Preface

This volume contains the general laws of a permanent nature enacted by the General Assembly through the 2001 Regular Session that are within Chapters 31A through 48, and brings to date the annotations included therein.

A majority of the Session Laws are made effective upon becoming law, but a few provide for stated effective dates. If the Session Law makes no provision for an effective date, the law becomes effective under G.S. 120-20 "from and after 60 days after the adjournment of the session" in which passed.

A ready reference index is included at the back of this volume. This index is intended to give the user a quick reference to larger bodies of statutes within this volume only. For detailed research on any subject, both within this volume and the General Statutes as a whole, see the General Index to the General Statutes.

Beginning with formal opinions issued by the North Carolina Attorney General on July 1, 1969, selected opinions which construe a specific statute are cited in the annotations to that statute. For a copy of an opinion or of its headnotes, write the Attorney General, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

This recompiled volume has been prepared and published under the supervision of the Department of Justice of the State of North Carolina. The members of the North Carolina Bar are requested to communicate any suggestions they may have for improving the General Statutes to the Department, or to LexisNexis, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Chapter 31A.

Acts Barring Property Rights.

Article 1.

Rights of Spouse.

§ 31A-1. Acts barring rights of spouse.

(a) The following persons shall lose the rights specified in subsection (b) of this section:

(1) A spouse from whom or by whom an absolute divorce or marriage annulment has been obtained or from whom a divorce from bed and board has been obtained; or

(2) A spouse who voluntarily separates from the other spouse and lives in adultery and such has not been condoned; or

(3) A spouse who wilfully and without just cause abandons and refuses to live with the other spouse and is not living with the other spouse at the time of such spouse's death; or

(4) A spouse who obtains a divorce the validity of which is not recognized under the laws of this State; or

(5) A spouse who knowingly contracts a bigamous marriage.

(b) The rights lost as specified in subsection (a) of this section shall be as follows:

(1) All rights of intestate succession in the estate of the other spouse;

(2) All right to claim or succeed to a homestead in the real property of the other spouse;

(3) All right to petition for an elective share of the estate of the other spouse and take either the elective intestate share provided or the life interest in lieu thereof;

(4) All right to any year's allowance in the personal property of the other spouse;

(5) All right to administer the estate of the other spouse; and

(6) Any rights or interests in the property of the other spouse which by a settlement before or after marriage were settled upon the offending spouse solely in consideration of the marriage.

(c) Any act specified in subsection (a) of this section may be pleaded in bar of any action or proceeding for the recovery of such rights, interests or estate as set forth in subsection (b) of this section.

(d) The spouse not at fault may sell and convey his or her real and personal property without the joinder of the other spouse, and thereby bar the other spouse of all right, title and interest therein in the following instances:

(1) During the continuance of a separation arising from a divorce from bed and board as specified in subsection (a)(1) of this section, or

(2) During the continuance of a separation arising from adultery as specified in subsection (a)(2) of this section, or during the continuance of a separation arising from an abandonment as specified in subsection (a)(3) of this section, or

(3) When a divorce is granted as specified in subsection (a)(4) of this section, or a bigamous marriage contracted as specified in subsection (a)(5) of this section. (1961, c. 210, s. 1; 1965, c. 850; 2000-178, s. 6.)

Cross References. — As to right of elective share, see § 30-3.1 et seq.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-178, s. 6, effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date, in subdivision (b)(3), substituted "petition for an elective share of the estate" for "dissent from the will" and inserted "elective."

Legal Periodicals. — For article discussing this Chapter, section by section, see 40 N.C.L. Rev. 175 (1962).

For note on forfeitures of property rights by slayers, see 12 Wake Forest L. Rev. 448 (1976).

CASE NOTES

History. — See Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 62 N.C. App. 506, 303 S.E.2d 415 (1983), aff'd, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

Legislative Intent. — See Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 62 N.C. App. 506, 303 S.E.2d 415 (1983), aff'd, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

The apparent purpose of the full statute is to bar the benefits of certain types of property rights and interests otherwise accruing to a person but for his wrongful acts or a divorce or annulment. Taylor v. Taylor, 321 N.C. 244, 362 S.E.2d 542 (1987).

