the tape recorded version of the statement, where the defendant was furnished the substance of the defendant's statement by way of a copy of the officer's written report months before trial the defense counsel became aware of the existence of the tape recording three days before the introduction of the written report, and on the same date, defense counsel was given an opportunity to listen to the tape, but she neither had the tape recording analyzed nor scheduled a future date upon which to have it analyzed, nor did the defense counsel call the officer, who was present throughout the interview, in an attempt to clarify any inaudible portions of the recording. State v. Herring, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 363 (1988).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to sanction the State for failure to disclose the results of footprint comparisons, where when the State offered footprint comparison evidence, the defendant did not object or request sanctions against the State. State v. Herring, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 363 (1988).

Failure to Comply Held Harmless Error. — Any error in the failure of the State to comply with discovery in robbery case was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Everette, 111 N.C. App. 775, 433 S.E.2d 802 (1993).

No Error Where Trial Court Cured Possible Prosecutor's Noncompliance by Imposition of Sanctions. — Assuming arguendo that agent's notes on his examination of defendant's pubic hairs in a rape case were discoverable and that the State should have produced them pursuant to defendant's discovery request, the trial court cured the prosecutor's failure to comply by its generous imposition of three statutory sanctions by ordering the prosecutor to allow inspection of agent's notes, granted defendant a recess and offered defendant an additional opportunity to cross-examine agent about the notes. State v. McNicholas, 322 N.C. 548, 369 S.E.2d 569 (1988).

Court's Choice of Sanction Found Appropriate. — Even if the State's failure to inform defendant about the second fingerprint did not comply with the discovery article, the court's refusal to either suppress the evidence or continue the trial was not necessarily error, since the court did sanction the State in one of the ways authorized by the statute (by granting a recess and requiring the State's witness to confer with defense counsel and to be interrogated under oath before he testified) and that way was neither inappropriate nor beyond the court's discretion. State v. Hall, 93 N.C. App. 236, 377 S.E.2d 280, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 579, 381 S.E.2d 777 (1989).

The trial court acted appropriately under this section where, after considering the parties' assertions regarding their differing interpretations of the State's offer to disclose "everything" it had, the trial court allowed the previously undisclosed witness testimony but ordered a recess before cross-examination to allow defendant to prepare to question the witness. State v. Parker, — N.C. App. —, — S.E.2d —, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1107 (Oct. 3, 2000).

Trial Judge Should Not Encourage by Court Order Requirement That State Furnish Witness List. — It was never the intention of the General Assembly when it enacted this Article to require the district attorney to furnish the names and addresses of witnesses the State intended to call. It follows that trial judges should not encourage, by court order, what the legislature specifically rejected during consideration of the legislation. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

Where State undertook to make voluntary discovery when it responded to the request by one defendant for any statements made by his codefendant, the State's voluntary response was deemed under § 15A-902(b) to have been made under an order of court. As a result, the trial court properly could have invoked the sanctions provided in this section for the State's failure to provide defendant with a copy of the pretrial statement of his codefendant in a timely manner. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 328, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

Not Error to Allow Recess So Defense Counsel Could Question Witness. — Where it became evident at trial that the State had not complied with a discovery order by failing to advise defendant of tests performed on the alleged murder weapon, it was not error for the trial court to declare a recess and give defendant's attorney an opportunity to question the witness rather than to prohibit the State from introducing the evidence not disclosed. State v. Mayo, 40 N.C. App. 626, 253 S.E.2d 276 (1979).

Declaration of Mistrial Is in Court's Discretion. — It should be left to the discretion of the trial court as to whether a mistrial is an appropriate order within the meaning of subdivision (4) of this section for the State's failure to comply with a discovery order. State v. Sowden, 48 N.C. App. 570, 269 S.E.2d 274 (1980), decided prior to 1983 (Ex. Sess.) amendment.

Dismissal with Prejudice. — Where the prosecution refused to comply with disclosure order, the court did not err by dismissing with prejudice the charges against defendant. State v. McEachern, 114 N.C. App. 218, 441 S.E.2d 574 (1994).

Sanctions Held An Abuse of Discretion. — Court abused its discretion for dismissing murder case under this section, where there was no evidence that witness made a statement as defined in § 15A-903; therefore the trial court was not authorized to impose sanctions for violating this section. State v. Shedd, 117 N.C. App. 122, 450 S.E.2d 13 (1994).

Refusal to Grant Mistrial or Continuance Not Abuse of Discretion. — Refusal of court to grant a mistrial or continuance based on failure of the State to disclose that a seized medicine bottle within its possession had been subjected to an unsuccessful fingerprint analysis held not an abuse of discretion. State v. Hodge, 118 N.C. App. 655, 456 S.E.2d 855 (1995).

Applied in State v. Cross, 293 N.C. 296, 237 S.E.2d 734 (1977); State v. Ruof, 296 N.C. 623, 252 S.E.2d 720 (1979); State v. Locklear, 41 N.C. App. 292, 254 S.E.2d 653 (1979); State v. Milano, 297 N.C. 485, 256 S.E.2d 154 (1979); State v. Matthews, 299 N.C. 284, 261 S.E.2d 872 (1980); State v. Jeffries, 55 N.C. App. 269, 285 S.E.2d 307 (1982); State v. Jarvis, 56 N.C. Article 49.

Pleadings and Joinder.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

North Carolina has previously allowed just four "pleadings" for the prosecution of criminal cases: warrants and criminal summonses in misdemeanor cases and informations and indictments in felony cases. To this could be added the "citation" in traffic cases — actually just an unsworn warrant form. The term "pleadings" has been used infrequently in criminal cases.

The Commission makes no change in the two pleadings used in felony cases. It is in misdemeanor cases that it recommends some change in the pleadings used. A second look will reveal that the real change is substantially less than that suggested by a first glance.

The traditional warrant for arrest in North Carolina has contained an affidavit which in fact was not more than a conclusory charge of the crime — in effect a pleading. A review of North Carolina cases will reveal that questions of validity of the warrant have most frequently focused on this "sufficiency of the pleading" aspect of the warrant.

The case of Whiteley v. Warden of Wyo. State Penitentiary, 401 U.S. 560, 91 S. Ct. 1031, 28 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1971), made it clear that such a conclusory charge without more did not provide a magistrate with sufficient facts to support a finding of probable cause, and that there would have to be a showing of more facts. However, it should be noted that that additional showing of facts showing probable cause has no direct bearing on the "pleading" function of the warrant. We still need a "charge" of the crime, and for that reason the warrant format adopted in this statute contains both the traditional "charge" of the crime and provisions for the supplemental information necessary to satisfy Whiteley. See Article 17, Criminal Process.

The Commission followed the concept of trying to put together process from similar components, varying the forms of process only when appropriate. Thus the warrant for arrest contains the statement of the crime based upon a showing of probable cause and an order for arrest. § 15A-304. The criminal summons contains the statement of the crime, showing of probable cause, and order to appear. § 15A-303. When arrest is without a warrant, the magistrate, at the initial appearance, is directed to determine probable cause and if it is present to prepare a statement of the crime and enter an order of commitment or bail. § 15A-511. If the crime is within the magistrate's jurisdiction for trial, he is directed to prepare a statement of the crime.

This "statement of the crime" is the same in each of these. It is essentially similar to the old warrant procedure and will serve as the "pleading" for the prosecution of misdemeanor cases — just as the indictment serves as the "pleading" in felony cases.

It should be noted that the citation (§ 15A-302) requires only that the crime be "identified," less than is required in the other processes. This is a reasonable difference, since it will be prepared by an officer on the scene. It still may be used as the pleading, but rather than get into sufficiency of the pleading in such a case the Commission simply gives the defendant the right to object and require a more formal pleading. § 15A-922(c).

The "statement of charges" is new. Being able to use the warrant as the pleading has worked well in this State, and saved much solicitorial manpower as compared to jurisdictions which require the drafting of a new misdemeanor pleading in each instance. It was felt that there is some loss in trying to "amend" the warrant, and sometimes issue a new warrant, when what is desired is a correct statement of the charges — a proper pleading. Since the warrant exists primarily as authority to arrest, there is some inconsistency of basic purpose and there is frequently a problem in getting all appropriate changes written in. Thus the "statement of charges" is created, as a new pleading, to be used when there is some problem with the original process as a pleading. As such it takes the place of amending the warrant (or amending other process which may also be used as the pleading). When filed prior to arraignment, it also may charge additional crimes. That simple idea requires some complexity for statement in statutory form, but that is the underlying idea in § 15A-922. It should be relatively easy to prepare a statement of charges; a form should be sufficient in many cases.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Article appears as originally drafted by the Criminal Code Commission and does not reflect amendments or changes in the law since the enactment of Session Laws 1973, c. 1286.

§ 15A-921. Pleadings in criminal cases.

Subject to the provisions of this Article, the following may serve as pleadings of the State in criminal cases:

(1) Citation.
(2) Criminal summons.
(3) Warrant for arrest.
(4) Magistrate's order pursuant to G.S. 15A-511 after arrest without warrant.
(5) Statement of charges.
(6) Information.
(7) Indictment. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 18.)

§ 15A-922. Use of pleadings in misdemeanor cases generally.

(a) Process as Pleadings. — The citation, criminal summons, warrant for arrest, or magistrate's order serves as the pleading of the State for a misdemeanor prosecuted in the district court, unless the prosecutor files a statement of charges, or there is objection to trial on a citation. When a statement of charges is filed it supersedes all previous pleadings of the State and constitutes the pleading of the State.

(b) Statement of Charges.

(1) A statement of charges is a criminal pleading which charges a misdemeanor. It must be signed by the prosecutor who files it.
(2) Upon appropriate motion, a defendant is entitled to a period of at least three working days for the preparation of his defense after a statement of charges is filed, or the time the defendant is first notified of the statement of charges, whichever is later, unless the judge finds that the statement of charges makes no material change in the pleadings and that no additional time is necessary.
(3) If the judge rules that the pleadings charging a misdemeanor are insufficient and a prosecutor is permitted to file a statement of charges pursuant to subsection (e), the order of the judge must allow the prosecutor three working days, unless the judge determines that a longer period is justified, in which to file the statement of charges, and must provide that the charges will be dismissed if the statement of charges is not filed within the period allowed.

(c) Objection to Trial on Citation. — A defendant charged in a citation with a criminal offense may by appropriate motion require that the offense be charged in a new pleading. The prosecutor must then file a statement of charges unless it appears that a criminal summons or a warrant for arrest should be secured in order to insure the attendance of the defendant, and in addition serve as the new pleading.

(d) Statement of Charges upon Determination of Prosecutor. — The prosecutor may file a statement of charges upon his own determination at any time prior to arraignment in the district court. It may charge the same offenses as the citation, criminal summons, warrant for arrest, or magistrate's order or additional or different offenses.

(e) Objection to Sufficiency of Criminal Summons; Warrant for Arrest or Magistrate's Order as Pleading. — If the defendant by appropriate motion objects to the sufficiency of a criminal summons, warrant for arrest, or magistrate's order as a pleading, at the time of or after arraignment in the district court or upon trial de novo in the superior court, and the judge rules that the pleading is insufficient, the prosecutor may file a statement of charges, but a statement of charges filed pursuant to this authorization may not change the nature of the offense.

(f) Amendment of Pleadings prior to or after Final Judgment. — A statement of charges, criminal summons, warrant for arrest, citation, or magistrate's order may be amended at any time prior to or after final judgment when the amendment does not change the nature of the offense charged.

(g) Pleadings When Misdemeanor Prosecution Initiated in Superior Court. — When the prosecution of a misdemeanor is initiated in the superior court as permitted by G.S. 7A-271, the prosecution must be upon information or indictment.

(h) Allegations in Superior Court of Prior Convictions. — When charges in the district court involve allegations of prior convictions and there is an appeal to the superior court for trial de novo, a statement of charges must be filed in the superior court to charge the offense in the manner provided in G.S. 15A-928. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1979, c. 770; 1985, c. 689, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Prerequisites of Valid Warrant. — A valid warrant of arrest must be based on an examination of the complainant under oath; it must identify the person charged; it must contain directly or by proper reference at least a defective statement of the crime charged; and it must be directed to a lawful officer or to a class of officers commanding the arrest of the accused. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Effect of Defects in Warrant. — Defects, if any, in the warrant affect its validity as a basis for a criminal prosecution on the charge set forth in the affidavit as well as its validity as a basis for a legal arrest. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Amendment of Warrant. — This section conforms to the long-held principle in this State that an amendment to a warrant under which a defendant is charged is permissible as long as the amended warrant does not charge the defendant with a different offense. State v. Clements, 51 N.C. App. 113, 275 S.E.2d 222 (1981).

In a trial de novo in the superior court upon a warrant alleging death by vehicle, the trial court did not err in allowing the State to amend the warrant at the close of the State's evidence by striking an allegation of "following too closely" and adding an allegation of "failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident, a violation of G.S. 20-141(m)," since the nature of the offense with which the defendant was charged, death by vehicle, was not changed by the amendment. State v. Clements, 51 N.C. App. 113, 275 S.E.2d 222 (1981).

A fatally defective warrant cannot be amended; instead of issuing an amendment, the State should file a statement of charges to rectify the situation. State v. Madry, 140 N.C. App. 600, 537 S.E.2d 827 (2000).

Statutory right to object to trial in citation applies only to the court of original jurisdiction. State v. Monroe, 57 N.C. App. 597, 292 S.E.2d 21 (1982).

Once jurisdiction had been established and defendant had been tried in district court, he was no longer in a position to assert his statutory right to object to trial on citation when he appealed to superior court. State v. Monroe, 57 N.C. App. 597, 292 S.E.2d 21 (1982).

Further Prosecution After Previous Judgment Vacated. — Where verdict and judgment were vacated because the warrant was fatally defective, this did not bar further prosecution of defendant if the solicitor (now prosecutor) deemed it advisable. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Warrants Held Insufficient to Be Treated as an Information. — See State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Error in Name of Person to Be Arrested. — Where, in the order of arrest portion of the purported warrant, the person ordered arrested was "Dempsey Roy Smith" and not the defendant, "Dempsey Roy Powell," the instrument did not meet the requirement that it be directed to a lawful officer commanding the arrest of the accused. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Failure to Name Person Assaulted. — An instrument setting forth the charge of assault by the use of the words "assault on an officer" to identify the person assaulted was not sufficient to charge the offense of assault. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Resisting Arrest. — A North Carolina uniform traffic ticket setting forth the charge of resisting arrest by using only the two words "resist arrest" was not sufficient to charge the offense. State v. Powell, 10 N.C. App. 443, 179 S.E.2d 153 (1971).

Applied in State v. Martin, 46 N.C. App. 514, 265 S.E.2d 456 (1980); State v. Killian, 61 N.C. App. 155, 300 S.E.2d 257 (1983); State v. Reeves, 62 N.C. App. 219, 302 S.E.2d 658 (1983).

Quoted in State v. Caudill, 68 N.C. App. 268, 314 S.E.2d 592 (1984); In re Davis, 114 N.C. App. 253, 441 S.E.2d 696 (1994).

Stated in State v. Chase, 117 N.C. App. 686, 453 S.E.2d 195 (1995).

§ 15A-923. Use of pleadings in felony cases and misdemeanor cases initiated in the superior court division.

(a) Prosecution on Information or Indictment. — The pleading in felony cases and misdemeanor cases initiated in the superior court division must be a bill of indictment, unless there is a waiver of the bill of indictment as provided in G.S. 15A-642. If there is a waiver, the pleading must be an information. A presentment by the grand jury may not serve as the pleading in a criminal case.

(b) Form of Information or Indictment. — An information and a bill of indictment charge the crime or crimes in the same manner. An information has entered upon it or attached to it the defendant's written waiver of a bill of indictment. The bill of indictment has entered upon it the finding of the grand jury that it is a true bill.

(c) Waiver of Indictment. — The defendant may waive a bill of indictment as provided in G.S. 15A-642.

(d) Amendment of Information. — An information may be amended only with the consent of the defendant.

(e) No Amendment of Indictment. — A bill of indictment may not be amended. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section provides for the use of informations and indictments in felony cases and in misdemeanor cases initiated in the superior court. The pleading provisions set out here must be read in conjunction with the provisions for the grand jury (Article 31) and the indictment (Article 32).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

This statute has been construed to mean only that an indictment may not be amended in a way which would substantially alter the charge set forth in the indictment. Thus, for example, where time is not an essential element of the crime, an amendment relating to the date of the offense is permissible since the amendment would not substantially alter the charge set forth in the indictment. State v. Brinson, 337 N.C. 764, 448 S.E.2d 822 (1994).

An indictment may not be amended pursuant to subsection (e); however, this statute has been construed to mean that an indictment may not be amended in a way which would substantially alter the charge set forth in the indictment. State v. Sisk, 123 N.C. App. 361, 473 S.E.2d 348 (1996), aff'd in part and discretionary review improvidently allowed in part, 345 N.C. 749, 483 S.E.2d 440 (1997).

Because the indictment charging a first-degree sexual offense included the terms "feloniously" and "against the victim's will," the charge was sufficient to charge first-degree sexual offense and was not substantially altered by the addition of the term by force; thus, the trial court did not err in allowing the amendment pursuant to § 15A-923(e). State v. Haywood, 144 N.C. App. 223, 550 S.E.2d 38 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 72, 553 S.E.2d 206 (2001).

Change of Address on Indictment. — The trial court did not violate this section when it allowed the State's amendment to an indictment for keeping and maintaining a dwelling for the use of a controlled substance to correct the address from "919 Dollard Town Road" to "929 Dollard Town Road." State v. Grady, 136 N.C. App. 394, 524 S.E.2d 75 (2000).

Trials upon presentments have been abolished, and a presentment amounts to nothing more than an instruction by the grand jury to the public prosecuting attorney to frame a bill of indictment. State v. Elledge, 13 N.C. App. 462, 186 S.E.2d 192 (1972).

The experience of early days proved the practice of trying criminal cases upon the presentments of grand jurors to be wholly impracticable. As a consequence, the General Assembly of 1797 outlawed the practice by a statute. Since the adoption of the act of 1797, a presentment is regarded as nothing more than an instruction by the grand jury to the public prosecuting attorney for framing a bill of indictment for submission to them. State v. Thomas, 236 N.C. 454, 73 S.E.2d 283 (1952).

Misdemeanor Cannot Be Tried Initially in Superior Court Except upon Indictment. — Under the statute and N.C. Const., Art. I, § 22, a person charged with the commission of a misdemeanor cannot be tried initially in the superior court except upon an indictment found by a grand jury, unless he waives indictment in accordance with regulations prescribed by the legislature. State v. Norman, 237 N.C. 205, 74 S.E.2d 602 (1953).

Trial in superior court upon the original warrant is a nullity where there has been no conviction by an inferior court having jurisdiction. State v. Evans, 262 N.C. 492, 137 S.E.2d 811 (1964).

Where the defendant pleads not guilty to a misdemeanor, the requirements for a waiver of indictment and for trial upon an information signed by the solicitor (now prosecutor) are the same as in noncapital felony cases. State v. Bethea, 272 N.C. 521, 158 S.E.2d 591 (1968); State v. Snipes, 16 N.C. App. 416, 192 S.E.2d 62 (1972).

An indictment may not be amended. State v. Hughes, 118 N.C. App. 573, 455 S.E.2d 912 (1995).

Term "amendment" in subsection (e) is defined as any change in the indictment which would substantially alter the charge set forth in the indictment. State v. Carrington, 35 N.C. App. 53, 240 S.E.2d 475, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 737, 244 S.E.2d 155 (1978); State v. Rotenberry, 54 N.C. App. 504, 284 S.E.2d 197 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 306, 290 S.E.2d 705 (1982); State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986); State v. Bailey, 97 N.C. App. 472, 389 S.E.2d 131 (1990); State v. Hyder, 100 N.C. App. 270, 396 S.E.2d 86 (1990).

Amending Typographical Error. — Where defendant was charged in an arrest warrant and a bill of indictment for felonious assault, amending a mere typographical error in the bill of indictment involving the case number did not alter the charge in any way and was not violative of this section. State v. Rotenberry, 54 N.C. App. 504, 284 S.E.2d 197 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 306, 290 S.E.2d 705 (1982).

Change in Allegation of Ownership. — Deletion by trial court of the words, "Mike Frost, president" from indictments charging defendant with embezzlement to change ownership from Mike Frost, an individual, to Petroleum World, Inc., a corporation, was a substantial alteration of the indictment prohibited by subsection (e) of this section. State v. Hughes, 118 N.C. App. 573, 455 S.E.2d 912 (1995).

Correction of Victim's Name. — Change to indictments which had stated victim's name as Pettress Cebron to correctly reflect the victim's name as Cebron Pettress was not an amendment within the meaning of subsection (e) of this section, and the trial court properly allowed this change. State v. Bailey, 97 N.C. App. 472, 389 S.E.2d 131 (1990).

Where a change in the name of the victim substantially altered the charge in the indictment, the trial court was without authority to allow the amendment. State v. Abraham, 338 N.C. 315, 451 S.E.2d 131 (1994).

A change in defendant's name, adding one letter, was not a substantial alteration and did not impermissibly alter the charge in the original indictment. State v. Grigsby, 134 N.C. App. 315, 517 S.E.2d 195 (1999), rev'd on other grounds, 351 N.C. 454, 526 S.E.2d 460 (2000).

The failure to accurately state the date or time an offense is alleged to have occurred does not invalidate a bill of indictment, nor does it justify reversal of a conviction obtained thereon. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

The State may prove that an offense charged was committed on some date other than the time named in the indictment. A variance as to time, however, becomes material and of the essence when it deprives a defendant of an opportunity to adequately present his defense. State v. Price, 310 N.C. 596, 313 S.E.2d 556 (1984).

Ordinarily, the date alleged in the indictment is neither an essential nor a substantial fact, and therefore the State may prove that the offense was actually committed on some date other than that alleged in the indictment, without the necessity of a motion to change the bill. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

Change in County on Indictment. — Where the defendant could not have been misled or surprised as to the nature of the charges against him, the substitution of Mitchell County for Watauga County did not amount to an impermissible amendment of the indictment under subsection (e) of this section, as it did not alter the charge in the indictment. State v. Hyder, 100 N.C. App. 270, 396 S.E.2d 86 (1990).

Change of Date on Indictment. — In prosecution for incest, where although the testimony of the young prosecuting witness as to the date of the offense differed from that of her mother, all of the State's evidence showed that the crime, if committed, took place on the Sunday of the weekend during which a certain individual visited the defendant's residence, the change on the indictment of the date of the offense, as permitted by the trial court, did not substantially alter the charge against the defendant, nor did it unfairly surprise him or prevent him from presenting a defense. State v. Cameron, 83 N.C. App. 69, 349 S.E.2d 327 (1986).

Trial court did not err in allowing State's oral motion to amend conspiracy indictments, where indictments initially charged that conspiracies occurred on or about May 6, 1987, through May 12, 1987, and amended indictments changed the time of the conspiracies to a period beginning on April 19, 1987, until May 12, 1987, as the conspiracy charges were not substantially altered by changing the dates recited in the indictments. State v. Kamtsiklis, 94 N.C. App. 250, 380 S.E.2d 400 (1989).

It was the fact that another felony was committed, not its specific date, which was the essential question in habitual felon indictment; therefore, because date alleged in indictment was neither an essential nor a substantial fact as to the charge of habitual felon, the trial court properly allowed the state to change a date in the habitual felon indictment. State v. Locklear, 117 N.C. App. 255, 450 S.E.2d 516 (1994).

Change of date in indictment was not an amendment proscribed by this section. State v. Campbell, 133 N.C. App. 531, 515 S.E.2d 732 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 111, 540 S.E.2d 370 (1999).

Moving a Phrase. — Amendment to indictment which moved the phrase "a deadly weapon" was permissible because it did not substantially alter the charge in the original indictment and because the original indictment was sufficient to allege that the cell floor and bars were deadly weapons. State v. Brinson, 337 N.C. 764, 448 S.E.2d 822 (1994).

The change made in the indictment from "knife" to "firearm" did not alter the burden of proof or constitute a substantial change which would justify returning the indictment to the grand jury, and did not violate this section. State v. Joyce, 104 N.C. App. 558, 410 S.E.2d 516 (1991), cert. denied, 331 N.C. 120, 414 S.E.2d 764 (1992).

Change in Rape Indictment Permitted. — Where indictments alleged offense was committed against person of "Regina Lapish Foster" and indictment for rape used name "Regina Lapish," but at no time was defendant misled or surprised as to nature of charges against him, trial court did not err in allowing State to change rape indictment by substituting the name of "Regina Lapish Foster" for name of "Regina Lapish"; addition of alleged victim's last name to one of four indictments was not amendment as it did not substantially alter charge set forth in indictment. State v. Marshall, 92 N.C. App. 398, 374 S.E.2d 874 (1988), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 273, 400 S.E.2d 459 (1991).

Applied in State v. Tesenair, 35 N.C. App. 531, 241 S.E.2d 877 (1978).

Quoted in State v. Midyette, 45 N.C. App. 87, 262 S.E.2d 353 (1980); State v. Bowens, 140 N.C. App. 217, 535 S.E.2d 870 (2000).

Stated in State v. Chase, 117 N.C. App. 686, 453 S.E.2d 195 (1995).

§ 15A-924. Contents of pleadings; duplicity; alleging and proving previous convictions; failure to charge crime; surplusage.

(a) A criminal pleading must contain:

(1) The name or other identification of the defendant but the name of the defendant need not be repeated in each count unless required for clarity.

(2) A separate count addressed to each offense charged, but allegations in one count may be incorporated by reference in another count.

(3) A statement or cross reference in each count indicating that the offense charged therein was committed in a designated county.

(4) A statement or cross reference in each count indicating that the offense charged was committed on, or on or about, a designated date, or during a designated period of time. Error as to a date or its omission is not ground for dismissal of the charges or for reversal of a conviction if time was not of the essence with respect to the charge and the error or omission did not mislead the defendant to his prejudice.

(5) A plain and concise factual statement in each count which, without allegations of an evidentiary nature, asserts facts supporting every element of a criminal offense and the defendant's commission thereof with sufficient precision clearly to apprise the defendant or defendants of the conduct which is the subject of the accusation. When the pleading is a criminal summons, warrant for arrest, or magistrate's order, or statement of charges based thereon, both the statement of the crime and any information showing probable cause which was considered by the judicial official and which has been furnished to the defendant must be used in determining whether the pleading is sufficient to meet the foregoing requirement.

(6) For each count a citation of any applicable statute, rule, regulation, ordinance, or other provision of law alleged therein to have been violated. Error in the citation or its omission is not ground for dismissal of the charges or for reversal of a conviction.

(b) If any count of an indictment or information charges more than one offense, the defendant may by timely filing of a motion require the State to elect and state a single offense alleged in the count upon which the State will proceed to trial. A count may be dismissed for duplicity if the State fails to make timely election.

(c) In trials in superior court, allegations of previous convictions are subject to the provisions of G.S. 15A-928.

(d) In alleging and proving a prior conviction, it is sufficient to state that the defendant was at a certain time and place convicted of the previous offense, without otherwise fully alleging all the elements. A duly certified transcript of the record of a prior conviction is, upon proof of the identity of the person of the defendant, sufficient evidence of a prior conviction. If the surname of a defendant charged is identical to the surname of a defendant previously convicted and there is identity with respect to one given name, or two initials, or two initials corresponding with the first letters of given names, between the two defendants, and there is no evidence that would indicate the two defendants are not one and the same, the identity of name is prima facie evidence that the two defendants are the same person.

(e) Upon motion of a defendant under G.S. 15A-952(b) the court must dismiss the charges contained in a pleading which fails to charge the defendant with a crime in the manner required by subsection (a), unless the failure is with regard to a matter as to which an amendment is allowable.

(f) Upon motion of a defendant under G.S. 15A-952(b) the court may strike inflammatory or prejudicial surplusage from the pleading. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 642, s. 2; 1989, c. 290, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section states the basic rules for pleading in criminal cases. Much here is familiar, but there are changes, including provisions permitting allegations in one count to be incorporated by reference in another. The pleading rule, requiring factual (but not evidentiary) allegations to support each element, is in accord with traditional ideas, see State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953), and provides a concise statutory statement. There are sections in Chapter 15 of the General Statutes providing what is sufficient to charge certain crimes, but it was thought better to leave those as they are at present. At such time as there is substantive revision, further simplification can be made in pleading.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Effect on § 15-144. — North Carolina Const., Art. I, § 23 and subdivision (a)(5) of this section did not specifically repeal § 15-144, nor did they repeal it by implication. State v. Avery, 315 N.C. 1, 337 S.E.2d 786 (1985), aff'd, 95 N.C. App. 572, 383 S.E.2d 224 (1989).

It is generally true that indictments need only allege the ultimate facts constituting the elements of the criminal offense. State v. Singleton, 85 N.C. App. 123, 354 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 516, 358 S.E.2d 530 (1987).

Indictment Not Dispositive of Double Jeopardy Issue. — Indictments need only allege the ultimate facts constituting each element of the criminal offense; because a very detailed account is not necessary for legally sufficient indictments, examination of the indictments is not always dispositive on the issue of double jeopardy. State v. Rambert, 341 N.C. 173, 459 S.E.2d 510 (1995).

An indictment couched in the language of the statute is generally sufficient to charge the statutory offense. State v. Singleton, 85 N.C. App. 123, 354 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 516, 358 S.E.2d 530 (1987).

Indictment which avers facts constituting every element of an offense need not be couched in language of statute. State v. Hicks, 86 N.C. App. 36, 356 S.E.2d 595 (1987).

A criminal pleading does not have to state every element of the offense charged, but only facts supporting every element of the offense. State v. Jordan, 75 N.C. App. 637, 331 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 544, 335 S.E.2d 23 (1985).

The purpose behind requiring that the county in which the offense took place be alleged is to establish a basis for jurisdiction and venue. State v. Gardner, 84 N.C. App. 616, 353 S.E.2d 662, aff'd, 320 N.C. 789, 360 S.E.2d 695 (1987).

Where there was no error in the dates alleged, even if time were of the essence in defendants' case, the charges would not be subject to dismissal under subdivision (a)(4). State v. Oliver, 85 N.C. App. 1, 354 S.E.2d 527, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 174, 358 S.E.2d 65 (1987).

Variance between allegation and proof as to time is not material where no statute of limitations is involved. State v. Burton, 114 N.C. App. 610, 442 S.E.2d 384 (1994).

Specifying Felony in Indictment. — An essential element of kidnapping under § 14-39(a)(2) is that the confinement, restraint or removal be for the purpose of facilitating the commission of any felony or facilitating escape following the commission of a felony. The requirements of subdivision (a)(5) are met for the purposes of alleging this element by the allegation in the indictment that the confinement, restraint, or removal was carried out for the purpose of facilitating "a felony" or escape following "a felony". It is not required that the indictment specify the felony referred to in § 14-39(a)(2). State v. Freeman, 314 N.C. 432, 333 S.E.2d 743 (1985).

Indictments which did not allege specific felonies nonetheless satisfied the requirements of this section. State v. Parker, 350 N.C. 411, 516 S.E.2d 106 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1084, 120 S. Ct. 808, 145 L. Ed. 2d 681 (2000).

Indictments listing the month and year of each alleged offense sufficiently comply with this section in a case involving sexual abuse of a child. State v. Jarrell, 133 N.C. App. 264, 515 S.E.2d 247 (1999).

An indictment alleging that the defendant kidnapped the victim "by unlawfully confining, restraining, or removing her from one place to another without her consent for the purpose of committing a felony . . ." charges the offense in the language of the statute and is sufficient. All of the elements of the crime of kidnapping are clearly alleged in the indictment. The additional "rape or robbery" language in the indictment, following "committing a felony," is mere harmless surplusage and may properly be disregarded in passing upon its validity. State v. Freeman, 314 N.C. 432, 333 S.E.2d 743 (1985).

Failure to name the party whom the defendant aided and abetted did not violate this section by failing to assert a fact supporting an element of the offense. State v. Poplin, 56 N.C. App. 304, 289 S.E.2d 124, cert. denied, 305 N.C. 763, 292 S.E.2d 579 (1982).

Short-form murder indictment which did not allege premeditation nor the elements of felony murder was held not defective. State v. Harris, 323 N.C. 112, 371 S.E.2d 689 (1988).

The State complied with the requirement of subdivision (a)(4) by stating the period of time during which the alleged offense occurred: the summer of 1986. State v. Reynolds, 93 N.C. App. 552, 378 S.E.2d 557 (1989).

The State Complied with Subdivision (a)(4). — Indictments sufficiently complied with subdivision (a)(4), where indictments charging sexual offenses with a minor alleged that they occurred between January 1 and September 12, 1994, and where the child testified at trial that the offenses occurred when she was seven years old and that some of those acts happened when it was cold outside and some when it was warm outside. State v. Blackmon, 130 N.C. App. 692, 507 S.E.2d 42 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 531, 526 S.E.2d 470 (1998).

Date in Indictment Must Match Proof. — The dramatic variance between the date set forth in an indictment for first-degree sex offense against a child under the age of 13 and the evidence presented by the state prejudiced the defendant by depriving him of an opportunity to adequately present his defense where (1) the indictment listed the date of the offense as "7-01-1991 to 7-31-1991," and defendant prepared and presented alibi evidence in direct reliance on those dates, and (2) during trial, the state introduced evidence concerning sexual encounters between the victim and defendant over a two and one-half year period, but presented no evidence of a specific act occurring during July 1991. State v. Stewart, 353 N.C. 516, 546 S.E.2d 568 (2001).

Cases decided prior to the enactment of subdivision (a)(5) which held that an "indictment for burglary must specify the particular felony which the defendant is alleged to have intended to commit at the time of the breaking and entering, and it is not sufficient to charge generally an intent to commit an unspecified felony" are no longer controlling on this issue. State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

As a general rule a warrant following substantially the words of subdivision (a)(5) of this section is sufficient when it charges the essentials of the offense in a plain, intelligible, and explicit manner. If, however, the statutory language fails to set forth the essentials of the offense, then the statutory language must be supplemented by other allegations which plainly, intelligibly, and explicitly set forth every essential element of the offense as to leave no doubt in the mind of the defendant and the court as to the offense intended to be charged. State v. Barneycastle, 61 N.C. App. 694, 301 S.E.2d 711 (1983).

Together, subsection (e) of this section and § 15A-954(a)(10) provide that on motion of the defendant the court must dismiss the charges stated in a criminal pleading if the pleading fails to charge the defendant with a crime in the manner required by subsection (a) of this section, unless the failure is with regard to a matter as to which an amendment is allowed. State v. Barneycastle, 61 N.C. App. 694, 301 S.E.2d 711 (1983).

In cases of sexual assaults on children, temporal specificity requisites diminish. Thus where child victim testified that defendant perpetrated rape and other sexual offenses against her on several occasions over a period of six years, and specifically recalled offenses occurring on September 27 and September 29, 1988, for both of which dates defendant presented an alibi, and where the difference between the testimony of the victim as to which offense occurred on which date did not prevent defendant from presenting his alibi, there was no error in letting the case go to the jury. State v. Young, 103 N.C. App. 415, 406 S.E.2d 3, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 201, 412 S.E.2d 65 (1991); State v. Burton, 114 N.C. App. 610, 442 S.E.2d 384 (1994).

Indictments for taking indecent liberties held to clearly inform defendant of the conduct which was the subject of the accusations as required by subdivision (a)(5), and therefore sufficiently charged the offense, and did not need to specify the exact act which constituted the "immoral, improper and indecent liberty." State v. Singleton, 85 N.C. App. 123, 354 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 516, 358 S.E.2d 530 (1987).

Indictments charging sexual offenses with a minor held sufficient udner subdivision (a)(5), even though they did not describe the nature of the sex acts, where the indictments quoted the language of the relevant statutes. State v. Blackmon, 130 N.C. App. 692, 507 S.E.2d 42 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 531, 526 S.E.2d 470 (1998).

Indictment charging defendant with crime against nature held sufficient under subdivision (a)(5) of this section. State v. Singleton, 85 N.C. App. 123, 354 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 516, 358 S.E.2d 530 (1987).

Unlawful Private Use of Publicly Owned Vehicle. — A misdemeanor statement of charges which, when all surplusage was excluded from consideration, asserted that the defendant was a state employee, that she directed her subordinate to pick up a birthday cake and deliver it to her home, and that she did so with knowledge that her private purpose would be accomplished through the use of a state-owned motor vehicle, was sufficient to support a conviction of unlawful private use of a publicly owned vehicle. State v. Lilly, 75 N.C. App. 173, 330 S.E.2d 30 (1985).

In a prosecution for failing to stop at the scene of an accident resulting in property damage, the defendant's knowledge that a collision involving his car had occurred and that property damage had resulted was clearly inferable from the facts, duly alleged under subdivision (a)(4), that while the defendant operated the car it collided with and damaged another vehicle. State v. Jordan, 75 N.C. App. 637, 331 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 544, 335 S.E.2d 23 (1985).

Indictment Held Sufficient. — Indictment which alleged the element of possession of marijuana and further alleged that the amount of marijuana possessed exceeded one ounce set out the elements of possession of more than one ounce of marijuana with sufficient clarity to apprise defendant that he was charged with that offense. State v. Perry, 84 N.C. App. 309, 352 S.E.2d 259, appeal dismissed, 319 N.C. 676, 356 S.E.2d 791 (1987).

Indictment alleging that defendant entered into an agreement with two or more persons to commit, on December 20, 1985, the unlawful act of breaking and entering to commit larceny contained sufficient allegations to meet the requirements of subdivision (a)(5). State v. Hicks, 86 N.C. App. 36, 356 S.E.2d 595 (1987).

An indictment that alleged that larceny was committed "pursuant to a violation of G.S. 14-51" was in the language of § 14-72(b) and was sufficient to apprise defendant that he was charged with larceny punishable as a felony because it was committed pursuant to a burglary. State v. Mandina, 91 N.C. App. 686, 373 S.E.2d 155 (1988).

Indictment for first-degree burglary satisfied the requirements of subdivision (a)(5), even though it did not specify the felony the defendant intended to commit when he entered victim's apartment. State v. Worsley, 336 N.C. 268, 443 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

Indictment which alleged that defendant unlawfully and willfully did drive a vehicle on a street or highway while the driver's license issued to him had been permanently revoked was clearly sufficient to charge an offense in violation of § 20-28(b). State v. Baldwin, 117 N.C. App. 713, 453 S.E.2d 193 (1995).

Motion to Dismiss Equivalent to Motion to Quash. — A motion to dismiss under § 15A-954 for failure of the indictment to charge an offense as provided in this section is the functional equivalent of a motion to quash under prior practice. State v. Brown, 81 N.C. App. 281, 343 S.E.2d 553 (1986).

Dismissal on Unsworn Representations Held Erroneous. — The court erred in allowing motion to dismiss indictments which on their face sufficiently alleged the offense of embezzlement, where even assuming, arguendo, that the court could consider extraneous evidence in ruling on the motion, only the unsworn representations of defense counsel at the hearing on defendant's motion, to the effect that defendant was a partner in the victimized partnership, were before the court. State v. Brown, 81 N.C. App. 281, 343 S.E.2d 553 (1986).

Parker, 350 N.C. 411, 516 S.E.2d 106 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1084, 120 S. Ct. 808, 145 L. Ed. 2d 681 (2000).

II. IDENTIFICATION OF DEFENDANT.

Identification of Person Charged. — An indictment must clearly and positively identify the person charged with the commission of the offense; the name of the defendant, or a sufficient description if his name is unknown, must be alleged in the body of the indictment. State v. Simpson, 302 N.C. 613, 276 S.E.2d 361 (1981).

Failure to Identify Fatal. — The omission of defendant's name, or a sufficient description if his name is unknown, is a fatal and incurable defect. State v. Simpson, 302 N.C. 613, 276 S.E.2d 361 (1981).

Allegation of Defendant's Residence Unnecessary. — The trial court properly denied defendant's motion to dismiss murder indictments against him on the ground they described him as being a resident of one county when in fact he resided in another county since defendant's residence was immaterial and the allegations as to his county of residence were at most surplusage. State v. Oliver, 302 N.C. 28, 274 S.E.2d 183 (1981).

III. MORE THAN ONE OFFENSE IN A COUNT.

Joinder of Separate Offenses Arising from Same Act. — Neither the express language of § 15A-926(a) nor this section will support the contention that the two statutes, when taken together, reflect a legislative intent that separate offenses arising from the same acts or occurrences be joined for trial only when they are contained in separate counts of the same bill of indictment or other criminal pleading. State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979).

Separate Offenses in Same Count. — In a prosecution for felonious sale and delivery of marijuana, and felonious possession of marijuana with intent to sell, the fact that the State included in the same count as a single offense both sale and delivery, even though the two acts could have been charged as separate offenses, was not prejudicial to the defendant. State v. Dietz, 289 N.C. 488, 223 S.E.2d 357 (1976).

IV. ALLEGATION OF PRIOR CONVICTIONS.

No Presumption of Prior Conviction. — Where the indictment does not charge a previous conviction it will be presumed that the defendant has not heretofore been convicted of the offense charged. State v. Clark, 183 N.C. 733, 110 S.E. 641 (1922).

Time and place of conviction of prior offense must be alleged. State v. Lawrence, 264 N.C. 220, 141 S.E.2d 264 (1965).

It is necessary also to allege in the indictment facts showing that at a certain time and place the defendant was convicted of the previous offense or offenses. State v. Bennett, 271 N.C. 423, 156 S.E.2d 725 (1967).

Standard of Proof of Prior Conviction. — A more formal proof is required to show a prior conviction than is required for merely showing lawful custody. State v. Chapman, 20 N.C. App. 456, 201 S.E.2d 579 (1974).

Record of Former Action as Proof. — The record itself in the former action, being in existence, is the only evidence admissible to prove its contents. Jones v. Jones, 241 N.C. 291, 85 S.E.2d 156 (1954); State v. Michaels, 11 N.C. App. 110, 180 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

Certified Transcript of Record as Evidence of Prior Conviction. — Where a person is charged in a bill of indictment with an offense which, on conviction thereof, is punishable with a greater penalty than on the first conviction and the indictment properly alleges a prior conviction, that a transcript of the record of the first conviction, duly certified, is, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, sufficient evidence of the first conviction. State v. Walls, 4 N.C. App. 661, 167 S.E.2d 547 (1969).

Admission of Secondary Evidence. — In order to admit secondary evidence of the contents of a court record, it is necessary that the foundation be laid by showing the original record has been destroyed or lost. Jones v. Jones, 241 N.C. 291, 85 S.E.2d 156 (1954);

State v. Michaels, 11 N.C. App. 110, 180 S.E.2d 442 (1971).

Use of only the commitments issued as the result of prior convictions of escape for the purpose of establishing the prior conviction or convictions was error, since a transcript of the record of the prior conviction or convictions, i.e., a certified copy of the judgment or judgments, is required. State v. Chapman, 20 N.C. App. 456, 201 S.E.2d 579 (1974).

Admission of Division of Motor Vehicles records as evidence in a "second offense" case constituted prejudicial error. State v. Mabry, 18 N.C. App. 492, 197 S.E.2d 44 (1973).

Habitual Felons. — Because being a habitual felon is not a substantive criminal offense, but rather a status, each element of the offense need not be pleaded; all that is needed is that the defendant be given notice "that he is being prosecuted for some substantive felony as a recidivist." State v. Roberts, 135 N.C. App. 690, 522 S.E.2d 130 (1999).

Indictment for Impaired Driving and Habitual Impaired Driving. — An indictment which alleges in one count the elements of impaired driving and alleges in a second count previous convictions which would elevate the impaired driving offense to habitual impaired driving is a valid indictment under this section and § 15A-928. State v. Lobohe, 143 N.C. App. 555, 547 S.E.2d 107 (2001).

Admission of Authenticity of Record Is Not Admission That Defendant Was Person Convicted. — The admission of the authenticity of the record of an inferior court introduced by the solicitor (now prosecutor) is not an admission by the defendant that he had been theretofore convicted of a similar offense, even though the record shows a conviction of a similar offense, there being no admission by defendant that he was the person referred to in the record and an instruction assuming that defendant had made such admission must be held for error. State v. Powell, 254 N.C. 231, 118 S.E.2d 617 (1961).

§ 15A-925. Bill of particulars.

(a) Upon motion of a defendant under G.S. 15A-952, the court in which a charge is pending may order the State to file a bill of particulars with the court and to serve a copy upon the defendant.

(b) A motion for a bill of particulars must request and specify items of factual information desired by the defendant which pertain to the charge and which are not recited in the pleading, and must allege that the defendant cannot adequately prepare or conduct his defense without such information.

(c) If any or all of the items of information requested are necessary to enable the defendant adequately to prepare or conduct his defense, the court must order the State to file and serve a bill of particulars. Nothing contained in this section authorizes an order for a bill of particulars which requires the State to recite matters of evidence.

(d) The bill of particulars must be filed with the court and must recite every item of information required in the order. A copy must be served upon the defendant, or his attorney. The proceedings are stayed pending the filing and service.

(e) A bill of particulars may not supply an omission or cure a defect in a criminal pleading. The evidence of the State, as to those matters within the scope of the motion, is limited to the items set out in the bill of particulars. The court may permit amendment of a bill of particulars at any time prior to trial. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section generally reflects former practice, but sets out more detail than did § 15-143.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Bill of Particulars Originally Available in Civil Proceedings. — Provision as to a bill of particulars had prevailed previously as to civil proceedings, and was by statute made expressly applicable to criminal cases, to which the court had applied it in State v. Brady, 107

N.C. 822, 12 S.E. 325 (1890); State v. Stephens, 170 N.C. 745, 87 S.E. 131 (1915).