Right to Take under Will Not Forfeited by Abandonment. — The right of the widow to take under her husband's will that which he saw fit to bequeath or devise to her is not among the rights which this section declares forfeited by her abandonment of him. Abbott v. Abbott, 269 N.C. 579, 153 S.E.2d 39 (1967).

Divorce Does Not Annul or Revoke Designation of Insurance Beneficiary. — Neither § 50-11 which provides that "all rights arising out of the marriage shall cease and determine," nor this section which bars rights to "any rights or interests in the property of the other spouse" discloses a legislative intent that divorce should annul or revoke the beneficiary designation in a garden-variety insurance certificate. DeVane v. Travelers Ins. Co., 8 N.C. App. 247, 174 S.E.2d 146 (1970).

Presumption of Adultery. — Adultery is presumed if the following can be shown: (1) the adulterous disposition, or inclination, of the parties; and (2) the opportunity created to satisfy their mutual adulterous inclinations. In re Trogdon, 330 N.C. 143, 409 S.E.2d 897 (1991).

Wife's Behavior as Inference of Adultery. — A married woman's refusal to testify about the nature of her relationship with two unmarried men, with whom she admitted cohabiting, and her failure to refute the charge of adultery logically gave rise to an inference of adultery. In re Trogdon, 330 N.C. 143, 409 S.E.2d 897 (1991).

"Living in Adultery." — Considering the legislative history and the purpose of this section, "living in adultery" means a spouse engages in repeated acts of adultery within a reasonable period of time preceding the death of her spouse; therefore, "living in adultery" requires a showing of something more than "committing adultery," or a single act of adultery, and something less than "residing" in adultery because the latter construction would permit spouses to engage in habitual adultery with those with whom they do not reside and nevertheless be qualified to administer their decedent spouse's estate under section 28A-6-1. In re Estate of Montgomery, 137 N.C. App. 564, 528 S.E.2d 618 (2000).

Subdivision (b)(6) is inapplicable to separation agreements entered into by parties contemplating a separation or divorce from a valid marriage. Taylor v. Taylor, 321 N.C. 244, 362 S.E.2d 542 (1987).

Negligence Is Not Ground for Forfeiture. — The surviving spouse does not lose his right of inheritance because the claim arose on account of the negligence of the surviving spouse since negligence is not one of the grounds for forfeiture of marital rights as set out in this section. Wilson v. Miller, 20 N.C. App. 156, 201 S.E.2d 55 (1973).

Failure to Provide Support Tantamount to Abandonment. — Where the husband made his wife leave, or where she had to leave because he would not give her anything to eat, it was held that his conduct amounted to abandonment. High v. Bailey, 107 N.C. 70, 12 S.E. 45 (1890), construing former § 28-12.

Summary judgment was appropriate for the defendant under this section where the evidence failed to support a finding of willful abandonment of the deceased, and that any failure to care for, or cohabit with, her was due to the advanced age and deteriorating health of both spouses. Meares v. Jernigan, 138 N.C. App. 318, 530 S.E.2d 883 (2000).

Proceeding to set aside invalid divorce decree is not barred by death of one of the spouses where property rights are involved. Allred v. Tucci, 85 N.C. App. 138, 354 S.E.2d 291, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 166, 358 S.E.2d 47 (1987).

Article 2.

Parents.

§ 31A-2. Acts barring rights of parents.

Any parent who has wilfully abandoned the care and maintenance of his or her child shall lose all right to intestate succession in any part of the child's estate and all right to administer the estate of the child, except —

(1) Where the abandoning parent resumed its care and maintenance at least one year prior to the death of the child and continued the same until its death; or

(2) Where a parent has been deprived of the custody of his or her child under an order of a court of competent jurisdiction and the parent has substantially complied with all orders of the court requiring contribution to the support of the child. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on forfeitures of property rights by slayers, see 12 Wake Forest L. Rev. 448 (1976).

CASE NOTES

Intestate Succession Act Modified by Chapter. — When the legislature, in § 28A-18-2, provided that the proceeds of an action for wrongful death "shall be disposed of as provided in the Intestate Succession Act," and when it provided in § 97-40 that the order of priority among claimants to death benefits payable under the Workers' Compensation Act "shall be governed by the general law applicable to the distribution of the personal estate of persons dying intestate," it had in mind the same law; i.e., the Intestate Succession Act as modified by this Chapter, entitled, "Acts Barring Property Rights." Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

Section Also Modifies § 29-15(3). — This section must be deemed a part of the Intestate Succession Act and a modification of § 29-15(3), as fully as if it had been written thereinto or specifically designated as an amendment thereto. Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

Meaning of Abandonment. — Abandonment is defined as any willful or intentional conduct on the part of the parent which evinces a settled purpose to forego all parental duties and relinquish all parental claims to the child. Lessard v. Lessard, 77 N.C. App. 97, 334 S.E.2d 475 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 546, 342 S.E.2d 522 (1986).

Applicability to Estate of Adult Child. — This section applies to the estate of any son or daughter of an individual, even after that child has reached the age of majority. In re Estate of Lunsford, 143 N.C. App. 646, 547 S.E.2d 483 (2001), cert. granted, 353 N.C. 727, 550 S.E.2d 779 (2001).

Abandonment has been defined as willful neglect and refusal to perform the natural and legal obligations of parental care and support; if a parent withholds his presence, his love, his care, and the opportunity to display filial affection, and willfully neglects to lend support and maintenance, such parent relinquishes all parental claims and abandons the child. Lessard v. Lessard, 77 N.C. App. 97, 334 S.E.2d 475 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 546, 342 S.E.2d 522 (1986).

Willful intent is an integral part of abandonment and this is a question of fact to be determined from the evidence. Lessard v. Lessard, 77 N.C. App. 97, 334 S.E.2d 475 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 546, 342 S.E.2d 522 (1986).

Abandoning Parent Does Not Share Death Benefits under § 97-38. — Where the father wilfully abandoned the care and maintenance of the deceased during the latter's minority, this section provides that the father loses all right to intestate succession in the distribution of the personal estate of his intestate deceased child and consequently, he does not share in the death benefits for which the employer or its carrier is liable under § 97-38. Smith v. Allied Exterminators, Inc., 279 N.C. 583, 184 S.E.2d 296 (1971).

Or Wrongful Death Proceeds. — This section acts to preclude a parent who comes within its provisions from sharing in wrongful death proceeds. Williford v. Williford, 26 N.C. App. 61, 214 S.E.2d 787, aff'd, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975); Lessard v. Lessard, 77 N.C. App. 97, 334 S.E.2d 475 (1985), aff'd, Havee v. Belk, 775 F.2d 1209 (4th Cir. 1985).

Plaintiff father, having abandoned the deceased when the latter was a minor child, could not share in the proceeds of the settlement of the claim for wrongful death now in the hands of the administratrix. Williford v. Williford, 288 N.C. 506, 219 S.E.2d 220 (1975).

Abandonment Found. — Where respondent/mother never provided child support for her daughters, rarely visited them, and voluntarily relinquished custody a year before a divorce judgment, a jury could conclude that she had abandoned her daughters. Hixson v. Krebs, 136 N.C. App. 183, 523 S.E.2d 684 (1999).

A father abandoned his daughter and, therefore, could not inherit from her, where he paid no more than $ 100 toward her support after the divorce and visited her less than a dozen times over a 17-year period. In re Estate of Lunsford, 143 N.C. App. 646, 547 S.E.2d 483 (2001), cert. granted, 353 N.C. 727, 550 S.E.2d 779 (2001).

Cited in Lessard v. Lessard, 68 N.C. App. 760, 316 S.E.2d 96 (1984).

Article 3.

Willful and Unlawful Killing of Decedent.

§ 31A-3. Definitions.

As used in this Article, unless the context otherwise requires, the term —

(1) "Decedent" means the person whose life is taken by the slayer as defined in subdivision (3).

(2) "Property" means any real or personal property and any right or interest therein.

(3) "Slayer" means

a. Any person who by a court of competent jurisdiction shall have been convicted as a principal or accessory before the fact of the willful and unlawful killing of another person; or

b. Any person who shall have entered a plea of guilty in open court as a principal or accessory before the fact of the willful and unlawful killing of another person; or

c. Any person who, upon indictment or information as a principal or accessory before the fact of the willful and unlawful killing of another person, shall have tendered a plea of nolo contendere which was accepted by the court and judgment entered thereon; or

d. Any person who shall have been found in a civil action or proceeding brought within one year after the death of the decedent to have willfully and unlawfully killed the decedent or procured his killing, and who shall have died or committed suicide before having been tried for the offense and before the settlement of the estate. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the beneficiary's rights to the proceeds of an insurance policy when he takes the life of the insured, see 54 N.C.L. Rev. 1085 (1976).