Purpose of Section. — The statute intended to make all indictments alike in regard to dispensing with the insertion of the means and methods by which any offense was committed. State v. Stephens, 170 N.C. 745, 87 S.E. 131 (1915).

When Applicable. — The statute applied only when further information, not required to be set out in the indictment, was desired. State v. Thornton, 251 N.C. 658, 111 S.E.2d 901 (1960); State v. Ingram, 271 N.C. 538, 157 S.E.2d 119 (1967).

A defendant may request a bill of particulars to obtain information to supplement the facts contained in the indictment. State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

Function of a bill of particulars is (1) to inform the defense of the specific occurrences intended to be investigated on the trial, and (2) to limit the course of the evidence to the particular scope of inquiry. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986); State v. Spence, 271 N.C. 23, 155 S.E.2d 802 (1967), vacated on other grounds, 392 U.S. 649, 88 S. Ct. 2290, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1350 (1968); State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976); State v. Williams, 304 N.C. 394, 284 S.E.2d 437 (1981); State v. Young, 312 N.C. 669, 325 S.E.2d 181 (1985).

The function of a bill of particulars is to inform the defendant of the nature of the evidence which the State proposes to offer. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986); State v. Cameron, 283 N.C. 191, 195 S.E.2d 481 (1973); State v. Martin, 21 N.C. App. 645, 205 S.E.2d 583 (1974); State v. Covington, 290 N.C. 313, 226 S.E.2d 629 (1976).

The whole object of a bill of particulars is to enable the defendant to properly prepare his defense in cases where the bill of indictment, though correct in form and sufficient to apprise the defendant, in general terms, of the "accusation" against him, is yet so indefinite in its statements as to the particular charge or occurrence referred to that it does not afford defendant a fair opportunity to procure his witnesses or prepare his defense. State v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 149 N.C. 508, 62 S.E. 1088 (1908).

The purpose of a bill of particulars is to give an accused notice of the specific charge or charges against him and to apprise him of the particular transactions which are to be brought in question on the trial. State v. Johnson, 30 N.C. App. 376, 226 S.E.2d 876, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 229 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

What Bill Will Not Supply. — A bill of particulars will not supply any matter required to be charged in the indictment as an ingredient of the offense. State v. Long, 143 N.C. 670, 57 S.E. 349 (1907); State v. Thornton, 251 N.C. 658, 111 S.E.2d 901 (1960); State v. Banks, 263 N.C. 784, 140 S.E.2d 318 (1965).

A bill of particulars cannot supply a deficiency in an indictment when the language of the indictment fails to adequately charge the essential concomitants of the offense. State v. Cole, 202 N.C. 592, 163 S.E. 594 (1932). See also, State v. Wilson, 218 N.C. 769, 12 S.E.2d 654 (1941); State v. Cox, 244 N.C. 57, 92 S.E.2d 413 (1956).

The function of a bill of particulars is to provide further information not required to be set out in the bill of indictment, but never to supply matter required to be charged as an essential ingredient of the offense. State v. Gibbs, 234 N.C. 259, 66 S.E.2d 883 (1951).

A fatal defect in an indictment is not cured by the statute which enables the defendant to call for a bill of particulars. The "particulars" authorized are not a part of the indictment. A bill of particulars will not supply any matter which the indictment must contain. State v. Greer, 238 N.C. 325, 77 S.E.2d 917 (1953).

A defect in a warrant is not cured by a bill of particulars. State v. Banks, 263 N.C. 784, 140 S.E.2d 318 (1965).

The statute did not cure a defect in the bill of indictment. State v. Ingram, 271 N.C. 538, 157 S.E.2d 119 (1967).

When Entitled to Particulars. — The court must order the State to respond to a request for a bill of particulars only when the defendant shows that the information requested is necessary to enable him to prepare an adequate defense. State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

Bill of particulars is not a part of the indictment, nor a substitute therefor, nor an amendment thereto. State v. Overman, 269 N.C. 453, 153 S.E.2d 44 (1967), overruled on other grounds, State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

The "particulars" authorized are not a part of the indictment. State v. Thornton, 251 N.C. 658, 111 S.E.2d 901 (1960).

Motion to Quash Not Remedy Where Indictment Is Less Definite Than Defendant Desires. — Where the criminal indictment sufficiently charges all the elements of the offense but is not as definite as the defendant may desire, the defendant's remedy is by motion for a bill of particulars, and not by a motion to quash. State v. Everhardt, 203 N.C. 610, 166 S.E. 738 (1932); State v. Knight, 261 N.C. 17, 134 S.E.2d 101 (1964).

Nor Is Arrest of Judgment. — An indictment charging defendant disjunctively with murder committed with malice, premeditation, and deliberation and with murder committed in the perpetration of a robbery, is not void for uncertainty, since either charge constitutes murder in the first degree, and defendant's remedy, if he desires more specific information is by motion for a bill of particulars, and a motion in arrest of judgment after a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree is properly denied. State v. Puckett, 211 N.C. 66, 189 S.E. 183 (1937).

Where the defendant thinks that an indictment fails to impart information sufficiently specific as to the nature of the charge, he may before trial move the court to order that a bill of particulars be filed, and the court will not arrest the judgment after verdict where he attempts to reserve his fire until he takes first the chance of acquittal. State v. Shade, 115 N.C. 757, 20 S.E. 537 (1894); State v. Corbin, 157 N.C. 619, 72 S.E. 1071 (1911).

Amendment of Bill. — A bill of particulars, being no part of the indictment, is not subject to demurrer, and may be amended at any time, with permission of the court, on such terms or under such conditions as are just. State v. Wadford, 194 N.C. 336, 139 S.E. 608 (1927).

A bill of particulars filed by order of court in a criminal action is not regarded as a part of the indictment, and with the court's permission may be amended at any time, and is not subject to demurrer, the office of such bill being to advise the court and the accused of specific occurrences for investigation. State v. Beal, 199 N.C. 278, 154 S.E. 604 (1930).

Accused is not entitled to require the State to resolve discrepancies in its evidence in advance by a bill of particulars. State v. Johnson, 30 N.C. App. 376, 226 S.E.2d 876, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 229 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

An accused is not entitled to require the State to elect, by a bill of particulars, which witness's version of the events it will present. State v. Johnson, 30 N.C. App. 376, 226 S.E.2d 876, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 229 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

Bill Need Not Recite Matters of Evidence. — An accused is not entitled to an order requiring the State to recite matters of evidence in a bill of particulars. State v. Johnson, 30 N.C. App. 376, 226 S.E.2d 876, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 177, 229 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

Nothing contained in this section authorizes an order for a bill of particulars which requires the State to recite matters of evidence. State v. Alston, 307 N.C. 321, 298 S.E.2d 631 (1983).

State Confined to Particulars Stated. — The granting of a bill of particulars on an indictment for a criminal offense is primarily to inform the accused of the charges against him, and secondarily to inform the court; and while this is not strictly a part of the indictment, its effect is to confine the State in its evidence to the particulars stated. It is reversible error to the prejudice of the defendant's rights for the court to admit, over his objection, evidence as to other criminal offenses not included in the bill to show the scienter or quo animo in relation to the particulars enumerated and coming within the scope of those generally charged in the indictment. State v. Wadford, 194 N.C. 336, 139 S.E. 608 (1927).

When a bill of particulars is furnished, it limits the evidence to the transactions or items therein stated. State v. Knight, 261 N.C. 17, 134 S.E.2d 101 (1964).

Clarification of State's Theory. — Where the defendant seeks clarification of the State's theory for prosecution, the proper procedure is a motion for a bill of particulars. State v. Isom, 52 N.C. App. 331, 278 S.E.2d 327, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 548, 281 S.E.2d 398 (1981).

Election Between Legal Theories Not Required. — It is well settled that the State is not generally required to elect between legal theories in a murder prosecution prior to trial, and where the factual basis for the prosecution is sufficiently pleaded, defendant must be prepared to defend against any and all legal theories which these facts may support. State v. Silhan, 302 N.C. 223, 275 S.E.2d 450 (1981), overruled in part by State v. Sanderson, 346 N.C. 669, 488 S.E.2d 133, State v. Adams, 347 N.C. 48, 490 S.E.2d 220 (1997).

Defendant was not prejudiced in the preparation of his defense and preparation for trial because indictment did not inform him as to whether he was being prosecuted for first or second degree murder. It is well settled in North Carolina that the State is not generally required to elect its theory of prosecution in a murder case before trial. Where a factual basis for the prosecution is sufficiently pleaded, the defendant must be prepared to defend against any and all theories which the facts may support. State v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 567, 397 S.E.2d 364 (1990), cert. dismissed, 328 N.C. 576, 403 S.E.2d 520 (1991).

Aggravating Circumstances in Capital Case. — This section does not authorize a trial court to order the State to disclose its aggravating circumstances in a capital case prior to trial. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Time and Place. — Unless the exact time and place of the alleged occurrence are essential elements of the offense itself, a defendant may obtain further information in respect thereto by motion for a bill of particulars. State v. Eason, 242 N.C. 59, 86 S.E.2d 774 (1955).

Indictment Held Sufficiently Detailed. — The defendant was in effect furnished a bill of particulars where the warrant or indictment described the liquor as "nontaxpaid liquor," since the descriptive words identified the liquor. State v. Tillery, 243 N.C. 706, 92 S.E.2d 64 (1956).

Motion for Bill of Particulars Properly

Denied. — The defendant was in no way prejudiced by the denial of his motion for a bill of particulars where his statements to the officers as to how, when, and under what circumstances he killed the deceased were in accord with the theory of the trial in the court below. State v. Scales, 242 N.C. 400, 87 S.E.2d 916 (1955).

Where defense counsel had been furnished copies of the officers' reports and the reports of the autopsies, had been permitted to interrogate the State's key witness, and was present when the defendant made admissions to investigating officers, and the State introduced nothing which should have been of surprise to the defendant, the court's refusal to order any additional bill of particulars was not error. State v. Porth, 269 N.C. 329, 153 S.E.2d 10 (1967).

Where defendant was given (1) the time of the alleged offense, (2) the specific location of the alleged offense, (3) the quantity of the controlled substance, and (4) the names of the prospective witnesses for the State, and counsel and his law partner were present at a preceding trial where the witnesses stated that their testimony against defendant would be substantially the same as their previous testimony, the information thus provided defendant was adequate, and there was no abuse of discretion in the denial of his motion for a bill of particulars. State v. Martin, 21 N.C. App. 645, 205 S.E.2d 583 (1974).

Short form indictments for first-degree rape and first-degree sexual offense satisfied the statutory requirements and provided defendant adequate notice of the alleged offenses; therefore, denial for bill of particulars was proper. State v. Stallings, 107 N.C. App. 241, 419 S.E.2d 586 (1992), discretionary review improvidently allowed, 333 N.C. 784, 429 S.E.2d 717 (1993).

Defendant was not harmed by the State's failure to notify him that it planned to use his conversation with co-defendant outside the car as evidence of a conspiracy to rape the victim; thus, there was no reversible error in the trial court's denial of defendant's motion for a bill of particulars on the conspiracy charge. State v. Haywood, 144 N.C. App. 223, 550 S.E.2d 38 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 72, 553 S.E.2d 206 (2001).

Indictment for First-Degree Murder. — If a defendant is charged with murder in the first degree by bill of indictment drawn under § 15-144, and desires to know whether the State relies on proof that the killing was done with premeditation and deliberation, or in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate a robbery, he should apply for a bill of particulars as provided in this section. State v. Haynes, 276 N.C. 150, 171 S.E.2d 435 (1970).

Indictment for Perjury. — Where the defendant in an action for perjury is in ignorance of the particulars of the offense charged, his remedy is by application to the court for a bill of particulars. State v. Hawley, 186 N.C. 433, 119 S.E. 888 (1923).

Indictment for Malfeasance of Bank Officer. — It is within the sound discretion of the trial judge to try, separately or collectively, the defendant, indicted under the provisions of § 14-254, for some or all offenses committed by a series of checks on the bank, whereby he had unlawfully "abstracted" the funds of the bank; and where the indictment is sufficient for conviction, the defendant's remedy is by requesting a bill of particulars when he reasonably so desires. State v. Switzer, 187 N.C. 88, 121 S.E. 43 (1924).

Granting or Denial of Motion Is Within Trial Court's Discretion. — The granting of a bill of particulars lies largely within the trial judge's discretion. State v. Covington, 290 N.C. 313, 226 S.E.2d 629 (1976); State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

The granting or denial of motions for a bill of particulars is within the discretion of the court. State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976); State v. Williams, 304 N.C. 394, 284 S.E.2d 437 (1981); State v. Young, 312 N.C. 669, 325 S.E.2d 181 (1985).

A motion for a bill of particulars is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. State v. Silhan, 302 N.C. 223, 275 S.E.2d 450 (1981), overruled in part by State v. Sanderson, 346 N.C. 669, 488 S.E.2d 133, State v. Adams, 347 N.C. 48, 490 S.E.2d 220 (1997); State v. Taylor, 304 N.C. 249, 283 S.E.2d 761 (1981), rehearing denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3552, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398; 463 U.S. 1249, 104 S. Ct. 37, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1456 (1983).

And is not subject to review except for palpable and gross abuse of discretion. State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976); State v. Wilson, 30 N.C. App. 149, 226 S.E.2d 518 (1976); State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980); State v. Williams, 304 N.C. 394, 284 S.E.2d 437 (1981); State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984); State v. Young, 312 N.C. 669, 325 S.E.2d 181 (1985).

Where the State introduced nothing at trial which could have come as a surprise to the defendant, and she had full knowledge of the specific occurrences to be investigated at trial, defendant failed to show that lack of access to information significantly impaired her preparation and conduct of the case. State v. Moore, 335 N.C. 567, 440 S.E.2d 797, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 898, 115 S. Ct. 253, 130 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1994).

When Denial of Bill Held Error. — A denial of a defendant's motion for a bill of particulars will be held error only when it clearly appears to the appellate court that the lack of timely access to the requested information significantly impaired defendant's preparation and conduct of his case. State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980); State v. Randolph, 312 N.C. 198, 321 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

Applied in State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979); State v. Williams, 304 N.C. 394, 284 S.E.2d 437 (1981); State v. Proctor, 58 N.C. App. 631, 294 S.E.2d 240 (1982); State v. Whitfield, 310 N.C. 608, 313 S.E.2d 790 (1984); State v. Rozier, 69 N.C. App. 38, 316 S.E.2d 893 (1984); State v. Freeman, 314 N.C. 432, 333 S.E.2d 743 (1985).

Stated in State v. Parker, 350 N.C. 411, 516 S.E.2d 106 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1084, 120 S. Ct. 808, 145 L. Ed. 2d 681 (2000); In re K.R.B., 134 N.C. App. 328, 517 S.E.2d 200 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 188, 541 S.E.2d 713 (1999).

Cited in State v. Greene, 289 N.C. 578, 223 S.E.2d 365 (1976); State v. McKenna, 289 N.C. 668, 224 S.E.2d 537 (1976); State v. May, 292 N.C. 644, 235 S.E.2d 178 (1977); State v. Harris, 35 N.C. App. 401, 241 S.E.2d 370 (1978); State v. Rankin, 55 N.C. App. 478, 286 S.E.2d 119 (1982); State v. Creason, 68 N.C. App. 599, 315 S.E.2d 540 (1984); State v. Brown, 320 N.C. 179, 358 S.E.2d 1 (1987); State v. Fultz, 92 N.C. App. 80, 373 S.E.2d 445 (1988).

§ 15A-926. Joinder of offenses and defendants.

(a) Joinder of Offenses. — Two or more offenses may be joined in one pleading or for trial when the offenses, whether felonies or misdemeanors or both, are based on the same act or transaction or on a series of acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan. Each offense must be stated in a separate count as required by G.S. 15A-924.

(b) Separate Pleadings for Each Defendant and Joinder of Defendants for Trial.

(1) Each defendant must be charged in a separate pleading.

(2) Upon written motion of the prosecutor, charges against two or more defendants may be joined for trial:

a. When each of the defendants is charged with accountability for each offense; or

b. When, even if all of the defendants are not charged with accountability for each offense, the several offenses charged:

1. Were part of a common scheme or plan; or

2. Were part of the same act or transaction; or

3. Were so closely connected in time, place, and occasion that it would be difficult to separate proof of one charge from proof of the others.

(c) Failure to Join Related Offenses.

(1) When a defendant has been charged with two or more offenses joinable under subsection (a) his timely motion to join them for trial must be granted unless the court determines that because the prosecutor does not have sufficient evidence to warrant trying some of the offenses at that time or if, for some other reason, the ends of justice would be defeated if the motion were granted. A defendant's failure to make this motion constitutes a waiver of any right of joinder of offenses joinable under subsection (a) with which the defendant knew he was charged.

(2) A defendant who has been tried for one offense may thereafter move to dismiss a charge of a joinable offense. The motion to dismiss must be made prior to the second trial, and must be granted unless a. A motion for joinder of these offenses was previously denied, or

b. The court finds that the right of joinder has been waived, or

c. The court finds that because the prosecutor did not have sufficient evidence to warrant trying this offense at the time of the first trial, or because of some other reason, the ends of justice would be defeated if the motion were granted.

(3) The right to joinder under this subsection is not applicable when the defendant has pleaded guilty or no contest to the previous charge. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, ss. 19, 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Sections 15A-926 and 15A-927 are based generally upon the A.B.A. Standards Relating to Joinder and Severance. There are differences. The more familiar North Carolina statement with regard to transactions is retained, joinder for trial for defendants (not pleading joinder of defendants) is covered, and some changes are made in terminology.

Subsection (a) is similar to the former North Carolina statute in that it authorizes joinder on a transactional basis (§ 15-152) and adds the "common scheme or plan" statement from the Federal Rule 8(a). The Commission has eliminated provisions for joinder of offenses on the basis that they are of the same or similar character without any transactional connection. Such joinder contained in present statutes and the A.B.A. Standards would permit the joinder of entirely unrelated crimes in one charge and for trial.

Although some case law in North Carolina and the A.B.A. Standards would permit the joinder of defendants in pleadings, the Commission feels that the interests of the defendant and the ease of keeping court records will be served by requiring that each defendant be charged in a separate pleading, as has been the general custom. That is required by the last sentence of subsection (b). Thus "joinder of defendants for trial" refers to what frequently has been called "consolidation" for trial. The grounds for joinder of defendants for trial should be self-explanatory. The Commission felt it unnecessary to include provisions from the A.B.A. Standards which would have provided for joinder of defendants on the basis of conspiracy.

When there are several offenses arising out of the same transaction or scheme, as defined in the statute, a question is presented as to whether the offenses may be tried ad seriatim, or whether there is any compulsion for the State to proceed with all pending charges. The Supreme Court of the United States has touched on this problem with the doctrine of "collateral estoppel" in Ashe v. Swenson, 397 U.S. 436, 90 S. Ct. 1189, 25 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1970), and the North Carolina Supreme Court has applied jeopardy rules in State v. Ballard, 280 N.C. 479, 186 S.E.2d 372 (1972). Subject to these more basic requirements, subsection (c) provides that as a procedural matter offenses related in the somewhat more broad basis described in the statute must be tried together, absent some reason for separate trial.

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Public Policy Favors Consolidation. — Where two or more defendants are sought to be held accountable for the same crime or crimes, not only is joinder permissible under the statute, but public policy strongly compels consolidation as the rule rather than the exception. State v. Paige, 316 N.C. 630, 343 S.E.2d 848 (1986); State v. Belton, 318 N.C. 141, 347 S.E.2d 755 (1986), overruled in part, State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997).

Public policy strongly favors consolidation, because it expedites the administration of justice, reduces the congestion of trial dockets, conserves judicial time, lessens the burden upon citizens who must sacrifice both time and money to serve upon juries and avoids the necessity of recalling witnesses who would otherwise be called upon to testify only once. This last factor is especially compelling when the trials involve young children testifying about sexual abuse. State v. Jenkins, 83 N.C. App. 616, 351 S.E.2d 299 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 675, 356 S.E.2d 791 (1987).

Former § 15-152 Compared. — This section differs from its predecessor, former § 15-152, in that it does not permit joinder on the basis that the acts were of the same class of crime or offense when there is no transactional connection, and in that it contains new language permitting joinder of offenses or crimes which are based on a series of acts or transactions "constituting parts of a single scheme or plan." State v. Greene, 294 N.C. 418, 241 S.E.2d 662 (1978); State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

"Offense" may be construed to mean "indictment." State v. Jones, 47 N.C. App. 554, 268 S.E.2d 6 (1980).

Joinder Under This Section. — Subsection (a) of this section allows consolidation of separate offenses for trial when the offenses charged are "based on the same act or transaction or on a series of transactions connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan." Subsection (b) similarly permits joinder of separate defendants for trial when the several offenses charged are transactionally related. This requirement is satisfied when the offenses in question all arose out of a single conspiracy. State v. Cinema Blue of Charlotte, Inc., 98 N.C. App. 628, 392 S.E.2d 136, appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 142, 394 S.E.2d 181 (1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1083, 111 S. Ct. 953, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1042 (1991).

Under this section there must be some sort of "transactional connection" between cases consolidated for trial. State v. Powell, 297 N.C. 419, 255 S.E.2d 154 (1979); State v. Parton, 303 N.C. 55, 277 S.E.2d 410 (1981); State v. Berryman, 77 N.C. App. 396, 335 S.E.2d 342 (1985).

In deciding whether two or more offenses should be joined for trial, the trial court must determine whether the offenses are so separate in time and place and so distinct in circumstances as to render the consolidation unjust and prejudicial to defendant. Thus, there must be some type of "transactional connection" between the offenses before they may be consolidated for trial. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

This section requires a transactional occurrence between offenses sought to be joined for trial. State v. Smith, 70 N.C. App. 293, 319 S.E.2d 647 (1984).

Offenses are properly joined under subsection (a) only when there exists a transactional connection among the charges. State v. Herring, 74 N.C. App. 269, 328 S.E.2d 23, discretionary review denied as to additional issues, 314 N.C. 671, 335 S.E.2d 324 (1985), aff'd, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

For offenses to be joined, there must be a transactional connection common to all, and the trial court must determine that a defendant would not be prejudiced by hearing more than one charge at the same trial. State v. Williams, 74 N.C. App. 695, 329 S.E.2d 705 (1985).

But mere finding of the transactional connection required by this section is not enough; in ruling on a motion to consolidate, trial judge must consider whether the accused can receive a fair hearing on more than one charge at the same trial, and if consolidation hinders or deprives the accused of his ability to present his defense, the charges should not be consolidated. State v. Silva, 304 N.C. 122, 282 S.E.2d 449 (1981); State v. Corbett, 309 N.C. 382, 307 S.E.2d 139 (1983); State v. Effler, 309 N.C. 742, 309 S.E.2d 203 (1983).

Subsection (a) of this section differs from its predecessor, in part by disallowing joinder on the basis that the acts were of the same class of crime or offense when there is not transactional connection among the offenses. State v. Williams, 74 N.C. App. 695, 329 S.E.2d 705 (1985).

In considering whether a "transactional connection" exists among offenses, the courts have taken into consideration such factors as the nature of the offenses charged, and the unique circumstances of each case. State v. Herring, 74 N.C. App. 269, 328 S.E.2d 23, discretionary review denied as to additional issues, 314 N.C. 671, 335 S.E.2d 324 (1985), aff'd, State v. Wilhelm, 59 N.C. App. 298, 296 S.E.2d 664 (1982).

While factual similarities, and the nature of the offenses charged as being of the same class, was once all that was required for joinder, this is no longer the case. State v. Herring, 74 N.C. App. 269, 328 S.E.2d 23, discretionary review denied as to additional issues, 314 N.C. 671, 335 S.E.2d 324 (1985), aff'd, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

Indictments Joinable If Evidence as to One Is Competent as to Others. — The court is expressly authorized by statute in this State to order the consolidation for trial of two or more indictments in which the defendant or defendants are charged with crimes of the same class, which are so connected in time or place that evidence at the trial of one of the indictments will be competent and admissible at the trial of the others. State v. Norton, 222 N.C. 418, 23 S.E.2d 301 (1942); State v. White, 256 N.C. 244, 123 S.E.2d 483 (1962); State v. Hamilton, 264 N.C. 277, 141 S.E.2d 506 (1965), cert. denied, 384 U.S. 1020, 86 S. Ct. 1936, 16 L. Ed. 2d 1044 (1966); State v. Parker, 271 N.C.

414, 156 S.E.2d 677 (1967); State v. Conrad, 4 N.C. App. 50, 165 S.E.2d 771, rev'd in part on other grounds, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969); State v. Mourning, 4 N.C. App. 569, 167 S.E.2d 501 (1969); State v. Wright, 18 N.C. App. 76, 195 S.E.2d 801, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 758, 198 S.E.2d 728 (1973); State v. Branch, 288 N.C. 514, 220 S.E.2d 495 (1975), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 907, 97 S. Ct. 2971, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1091 (1977).

Where defendants were charged in separate bills of indictment with identical crimes, and the offenses charged were of the same class, related to the same crime, and were so connected in time and place that most of the evidence at the trial upon one of the indictments would be competent and admissible at the trial on the other, the trial judge was authorized, in his discretion, to order their consolidation for trial. State v. Bass, 280 N.C. 435, 186 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

The trial judge may, in his discretion, order the consolidation for trial of two or more indictments in which the defendants are charged with crimes of the same class when the crimes are so connected in time or place that evidence at trial of one of the indictments will be competent and admissible at the trial of the others. State v. Spaulding, 288 N.C. 397, 219 S.E.2d 178 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3210, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976); State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976); State v. Brower, 289 N.C. 644, 224 S.E.2d 551 (1976), reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 259, 243 S.E.2d 143 (1978); State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1050, 97 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 2d 766, 429 U.S. 1123, 97 S. Ct. 1160, 51 L. Ed. 2d 573 (1977); State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977); State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977); State v. Jefferies, 41 N.C. App. 95, 254 S.E.2d 550, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979); State v. Moses, 52 N.C. App. 412, 279 S.E.2d 59, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 318, 281 S.E.2d 390 (1981).

The trial judge may consolidate for trial two or more indictments in which the defendant is charged with crimes of the same class and the crimes are so connected in time or place that evidence at the trial of one indictment will be competent at the trial of the other. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

The consolidation for trial of separate charges against two or more defendants was authorized when the offenses charged were of the same class and were so connected in time or place that most of the evidence at trial upon one of the charges would be admissible at a trial on the others. State v. Salem, 17 N.C. App. 269, 193 S.E.2d 755, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 259, 195 S.E.2d 692 (1973).

Consolidation of cases for trial is generally proper when the offenses charged are of the same class and are so connected in time and place that evidence at trial upon one indictment would be competent and admissible on the other. However, whether defendants who are jointly indicted should be tried jointly or separately is in the sound discretion of the trial court, and, in the absence of a showing that appellant has been deprived of a fair trial by consolidation, the exercise of the court's discretion will not be disturbed upon appeal. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

In the context of joinder, the term "offense" means "indictment," even though the term is often used more generally to refer to the act or acts done by defendant which constitute a crime. State v. Jewell, 104 N.C. App. 350, 409 S.E.2d 757 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 379, 416 S.E.2d 3 (1992).

Whether there is to be joinder of cases must depend upon circumstances of each case. State v. Boykin, 307 N.C. 87, 296 S.E.2d 258 (1982).

Mere Time Savings Not Alone Reason for Joinder. — Where a defendant is indicted in separate bills for two or more transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses, the court may in its discretion consolidate the indictments for trial. In exercising discretion the presiding judge should consider whether the offenses alleged are so separate in time or place and so distinct in circumstances as to render a consolidation unjust and prejudicial to defendant. To save the time of the court is not, taken alone, sufficient predicate for consolidation. State v. White, 256 N.C. 244, 123 S.E.2d 483 (1962); State v. Mitchell, 17 N.C. App. 1, 193 S.E.2d 400 (1972).

Consolidation expedites the administration of justice, reduces the congestion of trial dockets, conserves judicial time, lessens the burden upon citizens who must sacrifice both time and money to serve upon juries and avoids the necessity of recalling witnesses who would otherwise be called upon to testify only once. However, no matter how appealing such public policy may be, it must not stand in the way of a fair determination of guilt or innocence. State v. Boykin, 307 N.C. 87, 296 S.E.2d 258 (1982).

Consolidation Is Within Discretion of Court. — An order consolidating cases for trial is discretionary. State v. Conrad, 4 N.C. App. 50, 165 S.E.2d 771, rev'd in part on other grounds, 275 N.C. 342, 168 S.E.2d 39 (1969); State v. Feimster, 21 N.C. App. 602, 205 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 665, 207 S.E.2d 763 (1974); State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976); State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977); State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977); State v. Foster, 33 N.C. App. 145, 234 S.E.2d 443, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 237 S.E.2d 537 (1977); State v. Greene, 294

N.C. 418, 241 S.E.2d 662 (1978); State v. Hairston, 36 N.C. App. 641, 244 S.E.2d 448, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 469, 246 S.E.2d 217 (1978); State v. Jefferies, 41 N.C. App. 95, 254 S.E.2d 550, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 614, 257 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

When a defendant is charged with crimes of the same class and the offenses are not so separate in time or place and not so distinct in circumstances as to render a consolidation unjust and prejudicial, consolidation is authorized in the discretion of the court. State v. Anderson, 281 N.C. 261, 188 S.E.2d 336 (1972); State v. Bracey, 303 N.C. 112, 277 S.E.2d 390 (1981).

The question of consolidation of indictments against defendants charged with committing similar offenses at the same time and place is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. State v. Samuel, 27 N.C. App. 562, 219 S.E.2d 526 (1975); State v. Gonzalez, 62 N.C. App. 146, 302 S.E.2d 463 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 80, 316 S.E.2d 229 (1984).

A trial court's ruling on the consolidation or severance of cases is discretionary and will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion; a trial court may be reversed for an abuse of discretion only upon a showing that its ruling was so arbitrary that it could not have been the result of a reasoned decision. State v. Hayes, 314 N.C. 460, 334 S.E.2d 741 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 306, 372 S.E.2d 704 (1988).

The decision whether to try defendants separately or jointly is ordinarily within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and absent an abuse of that discretion, will not be overturned on appeal. State v. Jenkins, 83 N.C. 616, 351 S.E.2d 299 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 675, 356 S.E.2d 791 (1987); State v. Crummy, 107 N.C. App. 305, 420 S.E.2d 448, 332 N.C. 669, 424 S.E.2d 411 (1992).

When joinder is permissible under the statute, whether to sever trials or deny joinder is a question lodged within the discretion of the trial judge, whose rulings will not be disturbed on appeal unless it is demonstrated that joinder deprived defendant of a fair trial. State v. Ruffin, 90 N.C. App. 712, 370 S.E.2d 279 (1988).

The question of whether defendants should be tried jointly or separately is within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing that joinder has deprived a defendant of a fair trial. State v. Evans, 346 N.C. 221, 485 S.E.2d 271 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1057, 118 S. Ct. 712, 139 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1998).

As Are Separate Trials. — The motion by the State to consolidate four cases for trial and the opposing motion by the defendants for separate trials were addressed to the sound discretion of the presiding judge. State v. Yoes, 271 N.C. 616, 157 S.E.2d 386 (1967).

Ruling on Consolidation Not Disturbed Absent Abuse of Discretion. — The motion to consolidate is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and his ruling will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980); State v. Clark, 301 N.C. 176, 270 S.E.2d 425 (1980); State v. Young, 302 N.C. 385, 275 S.E.2d 429 (1981); State v. Rinck, 303 N.C. 551, 280 S.E.2d 912 (1981); State v. Silva, 304 N.C. 122, 282 S.E.2d 449 (1981); State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982); State v. Jones, 57 N.C. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 869 (1982); State v. Boykin, 307 N.C. 87, 296 S.E.2d 258 (1982); State v. Corbett, 307 N.C. 169, 297 S.E.2d 553 (1982); State v. Effler, 309 N.C. 742, 309 S.E.2d 203 (1983); State v. Parrish, 73 N.C. App. 662, 327 S.E.2d 613 (1985); State v. Neal, 76 N.C. App. 518, 333 S.E.2d 538 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 394, 338 S.E.2d 884 (1986); State v. Hayes, 314 N.C. 460, 334 S.E.2d 741 (1985); State v. Berryman, 77 N.C. App. 396, 335 S.E.2d 342 (1985).

Whether defendants jointly indicted will be tried jointly or separately is in the sound discretion of the trial court, and, in the absence of a showing that a joint trial had deprived the movant of a fair trial, the exercise of the court's discretion will not be disturbed upon appeal. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976); State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Brower, 289 N.C. 644, 224 S.E.2d 551 (1976), reconsideration denied, 293 N.C. 259, 243 S.E.2d 143 (1978); State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1050, 97 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 2d 766, 429 U.S. 1123, 97 S. Ct. 1160, 51 L. Ed. 2d 573 (1977); State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976); State v. Travis, 33 N.C. App. 330, 235 S.E.2d 66, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 163, 236 S.E.2d 707 (1977); State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977); State v. Pierce, 36 N.C. App. 770, 245 S.E.2d 195 (1978); State v. Ervin, 38 N.C. App. 261, 248 S.E.2d 91 (1978); State v. Cook, 48 N.C. App. 685, 269 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 456 (1980); State v. Allen, 301 N.C. 489, 272 S.E.2d 116 (1980); State v. Oxendine, 303 N.C. 235, 278 S.E.2d 200 (1981); State v. Moses, 52 N.C. App. 412, 279 S.E.2d 59, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 318, 281 S.E.2d 390 (1981); State v. Melvin, 57 N.C. App. 503, 291 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 748, 295 S.E.2d 484 (1982); State v. Thobourne, 59 N.C. App. 584, 297 S.E.2d 774 (1982).

Separate offenses may be joined for trial when they arise from the same act or transaction, and the well-settled rule that the discretion of the trial court in joining cases for trial will not be disturbed absent a showing that the defendant has been deprived thereby of a fair trial, has not been abrogated by this Chapter and continues to apply. State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979).

The question of consolidating offenses arising out of a single scheme or plan ordinarily is a matter within the discretion of the trial judge and his decision will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Wheeler, 34 N.C. App. 243, 237 S.E.2d 874 (1977), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 294 N.C. 187, 241 S.E.2d 522 (1978).

Whether defendants charged with committing identical offenses at the same time and place should be jointly or separately tried is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and in the absence of a showing that a joint trial deprived a defendant of a fair trial, the exercise of the court's discretion will not be disturbed on appeal. State v. Greene, 30 N.C. App. 507, 227 S.E.2d 154 (1976).

The right or propriety of a severance rests on circumstances showing that a joint trial would be prejudicial and unfair, and in the absence of showing that defendant has been deprived of a fair trial, the exercise of the court's discretion will not be disturbed. State v. Foster, 33 N.C. App. 145, 234 S.E.2d 443, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 237 S.E.2d 537 (1977).

Ordinarily, motions to consolidate cases for trial are within the sound discretion of the trial court, and absent a showing that a joint trial has deprived an accused of a fair trial, the exercise of the court's discretion will not be disturbed on appeal. State v. Barnett, 307 N.C. 608, 300 S.E.2d 340 (1983).

The question of consolidation of offenses for trial is a matter which lies within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and his ruling will not be disturbed absent a showing that joinder would hinder or deprive defendant of his ability to present his defense. State v. Newman, 308 N.C. 231, 302 S.E.2d 174 (1983).

Motions to join for trial offenses which have the necessary transactional connection under this section are addressed to the discretion of the trial court and, absent a showing of abuse of discretion, its ruling will not be disturbed on appeal. State v. Kornegay, 313 N.C. 1, 326 S.E.2d 881 (1985).

Although a motion to consolidate charges for trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, the determination of whether a group of offenses are transactionally related so that they may be joined for trial is a question of law fully reviewable on appeal. State v. Williams, 74 N.C. App. 695, 329 S.E.2d 705 (1985).

The granting of a motion to consolidate is reviewable only for abuse of discretion. State v. Jackson, 309 N.C. 26, 305 S.E.2d 703 (1983).

A motion to consolidate charges for trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and that ruling will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. If, however, the charges consolidated for trial possess no transactional connection, then the consolidation is improper as a matter of law. State v. Corbett, 309 N.C. 382, 307 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

The question of whether to join the offenses for trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Hardy, 67 N.C. App. 122, 312 S.E.2d 699 (1984).

Time for Making Order of Consolidation. — Where there are several charges against any person for the same act or for two or more transactions connected together, or for two or more transactions of the same class of offenses, which may be properly joined, the court will order them to be consolidated. This means, however, that the order of consolidation will be made in such cases when seasonably brought to the court's attention, and not at a time when the validity of the whole trial might seriously be threatened by the consolidation. State v. Dunston, 256 N.C. 203, 123 S.E.2d 480 (1962).

A motion for joinder of cases made orally after the present case was called for trial came too late. The motion should have been made at defendant's arraignment. Only in unusual circumstances should the judge interrupt the trial of a case to conduct hearings on matters that should have been raised and resolved at arraignment or some other pretrial stage of the proceedings. State v. Moore, 41 N.C. App. 131, 254 S.E.2d 191 (1979).

Consolidation After Jury Impaneled. — Where the record justifies the conclusion that after the jury had been impaneled and prosecution begun upon one bill of indictment other bills of indictment were consolidated for trial therewith, a new trial will be awarded even though the indictments might have been properly consolidated initially, since the defendant must be afforded opportunity to plead to the counts consolidated and to pass upon the impartiality of the jury upon such counts. State v. Dunston, 256 N.C. 203, 123 S.E.2d 480 (1962).

Order of consolidation in capital cases will be made when seasonably brought to the court's attention, and not at a time when the validity of the whole trial might be threatened by the consolidation. State v. Harris, 223 N.C. 697, 28 S.E.2d 232 (1943).

Correctness of Joinder Determined as of Time of Decision to Join. — Joinder is a decision which is made prior to trial; the nature of the decision and its timing indicate that the correctness of the joinder must be determined as of the time of the trial court's decision and not with the benefit of hindsight. State v. Silva, 304 N.C. 122, 282 S.E.2d 449 (1981).

Partial Quashal of Consolidated Indictments. — Where the second count in each of two bills of indictment should be quashed for insufficiency, the judge entered should not be arrested where two sufficient counts were consolidated with the two insufficient counts for judgment; either one of the two sufficient counts, upon defendant's pleas of guilty, would support the judgment entered. State v. Horton, 15 N.C. App. 604, 190 S.E.2d 274 (1972).

Motion to Consolidate Is Not an Assent to a Mistrial. — A motion to consolidate three capital cases in medias res pending the taking of testimony on the trial of one of them, is not an assent to a mistrial in order to effect a consolidation. State v. Harris, 223 N.C. 697, 28 S.E.2d 232 (1943).

Consolidation Proper Without Formal Written Motion. — Even in the absence of any formal written motion, the trial judge may direct that criminal cases be consolidated for trial where proper grounds for joinder exist and when to do so will promote the ends of justice and facilitate proper disposition of the cases on the docket before him. State v. Cottingham, 30 N.C. App. 67, 226 S.E.2d 387 (1976); State v. Pevia, 30 N.C. App. 79, 226 S.E.2d 394, appeal dismissed, 290 N.C. 780, 229 S.E.2d 35 (1976).

Determination of Prejudice Resulting from Joinder. — In determining whether a defendant has been prejudiced by joinder pursuant to this section, the question which must generally be addressed is whether the offenses are so separate in time and place and so distinct in circumstances as to render joinder unjust and prejudicial to the defendant. State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979); State v. Clark, 301 N.C. 176, 270 S.E.2d 425 (1980); State v. Young, 302 N.C. 385, 275 S.E.2d 429 (1981); State v. Avery, 302 N.C. 517, 276 S.E.2d 699 (1981); State v. Bracey, 303 N.C. 112, 277 S.E.2d 390 (1981); State v. Parton, 303 N.C. 55, 277 S.E.2d 410 (1981); State v. Oxendine, 303 N.C. 235, 278 S.E.2d 200 (1981).

In determining whether an accused has been prejudiced by joinder, the question is not whether the evidence at the trial of one case would be competent and admissible at the trial of the other. The question is whether the offenses are so separate in time and place and so distinct in circumstances as to render a consolidation unjust and prejudicial to defendant. State v. Greene, 294 N.C. 418, 241 S.E.2d 662 (1978).

Defendant's unsupported statement of possible prejudice is not sufficient to show abuse of discretion on the part of the trial judge in allowing the motion to consolidate. State v. Ruffin, 90 N.C. App. 712, 370 S.E.2d 279 (1988).

Waiver of Right of Joinder. — Defendant waived any right of joinder of offenses involving possession and sale of contraband where defendant failed to move for joinder, and there was no merit to defendant's argument that, since the State made a motion for joinder, it was not necessary for defendant to make the identical motion, since it was defendant's duty to let the court know that he was relying on the State's motion, and defendant failed to do so. State v. Jones, 50 N.C. App. 263, 273 S.E.2d 327, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 400, 279 S.E.2d 354 (1981).

Function of Appellate Review. — Generally, joinder motions are properly decided in the sound discretion of the trial court. However, where there is a serious question of prejudice resulting from consolidation for trial of two or more offenses, the appropriate function of appellate review is to determine whether the case meets the statutory requirements. State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

While the court's ruling on a motion for joinder is reviewable only for abuse of the court's discretion, where there is a serious question of prejudice resulting from consolidation for trial of two or more offenses, the appropriate function of appellate review is to determine whether the case meets the statutory requirements. State v. Herring, 74 N.C. App. 269, 328 S.E.2d 23, discretionary review denied as to additional issues, 314 N.C. 671, 335 S.E.2d 324 (1985), aff'd, State v. Mettrick, 54 N.C. App. 1, 283 S.E.2d 139 (1981).

The test applied on appellate review of a motion for joinder is whether the offenses were so separate in time and place and so distinct in circumstances as to render consolidation unjust and prejudicial to the defendant. State v. Fultz, 92 N.C. App. 80, 373 S.E.2d 445 (1988).

II. JOINDER OF OFFENSES.

A. In General.

A trial court's ruling on joining cases for trial is discretionary and will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Maness, 321 N.C. 454, 364 S.E.2d 349 (1988).

Whether joinder of offenses is permissible under this section is a question addressed to the discretion of the trial court which will only be disturbed if the defendant demonstrates that joinder deprived him of a fair trial. State v. Wilson, 108 N.C. App. 575, 424 S.E.2d 454 (1993).

Consolidation Is Rule Rather Than Exception. — Where each defendant is sought to be held accountable for the same crime or crimes, public policy strongly compels consolidation under subdivision (2)a of subsection (b) of this section as the rule rather than the exception. State v. Boykin, 307 N.C. 87, 296 S.E.2d 258 (1982).

Court Should Consider Whether Accused Will Be Fairly Tried. — In ruling upon a motion for consolidation of charges, the trial judge should consider whether the accused can fairly be tried upon more than one charge at the same trial. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Cook, 301 N.C. 176, 270 S.E.2d 425 (1980); State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

In deciding whether to join offenses, the court must determine whether the accused can receive a fair hearing on more than one charge at the same trial. If joinder will impair the ability to present a defense, the motions should be denied. State v. Neal, 76 N.C. App. 518, 333 S.E.2d 538 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 394, 338 S.E.2d 884 (1986).

Cases Should Not Be Joined If Defense Is Thereby Hindered. — If consolidation of charges hinders or deprives the accused of his ability to present his defense, the cases should not be consolidated. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Clark, 301 N.C. 176, 270 S.E.2d 425 (1980); State v. Parton, 303 N.C. 55, 277 S.E.2d 410 (1981); State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982); State v. Parrish, 73 N.C. App. 662, 327 S.E.2d 613 (1985).

In ruling upon a motion for joinder of offenses, the trial judge should consider whether the accused can be fairly tried if joinder is permitted. If joinder would hinder or deprive defendant of his ability to present his defense, the motion should be denied. State v. Greene, 294 N.C. 418, 241 S.E.2d 662 (1978).

In determining whether defendant has been prejudiced, the question posed is whether the offenses are so separate in time and place and so distinct in circumstances as to render a consolidation unjust and prejudicial to an accused. State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982); State v. Parrish, 73 N.C. App. 662, 327 S.E.2d 613 (1985).

A defendant is not prejudiced by the joinder of two crimes unless the charges are so separate in time and place as to render the consolidation unjust and prejudicial to defendant. State v. Monk, 132 N.C. App. 248, 511 S.E.2d 332 (1999).

This section does not require joinder based merely upon the fact that offenses are of the same class or crime or have common characteristics. State v. Smith, 70 N.C. App. 293, 319 S.E.2d 647 (1984).

Consolidation of Calendared and Non-Calendared Charges. — When read together, former § 7A-49.3(a) and subsection (a) of this section permit a judge in a criminal trial to consolidate calendared charges with non-calendared charges that are based either on the same act or transaction, or on a series of acts of transactions connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan. State v. Thompson, 129 N.C. App. 13, 497 S.E.2d 126 (1998).

Nature of Offenses May Be Considered. — Although this section does not permit joinder of offenses solely on the basis that they are the same class, the nature of the offenses is a factor which may properly be considered in determining whether certain acts constitute parts of a single scheme or plan. State v. Street, 45 N.C. App. 1, 262 S.E.2d 365, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 104 (1980).

Although this section does not permit joinder of offenses solely on the basis that they are of the same class, the nature of the offenses is one of the factors which may properly be considered in determining whether certain acts or transactions constitute "parts of a single scheme or plan," as those words are used in subsection (a) of this section. State v. Greene, 294 N.C. 418, 241 S.E.2d 662 (1978); State v. Effler, 309 N.C. 742, 309 S.E.2d 203 (1983).