For note on forfeitures of property rights by slayers, see 12 Wake Forest L. Rev. 448 (1976).

CASE NOTES

The public policy sought to be fostered by the enactment of this Article is predicated upon the theory that the murderer himself will not profit by his own wrongdoing; however, this principle does not extend to those related to the slayer. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 62 N.C. App. 506, 303 S.E.2d 415 (1983), aff'd, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

As to legislative history of subdivision (3)a, see Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

This Article, the "slayer statute," applies only to felonious killings; it does not prevent the common law doctrine that no person will be allowed to profit from his own wrong from being applied in actions not under its provisions. In re Estate of Cox, 97 N.C. App. 312, 388 S.E.2d 199 (1990).

"Willful" as used in subdivision (3)a refers to an "intentional" homicide. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

The crime of involuntary manslaughter is not a "willful" killing within the meaning of subdivision (3)a. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

A person who has been convicted of involuntary manslaughter of another has not been convicted of a "willful" killing within the meaning of subdivision (3)a and thus is not a slayer who is barred by this Chapter from receiving the proceeds of a life insurance policy on the life of the deceased. Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

Proof of conviction of involuntary manslaughter does not, per se, disqualify defendant from receiving the insurance proceeds under § 31A-11. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

Subdivision (3)a envisions a conviction of unlawful homicide. Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

Which Is a Felony. — See Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

Finding by Court Was Not Conviction. — The finding made by a district court judge that "this child did willfully and with malice aforethought murder his mother and father" did not constitute a conviction as envisioned by subdivision (3)a; therefore, the "barring" provisions of this Chapter did not apply. Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

Acquittal of Murder Avoids Forfeiture. — A plea by widow that she has been acquitted of the murder of her husband states a complete defense to the claim that she has forfeited her property rights as his widow. McMichael v. Proctor, 243 N.C. 479, 91 S.E.2d 231 (1956), decided under former § 28-10.

Section 31A-13 has no applicability where the alleged wrongdoer has not been determined a "slayer" within the purview of subdivision (3). Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

But Common Law Barred Person Found Responsible by Preponderance of Evidence from Receiving Insurance Proceeds. — Although plaintiff did not fit the statutory definition of "slayer" under subdivision (3) of this section because she had not been convicted of killing deceased, she was nonetheless barred by the common law from receiving the proceeds of deceased's life insurance, where the jury found by a preponderance of the evidence that she had killed him or procured his death. Jones v. All Am. Life Ins. Co., 68 N.C. App. 582, 316 S.E.2d 122 (1984), aff'd, 312 N.C. 725, 325 S.E.2d 237 (1985).

Failure to Proceed Within One Year. — Plaintiff's failure to proceed under the slayer statute within one year did not bar him from attempting to show that intestate's culpable negligence proximately contributed to the deaths of the decedents and that her estate could not profit from those wrongs. Lynch v. Newsom, 96 N.C. App. 53, 384 S.E.2d 284, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 48, 389 S.E.2d 90 (1990).

Summary Judgment Improper. — Trial court committed reversible error in granting motion for summary judgment in favor of wife, where wife sought to collect insurance proceeds from her husbands death, although she stabbed him to death. State Farm Life Ins. Co. v. Allison, 128 N.C. App. 74, 493 S.E.2d 329 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 584, 502 S.E.2d 616 (1998).

(1976); Jones v. All Am. Life Ins. Co., 312 N.C. 725, 325 S.E.2d 237 (1985).

Cited in State v. Misenheimer, 304 N.C. 108, 282 S.E.2d 791 (1981); Mothershed v. Schrimsher, 105 N.C. App. 209, 412 S.E.2d 123 (1992).

§ 31A-4. Slayer barred from testate or intestate succession and other rights.

The slayer shall be deemed to have died immediately prior to the death of the decedent and the following rules shall apply:

(1) The slayer shall not acquire any property or receive any benefit from the estate of the decedent by testate or intestate succession or by common law or statutory right as surviving spouse of the decedent.

(2) Where the decedent dies intestate as to property which would have passed to the slayer by intestate succession and the slayer has living issue who would have been entitled to an interest in the property if the slayer had predeceased the decedent, the property shall be distributed to such issue, per stirpes. If the slayer does not have such issue, then the property shall be distributed as though the slayer had predeceased the decedent.

(3) Where the decedent dies testate as to property which would have passed to the slayer pursuant to the will, the devolution of such property shall be governed by G.S. 31-42(a) notwithstanding the fact the slayer has not actually died before the decedent. (1961, c. 210, s. 1; 1999-296, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on forfeitures of property rights by slayers, see 12 Wake Forest L. Rev. 448 (1976).

CASE NOTES

The slayer statute applies in conjunction with the anti-lapse statute, § 31-42. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 62 N.C. App. 506, 303 S.E.2d 415 (1983), aff'd, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

Estate of Decedent Determined at Date of Her Actual Death. — This section makes no attempt artificially to alter the date of the death of the decedent but provides instead that the actual date of death of the slayer is to be disregarded. Therefore, if the language of the statute is followed, the estate of the decedent is determined at the date of her actual death, and the law calls the roll of the class immediately as of that time; those who can then answer, take. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

This section provides in part that, for purposes of distributing the estate of the decedent, "the slayer shall be deemed to have died immediately prior to the death of the decedent." In view of this express statutory presumption, it is clear that the words "the estate of the wife" as the same were used in former § 31A-5(2) meant the estate of the murdered wife as the same came into existence at the instant of her death, and the title to the entireties property at that moment passed to those persons who would be entitled to succeed to her interest in such property as of the moment of her death if she had in fact survived her husband, subject only to recognized right to "hold" the property during his lifetime. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

Presumption in Subdivision (3) Equivalent to Actual Death. — It was the intent of the General Assembly that the presumption in subdivision (3) of this section be equivalent to actual death for all purposes of determining the disposition of property of the testator. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Slayer's Legacy Distributed in Accord with § 31-42(a). — Because of the failure of a slayer's legacy, the property that would have gone to him under the will had he not been convicted of killing the testator must be distributed in accord with § 31-42(a). Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Order of Death Not Established for Purposes of Distributing Slayer's Estate. — The clause in this section which deems the slayer to have predeceased the victim does not establish the order of death between the slayer and the victim for purposes of distributing the slayer's estate. Mothershed v. Schrimsher, 105 N.C. App. 209, 412 S.E.2d 123 (1992).

Section Does Not Authorize Victim's Participation in Estate. — The plain language of this section clearly bars the slayer from participating in the victim's estate; however, it does not authorize the victim to participate in the slayer's estate; that may or may not occur. Mothershed v. Schrimsher, 105 N.C. App. 209, 412 S.E.2d 123 (1992).

Section Merely Establishes Presumption to Exclude Slayer. — This section does not indulge the fiction that the slayer's date of death is other than the actual date of death, but merely establishes a presumption to exclude the slayer. Mothershed v. Schrimsher, 105 N.C. App. 209, 412 S.E.2d 123 (1992).

Where slayer's two children are alive and would have been heirs of testator had he died intestate, slayer's failed legacy must pass by substitution to them in accordance with § 31-42(a). Because of the conclusive presumption in subdivision (3) of this section that the slayer predeceased the testator, § 31-42(a), not § 31-42(c)(2), applies. Misenheimer v. Misenheimer, 312 N.C. 692, 325 S.E.2d 195, rehearing denied, 313 N.C. 515, 334 S.E.2d 778 (1985).

Where a husband has taken out a policy of life insurance on his own life with his wife as beneficiary and has feloniously killed his wife and then himself, under this section (former § 28-10), his heirs may not claim under him the proceeds of the policy, since the law will not allow a man or those claiming under him to benefit by his own wrong, and the proceeds of the policy are descendible to the next of kin of the wife and not to the husband's heirs at law. Parker v. Potter, 200 N.C. 348, 157 S.E. 68 (1931).

Heir Murdering Ancestor Excluded from Beneficial Interest in Estate. — The fact that this (former § 28-10) and other sections forfeiting a murder's interest in the estate of his victim apply only to the relation of husband and wife does not deprive equity of the power of excluding an heir who has murdered his ancestor from all beneficial interest in the estate of his victim. Garner v. Phillips, 229 N.C. 160, 47 S.E.2d 845 (1948). For suggested revisal of this section and related statutes, see 26 N.C.L. Rev. 232.