Offenses of Same Class May Be Consolidated. — The trial judge is authorized to order consolidation for trial of two or more charges in which defendant is charged with crimes of the same class. State v. Franks, 20 N.C. App. 160, 200 S.E.2d 828 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 618, 202 S.E.2d 274 (1974).

And Prosecutor Is Not Required to Select Count on Which He Would Proceed. — An indictment charging the defendant with "receiving stolen goods," etc., with evidence tending to show the receiving on several occasions, does not require the solicitor (now prosecutor) to select the count on which he would proceed, on defendant's motion, each offense being of the same class of crime. State v. Charles, 195 N.C. 868, 142 S.E. 486 (1928).

Commonality of Witness Not Required. — There is no requirement that there be a commonality of witnesses where two murder cases have been joined for trial. State v. Chapman, 342 N.C. 330, 464 S.E.2d 661 (1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1023, 116 S. Ct. 2560, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1996).

Section does not allow joinder if the offenses are merely of the same class of crime. State v. Corbett, 309 N.C. 382, 307 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

Joinder Disallowed Where Acts Are of Same Class of Crime, Absent Transactional Connection. — This statute, which became effective in 1975, differs from its predecessor in part by disallowing joinder on the basis that the acts were of the same class of crime or offense when there is no transactional connection among the offenses. State v. Corbett, 309 N.C. 382, 307 S.E.2d 139 (1983); State v. Effler, 309 N.C. 742, 309 S.E.2d 203 (1983).

Transactional Connection Necessary for Joinder. — Subsection (a) provides for joinder of two or more offenses when they are based on the same act or transaction or on a series of acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan. It is not enough that a defendant is charged with acts of the same class of crime or offense; there must also be a transactional connection. State v. Neal, 76 N.C. App. 518, 333 S.E.2d 538 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 394, 338 S.E.2d 884 (1986).

Where the second murder in the case was committed to avoid detection for the first murder, the transactional connection supported the consolidation of all the charges for trial pursuant to this section. State v. Hunt, 323 N.C. 407, 373 S.E.2d 400 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1022, 110 S. Ct. 1464, 108 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), overruled in part State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 900, 118 S. Ct. 248, 139 L. Ed. 2d 177 (1997).

Where defendant was charged with murder and failure to appear for his murder trial, this connection was insufficient to satisfy the transactional requirement of this section. The joinder of these two crimes constituted harmless error. State v. Weathers, 339 N.C. 441, 451 S.E.2d 266 (1994).

Discretion of Judge. — If the consolidated charges have a transactional connection, the decision to consolidate the charges is left to the sound discretion of the trial judge and that ruling will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. State v. Monk, 132 N.C. App. 248, 511 S.E.2d 332 (1999).

Consolidation Improper as Matter of Law Absent Transactional Connection. — If the charges consolidated for trial possess no transactional connection, then the consolidation is improper as a matter of law. State v. Effler, 309 N.C. 742, 309 S.E.2d 203 (1983).

Continuing Transactions. — The charges were properly consolidated for trial where the acts constituting the offenses were connected as a continuing transaction. State v. Carson, 20 N.C. App. 211, 200 S.E.2d 831 (1973), cert. denied, 285 N.C. 87, 203 S.E.2d 59 (1974).

Two acts constituting essential parts of a single transaction may be charged together as a single offense, and defendant is not entitled to complain that only one offense was charged even though each act would have been ground for a separate charge. State v. Dietz, 289 N.C. 488, 223 S.E.2d 357 (1976).

Transactions Occurring at Same Time and in Close Proximity. — Where two warrants and an indictment were consolidated for trial, there was no denial of petitioner's constitutional rights, since all the charges grew out of transactions occurring on the same evening in close proximity to each other. Doss v. North Carolina, 252 F. Supp. 298 (M.D.N.C. 1966).

Joinder When Crimes Constitute "Fingerprint" of Perpetrator. — To be joined crimes must be transactionally related either as part of a single conspiracy, because they are closely related in time, or because similarities of the crime constitute a fingerprint of the perpetrator. State v. Church, 99 N.C. App. 647, 394 S.E.2d 468 (1990).

Consolidation of Minor Offense and Capital Charge. — Ordinarily, unless the evidence showing guilt of a minor offense fits into the proof on the capital charge, the minor offenses should not be included. State v. Old, 272 N.C. 42, 157 S.E.2d 651 (1967).

Separate Indictments Against Same Defendant Treated as Counts. — Where separate indictments against the same defendant are consolidated, the counts in the separate bills will be treated as separate counts in one bill. State v. White, 256 N.C. 244, 123 S.E.2d 483 (1962).

Consolidated Offenses Need Not Have Been Counts of Same Pleading. — Neither the express language of subsection (a) of this section nor § 15A-924 will support the contention that the two statutes, when taken together, reflect a legislative intent that separate offenses arising from the same acts or occurrences be joined for trial only when they are contained in separate counts of the same bill of indictment or other criminal pleading. State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979).

General Verdict Covering Several Counts. — Where there are several counts in a criminal complaint (called indictment in this case), and each is for a distinct offense, a general verdict of guilty will apply to each, and a judgment rendered as to each count will be sustained for the separate offenses. State v. Mills, 181 N.C. 530, 106 S.E. 677 (1921).

Ordinarily, where separate bills of indictment are returned and the bills are consolidated for trial, the counts contained in the respective bills will be treated as though they were separate counts in one bill, and where there are several counts and each count is for a distinct offense, a general verdict of guilty will authorize the imposition of a judgment on each count. State v. Braxton, 230 N.C. 312, 52 S.E.2d 895 (1949); State v. Austin, 241 N.C. 548, 85 S.E.2d 924 (1955).

Where there are several counts in a bill, and a general verdict of guilty is returned, if the verdict on any count is free from valid objection and has evidence tending to support it, the conviction and sentence for that offense will be upheld. State v. Austin, 241 N.C. 548, 85 S.E.2d 924 (1955).

Limits on Sentence Where Cases Consolidated. — Where cases are consolidated for trial and there is a conviction or plea of guilty on several counts, the court may enter a judgment on each count and have the judgments run concurrently or consecutively as it may direct; but the court is not authorized by law to enter a judgment in gross in excess of the greatest statutory penalty applicable to any of the counts upon which there has been a conviction or plea of guilty. State v. Austin, 241 N.C. 548, 85 S.E.2d 924 (1955).

Entering Different Judgment on Each Offense upon General Verdict of Guilty. — Where the trials of two separate criminal indictments are consolidated by the judge and tried together and a general verdict of guilty is returned by the jury, the verdict will apply to each indictment, and judgment pronounced on one of them, with execution suspended, and judgment and sentence entered as to the other, is not objectionable on the ground that only one judgment should have been entered. State v. Harvell, 199 N.C. 599, 155 S.E. 257 (1930).

B. Illustrative Cases.

Where the evidence showed a common scheme whereby defendant and his accomplice broke and entered an occupied dwelling house at night, armed with a dangerous weapon, intending to steal property therein, and upon entering, used the weapon to threaten the occupant of the house for purposes of taking his personal property, it was clearly no abuse of discretion to hold that this series of acts constituted a single scheme or plan and that the requirements for joinder in subsection (a) of this section were satisfied. State v. Maness, 321 N.C. 454, 364 S.E.2d 349 (1988).

Rape and Indecent Liberties with Minors. — Defendant did not show that the joinder of indecent liberties with minors charges with a statutory rape charge, which were transactionally connected, deprived him of a fair trial. State v. Beckham, 145 N.C. App. 119, 550 S.E.2d 231 (2001).

Similarities in Crime Held "Fingerprint" of Perpetrator. — Where defendant was charged with causing his step child to suffer separate injuries consisting of a facial burn and a burn to the buttocks, both injuries were sustained at the same place, the family residence, there was evidence that both injuries were inflicted while defendant was taking care of his wife's sons, and in neither instance did the defendant seek medical treatment for the victim, there was ample evidence of similarities of the crimes constituting a fingerprint of the perpetrator. State v. Church, 99 N.C. App. 647, 394 S.E.2d 468 (1990).

Evidence Was Sufficient for Transactional Connection. — There was sufficient evidence of transactional connection to support joinder of two murder charges where common thread connecting crimes was defendant's need for cash to pay for his rent and other bills, and this need for money motivated him to begin his search for victims and led to eventual robberies and murders of two victims two days apart. State v. McNeil, 324 N.C. 33, 375 S.E.2d 909 (1989), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1050, 110 S. Ct. 1516, 108 L. Ed. 2d 756 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990).

Trial court had discretion to consolidate charges of murder for trial, where the facts incident to the two murders revealed a common modus operandi and a temporal proximity sufficient to establish a transactional connection: both victims were young women with drug habits; defendant knew both and had smoked crack with each; one victim was nude when found, and the other was nude from the waist down; both victims suffered blunt-force injuries to their heads; one died as a result of strangulation, and the pathologist could not rule out the possibility that the other had also been strangled; the women were killed within two months of each other, and their bodies were found in the lowest part of vacant houses within two blocks of each other. State v. Chapman, 342 N.C. 330, 464 S.E.2d 661 (1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1023, 116 S. Ct. 2560, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1996).

The defendant's ten armed robberies were not so separate in time and place nor so distinct in circumstances as to render consolidation unjust and prejudicial, where the defendant consistently threatened his victims, usually female, with a gun or knife, all but two robberies occurred during daylight hours, and all took place in the same county during a seven-week period. State v. Breeze, 130 N.C. App. 344, 503 S.E.2d 141 (1998).

The defendant's two drug offenses were properly consolidated where they shared a transactional connection. The offenses for which defendant was being tried were identical, sale and delivery of cocaine, the facts involved in each offense were nearly identical, and finally, only three weeks elapsed between the commission of each offense. Joinder of the offenses did not impede defendant's ability to receive a fair trial and put on his defense. State v. Montford, 137 N.C. App. 495, 529 S.E.2d 247 (2000).

Separate Charges of First-Degree Murder. — Defendant's unsupported contention that he was prejudiced by the consolidation for trial of separate charges of first-degree murder because without the consolidation he would have had the election of testifying in one case without being forced to testify in the other was not sufficient to show abuse of discretion by the trial judge where the charged crimes were continuing criminal acts which permit the admission in evidence of each in the trial of the other. State v. Davis, 289 N.C. 500, 223 S.E.2d 296, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 47, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

The following substantial similarities justified joinder of murder cases for trial: both were murders of young men whom defendant knew and with whom he was associated in the drug trade, both murders occurred after the victims had paged him, both victims were shot in the head with the same gun at a range of approximately two feet or less, both murders occurred in Winston-Salem, both murders occurred on the premises of the victims, and both murders occurred after defendant argued with the victims. State v. Moses, 350 N.C. 741, 517 S.E.2d 853 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1124, 120 S. Ct. 951, 145 L. Ed. 2d 826 (2000).

Evidence of a transactional connection was sufficient to support joinder of homicide charges against defendant for first-degree murder of his mother-in-law and son, where the evidence showed that defendant saw his problems as interrelated and developed a unified solution thereto, and further, where the two crimes were so closely related in time that they appeared to be parts of a continuous criminal episode. State v. Huff, 325 N.C. 1, 381 S.E.2d 635 (1989), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 497 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 3266, 111 L. Ed. 2d 777 (1990), in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), death sentence vacated, remanded for new capital sentencing proceeding, State v. Huff, 328 N.C. 532, 402 S.E.2d 577 (1991).

Consolidation of two murder charges did not deny defendant a fair determination on the issue of his insanity at the time of the killing of his son or on the issue of his lack of premeditation and deliberation at the time of the killing of his mother-in-law by having to present conflicting defenses in a single trial. Contrary to defendant's assertion, the evidence showed that defendant did not present insanity as to the homicide of his son and lack of premeditation and deliberation as to the homicide of mother-in-law. Rather, defendant presented two defenses on each charge, the defense of insanity and the defense of lack of premeditation and deliberation, and the issues were fairly presented for the jury's consideration. State v. Huff, 325 N.C. 1, 381 S.E.2d 635 (1989), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 497 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 3266, 111 L. Ed. 2d 777 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), death sentence vacated, remanded for new capital sentencing proceeding, State v. Huff, 328 N.C. 532, 402 S.E.2d 577 (1991).

Murder and Conspiracy to Commit Murder. — On appeal from convictions of murder and conspiracy to commit murder, defendants failed to show either prejudice or that one defendant's defense was so antagonistic as to require separate trials pursuant to this section. State v. Hunt, 323 N.C. 407, 373 S.E.2d 400 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1022, 110 S. Ct. 1464, 108 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), overruled in part State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 900, 118 S. Ct. 248, 139 L. Ed. 2d 177 (1997).

Murder and Solicitation to Commit Murder. — This section was not applicable in prosecutions for murder and solicitation of another to commit murder where at the time of the defendant's first trial for murder no indictments had yet been returned against him for solicitation, and where there was nothing in the record to indicate that the State held the solicitation charges in reserve pending the outcome of the murder trial. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

Murder of One Person and Assault upon Another. — Upon the trial under an indictment charging the prisoner with murder of one person, it is reversible error to the defendant's prejudice for the trial court upon his own motion, after a substantial part of the evidence had been introduced to consolidate the action with another action under a separate indictment charging the prisoner with an assault with a deadly weapon upon another, the prisoner being afforded no opportunity to pass upon the impartiality of the jury upon the assault charge or an opportunity to plead to the charge. State v. Rice, 202 N.C. 411, 163 S.E. 112 (1932).

Murder of One Person and Kidnapping and Robbery of Another. — Where the State contended that the murder of one person, and the kidnapping and robbery of another person were all parts of a continuing program of action by the defendant covering a period of approximately three hours, evidence of the whole affair was pertinent to the several charges and there was no error in consolidating the charges for trial. State v. Frazier, 280 N.C. 181, 185 S.E.2d 652 (1972), death sentence vacated, 409 U.S. 1004, 93 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1976).

Second-Degree Murder and Misdemeanor Child Abuse. — In a prosecution for second-degree murder and misdemeanor child abuse the acts perpetrated by the defendant which led to the misdemeanor charge of child abuse were the same acts and transactions which also resulted in the death of the child. Therefore, the two offenses were properly joined under this section. State v. Vega, 40 N.C. App. 326, 253 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 457, 256 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 459, 62 L. Ed. 2d 382 (1979).

Kidnapping and Murder. — The trial court properly allowed the State to join for trial offenses of kidnapping one person and kidnapping and murdering another person where the State submitted a written motion to join prior to trial stating that it was made pursuant to this section, which provides for joinder when offenses are based on a series of acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan, and where all of the matters out of which the joined cases grew occurred on the same afternoon of the same day and each was perpetrated according to a common modus operandi. State v. Clark, 301 N.C. 176, 270 S.E.2d 425 (1980).

Kidnapping and Assault. — Where the kidnapping and assault charges arose out of the same transaction and elements of the assault charge were essentials of the kidnapping charge, the consolidation of the assault and kidnapping charges was permissible. State v. Barbour, 278 N.C. 449, 180 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1023, 92 S. Ct. 699, 30 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1972).

Felonious Entry, Kidnapping, and Forcible Taking of Automobile. — Where the felonious entry into a dwelling house, the kidnapping of one of the occupants of the house, and the forcible taking of an automobile in which the perpetrators attempted to make their getaway were so connected and tied together as to make the three offenses one continuous criminal episode, and the evidence of the whole affair was pertinent and necessary to establish the identity of the accused as one of the guilty parties, the three charges were properly consolidated and tried together. State v. Arsad, 269 N.C. 184, 152 S.E.2d 99 (1967).

Conspiracy. — It is permissible to join counts charging conspiracy and successive steps thereafter taken by the respective conspirators in executing the common design. State v. Anderson, 208 N.C. 771, 182 S.E. 643 (1935).

The fact that participants entered and exited conspiracy at various times between the years 1969-1978 did not convert one conspiracy into several. The conspiracy was originally based on a common scheme, and its continuation over several years did not sever that common scheme. State v. Overton, 60 N.C. App. 1, 298 S.E.2d 695 (1982), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 580, 299 S.E.2d 652 (1983).

The trial judge's joinder for trial of son's substantive trafficking offenses with mother's conspiracy offense did not deprive either of them of a fair trial. State v. Holmes, 120 N.C. App. 54, 460 S.E.2d 915 (1995).

Conspiracy to Rob and Murder in Perpetration of Robbery. — It is not error for the trial court to refuse a separate trial on each two counts in an indictment charging defendants with conspiracy to rob and with murder committed in the attempt to perpetrate the robbery. State v. Green, 207 N.C. 369, 177 S.E. 120 (1934).

The offenses of accessory after the fact of a felony and being an aider and abettor to that felony are joinable offenses for purposes of indictment and trial, even though a defendant cannot be convicted of both. State v. Jewell, 104 N.C. App. 350, 409 S.E.2d 757 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 379, 416 S.E.2d 3 (1992).

Robbery. — Three charges against defendant for common-law robbery were properly consolidated for trial on the ground that the offenses were based on a series of acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan where all of the offenses occurred within 10 days on the same street in Wilmington; all occurred in the late afternoon; in each case, two black males physically assaulted the attendant of a small business and took petty cash from the person of the victim or the cash box of the business; the assaults were of a similar nature, and each was without weapons, involved an element of surprise and involved choking, beating and kicking the victim; and in each case, the robbers escaped on foot. State v. Bracey, 303 N.C. 112, 277 S.E.2d 390 (1981).

Robbery of Motel Room Occupants. — Evidence that all three offenses took place within two months of each other at motels in Greensboro; all of the crimes occurred in the early morning hours; in each instance someone entered an occupied motel room by stealth while the occupants were asleep; in two cases, personal property was taken and the third was interrupted by the victim being awakened; and, in two cases, the victim identified the burglar as a young male wearing jogging pants and a baseball cap, who escaped on foot, was sufficient to establish a common scheme or plan to deprive motel occupants of their property while they were asleep. Thus, the trial court did not err in joining the three offenses for trial. State v. Cummings, 103 N.C. App. 138, 404 S.E.2d 496 (1991).

Robbery and the malicious throwing of acid were joinable offenses under subsection (a), which permits joinder of offenses based on the same act or transaction or on a series of acts or transactions connected together, and use of the fact that the acid was thrown after the robbery to aggravate sentence for the malicious throwing of acid was prohibited by § 15A-1340.4(a)(1)(o). State v. Knox, 78 N.C. App. 493, 337 S.E.2d 154 (1985).

Armed robbery and accessory after the fact of armed robbery are mutually exclusive offenses and not joinable for trial. State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S. Ct. 1268, 59 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1979).

The offenses of armed robbery and accessory after the fact to armed robbery were not joinable under this section where the defendant had not been charged with the offense of accessory after the fact at the time of his trial for armed robbery, and since armed robbery and accessory after the fact of armed robbery are mutually exclusive offenses and not joinable for trial. State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S. Ct. 1268, 59 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1979).

Embezzlement And Perjury. — The trial court did not err in allowing the state to join 3 counts of embezzling, and 3 counts of perjury against the defendant/attorney based on their being "part of a common scheme or plan." The defendant did not show that the offenses were so separate in time and place, or so distinct in circumstances as to render a consolidation unjust nor how the consolidation prejudiced his ability to present a defense and receive a fair trial. State v. Linney, 138 N.C. App. 169, 531 S.E.2d 245 (2000).

Embezzlement and False Pretenses. — While a defendant cannot be convicted of both embezzlement and false pretenses based upon a single transaction, the State may charge the defendant with both offenses. State v. Speckman, 326 N.C. 576, 391 S.E.2d 165 (1990).

Obtaining Money Under False Pretenses. — In prosecution for obtaining money under false pretenses, where contract with one couple was entered into on July 19, 1979, while contract with another individual was entered into on August 10, 1979, almost three weeks later, the offenses for which defendant was tried were separate and distinct, not part of "a single scheme or plan," and the necessary transactional connection was not present in these cases; hence joinder was improper as a matter of law. State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

Separate Acts of Taking Vehicles. — Similarity of modus operandi and similar circumstance in victims, location, time and motive was present, where the offenses involved two vehicles taken from the same location under similar circumstances four days apart. Viewing these facts as of the time of the order of consolidation, the court properly could find them indicative of a single scheme or plan to deprive members of the YMCA of their property while they used the "Y" facilities. State v. Neal, 76 N.C. App. 518, 333 S.E.2d 538 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 394, 338 S.E.2d 884 (1986).

Separate Burglaries. — Where both burglaries and the confrontation with the police occurred within a two-hour time span, all the alleged offenses occurred in and around the same subdivision and the evidence indicated a common plan to burglarize homes of the neighborhood and escape by means of a stolen vehicle parked nearby, no showing has been made that a severance was necessary to insure a fair determination by the jury on each charge. State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

Burglary, Robbery and Murder. — In prosecution for conspiracy to commit burglary, second-degree burglary, robbery with a dangerous weapon, and first-degree murder, the defendant failed to show that the trial court abused its discretion in permitting joinder or that he was deprived of a fair trial, where the defendant's argument was based entirely on a statement made by the co-defendant during his sentencing hearing, and there was no way for the Supreme Court to determine whether the co-defendant would have testified in the same way or would have testified at all if the defendants had been given separate trials, nor could it know whether any possible testimony by the co-defendant would have had any effect on the outcome of the defendant's trial. State v. Short, 322 N.C. 783, 370 S.E.2d 351 (1988).

Burglary and Rape. — A motion, made before the introduction of any evidence, to require the State to elect between two separate counts in the bill of indictment, one charging burglary in the first degree and the other rape, is properly denied, the two offenses being of the same class, which may be joined in one indictment in separate counts, and it being within the sound discretion of the trial court as to whether he should compel an election between the counts and, if so, at what stage of the trial. State v. Smith, 201 N.C. 494, 160 S.E. 577 (1931).

In a prosecution for first-degree burglary and second-degree rape, where the crimes were committed on both occasions against the same victim in the same house at approximately the same time of evening, and on both occasions, entry was gained through a window and the victim was forced to engage in repeated acts of intercourse, and the perpetrator was not armed on either occasion, such evidence established the requisite transactional connection to permit consolidation of the offenses. State v. Berryman, 77 N.C. App. 396, 335 S.E.2d 342 (1985).

Burglary and Larceny. — An indictment which charged two offenses, (1) burglary in the first degree, and (2) larceny of money from the building allegedly feloniously broken into and entered, as alleged in the first count was not defective, since these two counts may be joined in one indictment in separate counts. State v. Childs, 269 N.C. 307, 152 S.E.2d 453 (1967), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 227, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971).

Housebreaking and Larceny. — When not subject to legal objection, a motion by the solicitor (now prosecutor) to consolidate two criminal actions for trial is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge, and where prosecutions for housebreaking and larceny on two occasions during the same night against two defendants are consolidated without objection, and the charges are so connected in time and place that evidence of guilt in one action is competent in the other, the order of the trial judge consolidating the actions will not be held for error on appeal. State v. Combs, 200 N.C. 671, 158 S.E. 252 (1931); State v. Spencer, 239 N.C. 604, 80 S.E.2d 670 (1954).

Larceny and receiving may be included in the same indictment, even though the charges are inconsistent and a defendant cannot be guilty of both. Doss v. North Carolina, 252 F. Supp. 298 (M.D.N.C. 1966).

When a defendant pleads guilty to the indictment, and a single judgment is pronounced thereon, it is regarded as immaterial whether the judgment is considered as relating to the larceny count or to the receiving count. It is only when there is some defect in either the larceny count or the receiving count that knowledge of which count the defendant is pleading guilty to is required. Doss v. North Carolina, 252 F. Supp. 298 (M.D.N.C. 1966).

Larceny, Rape and Kidnapping. — Consolidation of misdemeanor larceny with rape and kidnapping felonies is permissible where the three offenses were connected by time and circumstances and constitute a continuing criminal episode. State v. White, 22 N.C. App. 123, 205 S.E.2d 757, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 668, 207 S.E.2d 760 (1974).

Separate Acts of Rape. — Where the evidence tended to show that defendant forced a girl to have sexual intercourse with him against her will, that on the same night, while defendant was still in company with the first girl, he met another girl in the company of two boys, and that after an altercation with the boys, they and the first girl left the second girl with defendant and that he forced her to have sexual intercourse with him against her will, the consolidation of the prosecutions for the purpose of trial was not error. State v. Chapman, 221 N.C. 157, 19 S.E.2d 250 (1942).

Rape and Carnal Knowledge of Female. — A charge of rape and that of carnally knowing a female person between the ages of 12 and 16 years, under former § 14-26, were properly joined in separate counts in one indictment, since they are related in character and grow out of the same transaction. State v. Hall, 214 N.C. 639, 200 S.E. 375 (1939).

Rape and Kidnapping. — The consolidation of indictments charging defendant with rape and kidnapping and based upon a single occurrence rests within the discretionary power of the trial court. State v. Turner, 268 N.C. 225, 150 S.E.2d 406 (1966).

Rape and Armed Robbery. — An indictment charging defendants with rape and an indictment charging defendants with armed robbery may be consolidated for trial when it appears that defendants stopped the car in which husband and wife were riding, forced them into the woods where each raped the wife while the other held a pistol on the husband, and that one of them committed robbery from the person of the husband while he was being held at the point of the pistol, since the crimes are so connected in time and place that the evidence on the trial of the one is competent and admissible on the trial of the other. State v. Morrow, 262 N.C. 592, 138 S.E.2d 245 (1964), aff'd, 264 N.C. 77, 140 S.E.2d 767 (1965).

Assault with Intent to Rape of One Victim and Rape and Kidnapping of Another. — The consolidation for trial of charges of assault with intent to rape against one victim under former § 14-22 and second-degree rape and kidnapping against another victim was within the sound discretion of the trial judge where the offenses for which defendant was tried occurred in a single afternoon within a three-hour period, with a time lapse of approximately one hour and 25 minutes between offenses, and the offenses were similar in nature and occurred within such a short time span that they could logically be considered all parts of a continuing program of action by the defendant. State v. Greene, 294 N.C. 418, 241 S.E.2d 662 (1978).

Incest and Rape. — Defendant could properly be charged with incest and second-degree rape, though the two offenses arose out of the same transaction and were based on the same facts, where the two offenses were separate and distinct and involved different elements. State v. Allen, 50 N.C. App. 173, 272 S.E.2d 785 (1980), appeal dismissed, 302 N.C. 399, 279 S.E.2d 353 (1981).

First-Degree Sexual Offense and Taking Indecent Liberties with a Child. — Consolidation of two counts of first-degree sexual offense and two counts of taking indecent liberties with a child, which allegedly occurred one week apart, did not constitute error. State v. Swann, 322 N.C. 666, 370 S.E.2d 533 (1988).

Where defendant was charged with four sexual offense violations and all four charges involve acts of sexual abuse by defendant upon the same victim in the same location, and each of the alleged acts occurred when defendant was alone with the victim, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in refusing to sever for separate trial an indecent liberties charge, even though it was based upon acts that allegedly occurred more than six months after the alleged acts underlying the remaining three charges. State v. Bruce, 90 N.C. App. 547, 369 S.E.2d 95, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 367, 373 S.E.2d 549 (1988).

Indictments for first-degree sexual offenses were properly joined under this section; all the crimes were committed while the children were in the exclusive care of defendant while he was transporting them from their homes to a day care [child care] center; and returning them home in the afternoon, therefore, the defendant's conduct manifested a common scheme or plan. State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

Assault, Attempted Murder, Statutory Rape, and Taking Indecent Liberties with Child. — Charges of assault with a deadly weapon and attempted murder were properly joined for trial with charges of first degree statutory rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor, where the assault and murder charges arose from the defendant's HIV infection when he sexually assaulted the victim, so that the cases were based on the same act, were connected together, and constituted part of the same plan. State v. Monk, 132 N.C. App. 248, 511 S.E.2d 332 (1999).

Reckless Driving and Driving under the Influence. — A charge of reckless driving, of operating an automobile on the highway while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and of assault with an automobile may be properly joined in one indictment as separate counts charging distinct offenses of the same class growing out of the same transaction, and separate judgments may be entered upon the jury's verdict of guilty of reckless driving and assault. State v. Fields, 221 N.C. 182, 19 S.E.2d 486 (1942).

A "driving under the influence" misdemeanor charge and a manslaughter felony charge were based on the same transaction within the meaning of § 7A-271(a)(3), and therefore the superior court had jurisdiction of both charges and had the right to proceed to the trial on the misdemeanor charge under the joinder exception of § 7A-271, the "original jurisdiction" of the district court having been lost after nolle prosequi was entered as to the misdemeanor in that court. State v. Karbas, 28 N.C. App. 372, 221 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 618, 223 S.E.2d 394 (1976).

Unlawful Possession of Liquor and Reckless Driving and Speeding. — Where the evidence tended to show that defendant, the discovery of liquor on his premises being imminent, sped away in his car, leading the officers a chase at an illegal speed, the court properly consolidated for trial a bill of indictment charging unlawful possession of nontaxpaid liquor and unlawful possession of such liquor for the purpose of sale with an indictment charging reckless driving and speeding. State v. Brown, 250 N.C. 209, 108 S.E.2d 233 (1959).

Reckless Driving and Passing Standing School Bus. — Indictments charging defendant with reckless driving and with passing a standing school bus on the highway may be consolidated for trial. State v. Webb, 210 N.C. 350, 186 S.E. 241 (1936).

Obstructing Highway and Injury to Property. — It is not only proper but it is the duty of the court to consolidate cases where defendant is charged with obstructing a highway and with wanton injury to personal property by placing nails in the highway. State v. Malpass, 189 N.C. 349, 127 S.E. 248 (1925).

Possession, Sale, and Delivery of Marijuana. — In a prosecution for felonious sale and delivery of marijuana, and felonious possession of marijuana with intent to sell, the fact that the State included in the same count as a single offense both sale and delivery, even though the two acts could have been charged as separate offenses, was not prejudicial to the defendant. State v. Dietz, 289 N.C. 488, 223 S.E.2d 357 (1976); State v. Cuthrell, 50 N.C. App. 195, 272 S.E.2d 616 (1980).

Joinder Held Prejudicial Error. — Joinder for trial of the defendant's possession of stolen property and financial card theft charges with the charges arising from certain home invasions was prejudicial error where the sole common denominator between the possession of stolen property charges and the charges arising out of the home invasions was that some of the evidence found in defendant's bedroom linked him to the armed robbery and the automobile break-ins, supporting the possession of stolen property and financial card theft charges, while other evidence found in the bedroom linked defendant to the home invasions and where, absent that evidence, the jury might well have reached a different verdict. State v. Perry, 142 N.C. App. 177, 541 S.E.2d 746 (2001).

Joinder of Charge of Possession of Heroin to Other Charges Not Prejudicial. — Defendant's argument that because a charge of possession of heroin carries a far greater "antisocial stigma," the defendant was prejudiced by joining it to a charge of possession of amphetamines was without merit. State v. Wooten, 20 N.C. App. 499, 201 S.E.2d 696 (1974).

Drug-Related Offenses. — Joinder of several drug-related offenses was not the product of arbitrary reasoning, since the transactions were closely related in time and nature under the circumstances. Additionally, defendant failed to point to any tangible evidence of prejudice which resulted from the joinder. State v. Harding, 110 N.C. App. 155, 429 S.E.2d 416 (1993).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion and properly joined charges of knowingly keeping a dwelling for the purpose of keeping or selling controlled substances and possession of marijuana with intent to sell and deliver with the charge of selling marijuana to a minor. State v. Styles, 116 N.C. App. 479, 448 S.E.2d 385, petition denied, 339 N.C. 620, 454 S.E.2d 265 (1995).

Arson and House Burning. — Where the grand jury has found two separate indictments, one charging arson and the other the lesser offense of house burning, both arising from the same transaction, the two may be consolidated and a conviction of the lesser offense will be sustained on appeal. State v. Brown, 182 N.C. 761, 108 S.E. 349 (1921).

Solicitation to Commit Arson. — Where solicitation to commit arson charge and burning of the building charge both involved the same structure, the offenses constituted a transaction to burn the building. Therefore consolidation was proper. State v. Miller, 61 N.C. App. 1, 300 S.E.2d 431 (1983).

Assault upon Law Officer and Assault with Deadly Weapon. — The trial court did not err in consolidating a charge of assault upon a law officer in the performance of his duty with three charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury where all of the alleged assaults occurred within a period of a few minutes at the same place. State v. Mitchell, 17 N.C. App. 1, 193 S.E.2d 400 (1972).

Assaults During Flight from Scene of Other Offenses. — The trial court did not err in consolidating for trial charges against defendant for assault with a deadly weapon on a law officer in the performance of his duties and assault on the same officer with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injuries not resulting in death and charges against defendant for breaking and entering a restaurant, breaking and entering another building and larceny from the second building where the assaults occurred when the officer attempted to arrest defendant while defendant was fleeing from the scene of the other crimes, since all of the charges against defendant were based on the same series of acts or transactions connected together within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section. State v. Byrd, 50 N.C. App. 736, 275 S.E.2d 522, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 316, 281 S.E.2d 654 (1981).

Offenses During Escape from Jail. — In a criminal prosecution the "transactional connection" required by this section for joinder of offenses at trial existed and the State's motion for joinder was properly allowed where all the offenses involved related directly to defendant's escape from jail and his efforts to avoid recapture. State v. Avery, 302 N.C. 517, 276 S.E.2d 699 (1981).

Offenses Committed on Separate Dates. — In the absence of a conspiracy charge that serves as an umbrella, offenses that are committed on separate dates cannot be joined for trial, even when they are of like character, unless the circumstances of each offense are so distinctly similar that they serve almost as a fingerprint. State v. Williams, 74 N.C. App. 695, 329 S.E.2d 705 (1985).

Subsection (a) of this section would not permit joinder of 13 counts of second-degree burglary, 11 counts of felonious larceny, two counts of conspiracy, and one count of attempted safecracking, which took place on a weekend in October 1982, and on a weekend in January 1983, as there was no single conspiracy charge that served as an umbrella covering the October and January offenses. State v. Williams, 74 N.C. App. 695, 329 S.E.2d 705 (1985).

Where there existed an extended interval of as much as several years between sex offenses and the lack of a consistent pattern in defendant's molesting behavior, all of the charged acts perpetrated against three sisters did not constitute part of a single scheme or plan, as a matter of law, and the trial court erred in joining the cases under this section; however, since evidence of other molestations would have been admissible pursuant to § 8C-1, Rule 404(b) to show "intent, plan or design," at the trial of any one offense, the error was harmless. State v. Owens, 135 N.C. App. 456, 520 S.E.2d 590 (1999).

Where the record revealed that the crimes charged against defendant occurred over a period of 12 years, from 1984 to 1996, and involved three different victims, but, although all of the charges alleged sexual crimes against children, the evidence did not show that defendant went about committing them in any special way, or place, and where the defendant neither offered an argument to support his objection to the joinder nor suggested to the court that joinder would prejudice him and the evidence of the other crimes would have been admissible under § 8C-1, Rule 404(b). State v. Bowen, 139 N.C. App. 18, 533 S.E.2d 248 (2000).

III. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS.

A. In General.

Defendants Charged with Same Crimes May Be Tried Together. — Where there are two indictments in which both defendants are charged with the same crimes, then they may be consolidated for trial in the discretion of the court. State v. Mitchell, 288 N.C. 360, 218 S.E.2d 332 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Charges against multiple defendants may be joined for trial, pursuant to subdivision (b)(2) of this section, when each defendant is charged with accountability for each offense, or when the several offenses were part of a common scheme or plan. State v. Childers, 80 N.C. App. 236, 341 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 337, 346 S.E.2d 142 (1986).

Absent Showing of Irreparable Prejudice. — Ordinarily, unless it is shown that irreparable prejudice will result therefrom, consolidation for trial rather than multiple individual trials is appropriate when two or more persons are indicted for the same criminal offense. State v. Autry, 27 N.C. App. 639, 219 S.E.2d 795 (1975); State v. Johnson, 29 N.C. App. 534, 225 S.E.2d 113 (1976); State v. Travis, 33 N.C. App. 330, 235 S.E.2d 66, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 163, 236 S.E.2d 707 (1977); State v. Herring, 74 N.C. App. 269, 328 S.E.2d 23, discretionary review denied as to additional issues, 314 N.C. 671, 335 S.E.2d 324 (1985), aff'd, Stevens v. North Carolina, 638 F. Supp. 1255 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Choice Is for State, Not Defendant. — A defendant could not independently assert his preference for joinder with a codefendant. Under the statutory joinder structure, the choice is for the State, not a defendant. State v. Adams, 103 N.C. App. 158, 404 S.E.2d 708 (1991).

The statute specifically provides only for joinder of charges against two or more defendants, as distinguished from joinder of two or more charges against the same defendant, upon motion of the State. Thus, the statute provided no basis for a motion by defendant to compel joinder of his case for trial with that of his brother, even though both he and his brother were charged with the rape and kidnapping of the victim and their defenses were not antagonistic. State v. Jeune, 332 N.C. 424, 420 S.E.2d 406 (1992).

Trial Court's Ruling Will Not Be Disturbed Unless Defendant Is Deprived of Fair Trial. — Absent a showing that a defendant has been deprived of a fair trial by joinder, the trial judge's discretionary ruling on the question will not be disturbed. State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

The question of whether to allow a motion to join defendants for trial ordinarily is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court; absent a showing that a defendant has been deprived of a fair trial by joinder, the trial court's discretionary ruling on the question will not be disturbed. State v. Short, 322 N.C. 783, 370 S.E.2d 351 (1988).

Timing and Form of Motions. — A written motion for joinder of defendants may be made at any time prior to trial; the motion need not be written if made at a hearing, and, in the judge's discretion, the motion may be made orally even at the beginning of trial. State v. Fink, 92 N.C. App. 523, 375 S.E.2d 303 (1989).

Result Necessary to Show Prejudice. — Unless joinder of codefendants results in the admission of evidence harmful to the defendant which would not have been admissible in a severed trial, the defendant is not prejudiced by the joinder. State v. Lowry, 318 N.C. 54, 347 S.E.2d 729 (1986); State v. Fink, 92 N.C. App. 523, 375 S.E.2d 303 (1989).

Prejudice arises most often where defendants offer antagonistic defenses. State v. Jones, 57 N.C. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 869 (1982).

Or where one defendant has made a confession inadmissible against the other. State v. Jones, 57 N.C. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 869 (1982).

Antagonistic defenses do not necessarily warrant severance. The test is whether the conflict in defendants' respective positions at trial is of such a nature that, considering all of the other evidence in the case, defendants were denied a fair trial. State v. Cook, 48 N.C. App. 685, 269 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 456 (1980).

Even though the defendants in a joint trial may offer antagonistic or conflicting defenses, that fact alone does not necessarily warrant severance. State v. Lowery, 318 N.C. 54, 347 S.E.2d 729 (1986).

Mere inconsistencies in defenses do not necessarily amount to such antagonism between defendants joined for trial as to deprive one or the other of a fair trial. Rather, the defenses must be so irreconcilable that the jury will unjustifiably infer that this conflict alone demonstrates that both are guilty or so discrepant as to pose an evidentiary contest more between defendants themselves than between the State and the defendants, resulting in a spectacle where the State simply stands by and witnesses a combat in which the defendants attempt to destroy each other. State v. Belton, 318 N.C. 141, 347 S.E.2d 755 (1986), overruled in part, State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997).

That one defendant chose to testify and the others did not does not amount to antagonistic defenses. State v. Wilhite, 58 N.C. App. 654, 294 S.E.2d 396 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 798, 303 S.E.2d 788 (1983).

Where each defendant was charged with accountability for the same offenses, joinder was permissible. State v. Ruffin, 90 N.C. App. 712, 370 S.E.2d 279 (1988).

Common Scheme or Plan. — In light of the fact that the charges against each defendant arose out of a common scheme or plan entered into by the defendants and the evidence against each would be almost identical, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion by joining the defendants' cases for trial. State v. Hayes, 314 N.C. 460, 334 S.E.2d 741 (1985).

Continuous Criminal Episode. — Where two defendants are charged in separate bills of indictment with identical crimes, and the offenses charged are so connected and tied together in time, place, and circumstances as to make one continuous criminal episode, in such cases there is statutory authority for a consolidation. State v. Walker, 6 N.C. App. 447, 170 S.E.2d 627 (1969); State v. McCall, 12 N.C. App. 85, 182 S.E.2d 617, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 513, 183 S.E.2d 689 (1971).

When two or more defendants are charged in separate bills of indictment with identical crimes and the offense charged against each is so connected in time and place as to constitute one continuous criminal offense, the trial court may order the cases consolidated for trial and his decision will not be disturbed in the absence of a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Garcia, 16 N.C. App. 344, 192 S.E.2d 2, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 427, 192 S.E.2d 837 (1972).

Joinder Permitted. — Defendant's contention that joinder of defendants for trial was improper because some of the evidence was inadmissible against him was without merit. State v. Weaver, 123 N.C. App. 276, 473 S.E.2d 362 (1996).

When Joinder Not Permitted. — Joinder of defendants may not be permitted where such joinder would not promote a fair determination of the guilt or innocence of one or more of the defendants. State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976).

The trial court may in its discretion order a joinder of defendants for trial as provided in subsection (b) of this section, unless there is a showing that a joint trial would be prejudicial and unfair, i.e., the existence of antagonistic defenses, or the admission of evidence which would be excluded on a separate trial, or the exclusion of evidence which would be admitted. State v. Foster, 33 N.C. App. 145, 234 S.E.2d 443, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 255, 237 S.E.2d 537 (1977).

Subdivision (b)(2) of this section permits joinder where the state seeks to hold each defendant accountable for the same crimes. Under § 15A-927(c)(2) joinder is not permitted, however, if severance is necessary for a fair determination of guilt or innocence. State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

Severance should be granted to avoid an evidentiary contest between defendants where the state simply stands by and witnesses a combat in which defendants attempt to destroy each other. State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109

S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

When Written Motion Required. — The district attorney's motion under subsection (b) of this section, made at the beginning of trial, comes within the purview of § 15A-951(a) and is not required to be in writing. The language in subsection (b) of this section, which states, "Upon written motion of the district attorney," applies only in those instances in which joinder of defendants is requested prior to trial. State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976).

For discussion of whether codefendants who are tried jointly should receive joint or separate sentencing trial, see State v. Oliver, 309 N.C. 326, 307 S.E.2d 304 (1983).

B. Illustrative Cases.

Armed Robbery. — Trial court did not err in granting the State's motion to join defendant's case with that of a codefendant for trial, where both defendants were charged with accountability for the same armed robbery; and there was no merit to defendant's contention that, had the parties been tried separately, witness's testimony that he saw a man not fitting defendant's description leave getaway vehicle and run into the woods would not have been admissible against him, since the witness's testimony would have been admissible against defendant in any event as the witness's personal observation of one of the events taking place during the incident, and the testimony would be more favorable to defendant than prejudicial. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

Murder Charges. — Defendant failed to show that the trial judge abused his discretion in permitting joinder of murder charges against himself and his girlfriend or that he was deprived of a fair trial. State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

The consolidation of defendants' charges for trial did not result in any unfair prejudice to defendant, where neither defendant put on a defense, and where there was nothing in the record to suggest that this course of action was forced on either defendant as a result of the other defendant's position or strategy. State v. Lundy, 135 N.C. App. 13, 519 S.E.2d 73 (1999).

Consolidation of Indictments Charging Defendants with Murder of Same Person. — Indictment was returned against one defendant charging him with murder in the first degree of a named person and another indictment was returned against two other defendants charging them with murder in the first degree of the same person and on the same date. Since the State was relying upon the same set of facts at the same place and time as against each of the defendants, the trial court had authority to consolidate the indictments for trial. State v. Spencer, 239 N.C. 604, 80 S.E.2d 670 (1954).

In a prosecution of defendants for felony murder, the trial court did not err in granting the State's motion to consolidate defendants' cases for trial where each defendant was charged with having committed the same offense at the same time, neither defendant acted at trial in such a way as to incriminate the other and their defenses were not antagonistic, and while the State on occasion presented evidence that was competent against only one defendant, the trial court proceeded at those times to instruct the jury that such evidence was competent against only a particular defendant. State v. Rinck, 303 N.C. 551, 280 S.E.2d 912 (1981).

Armed Robbery and Murder. — In a prosecution of defendant for armed robbery and murder, the trial court did not err in consolidating defendant's case for trial with that of a codefendant where defendants were charged in separate indictments for the same crimes; they were tried upon the theory that the murder with which they were charged was committed in connection with a robbery committed by them jointly; their defenses were not antagonistic; and neither attempted to incriminate the other in the presentation of an alibi. State v. Smith, 301 N.C. 695, 272 S.E.2d 852 (1981).

Where the three defendants were charged with and tried for a single, identical crime, the murder of the trooper, the theory of the prosecution in each case was that the three defendants, jointly, and pursuant to a common plan, robbed the bank, and, while fleeing from the scene of the robbery with its proceeds, shot and killed the trooper, and nothing whatever in the record indicated the slightest prejudice to the right of any of the defendants to a fair trial by reason of the consolidation of the cases per se, there was no error in consolidating the three cases for trial under subsection (b)(2) of this section. State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

There was no error in the denial of the motion of codefendants for a separate trial where the two defendants were duly charged in separate indictments with the same crime, the State proceeded upon the theory that the murder, with which they were charged, was committed in the course of a robbery committed by them jointly, their defenses were not antagonistic, each testified in support of their joint alibi and neither, in his testimony or other evidence, attempted to incriminate the other defendant. State v. Madden, 292 N.C. 114, 232 S.E.2d 656 (1977).

The trial court neither committed error nor denied the defendant due process of law when it denied his pretrial motion to sever his case from that of his brother co-defendant and overruled his objections to improper joinder where both were charged with two counts of first-degree murder, two counts of robbery with a dangerous weapon, and one count each of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, discharging a firearm into occupied property, and possession of a stolen vehicle, and where the offenses arose out of a common scheme and were part of the same transaction. Furthermore, the State did not stand by and rely on the brother's statement to prove its case but, instead, rebutted the brother's claim that while he was debilitated by pepper spray, he heard gunshots. State v. Golphin, 352 N.C. 364, 533 S.E.2d 168 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1379, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1380, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001).

Receiving of Stolen Goods Separately by Defendants at Different Times and Places. — Where two persons are charged in separate bills of indictment with receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen, and there is no evidence tending to show there was a conspiracy between them, or between them and other parties, but the indictments relate to the receiving of goods separately by each defendant at different times and places, the consolidation of indictments for trial over objection of appealing defendant is prejudicial error. State v. Dyer, 239 N.C. 713, 80 S.E.2d 769 (1954).

Rape. — Where all of the offenses of rape were parts of a common scheme or plan and each of the defendants was present, aiding and abetting in each offense, the granting of the motion for consolidation for trial was in the sound discretion of the trial judge, and in the absence of a showing that the joint trial deprived the defendant of a fair trial, the judge's exercise of that discretion by consolidating the cases for trial would not be disturbed on appeal even though each of the successive rapes of the prosecutrix was a separate criminal offense. State v. Braxton, 294 N.C. 446, 242 S.E.2d 769 (1978).

Multiple charges of trafficking in cocaine through possession, manufacturing, and transportation, as well as conspiracy, are within the purview of this statute. State v. Crummy, 107 N.C. App. 305, 420 S.E.2d 448, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 669, 424 S.E.2d 411 (1992).

Possession with Intent to Sell Cocaine. — Where defendants were charged with identical crimes emanating from the same instance of wrongdoing, where the offenses charged were so connected in time and place that the evidence presented at trial was competent and admissible to both defendants, where the trial court instructed the jury that each defendant's case should be considered separate and apart from the other defendant's case, and where defendants had shown absolutely no prejudice resulting from the court's failure to sever their trials, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in refusing to separate the trial of defendants for possession with intent to sell more than 28 grams of cocaine. State v. Kite, 93 N.C. App. 561, 378 S.E.2d 588, appeal dismissed, 324 N.C. 579, 381 S.E.2d 778 (1989).

Possession of Heroin. — Two defendants, charged with identical offenses that were connected and tied together in time, place and circumstances, may be given a consolidated trial of cases charging them with possession of heroin. State v. Keitt, 19 N.C. App. 414, 199 S.E.2d 23, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 257, 200 S.E.2d 657 (1973), 415 U.S. 990, 94 S. Ct. 1589, 39 L. Ed. 2d 887 (1974).

Conspiracy. — Where both defendants were convicted of conspiracy to commit the same instance of breaking or entering and larceny, joinder was proper under this section and did not deprive defendant of a fair trial. State v. Fie, 80 N.C. App. 577, 343 S.E.2d 248 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 626, 359 S.E.2d 774 (1987).

False Pretenses. — Joinder of four charges against defendant of obtaining property by false pretenses for trial and consolidation of his cases with those of codefendant upheld. State v. Childers, 80 N.C. App. 236, 341 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 337, 346 S.E.2d 142 (1986).

Sexual Abuse of Children. — Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in joining the cases of defendant husband and wife, involving sexual abuse upon four young children for whom wife had been baby-sitting, where she was present at all times, including both times that husband committed his offenses, as under these facts the trial judge could have made a reasoned decision that there was a common scheme or plan, namely a scheme on the part of the defendants to gratify their sexual desires on the children whom they took in to baby-sit, and the defendants' defenses were not antagonistic. State v. Jenkins, 83 N.C. App. 616, 351 S.E.2d 299 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 675, 356 S.E.2d 791 (1987).

Defendant wife who married codefendant husband four days before their joint trial did not prevail in contention that trial should have been severed due to the couple's marriage and antagonistic defenses, where neither her brief nor the record revealed any such conflict. State v. Agubata, 94 N.C. App. 710, 381 S.E.2d 191 (1989).

Joinder of Married Defendants Upheld. — Where both of the defendants were charged with trafficking in heroin based on controlled substances found in the home they shared, joinder originally was consented to by both defendants through their prior counsel, joinder was made prior to the defendants' marriage to each other, and although defendant argued that he would tend to incriminate his wife by offering a defense that would implicate her as the owner of the controlled substances found by the police, defendant offered no such defense at trial, there was no error in trial court's decision to allow joinder. State v. Agubata, 92 N.C. App. 651, 375 S.E.2d 702 (1989).

Joinder was upheld where the defendant and the co-defendant were charged with the same offenses, but on different theories and where the several offenses for which they were charged were clearly part of a common scheme or plan to murder the victims, defendant's mother and nephew, and to disguise their murders by burning the victim' house. State v. Brewington, 352 N.C. 489, 532 S.E.2d 496 (2000), cert denied, 531 U.S. 1165, 121 S. Ct. 1126, 148 L. Ed. 2d 992 (2001).

Witness for One Defendant Serving as Attorney for the Other. — There was no irreparable prejudice in the consolidation for trial of the charges against two defendants where one of the witnesses for one of the defendants was the attorney representing the other defendant. State v. Travis, 33 N.C. App. 330, 235 S.E.2d 66, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 163, 236 S.E.2d 707 (1977).

Denial of Severance of Sentencing Proceedings Not Plain Error. — The court did not commit plain error in refusing to sever the defendant's sentencing proceeding from that of his brother co-defendant where he produced no evidence that his mother would have testified favorably if the cases had been severed and there was no indication that she would not have testified truthfully if she had been subpoenaed and where the trial court repeatedly instructed the jury to consider each defendant separately. State v. Golphin, 352 N.C. 364, 533 S.E.2d 168 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1379, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1380, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001).

IV. FAILURE TO JOIN RELATED OFFENSES.

Purpose of Subsection (c). — Subsection (c) of this section was designed to provide a means by which a defendant may protect himself from multiple trials on charges of related offenses when the charges later brought up for trial were not known to the defendant at the time of the first trial but, if the severed charges were pending at the time of the first trial, the defendant waives any right to joinder by failing to move for joinder. State v. Jones, 50 N.C. App. 263, 273 S.E.2d 327, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 400, 279 S.E.2d 354 (1981).

Subdivision (c)(2) applies after a trial on another charge and the motion to dismiss is permitted unless the motion for joinder was previously decided against the defendant or unless the defendant has waived his right to object by his earlier failure to request joinder of related offenses. State v. Jones, 50 N.C. App. 263, 273 S.E.2d 327, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 400, 279 S.E.2d 354 (1981).

§ 15A-927. Severance of offenses; objection to joinder of defendants for trial.

(a) Timeliness of Motion; Waiver; Double Jeopardy.

(1) A defendant's motion for severance of offenses must be made before trial as provided in G.S. 15A-952, except as provided in G.S. 15A-953, and except that a motion for severance may be made before or at the close of the State's evidence if based upon a ground not previously known. Any right to severance is waived if the motion is not made at the appropriate time.

(2) If a defendant's pretrial motion for severance is overruled, he may renew the motion on the same grounds before or at the close of all the evidence. Any right to severance is waived by failure to renew the motion.

(3) Unless consented to by the defendant, a motion by the prosecutor for severance of offenses may be granted only prior to trial.

(4) If a motion for severance of offenses is granted during the trial, a motion by the defendant for a mistrial must be granted.

(b) Severance of Offenses. — The court, on motion of the prosecutor or on motion of the defendant, must grant a severance of offenses whenever:

(1) If before trial, it is found necessary to promote a fair determination of the defendant's guilt or innocence of each offense; or

(2) If during trial, upon motion of the defendant or motion of the prosecutor with the consent of the defendant, it is found necessary to achieve a fair determination of the defendant's guilt or innocence of each offense. The court must consider whether, in view of the number of offenses charged and the complexity of the evidence to be offered, the trier of fact will be able to distinguish the evidence and apply the law intelligently as to each offense.

(c) Objection to Joinder of Charges against Multiple Defendants for Trial; Severance.

(1) When a defendant objects to joinder of charges against two or more defendants for trial because an out-of-court statement of a codefendant makes reference to him but is not admissible against him, the court must require the prosecutor to select one of the following courses:

a. A joint trial at which the statement is not admitted into evidence; or

b. A joint trial at which the statement is admitted into evidence only after all references to the moving defendant have been effectively deleted so that the statement will not prejudice him; or

c. A separate trial of the objecting defendant.

(2) The court, on motion of the prosecutor, or on motion of the defendant other than under subdivision (1) above must deny a joinder for trial or grant a severance of defendants whenever:

a. If before trial, it is found necessary to protect a defendant's right to a speedy trial, or it is found necessary to promote a fair determination of the guilt or innocence of one or more defendants; or

b. If during trial, upon motion of the defendant whose trial is to be severed, or motion of the prosecutor with the consent of the defendant whose trial is to be severed, it is found necessary to achieve a fair determination of the guilt or innocence of that defendant.

(3) The court may order the prosecutor to disclose, out of the presence of the jurors, any statements made by the defendants which he intends to introduce in evidence at the trial when that information would assist the court in ruling on an objection to joinder of defendants for trial or a motion for severance of defendants.

(d) Failure to Prove Grounds for Joinder of Defendants for Trial. — If a defendant moves for severance at the conclusion of the State's case or of all the evidence, and there is not sufficient evidence to support the allegation upon which the moving defendant was joined for trial with the other defendant or defendants, the court must grant a severance if, in view of this lack of evidence, severance is found necessary to achieve a fair determination of that defendant's guilt or innocence.

(e) Severance on Motion of Court. — The court may order a severance of offenses before trial or deny the joinder of defendants for trial if a severance or denial of joinder could be obtained on motion of a defendant or the prosecutor. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subject to the exceptions set out here, the making of a motion for severance is subject to the requirements of Article 52, Motions Practice.

Obviously if a defendant seeks severance of charges, the granting of that motion should not bar trial on the severed offenses. If the presence of the severed charges has already worked to the prejudice of the defendant, he should not have to go forward at that time, and provisions for mistrial have been added to the A.B.A. Standards.

Subsection (b) sets out the obvious grounds for severance. Of course severance during trial would require the consent of the defendant if there is to be further trial on those charges.

Subdivision (1) of subsection (c) contains provisions which meet the requirements of Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968). This and other provisions of subsection (c) are from the A.B.A. Standards, with appropriate modification to reflect the concept of joinder for trial rather than pleading joinder. Prior to trial the defendant may object to joinder. Once the trial is begun it is more appropriate to speak in terms of "severance."

CASE NOTES

History of Section. — State v. Gonzalez, 62 N.C. App. 146, 302 S.E.2d 463 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 80, 316 S.E.2d 229 (1984).

Legislative Intent. — It must be assumed that the legislature in enacting the former Speedy Trial Act was aware of the preexisting subdivision (c)(2) of this section. It must also be assumed that the legislature did not intend to do a vain act. Therefore, the provision "right to a speedy trial" found in this section refers to the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial, not his statutory right. This interpretation allows a harmonious existence between these statutes, and returns discretion to trial courts. State v. Marlow, 310 N.C. 507, 313 S.E.2d 532 (1984).

This section is intended to protect a defendant's rights under U.S. Const., Amend. VI of confrontation and cross-examination which, because of the privilege against self-incrimination, may be lost when a codefendant's statement, inadmissible against but implicating the defendant, is admitted into evidence against the codefendant at a joint trial. State v. Sidden, 315 N.C. 539, 340 S.E.2d 340 (1986).

Public Policy Favors Consolidation. — Where two or more defendants are sought to be held accountable for the same crime or crimes, not only is joinder permissible under the statute, but public policy strongly compels consolidation as the rule rather than the exception. State v. Belton, 318 N.C. 141, 347 S.E.2d 755 (1986), overruled in part, State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997).

There is a strong policy favoring the consolidated trials of defendants accused of collective criminal behavior. State v. Roope, 130 N.C. App. 356, 503 S.E.2d 118 (1998), cert., 349 N.C. 374, 525 S.E.2d 189 (1998).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — Ordinarily, motions for separate trial lie within the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

A trial court's ruling on questions of joinder or severance is discretionary and will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Carson, 320 N.C. 297, 357 S.E.2d 662 (1987).

Whether defendants should be tried jointly or separately is in the sound discretion of the trial court. State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976); State v. Ervin, 38 N.C. App. 261, 248 S.E.2d 91 (1978); State v. Nelson, 298 N.C. 573, 260 S.E.2d 629 (1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 1867, 64 L. Ed. 2d 282 (1980); State v. Arsenault, 46 N.C. App. 7, 264 S.E.2d 592 (1980); State v. Cook, 48 N.C. App. 685, 269 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 456 (1980); State v. Allen, 301 N.C. 489, 272 S.E.2d 116 (1980); State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

The question of whether to join the offenses for trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Hardy, 67 N.C. App. 122, 312 S.E.2d 699 (1984).

A trial court's ruling on the consolidation or severance of cases is discretionary and will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion; a trial court may be reversed for an abuse of discretion only upon a showing that its ruling was so arbitrary that it could not have been the result of a reasoned decision. State v. Hayes, 314 N.C. 460, 334 S.E.2d 741 (1985).

The question of whether defendants should be tried jointly or separately is within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing that joinder has deprived a defendant of a fair trial. State v. Evans, 346 N.C. 221, 485 S.E.2d 271 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1057, 118 S. Ct. 712, 139 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1998).

The trial court has three choices when a defendant objects to joinder due to the existence of an extrajudicial statement by a codefendant that makes reference to the objecting defendant but is not admissible as to the objecting defendant: 1) a joint trial at which the statement is not admitted; 2) a joint trial at which the statement is admitted in a sanitized form; or 3) a separate trial for the objecting defendant. State v. Tucker, 331 N.C. 12, 414 S.E.2d 548 (1992).

Review of Exercise of Discretion. — In the absence of a showing that a joint trial has deprived the movant of a fair trial, the exercise of the court's discretion will not be disturbed upon appeal. State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976); State v. Ervin, 38 N.C. App. 261, 248 S.E.2d 91 (1978); State v. Nelson, 298 N.C. 573, 260 S.E.2d 629 (1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 929, 100 S. Ct. 1867, 64 L. Ed. 2d 282 (1980); State v. Arsenault, 46 N.C. App. 7, 264 S.E.2d 592 (1980); State v. Cook, 48 N.C. App. 685, 269 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 456 (1980); State v. Allen, 301 N.C. 489, 272 S.E.2d 116 (1980).

Decision to join the charges against two or more defendants for trial is within the sound discretion of the trial judge and will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

Absent a showing that a defendant has been deprived of a fair trial by joinder, the trial judge's discretionary ruling on the question will not be disturbed. State v. Moses, 52 N.C. App. 412, 279 S.E.2d 59, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 318, 281 S.E.2d 390 (1981); State v. Belton, 318 N.C. 141, 347 S.E.2d 755 (1986); State v. Giles, 83 N.C. App. 487, 350 S.E.2d 868 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 460, 356 S.E.2d 8 (1987); State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

The trial court's exercise of authority to consolidate cases for trial is discretionary and will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing that a joint trial deprived a defendant of a fair trial. State v. Overton, 60 N.C. App. 1, 298 S.E.2d 695 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 580, 299 S.E.2d 652 (1983); State v. Simmons, 65 N.C. App. 294, 309 S.E.2d 493 (1983).

The question of whether to allow a motion to join defendants for trial ordinarily is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court; absent a showing that a defendant has been deprived of a fair trial by joinder, the trial court's discretionary ruling on the question will not be disturbed. State v. Short, 322 N.C. 783, 370 S.E.2d 351 (1988).

Under this section, restrictions are placed on the use of a codefendant's statement only where a joint trial occurs; therefore, this statute did not apply to statements made by co-defendant and read in court by prosecution witness, since co-defendant was not jointly tried with defendant. State v. McLaughlin, 323 N.C. 68, 372 S.E.2d 49 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 1463, 108 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990).

Under this section, restrictions are placed on the use of a codefendant's statement only where a joint trial occurs. State v. McLaughlin, 323 N.C. 68, 372 S.E.2d 49 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 1463, 108 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990).

Showing of Prejudice from Joinder Required. — Defendant seeking to overturn the discretionary ruling of the trial judge must show that the joinder has deprived him of a fair trial. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

The ruling upon a motion for severance shall not be disturbed on appeal unless defendant demonstrates an abuse of judicial discretion which effectively deprived him of a fair trial. State v. Lake, 305 N.C. 143, 286 S.E.2d 541 (1982).

Unless the accused suffered some apparent and palpable injustice in the trial below, an appellate court will not interfere with the decision of the court on the motion for a severance. State v. Wilhite, 58 N.C. App. 654, 294 S.E.2d 396 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 798, 303 S.E.2d 788 (1983).

Unless joinder of codefendants results in the admission of evidence harmful to the defendant which would not have been admissible in a severed trial, the defendant is not prejudiced by the joinder. State v. Lowry, 318 N.C. 54, 347 S.E.2d 729 (1986); State v. Fink, 92 N.C. App. 523, 375 S.E.2d 303 (1989).

Unsupported Statement of Possible Prejudice. — Where defendant's only assertion of possible prejudice was that he might have elected to testify in one of the cases and not in the others, this unsupported statement of possible prejudice was not sufficient to show abuse of discretion on the part of the trial judge in denying defendant's motion to sever the cases for trial. State v. Sutton, 34 N.C. App. 371, 238 S.E.2d 305 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 186, 241 S.E.2d 521 (1978).

When Joint Trial Is Error. — Where the defendants' defenses are antagonistic, or where it is impossible for one defendant to receive a fair trial, it is error to allow a joint trial over the objection of the defendant. State v. Boykin, 307 N.C. 87, 296 S.E.2d 258 (1982).

Section 15A-926(b)(2) permits joinder where the state seeks to hold each defendant accountable for the same crimes. Under subdivision (c)(2) of this section joinder is not permitted, however, if severance is necessary for a fair determination of guilt or innocence. State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

Where defendant's failure to testify in his own defense was based on the position taken by his codefendant rather than the position taken by the State and defendant was denied the opportunity to put on potentially inculpatory evidence against his codefendant, joinder was inappropriate. State v. Pickens, 335 N.C. 717, 440 S.E.2d 552 (1994).

Fairness Controls over Time and Money Considerations. — Consolidation expedites the administration of justice, reduces the congestion of trial dockets, conserves judicial time, lessens the burden upon citizens who must sacrifice both time and money to serve upon juries and avoids the necessity of recalling witnesses who would otherwise be called upon to testify only once. However, no matter how appealing such public policy may be, it must not stand in the way of a fair determination of guilt or innocence. State v. Boykin, 307 N.C. 87, 296 S.E.2d 258 (1982).

Subdivision (c)(1) codifies substantially the decision in Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968), which held that the receipt in evidence of the confession of one codefendant posed a substantial threat to the other codefendant's Sixth Amendment right of confrontation and cross-examination because the privilege against self-incrimination prevents those who are implicated from calling the defendant who made the statement to the stand. State v. Johnston, 39 N.C. App. 179, 249 S.E.2d 879 (1978), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 738, 254 S.E.2d 179 (1979); State v. Whilhite, 56 N.C. App. 395, 289 S.E.2d 111, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 305 N.C. 591, 292 S.E.2d 13 (1982); State v. Welch, 316 N.C. 578, 342 S.E.2d 789 (1986).

When Statement Regarding Codefendant Inadmissible. — A statement is inadmissible as to a codefendant only if it is made outside his presence and incriminates him. State v. Tucker, 331 N.C. 12, 414 S.E.2d 548 (1992).

Defendant was not entitled to have his co-conspirators' incriminating statements sanitized pursuant to subdivision (c)(1) of this section where the statements are admissible against him under § 8C-1, Rule 801(d)(E) whether he is tried separately or jointly. State v. Fink, 92 N.C. App. 523, 375 S.E.2d 303 (1989).

Subdivision (c)(1) Held Inapplicable. — Where the extrajudicial statements made by accomplices implicating the defendants were admitted at trial for the purpose of corroborating the testimony of the accomplices, the accomplices were subject to cross-examination by defendants, and subdivision (c)(1) of this section did not apply. State v. Johnston, 39 N.C. App. 179, 249 S.E.2d 879 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 738, 254 S.E.2d 179 (1979).

Where statement was part of the res gestae and therefore would have been admissible against both defendant and codefendant had they been tried separately, the trial judge correctly denied defendant's motion for appropriate relief under subdivision (c)(1) of this section. State v. Sidden, 315 N.C. 539, 340 S.E.2d 340 (1986).

The existence of antagonistic defenses will not, standing alone, warrant a severance. State v. Pickens, 335 N.C. 717, 440 S.E.2d 552 (1994).

Antagonistic defenses do not necessarily warrant severance. The test is whether the conflict in defendants' respective positions at trial is of such a nature that, considering all of the other evidence in the case, defendants were denied a fair trial. State v. Cook, 48 N.C. App. 685, 269 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 528, 273 S.E.2d 456 (1980); State v. Rasor, 319 N.C. 577, 356 S.E.2d 328 (1987).

Even though the defendants in a joint trial may offer antagonistic or conflicting defenses, that fact alone does not necessarily warrant severance. State v. Lowery, 318 N.C. 54, 347 S.E.2d 729 (1986).

Where the State presented plenary evidence of defendant's guilt, apart from codefendant's testimony, and defendant had the opportunity to cross-examine codefendant, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion to sever based on antagonistic defenses. State v. Rasor, 319 N.C. 577, 356 S.E.2d 328 (1987).

The existence of antagonistic defenses alone does not necessarily warrant severance; the focus is on whether the defendants have suffered prejudice, not on whether they contradict each other. State v. Burton, 119 N.C. App. 625, 460 S.E.2d 181 (1995).

Mere inconsistencies in defenses do not necessarily amount to such antagonism between defendants joined for trial as to deprive one or the other of a fair trial. Rather, the defenses must be so irreconcilable that the jury will unjustifiably infer that this conflict alone demonstrates that both are guilty or so discrepant as to pose an evidentiary contest more between defendants themselves than between the State and the defendants, resulting in a spectacle where the State simply stands by and witnesses a combat in which the defendants attempt to destroy each other. State v. Belton, 318 N.C. 141, 347 S.E.2d 755 (1986), overruled in part, State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997).

Deletions from defendant's statement of references to codefendant did not materially change the nature of defendant's statement, and he was not prejudiced by admission of the "sanitized" statement. State v. Giles, 83 N.C. App. 487, 350 S.E.2d 868 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 460, 356 S.E.2d 8 (1987); State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988); State v. Holmes, 101 N.C. App. 229, 398 S.E.2d 873 (1990), aff'd, 330 N.C. 826, 412 S.E.2d 660 (1992).

The admission of co-defendant's confession with all references to defendant deleted was not prejudicial to defendant where the parts of co-defendant's confession about which defendant complained were of little importance to the case against defendant and the confession was largely corroborated by other evidence. State v. Littlejohn, 340 N.C. 750, 459 S.E.2d 629 (1995).

Test Is Whether Conflict Deprived Defendants of Fair Trial. — The test is whether the conflict in defendants' respective positions at trial is of such a nature that, considering all of the other evidence in the case, defendants were denied a fair trial. State v. Boykin, 307 N.C. 87, 296 S.E.2d 258 (1982); State v. Wilhite, 58 N.C. App. 654, 294 S.E.2d 396 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 798, 303 S.E.2d 788 (1983).

Each case turns on its own facts, and an abuse of discretion may be shown when the defenses of the codefendants are antagonistic, and the conflict in the defendants' respective positions at trial is of such a nature that, considering all of the other evidence in the case, a defendant would be denied a fair trial. State v. Simmons, 65 N.C. App. 294, 309 S.E.2d 493 (1983).

Defendants Charged with Same Crime. — Trial court did not err in granting the State's motion to join defendant's case with that of a codefendant for trial, where both defendants were charged with accountability for the same armed robbery; moreover, there was no merit to defendant's contention that, had the parties been tried separately, a witness's testimony that he saw a man not fitting defendant's description leave the getaway vehicle and run into the woods would not have been admissible against him, since the witness's testimony would have been admissible against defendant in any event as the witness's personal observation of one of the events taking place during the incident, and the testimony would be more favorable to defendant than prejudicial. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

No error found in the denial of defendant's motion to sever his trial for sexual offenses and kidnapping from that of his codefendant. State v. Pendergrass, 111 N.C. App. 310, 432 S.E.2d 403 (1993).

Severance should be granted to avoid an evidentiary contest between defendants where the State simply stands by and witnesses a combat in which defendants attempt to destroy each other. State v. Green, 321 N.C. 594, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

In determining whether trials should be severed, mere inconsistencies in defenses do not necessarily amount to the kind of antagonism between defendants joined for trial that deprives one or the other of a fair trial. Rather, the defenses must be so irreconcilable that the jury will unjustifiably infer that this conflict alone demonstrates that both are guilty or so discrepant as to pose an evidentiary contest more between defendants themselves than between the State and the defendants resulting in a spectacle where the State simply stands by and witnesses a combat in which the defendants attempt to destroy each other. State v. Cunningham, 108 N.C. App. 185, 423 S.E.2d 802 (1992).

Admission of Codefendant's Out-of-Court Statements. — In a prosecution for armed robbery there was no merit to defendant's contention that the trial court erred in joining his case for trial with that of a codefendant and that he was unfairly prejudiced by admission of codefendant's statements at their joint trial, where codefendant's extrajudicial statements were admissible against defendant under the spontaneous utterance exception to the hearsay rule, and defendant failed to show an abuse of the trial court's discretion in joining the charges against the two defendants. State v. Porter, 303 N.C. 680, 281 S.E.2d 377 (1980).

Trial court's denial of defendant's motion for separate trial so prejudiced his defense as to amount to a denial of due process and his right to confrontation where defendant was precluded under the circumstances of the joint trial from introducing evidence of codefendant's out-of-court statement, which would have strengthened defendant's alibi defense. State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

In joint trials of defendants it is necessary to exclude extrajudicial confessions unless all portions which implicate defendants other than the declarant can be deleted without prejudice either to the State or the declarant. If such deletion is not possible, the State must choose between relinquishing the confession or trying the defendants separately. State v. Barnett, 307 N.C. 608, 300 S.E.2d 340 (1983).

Where the testimony of the wife of defendant's codefendant concerning her husband's extrajudicial statements inculpating the defendant added nothing of significance to the defendant's own testimony, which constituted overwhelming untainted evidence of his guilt, error by the trial court in overruling defendant's objections to such testimony or in denying his motion to sever was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Welch, 316 N.C. 578, 342 S.E.2d 789 (1986).

Where a declarant can be cross-examined, a codefendant implicated by extrajudicial statements made by the declarant is fully accorded his right to confrontation. State v. Rasor, 319 N.C. 577, 356 S.E.2d 328 (1987).

The admission of co-defendant's confession into evidence did not violate defendant's rights under the Confrontation Clause because the confession was fully redacted and did not identify, much less incriminate, defendant. State v. Brewington, 352 N.C. 489, 532 S.E.2d 496 (2000), cert denied, 531 U.S. 1165, 121 S. Ct. 1126, 148 L. Ed. 2d 992 (2001).

Disruptive Behavior of Codefendant. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendants' motions for severance or for a mistrial on the ground that they did not receive a fair and impartial trial due to the in-court outbursts of a codefendant, where, when possible, the trial judge immediately removed the members of the jury from the courtroom when an outburst occurred, and he admonished them not to deliberate on it, when it became apparent that the codefendant would continue to disrupt the proceedings despite the court's warnings, he was removed from the courtroom and at this time the court told the jury to totally disregard the whole matter, and they unanimously indicated that they could do so, and where in his final charge to the jury, the judge again instructed the jury not to allow the codefendant's behavior to influence its decision. State v. McGuire, 297 N.C. 69, 254 S.E.2d 165, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 943, 100 S. Ct. 300, 62 L. Ed. 2d 310 (1979).

Consolidation Held Not to Prejudice Right to Testify Only as to Certain Charges. — In a prosecution for rape, aggravated kidnapping and crime against nature, defendant's argument that he was prejudiced by consolidation of the cases because, had they not been consolidated, he could have elected to testify in one case if he so desired without being forced to testify in the others was without merit, since the offenses joined for trial were based on a series of acts or transactions connected together and constituted a continuing criminal episode; evidence of one offense would certainly be admissible in trials on the other offenses; defendant failed to show the manner in which his right against self-incrimination was violated; and defendant failed to move for severance at the close of all the evidence. State v. Creech, 37 N.C. App. 261, 245 S.E.2d 817, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 554, 248 S.E.2d 731 (1978).

Defendant Waived Right to Severance. — Because defendant made his motion to sever at the first day of trial, he was required to renew his motion at the close of all of the evidence; therefore, where defendant failed to renew his motion at the close of all the evidence as required by this section, he waived his right to sever. State v. Agubata, 92 N.C. App. 651, 375 S.E.2d 702 (1989).

The record and transcript indicated that the defendant failed to renew his motion to sever offenses at any time after his pretrial motion for same was denied. By statute, therefore, he waived any right to severance of offenses. State v. Spivey, 102 N.C. App. 640, 404 S.E.2d 23 (1991).

Effect of Signing "Notice of Waiver of Right". — The defendant waived appellate review of severance based on a Bruton violation by signing the "Notice of Waiver of Right" and stating in open court that there was "no objection." State v. Golphin, 352 N.C. 364, 533 S.E.2d 168 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1379, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1380, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001).

No Motion to Sever. — Defendant made no motion to sever and waived the right to allege on appeal that the trial court erred in joining the offenses for trial. State v. Mitchell, 104 N.C. App. 514, 410 S.E.2d 211 (1991), cert. granted, 331 N.C. 120, 414 S.E.2d 764 (1992), discretionary review improvidently granted, 336 N.C. 22, 442 S.E.2d 24 (1994).

Severance Properly Denied. — Where intent to kill was not an element of defendant's felony murder conviction, he could not have been prejudiced by any evidence related to his intent; thus, the introduction of evidence about killing a cat could not have denied defendant a fair trial, and the trial court properly denied motion for a severance and a mistrial. State v. Cagle, 346 N.C. 497, 488 S.E.2d 535 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1032, 118 S. Ct. 635, 139 L. Ed. 2d 614 (1998).

Where the state presented plenary evidence of defendant's guilt on the crime of accessory after the fact and any reference to defendant by expert/clinical psychologist, who stated that her brother was concerned for her mental health, only marginally affected defendant's own case, there was no error in the trial court's denial of defendant's motion to sever. State v. Merrill, 138 N.C. App. 215, 530 S.E.2d 608 (2000).

The joinder of defendant's drug offenses was upheld where the charges against defendant occurred within a six month period and indicated the same pattern of operation between defendant and the informant during this time. Defendant always retrieved the cocaine from the woods, on or near his property, would often plan the exchange with the informant ahead of time, always took cash in payment from him, and almost always delivered the cocaine to him in clear plastic bags; in other words, defendant had a common, continual method of transacting drug sales. State v. Manning, 139 N.C. App. 454, 534 S.E.2d 219 (2000), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 353 N.C. 273, 546 S.E.2d 385 (2000), aff'd, 353 N.C. 449, 545 S.E.2d 211 (2001).

Motion made after verdict comes too late to avoid the waiver provision of subdivision (a)(2) of this section. State v. Brown, 300 N.C. 41, 265 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

Joinder Upheld. — Defendant failed to show that the trial court abused its discretion in permitting joinder of murder charges against himself and his girlfriend or that he was deprived of a fair trial. State v. Green, 321 N.C. 587, 365 S.E.2d 587, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 247, 102 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1988).

In prosecution for conspiracy to commit burglary, second-degree burglary, robbery with a dangerous weapon, and first-degree murder, the defendant failed to show that the trial court abused its discretion in permitting joinder or that he was deprived of a fair trial, where the defendant's argument was based entirely on a statement made by the co-defendant during his sentencing hearing, and there was no way for the Supreme Court to determine whether the co-defendant would have testified in the same way or would have testified at all if the defendants had been given separate trials, nor could it know whether any possible testimony by the co-defendant would have had any effect on the outcome of the defendant's trial. State v. Short, 322 N.C. 783, 370 S.E.2d 351 (1988).

Defendant failed to show any prejudice or an abuse of discretion by the judge's failure to sever cases against him for first degree sexual offenses for trial, where, although defendant argued consolidation made the case difficult to defend and tended to make the jury believe he was guilty of all offenses simply because there were so many, the fact remained that if the cases were tried separately the State could still have presented evidence of other similar sex crimes as evidence of a common scheme or plan. State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

Where testimony regarding defendant's statement to police, the only evidence which could be deemed prejudicial to defendant, was properly elicited by the State at defendant's consolidated trial, and could have been properly elicited by the State if defendant had been tried alone, and the evidence against codefendant was weak and resulted in her acquittal, defendant could not contend that his association with codefendant prejudiced the jury against him. State v. Cunningham, 108 N.C. App. 185, 423 S.E.2d 802 (1992).

Substantial evidence of the defendant's guilt overrode any possible harm to the defendant resulting from a joint trial, where each victim testified that he or she was stabbed by the defendant with a knife, each victim was able to identify the defendant, one victim testified that she watched as the defendant repeatedly stabbed her husband, and an accomplice testified that the defendant stated his intent to kill the victims before his acts. State v. Roope, 130 N.C. App. 356, 503 S.E.2d 118 (1998), cert., 349 N.C. 374, 525 S.E.2d 189 (1998).

The trial court properly joined the defendant's case for trial with co-defendant's case where his out-of-court statement, redacted pursuant to this section, was adequate, the redaction did not prejudice the defendant, and the trial court's failure to instruct the jury that it could use the co-defendant's statement against him only was harmless error. State v. McKeithan, 140 N.C. App. 422, 537 S.E.2d 526 (2000).

Joinder Held Error. — Where defendants were being jointly tried for the same capital offense when one defendant changed his plea to guilty, it was error for the trial to continue as both a sentencing proceeding as to one defendant and as a trial to determine the guilt or innocence of the other. State v. Hucks, 323 N.C. 574, 374 S.E.2d 240 (1988).

The consolidation of defendants' charges for trial did not result in any unfair prejudice to defendant, where neither defendant put on a defense, and where there was nothing in the record to suggest that this course of action was forced on either defendant as a result of the other defendant's position or strategy. State v. Lundy, 135 N.C. App. 13, 519 S.E.2d 73 (1999).

Given the conflict in defendants' respective positions at trial and the other evidence in the case, including the paucity of evidence on acting in concert, defendants were denied a fair trial by being tried together. State v. Pickens, 335 N.C. 717, 440 S.E.2d 552 (1994).

§ 15A-928. Allegation and proof of previous convictions in superior court.

(a) When the fact that the defendant has been previously convicted of an offense raises an offense of lower grade to one of higher grade and thereby becomes an element of the latter, an indictment or information for the higher offense may not allege the previous conviction. If a reference to a previous conviction is contained in the statutory name or title of the offense, the name or title may not be used in the indictment or information, but an improvised name or title must be used which labels and distinguishes the offense without reference to a previous conviction.

(b) An indictment or information for the offense must be accompanied by a special indictment or information, filed with the principal pleading, charging that the defendant was previously convicted of a specified offense. At the prosecutor's option, the special indictment or information may be incorporated in the principal indictment as a separate count. Except as provided in subsection (c) below, the State may not refer to the special indictment or information during the trial nor adduce any evidence concerning the previous conviction alleged therein.

(c) After commencement of the trial and before the close of the State's case, the judge in the absence of the jury must arraign the defendant upon the special indictment or information, and must advise him that he may admit the previous conviction alleged, deny it, or remain silent. Depending upon the defendant's response, the trial of the case must then proceed as follows:

(1) If the defendant admits the previous conviction, that element of the offense charged in the indictment or information is established, no evidence in support thereof may be adduced by the State, and the judge must submit the case to the jury without reference thereto and as if the fact of such previous conviction were not an element of the offense. The court may not submit to the jury any lesser included offense which is distinguished from the offense charged solely by the fact that a previous conviction is not an element thereof.

(2) If the defendant denies the previous conviction or remains silent, the State may prove that element of the offense charged before the jury as a part of its case. This section applies only to proof of a prior conviction when it is an element of the crime charged, and does not prohibit the State from introducing proof of prior convictions when otherwise permitted under the rules of evidence.

(d) When a misdemeanor is tried de novo in superior court in which the fact of a previous conviction is an element of the offense affecting punishment, the State must replace the pleading in the case with superseding statements of charges separately alleging the substantive offense and the fact of any prior conviction, in accordance with the provisions of this section relating to indictments and informations. Any jury trial in superior court on the misdemeanor must be held in accordance with the provisions of subsections (b) and (c).

(e) Nothing contained in this section precludes the State from proving a prior conviction before a grand jury or relieves the State from the obligation or necessity of so doing in order to submit a legally sufficient case. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

When a defendant is tried for an offense carrying a higher statutory maximum punishment upon proof of prior convictions, there is no constitutional requirement that the defendant be afforded a two-step trial to keep the jury deciding guilt from learning of the prior convictions. Spencer v. Texas, 385 U.S. 554, 87 S. Ct. 648, 17 L. Ed. 2d 606 (1967). Nevertheless, a two-step procedure is favored by many legal commentators, and North Carolina in 1967 adopted such a procedure as part of its habitual felon law in Article 2A of Chapter 14 of the General Statutes, Habitual Felons.

The Commission recommended a provision that contains some features of a two-step procedure. It is modeled after a section in the New York Criminal Procedure Law. If the defendant admits his guilt of the punishment-enhancing prior convictions upon a separate arraignment out of the presence of the jury, the fact of the prior convictions is settled and need not be submitted to the jury as an element of the crime. If the defendant does not admit the prior convictions, the State must prove them beyond a reasonable doubt before the jury.

The New York statute, C.P.L. § 200.60, applied only to indictments and informations, and the Commission's draft was also so limited. The General Assembly, however, added subsection (d) to make the procedure also apply to misdemeanors appealed for trial de novo in superior court.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Stipulation of Previous Convictions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The purpose of this section is to insure that defendants are informed of the prior convictions they are charged with and are given a fair opportunity to either admit or deny them before the State's evidence is concluded; because, as the statute makes plain, if the convictions are denied, the State can then present proof of that element of the offense to the jury, but cannot do so if the prior convictions are admitted. State v. Ford, 71 N.C. App. 452, 322 S.E.2d 431 (1984).

The purpose of this section is to insure that the defendant is informed of the previous convictions the State intends to use and is given a fair opportunity to either admit or deny them or remain silent. State v. Jernigan, 118 N.C. App. 240, 455 S.E.2d 163 (1995).

Applicability. — This statute applies solely to cases in which the fact that the accused had a prior conviction raises an offense of lower grade to one of higher grade. State v. Jeffers, 48 N.C. App. 663, 269 S.E.2d 731 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 724, 276 S.E.2d 285 (1981).

Section must be strictly followed in order to apprise defendant of the offense for which he is charged and to enable him to prepare an effective defense. Thus, the special indictment charging defendant with the previous conviction(s) of a specified offense must be filed with the principal pleading. Furthermore, the defendant must be arraigned upon the special indictment after commencement of the trial but before the close of the State's case. State v. Jackson, 306 N.C. 642, 295 S.E.2d 383 (1982).

If there is no doubt that defendant was fully aware of the charges against him and was in no way prejudiced by the omission of the arraignment required by subsection (c) of this section, the trial court's failure to arraign defendant is not reversible error. State v. Jernigan, 118 N.C. App. 240, 455 S.E.2d 163 (1995).

Subsection (c) does not violate the right to jury trial embodied in N.C. Const., Art. I, § 24. See State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 438, 230 S.E.2d 644 (1976).

Effect of subsection (c) is not to deprive the defendant of a jury trial. It merely allows defendant, by judicially admitting his prior convictions, to preclude the State from adducing evidence of them and to require the judge to submit the case to the jury without reference to them and as if previous convictions were not an element of the offense. State v.

Smith, 291 N.C. 438, 230 S.E.2d 644 (1976).

Relevance of Evidence of Previous Conviction. — When evidence of the previous conviction is introduced it is relevant only to the issue whether defendant has previously been convicted of an offense identical to the substantive offense charged, and the judge must charge the jury that they shall not consider such a prior conviction in passing upon his guilt or innocence of the primary charge. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 438, 230 S.E.2d 644 (1976).

Standard of Proof. — Where the defendant denies the previous conviction the State must prove this element of the offense charged beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 438, 230 S.E.2d 644 (1976).

Introduction of Previous Conviction for Purposes of Impeachment. — See State v. Guinn, 32 N.C. App. 595, 233 S.E.2d 73 (1977).

Prior Offense Was Required Before Higher Penalty Could Be Imposed. — Where the indictment did not charge defendant with a conviction for a prior offense and the State did not prove a prior conviction, the case was remanded for a new sentence hearing since both are required before the higher penalty can be imposed. State v. Williams, 93 N.C. App. 510, 378 S.E.2d 216 (1989).

Impaired Driving and Habitual Impaired Driving. — An indictment which alleges in one count the elements of impaired driving and alleges in a second count previous convictions which would elevate the impaired driving offense to habitual impaired driving is a valid indictment under this section and § 15A-924. State v. Lobohe, 143 N.C. App. 555, 547 S.E.2d 107 (2001).

Special Indictment. — When the State attempted to elevate a misdemeanor charge of breaking into a coin-operated machine to felony status, a special indictment charging defendant as being an habitual felon, based in part on an alleged prior conviction for feloniously breaking into a coin-operated machine, could not serve as a substitute for the special indictment required under this section. State v. Sullivan, 111 N.C. App. 441, 432 S.E.2d 376 (1993).

Applied in State v. Wells, 59 N.C. App. 682, 298 S.E.2d 73 (1982).

Quoted in State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978); State v. Denning, 316 N.C. 523, 342 S.E.2d 855 (1986).

Stated in State v. Moore, 27 N.C. App. 245, 218 S.E.2d 496 (1975).

Cited in State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

II. STIPULATION OF PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS.

Defendant may stipulate the previous convictions charged against him under subsection (c) of this section. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 438, 230 S.E.2d 644 (1976).

Nothing in the State or federal Constitutions nor in the case law prevents the defendant himself from making a judicial admission or stipulating to an undisputed fact, albeit the fact is essential to the State's case. State v. Ford, 71 N.C. App. 452, 322 S.E.2d 431 (1984).

Effect of Failure to Arraign Where Defendant Stipulates to Charges. — Fact that the trial court did not formally arraign defendant upon charge alleging previous convictions of habitual impaired driving and did not advise defendant that he could admit the previous convictions, deny them, or remain silent, as required by subsection (c) of this section, was not reversible error where defendant stipulated to his previous convictions. State v. Jernigan, 118 N.C. App. 240, 455 S.E.2d 163 (1995).

Introduction by State of Defendant's Stipulation. — In a prosecution for possession of a firearm by a felon, the trial court did not err in allowing the State to introduce defendant's stipulation as to his previous conviction of breaking and entering a motor vehicle, since the State merely introduced defendant's stipulation into evidence so there would be no doubt as to that particular element of the offense being satisfied; the State offered no other evidence in regard to defendant's prior conviction; and the court properly instructed the jury in its charge to consider the conviction only for the purpose of establishing an essential element of the offense and not as evidence of guilt or predisposition. State v. Jeffers, 48 N.C. App. 663, 269 S.E.2d 731 (1980), appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 724, 276 S.E.2d 285 (1981).

Cross-examination for Impeachment Purposes Following Stipulation. — In a prosecution for driving under the influence, third offense, it was not error for the trial court to allow the State to cross-examine the defendant concerning prior convictions of driving under the influence of intoxicants though he had stipulated for the purpose of trial that he had been so previously convicted, where the evidence sought by the cross-examination of the defendant was for impeachment purposes and not as substantive evidence of an element of the offense charged. State v. Crouch, 42 N.C. App. 729, 257 S.E.2d 646 (1979).

Instruction on Prior Convictions Following Stipulation. — In a prosecution of a defendant for driving under the influence, second offense, and driving while his license was revoked, fourth offense, where the defendant stipulated to previous convictions of those crimes, the trial court did not err in instructing jury with respect to defendant's prior convictions, since the harm was in the fact that evidence of these prior convictions was before the jury and not in the instructions concerning them, and it was not error to cross-examine the defendant on these prior convictions for impeachment purposes. State v. McLawhorn, 43 N.C. App. 695, 260 S.E.2d 138 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 123, 261 S.E.2d 925 (1980).

Relief Precluded. — Where no fatal variance was shown between the indictment for felonious habitual impaired driving and proof at trial, since defendant's counsel stipulated to previous convictions as set out in the indictment, defendant failed to show that he was entitled to any relief with regard to the indictment. State v. Baldwin, 117 N.C. App. 713, 453 S.E.2d 193 (1995).

Article 50.

Voluntary Dismissal.

§ 15A-931. Voluntary dismissal of criminal charges by the State.

(a) Except as provided in G.S. 20-138.4, the prosecutor may dismiss any charges stated in a criminal pleading including those deferred for prosecution by entering an oral dismissal in open court before or during the trial, or by filing a written dismissal with the clerk at any time. The clerk must record the dismissal entered by the prosecutor and note in the case file whether a jury has been impaneled or evidence has been introduced.

(a1) Unless the defendant or the defendant's attorney has been notified otherwise by the prosecutor, a written dismissal of the charges against the defendant filed by the prosecutor shall be served in the same manner prescribed for motions under G.S. 15A-951. In addition, the written dismissal shall also be served on the chief officer of the custodial facility when the record reflects that the defendant is in custody.