Wrongful Act Bars Husband from Share of Wrongful Death Recovery. — In an action by an administrator under the Wrongful Death Act where a husband caused the death of his wife, the award must be reduced by the statutory share of the wrongdoer. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Lack, 476 F.2d 583 (4th Cir. 1973).

This result is not precluded by this section, which excludes the wrongdoer from taking by declaring him to have constructively died prior to the deceased, since the slayer's exclusion by this section appears to apply only to inheritance from the decedent's "estate," while wrongful death awards have consistently been deemed not to pass through the personal estate of the deceased, but rather to arise out of a right of action belonging peculiarly to the personal representative for the benefit of the intestate successors. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Lack, 476 F.2d 583 (4th Cir. 1973).

Where the slayer and decedent hold property as tenants by the entirety, one half of the property shall pass upon the death of the decedent to the decedent's estate, and the other one half shall be held by the slayer during his or her life, subject to pass upon the slayer's death to the slain decedent's heirs or devisees as defined in G.S. 28A-1-1. (1961, c. 210, s. 1; 1979, c. 572.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on tenancy by the entirety in North Carolina, see 59 N.C.L. Rev. 997 (1980).

CASE NOTES

This section is not unconstitutional. Since tenancy by the entirety is a purely voluntary method of acquiring and retaining realty, there is no discriminatory State action in violation of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Homanich v. Miller, 28 N.C. App. 451, 221 S.E.2d 739, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

The different solutions depending upon whether husband or wife is the slayer is not discretionary against the wife-slayer. Such disposition was deemed necessary in order to prevent the slayer-husband from having his vested property right forfeited for crime or taken without due process, because North Carolina is one of only three states that have retained the common-law incident of tenancy by the entirety that "the husband has the control and use of the property and is entitled to the possession, income, and usufruct thereof during their joint lives." Homanich v. Miller, 28 N.C. App. 451, 221 S.E.2d 739, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

The legislature knowingly subjected established policy to provide for a fair disposition of entirety property where the wife slays the husband. Homanich v. Miller, 28 N.C. App. 451, 221 S.E.2d 739, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

"Estate." — The word "estate" as used in this section means those persons, other than the slayer, who succeed to the rights of the decedent either by testate or intestate succession as the case may be. To accomplish the purpose of this section and consistent with the clear language of § 31A-4, the slayer cannot be included in this class. In cases in which the decedent has made testamentary disposition of the real property involved, this interpretation gives effect to the decedent's will. If there is no will, or if the decedent left a will but made no disposition therein of the real property involved, the decedent's "estate" consists of those persons who become entitled to succeed to the decedent's property under the intestate succession laws. In either event under § 31A-4 the slayer is not included. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

The correctness of the interpretation of the words "estate of the wife" in former subdivision (2) as meaning the estate as it came into existence at the moment of her actual death was strengthened by an examination of former subdivision (1) of this section, which dealt with the situation when the wife is the slayer. In such case the statute provided that "one half of the property shall pass upon the death of the husband to his estate, and the other one half shall be held by the wife, subject to pass upon her death to the estate of the husband." It was not reasonable to suppose that the legislature in former subdivision (1) intended the word "estate" to have one meaning as to one half of the property and another meaning as to the other one half. Rather, it is more reasonable to suppose that the word "estate" as twice used in the same sentence was intended to have the same meaning, and that it refers to the estate of the deceased as such estate comes into existence at the moment of actual death. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

"The Estate of the Wife." — Section 31A-4 provides in part that, for purposes of distributing the estate of the decedent, "the slayer shall be deemed to have died immediately prior to the death of the decedent." In view of this express statutory presumption, it was clear that the words "the estate of the wife" as the same were used in former subdivision (2) meant the estate of the murdered wife as the same came into existence at the instant of her death, and the title to the entireties property at that moment passed to those persons who would be entitled to succeed to her interest in such property as of the moment of her death if she had in fact survived her husband, subject only to his recognized right to "hold" the property during his lifetime. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

The language "he shall hold all of the property during his life" was employed by the legislature, not for the purpose of barring any alienation of the property until after the slayer-husband's death, but in order to recognize and preserve the husband's lifetime rights in the property. The legislature clearly intended that even the slayer-husband should not forfeit what was always recognized as his — the right to possession and income from the property for his lifetime. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

The words "shall hold," as used in this section were not intended to effect a complete restraint on alienation during the husband's lifetime. On the contrary, the word "hold," as used in the statute, is used in the same sense as when used in the habendum clause of a deed. Certainly the word "hold" as used in the habendum clause of a deed is never construed to place a restraint on alienation, and the very words used in this statute, "hold all of the property during his life subject to pass upon his death to the estate of the wife," if used in a deed, would not prevent the husband from selling his life interest in the property. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

The words "pass upon his death" refer exclusively to possession and enjoyment of the property and not to vesting in interest. In effect, the slayer-husband holds a life estate in the property with a vested remainder in the estate of his deceased wife, and the persons entitled to succeed to her estate are to be determined as of the actual date of her death, not as of the subsequent date when the husband's life estate terminates upon his death. This interpretation is further supported by the express language of this chapter as well as by reference to the purposes to be achieved by the statute. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

Section recognizes distinction in rights held by husband as compared with rights held by wife in entirety property by providing that the slayer-husband shall hold all of the property during his life subject to pass upon his death to the estate of the wife, whereas the slayer-wife is to hold only one half of the property during her lifetime subject to pass upon her death to the estate of the husband, while the other one half of the property in such case shall pass upon the death of her husband to his estate. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

The slayer-husband holds the interest of his deceased wife in the property as a trustee for her heirs at law. He should be perpetually enjoined from conveying the property in fee; the plaintiffs should be adjudged the sole owners, upon the decedent's death, of the entire property as the heirs of their deceased mother. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

Slayer-Husband Has Right to Lifetime Possession, Income and Usufruct. — In preserving the slayer-husband's right to hold all of the property during his life, former subdivision (2) of this section recognized his right to the lifetime possession, income, and usufruct, of the property, and thereby avoided the possibility that the statute might be considered unconstitutional as working a forfeiture of a vested property right for crime. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

Where husband and wife own real property as tenants by the entirety, the husband is solely entitled, to the exclusion of the wife, to the possession, income, and usufruct of such property during their joint lives. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

Estate of Decedent Determined at Date of Her Actual Death. — Section 31A-4 makes no attempt artificially to alter the date of the death of the decedent, but provides instead that the actual date of death of the slayer is to be disregarded. Therefore, if the language of the statute is followed, the estate of the decedent is determined at the date of her actual death, and the law calls the roll of the class immediately as of that time; those who can then answer, take. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

This section does not bar the alienation of the entire title to the property by joint conveyance of the slayer-husband and the heirs of the decedent. To so interpret the statute would run contrary to the established policy of North Carolina law, which is to prevent undue restraint upon or suspension of the right of alienation. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

The slayer-husband cannot convey more than his own interest in the entirety property and certainly no conveyance of his can work a detriment to the rights of the estate of his deceased wife. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

Where there is a bequest to one for life, and after his decease to the testator's next of kin, the next of kin who are to take are the persons who answer that description at the death of the testator, and not those who answer that description at the death of the first taker. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

§ 31A-6. Survivorship property.

(a) Where the slayer and the decedent hold property with right of survivorship as joint tenants, joint owners, joint obligees or otherwise, the decedent's share thereof shall pass immediately upon the death of the decedent to his estate, and the slayer's share shall be held by the slayer during his lifetime and at his death shall pass to the estate of the decedent. During his lifetime, the slayer shall have the right to the income from his share of the property subject to the rights of creditors of the slayer.

(b) Where three or more persons, including the slayer and the decedent, hold property with right of survivorship as joint tenants, joint owners, joint obligees or otherwise, the portion of the decedent's share which would have accrued to the slayer as a result of the death of the decedent shall pass to the estate of the decedent. If the slayer becomes the final survivor, one half of the property then held by the slayer shall pass immediately to the estate of the decedent, and upon the death of the slayer the remaining interest of the slayer shall pass to the estate of the decedent. During his lifetime the slayer shall have the right to the income from his share of the property subject to the rights of creditors of the slayer. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The slayer-husband should have only the income during his lifetime from his one-half share of a joint bank account, subject to the rights of his creditors, and at his death the principal should pass to the estate of his deceased wife. Porth v. Porth, 3 N.C. App. 485, 165 S.E.2d 508 (1969).