(b) No statute of limitations is tolled by charges which have been dismissed pursuant to this section. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1983, c. 435, s. 5; 1991, c. 109, s. 1; 1997-228, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The case of Klopfer v. North Carolina, 386 U.S. 213, 87 S. Ct. 988, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1967), held that our system of "nol pros" was unconstitutional when it left charges pending against a defendant and he was denied a speedy trial. Thus the Commission here provides for a simple and final dismissal by the solicitor. No approval by the court is required, on the basis that it is the responsibility of the solicitor, as an elected official, to determine how to proceed with regard to pending charges. This section does not itself bar the bringing of new charges. That would be prevented if there were a statute of limitations which had run, or if jeopardy had attached when the first charges were dismissed.

CASE NOTES

Judicial Authority Is Not Infringed. — Because the ultimate authority over managing the trial calendar is retained in the court, it cannot be said that this statute infringes upon the court's inherent authority or vests the district attorney with judicial powers in violation of the separation of powers clause. Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 451 S.E.2d 858 (1994).

Entry of Voluntary Dismissal Does Not Violate Right to Speedy Trial. — Under the present system of voluntary dismissals no indictment is left pending. If dismissed charges are later reinstated, defendant at this point would have standing to move for speedy trial relief. State v. Herald, 65 N.C. App. 692, 309 S.E.2d 546 (1983), appeal dismissed, 310 N.C. 479, 312 S.E.2d 887 (1984).

When Double Jeopardy Attaches in Bench Trial. — In a bench trial, double jeopardy does not attach until the introduction of evidence. State v. Brunson, 96 N.C. App. 347, 385 S.E.2d 542 (1989), aff'd, 327 N.C. 244, 393 S.E.2d 860 (1990).

In a bench trial in district court where dismissal was taken to avert the necessity of introducing evidence rather than after its introduction, double jeopardy had not attached; jeopardy will attach only after introduction of evidence. State v. Brunson, 96 N.C. App. 347, 385 S.E.2d 542 (1989).

Subsequent Prosecution Following Voluntary Dismissal by State. — A voluntary dismissal taken by the State pursuant to this section does not preclude the State from instituting a subsequent prosecution for the same offense if jeopardy has not attached. State v. Muncy, 79 N.C. App. 356, 339 S.E.2d 466, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 736, 345 S.E.2d 396 (1986).

The provisions of this section which allow a prosecutor to take a voluntary dismissal "at any time" do not bar the initiation of subsequent charges, if jeopardy has not attached and if an applicable statute of limitations has not run. State v. Lamb, 84 N.C. App. 569, 353 S.E.2d 857, aff'd, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

The fact that investigation continues after dismissal under this section renders that dismissal no less final, because the prosecutor may not resume criminal proceedings against a suspect unless and until a new indictment is obtained. State v. Lamb, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

New Indictment on Same Charges Not Barred. — Dismissal under this section is a simple and final dismissal which terminates the criminal proceedings under that indictment. This section, however, does not bar the bringing of the same charges upon a new indictment. State v. Lamb, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

Reindictment After Dismissal of Indictment "With Leave". — Where no criminal proceedings took place during the period from Aug. 14, 1984, when indictment against defendant was dismissed under this section "with leave" until new indictment on July 22, 1985, and defendant was not subject to prosecutorial control, the dismissal was proper and terminated all proceedings against the defendant, even though defendant's bail bond was not discharged. Thus, the reindictment and trial of defendant did not violate the former Speedy Trial Act. State v. Lamb, 84 N.C. App. 569, 353 S.E.2d 857, aff'd, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

Provision of former § 15A-701(b)(5) specifically excluding from computation of the 120-day time period "any period of delay from the date the initial charge was dismissed to the date the time limits for trials under this section would have commenced to run as to the subsequent charge" was applicable to defendant whose indictment was dismissed under this section, even though the notice of dismissal stated that the prosecutor entered a dismissal "with leave," and even though defendant remained on secured bail bond and the authorities continued to investigate the case, in view of the fact that since defendant appeared, the dismissal "with leave" language was mere surplusage, which added nothing to the notice of dismissal and took nothing away, and since although defendant's bail bond should have been discharged, as she was not required to appear or render herself amenable to the orders and processes of the court during that period, she was not prejudiced. State v. Lamb, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

"With Leave" Language in Notices of Dismissal Disapproved. — Although criminal investigations can always continue following a voluntary dismissal under this section, the insertion of "with leave" language in notices of dismissal under this section is disapproved, as no defendant whose indictment has been dismissed under this section should be made to feel that he or she is subject to prosecutorial control. State v. Lamb, 84 N.C. App. 569, 353 S.E.2d 857, aff'd, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

Voluntary Dismissal at Probable Cause Hearing. — Voluntary dismissal taken by the State at a probable cause hearing does not preclude the State from instituting a subsequent prosecution for the same offense. State v. Coffer, 54 N.C. App. 78, 282 S.E.2d 492 (1981).

Trial court's determination that the evidence failed to show that prosecutor had in fact taken a voluntary dismissal of defendant's case at a Nov. 19, 1986, calendar call, although the evidence was somewhat ambiguous, would not be disturbed, where it could not be said that the evidence failed to support the trial court's decision. State v. Miller, 321 N.C. 445, 364 S.E.2d 387 (1988).

Applied in State v. Lee, 51 N.C. App. 344, 276 S.E.2d 501 (1981); State v. Simpson, 60 N.C. App. 436, 299 S.E.2d 257 (1983).

§ 15A-932. Dismissal with leave when defendant fails to appear and cannot be readily found or pursuant to a deferred prosecution agreement.

(a) The prosecutor may enter a dismissal with leave for nonappearance when a defendant:

(1) Cannot be readily found to be served with an order for arrest after the grand jury had indicted him; or

(2) Fails to appear at a criminal proceeding at which his attendance is required, and the prosecutor believes the defendant cannot be readily found.

(a1) The prosecutor may enter a dismissal with leave pursuant to a deferred prosecution agreement entered into in accordance with the provisions of Article 82 of this Chapter.

(b) Dismissal with leave for nonappearance or pursuant to a deferred prosecution agreement results in removal of the case from the docket of the court, but all process outstanding retains its validity, and all necessary actions to apprehend the defendant, investigate the case, or otherwise further its prosecution may be taken, including the issuance of nontestimonial identification orders, search warrants, new process, initiation of extradition proceedings, and the like.

(c) The prosecutor may enter the dismissal with leave for nonappearance or pursuant to a deferred prosecution agreement orally in open court or by filing the dismissal in writing with the clerk. If the dismissal for nonappearance or pursuant to a deferred prosecution agreement is entered orally, the clerk must note the nature of the dismissal in the case records.

(d) Upon apprehension of the defendant, or in the discretion of the prosecutor when he believes apprehension is imminent, the prosecutor may reinstitute the proceedings by filing written notice with the clerk.

(e) If the defendant fails to comply with the terms of a deferred prosecution agreement, the prosecutor may reinstitute the proceedings by filing written notice with the clerk. (1977, c. 777, s. 1; 1985, c. 250; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 2, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Resumption of Speedy Trial Limitation. — Once the prosecutor entered a dismissal with leave for nonappearance of the defendant pursuant to this section, former § 15A-701(b)(11) controlled and the speedy trial clock did not resume running against the State until the proceedings were reinstituted against the defendant. State v. Reekes, 59 N.C. App. 672, 297 S.E.2d 763, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 472, 298 S.E.2d 693 (1982).

Reinstitution of Proceedings Without New Indictment. — This section provides for a dismissal "with leave" when the defendant fails to appear and cannot be readily found. Under subsection (b), this dismissal results in removal of the case from the court's docket, but the criminal proceeding under the indictment is not terminated. All outstanding process retains its validity, and the prosecutor may reinstitute the proceedings by filing written notice with the clerk, without the necessity of a new indictment. State v. Lamb, 321 N.C. 633, 365 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

Noncompliance with Section Does Not Result in "Failure of Pleading To State an Offense." — Subsection (d), which provides for reinstatement of an indictment after a dismissal with leave is taken, is not "jurisdictional" in nature, nor does failure to strictly comply with its requirements result in the "failure of the pleading to charge an offense" within the meaning of § 15A-952(d). Instead, the dismissal with leave contemplated in this subsection is a procedural calendaring device. State v. Patterson, 332 N.C. 409, 420 S.E.2d 98 (1992).

Applied in State v. Morehead, 62 N.C. App. 226, 302 S.E.2d 834 (1983).

Article 51.

Arraignment.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

It is the purpose of this Article not only to define arraignment in any court but also to provide for a separate time of arraignment in superior court. Time for jurors and witnesses will be saved if matters not requiring their presence can be disposed of before they are brought in. The Commission feels that it is important to our system of justice that unnecessary impositions on the time of citizens be avoided. Thus, in the more populous counties here defined as those having as much as 20 weeks of criminal court (and others which the Chief Justice may designate), a separate time for arraignment will be required. In other counties it is authorized on an optional basis.

The Commission is under no illusion that this will cure problems of delay, or that it will end the practice of waiting until a jury is ready before entering a guilty plea, but it does set a pattern within which improvement is possible.

§ 15A-941. Arraignment before judge only upon written request; use of two-way audio and video transmission; entry of not guilty plea if not arraigned.

(a) Arraignment consists of bringing a defendant in open court or as provided in subsection (b) of this section before a judge having jurisdiction to try the offense, advising him of the charges pending against him, and directing him to plead. The prosecutor must read the charges or fairly summarize them to the defendant. If the defendant fails to plead, the court must record that fact, and the defendant must be tried as if he had pleaded not guilty.

(b) An arraignment in a noncapital case may be conducted by an audio and video transmission between the judge and the defendant in which the parties can see and hear each other. If the defendant has counsel, the defendant shall be allowed to communicate fully and confidentially with his attorney during the proceeding.

(c) Prior to the use of audio and video transmission pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, the procedures and type of equipment for audio and video transmission shall be submitted to the Administrative Office of the Courts by the senior regular resident superior court judge for the judicial district or set of districts and approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(d) A defendant will be arraigned in accordance with this section only if the defendant files a written request with the clerk of superior court for an arraignment not later than 21 days after service of the bill of indictment. If a bill of indictment is not required to be served pursuant to G.S. 15A-630, then the written request for arraignment must be filed not later than 21 days from the date of the return of the indictment as a true bill. Upon the return of the indictment as a true bill, the court must immediately cause notice of the 21-day time limit within which the defendant may request an arraignment to be mailed or otherwise given to the defendant and to the defendant's counsel of record, if any. If the defendant does not file a written request for arraignment, then the court shall enter a not guilty plea on behalf of the defendant.

(e) Nothing in this section shall prevent the district attorney from calendaring cases for administrative purposes. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; 1993, c. 30, s. 3; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 725, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of an arraignment is to allow a defendant to enter a plea and have the charges read or summarized to him, and the failure to do so is not prejudicial error unless defendant objects and states that he is not properly informed of the charges. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Should the defendant fail to plead after the prosecutor has read the charges or otherwise fairly summarized them, the court must record the fact, and defendant must be tried as if he had entered a plea of not guilty. State v. Riddle, 66 N.C. App. 60, 310 S.E.2d 396, aff'd, State v. Riddle, 311 N.C. 734, 319 S.E.2d 250 (1984).

Reading or Summarizing Charges Before Jury Is Constitutional. — The fact that under this section the district attorney reads the charges or fairly summarizes them to the defendant before the jury is not a violation of defendant's right to due process and equal protection as required by the Constitutions of the State of North Carolina and the United States. State v. Carter, 30 N.C. App. 59, 226 S.E.2d 179, appeal dismissed, 290 N.C. 664, 228 S.E.2d 455 (1976).

Failure to Conduct Formal Arraignment. — Where there is no doubt that a defendant is fully aware of the charge against him, or is in no way prejudiced by the omission of a formal arraignment, it is not reversible error for the trial court to fail to conduct a formal arraignment proceeding. State v. Smith, 300 N.C. 71, 265 S.E.2d 164 (1980); State v. Riddle, 66 N.C. App. 60, 310 S.E.2d 396, aff'd, State v. Riddle, 311 N.C. 734, 319 S.E.2d 250 (1984).

Failure of the record to show a formal arraignment does not entitle defendant to a new trial where the record indicates that defendant was tried as if he had been arraigned and had entered a plea of not guilty. State v. Benfield, 55 N.C. App. 380, 285 S.E.2d 299 (1982); State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

The failure to conduct a formal arraignment itself is not reversible error. State v. Brown, 306 N.C. 151, 293 S.E.2d 569, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1080, 103 S. Ct. 503, 74 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1982).

Failure to conduct an arraignment on a capital charge does not constitute reversible error per se. State v. Brown, 315 N.C. 40, 337 S.E.2d 808 (1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1165, 106 S. Ct. 2293, 90 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1986).

The trial court did not commit reversible error by trying defendant on a capital charge without first conducting a formal arraignment, where in view of the fact that the record was replete with pretrial motions, letters, and orders which were prefaced by listing the charges against defendant, and in view of the fact that defendant was tried as if he had pled "not guilty," defendant was not prejudiced by the lack of a formal arraignment. State v. Brown, 315 N.C. 40, 337 S.E.2d 808 (1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1165, 106 S. Ct. 2293, 90 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1986).

Defendant's Duty to Object If Not Informed of Charges. — Where the record showed that an arraignment took place and defendant, duly represented by counsel, entered a plea of not guilty, defendant was not prejudiced by failure of the record to show that the charges were read or summarized to defendant as required by this section, since it was the duty of defendant to object and to have appropriate entries made in the record to show the basis for the objection if he was not properly informed of the charges. State v. Small, 301 N.C. 407, 272 S.E.2d 128 (1980).

An objection to the arraignment made just before trial begins some months later does not suffice to preserve defendant's complaint about what might have occurred when the arraignment actually took place. State v. King, 311 N.C. 603, 320 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

If a defendant feels that he has not been properly informed of the charges against him at arraignment, it is his duty to object at that time and to have appropriate entries made in the record to show the basis for the objection. State v. King, 311 N.C. 603, 320 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Charges read to a defendant need not appear in the record. State v. Benfield, 55 N.C. App. 380, 285 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

Arraignment does not affect the time for discovery for a defendant represented by counsel. State v. Ginn, 59 N.C. App. 363, 296 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 271, 299 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

349 N.C. 118, 505 S.E.2d 277 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1075, 119 S. Ct. 1475, 143 L. Ed. 2d 559 (1999).

§ 15A-942. Right to counsel.

If the defendant appears at the arraignment without counsel, the court must inform the defendant of his right to counsel, must accord the defendant opportunity to exercise that right, and must take any action necessary to effectuate the right. If the defendant does not file a written request for arraignment, the court, in addition to entering a plea of not guilty on behalf of the defendant, shall also verify that the defendant is aware of the right to counsel, that the defendant has been given the opportunity to exercise that right, and must take any action necessary to effectuate that right on behalf of the defendant. (1777, c. 115, s. 85, P.R.; R.C., c. 35, s. 13; Code, s. 1182; Rev., s. 3150; C.S., s. 4515; 1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 725, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

Failure to Inquire into Defendant's Indigency. — Where a defendant executed a written waiver of assigned counsel before a district court judge, defendant thereafter filed an affidavit of indigency and request for appointed counsel, a superior court judge found that defendant was not an indigent, and defendant appeared at his arraignment and trial three weeks later without counsel, the trial court was required by this section to inquire at the arraignment into the question of defendant's indigency at that time, and defendant is entitled to a new trial by reason of the court's failure to make such inquiry. State v. Elliott, 49 N.C. App. 141, 270 S.E.2d 550 (1980).

Waiver of Right Is Good Until Termination of Proceeding. — A waiver in writing of the right to assigned counsel once given was good and sufficient until the proceeding finally terminated, unless the defendant himself makes known to the court that he desires to withdraw the waiver and have counsel assigned to him. The burden of showing the change in the desire of the defendant for counsel rests upon the defendant. State v. Elliott, 49 N.C. App. 141, 270 S.E.2d 550 (1980).

Failure to Inform Defendant Represented by Counsel of Right Thereto Not Prejudicial. — Although defendant argued that it did not appear that he was ever advised of his right to counsel pursuant to this section, where it was clear from the record that defendant was represented by counsel, he could not claim that he was prejudiced by not being informed of such right. State v. Styles, 93 N.C. App. 596, 379 S.E.2d 255 (1989).

§ 15A-943. Arraignment in superior court — Required calendaring.

(a) In counties in which there are regularly scheduled 20 or more weeks of trial sessions of superior court at which criminal cases are heard, and in other counties the Chief Justice designates, the prosecutor must calendar arraignments in the superior court on at least the first day of every other week in which criminal cases are heard. No cases in which the presence of a jury is required may be calendared for the day or portion of a day during which arraignments are calendared.

(b) When a defendant pleads not guilty at an arraignment required by subsection (a), he may not be tried without his consent in the week in which he is arraigned.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, in any county where as many as three simultaneous sessions of superior court, whether criminal, civil, or mixed, are regularly scheduled, the prosecutor may calendar arraignments in any of the criminal or mixed sessions, at least every other week, upon any day or days of a session, and jury cases may be calendared for trial in any other court at which criminal cases may be heard, upon such days. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27; c. 471.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Scheduling of Arraignment under Subsection (a).
III. Trial Date Where Defendant Pleads Not Guilty.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

No Arraignment May Take Place Except at Time Calendared. — In order to effect the intent of the legislature, this statute must be construed to require not only that the solicitor (now prosecutor) "calendar arraignments" as provided but also that every arraignment be calendared and that, absent any waiver, no arraignment may take place except at a time when it is so calendared. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Notice of Arraignment. — There was no reversible error, even if the State improperly published the calendar for a capital murder defendant's arraignment on the same day the arraignment was held, since the defendant had a full week's interval between the arraignment and the trial. State v. Locklear, 349 N.C. 118, 505 S.E.2d 277 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1075, 119 S. Ct. 1475, 143 L. Ed. 2d 559 (1999).

Failure to Conduct Formal Arraignment Proceeding Not Error. — Where there is no doubt that a defendant is fully aware of the charge against him, or is in no way prejudiced by the omission of a formal arraignment, it is not reversible error for the trial court to fail to conduct a formal arraignment proceeding. State v. Griffin, 136 N.C. App. 531, 525 S.E.2d 793 (2000).

Failure to Assert Right Not to Be Tried the Week of Defendant's Arraignment Was Not Ineffective Assistance of Counsel. — The defense attorney's failure to move for a continuance in the defendant's drug case and thereby assert the defendant's rights under this section did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel where the defendant did not indicate to the court in what manner he was unprepared for trial, how additional time would have aided in his preparation, or what options the attorney failed to explain to him. State v. Frazier, 142 N.C. App. 361, 542 S.E.2d 682 (2001).

Applied in State v. Revelle, 301 N.C. 153, 270 S.E.2d 476 (1980); State v. Sellars, 52 N.C. App. 380, 278 S.E.2d 907 (1981); State v. Richardson, 59 N.C. App. 558, 297 S.E.2d 921 (1982).

Quoted in State v. Carter, 30 N.C. App. 59, 226 S.E.2d 179 (1976); State v. Hickey, 317 N.C. 457, 346 S.E.2d 646 (1986).

Cited in State v. Shook, 38 N.C. App. 465, 248 S.E.2d 425 (1978); Ross Realty Co. v. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 296 N.C. 366, 250 S.E.2d 271 (1979); State v. Hunt, 297 N.C. 131, 254 S.E.2d 19 (1979); State v. Winstead, 78 N.C. App. 180, 336 S.E.2d 721 (1985); State v. Wilson, 108 N.C. App. 575, 424 S.E.2d 454 (1993).

II. SCHEDULING OF ARRAIGNMENT UNDER SUBSECTION (a).

Legislative intent in enacting the last sentence of subsection (a) of this section was to minimize the imposition to the time of jurors and witnesses, and not to ensure the impartiality of jurors. State v. Brown, 39 N.C. App. 548, 251 S.E.2d 706, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 302, 254 S.E.2d 923 (1979); State v. Elkerson, 304 N.C. 658, 285 S.E.2d 784 (1982).

The last sentence of subsection (a) of this section does not indicate a legislative intent that prospective jurors not be allowed to observe proceedings involving other defendants because they might somehow become prejudiced against a defendant who might later be tried before them. State v. Brown, 39 N.C. App. 548, 251 S.E.2d 706, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 302, 254 S.E.2d 923 (1979).

The financial interest of the State as well as the private interests of the individual jurors and witnesses are served by requiring arraignments to be calendared on days when jurors and witnesses are not called. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Violation of Subsection (a) Alone Not Reversible. — The thrust of subsection (a) of this section is the promotion of the efficient use of time by the courts; defendant has no direct interest in this underlying value, but, rather, his only interest is in his vested right to a week's interval between his arraignment and trial which is provided under subsection (b) of this section. Accordingly, a violation of subsection (a) of this section standing alone — that is, a failure to calendar a defendant's arraignment — does not constitute reversible error when defendant nevertheless is given a week's interval between his arraignment and trial. State v. Richardson, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

Beginning the defendant's trial the same day that he was formally arraigned was reversible error although he never explicitly cited this section in his motion for a continuance; his need for a continuance was based upon the same purposes for which the statute was enacted and the defense counsel did not have sufficient time during the brief recess between arraignment and trial to fully discuss the State's latest plea offer with the defendant. State v. Cates, 140 N.C. App. 548, 537 S.E.2d 508 (2000).

III. TRIAL DATE WHERE DEFENDANT PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

Purpose of Subsection (b). — Subsection (b) of this section is designed to ensure both the State and the defendant a sufficient interlude to prepare for trial. This is necessary because before arraignment neither the State nor defendant may know whether the case need proceed to trial. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

The week's interim provided in subsection (b) assures an opportunity for trial preparation and thereby helps to avoid preparation which may well be not only extensive but also unnecessary. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Subsection (b) vests a defendant with a right, for by its terms it requires his consent before a different procedure can be used. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Subsection (b) of this section vests defendant with a right to at least a week's interim between his arraignment and trial in order to prepare his case. State v. Richardson, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

Provisions of subsection (b) are more than directory. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Prejudice Presumed from Violation of Subsection (b). — To require a defendant to show prejudice when asserting the violation of his statutory right under subsection (b) of this section, which he has insisted upon at trial, would be manifestly contrary to the intent of the legislature, which has provided that the week's time between arraignment and trial must be accorded him unless he consents to an earlier trial. Prejudice under these circumstances must necessarily be presumed. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

And Violation Is Reversible Error. — The infringement of the defendant's right under subsection (b) of this section not to be tried without his consent during the week following his not guilty plea, where there was no waiver by defendant, was reversible error. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

Proceeding with defendant's trial over his objection on the same day as his arraignment on superseding indictment constitutes reversible error and necessitates a new trial. State v. McCabe, 80 N.C. App. 556, 342 S.E.2d 580 (1986).

But Defendant May Waive Right. — Defendant waived his statutory right not to be tried the week he was arraigned by failing to assert his right under this section in the trial court, since he did not move for a continuance under subsection (b) of this section and thereby consented to be tried in the same week as his arraignment. State v. Davis, 38 N.C. App. 672, 248 S.E.2d 883 (1978).

Where defendant failed to assert his right not to be tried in the week in which he was arraigned by seeking a continuance of his trial, he waived this statutory right. State v. Styles, 93 N.C. App. 596, 379 S.E.2d 255 (1989).

Subsection (b) Held Violated. — The trial court violated the provisions of subsection (b) of this section by proceeding with defendant's trial over his objection on the same day as his arraignment. State v. Shook, 293 N.C. 315, 237 S.E.2d 843 (1977).

§ 15A-944. Arraignment in superior court — Optional calendaring.

In counties other than those described in G.S. 15A-943 the prosecutor may, but is not required to, calendar arraignments in the manner described in that section. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in State v. Sellars, 52 N.C. App. 380, 278 S.E.2d 907 (1981).

§ 15A-945. Waiver of arraignment.

A defendant who is represented by counsel and who wishes to plead not guilty may waive arraignment prior to the day for which arraignment is calendared by filing a written plea, signed by the defendant and his counsel. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Waiver on Day of Trial. — Where defendant waives arraignment on the day of trial, there is no need to submit a written waiver and this section is inapplicable. State v. Benfield, 55 N.C. App. 380, 285 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

Effect of Failure to Sign Written Waiver. — Where defendant's counsel signed written waiver of arraignment and entered pleas of not guilty on his behalf, and defendant does not even suggest, much less affirmatively show, that the waiver and pleas were entered without his full knowledge or concurrence, defendant did not fulfill his burden of establishing that his right to a fair trial was impaired or prejudiced due to the mere fact that he did not also personally sign the written waiver of arraignment. State v. Andrews, 306 N.C. 144, 291 S.E.2d 581, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 946, 103 S. Ct. 263, 74 L. Ed. 2d 205 (1982).

Where there is no doubt that a defendant is fully aware of the charge against him, or is in no way prejudiced by the omission of formal arraignment, it is not reversible error for the trial court to fail to conduct a formal arraignment proceeding. State v. Riddle, 66 N.C. App. 60, 310 S.E.2d 396, aff'd, State v. Riddle, 311 N.C. 734, 319 S.E.2d 250 (1984).

Where defendant in no way was prejudiced by the lack of formal arraignment he cannot claim reversible error. State v. Riddle, 66 N.C. App. 60, 310 S.E.2d 396, aff'd, State v. Riddle, 311 N.C. 734, 319 S.E.2d 250 (1984).

Article 52.

Motions Practice.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Article attempts to bring together for the first time a number of provisions relating to motions practice in criminal cases. As the Commission's 1973 proposal only relates to pretrial procedure, it may be subject to later amendment and additions as the Commission works on trial and appeal procedure.

Even as to pretrial motions, of course, this Article does not purport to be exclusive. The next Article, for instance, is devoted to the motion to suppress, and there are a number of particular provisions scattered through this proposal dealing with particular types of motions that must or may be made.

The philosophy of this Article is to restate certain aspects of motions practice using simplified terminology, but not at present to repeal any of the common law even by implication unless it is incompatible with explicit provisions of the Commission's proposal. For example, the terminology "motion to dismiss" is used in several places instead of such common-law terminology "motion to quash," "plea in bar," or "plea in abatement." No doubt many persons will use the old terminology for some time, and they should not be penalized for it. On the other hand, positive provisions requiring that certain motions be made by five o'clock P.M. on the Wednesday preceding a session of court at which the case is scheduled would supersede a common-law rule that the motion was timely if made at arraignment.

At least for the time being the Commission finessed the problem of specifying the impact of the granting of a motion to dismiss. Obviously if dismissal comes after jeopardy has attached, the prosecution may not be renewed. Certain other grounds for dismissal by their nature would also finally dispose of the charge. The effect in other situations, though, has been left to case law.

§ 15A-951. Motions in general; definition, service, and filing.

(a) A motion must:

(1) Unless made during a hearing or trial, be in writing;

(2) State the grounds of the motion; and

(3) Set forth the relief or order sought.

(b) Each written motion must be served upon the attorney of record for the opposing party or upon the defendant if he is not represented by counsel. Service upon the attorney or upon a party may be made by delivering a copy of the motion to him or by mailing it to him at his address of record. Delivery of a copy within the meaning of this Article means handing it to the attorney or to the party or leaving it at the attorney's office with an associate or employee. Service by mail is complete upon deposit of the motion enclosed in a postpaid, properly addressed wrapper in a post office or official depository under the exclusive care and custody of the Postal Service of the United States.

(c) All written motions must be filed with the court. Proof of service must be made by filing with the court a certificate:

(1) By the prosecutor, attorney, or defendant making the motion that the paper was served in the manner prescribed; or

(2) Of acceptance of service by the prosecutor, attorney, or defendant to be served.

The certificate must show the date and method of service or the date of acceptance of service. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section requires that written motions be served on the other party, be filed with the court, and contain a certificate indicating service on the other party. The motion is to be served on the attorney of record for the other party, or on the defendant if he has no attorney. Provisions relating to service are set forth.

Motions made at a hearing or trial are exempt from the requirement that they be in writing. The in-writing, service, and filing requirements for motions not made in court apply to motions in the district court as well as in the superior court. This may force more formality upon the district court than in some instances has been true in the past, but the Commission believes that an orderly record of the motions in a cause should be available. Though not specifically required, it is the expectation of the Commission that a notation of motions of consequence made during a trial or hearing, and the judge's rulings upon them, will be made and kept by the court if there is no transcript of the hearing or trial. As the Commission has primarily dealt with pretrial procedure, it has not yet formulated its recommendations concerning the recording of court proceedings.

CASE NOTES

In ruling on motion to dismiss, evidence must be considered in light most favorable to State, giving the State the benefit of all reasonable inferences. State v. Gray, 58 N.C. App. 102, 293 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 746, 295 S.E.2d 482 (1982).

Ex Parte Continuance Voidable But Not Void. — Because this section requires actual notice by service of process where a motion is written, ex parte order of continuance issued by one superior court judge may have been voidable, but it was nevertheless not void. It was therefore binding on judge presiding at defendant's trial until defendant attacked it in a proper manner; and defendant could not attack it collaterally by moving under the Speedy Trial Act for dismissal of the charges against him, under a contention that the time excluded by the order should not toll time under the Act because the order was ex parte. State v. Sams, 317 N.C. 230, 345 S.E.2d 179 (1986).

Motion to Vacate Necessary to Void Order Issued Without Notice. — While subsection (b) of this section requires that each written motion be served upon the attorney of record of the opposing party or upon the defendant if he is not represented by counsel, an order issued without notice where actual notice is required is irregular and thus voidable, but not void, and it stands until set aside by a motion to vacate. It could not be attacked collaterally under the Speedy Trial Act. State v.

Melvin, 99 N.C. App. 16, 392 S.E.2d 740 (1990).

A written motion for joinder of defendants may be made at any time prior to trial; the motion need not be written if made at a hearing, and, in the judge's discretion, the motion may be made orally even at the beginning of trial. State v. Fink, 92 N.C. App. 523, 375 S.E.2d 303 (1989).

Applied in State v. Slade, 291 N.C. 275, 229 S.E.2d 921 (1976); State v. Majette, 30 N.C. App. 120, 226 S.E.2d 223 (1976); State v. Curmon, 295 N.C. 453, 245 S.E.2d 503 (1978); State v. Evans, 40 N.C. App. 390, 253 S.E.2d 35 (1979); State v. Clark, 301 N.C. 176, 270 S.E.2d 425 (1980); State v. Seay, 59 N.C. App. 667, 298 S.E.2d 53 (1982); State v. Marlow, 310 N.C. 507, 313 S.E.2d 532 (1984); State v. Ford, 70 N.C. App. 244, 318 S.E.2d 914 (1984); State v. Parrish, 73 N.C. App. 662, 327 S.E.2d 613 (1985).

Stated in State v. Carter, 30 N.C. App. 59, 226 S.E.2d 179 (1976); State v. Duncan, 30 N.C. App. 112, 226 S.E.2d 182 (1976).

Cited in State v. Branch, 134 N.C. App. 637, 518 S.E.2d 213 (1999).

§ 15A-952. Pretrial motions; time for filing; sanction for failure to file; motion hearing date.

(a) Any defense, objection, or request which is capable of being determined without the trial of the general issue may be raised before trial by motion.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (d), when the following motions are made in superior court they must be made within the time limitations stated in subsection (c) unless the court permits filing at a later time:

(1) Motions to continue.
(2) Motions for a change of venue under G.S. 15A-957.
(3) Motions for a special venire under G.S. 9-12 or G.S. 15A-958.
(4) Motions to dismiss under G.S. 15A-955.
(5) Motions to dismiss for improper venue.
(6) Motions addressed to the pleadings, including:
    a. Motions to dismiss for failure to plead under G.S. 15A-924(e).
    b. Motions to strike under G.S. 15A-924(f).
    c. Motions for bills of particulars under G.S. 15A-924(b) or G.S. 15A-925.
    d. Motions for severance of offenses, to the extent required by G.S. 15A-927.
    e. Motions for joinder of related offenses under G.S. 15A-926(c).

(c) Unless otherwise provided, the motions listed in subsection (b) must be made at or before the time of arraignment if a written request is filed for arraignment and if arraignment is held prior to the session of court for which the trial is calendared. If arraignment is to be held at the session for which trial is calendared, the motions must be filed on or before five o'clock P.M. on the Wednesday prior to the session when trial of the case begins.

If a written request for arraignment is not filed, then any motion listed in subsection (b) of this section must be filed not later than 21 days from the date of the return of the bill of indictment as a true bill.

(d) Motions concerning jurisdiction of the court or the failure of the pleading to charge an offense may be made at any time.

(e) Failure to file the motions in subsection (b) within the time required constitutes a waiver of the motion. The court may grant relief from any waiver except failure to move to dismiss for improper venue.

(f) When a motion is made before trial, the court in its discretion may hear the motion before trial, on the date set for arraignment, on the date set for trial before a jury is impaneled, or during trial.

(g) In superior or district court, the judge shall consider at least the following factors in determining whether to grant a continuance:

(1) Whether the failure to grant a continuance would be likely to result in a miscarriage of justice;

(2) Whether the case taken as a whole is so unusual and so complex, due to the number of defendants or the nature of the prosecution or otherwise, that more time is needed for adequate preparation; and
(3) Whether the case involves physical or sexual child abuse when a victim or witness is under 16 years of age, and whether further delay would have an adverse impact on the well-being of the child.
(4) Good cause for granting a continuance shall include those instances when the defendant, a witness, or counsel of record has an obligation of service to the State of North Carolina, including service as a member of the General Assembly or the Rules Review Commission. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1989, c. 688, s. 5; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 725, s. 9; 1997-34, s. 12.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) states an important general rule designed to encourage the early filing of motions. The more matters that can be raised and disposed of prior to trial, the fewer interruptions there will be during the course of the trial itself.

Subsections (b) and (c) require the advance filing of certain listed motions. The presence of the motion for a continuance at the head of the list is noteworthy. One of the most common complaints of citizen witnesses is that they are commanded to take time from their own affairs to attend court — and often sit around for several hours, or even days, before being dismissed and told they must come back yet another time because the case is continued. One important amendment made in the course of passage of this legislation was the deletion of motions under § 15A-954(a) from the early-filing requirement. For discussion of this matter, see the commentary under § 15A-954.

Subsections (d) and (e) generally restate the provisions of the common law, except that the time in question is the advance time recommended by the Commission rather than the time of an arraignment immediately preceding the trial. As subsections (b) and (c) by their terms apply only in superior court, the existing common law still applies as to timeliness of motions in district court. The second sentence of subsection (e) providing that no relief could be granted in the case of failure to move to dismiss for improper venue was originally intended to preserve the rule of § 15-134 that venue will be conclusively laid in the county alleged unless timely motion challenging venue is made. In this connection, however, § 15A-135 might be noted, which expressly preserves the right of most defendants to move to dismiss for improper venue on trial de novo in superior court.

Subsection (f) is designed to give the judge flexibility in ruling upon motions made before trial. It should be kept in mind that pretrial venue of cases originating in superior court is, except for the probable cause hearing, in the judicial district rather than the county. This may facilitate hearings upon pretrial motions that can be disposed of on affidavit or representations of counsel. If witnesses must be summoned to a hearing before the judge can rule upon the motion, he may prefer to wait until the date of the trial and hear the motion before or during trial. The judge would certainly exercise his discretion to hear the motion before the commencement of the trial if the attachment of jeopardy prior to the ruling upon the motion would prejudice one of the parties.

V. Time for Making Motions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Noncompliance with Requirements of § 15A-932 Does Not Result in "Failure of Pleading To State an Offense." — Section 15A-932(d), which provides for reinstatement of an indictment after a dismissal with leave is taken, is not "jurisdictional" in nature, nor does failure to strictly comply with its requirements result in the "failure of the pleading to charge an offense" within the meaning of subsection (d) of this section. Instead, the dismissal with leave contemplated in § 15A-932(b) is a procedural calendaring device. State v. Patterson, 332 N.C. 409, 420 S.E.2d 98 (1992).

Counsel in criminal cases are encouraged to offer affidavits or other evidence when making motions to continue pursuant to this section. State v. Branch, 306 N.C. 101, 291 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

Motion in limine to exclude prejudicial evidence comes within the purview of subsection (a) of this section. State v. Tate, 44 N.C. App. 567, 261 S.E.2d 506, rev'd on other grounds, 300 N.C. 180, 265 S.E.2d 223 (1980).

Failure of the trial judge to set a time certain for the presentation of evidence on defendant's motion for a change of venue did not amount to a refusal to give defendant a meaningful opportunity to be heard or to exercise his discretion where the judge indicated that he was ready to hear evidence on the defendant's motion on the day of trial, considering that the judge also said that he would reconsider the substance of the motion if problems appeared during jury selection, and that the defendant showed no prejudice relating to the panel chosen. State v. Artis, 316 N.C. 507, 342 S.E.2d 847 (1986).

Delay in Ruling on Motion Held Not Abuse of Discretion. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to rule on defendant's 26 pretrial motions until the day before the trial where only three months had elapsed since the filing of the first motion, defendant showed no vindictiveness on the part of the district attorney in not bringing the motions on for hearing earlier, and defendant showed no prejudice on the delay in ruling on the motions. State v. Setzer, 42 N.C. App. 98, 256 S.E.2d 485, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 571, 261 S.E.2d 127 (1979).

Failure to Object to Impropriety in the Indictment. — The defendant waived his right to object to any impropriety in the indictment, such as a contention of vindictive prosecution, where the defendant failed to make a motion to the trial court to dismiss the indictment for robbery with a dangerous weapon. State v. Frogge, 351 N.C. 576, 528 S.E.2d 893 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 994, 121 S. Ct. 487, 148 L. Ed. 2d 459 (2000).

Failure to Object to Selection of Grand Jury Foreman. — Capital murder defendant waived any claim that his constitutional rights were denied because of racial discrimination in selection of foreman to the grand jury that indicted him, where the defendant made no motion challenging any aspect of the indictment and only raised the issue for the first time on appeal. State v. Robinson, 327 N.C. 346, 395 S.E.2d 402 (1990).

II. MOTIONS TO CONTINUE.

Motion for continuance is ordinarily addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, whose ruling is not subject to review absent an abuse of discretion. State v. Weimer, 300 N.C. 642, 268 S.E.2d 216 (1980); State v. Winston, 47 N.C. App. 363, 267 S.E.2d 43 (1980).

A motion for continuance, even when filed in a timely manner pursuant to this section, is ordinarily addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge whose ruling thereon is not subject to review absent an abuse of such discretion. State v. Branch, 306 N.C. 101, 291 S.E.2d 653 (1982); State v. Pickard, 107 N.C. App. 94, 418 S.E.2d 690 (1992).

A motion for a continuance is ordinarily addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge whose ruling thereon is not subject to review absent a gross abuse. State v. Searles, 304 N.C. 149, 282 S.E.2d 430 (1981).

Review of Action on Motion Involving Constitutional Issue. — When a motion for continuance raises a constitutional issue, trial court's action upon it involves a question of law which is fully reviewable by an examination of the particular circumstances of each case. State v. Searles, 304 N.C. 149, 282 S.E.2d 430 (1981); State v. Pickard, 107 N.C. App. 94, 418 S.E.2d 690 (1992).

A motion to continue is ordinarily addressed to the trial judge's sound discretion and his ruling thereon will not be disturbed except upon a showing that he abused that discretion. However, when a motion to continue is based on a constitutional right, the question presented is a reviewable question of law. State v. Perkins, 57 N.C. App. 516, 291 S.E.2d 865 (1982).

When a motion for a continuance raises a constitutional issue and is denied, the denial is grounds for a new trial only when the defendant shows that the denial was erroneous and also that his case was prejudiced as a result of the error. State v. Bunch, 106 N.C. App. 128, 415 S.E.2d 375, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 149, 419 S.E.2d 575 (1992); State v. Pickard, 107 N.C. App. 94, 418 S.E.2d 690 (1992).

Review of Action on Motion Not Involving Constitutional Issue. — A motion for continuance which does not implicate constitutional rights is ordinarily addressed to the discretion of the trial court, and its denial will not be held error on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion. State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

Motion to Secure Alibi Witness Presents Constitutional Question. — Since the right to present one's defense is guaranteed by U.S. Const., Amend. VI, made applicable to the states through U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, denial of defendant's motion for a continuance in order to secure the presence of alibi witnesses presents a constitutional question. State v. Perkins, 57 N.C. App. 516, 291 S.E.2d 865 (1982).

Defendant Must Show Error and Prejudice for New Trial. — Defendant must show both error in the denial of his motion to continue and that he was prejudiced thereby before he will be granted a new trial. State v. Winston, 47 N.C. App. 363, 267 S.E.2d 43 (1980).

Even assuming that the trial court erred in denying his motion for a continuance, defendant failed to show any prejudicial error. Defendant's mere intangible hope that something helpful may have turned up in a transcript from a prior trial did not afford him a basis for delaying trial. State v. Pickard, 107 N.C. App. 94, 418 S.E.2d 690 (1992).

Even Where Constitutional Issue Raised. — Denial of a motion to continue, even when the motion raises a constitutional issue, is grounds for a new trial only upon a showing by the defendant that the denial was erroneous and also that his case was prejudiced as a result of the error. State v. Branch, 306 N.C. 101, 291 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

Denial of a motion for a continuance, regardless of its nature, is grounds for a new trial only upon a showing by defendant that the denial was erroneous and that his case was prejudiced thereby. State v. Searles, 304 N.C. 149, 282 S.E.2d 430 (1981).

Motion Not Supported by Proof of Sufficient Grounds Properly Denied. — Trial court did not err in refusing to grant a longer continuance to afford defendant a reasonable opportunity to locate a material witness when defendant's oral motion therefor, made on the date set for trial, was not supported by some form of detailed proof indicating sufficient grounds for further delay. State v. Searles, 304 N.C. 149, 282 S.E.2d 430 (1981).

A trial judge should not grant a continuance unless the reasons therefor are fully established. Therefore, an affidavit showing sufficient grounds should be filed in support of a motion to continue. State v. Pickard, 107 N.C. App. 94, 418 S.E.2d 690 (1992).

Showing of Abuse Required Where Defendant Failed to File Motion on Time. — Rule requiring the defendant to make a showing of abuse by the trial court in denying his motion for a continuance should be applied with even greater vigor in cases in which the defendant has waived his right to make a motion to continue by failing to file the motion within the time prescribed by this section. State v. Branch, 306 N.C. 101, 291 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

Denial of Motion Held Proper. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion to continue trial where counsel had approximately 55 days to prepare for trial and neither defense counsel nor defendant asserted that they expected to present any witnesses on defendant's behalf or that defendant intended to testify. State v. Bunch, 106 N.C. App. 128, 415 S.E.2d 375, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 149, 419 S.E.2d 575 (1992).

Denial of Motion Held Improper. — The defendant was entitled to a new trial because the court's denials of his repeated motions for a continuance resulted in a violation of his constitutional rights to effective assistance of counsel, to confront his accusers, and to due process of law. Defendant's counsels had only thirty-four days to prepare for a complex, bifurcated capital case, involving multiple incidents in multiple locations over a two-day period, which they took over from another attorney who had done little other than filing pretrial motions and trying to persuade the defendant to accept a plea bargain. No evidence existed that any witness interviews had been performed; the orders based on the trial court's rulings on pretrial motions had not been prepared; and a jury questionnaire was not submitted for distribution to prospective jurors. State v. Rogers, 352 N.C. 119, 529 S.E.2d 671 (2000).

Specific Findings of Fact Not Required. — Where the facts presented in defendant's motion were not in dispute, the judge was not required to make specific findings of fact in denying defendant's motion for a continuance. State v. White, 340 N.C. 264, 457 S.E.2d 841 (1995).

III. MOTIONS TO DISMISS.

Motion to Dismiss an Indictment When There Is Ground for Challenge to the Array. — Motion to quash a murder indictment on the basis of racial discrimination in the selection of the grand jury foreman is deemed a motion to dismiss an indictment based on a challenge to the array under § 15A-955(1) because it in effect challenges the grand jury which indicted the defendant, and under this section it must be made within the time limitations stated in subsection (c) unless the court permits filing at a later time. State v. Miller, 339 N.C. 663, 455 S.E.2d 137, rehearing denied, 340 N.C. 118, 458 S.E.2d 183 (1995).

Motion to dismiss an indictment when there is ground for challenge to the array must be made at or before the time of arraignment, or it is waived. State v. Lynch, 300 N.C. 534, 268 S.E.2d 161 (1980).

Discretion in Refusing to Hear Untimely Motion to Dismiss. — Where defendants' motion to dismiss came at the conclusion of the evidence, under either common-law practice or this section, the motion was untimely and was therefore addressed to the discretion of the trial judge. His exercise of that discretion in refusing to hear the motion is not reviewable on appeal. State v. Phillips, 297 N.C. 600, 256 S.E.2d 212 (1979).

IV. MOTIONS FOR JOINDER.

Provisions of this section apply only to motions for joinder made by a defendant. State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

Oral Motion for Joinder at Trial Is Too Late. — A motion for joinder of cases made orally after the present case was called for trial came too late. The motion should have been made at defendant's arraignment. Only in unusual circumstances should the judge interrupt the trial of a case to conduct hearings on matters that should have been raised and resolved at arraignment or some other pretrial stage of the proceedings. State v. Moore, 41 N.C. App. 131, 254 S.E.2d 191 (1979).

Discretion of Trial Court on Motion for Joinder. — Because a motion for joinder is addressed to the trial court's sound discretion, his ruling will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Riggs, 79 N.C. App. 398, 339 S.E.2d 676 (1986).

It was not error for court to allow State's motion to join all offenses on the day defendant's trial began, where defendant made no showing of abuse of discretion or of any resulting prejudice. State v. Riggs, 79 N.C. App. 398, 339 S.E.2d 676 (1986).

V. TIME FOR MAKING MOTIONS.

Written and Oral Motions for Joinder. — A written motion for joinder of defendants may be made at any time prior to trial; the motion need not be written if made at a hearing, and, in the judge's discretion, the motion may be made orally even at the beginning of trial. State v. Fink, 92 N.C. App. 523, 375 S.E.2d 303 (1989).

Judge May Allow Late Motions. — It is within the discretion of the trial judge to permit pretrial motions to be filed at a later time than set out in the statute. State v. Wilson, 57 N.C. App. 444, 291 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 563, 294 S.E.2d 375 (1982).

Deadline for filing motions required. — Failure at arraignment to give pro se defendant a definite date to file motions for a bill of particulars and change of venue coupled with the trial court's later refusal to hear the motions constituted an abuse of discretion which prejudiced defendant. State v. Ferebee, 128 N.C. App. 710, 499 S.E.2d 459 (1998).

§ 15A-953. Motions practice in district court.

In misdemeanor prosecutions in the district court motions should ordinarily be made upon arraignment or during the course of trial, as appropriate. A written motion may be made prior to trial in district court. With the consent of other parties and the district court judge, a motion may be heard before trial. Upon trial de novo in superior court, motions are subject to the provisions of G.S. 15A-952, and except as provided in G.S. 15A-135, no motion in superior court is prejudiced by any ruling upon, or a failure to make timely motion on, the subject in district court. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

In district court there are no jurors in criminal cases to be inconvenienced if motions are heard during the course of the trial. In addition, motions in district court are usually more expeditiously made and disposed of than in superior court. For these reasons, the section indicates that, in general, motions in district court will be made upon arraignment or during the course of trial — in the same manner as at present. If a party wishes to raise a matter by motion before trial, he may do so, but the hearing may not be held prior to trial unless all parties consent.

The section is intended to state existing law in providing that in general a party is not prejudiced upon trial de novo in superior court by any ruling upon or failure to make timely motion on the subject in district court. The rule as to venue is somewhat altered, in accordance with the provisions of § 15A-135.

§ 15A-954. Motion to dismiss — Grounds applicable to all criminal pleadings; dismissal of proceedings upon death of defendant.

(a) The court on motion of the defendant must dismiss the charges stated in a criminal pleading if it determines that:

(1) The statute alleged to have been violated is unconstitutional on its face or as applied to the defendant.
(2) The statute of limitations has run.
(3) The defendant has been denied a speedy trial as required by the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of North Carolina.
(4) The defendant's constitutional rights have been flagrantly violated and there is such irreparable prejudice to the defendant's preparation of his case that there is no remedy but to dismiss the prosecution.
(5) The defendant has previously been placed in jeopardy of the same offense.
(6) The defendant has previously been charged with the same offense in another North Carolina court of competent jurisdiction, and the criminal pleading charging the offense is still pending and valid.
(7) An issue of fact or law essential to a successful prosecution has been previously adjudicated in favor of the defendant in a prior action between the parties.
(8) The court has no jurisdiction of the offense charged.
(9) The defendant has been granted immunity by law from prosecution.
(10) The pleading fails to charge an offense as provided in G.S. 15A-924(e).

(b) Upon suggestion to the court that the defendant has died, the court upon determining that the defendant is dead must dismiss the charges.

(c) A motion to dismiss for the reasons set out in subsection (a) may be made at any time. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section refers to motions to dismiss all criminal pleadings including indictments.

Special additional provisions relating to indictments are treated in § 15A-955.

Several of the provisions are new to North Carolina statutory law, but it is believed that a case law foundation exists for all of them. It should be stressed that some of the motions here listed are, and others are not, motions which are normally to be heard prior to trial.

Two of the motions treated in this section have been spawned by relatively recent cases. The speedy-trial motion grows out of the decision in Klopfer v. North Carolina, 386 U.S. 213, 87 S. Ct. 988, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1967); although there are specific provisions in Article 35 of Chapter 15A, and these must be followed if applicable, Klopfer unquestionably gives a right that may go beyond the specifics of Article 35. The provisions of subdivision (a)(4) are intended to embody the holding of the Supreme Court of North Carolina in State v. Hill, 277 N.C. 547, 178 S.E.2d 462 (1971). It is assumed that the drastic relief called for under this motion would be granted most sparingly.

Subsection (b) of this section involves a "suggestion to the court"; if the defendant is dead, he cannot make a motion, and if the solicitor is apprised of the death of a defendant he could enter a voluntary dismissal under Article 50.

The General Assembly added subsection (c) to reinforce its deletion of motions under subsection (a) from the early-filing requirement of § 15A-952(b). In the process, one category of motions has been left in doubt. Section 15A-952(b)(6), subparagraph a, requires early filings of "motions to dismiss for failure to plead under § 15A-924(e)." Section 15A-954(a)(10) includes, as a motion which may be made any time, one on the ground that "the pleading fails to charge an offense as provided in § 15A-924(e)." As § 15A-924(e) simply states that the court must dismiss a pleading that does not state the crime in the manner required in § 15A-924(a) unless an amendment is allowable, it becomes difficult to interpret these provisions. At the least, however, § 15A-954(a)(10) would continue the old rule that a pleading which is so defective a statement of the crime that it cannot be amended is subject to a motion to dismiss at any time — including in an appellate court or after judgment.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Right to a full evidentiary hearing is not inherent in this section. State v. Spicer, 299 N.C. 309, 261 S.E.2d 893 (1980).

In the absence of a showing of actual prejudice, the courts should consider dismissal in cases of serious crimes with extreme caution. State v. Goldman, 311 N.C. 338, 317 S.E.2d 361 (1984).

Motion to Dismiss Equivalent to Motion to Quash. — A motion to dismiss under this section for failure of the indictment to charge an offense as provided in § 15A-924 is the functional equivalent of a motion to quash under prior practice. State v. Brown, 81 N.C. App. 281, 343 S.E.2d 553 (1986).

Dismissal on Unsworn Representations Held Error. — The court erred in allowing motion to dismiss indictments which on their face sufficiently alleged the offense of embezzlement, where even assuming, arguendo, that the court could consider extraneous evidence in ruling on the motion, only the unsworn representations of defense counsel at the hearing on defendant's motion, to the effect that defendant was a partner in the victimized partnership, were before the court. State v. Brown, 81 N.C. App. 281, 343 S.E.2d 553 (1986).

Applied in State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977); State v. Curmon, 295 N.C. 453, 245 S.E.2d 503 (1978); State v. Cronin, 41 N.C. App. 415, 255 S.E.2d 240 (1979); State v.

II. SPEEDY TRIAL.

A. In General.

Right to speedy trial is an integral part of the fundamental law of this State. State v. Dietz, 289 N.C. 488, 223 S.E.2d 357 (1976).

Guaranteed by U.S. Const., Amend. VI. — Every person formally accused of crime is guaranteed a speedy and impartial trial by this section and U.S. Const., Amends. VI and XIV. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

In order to prevail on allegations of a constitutional due process violation of the right to a speedy trial, a defendant must show that the delay actually prejudiced the conduct of his defense and that it was unreasonable, unjustified, and engaged in by the prosecution deliberately and unnecessarily in order to gain tactical advantage over the defendant. State v. Goldman, 311 N.C. 338, 317 S.E.2d 361 (1984).

Period Covered by Speedy Trial Right. — The due process right to a speedy trial relates to the period of time between the date of the occurrence of the alleged offense, and the date when a defendant is "accused" of committing the alleged crime. A defendant becomes "accused" of the crime for this purpose when he is either arrested or indicted, whichever occurs first. State v. Watson, 51 N.C. App. 369, 276 S.E.2d 732 (1981).

Length of the delay is not per se determinative of the question of whether a defendant has been denied a speedy trial. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976).

It cannot be said precisely how long a delay is too long, but rather the courts must engage in a balancing test. State v. Goldman, 311 N.C. 338, 317 S.E.2d 361 (1984).

Right to a speedy trial is necessarily relative, for inherent in every criminal prosecution is the probability of delay. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976).

No Exact Time Limit. — Neither the Constitution nor the legislature has attempted to fix the exact time within which a trial must be had. State v. Artis, 31 N.C. App. 193, 228 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 449, 230 S.E.2d 766 (1976).

Interrelated factors to be considered in determining whether a defendant has been denied his constitutional right to a speedy trial are: (1) the length of the delay; (2) the reason for the delay; (3) the defendant's assertion of his right to a speedy trial; and (4) prejudice to defendant resulting from the delay. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976).

In determining whether an accused has been denied his right to a speedy trial, the courts have weighed four factors: (1) the length of the delay, (2) the cause of the delay, (3) waiver by the defendant, and (4) prejudice to the defendant. State v. Branch, 41 N.C. App. 80, 254 S.E.2d 255, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 612, 257 S.E.2d 220 (1979).

Unless some fixed time limit is prescribed by statute, speedy trial questions must be resolved on a case-by-case basis. While all relevant circumstances must be considered, four interrelated factors are of primary significance: (1) the length of delay, (2) the reason for the delay, (3) the extent to which defendant has asserted his right, and (4) the extent to which defendant has been prejudiced. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

A claim that a speedy trial has been denied must be subjected to a balancing test in which the court weighs the conduct of both the prosecution and the defendant. The main factors which the court must weigh in determining whether an accused has been deprived of a speedy trial are (1) the length of the delay, (2) the cause of the delay, (3) waiver by the defendant, and (4) prejudice to the defendant. State

v. Watson, 51 N.C. App. 369, 276 S.E.2d 732 (1981).

Facts of Case Must Be Considered. — The question whether a defendant has been denied a speedy trial must be answered in light of the facts in the particular case. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976).

Whether a speedy trial is afforded must be determined in the light of the circumstances of each particular case. In the absence of a statutory standard, what is a fair and reasonable time is within the discretion of the court. State v. Artis, 31 N.C. App. 193, 228 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 449, 230 S.E.2d 766 (1976).

Good Faith Delays. — The constitutional guarantee of a speedy trial does not outlaw good faith delays which are reasonably necessary for the State to prepare and present its case. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Undue delay which is arbitrary and oppressive or the result of deliberate prosecution efforts "to hamper the defense" violates the constitutional right to a speedy trial. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976).

Delay Due to Investigation. — In a prosecution for felonious sale and delivery of marijuana and felonious possession of marijuana with intent to sell, defendant was not denied his right to a speedy trial by a preindictment delay of four and one-half months, where the delay was necessary to protect an undercover investigation, and defendant failed to show that any evidence was lost as a result of the delay which would have been helpful to his defense. State v. Dietz, 289 N.C. 488, 223 S.E.2d 357 (1976).

The legitimate need to protect the existence of an ongoing undercover investigation from exposure has been frequently recognized by the federal courts as a reasonable justification for delay in bringing an indictment. State v. Goldman, 311 N.C. 338, 317 S.E.2d 361 (1984).

To prosecute a defendant following investigative delay does not deprive him of due process, even if his defense might have been somewhat prejudiced by the lapse of time. State v. Goldman, 311 N.C. 338, 317 S.E.2d 361 (1984).

Criminal defendant who has caused or acquiesced in a delay will not be permitted to use it as a vehicle in which to escape justice. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Congestion of criminal court dockets has consistently been recognized as a valid justification for delay in bringing an accused to trial. State v. Artis, 31 N.C. App. 193, 228 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 449, 230 S.E.2d 766 (1976).

Delay Held Not Unreasonable. — Where the record indicates that the delay in the prosecution of a case was due to congested criminal dockets, good-faith efforts to obtain custody of absent codefendants and understandable difficulty in locating out-of-state witnesses, one of whom was a fugitive from justice, an 11-month delay was not unreasonable and the delay itself was not prejudicial to defendant in preparing and presenting his defense. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976).

Motion to Dismiss Ipso Facto Denied by Denial of Motion to Suppress. — Where the trial court actually did find facts and enter conclusions of law in denying defendant's motion to suppress evidence of defendant's confessions to police, by so denying the motion to suppress, the motion to dismiss was denied, ipso facto, for there was no showing of a constitutional violation by defendant upon which to base the motion. Thus the failure of the trial judge to enter an additional order specifically denying by name the motion to dismiss would be, at most, harmless error. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Prisoners confined for unrelated crimes are entitled to the benefits of the constitutional guarantee of a speedy and impartial trial. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Burden of Proving Denial of Speedy Trial. — The burden is on an accused who asserts the denial of his right to a speedy trial to show that the delay was due to the neglect or willfulness of the prosecution. State v. Smith, 289 N.C. 143, 221 S.E.2d 247 (1976); State v. Dietz, 289 N.C. 488, 223 S.E.2d 357 (1976); State v. Artis, 31 N.C. App. 193, 228 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 449, 230 S.E.2d 766 (1976).

The burden is on an accused who asserts denial of a speedy trial to show that the delay has prejudiced him in his ability to defend himself, and prejudice will not be presumed merely upon a showing of a long period of delay. State v. Branch, 41 N.C. App. 80, 254 S.E.2d 255, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 612, 257 S.E.2d 220 (1979).

The burden is on the defendant who asserts the denial of his right to a speedy trial to show the delay was the result of the State's intentional and unnecessary postponement for its own convenience or advantage; and, at least in the absence of intentional governmental delay for the purpose of harassing or gaining advantage over defendant, the burden is on defendant to affirmatively demonstrate actual and substantial prejudice. State v. Watson, 51 N.C. App. 369, 276 S.E.2d 732 (1981).

Delay for Long Period. — Ordinarily, the burden is on the defendant to show that the delay was due to the willful neglect of the prosecution and could have been avoided by a reasonable effort. The courts of this State, however, have recognized an exception to this general rule where the defendant shows a long period of delay. State v. Branch, 41 N.C. App. 80, 254 S.E.2d 255, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C.

612, 257 S.E.2d 220 (1979).

Once the defendant showed a 17-month delay after his request for a speedy trial, the State should have presented evidence fully explaining the reasons for the delay. State v. Branch, 41 N.C. App. 80, 254 S.E.2d 255, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 612, 257 S.E.2d 220 (1979).

Weight Given Demand for Speedy Trial. — The defendant's assertion of his speedy trial right is entitled to strong evidentiary weight in determining whether the defendant is being deprived of the right. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Failure to assert the right will make it difficult for a defendant to prove that he was denied a speedy trial. State v. Tindall, 294 N.C. 689, 242 S.E.2d 806 (1978).

Although the failure to assert the right to a speedy trial has not been held to be a waiver of the right to a speedy trial, it does make it difficult for a defendant to prove that he was denied such a right. State v. Watson, 51 N.C. App. 369, 276 S.E.2d 732 (1981).

Irreparable Prejudice Necessary to Dismissal. — It is only when one can show that there has been a constitutional violation resulting in irreparable prejudice to the preparation of defendant's case that a dismissal is warranted under subdivision (a)(4) of this section. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

B. Pre-indictment Delay.

Section affords no protection to one who has not yet been "accused". — An individual becomes "accused" of a crime for the purpose of analysis under U.S. Const., Amend. VI when he is either arrested or indicted for the crime. State v. Watson, 51 N.C. App. 369, 276 S.E.2d 732 (1981).

The speedy trial provision has no application until a putative defendant in some way becomes accused. State v. Watson, 51 N.C. App. 369, 276 S.E.2d 732 (1981).

Proof of Intentional Delay. — Defendant must show that the State intentionally delayed indictment in order to impair his defense or to gain tactical advantage, a claim requiring inquiry into the nature of or reason for the delay. To prevail on this point, a defendant essentially must prove that the State unnecessarily delayed seeking indictment. State v. Holmes, 59 N.C. App. 79, 296 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

To grant a motion to dismiss for pre-indictment delay, defendant must show both intentional delay on the part of the State in order to impair defendant's ability to defend himself and actual and substantial prejudice from the pre-indictment delay. State v. Parker, 66 N.C. App. 293, 311 S.E.2d 321 (1984).

Prejudice Not Presumed by Long Pre-indictment Delay. — Prejudice will not be presumed merely upon a showing of a long period of pre-indictment delay. State v. Watson, 51 N.C. App. 369, 276 S.E.2d 732 (1981).

Passage of time is inherent in any preindictment delay situation, and prejudice is not presumed simply upon a showing of a lengthy preindictment delay. State v. Netcliff, 116 N.C. App. 396, 448 S.E.2d 311 (1994), overruled on other grounds, State v. Patton, 342 N.C. 633, 466 S.E.2d 708 (1996).

Proving Pre-indictment Delay Violated Due Process Rights. — For defendant to carry the burden on his motion to dismiss for pre-indictment delay violating his due process rights pursuant to U.S. Const., Amends. V and XIV, he must show both (1) actual and substantial prejudice from the pre-indictment delay and (2) that the delay was intentional on the part of the State in order to impair defendant's ability to defend himself or to gain tactical advantage over the defendant. State v. Holmes, 59 N.C. App. 79, 296 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

Delay Due to Continuing Investigation. — Where there is an ongoing investigation that will be jeopardized by arrests and indictments resulting from the operation and where the undercover agent remains actively involved in the operation, indictment may be delayed until completion of the drug investigation. In such instances, delay in issuance will not, without more, prejudice the defendant's due process interest in a timely indictment. State v. Holmes, 59 N.C. App. 79, 296 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

Pre-indictment delay attributable to an ongoing investigation of the case is reasonable, justified, and for legitimate purposes. State v. Goldman, 311 N.C. 338, 317 S.E.2d 361 (1984).

General allegation of prejudice supported merely by claims of faded memory will not sustain the defendant's burden of proof on the issue of prejudice from pre-indictment delay. The defendant must show that the evidence or testimony lost because of faded memory would have been helpful, was significant and was lost because of preindictment delay. State v. Holmes, 59 N.C. App. 79, 296 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

III. FLAGRANT VIOLATION OF CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS.

Subdivision (a)(4) Used Sparingly. — Since subdivision (a)(4) of this section contemplates drastic relief, a motion to dismiss under its terms should be granted sparingly. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Denial of access of a witness to a breathalyzer test when the State's sole evidence of the offense of driving while impaired was the personal observation of the authorities would constitute a flagrant violation of defendant's constitutional right to obtain witnesses under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23 as a matter of law and would require that the charges be dismissed. State v. Ferguson, 90 N.C. App. 513, 369 S.E.2d 378, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 367, 373 S.E.2d 551 (1988).

No Grounds Warranting Dismissal. — Although defendant argued that magistrate failed to inquire into all of the statutory considerations before setting the conditions of his pretrial release, there was no basis in the case to suggest that defendant was denied access to anyone; he was allowed to attempt to call an attorney, and was allowed to call his wife from the jail only minutes after he asked to do so in the magistrate's office; therefore, there was no violation of defendant's constitutional rights which would warrant dismissal of the charges against him. State v. Eliason, 100 N.C. App. 313, 395 S.E.2d 702 (1990).

Defendant's allegation that the prosecution delayed trying his case after it had been calendared in order to locate missing witnesses and, thereby, gain a tactical advantage, did not warrant dismissal of the case nor did the behavior complained of rise to a sufficiently egregious level. State v. Roberts, 135 N.C. App. 690, 522 S.E.2d 130 (1999).

IV. UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTE ON FACE OR AS APPLIED.

Although the defendant was unconstitutionally detained in connection with the assault on a female charge, he was not entitled pursuant to this section to dismissal of the charge of assault with a deadly weapon where he failed to demonstrate irreparable prejudice; the State did not dismiss the assault on a female charge and subsequently file different, more severe charges against defendant to avoid the consequences of an unconstitutional pretrial detention; rather, its actions were based on information that the victim's injuries were more serious than originally thought. State v. Clegg, 142 N.C. App. 35, 542 S.E.2d 269 (2001), cert. denied, 353 N.C. 453, 548 S.E.2d 529 (2001).

Selective Prosecution of Tax Evaders. — The prosecution of individuals who publicly assert privileges not to pay taxes does not necessarily constitute selection for prosecution upon an impermissible basis. Such prosecutions, predicated in part upon a potential deterrent effect, serve a legitimate interest in promoting more general tax compliance. State v. Davis, 96 N.C. App. 545, 386 S.E.2d 743 (1989).

V. DOUBLE JEOPARDY.

When Double Jeopardy Attaches in Bench Trial. — In a bench trial, double jeopardy does not attach until the introduction of evidence. State v. Brunson, 96 N.C. App. 347, 385 S.E.2d 542 (1989), aff'd, 327 N.C. 244, 393 S.E.2d 860 (1990).

In a bench trial in district court where dismissal was taken to avert the necessity of introducing evidence rather than after its introduction, double jeopardy had not attached; jeopardy will attach only after introduction of evidence. State v. Brunson, 96 N.C. App. 347, 385 S.E.2d 542 (1989), aff'd, 327 N.C. 244, 393 S.E.2d 860 (1990).

VI. PREVIOUS ADJUDICATION OF ISSUE.

Common Law Collateral Estoppel Codified. — Subdivision (a)(7) is a codification of the common law principle of collateral estoppel as it is applied in criminal cases. State v. Parsons, 92 N.C. App. 175, 374 S.E.2d 123 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 340, 378 S.E.2d 805 (1989).

Indictment Barred by Collateral Estoppel. — State's first indictment of defendant, charging manslaughter of "a natureless living female fetus...," was dismissed for failure to allege a material element of manslaughter (that is, that defendant did kill another living human being), and the State did not appeal; therefore, collateral estoppel barred the State's second indictment for manslaughter, alleging that defendant did "kill and slay a living human being...," which referred to the same victim and incident. State v. Parsons, 92 N.C. App. 175, 374 S.E.2d 123 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 340, 378 S.E.2d 805 (1989).

First Indictment Accurate Enough to Inform and Protect Defendant from Second Indictment. — Whether defendant was indicted for manslaughter of a fetus, as the victim was described in the first indictment, or an unborn child, as the victim was described in the second indictment, the crime alleged was the same; therefore, the wording of the first indictment was accurate enough to inform defendant of the charge against him, and precise enough to protect him from the second indictment on what amounted to the same charge. State v. Parsons, 92 N.C. App. 175, 374 S.E.2d 123 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 340, 378 S.E.2d 805 (1989).

Habitual Felon. — Where a defendant was acquitted on a charge of being a violent habitual felon, his later trial on the same charge, involving a different primary offense but the same two predicate offenses, was barred by collateral estoppel. State v. Safrit, — N.C. App. —, 551 S.E.2d 516, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 727 (2001).

Not Applicable to Federal Proceeding. — Subsection (a)(7) was not applicable where the State of North Carolina was not a party to the federal criminal proceeding, nor was any showing made that the state was in privity with the federal government in prosecuting the defendant on the federal drug charges. State v. Brooks, 337 N.C. 132, 446 S.E.2d 579 (1994).

§ 15A-955. Motion to dismiss — Grounds applicable to indictments.

The court on motion of the defendant may dismiss an indictment if it determines that:

(1) There is ground for a challenge to the array,

(2) The requisite number of qualified grand jurors did not concur in finding the indictment, or

(3) All of the witnesses before the grand jury on the bill of indictment were incompetent to testify. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission purposely kept the grounds for challenging an indictment valid on its face to as few grounds as possible. There is North Carolina case law to support all three listed grounds.

CASE NOTES

"All of the Witnesses" Construed. — The trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to dismiss indictment for conspiracy to commit trafficking in cocaine on the grounds that it was based upon allegedly perjured testimony because, assuming arguendo that the testimony was perjured and that it could have rendered a grand jury witness incompetent to testify within the meaning of subsection (3), this could not be said to satisfy the requirement that "all of the witnesses" were incompetent to testify before the grand jury. State v. Minter, 111 N.C. App. 40, 432 S.E.2d 146 (1993).

Motion Must Be Made at or Before Time of Arraignment. — A motion to dismiss an indictment when there is ground for a challenge to the array must be made at or before the time of arraignment, or it is waived. State v. Lynch, 300 N.C. 534, 268 S.E.2d 161 (1980).

Motion to quash a murder indictment on the basis of racial discrimination in the selection of the grand jury foreman is deemed a motion to dismiss an indictment based on a challenge to the array under subdivision (1) of this section because it in effect challenges the grand jury which indicted the defendant, and under § 15A-952 it must be made within the time limitations stated in 15A-952(c) unless the court permits filing at a later time. State v. Miller, 339 N.C. 663, 455 S.E.2d 137, rehearing denied, 340 N.C. 118, 458 S.E.2d 183 (1995).

Motion Subject to § 15A-952(c). — A motion to dismiss or quash an indictment because of irregularity in the selection of the grand jury is subject to the time limitation of § 15A-952(c). State v. Duncan, 30 N.C. App. 112, 226 S.E.2d 182, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 779, 229 S.E.2d 34 (1976).

Challenge to the Grand Jury Array. — The trial court, upon defendant's motion, may dismiss an indictment when there is ground for a challenge to the grand jury array; this motion must be made at or before the arraignment or it is waived. State v. Kirkland, 119 N.C. App. 185, 457 S.E.2d 766 (1995), cert. denied, 341 N.C. 654, 462 S.E.2d 521 (1995), aff'd per curiam, 342 N.C. 891, 467 S.E.2d 242 (1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 875, 117 S. Ct. 195, 136 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1996).

Applied in State v. Ellis, 32 N.C. App. 226, 231 S.E.2d 285 (1977).

§ 15A-956. Deferral of ruling on motion to dismiss when charge to be reinstituted.

If a motion to dismiss is made at arraignment or trial, upon motion of the prosecutor the court may recess the proceedings for a period of time requested by the prosecutor, not to exceed 24 hours, prior to ruling upon the motion. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section went through several versions within the Commission. Only the caption now reflects the underlying purpose for the section. The Commission believed that if a pleading against a defendant was dismissed on a technical ground and the defendant was properly subject to renewed prosecution on the charge, he should not upon dismissal of the charge be given an interlude of freedom in which to flee.

The first draft considered by the Commission stated that after dismissal the court could retain jurisdiction over the person of the defendant for a limited period. There were objections to allowing the court to do this after a formal finding of a defect in the papers on which the court's jurisdiction over the person is based. Therefore, the Commission adopted the technique of allowing the court to defer its ruling on the motion to dismiss. This same approach was taken by the Commission in § 15A-604(b)(3). In § 15A-629(b), because it involved the grand jury, it was necessary to take the approach rejected by the Commission for this section. That situation is somewhat distinguishable, however, in that the process on which the defendant is bound over to superior court is not specifically declared defective.

§ 15A-957. Motion for change of venue.

If, upon motion of the defendant, the court determines that there exists in the county in which the prosecution is pending so great a prejudice against the defendant that he cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial, the court must either:

(1) Transfer the proceeding to another county in the prosecutorial district as defined in G.S. 7A-60 or to another county in an adjoining prosecutorial district as defined in G.S. 7A-60, or

(2) Order a special venire under the terms of G.S. 15A-958.

The procedure for change of venue is in accordance with the provisions of Article 3 of this Chapter, Venue. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 63.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Former § 15-135 provided for a change of venue to an "adjacent" county with the consent of the defendant. The Commission decided to spell out with more precision exactly to what counties venue may be moved upon the defendant's motion. It should be noted, though, that § 15A-133 would permit a change of venue to any county within the State with the consent of both the defendant and the solicitor.

The provision allowing the judge to order the special venire rather than grant the motion for a change of venue is intended to embody existing case law.

Legal Periodicals. — For note discussing the motion for change of venue in light of State v. Jerrett, 309 N.C. 239, 307 S.E.2d 339 (1983), see 7 Campbell L. Rev. 73 (1984).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided prior to the 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988) amendment, which substituted references to "prosecutorial district as defined in G.S. 7A-60" for "judicial district."

The purpose of this section is to insure that jurors decide cases based on evidence introduced at trial and not on something they have heard outside the courtroom. State v. Abbott, 320 N.C. 475, 358 S.E.2d 365 (1987).

Inherent Authority to Change Venue in Interests of Justice. — The statutory power of the court to change the venue of a trial is limited to transferring the case to an adjoining county in the judicial district or to another county in an adjoining judicial district. Notwithstanding this apparent statutory limitation upon the power of a court to order a change of venue, a court of general jurisdiction, of which the superior court is one, has the inherent authority to order a change of venue in the interests of justice. State v. Barfield, 298 N.C.

306, 259 S.E.2d 510 (1979), cert. denied, 448 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 3050, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1137, rehearing denied, 448 U.S. 918, 101 S. Ct. 41, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1181 (1980).

The trial court did not violate this section, § 15A-958, or § 15A-133 by ordering a special venire from another county; as the defendant never moved for a change of venue, this section did not apply and there was no violation of § 15A-133 where the trial court ruled on the issue of venue for jury selection. Furthermore, given the nature and circumstances of the alleged crimes against two law enforcement officers and defendants' acquiescence to the stipulation and proposal at the hearing, the trial court had the inherent authority to order the change of venue for the limited purpose of jury selection. State v. Golphin, 352 N.C. 364, 533 S.E.2d 168 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1379, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1380, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001).

The test for whether a change of venue should be granted is whether the defendant has established that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case upon pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial, and would be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. State v. Scarborough, 92 N.C. App. 422, 374 S.E.2d 620 (1988), reversed on other grounds, 324 N.C. 542, 379 S.E.2d 857 (1989).

The defendant must demonstrate that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case upon pretrial information, either through the media or by word of mouth, rather than upon the evidence presented at trial, and would therefore be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. State v. King, 326 N.C. 662, 392 S.E.2d 609 (1990).

Section Not Restricted to Media-Inspired Prejudice. — This section, which requires a change of venue or a special venire panel where prejudice is so great as to prevent a fair trial, is not restricted to media-inspired prejudice. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976).

Word-of-Mouth Publicity. — Motions under this section on grounds of unfavorable, prejudicial publicity may be based on word-of-mouth publicity. There is no requirement that the publicity originate in the media. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976).

Factual news accounts regarding the commission of a crime and the pretrial proceedings relating to that crime do not of themselves warrant a change in venue. State v. Barnes, 345 N.C. 184, 481 S.E.2d 44 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 876, 118 S. Ct. 196, 139 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1024, 118 S. Ct. 1309, 140 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1998).

Erroneous News Accounts. — No error in denial of motion for a change of venue as erroneous reports by newspaper and television were not prejudicial. State v. Gray, 347 N.C. 143, 491 S.E.2d 538 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1031, 118 S. Ct. 1323, 140 L. Ed. 2d 486 (1998).

Pretrial Publicity. — Standing alone, evidence of pretrial publicity does not establish a reasonable likelihood that a fair trial cannot be had. State v. Soyars, 332 N.C. 47, 418 S.E.2d 480 (1992).

Defendants must ordinarily establish specific and identifiable prejudice against them as a result of pretrial publicity. State v. Barnes, 345 N.C. 184, 481 S.E.2d 44 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 876, 118 S. Ct. 196, 139 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1024, 118 S. Ct. 1309, 140 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1998).

Where the totality of the circumstances reveals that a county's population is "infected" with prejudice against a defendant, the defendant has fulfilled his burden of showing that he would not receive a fair trial in that county. State v. Barnes, 345 N.C. 184, 481 S.E.2d 44 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 876, 118 S. Ct. 196, 139 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1024, 118 S. Ct. 1309, 140 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1998).

The fact that a codefendant's trial was transferred on account of pervasive prejudice did not show that the defendant should have been granted a change in venue or special venire owing to pretrial publicity, where codefendant's trial was after the defendant's trial, and publicity from the defendant's trial most likely created much of the prejudice against codefendants. State v. Bonnett, 348 N.C. 417, 502 S.E.2d 563 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1124, 119 S. Ct. 909, 142 L. Ed. 2d 907 (1999).

A defendant must establish specific and identifiable prejudice against him as a result of pretrial publicity by demonstrating that jurors with prior knowledge decided the case, that he exhausted his peremptory challenges, and that a juror objectionable to him sat on the jury. State v. Trull, 349 N.C. 428, 509 S.E.2d 178 (1998), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 835, 120 S. Ct. 95, 145 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1999).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — Motions for change of venue on the grounds of unfavorable publicity are addressed to the discretion of the trial judge and will not be disturbed on appeal unless a manifest abuse of such discretion is shown. State v. Boyd, 20 N.C. App. 475, 201 S.E.2d 512, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 86, 203 S.E.2d 59, cert. denied, 419 U.S. 860, 95 S. Ct. 111, 42 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1974); State v. Faircloth, 297 N.C. 100, 253 S.E.2d 890, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 874, 100 S. Ct. 156, 62 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1979); State v. Corbett, 307 N.C. 169, 297 S.E.2d 553 (1982).

A motion for change of venue is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and his ruling will not be overturned in the absence of an abuse of discretion. State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. See, 301 N.C. 388, 271 S.E.2d 282 (1980); State v. Dobbins, 306 N.C. 342, 293 S.E.2d 162 (1982); State v. Wilhelm, 59 N.C. App. 298, 296 S.E.2d 664 (1982); State v. Richardson, 59 N.C. App. 558, 297 S.E.2d 921 (1982); State v. Dellinger, 308 N.C. 288, 302 S.E.2d 194 (1983); State v. Jerrett, 309 N.C. 239, 307 S.E.2d 339 (1983); State v. Baker, 312 N.C. 34, 320 S.E.2d 670 (1984); State v. Myers, 73 N.C. App. 650, 327 S.E.2d 276, rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 308, 337 S.E.2d 581 (1985).

Motion for change of venue or for a special venire from another county on grounds of the prominence of the victim and inflammatory publicity is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and an abuse of discretion must be shown before there is any error. State v. Harrill, 289 N.C. 186, 221 S.E.2d 325, death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

A motion for change of venue or for a special venire panel is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and abuse of discretion must be shown before there is any error. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976).

A motion for change of venue on the grounds of local prejudice because of pretrial publicity is addressed to the sole discretion of the trial judge and a manifest abuse of discretion must be shown before there is any error. State v. Jackson, 30 N.C. App. 187, 226 S.E.2d 543 (1976).

The decision whether to order a change of venue or a special venire rests in the discretion of the trial judge, and his decision will not be reversed except for gross abuse, such as the denial of a constitutional right. State v. Matthews, 295 N.C. 265, 245 S.E.2d 727 (1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1128, 99 S. Ct. 1046, 59 L. Ed. 2d 90 (1979).

The determination of whether the defendant has met his burden on a motion for change of venue rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. Absent a showing of abuse of discretion, its ruling will not be overturned on appeal. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979).

Determination that there exists in the county in which the prosecution is pending so great a prejudice against the defendant that he cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion. State v. Jones, 57 N.C. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 869 (1982).

Although the evidence of pretrial publicity, most of which was favorable to defendant or factually neutral, was substantial at the time of defendant's motion for a change of venue, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in recognizing facts in support of its refusal which, ultimately, may have impacted whether the environment for defendant's trial was prejudicial; or in stating its belief that the best evidence of whether pretrial publicity was prejudicial or inflammatory was jurors' responses to voir dire questioning. State v. Wallace, 351 N.C. 481, 528 S.E.2d 326 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1018, 121 S. Ct. 581, 148 L. Ed. 2d 498 (2000).

Burden on Moving Party. — Under this statute, the burden is on the moving party to show that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case upon pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial and would be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. State v. Hill, 347 N.C. App. 275, 493 S.E.2d 264 (1997).

Burden of Showing Prejudice on Defendant. — The burden of showing "so great a prejudice against the defendant that he cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial" falls on the defendant. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976); State v. Faircloth, 297 N.C. 100, 253 S.E.2d 890, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 874, 100 S. Ct. 156, 62 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1979); State v. Sparks, 297 N.C. 314, 255 S.E.2d 373 (1979); State v. See, 301 N.C. 388, 271 S.E.2d 282 (1980); State v. Dobbins, 306 N.C. 342, 293 S.E.2d 162 (1982); State v. Corbett, 307 N.C. 169, 297 S.E.2d 553 (1982); State v. Dellinger, 308 N.C. 288, 302 S.E.2d 194 (1983); State v. Gardner, 311 N.C. 489, 319 S.E.2d 591 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1230, 105 S. Ct. 1232, 84 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1985); State v. Baker, 312 N.C. 34, 320 S.E.2d 670 (1984).

The burden of proof in a hearing on a motion for change of venue is upon the defendant. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979); State v. Jones, 57 N.C. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 869 (1982); State v. Richardson, 59 N.C. App. 558, 297 S.E.2d 921 (1982), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

Where several prospective jurors had read or heard about the case, but only one individual had heard the radio broadcast and one potential juror had seen something on television and the record was equally clear that defendant removed those veniremen who demonstrated a modicum of knowledge about the case, the defendant did not conclusively establish that he could not receive a fair and impartial trial in the county. State v. Myers, 73 N.C. App. 650, 327 S.E.2d 276, rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 308, 337 S.E.2d 581 (1985).

The burden is on the moving party to show that due to pretrial publicity there is a reasonable likelihood that defendant will not receive a fair trial. State v. Abbott, 320 N.C. 475, 358 S.E.2d 365 (1987).

The burden of proof in a hearing on a motion for a change of venue due to existing prejudice in the county in which a prosecution is pending is upon the defendant. State v. Madric, 328 N.C. 223, 400 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

The burden is on the defendant to show that pretrial publicity precluded him from receiving a fair trial and, in meeting that burden, he must show that jurors had prior knowledge concerning the case, that he exhausted peremptory challenges and that a juror objectionable to the defendant sat on the jury. State v. Piche, 102 N.C. App. 630, 403 S.E.2d 559 (1991).

Defendant failed to meet his burden of proving that pretrial publicity tainted his chances of receiving a fair and impartial trial. State v. Rose, 339 N.C. 172, 451 S.E.2d 211 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1135, 115 S. Ct. 2565, 132 L. Ed. 2d 818 (1995).

The defendant bears the burden of establishing that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case on pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial and would be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. State v. Trull, 349 N.C. 428, 509 S.E.2d 178 (1998), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 835, 120 S. Ct. 95, 145 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1999).

Defendant's Surveys Must Take Into Account Potential Jurors' Attitudes. — The evidence presented was insufficient to show infection of the jury pool so as to deprive defendant of a fair trial and require a change of venue. Defendant presented two telephone surveys which indicated that media coverage of the crimes was widespread and that a large number of persons was aware of the crimes and defendant's identity but failed to measure the prejudicial effect of the media coverage on potential jurors' attitudes toward the presumption of innocence or their ability to confine their determinations as jurors to the evidence presented in court. Although the surveys asked questions relating to the death penalty and defendant's guilt, answers to these questions were outside the context of the presumption of innocence and the juror's duty to consider only the evidence presented at trial and were not reliable evidence of bias or prejudice. State v. Wallace, 351 N.C. 481, 528 S.E.2d 326 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1018, 121 S. Ct. 581, 148 L. Ed. 2d 498 (2000).

Defendant Must Show Likelihood That Fair Trial Will Be Prevented. — In order to prevail on a motion for change of venue, the defendant must show that there is a reasonable likelihood that the prejudicial publicity complained of will prevent a fair trial. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979); State v. Jones, 57 N.C. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 869 (1982); State v. Wilhelm, 59 N.C. App. 298, 296 S.E.2d 664 (1982); State v. Richardson, 59 N.C. App. 558, 297 S.E.2d 921 (1982), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

To acquire a change of venue, defendant must prove existence of a prejudice so great that he cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial. State v. Corbett, 309 N.C. 382, 307 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

The burden of proving that a fair and impartial trial cannot be received due to pretrial publicity falls on the defendant. State v. Myers, 73 N.C. App. 650, 327 S.E.2d 276, rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 308, 337 S.E.2d 581 (1985).

The test for determining whether venue should be changed is whether, due to pretrial publicity, there is a reasonable likelihood that the defendant will not receive a fair trial. Stated otherwise, a defendant's motion for a change of venue should be granted when he establishes that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case upon pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial and would be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. State v. Moore, 319 N.C. 645, 356 S.E.2d 336 (1987).

And That Verdict Is Likely on Prior Conclusions. — The defendant in a prosecution for second degree murder, upon his motion for change of venue, was required to go forward with evidence tending to affirmatively show that prospective jurors in his case were reasonably likely to base their verdict upon conclusions induced by outside influences rather than upon conclusions induced solely by evidence and arguments presented in open court. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979); State v. Mandina, 91 N.C. App. 686, 373 S.E.2d 155 (1988).

A defendant has not borne his burden of showing that he will be denied an impartial jury solely by introducing evidence that his case has received widespread news coverage or that some prospective jurors have been exposed to such coverage and formed or expressed opinions based upon their exposure. The defendant must additionally show that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their conclusions in his case upon pretrial information rather than evidence introduced at trial and would be unable to put from their minds any previous impressions they may have formed. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979).

Where the defendant fails to show that potential jurors would base their conclusions and verdict upon pretrial publicity and preconceived impressions, he has failed to show a reasonable likelihood that pretrial publicity will prevent a fair trial even though the case has received widespread publicity and some prospective jurors have formed or expressed opinions about the case. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979).

On a motion for change of venue pursuant to this section, the defendant must show that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case upon pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial and would be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. The determination of whether the defendant has met this burden of proof rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge and his ruling will not be overturned on appeal absent a showing of gross abuse of discretion. State v. Gardner, 311 N.C. 489, 319 S.E.2d 591 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1230, 105 S. Ct. 1232, 84 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1985).

The defendant failed to meet his burden of showing that prospective jurors were tainted by pretrial information where he merely provided a broad statement from his investigator that certain unnamed witnesses were afraid to testify for the defense because they feared reprisal from other unnamed parties and where he failed to exercise all his preemptory challenges. State v. Farmer, 138 N.C. App. 127, 530 S.E.2d 584 (2000).

What Defendant Must Show to Establish That Trial Was Unfair. — A defendant, in meeting his burden of showing that pretrial publicity precluded him from receiving a fair trial, must show that jurors have prior knowledge concerning the case, that he exhausted peremptory challenges and that a juror objectionable to the defendant sat on the jury. State v. Jerrett, 309 N.C. 239, 307 S.E.2d 339 (1983).

Where a jury has been selected to try the defendant and the defendant has been tried, the defendant must prove the existence of an opinion in the mind of a juror who heard his case that will raise a presumption of partiality. State v. Madric, 328 N.C. 223, 400 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

Statements by Jurors That Pretrial Publicity Would Not Affect Verdict. — In a prosecution for second degree murder in which most of the prospective jurors stated specifically that the publicity surrounding the case would have no effect upon them and that they would base their verdict upon the evidence and give the defendant a fair trial, and the one juror who indicated he had formed a preliminary opinion concerning the case, upon further questioning, specifically stated that he could put all such opinions or predispositions from his mind and give the defendant a fair trial upon the evidence presented in open court, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for change of venue. State v. McDougald, 38 N.C. App. 244, 248 S.E.2d 72 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 413, 251 S.E.2d 472 (1979).

Motion for change of venue was properly denied where the transcript of the jury selection process reveals that while numerous jurors had heard about the case through television or newspaper accounts of the killings, only one juror had tentatively formed an opinion about defendant's guilt. This juror was immediately excused by defense counsel with the consent of the prosecutor and each juror selected to hear the case stated unequivocally that he or she would determine defendant's guilt or innocence solely on the basis of evidence introduced at trial. State v. Gardner, 311 N.C. 489, 319 S.E.2d 591 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1230, 105 S. Ct. 1232, 84 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1985).

Where each juror stated unequivocally that he could set aside what he had heard previously about a defendant's guilt and arrive at a determination based solely on the evidence presented at trial, defendant failed to establish an abuse of discretion by the trial court in refusing to grant a change of venue. State v. Soyars, 332 N.C. 47, 418 S.E.2d 480 (1992).

A murder defendant was not entitled to a change of venue or a special venire on the ground of pretrial publicity; although several jurors selected indicated that they had read or heard about the case, all but one stated that they had not formed an opinion about the case and could set aside any information, and the one juror who had formed an opinion about the defendant stated unequivocally that he could set his opinion aside and base his decision on the evidence. State v. Bonnett, 348 N.C. 417, 502 S.E.2d 563 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1124, 119 S. Ct. 909, 142 L. Ed. 2d 907 (1999).

Evidence of Existing Community Prejudice. — The best and most reliable evidence as to whether existing community prejudice will prevent a fair trial can be drawn from prospective juror's responses to questions during the jury selection process. State v. Madric, 328 N.C. 223, 400 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

Opinion Testimony as to Fair Trial Not Determinative. — Although opinion testimony of members of the community in which the defendant is to be tried as to whether the defendant can receive a fair trial may, in proper circumstances, be relevant and admissible, such evidence is not determinative on the question. State v. Madric, 328 N.C. 223, 400 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

When Motion Should Be Granted. — A motion for a change of venue should be granted when it is established that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case upon pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial and would be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. State v. Jerrett, 309 N.C. 239, 307 S.E.2d 339 (1983).

Legitimate concern of county residents in trying criminal defendants locally is not the test for determining whether venue should be changed. The test is whether, due to pretrial publicity, there is a reasonable likelihood that the defendant will not receive a fair trial. State v. Jerrett, 309 N.C. 239, 307 S.E.2d 339 (1983).

Failure to Grant Relief Where Reasonable Likelihood Shown. — If, under the evidence presented, there is a reasonable likelihood that a fair trial cannot be had, it is an abuse of discretion to fail to grant a change of venue or a special venire panel. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976); State v. Baker, 312 N.C. 34, 320 S.E.2d 670 (1984).

Where each juror stated without equivocation that she could set aside her prior opinion and try the cases solely on the evidence presented in court, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's challenges for cause of these jurors. State v. Corbett, 309 N.C. 382, 307 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

Factual News Accounts. — regarding the commission of a crime and the pretrial proceedings alone are not sufficient to establish prejudice against the defendant. State v. Dobbins, 306 N.C. 342, 293 S.E.2d 162 (1982); State v. Gardner, 311 N.C. 489, 319 S.E.2d 591 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1230, 105 S. Ct. 1232, 84 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1985).

General factual coverage of a crime is not innately prejudicial. State v. Baker, 312 N.C. 34, 320 S.E.2d 670 (1984).

Where pretrial newspaper articles were found to be factual and devoid of any prejudicial speculations or characterizations, and the record disclosed that defendant had not exhausted his peremptory challenges nor that any juror had prior knowledge of the case, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in denying defendant's motion for a change of venue. State v. Harris, 323 N.C. 112, 371 S.E.2d 689 (1988).

If the defendant shows only the publicity consists of factual, noninflammatory news stories, denial of a motion for change of venue is proper. State v. Small, 328 N.C. 175, 400 S.E.2d 413 (1991).

Factual news accounts regarding the commission of a crime and the pretrial proceedings do not of themselves warrant a change of venue. State v. Madric, 328 N.C. 223, 400 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

Defendant failed to meet his burden of proving that pretrial publicity tainted his chances of receiving a fair and impartial trial, where newspaper articles which appeared in local and state newspapers and short news segments on television were primarily factual accounts of the murder of victim and the arrest of defendant. State v. Bell, 338 N.C. 363, 450 S.E.2d 710 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1163, 115 S. Ct. 2619, 132 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1995).

Where the defendant showed only that the publicity surrounding his case consisted of factual, noninflammatory news stories published almost four years prior to his retrial, the trial court's denial of a change of venue was proper. State v. Cole, 343 N.C. 399, 471 S.E.2d 362 (1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1064, 117 S. Ct. 703, 136 L. Ed. 2d 624 (1997).

General Newspaper Coverage of Case. — Defendant's motion for change of venue was properly denied where, with the exception of the coverage of defendants' arrest, the newspaper articles alleged to be prejudicial were of a very general nature and likely to be found in any jurisdiction to which the trial might be moved, the coverage of the arrest indicated only that defendants were charged with a crime and in no way intimated defendants were guilty, and the record did not indicate that any prospective jurors had read or been influenced by the articles. State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976); State v. Jones, 57 N.C. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 869 (1982).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendants' motion for change of venue based on pretrial publicity in radio broadcasts and newspaper articles where the articles were of a general nature likely to be found in any jurisdiction to which the trial might be moved; the coverage of defendants' arrest only indicated that defendants had been charged with a crime; the articles were factual, noninflammatory, and contained for the most part information that could have been offered in evidence at defendants' trial; and no juror objected to by defendants because of pretrial publicity was seated on the jury. State v. Oliver, 302 N.C. 28, 274 S.E.2d 183 (1981).

Assault defendant claiming negative pretrial publicity on the basis of one newspaper article failed to show that trial judge abused his discretion in denying defendant's motion for change of venue; defendant failed to show that the article intimated he was guilty or that any juror was even aware of the article's existence. State v. Shubert, 102 N.C. App. 419, 402 S.E.2d 642 (1991).

Accurate News Coverage of Prior Trial. — The argument that news coverage which accurately reports the circumstances of a murder case and previous trial can be so innately conducive to the inciting of local prejudices as to require a change of venue is devoid of merit. State v. Matthews, 295 N.C. 265, 245 S.E.2d 727 (1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1128, 99 S. Ct.

1046, 59 L. Ed. 2d 90 (1979); State v. Wilhelm, 59 N.C. App. 298, 296 S.E.2d 664 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 702, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983).

Bare Allegation of General Ill Will in Community. — Where defendant presents nothing more than an allegation of general ill will in the community, there is no evidence which would support a reversal for abuse of discretion. State v. Whitaker, 43 N.C. App. 600, 259 S.E.2d 316 (1979).

Fact that the defendants in a murder case were black and the victim white is not per se grounds for a change of venue or special venire. State v. Matthews, 295 N.C. 265, 245 S.E.2d 727 (1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1128, 99 S. Ct. 1046, 59 L. Ed. 2d 90 (1979).

Failure of the trial judge to set a time certain for the presentation of evidence on defendant's motion for a change of venue did not amount to a refusal to give defendant a meaningful opportunity to be heard or to excuse his discretion where the judge indicated that he was ready to hear evidence on the defendant's motion on the day of trial, considering that the judge also said that he would reconsider the substance of the motion if problems appeared during jury selection and that the defendant showed no prejudice relating to the panel chosen. State v. Artis, 316 N.C. 507, 342 S.E.2d 847 (1986).

Proceeding to trial without ruling on defendants' motion for change of venue constituted a denial of that motion. State v. Partin, 48 N.C. App. 274, 269 S.E.2d 250, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 404, 273 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

Failure to Exhaust Peremptory Challenges. — When a defendant alleges prejudice on the basis of pretrial publicity and does not show that he exhausted his peremptory challenges, or that there were jurors who were objectionable or had prior knowledge of the case, defendant has failed to carry his burden of establishing the prejudicial effect of the pretrial publicity. State v. Dobbins, 306 N.C. 342, 293 S.E.2d 162 (1982).

As to findings of facts and the totality of the circumstances justifying trial judge to transfer venue in a sexual offense case involving children, see State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

Specific Findings of Fact. — Although the trial court did not make findings of fact in support of its order for change of venue, it is not required to do so, and in light of the detailed statements by the trial court in the record about the factors it was considering in determining the State's request for change of venue, the court did not abuse its discretion in ordering the change of venue State v. Griffin, 136 N.C. App. 531, 525 S.E.2d 793 (2000).

Denial of Motion Held Proper. — Where the record discloses that the presiding judge conducted a full inquiry, examined the press releases and the affidavits in support of the motion, and where the record fails to show that any juror objectionable to the defendant was permitted to sit on the trial panel, or that defendant had exhausted his peremptory challenges before he passed the jury, denial of the motion for change of venue was not error. State v. Harding, 291 N.C. 223, 230 S.E.2d 397 (1976); State v. Tilley, 292 N.C. 132, 232 S.E.2d 433 (1977).

In a trial for first-degree murder, where the accounts carried by the local news media did not appear to have been beyond the bounds of propriety or to have been inflammatory, the prominence of the victim did not seem to have unfairly affected the trial, and defendant failed to include in the record the voir dire examination of the jury, thereby failing to disclose that the defendant exhausted his peremptory challenges, that he had to accept any juror objectionable to him or even that any juror had prior knowledge or opinion as to this case, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial judge in denying defendant's motion for change of venue or for special venire. State v. Harrill, 289 N.C. 186, 221 S.E.2d 325, death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

Where the evidence tended to show that the sole newspaper article was confined primarily to a history of prior proceedings involving defendant, and that the "spot" newscast from a television station was critical of law-enforcement officers for their handling of the case, the trial court correctly found that defendant had failed to show that he was prejudiced by this publicity. State v. Jackson, 30 N.C. App. 187, 226 S.E.2d 543 (1976).

Without allegations and proof that the news articles were inflammatory, a trial judge acts within his discretion in denying a change of venue. State v. Richardson, 59 N.C. App. 558, 297 S.E.2d 921 (1982), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 308 N.C. 470, 302 S.E.2d 799 (1983).

Trial court did not commit error in denying defendant's motion for a change of venue or a special venire, where six of 12 jurors stated that they had not heard of the case before they came to court, and the other six said that they could decide the case based on the evidence presented and not on what they had heard of the case outside of the courtroom, and where there was no evidence of the impact of newspaper articles relating to defendant other than the evidence of their publication. State v. Abbott, 320 N.C. 474, 358 S.E.2d 365 (1987).

Where there was no evidence of the effect of news reports on the residents of the county in which the trial was held, and five jurors had no prior knowledge of the case, five had read something about it, two had heard it discussed and all stated unequivocally that they could make their decisions unaffected by anything they had heard or read, the trial court's denial of defendant's motion for a change of venue would not be disturbed. State v. Hunt, 323 N.C. 407, 373 S.E.2d 400 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1022, 110 S. Ct. 1464, 108 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1990) in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990).

Where, among other things, defendant neither alleged nor proved that information in the media was inaccurate or untrue, defendant did not demonstrate that it was likely that the jurors would improperly base their decisions on any pretrial evidence of which they were aware, he produced no evidence on the circulation of newspapers containing articles about him, there was no evidence of how the articles had impacted on the community's opinion of him, and he presented no evidence showing how the comments of a prospective jury member tainted the opinions of the other members as alleged, there was no ground for reversing the lower court's decision denying defendant's motion for change of venue. State v. Scarborough, 92 N.C. App. 422, 374 S.E.2d 620 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 542, 379 S.E.2d 857 (1989).

Where jurors who served in defendant's trial all indicated unequivocally that they would decide the case based on the evidence at trial and had not formed an impression or preconceived opinion about the guilt or innocence of the defendant, and where defendant made no other showing of identifiable prejudice, denial of defendant's motion for change of venue was not error. State v. Hunt, 325 N.C. 187, 381 S.E.2d 453 (1989).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion either by concluding that the defendant had failed to rebut the presumption of juror impartiality, or by denying the defendant's motion for a change of venue, where court asked prospective juror whether they had read or heard about defendant's case before coming to court and whether they had formed opinions which would make them partial, and where prospective jurors who stated that they had formed opinions or that they could not give defendant fair and impartial trial were summarily excused by trial court. Further, defendant excused peremptorily six of the first 12 jurors who stated that they knew nothing about the case and all five actual jurors who had heard or read about the case stated unequivocally that they formed no opinions about the case and would base their decisions solely on evidence presented at trial. State v. Madric, 328 N.C. 223, 400 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

Defendant failed to demonstrate that it is reasonably likely that the jurors based their decision upon pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial and thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for change of venue or special venire. State v. Pendergrass, 111 N.C. App. 310, 432 S.E.2d 403 (1993).

Trial court's denial of defendant's motion for a change of venue was upheld. State v. Yelverton, 334 N.C. 532, 434 S.E.2d 183 (1993).

Where, to assure a fair and impartial venire, the trial court permitted individual voir dire of prospective jurors to discuss pretrial publicity, defendant did not establish a reasonable likelihood that pretrial publicity prevented him from receiving a fair and impartial trial, and the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a change of venue. State v. Moseley, 338 N.C. 1, 449 S.E.2d 412 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1091, 115 S. Ct. 1815, 131 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1995).

While a number of the prospective jurors questioned indicated they had read or heard of the crime, and each juror who actually served on the jury stated unequivocally that he or she had formed no opinion about the case, could be fair and impartial, and would decide the issues based solely upon the evidence presented at trial, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a change of venue. State v. Bell, 338 N.C. 363, 450 S.E.2d 710 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1163, 115 S. Ct. 2619, 132 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1995).

Defendant failed to meet his burden of showing that pretrial publicity precluded him from receiving a fair and impartial trial where newspaper articles submitted in support of his motion for change of venue were factual in nature related to the facts of the crimes, defendant's arrest, his subsequent escape attempt, and a petition circulated by the family of one of the victims seeking a speedy disposition of defendant's trial; none of these articles was shown to be inflammatory or biased against defendant. State v. Gregory, 340 N.C. 365, 459 S.E.2d 638 (1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1108, 116 S. Ct. 1327, 134 L. Ed. 2d 478 (1996).

Denial of Motion Not Proper. — In light of the totality of the circumstances, ruling of the trial court that defendant had the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence to demonstrate that pretrial publicity had been so extensive and inflammatory that it would be virtually impossible or at least highly unlikely that a fair and impartial jury could be seated and drawn from the venire county jurors was error requiring a new trial. State v. Moore, 319 N.C. 645, 356 S.E.2d 336 (1987).

§ 15A-958. Motion for a special venire from another county.

Upon motion of the defendant or the State, or on its own motion, a court may issue an order for a special venire of jurors from another county if in its discretion it determines the action to be necessary to insure a fair trial. The procedure for securing this special venire is governed by G.S. 9-12. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is essentially a cross reference to § 9-12, which is left unchanged.

CASE NOTES

The test for determining whether venue should be changed is whether, due to pretrial publicity, there is a reasonable likelihood that defendant will not receive a fair trial. Stated otherwise, defendant's motion for a change of venue should be granted when he establishes that it is reasonably likely that prospective jurors would base their decision in the case upon pretrial information rather than the evidence presented at trial and would be unable to remove from their minds any preconceived impressions they might have formed. State v. Moore, 319 N.C. 645, 356 S.E.2d 336 (1987).

Pretrial Publicity by Itself Insufficient. — The existence of pretrial publicity by itself does not establish a reasonable likelihood that defendant cannot receive a fair trial in the county where the crime was committed. State v. Knight, 340 N.C. 531, 459 S.E.2d 481 (1995).

Word-of-Mouth Publicity. — Motions under this section on grounds of unfavorable, prejudicial publicity may be based on word-of-mouth publicity. There is no requirement that the publicity originate in the media. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976).

The trial court did not violate this section, § 15A-957, or § 15A-133 by ordering a special venire from another county; as the defendant never moved for a change of venue, § 15A-957 did not apply and there was no violation of § 15A-133 where the trial court ruled on the issue of venue for jury selection. Furthermore, given the nature and circumstances of the alleged crimes against two law enforcement officers and defendants' acquiescence to the stipulation and proposal at the hearing, the trial court had the inherent authority to order the change of venue for the limited purpose of jury selection. State v. Golphin, 352 N.C. 364, 533 S.E.2d 168 (2000), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1379, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1380, 149 L. Ed. 2d 305 (2001).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — Motion for change of venue or for a special venire from another county on grounds of the prominence of the victim and inflammatory publicity is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and an abuse of discretion must be shown before there is any error. State v. Harrill, 289 N.C. 186, 221 S.E.2d 325, death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

A motion for change of venue or for a special venire panel is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and abuse of discretion must be shown before there is any error. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976).

A motion for a special venire is a pretrial order, the granting or denial of which is within the trial court's sound discretion. State v. Duvall, 50 N.C. App. 684, 275 S.E.2d 842, rev'd on other grounds, 304 N.C. 557, 284 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

Abuse of Discretion. — If, under the evidence presented, there is a reasonable likelihood that a fair trial cannot be had, it is an abuse of discretion to fail to grant a change of venue or a special venire panel. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976); State v. Silhan, 297 N.C. 660, 256 S.E.2d 702 (1979).

As to error in granting State's motion for special venire after denial of earlier order, in absence of a change of circumstances, see State v. Duvall, 304 N.C. 557, 284 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

As to findings of facts and the totality of the circumstances justifying trial judge to transfer venue in a sexual offense case involving children, see State v. Chandler, 324 N.C. 172, 376 S.E.2d 728 (1989).

The potential jurors' responses to questions on voir dire are the best evidence of whether pretrial publicity was prejudicial or inflammatory; if each juror states unequivocally that he or she can set aside pretrial information about a defendant's guilt and arrive at a determination based solely on the evidence presented at trial, the trial court does not err in refusing to grant a change of venue. State v. Knight, 340 N.C. 531, 459 S.E.2d 481 (1995).

Denial of Motion Upheld. — Where all of the jurors selected to hear the case stated unequivocally that they had formed no opinions about the matter and would base their decision solely on the evidence presented, in light of such evidence, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying defendant's motion for a special venire from another county. State v. Kyle, 333 N.C. 687, 430 S.E.2d 412 (1993).

Trial court did not err in concluding that defendant failed to meet his burden of proving that pretrial publicity prevented his receiving a fair and impartial trial where each prospective juror was examined in detail during voir dire were asked whether they had heard or read about defendant's case and whether they had formed any opinions and some jurors were excluded. State v. Jaynes, 342 N.C. 249, 464 S.E.2d 448 (1995).

Denial of Motion Held Error. — In light of the totality of the circumstances, ruling of the trial court that defendant had the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence to demonstrate that pretrial publicity had been so extensive and inflammatory that it would be virtually impossible or at least highly unlikely that a fair and impartial jury could be seated and drawn from the venire county jurors was error requiring a new trial. State v. Moore, 319 N.C. 645, 356 S.E.2d 336 (1987).

§ 15A-959. Notice of defense of insanity; pretrial determination of insanity.

(a) If a defendant intends to raise the defense of insanity, he must within the time provided for the filing of pretrial motions under G.S. 15A-952 file a notice of his intention to rely on the defense of insanity. The court may for cause shown allow late filing of the notice or grant additional time to the parties to prepare for trial or make other appropriate orders.

(b) If a defendant intends to introduce expert testimony relating to a mental disease, defect, or other condition bearing upon the issue of whether he had the mental state required for the offense charged, he must within the time provided for the filing of pretrial motions under G.S. 15A-952(b) file a notice of that intention. The court may for cause shown allow late filing of the notice or grant additional time to the parties to prepare for trial or make other appropriate orders.

(c) Upon motion of the defendant and with the consent of the State the court may conduct a hearing prior to the trial with regard to the defense of insanity at the time of the offense. If the court determines that the defendant has a valid defense of insanity with regard to any criminal charge, it may dismiss that charge, with prejudice, upon making a finding to that effect. The court's denial of relief under this subsection is without prejudice to the defendant's right to rely on the defense at trial. If the motion is denied, no reference to the hearing may be made at the trial, and recorded testimony or evidence taken at the hearing is not admissible as evidence at the trial. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 25.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission recommended two new notices to be given by defendants: notice of the defense of insanity and notice of alibi. The General Assembly struck the notice of alibi provision but retained the requirement that a defendant give the State notice of the defense of insanity.

This section covers two overlapping situations. The first relates to an intention to raise the defense of insanity. The second relates to an intention to introduce expert testimony relating to mental disease, defect, or other mental state. A defendant intending to raise the defense of insanity would almost always wish to come forward with his own expert; however, there may be a number of situations where the defense of insanity itself is not technically raised but expert testimony as to mental state will be introduced to negative the defendant's culpability with respect to some element of the offense. This section would require notice in either situation.

The defendant must give the notices required in this section whether a demand is made by the solicitor or not.

CASE NOTES

Applicability. — This section does not apply to competency hearings. State v. Atkins, 349 N.C. 62, 505 S.E.2d 97 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1147, 119 S. Ct. 2025, 143 L. Ed. 2d 1036 (1999).

Notice of Alibi Not Required by Section. — In enacting this section, which requires notice of the defense of insanity, the General Assembly removed language that would have required notice of alibi as well. State v. Ross, 329 N.C. 108, 405 S.E.2d 158 (1991).

Time for Filing of Notice. — Although no reference is made in subsection (a) of this section to a specific subsection of § 15A-952, it seems clear that § 15A-952(c) covers the time within which pretrial motions must be made. State v. Johnson, 35 N.C. App. 729, 242 S.E.2d 517, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 263, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

Burden of Proof Is on Defendant. — Although doctors testified that in their opinion the defendant did not know right from wrong in regard to the acts at issue in defendant's trial for first degree murder, a police officer testified the defendant had "very normal" demeanor and that she appeared to be oriented to time and was responsive to questions; therefore, since the burden was on the defendant to prove insanity, the jury did not have to believe the expert witnesses, and the evidence supported the verdicts, it was not error to refuse to set them aside. State v. Shytle, 323 N.C. 684, 374 S.E.2d 573 (1989).

Record established as a matter of law that good cause existed for allowing late filling of the notice of defense of insanity, when on the date of trial counsel responsible for trial of the case was justifiably unavailable due to a medical emergency involving his daughter, and other counsel, who had been employed by defendant's mother, wife and sister was required to assume responsibility for the defendant's defense. State v. Nelson, 316 N.C. 350, 341 S.E.2d 561 (1986).

Proof of Insanity Where Notice Rejected as Untimely. — Under the general plea of not guilty, a defendant may prove affirmative defenses such as insanity even if his notice under subsection (a) of this section has been rejected as untimely. State v. Johnson, 35 N.C. App. 729, 242 S.E.2d 517, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 263, 245 S.E.2d 779 (1978).

Evidence of Insanity Allowed Even Though Notice Not Given. — The court committed prejudicial error in refusing to allow defendant to introduce evidence of his insanity, even though a timely notice of "intent to rely on the defense of insanity" had not been filed in accord with this section. Notwithstanding the statutory mandate, an accused may prove any affirmative defense, including insanity, under the general plea of not guilty. State v. Nelson, 76 N.C. App. 371, 333 S.E.2d 499 (1985), modified and aff'd, 316 N.C. 350, 341 S.E.2d 561 (1986).

Expert Examination of Defendant. — Where a defendant gives notice of his intent to pursue a defense of insanity, it is not only reasonable, but necessary, that the prosecution be permitted to obtain an expert examination of him. Otherwise there would be no means by which the State could confirm a well-founded claim of insanity, discover fraudulent mental defenses, or offer expert psychiatric testimony to rebut the defendant's evidence where insanity is genuinely at issue. Thus, the trial court has the authority to order such an examination as a part of its inherent power to oversee the proper administration of justice. State v. Jackson, 77 N.C. App. 491, 335 S.E.2d 903 (1985).

In cases where a criminal defendant gives notice that he will raise insanity as a defense to the charges against him, the trial court has the inherent power to require the defendant to submit to a mental examination by a state or court-appointed psychiatrist for the purpose of inquiring into his mental status at the time of the alleged offense. State v. Jackson, 77 N.C. App. 491, 335 S.E.2d 903 (1985).

Denial of Bifurcated Trial Held Proper. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying of defendant's motion for a bifurcated trial on issues of his guilt or innocence and of his insanity where motion was made on the ground that he intended to raise inconsistent defenses of self-defense and insanity where nothing in the record indicated that defendant made more than a bare assertion of an intention to claim self-defense, where there was nothing inherently inconsistent between the two defenses and where the evidence of self-defense was meager if it existed at all. State v. Ward, 301 N.C. 469, 272 S.E.2d 84 (1980).

Instruction on Burden of Proof. — The trial court's instruction that defendant had the burden of proving his defense of insanity to the "reasonable satisfaction" rather than to the "satisfaction" of the jury was favorable to defendant, since "reasonable satisfaction" imposes a lesser burden than "satisfaction." State v. Ward, 301 N.C. 469, 272 S.E.2d 84 (1980).

Instruction Where Insanity Defense Not in Fact Presented. — Where defendant filed notice of intent to raise the defense in insanity, as required by this section, and, pursuant to § 15A-1213, the judge informed prospective jurors of the possibility that defendant might rely on the affirmative defense of insanity, it was proper at the close of all the evidence for the trial judge to inform the jurors that the insanity defense indeed had not been presented in order to eliminate any idea the jury might have had that they were still to consider the defense. State v. Hart, 44 N.C. App. 479, 261 S.E.2d 250 (1980).

Instruction Misstated the Law. — Where the prosecuting attorney by his argument implied that the defendant could have pled not guilty by reason of insanity and the State would not have had to prove all the elements of the crime, this was an incorrect statement of the law. A criminal defendant may only plead not guilty, guilty or no contest; if a defendant pleads not guilty he may raise the defense of insanity by filing a pretrial motion that he intends to rely on that defense. State v. Beach, 333 N.C. 733, 430 S.E.2d 248 (1993).

Article 53.

Motion to Suppress Evidence.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

With the decision in Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 81 S. Ct. 1684, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (1961), and its progeny, objections to the introduction of various kinds of evidence by the State in criminal trials have become more and more frequent — and the issues have become more and more complicated. Ruling on a constitutional objection to admission of evidence during trial may require interrupting the course of the trial with a lengthy voir dire. Courts all over the country by the late 1960's began utilizing in many instances the pretrial motion to suppress evidence to minimize interruptions during trial. This procedure has been used in North Carolina, despite the lack of any statutory authority for it. This Article prescribes a pretrial procedure for hearing motions to suppress evidence in superior court. As criminal trials in district court are not before a jury and interruptions are not so great a problem, the proposal does not require any change in procedure in district court; it does, however, provide that pretrial motions to suppress may be heard with the consent of all parties.

Another factor affecting the Commission's decision to recommend pretrial motions to suppress is the need to give the State a right to appeal from an adverse ruling. Considerations of jeopardy required that a decision to suppress evidence precede the commencement of the trial if the State is to be afforded a right to appeal. Support for the State's right to appeal the suppression of evidence comes from many quarters. See President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice, The Challenge of Crime in a Free Society 140 (1967); A.B.A. Project on Standards for Criminal Justice, Standards Relating to Criminal Appeals § 1.4(a)(ii) (1970).

The original draft of this Article was based upon Article 710 of the New York Criminal Procedure Law, but it underwent substantial modifications in the course of the Commission's deliberations.

§ 15A-971. Definitions.

As used in this Article the following definitions apply unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

(1) Evidence. — When referring to matter in the possession of or available to a prosecutor, any tangible property or potential testimony which may be offered in evidence in a criminal action.

(2) Potential Testimony. — Information or factual knowledge of a person who is or may be available as a witness. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

CASE NOTES

Exclusive method of challenging evidence on grounds that its exclusion is constitutionally required is a motion to suppress made in compliance with the procedural requirements of this Article. State v. Jeffries, 57 N.C. App. 416, 291 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 561, 294 S.E.2d 374 (1982); State v. Harris, 71 N.C. App. 141, 321 S.E.2d 480 (1984).

This Article sets forth the exclusive method for challenging evidence on the ground that its exclusion is constitutionally required. State v.

Maccia, 311 N.C. 222, 316 S.E.2d 241 (1984).

Article places the burden on the defendant of demonstrating that he has raised his motion to suppress according to its mandate. State v. Dobson, 51 N.C. App. 445, 276 S.E.2d 480 (1981).

The defendant has the burden of showing that he has complied with the procedural requirements of this Article. State v. Maccia, 311 N.C. 222, 316 S.E.2d 241 (1984).

Failure to Meet Burden Constitutes Waiver. — The burden is on defendant to demonstrate that he has made his motion to suppress in compliance with the procedural requirements of this Article; failure to carry that burden waives the right to challenge evidence on constitutional grounds. State v. Jeffries, 57 N.C. App. 416, 291 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 561, 294 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Failure to Pursue Claims Under U.S. Const., Amend. IV in State Court Bars Federal Habeas Corpus. — Having failed to use the opportunity for litigating his claim under U.S. Const., Amend. IV in State court under this Article, the defendant was foreclosed from pursuing it on federal habeas corpus. Sallie v. North Carolina, 587 F.2d 636 (4th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 911, 99 S. Ct. 2009, 60 L. Ed. 2d 383 (1979).

Evidence of Prior Conviction. — Not only is it preferable policy to require a defendant to object to or move to suppress the admission of evidence of a prior conviction in the sentencing stage of a criminal trial, such a requirement is consistent with the general procedural rules. State v. Thompson, 309 N.C. 421, 307 S.E.2d 156 (1983).

Cited in State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980); State v. Joyner, 54 N.C. App. 129, 282 S.E.2d 520 (1981); State v. Langdon, 94 N.C. App. 354, 380 S.E.2d 388 (1989).

§ 15A-972. Motion to suppress evidence before trial in superior court in general.

When an indictment has been returned or an information has been filed in the superior court, or a defendant has been bound over for trial in superior court, a defendant who is aggrieved may move to suppress evidence in accordance with the terms of this Article. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

An early draft authorized within the Commission motions to suppress in superior court at any time after initiation of the charge in district court — even before the probable cause hearing. One result of this approach would have been to relieve district court judges of the responsibility of ruling upon complicated constitutional issues underlying many motions to suppress. (See commentary to § 15A-611 for discussion of the compromise position reached on that point.) A majority of the Commission, however, thought that the case should be technically within the superior court's jurisdiction before a motion to suppress may be made in that court. Therefore, under this Article, once the case is bound over to superior court, the motion to suppress is permitted. This section also specifies that the motion may be made upon return of an indictment or the filing of any information to take care of the rare situations in which a case is initiated in superior court without any preliminaries in district court.

The Commission discussed at length who should have standing to object to the introduction of unlawfully obtained evidence. The alternatives considered were:

(1) Eliminate the standing requirement, as has been done in California. People v. Martin, 45 Cal. 2d 755, 290 P.2d 855 (1955).

(2) Spell out in the statute the various bases for standing. See, e.g., American Law Institute, A Model Code of Pre-Arraignment Procedure — Tentative Draft No. 4, § 8.01(5) (1971).

(3) Utilize the word describing who has standing used in Rule 41(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure — that is, a person who is "aggrieved." This would give North Carolina the benefit of case law as to standing developed in the federal courts and in the courts of many other states which also use the same terminology. Although that rule relates to exclusion of evidence gained by an unlawful search and seizure, it is thought that the principles developed could be applied by analogy to other evidence subject to suppression under this Article.

As may be noted, the Commission and the General Assembly concurred in choosing alternative (3).

CASE NOTES

Article Sets Forth Exclusive Method for Suppressing Evidence. — The exclusive method of challenging evidence on grounds that its exclusion is constitutionally required is a motion to suppress made in compliance with the procedural requirements of this Article. State v. Jeffries, 57 N.C. App. 416, 291 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 561, 294 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Burden is on defendant to demonstrate that he has made his motion to suppress in compliance with the procedural requirements of this Article; failure to carry that burden waives the right to challenge evidence on constitutional grounds. State v. Jeffries, 57 N.C. App. 416, 291 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 561, 294 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Defendant has the burden of establishing that he is an "aggrieved" party before his motion to suppress will be considered. State v. Taylor, 298 N.C. 405, 259 S.E.2d 502 (1979).

When Defendant "Aggrieved". — A defendant is "aggrieved" and "may move to suppress evidence" under this section only when it appears that his personal rights, not those of some third party, may have been violated. State v. Taylor, 298 N.C. 405, 259 S.E.2d 502 (1979); State v. Sanders, 317 N.C. 602, 346 S.E.2d 451 (1986).

Defendant Held Not "Aggrieved." — The defendant was not "aggrieved," within the meaning of this section, in a prosecution for murder where he was not on the premises at the time of the search and seizure, he neither owned nor rented the shed which was searched, and possession of the shotgun shells seized was not an essential element of the offense charged. State v. Alford, 38 N.C. App. 236, 247 S.E.2d 634, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 649, 253 S.E.2d 93 (1978), cert. denied, 300 N.C. 559, 270 S.E.2d 111 (1980).

Where defendant was charged with felonious conspiracy to possess stolen property, but defendant was not present at the residence that was searched, and neither alleged nor showed any possessory or proprietary interest in either residence or any of the items seized and listed in the indictment charging him with felonious conspiracy to possess stolen property, defendant was not an aggrieved party for purposes of this section and thus lacked standing to contest a search allegedly violating his rights under U.S. Const., Amend. IV. State v. Sheppard, 42 N.C. App. 125, 256 S.E.2d 241 (1979).

One of two defendants, who at the very most had previously lived in the house and was at the time of his arrest a frequent visitor, and who was not present at the house when officers arrested the other defendant and seized his shoes, was not an "aggrieved" party as to the seizure of the shoes under this section. State v. Sanders, 317 N.C. 602, 346 S.E.2d 451 (1986).

Affidavit Must Accompany Motion to Suppress. — A motion to suppress pursuant to this section and § 15A-977, which is not accompanied by an affidavit containing facts supporting it, is not proper in form and may therefore be summarily dismissed. State v. Harris, 71 N.C. App. 141, 321 S.E.2d 480 (1984).

Applied in State v. Ford, 71 N.C. App. 805, 323 S.E.2d 358 (1984).

Cited in State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980); State v. Johnson, 304 N.C. 680, 285 S.E.2d 792 (1982).

§ 15A-973. Motion to suppress evidence in district court.

In misdemeanor prosecutions in the district court, motions to suppress evidence should ordinarily be made during the course of the trial. A motion to suppress may be made prior to trial. With the consent of the prosecutor and the district court judge, the motion may be heard prior to trial. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1; 1975, c. 166, s. 27.)

CASE NOTES

Article Sets Forth Exclusive Method for Suppressing Evidence. — The exclusive method of challenging evidence on grounds that its exclusion is constitutionally required is a motion to suppress made in compliance with the procedural requirements of this Article. State v. Jeffries, 57 N.C. App. 416, 291 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 561, 294 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Burden is on defendant to demonstrate that he has made his motion to suppress in compliance with the procedural requirements of this Article; failure to carry that burden waives the right to challenge evidence on constitutional grounds. State v. Jeffries, 57 N.C. App. 416, 291 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 561, 294 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

§ 15A-974. Exclusion or suppression of unlawfully obtained evidence.

Upon timely motion, evidence must be suppressed if:

(1) Its exclusion is required by the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of the State of North Carolina; or

(2) It is obtained as a result of a substantial violation of the provisions of this Chapter. In determining whether a violation is substantial, the court must consider all the circumstances, including:

a. The importance of the particular interest violated;

b. The extent of the deviation from lawful conduct;

c. The extent to which the violation was willful;

d. The extent to which exclusion will tend to deter future violations of this Chapter. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

An important point to note is that subdivision (1) only requires suppression of evidence if its exclusion is constitutionally required. It is possible then that evidence may be gathered in violation of constitutional rights, but suppression is not the sanction to be applied unless authoritative case law so declares. There are indications that the Burger Court will moderate some of the exclusionary rules, and this section is designed not to freeze North Carolina's statutory law into patterns set solely by current case law.

In addition to constitutionally required exclusions, the Commission believed that the State should not have the benefit of unlawfully obtained evidence when there was a "substantial" violation. The factors for judges to consider in determining whether a violation is "substantial" are set out, but it is clear that this concept will need to be developed by case law over a period of time. It seems likely that case law from other jurisdictions may also be used, as these factors, or similar ones, may be adopted elsewhere. See American Law Institute, A Model Code of Pre-Arraignment Procedure — Tentative Draft No. 4, § 8.02(2):

(2) Determination. Unless otherwise required by the Constitution of the United States or of this State, a motion to suppress evidence based upon a violation of any of the provisions of this Code shall be granted only if the court finds that such violation was substantial. In determining whether a violation is substantial the court shall consider all the circumstances, including:

"(a) the importance of the particular interest violated;

"(b) the extent of deviation from lawful conduct;

"(c) the extent to which the violation was willful;

"(d) the extent to which privacy was invaded;

"(e) the extent to which exclusion will tend to prevent violations of this Code;

"(f) whether, but for the violation, the things seized would have been discovered; and

"(g) the extent to which the violation prejudiced the moving party's ability to support his motion, or to defend himself in the proceeding in which the things seized are sought to be offered in evidence against him."

One departure made by the Commission from the New York statute and from Tentative Draft No. 4 of the A.L.I.'s Model Code was the decision to speak merely of suppression of "evidence" constitutionally required to be excluded or obtained as a result of a substantial violation of Chapter 15A. The definition of "evidence" set out in § 15A-971 is very broad, but it may not include "fruits of the poisonous tree" unless there is a constitutional requirement that such derivative evidence be excluded. The New York and A.L.I. provisions are more specific on this matter.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Constitutionally Required Exclusion.
III. Substantial Violation of Chapter.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section More Stringent Than Federal Constitution. — This section sets more stringent standards for arrest than those required by the federal Constitution and requires a wider application of the exclusionary rule to meet these statutory standards relating not only to arrest and to search and seizure, but also "substantial violation" of all other provisions of the Criminal Procedure Act. State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 237, 229 S.E.2d 63 (1976).

Former Provision Compared. — See State v. Johnson, 29 N.C. App. 698, 225 S.E.2d 650 (1976).

In determining whether this section requires suppression, the reviewing court must consider the importance of the interest violated, the extent of the deviation from lawful conduct, and whether the violation was willful, as well as the extent to which suppression will deter future violations. State v. Simpson, 320 N.C. 313, 357 S.E.2d 332 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 963, 108 S. Ct. 1230, 99 L. Ed. 2d 430 (1988).

Requirements of Motion to Dismiss. — A motion to suppress made at trial, whether oral or written, should state the legal ground upon which it is made. While an affidavit is not required for a motion timely made at trial, the defendant must, however, specify that he is making a motion to suppress and request a voir dire. State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 902, 112 S. Ct. 280, 116 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1991).

Burden of Establishing Procedural Compliance. — A defendant who seeks to suppress evidence upon a ground specified in this section must comply with the procedural requirements outlined in this Article and he has the burden of establishing that his motion to suppress is timely and proper in form. State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980); State v. Holloway, 311 N.C. 573, 319 S.E.2d 261 (1984).

The defendant has the burden of showing that he has complied with the procedural requirements of this article. State v. Holloway, 311 N.C. 573, 319 S.E.2d 261 (1984).

Failure to Comply Constitutes Waiver. — A defendant's failure to comply with the requirements of this article is a waiver of his right to suppression of evidence obtained in violation of statutory or constitutional law. State v. Holloway, 311 N.C. 573, 319 S.E.2d 261 (1984).

A defendant who fails to file an affidavit to support the general information and belief alleged in his motion waives his right to seek suppression on constitutional grounds of the evidence seized pursuant to the search warrant. State v. Holloway, 311 N.C. 573, 319 S.E.2d 261 (1984).

Untimely Motion Results in Waiver. — When the motion to suppress must be made in limine but the defendant fails to make the motion at the proper time, then he has waived his right to contest the admissibility of the evidence at trial or on appeal on constitutional grounds. State v. Tate, 300 N.C. 180, 265 S.E.2d 223 (1980).

Defendant Held Not to Have Standing. — Where victim's pocketbook was found in defendant's car and searched pursuant to a warrantless probable cause search, the contents of the pocketbook should not have been suppressed at trial since one may not object to a search or seizure of the premises or property of another because immunity to unreasonable searches and seizures is a privilege personal to those whose rights thereunder have been infringed; thus, absent ownership or possessory interest in the premises or property, a person has no standing to contest the validity of a search. State v. Greenwood, 301 N.C. 705, 273 S.E.2d 438 (1981).

Defendant could not object to the admission of evidence taken as a result of searches conducted in and around an airplane where the record showed neither that defendant was present when the airplane was searched nor that he had any protected interest in the airplane. State v. Mettrick, 54 N.C. App. 1, 283 S.E.2d 139 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 383, 289 S.E.2d 354 (1982).

Exclusion Extends to Indirect Products of Unlawful Search. — Evidence seized during an unlawful search cannot constitute proof against the victim of the search, and the exclusionary prohibition extends as well to the indirect as the direct products of such invasions. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980).

Evidence Obtained Outside Officer's Territorial Jurisdiction. — It is not fundamentally unfair nor prejudicial to a defendant that evidence is obtained by police officers outside of their territorial jurisdiction while conducting an undercover investigation. State v. Afflerback, 46 N.C. App. 344, 264 S.E.2d 784 (1980).

Nontestimonial Identification Order Held Valid. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder, the trial court's denial of defendant's motion to suppress nontestimonial identification evidence was without error where, pursuant to an order of the trial court, fingernail scrapings, samples of defendant's head and pubic hair, saliva samples, blood samples, and photographs of any wounds on defendant's body were taken; the order stated defendant's right to counsel; the State stipulated that nothing defendant said during the procedure would be offered into evidence; defendant was fully advised of his constitutional right to the presence of counsel; and the State was not in violation of any provisions under Chapter 15A, Article 14, § 15A-271 et seq., by not procuring an express waiver from defendant. State v. Temple, 302 N.C. 1, 273 S.E.2d 273 (1981).

Incriminating Statements Held Voluntary. — In a prosecution for armed robbery, defendant's incriminating statements to a bondsman were made knowingly and voluntarily where defendant testified that he was threatened with a shotgun and was struck on the head with the shotgun at the time he was taken into custody by the bondsman, the incriminating statements by defendant occurred a substantial time later during a drive to the county of trial and were made in an atmosphere of casual conversation, defendant testified that he had "shot" some drugs but that he was not under the influence of the drugs when he made the statements, and the trial judge made findings and conclusions to the effect that defendant understood all that was taking place prior to his arrest and during the trip back to the county of trial and that the bail bondsman did not use any tactics or pressure to secure a statement from defendant; thus, the bondsman's testimony could not be suppressed. State v. Perry, 50 N.C. App. 540, 274 S.E.2d 261, appeal dismissed, 302 N.C. 632, 280 S.E.2d 446 (1981).

Voluntary, Noncustodial Incriminating Statements of Mentally Ill Person. — There is no State basis for the exclusion of the noncustodial, self-initiated inculpatory statements of defendant, even though he was a paranoid schizophrenic. State v. Adams, 85 N.C. App. 200, 354 S.E.2d 338 (1987).

Subpoena Based on Invalid Search Warrant. — A court order directing defendant to produce and turn over to the State Bureau of Investigation the business and working records of his florist and gift shop was a subpoena, and evidence obtained pursuant to the subpoena order should have been excluded in defendant's arson trial where it was obtained by exploitation of an earlier illegal search and seizure pursuant to a warrant not based on probable cause. State v. Sheetz, 46 N.C. App. 641, 265 S.E.2d 914 (1980).

Typographical Error in Affidavit Supporting Search Warrant. — Although affidavit in support of search warrant made a single reference to the "the Schedule II controlled substance marijuana" instead of cocaine, the trial court determined this was a typographical error and the warrant was still valid. State v. Ledbetter, 120 N.C. App. 117, 461 S.E.2d 341 (1995).

Evidence Resulting from Lawful Arrest Subsequent to Unlawful One. — In a prosecution for murder, defendant's incriminating in-custody statement was not inadmissible as the fruit of an original unlawful arrest or pursuant to this section where the statement was not the result of the original unlawful arrest but had its origin in and was the result of a subsequent lawful arrest for a murder to which the statement related. State v. Sanders, 303 N.C. 608, 281 S.E.2d 7, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 973, 102 S. Ct. 523, 70 L. Ed. 2d 392 (1981).

Motion to Suppress Granted. — Where police broke their promise not to prosecute the defendant as a habitual offender if he confessed, on which defendant detrimentally relied in giving a confession, the defendant was entitled to suppression of his confession and a new trial. State v. Sturgill, 121 N.C. App. 629, 469 S.E.2d 557 (1996).

Motion to Suppress Properly Denied. — Where there were unnecessary delays in taking defendant before a judicial official and in advising him of his right to communicate with counsel and friends, but the defendant did not argue a causal connection between the violations of § 15A-501(2) and (5) and his incriminating statements, the trial court properly denied suppressing the statements under subsection (2) of this section. State v. Jones, 112 N.C. App. 337, 435 S.E.2d 574 (1993).

There was competent evidence to support the trial court's findings of fact that search warrant was on the premises when the police entered defendant's residence and that it was read to his fiancee before any search was undertaken in the house; the trial court did not err in concluding that the execution of the search warrant did not violate any provisions of chapter 15A and in admitting at trial the evidence obtained as a result of the search of defendant's residence. State v. Knight, 340 N.C. 531, 459 S.E.2d 481 (1995).

Where the evidence at issue was not obtained as a consequence of any violations of chapter 15A, and no causal relationship between any such violations and the evidence sought to be suppressed existed, the evidence at issue was not required to be suppressed pursuant to this statute. State v. Knight, 340 N.C. 531, 459 S.E.2d 481 (1995).

Denial of Motion to Suppress Improper. — Search of the defendant's person was conducted in violation of the right of the defendant to be free from any unreasonable searches as guaranteed by the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, the North Carolina Constitution, and this section. Accordingly, the order denying defendant's motion to suppress was reversed and the judgment entered upon defendant's plea of guilty was vacated. State v. Pittman, 111 N.C. App. 808, 433 S.E.2d 822 (1993).

II. CONSTITUTIONALLY REQUIRED EXCLUSION.

Suppression Under Subdivision (1). — Subdivision (1) of this section mandates the suppression of evidence only when the evidence sought to be suppressed is obtained in violation of defendant's constitutional rights. State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

Evidence for which exclusion is required by either the United States or the North Carolina Constitutions is a specified ground for a motion to suppress under this section. State v. Joyner, 54 N.C. App. 129, 282 S.E.2d 520 (1981), cert. denied, 304 N.C. 730, 287 S.E.2d 903 (1982).

Failure to comply with § 15A-223(b) has no constitutional significance within the meaning of subdivision (1) of this section. State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978).

Defendant's confession was not required to be suppressed by subdivision (1) despite a delay in bringing the defendant before a judicial officer in violation of § 15A-501, since no constitutionally mandated exclusionary rule barred the defendant's confession. State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978).

Where defendant was already in custody, obtaining a sample of his blood pursuant to a nontestimonial identification order under § 15A-271 et seq., absent his consent or a search warrant, violated his rights under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 20 to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures, and the evidence should have been suppressed. State v. Carter, 322 N.C. 709, 370 S.E.2d 553 (1988).

Failure to File Warrant with Clerk Did Not Require Suppression. — Although application and search warrant were not filed with clerk as required by statute, such violation did not require that the seized evidence be suppressed; the failure to timely file these documents with the clerk after the warrant was issued did not rise to the level of a constitutional violation that would require suppression under subdivision (1) of this section. State v. Marshall, 94 N.C. App. 20, 380 S.E.2d 360, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 275, 384 S.E.2d 526 (1989); State v. Golden, 96 N.C. App. 249, 385 S.E.2d 346 (1989).

Delay in Setting Bail. — Where defendant was taken before a judicial officer for the setting of bail within a reasonable time, although the magistrate may have erred at that point by referring defendant's case to another judicial officer for the setting of bail rather than setting reasonable bail himself, the error did not make defendant's temporary further confinement an unreasonable seizure or "wrongful confinement" in any constitutional sense so as to necessitate suppression of his confession. State v. Simpson, 320 N.C. 313, 357 S.E.2d 332 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 963, 108 S. Ct. 1230, 99 L. Ed. 2d 430 (1988).

Suppression Appropriate. — Where seizure was a violation of defendant's Fourth Amendment right against unreasonable searches and seizures, the evidence seized had to be suppressed. State v. Artis, 123 N.C. App. 114, 472 S.E.2d 169 (1996), cert. denied, 344 N.C. 633, 477 S.E.2d 45, cert. denied, 349 N.C. 364, — S.E.2d — (1998).

III. SUBSTANTIAL VIOLATION OF CHAPTER.

The use of the term "result" in subdivision (2) indicates that a causal relationship must exist between the violation and the acquisition of the evidence sought to be suppressed. State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978); State v. Hunter, 305 N.C. 106, 286 S.E.2d 535 (1982).

If the challenged evidence would have been obtained regardless of violation of this Chapter, such evidence has not been obtained "as a result of" such official illegality and is not, therefore, to be suppressed by reason of subdivision (2) of this section. State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978).

Minimum Requirements of Subdivision (2). — Subdivision (2) of this section requires, at a minimum, a "cause in fact" or "but-for" relationship between violations of this Chapter and the evidence objected to if such evidence is to be suppressed. In so holding, it is not decided that a mere "cause in fact" or "but-for" relationship is sufficient ipso facto to require exclusion of evidence obtained as a consequence of substantial violations of this Chapter. In certain cases, intervening circumstances might dissipate the taint of unlawfulness so that such evidence would be admissible at trial. State v. Richardson, 295 N.C. 309, 245 S.E.2d 754 (1978).

Search Must Be Unconstitutional unless Statutory Violation Substantial. — The exclusionary rule derived from Agnello v. United States, 269 U.S. 20, 46 S. Ct. 4, 70 L. Ed. 145 (1925), and Walder v. United States, 347 U.S. 62, 74 S. Ct. 354, 98 L. Ed. 503 (1954), concerning the inadmissibility for impeachment purposes of evidence unconstitutionally obtained applies, if at all, only where a search and seizure has been declared illegal for constitutional reasons. The rule would not apply in those instances where there has been a violation of the statutory procedures regulating searches and seizures contained in this Chapter, unless there has been a "substantial violation" of the statutory provisions under this section. State v. Ross, 295 N.C. 488, 246 S.E.2d 780 (1978).

Failure of affidavit to comply with § 15A-244(3) constituted a substantial violation requiring suppression of evidence seized in search, and where, additionally, there was evidence of willfulness on the part of the affiant, demonstrated by a statement in the affidavit that the suspects were under surveillance by officers from 7:15 p.m. to 10:50 p.m., where the evidence disclosed that the suspects disappeared from the view of the officers from 8:15 p.m. to 10:25 p.m. and that the affiant was aware of this break in the surveillance, the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress. State v. Hyleman, 324 N.C. 506, 379 S.E.2d 830 (1989).

Failure of an officer to comply strictly with provisions of §§ 15A-252 and 15A-254 was not a "substantial" violation of Chapter 15A within the meaning of subdivision (2) of this section. See State v. Fruitt, 35 N.C. App.

177, 241 S.E.2d 125, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 93, 244 S.E.2d 261 (1978).

Failure to Serve Warrant Properly. — Violation of § 15A-252 did not require suppression of evidence, where officers who found cocaine in the defendant's apartment merely left a copy of the search warrant in the apartment after the search, rather than giving defendant a copy of the warrant application and affidavit before the search, because the evidence was not obtained "as a result" of the officers' failure to strictly comply with the language of the statute. State v. Vick, 130 N.C. App. 207, 502 S.E.2d 871 (1998).

Failure to Execute Search Warrant. — A search warrant served within 48 hours, but not executed within 48 hours, was not invalid where the warrant was issued for the purpose of seizing bank records concerning a suspected securities fraud, and the delay was necessitated by the bank's need to locate and assemble the records. State v. Davidson, 131 N.C. App. 276, 506 S.E.2d 743 (1998).

Failure to Remind Defendant of Right to Counsel. — Given advance notice of his right to counsel in a nontestimonial identification order served on defendant three days before the withdrawal of fluid samples from defendant, any failure to remind defendant of his right to counsel prior to the taking of the fluid samples would not likely constitute a "substantial" violation of § 15A-279(d) requiring suppression of the evidence obtained. State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980).

Evidence Seized in Stop Outside Sheriff's Jurisdiction. — Even if a deputy sheriff's investigatory stop of defendant was illegal because it was made outside the limits of his territorial jurisdiction, the stop was not unconstitutional so as to require the exclusion from the evidence of a pistol seized during the stop. Furthermore, even if the stop were an arrest in terms of § 15A-402(b), this is not a substantial violation of Chapter 15A which would require exclusion of the evidence under this section. State v. Harris, 43 N.C. App. 346, 258 S.E.2d 802 (1979), appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 808, 261 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Evidence Obtained Outside Officer's Jurisdiction. — Even if the arresting officer acted outside his territorial jurisdiction in administering a breath test to the defendant, this technical violation did not constitute a substantial violation of the defendant's rights so as to require the suppression of the defendant's breath test results in his DWI prosecution. State v. Pearson, 131 N.C. App. 315, 507 S.E.2d 301 (1998).

Inapplicable to Violation of Provision Outside Chapter. — The evidence could not be suppressed under subdivision (2) of this section on the ground that the arrest was a "substantial violation" of this Chapter because the arrest by the city policeman was in violation of § 160A-286, and not this Chapter. State v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 237, 229 S.E.2d 63 (1976).

Deterrence of Future Violations. — Evidence obtained in violation of this Chapter is required to be suppressed only if it is obtained as a result of a "substantial" violation of the provisions of this Chapter. One of the critical circumstances to be considered in determining whether the violation is "substantial" is the extent to which exclusion will deter similar violations in the future. State v. Long, 37 N.C. App. 662, 246 S.E.2d 846, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 736, 248 S.E.2d 866 (1978).

Defendant failed to show that his confession had to be suppressed pursuant to this section because police investigators waited nineteen hours to take defendant before a magistrate after his arrest, took him to the Law Enforcement Center (LEC) for questioning prior to his appearance before a magistrate, and waited three and a half hours after questioning began before advising him of his Miranda rights where his confession was not a result of the delay; his confession necessarily took a lot of time because it involved nine murders; the police accommodated his request to sleep, and he was advised of his rights at the outset. State v. Wallace, 351 N.C. 481, 528 S.E.2d 326 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1018, 121 S. Ct. 581, 148 L. Ed. 2d 498 (2000).

Search of Military Base. — Any violation of this Chapter occasioned by searches on military bases pursuant to proper military authority will not be deemed "substantial" within the meaning of this section since the exclusion of evidence seized in such circumstances would not in any way deter similar searches and seizures in the future. State v. Long, 37 N.C. App. 662, 246 S.E.2d 846, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 736, 248 S.E.2d 866 (1978).

Construction of this section in such a manner as to hold the actions of members of the United States Air Force not to constitute "substantial" violations of the statutes, if they constitute violations of any type, has the added benefit of avoiding undue conflicts among the components of our federalism. State v. Long, 37 N.C. App. 662, 246 S.E.2d 846, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 736, 248 S.E.2d 866 (1978).

Denial of Bail in Violation of § 15A-511(e). — Assuming, arguendo, that magistrate denied bail in violation of § 15A-511(e), trial court was not required to suppress a voluntary confession given thereafter by defendant. State v. Simpson, 320 N.C. 313, 357 S.E.2d 332 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 963, 108 S. Ct. 1230, 99 L. Ed. 2d 430 (1988).

§ 15A-975. Motion to suppress evidence in superior court prior to trial and during trial.

(a) In superior court, the defendant may move to suppress evidence only prior to trial unless the defendant did not have reasonable opportunity to make the motion before trial or unless a motion to suppress is allowed during trial under subsection (b) or (c).

(b) A motion to suppress may be made for the first time during trial when the State has failed to notify the defendant's counsel or, if he has none, the defendant, sooner than 20 working days before trial, of its intention to use the evidence, and the evidence is:

(1) Evidence of a statement made by a defendant;

(2) Evidence obtained by virtue of a search without a search warrant; or

(3) Evidence obtained as a result of search with a search warrant when the defendant was not present at the time of the execution of the search warrant.

(c) If, after a pretrial determination and denial of the motion, the judge is satisfied, upon a showing by the defendant, that additional pertinent facts have been discovered by the defendant which he could not have discovered with reasonable diligence before the determination of the motion, he may permit the defendant to renew the motion before the trial or, if not possible because of the time of discovery of alleged new facts, during trial.

When a misdemeanor is appealed by the defendant for trial de novo in superior court, the State need not give the notice required by this section. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) states the general rule that motions to suppress must be made before trial. Exceptions are allowed:

(1) When the defendant did not have a reasonable opportunity to make the motion before trial.

(2) In the case of statements of the defendant and evidence from certain types of searches if the State fails to give approximately a month's advance notice (20 working days).

(3) After a motion to suppress has been denied, upon the discovery of additional facts bearing upon the issue which could not have been discovered with reasonable diligence prior to trial.

Under subsection (c), if the new evidence is discovered prior to trial, the defendant must reopen his motion to suppress before the trial begins.

The final sentence of the section was somewhat misplaced in the course of amendment in the General Assembly. It indicates that the advance notice in search and confession cases is not required when misdemeanors are tried de novo in superior court. Presumably the State would have already utilized, or have attempted to utilize, the evidence in the trial in district court, and notice would be unnecessary. Therefore, the general rule would apply: Any motion to suppress would have to be made before trial unless some other exception pertained in that case.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Motions First Made at Trial.
III. Additional Pertinent Facts.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Failure to comply with this section can result in summary denial of the motion. State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

As a general rule, motions to suppress must be made before trial. State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980).

Effect of Failure to Make Pretrial Motion. — When no exception to making the motion to suppress before trial applies, failure to make the pretrial motion to suppress waives any right to contest the admissibility of the evidence at trial on constitutional grounds. State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979); State v. Maccia, 311 N.C. 222, 316 S.E.2d 241 (1984).

When none of the exceptions to making the pretrial motion to suppress applies, failure to make the pretrial motion pursuant to statute constitutes a waiver by defendant of his objections to the admission of the evidence. State v. Harris, 71 N.C. App. 141, 321 S.E.2d 480 (1984).

Untimely Motion Results in Waiver. — When the motion to suppress must be made in limine but the defendant fails to make the motion at the proper time, then he has waived his right to contest the admissibility of the evidence at trial or on appeal on constitutional grounds. State v. Tate, 300 N.C. 180, 265 S.E.2d 223 (1980).

As Do General Objections. — This Article not only requires the defendant to raise his motion to suppress the evidence according to its mandate, but also places the burden on the defendant to demonstrate that he has done so. Thus, where the record reflects only general objections to the admission of the evidence obtained in a search, the defendants have waived any right to challenge the evidence on constitutional grounds. State v. Drakeford, 37 N.C. App. 340, 246 S.E.2d 55 (1978).

To challenge the admissibility of in-court identification testimony defendant is required to interpose at least a general objection when such evidence is offered, in addition to filing a pretrial motion to suppress evidence. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

A pretrial motion to suppress identification evidence which the trial judge has not heard and ordinarily will not hear until it is offered at trial will not suffice to challenge the admissibility of in-court identification testimony. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

Voir Dire Not Required Absent Objection When Such Evidence Offered. — Absent an objection to in-court identification testimony when such evidence is offered, or a request for a voir dire to probe the competency of the proffered evidence, the trial judge is not required to conduct a voir dire, make findings of fact and determine whether the proffered testimony meets the test of admissibility. State v. Wilson, 289 N.C. 531, 223 S.E.2d 311 (1976).

When Failure to Hold Voir Dire Is Harmless. — The general rule in this State is that the failure of the trial court to hold a voir dire examination and make findings of fact upon objection by a defendant to an in-court identification, while not approved, will be deemed harmless error where the record shows that the pretrial identification was proper or that the in-court identification of defendant had an origin independent from the pretrial identification. State v. Jordan, 49 N.C. App. 561, 272 S.E.2d 405 (1980).

Trial court's failure to conduct a voir dire in order to determine the admissibility of in-court identification testimony allegedly tainted by a suggestive pretrial photographic line-up was error; however, assuming, arguendo, that the photographic line-up was impermissibly suggestive, the presence of clear and convincing evidence of the independent origin of the identification, rendered the trial court's failure to conduct a voir dire harmless. State v. Butler, 331 N.C. 227, 415 S.E.2d 719 (1992).

Confessions. — When there is an objection to the admission of a confession or a motion to suppress a confession, counsel must specifically state to the court before voir dire evidence is received the basis for his motion to suppress or for his objection to the admission of the evidence. State v. Hunter, 305 N.C. 106, 286 S.E.2d 535 (1982).

Failure of Trial Judge to Rule Formally. — Ordinarily a party is entitled to a timely ruling on an objection to evidence. However, the failure to rule formally does not generally rise to the level of reversible error unless it is accompanied by other conduct of the trial judge evincing an opinion on the merits. State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

Where, following voir dire hearing on defendant's motion at trial to suppress victim's in-court identification, the court recalled the jury while the witness was on the stand and allowed the State to proceed, the record clearly reflected the court's decision to deny defendant's motion, and the court's subsequent filing of written order out of session did not so prejudice defendant as to require a new trial. State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

Failure of Trial Judge to Allow Motion to Suppress. — Where the trial court barely allowed defendant to state his motion to suppress and denied defendant any opportunity to state his grounds or present evidence in support of his motion, defendant was not only denied his constitutional rights, but also his statutory right to make a motion to suppress under this section. State v. Battle, 136 N.C. App. 781, 525 S.E.2d 850 (2000).

Waiver of Challenge to Admissibility Not Shown. — Where although defendant's attorney received copies of laboratory reports on samples, and therefore had notice that the State had such evidence, he never received any notice that the State intended to use the evidence, one of the exceptions to the general rule set forth in this section applied, and defendant did not waive his right to contest the admissibility of the test results in question. State v. Fisher, 321 N.C. 19, 361 S.E.2d 551 (1987).

Applied in State v. Hill, 294 N.C. 320, 240 S.E.2d 794 (1978); State v. Nelson, 298 N.C. 573, 260 S.E.2d 629 (1979); State v. Sheppard, 42 N.C. App. 125, 256 S.E.2d 241 (1979); State v. Maccia, 311 N.C. 222, 316 S.E.2d 241 (1984); State v. Edwards, 89 N.C. App. 529, 366 S.E.2d 520 (1988); State v. Marshall, 92 N.C. App. 398, 374 S.E.2d 874 (1988); State v. Lynch, 94 N.C. App. 472, 409 S.E.2d 704 (1991); State v. Austin, 111 N.C. App. 590, 432 S.E.2d 881 (1993).

App. 377, 413 S.E.2d 586 (1992).

II. MOTIONS FIRST MADE AT TRIAL.

Requirements for Motion Made at Trial. — Statement of the Court of Appeals in State v. Simmons, 59 N.C.App. 287, 290, 296 S.E.2d 805, 808 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 701, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983) in interpreting State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 625, 268 S.E.2d 510, 514 (1980), that a motion without such a supporting affidavit may be summarily denied, is overruled. State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600 (1991).

A defendant may move to suppress evidence at trial only if he demonstrates that he did not have a reasonable opportunity to make the motion before trial; or that the State did not give him sufficient advance notice (20 working days) of its intention to use certain types of evidence; or that additional facts have been discovered after a pretrial determination and denial of the motion which could not have been discovered with reasonable diligence before determination of the motion. State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980).

Motion to suppress evidence must be made before trial unless (1) defendant did not have a reasonable opportunity to make the motion before trial; or (2) defendant is allowed to make the motion during the trial because he did not receive timely notice of the State's intention to use such evidence; or (3) defendant is allowed to make the motion during the trial after a pretrial determination and denial of the motion and a later showing that additional facts pertinent to the motion have been discovered by defendant which he could not have reasonably discovered before pretrial denial of the motion. State v. Conard, 54 N.C. App. 243, 282 S.E.2d 501 (1981).

The Court of Appeals, in interpreting State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 625, 268 S.E.2d 510, 514 (1980) stated: "A motion without such a supporting affidavit may be summarily denied." State v. Simmons, 59 N.C.App. 287, 290, 296 S.E.2d 805, 808 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 701, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983). This aspect of Simmons is overruled. State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 902, 112 S. Ct. 280, 116 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1991).

To the extent that State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 625, 268 S.E.2d 510, 514 (1980) suggests a requirement for an affidavit when the motion to suppress is made at trial, it is hereby disapproved. State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 902, 112 S. Ct. 280, 116 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1991).

A motion to suppress made at trial, whether oral or written, should state the legal ground upon which it is made. While an affidavit is not required for a motion timely made at trial, the defendant must, however, specify that he is making a motion to suppress and request a voir dire. State v. Roper, 328 N.C. 337, 402 S.E.2d 600, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 902, 112 S. Ct. 280, 116 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1991).

III. ADDITIONAL PERTINENT FACTS.

Subsection (c) of this section clearly requires a showing of previously undiscovered facts to renew a motion to suppress evidence. State v. Moose, 101 N.C. App. 59, 398 S.E.2d 898 (1990), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 575, 403 S.E.2d 519 (1991).

Corroborative Evidence Not Additional Pertinent Fact. — Where defendant testified at a hearing on a motion to suppress his confession that he was under the influence of drugs and was drowsy at the time he confessed, an officer testified defendant was alert when he confessed, and the trial judge found that defendant was not under the influence of drugs when he made his confession, the trial court did not err in refusing to conduct a new suppression hearing because of newly discovered evidence when one of the robbery victims testified at trial that he saw defendant at the police station and he appeared sleepy, since such testimony only corroborated evidence already before the court and was not an "additional pertinent fact" within the meaning of subsection (c) of this section. State v. Bracey, 303 N.C. 112, 277 S.E.2d 390 (1981).

Two Paragraphs from Supplemental Report Not Additional Pertinent Facts. — Trial court did not err in refusing to hear a renewed motion to suppress evidence found in search, where defendant asserted that he was entitled to another hearing because of newly discovered evidence and where the "new evidence" was a two paragraph excerpt from the arresting officer's "Supplemental Report" that had been withheld from defendant; the two paragraphs were not "additional pertinent facts" that had any bearing on defendant's motion to suppress, since all of the information in these paragraphs was brought out through testimony of the officers at the pre-trial suppression hearing. State v. Marshall, 94 N.C. App. 20, 380 S.E.2d 360, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 275, 384 S.E.2d 526 (1989).

Fabricated "Anonymous Tip." — Where the original determination and denial of defendant's motion to suppress in the North Carolina Supreme Court relied upon the assumption that tip to police was anonymous, but in his supplemental motion, defendant presented evidence that the "anonymous tip" was fabricated by police, defendant's new evidence was pertinent; thus, denial of his motion to suppress was overruled. State v. Watkins, 120 N.C. App. 804, 463 S.E.2d 802 (1995), cert. granted, 343 N.C. 127, 467 S.E.2d 898 (1995).

§ 15A-976. Timing of pretrial suppression motion and hearing.

(a) A motion to suppress evidence in superior court may be made at any time prior to trial except as provided in subsection (b).

(b) If the State gives notice not later than 20 working days before trial of its intention to use evidence and if the evidence is of a type listed in G.S. 15A-975(b), the defendant may move to suppress the evidence only if its motion is made not later than 10 working days following receipt of the notice from the State.

(c) When the motion is made before trial, the judge in his discretion may hear the motion before trial, on the date set for arraignment, on the date set for trial before a jury is impaneled, or during trial. He may rule on the motion before trial or reserve judgment until trial. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) indicates that a motion which is required to be made prior to trial may be made at any time beforehand unless the special provisions of subsection (b) apply. The Article does not define when a trial "begins," but it is clear that the motion must be made before the jury is empaneled, as that is when jeopardy attaches.

Subsection (b) keys in with § 15A-975(b). If a prosecutor is alert enough to give the notice under that section at least 20 working days in advance of the trial, he can then compel the defendant to make his motion to suppress well before the trial date. This would allow careful handling of complex constitutional issues that may be present in search and confession cases.

Subsection (c) gives the judge complete discretion as to when he will hear a motion. Presumably in a close case involving a crucial evidence he would not wait until after the trial has commenced to hear the motion or rule upon it, as this would have the effect of denying the State's right to appeal an adverse ruling.

Legal Periodicals. — For article discussing impeachment of the defendant-witness and use of the motion in limine as a measure of protection, see 13 N.C. Cent. L.J. 35 (1981).

CASE NOTES

Motion to Suppress Held Timely. — Defendant's second motion to suppress, filed on the day defendant's case was calendared for trial, but prior to jury selection, was timely.

State v. Langdon, 94 N.C. App. 354, 380 S.E.2d 388 (1989).

Discretion of Court. — The trial court did not err in failing to rule on the defendant's motion to suppress before trial, where the court later ruled in the defendant's favor, and, had the court ruled on the motion before trial, it could have summarily dismissed it for the defendant's failure to file an affidavit or written motion. State v. Love, 131 N.C. App. 350, 507 S.E.2d 577 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 586, 516 S.E.2d 382 (1999).

Cited in State v. Seagle, 96 N.C. App. 318, 385 S.E.2d 532 (1989).

§ 15A-977. Motion to suppress evidence in superior court; procedure.

(a) A motion to suppress evidence in superior court made before trial must be in writing and a copy of the motion must be served upon the State. The motion must state the grounds upon which it is made. The motion must be accompanied by an affidavit containing facts supporting the motion. The affidavit may be based upon personal knowledge, or upon information and belief, if the source of the information and the basis for the belief are stated. The State may file an answer denying or admitting any of the allegations. A copy of the answer must be served on the defendant's counsel, or on the defendant if he has no counsel.

(b) The judge must summarily grant the motion to suppress evidence if:

(1) The motion complies with the requirements of subsection (a), it states grounds which require exclusion of the evidence, and the State concedes the truth of allegations of fact which support the motion; or

(2) The State stipulates that the evidence sought to be suppressed will not be offered in evidence in any criminal action or proceeding against the defendant.

(c) The judge may summarily deny the motion to suppress evidence if:

(1) The motion does not allege a legal basis for the motion; or

(2) The affidavit does not as a matter of law support the ground alleged.

(d) If the motion is not determined summarily the judge must make the determination after a hearing and finding of facts. Testimony at the hearing must be under oath.

(e) A motion to suppress made during trial may be made in writing or orally and may be determined in the same manner as when made before trial. The hearing, if held, must be out of the presence of the jury.

(f) The judge must set forth in the record his findings of facts and conclusions of law. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is structured to produce in as many cases as possible a summary granting or denial of the motion to suppress. The defendant must file an affidavit as to the facts with his motion, and the State may file an answer denying or admitting facts alleged in the affidavit. If the motion cannot be otherwise disposed of, subsection (d) provides for a hearing at which testimony under oath will be given. Section 15A-976(c) would allow the hearing to be set for the day of the trial if this would be the time most convenient for the witnesses.

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — This section does no more than shift to the defendant the burden of going forward with evidence when the State's warrants appear to be regular. The State still has the burden of proving that the evidence was lawfully obtained. Accordingly, this section is constitutional. State v. Gibson, 32 N.C. App. 584, 233 S.E.2d 84 (1977).

Rule Structured to Encourage Summary Decisions. — The official commentary to this section states that the rule "is structured to produce in as many cases as possible a summary granting or denial of the motion to suppress." The rule as such was intended to facilitate the work of trial courts, expediting decision of motions to suppress and framing the evidentiary questions in the event of a hearing. Holloway v. Woodard, 655 F. Supp. 1245 (W.D.N.C. 1987).

Affidavit Must Accompany Motion to Suppress. — A motion to suppress pursuant to § 15A-972 and this section, which is not accompanied by an affidavit containing facts supporting it, is not proper in form and may therefore be summarily dismissed. State v. Harris, 71 N.C. App. 141, 321 S.E.2d 480 (1984).

This section requires that the affidavit be filed with the motion to suppress before trial. Defendant's motion to amend, made during the trial, was not timely. There was no abuse of discretion in the court's denial of the motion. State v. Harris, 71 N.C. App. 141, 321 S.E.2d 480 (1984).

Where defendant failed to include an affidavit containing facts to support his motion to suppress, defendant waived the right to seek suppression of evidence seized pursuant to a search warrant. State v. Creason, 123 N.C. App. 495, 473 S.E.2d 771 (1996), aff'd, 346 N.C. 165, 484 S.E.2d 525 (1997).

In order for the defendant to suppress breath test results in his prosecution for DWI, his motion to suppress was required to be accompanied by an affidavit. State v. Pearson, 131 N.C. App. 315, 507 S.E.2d 301 (1998).

Affidavit Requirement Does Not Constitute Self-Incrimination. — Subsection (a) of this section requires an affidavit, but requiring the affidavit does not amount to compelling defendant to be a witness against himself in a criminal case in violation of U.S. Const., Amend. V and N.C. Const., Art. I, § 23. State v. Gibson, 32 N.C. App. 584, 233 S.E.2d 84 (1977).

Requirement of Attachment of Affidavit to Motion Upheld. — The North Carolina rule, under which a motion to suppress wrongfully seized evidence must be filed with an attached affidavit stating the facts upon which that motion is based, is legitimate on its face. Holloway v. Woodard, 655 F. Supp. 1245 (W.D.N.C. 1987).

Subsection (a) does not violate former Canon 4 of the Code of Professional Responsibility; it does not require an attorney to reveal information told to him in confidence by his client. The decision to file the affidavit and attempt to suppress the evidence remains with the defendant. If he consents to disclosure, Canon 4 is not violated. State v. Gibson, 32 N.C. App. 584, 233 S.E.2d 84 (1977).

Requirements for Filing Affidavit. — A defendant moving to suppress evidence is not compelled to file her own affidavit, but can stand silent if he or she so desires. State v. Chance, 130 N.C. App. 107, 502 S.E.2d 22 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 366, 525 S.E.2d 180 (1998).

Affidavit in support of a motion to suppress evidence was sufficient to meet the requirements of this section, where the affidavit was attested to by the attorney upon information and belief rather than by the defendant personally. State v. Chance, 130 N.C. App. 107, 502 S.E.2d 22 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 366, 525 S.E.2d 180 (1998).

And does not conflict with § 8-54, which says that a defendant is a competent witness in a criminal trial only if he takes the stand "at his own request." State v. Gibson, 32 N.C. App. 584, 233 S.E.2d 84 (1977).

Requirements of a Motion to Suppress Made at Trial. — A motion to suppress made at trial, whether oral or written, should state the legal ground upon which it is made and should be accompanied by an affidavit containing facts supporting the motion and if the motion fails to allege a legal or factual basis for suppressing the evidence, it may be summarily dismissed by the trial judge. State v. Satterfield, 300 N.C. 621, 268 S.E.2d 510 (1980).

General Objections Are Insufficient. — This Article not only requires the defendant to raise his motion to suppress the evidence according to its mandate, but also places the burden on the defendant to demonstrate that he has done so. Thus, where the record reflects only general objections to the admission of the evidence obtained in a search, the defendants have waived any right to challenge the evidence on constitutional grounds. State v.

Drakeford, 37 N.C. App. 340, 246 S.E.2d 55 (1978).

Where there was no finding by the trial court that the defendant had reasonable opportunity to move to suppress the evidence within the statutory time limit, and there was no indication in the record as to whether a motion to suppress was made at any time by the defendant, the Court of Appeals was unable to determine whether the defendant presented his objection in a timely fashion and in suitable form. The record reflecting only general objections to the admission of the evidence, the defendants waived any right to challenge the evidence on constitutional grounds. State v. Drakeford, 37 N.C. App. 340, 246 S.E.2d 55 (1978).

Discretion to Summarily Deny Motion. — The decision to deny summarily a motion which fails to set forth adequate legal grounds is vested in the sound discretion of the trial court. The alternative is to hold a hearing on the motion, despite the facial insufficiency of the motion itself. State v. Harvey, 78 N.C. App. 235, 336 S.E.2d 857 (1985).

Where pretrial motion to suppress meets the procedural requirements of this Article, it is not subject to summary determination. State v. Cheek, 307 N.C. 552, 299 S.E.2d 633 (1983).

When a pretrial motion to suppress is not subject to summary determination under subsections (b) and (c) of this section, the trial judge must conduct a hearing, make findings of fact and conclusions of law and set forth his findings and conclusions in the record. At this hearing, held in the absence of the jury, the burden is upon the State to demonstrate the admissibility of the challenged evidence; and, in the case of a confession, the State must affirmatively show (1) the confession was voluntarily made, (2) the defendant was fully informed of his rights and (3) the defendant voluntarily waived his rights. To do this the State must persuade the trial judge, sitting as the trier of fact, by a preponderance of the evidence that the facts upon which it relies to sustain admissibility and which are at issue are true. State v. Cheek, 307 N.C. 552, 299 S.E.2d 633 (1983).

A motion to suppress is not subject to a summary denial where the defendant has alleged a legal basis for the motion and has provided a supporting affidavit; if the motion is not determined summarily the judge must make the determination after a hearing and finding of facts. State v. Kirkland, 119 N.C. App. 185, 457 S.E.2d 766 (1995), cert. denied, 341 N.C. 654, 462 S.E.2d 521 (1995), aff'd per curiam, 342 N.C. 891, 467 S.E.2d 242 (1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 875, 117 S. Ct. 195, 136 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1996).

Motions Held Not Subject to Summary Denial. — Defendant's motions to suppress in-court identification were not subject to summary denial, where they alleged a legal basis for the motions (competency of the evidence), were supported by proper affidavits which support the basis, and were uncontradicted by answer or denial of the State, and even in the absence of a request for the same, defendant was entitled to a voir dire hearing to determine the admissibility of the identification testimony. State v. Breeden, 306 N.C. 533, 293 S.E.2d 788 (1982).

Hearing Held Where Motion Not Summarily Denied. — Once the discretionary decision is made not to deny summarily a motion which fails to set forth adequate legal grounds, a hearing must be held at which the burden will be on the State to demonstrate the admissibility of the challenged evidence. State v. Harvey, 78 N.C. App. 235, 336 S.E.2d 857 (1985).

Evidence concerning the administration of a polygraph test may be admissible in the absence of the jury on a voir dire hearing to determine the admissibility of a confession. State v. Harris, 315 N.C. 556, 340 S.E.2d 383 (1986).

A search warrant is presumed to be valid unless irregularity appears on its face. If defendants have evidence to rebut the presumption of validity of the warrant, it is their obligation to go forward with their evidence. That evidence must be presented at a hearing. State v. Dorsey, 60 N.C. App. 595, 299 S.E.2d 282, appeal dismissed, 308 N.C. 192, 302 S.E.2d 245 (1983).

Defendant's mere denial of the existence of the State's confidential informant failed to rebut the presumed validity of search warrant. Therefore, the trial judge was correct in summarily denying defendant's motion to suppress the evidence seized pursuant to the warrant and in denying defendant's request for an evidentiary hearing as to the good faith of the officer's affidavit in support of the warrant. State v. Locklear, 84 N.C. App. 637, 353 S.E.2d 666 (1987).

Hearing with Informant Not Required. — Motion that court adopt a rule requiring a trial judge, upon a defendant's motion, to conduct an in-camera hearing with the informant when a defendant challenges the good faith of an affiant to a search warrant would be denied. State v. Locklear, 84 N.C. App. 637, 353 S.E.2d 666 (1987).

Failure of Trial Judge to Rule Formally. — Ordinarily a party is entitled to a timely ruling on an objection to evidence. However, the failure to rule formally does not generally rise to the level of reversible error unless it is accompanied by other conduct of the trial judge evincing an opinion on the merits. State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

Where, following voir dire hearing on defendant's motion at trial to suppress victim's in-court identification, the court recalled the jury while the witness was on the stand and allowed the State to proceed, the record clearly reflected the court's decision to deny defendant's motion, and the court's subsequent filing of written order out of session did not so prejudice defendant as to require a new trial. State v. Hicks, 79 N.C. App. 599, 339 S.E.2d 806 (1986).

Defendant did not waive his right to contest admissibility of statements by him by failing to comply with procedural requirements of this section that motion to suppress evidence must contain legal basis where trial judge exercised his discretion not to summarily deny motion and immediately proceeded to conduct voir dire relating to the admissibility of the defendant's statements. State v. Marshall, 92 N.C. App. 398, 374 S.E.2d 874 (1988), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 273, 400 S.E.2d 459 (1991).

Where defendant's initial motion to suppress was unverified and not accompanied by an affidavit as required by statute, the motion was subject to being summarily denied, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying such motion. State v. Langdon, 94 N.C. App. 354, 380 S.E.2d 388 (1989).

Unsupported Allegation of Bad Faith. — Where defendant's second motion to suppress questioned affiant's good faith but her affidavit in support of the motion merely attempted to point out factual inaccuracies in officers' application for search warrant, defendant's affidavit failed to support the additional allegation contained in her motion, and the motion was subject to being denied under subsection (c) of this section. State v. Langdon, 94 N.C. App. 354, 380 S.E.2d 388 (1989).

Unsupported Allegation of Reasonable Expectation of Privacy. — Where defendant's motion alleged, as a basis for suppressing matchbox and its contents, that law enforcement officers had, without his consent, made a warrantless search of an area outside his house, but in his affidavit, defendant stated that he did not exercise dominion over the area in which the matchbox was found, defendant's affidavit did not support the alleged ground for suppression, as defendant did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the area searched. State v. Williams, 98 N.C. App. 405, 390 S.E.2d 729 (1990), overruled on other grounds, State v. Pipkins, 337 N.C. 431, 446 S.E.2d 360 (1994).

II. FINDINGS OF FACT.

Judge is the finder of fact at the hearing on a motion to suppress evidence and must make written findings of fact and conclusions of law. State v. Grogan, 40 N.C. App. 371, 253 S.E.2d 20 (1979).

Where the trial judge makes his determination on a motion to suppress after a hearing, he must set forth in the record his findings of fact and conclusions of law. Such findings and conclusions are required in order that there may be a meaningful appellate review of the decision. State v. Horner, 310 N.C. 274, 311 S.E.2d 281 (1984).

When Findings of Fact Required. — When the competency of evidence is challenged and the trial judge conducts a voir dire to determine admissibility, the general rule is that he should make findings of fact to show the basis of his ruling. State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980).

If there is a material conflict on the evidence on voir dire conducted pursuant to this section, the trial judge must make findings of fact to show the basis of his ruling in order to resolve the conflict. State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980).

When Findings of Fact Not Required. — Where defendant's affidavit failed to support the motion to suppress, the court properly denied the motion summarily, without making findings of fact; additionally, findings of fact are not required where there is no conflict in the evidence at the suppression hearing. State v. Smith, 50 N.C. App. 188, 272 S.E.2d 621 (1980).

As a general rule, after a hearing on a motion to suppress the evidence the trial court must make written findings of fact and conclusions of law. Specific findings of fact are not required, however, where there is no material conflict in the evidence presented at the suppression hearing. State v. Parks, 77 N.C. App. 778, 336 S.E.2d 424 (1985), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 316 N.C. 384, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

Where there is no material conflict in the evidence, findings and conclusions are not necessary, even though the better practice is to find facts. State v. Edwards, 85 N.C. App. 145, 354 S.E.2d 344, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 172, 358 S.E.2d 58 (1987).

When there is no material conflict in the evidence presented on a motion to suppress evidence, the trial judge may admit the challenged evidence without specific findings of fact, although findings of fact are preferred. In that event, the necessary findings are implied from the admission of the challenged evidence. State v. Norman, 100 N.C. App. 660, 397 S.E.2d 647 (1990).

Since probable cause existed to search defendant's vehicle for narcotics, evidence as to his consent was not relevant, and the trial court's failure to make findings and conclusion on defendant's motion to suppress was not prejudicial error. State v. Earhart, 134 N.C. App. 130, 516 S.E.2d 883 (1999), appeal dismissed, 351 N.C. 112, 540 S.E.2d 372 (1999).

If there is no material conflict in the evidence on voir dire, it is not error to admit the challenged evidence without making specific findings of fact, although it is always the better practice to find all facts upon which the admissibility of the evidence depends. State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980).

Although it is a good practice to make findings of fact, if there is no material conflict in the evidence, it is not error to admit the evidence without making specific findings of fact. State v. Wilhelm, 59 N.C. App. 298, 296 S.E.2d 664 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 702, 301 S.E.2d 395 (1983).

While both subsections (d) and (f) of this section require the trial judge to make findings of fact after conducting a hearing on a motion to suppress evidence, there is an exception to the general rule where there is no material conflict in the evidence on voir dire, and it is not error to admit the challenged evidence without making specific findings of fact, although it is always the better practice to find all facts upon which the admissibility of the evidence depends. In that event, the necessary findings are implied from the admission of the challenged evidence. State v. Tate, 58 N.C. App. 494, 294 S.E.2d 16, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 750, 295 S.E.2d 763 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 464, 298 S.E.2d 386 (1983).

What Findings of Fact Must Include. — Subsection (f) of this section requires a judge to make findings of fact and conclusions of law when there is a motion to suppress. Such findings of fact must include findings on the issue of voluntariness. When the evidence is conflicting, the findings of fact must be sufficient to provide a basis for the judge's ruling. State v. Barfield, 298 N.C. 306, 259 S.E.2d 510 (1979), cert. denied, 448 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 3050, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1137, rehearing denied, 448 U.S. 918, 101 S. Ct. 41, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1181 (1980).

Findings of fact by the trial court judge are conclusive if they are supported by competent evidence. State v. Barfield, 298 N.C. 306, 259 S.E.2d 510 (1979), cert. denied, 448 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 3050, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1137, rehearing denied, 448 U.S. 918, 101 S. Ct. 41, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1181 (1980).

The trial court must determine whether the state has borne its burden of showing by a preponderance of the evidence that defendant's confession was voluntary. The preponderance of the evidence test is not, however, to be applied by the appellate court in reviewing the findings of the trial court. The findings of the trial court are conclusive and binding upon the appellate court if supported by substantial competent evidence. State v. James, 321 N.C. 676, 365 S.E.2d 579 (1988).

Where the waiver of rights form was read to defendant both in English and in Vietnamese, defendant was asked if he understood his rights and answered "yes" in English and at no time did defendant indicate that he did not understand the questions, was the findings of fact that defendant's statement was voluntary were supported by competent evidence and were conclusive. State v. Brown, 335 N.C. 477, 439 S.E.2d 589 (1994).

Findings of fact made by the trial court are conclusive and binding upon appellate courts if supported by competent evidence. State v. Jordan, 120 N.C. App. 364, 462 S.E.2d 234, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 342 N.C. 416, 465 S.E.2d 546 (1995).

Findings Binding on Appellate Courts. — Subsection (f) requires that the trial court make findings of fact and conclusions of law when ruling upon a motion to suppress; these findings of fact are conclusive and binding upon appellate courts if supported by competent evidence. State v. Rogers, 124 N.C. App. 364, 477 S.E.2d 221 (1996).

This section does not require that findings be made in writing at the time of the ruling. State v. Horner, 310 N.C. 274, 311 S.E.2d 281 (1984).

Where defendant did not show prejudice from the failure of the trial court to make findings at the time that the rulings on motion to suppress were made his assignment of error is meritless. State v. Horner, 310 N.C. 274, 311 S.E.2d 281 (1984).

§ 15A-978. Motion to suppress evidence in superior court or district court; challenge of probable cause supporting search on grounds of truthfulness; when identity of informant must be disclosed.

(a) A defendant may contest the validity of a search warrant and the admissibility of evidence obtained thereunder by contesting the truthfulness of the testimony showing probable cause for its issuance. The defendant may contest the truthfulness of the testimony by cross-examination or by offering evidence. For the purposes of this section, truthful testimony is testimony which reports in good faith the circumstances relied on to establish probable cause.

(b) In any proceeding on a motion to suppress evidence pursuant to this section in which the truthfulness of the testimony presented to establish probable cause is contested and the testimony includes a report of information furnished by an informant whose identity is not disclosed in the testimony, the defendant is entitled to be informed of the informant's identity unless:

(1) The evidence sought to be suppressed was seized by authority of a search warrant or incident to an arrest with warrant; or

(2) There is corroboration of the informant's existence independent of the testimony in question.

The provisions of subdivisions (b)(1) and (b)(2) do not apply to situations in which disclosure of an informant's identity is required by controlling constitutional decisions.

(c) This section does not limit the right of a defendant to contest the truthfulness of testimony offered in support of a search made without a warrant. (1973, c. 1286, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is derived from American Law Institute, Model Code of Pre-Arraignment Procedure — Tentative Draft No. 4 § 8.03 (1971).

The basic question presented is this: Suppose an informer supplies false information to a law-enforcement officer; the officer believes the information and uses it in good faith to obtain a search warrant; the magistrate believes the officer and finds probable cause; the information if true, along with other facts available to the officer, would indeed constitute probable cause and the warrant is valid on its face; a search is made under the authority of the warrant, and by chance evidence of a crime is discovered despite the underlying falsity of the informer's information — should the evidence obtained with the warrant be excluded? The answer provided by subsection (a) is "no." The A.L.I. commentary to § 8.03 states the following:

"The draft embodies the conclusion that the testimony given in support of probable cause should be subject to challenge on the ground that it was untruthful in the sense that it was not given in good faith, but not on the ground that it was objectively inaccurate due to honest mistake. When the witness (usually an officer) has given hearsay evidence by reporting what he had been told by an informant, the Council's conclusion, reached by a vote of 18 to 6, was that the truth of the hearsay evidence so reported should not be open to challenge, as long as the officer's report of the hearsay evidence was an honest report.

"The Reporters are not in agreement with the last conclusion. It has the result of immunizing the hearsay from, while subjecting the direct testimony to, contradiction, and under such a rule the police have everything to lose and nothing to gain from producing the informants directly to the magistrate, whereas the thrust of policy should be the other way. . . ."

One important factor in the Commission's determination to go along with the Council of the American Law Institute is its belief that the use of a warrant is to be encouraged. Subsection (c) is intended to make it clear that attacks upon the validity of probable cause for a search without a warrant are left to case law development. If for example, an officer made an emergency search without a warrant in good-faith reliance upon a false report from an informer, but inadvertently uncovered evidence of a crime, the rule laid down in subsection (a) should not be treated as giving even analogous guidance to the courts in deciding whether such a search is valid.

Subsection (b) treats the thorny problem of revealing the identity of an informer. Subdivision (1) embodies the Commission's preference for actions taken under a warrant. Subdivision (2) is intended to state the general trend of the case law on this point. It should be noted that as introduced subdivision (2) required substantial corroboration of the informant's existence and reliability. The General Assembly was persuaded to amend primarily upon the argument that the minimum standard will be set by case law construing constitutional requirements and that the Commission's wording possibly sets a higher standard than is absolutely required — or may later be required under rulings of the Burger Court.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former law.

Challenge to Good Faith of Affiant. — Subsection (a) of this section permits a defendant to challenge the validity of a search warrant by attacking the good faith of the affiant in providing information relied upon to establish probable cause. State v. Marshall, 94 N.C. App. 20, 380 S.E.2d 360, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 275, 384 S.E.2d 526 (1989).

Hearing Required. — When a defendant makes allegations that an affidavit to support the issuance of a search warrant contains deliberate falsehood or reckless disregard for the truth and the affidavit would not be sufficient to support the issuance of a search warrant without the false or reckless statements, the defendant is entitled to a hearing on his allegations. State v. Barnes, 333 N.C. 666, 430 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 946, 114 S. Ct. 387, 126 L. Ed. 2d 336 (1993).

Bad Faith Required. — A claim is not established merely by evidence that contradicts assertions contained in the affidavit, or even that shows the affidavit contains false statements; rather, the evidence must establish facts from which the finder of fact might conclude that the affiant alleged the facts in bad faith. State v. Fernandez, 346 N.C. 1, 484 S.E.2d 350 (1997).

Unsupported Allegation of Bad Faith. — Where defendant's second motion to suppress questioned affiant's good faith but her affidavit in support of the motion merely attempted to point out factual inaccuracies in officers' application for search warrant, defendant's affidavit failed to support the additional allegation contained in her motion, and the motion was subject to being denied under § 15A-977(c). State v. Langdon, 94 N.C. App. 354, 380 S.E.2d 388 (1989).

Variance Between Affidavit and Report. — Variance between affidavit, which stated that informant had been inside house, and officers' supplemental report, did not show that the officers were acting in bad faith when they provided sworn information to the magistrate. State v. Marshall, 94 N.C. App. 20, 380 S.E.2d 360, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 275, 384 S.E.2d 526 (1989).

Question Presented by Motion. — When a defendant moves to suppress evidence obtained by a search warrant upon the ground that there was no probable cause for issuance of the search warrant, the inquiry before the court is whether the issuance of the warrant comports with the statute and whether the issuing officer was justified in finding probable cause. State v. Logan, 18 N.C. App. 557, 197 S.E.2d 238 (1973), appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 666, 207 S.E.2d 752 (1974), overruled on other grounds, State v. Harris, 25 N.C. App. 404, 213 S.E.2d 414 (1975).

No Probable Cause Where Statements False. — False statements in a search warrant affidavit required suppression of the evidence obtained in a search, because probable cause was not supported once the false statements were stricken from the affidavit. State v. Severn, 130 N.C. App. 319, 502 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

Good Faith And Probable Cause Found. — The officers applying for the search warrant acted in good faith and it was issued based on a sufficient showing of probable cause. They did not overly rely on the fact that victim's bloody body was discovered on the same day that defendant was arrested on a different charge wearing blood-stained clothing or on the finding of glass particles on defendant's clothing which could have, but did not, come from the victim's door, nor did they misrepresent those facts to the magistrate. State v. Steen, 352 N.C. 227, 536 S.E.2d 1 (2000), cert denied, — U.S. —, 121 S. Ct. 1131, 148 L. Ed. 2d 997 (2001).

Denial of Motion Where Information Sufficient to Establish Probable Cause. — Where there was sufficient information in the affidavit, upon which search warrant issued, to establish probable cause that illegal drug activity and drug paraphernalia would be found on the premises to be searched, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress the evidence. State v. Cummings, 113 N.C. App. 368, 438 S.E.2d 453 (1994), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 336 N.C. 75, 445 S.E.2d 39 (1994).

Scope of Challenge Under Subsection (a). — Subsection (a) of this section permits a defendant to challenge only whether the affiant acted in good faith in including the information used to establish probable cause; it does not permit a defendant to attack the factual accuracy of the information supplied by an informant to the affiant. In re Caver, 40 N.C. App. 264, 252 S.E.2d 284 (1979).