§ 31A-7. Reversions and vested remainders.

(a) Where the slayer holds a reversion or vested remainder in property subject to a life estate in the decedent and the slayer would have obtained the right of present possession upon the death of the decedent, such property shall pass to the estate of the decedent during the period of the life expectancy of the decedent.

(b) Where the slayer holds a reversion or vested remainder in property subject to a life estate in a third person which is measured by the life of the decedent, such property shall remain in the possession of the third person during the period of the life expectancy of the decedent. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

§ 31A-8. Contingent remainders and executory interests.

As to any contingent remainder or executory or other future interest held by the slayer subject to become vested in him or increased in any way for him upon the condition of the death of the decedent:

(1) If the interest would not have become vested or increased if he had predeceased the decedent, he shall be deemed to have so predeceased the decedent; but

(2) In any case, the interest shall not be vested or increased during the period of the life expectancy of the decedent. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

§ 31A-9. Divesting of interests in property.

Where the slayer holds any interest in property, whether vested or not, subject to be divested, diminished in any way or extinguished if the decedent survives him or lives to a certain age, such interest shall be held by the slayer during his lifetime or until the decedent would have reached such age but shall then pass as if the decedent had died immediately after the death of the slayer or the reaching of such age. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

§ 31A-10. Powers of appointment and revocation.

(a) As to any exercise in the will of the decedent of a power of appointment in favor of the slayer, the slayer shall be deemed to have predeceased the decedent and the slayer shall not acquire any property or receive any benefit by virtue of such appointment and the appointed property shall pass in accordance with the applicable lapse statute, if any.

(b) Property held either presently or in remainder by the slayer subject to be divested by the exercise by the decedent of a power of revocation or a general power of appointment shall pass to the estate of the decedent; and property so held by the slayer subject to be divested by the exercise by the decedent of a power of appointment to a particular person or persons or to a class of persons shall pass to such person or persons or in equal shares to the members of such class of persons, exclusive of the slayer. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

(a) Insurance and annuity proceeds payable to the slayer:

(1) As the beneficiary or assignee of any policy or certificate of insurance on the life of the decedent, or

(2) In any other manner payable to the slayer by virtue of his surviving the decedent, shall be paid to the person or persons who would have been entitled thereto as if the slayer had predeceased the decedent. If no alternate beneficiary is named, insurance and annuity proceeds shall be paid into the estate of the decedent.

(b) If the decedent is beneficiary or assignee of any policy or certificate of insurance on the life of the slayer, the proceeds shall be paid to the estate of the decedent upon the death of the slayer, unless the policy names some person other than the slayer or his estate as alternative beneficiary.

(c) Any insurance or annuity company making payment according to the terms of its policy or contract shall not be subjected to additional liability by the terms of this chapter if such payment or performance is made without notice of circumstances tending to bring it within the provisions of this Chapter. (1961, c. 210, s. 1; 1989, c. 485, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Proof of conviction of involuntary manslaughter does not, per se, disqualify defendant from receiving the insurance proceeds under this section. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

But Culpable Negligence Does. — Under the common law of this State defendant was disqualified from receiving any insurance proceeds from the policy insuring her deceased husband's life, since the killing, although unintentional, nonetheless resulted from her culpable negligence, that is, conduct incompatible with a proper regard for human life. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

Culpable negligence proximately resulting in death comes within the purview of the common-law maxim that no one shall be permitted to profit by his own wrong. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

Evidence Sufficient to Support Conclusion That Beneficiary Was Disqualified. — Evidence not objected to that a defendant beneficiary had been convicted of the involuntary manslaughter of the insured was sufficient to support the court's conclusion that defendant is disqualified under the common law from receiving the proceeds of the insurance policy. Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

Legislature specifically included in subsection (b) a proviso to deal with alternative beneficiaries. Gardner v. Nationwide Life Ins. Co., 22 N.C. App. 404, 206 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 658, 207 S.E.2d 753 (1974).

"Some Person" Should Not Be Narrowly Construed. — The term "some person" contained within the proviso in subsection (b) should not be narrowly construed. Gardner v. Nationwide Life Ins. Co., 22 N.C. App. 404, 206 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 658, 207 S.E.2d 753 (1974).

Those Related to Slayer Named as Alternative Beneficiaries May Benefit. — The public policy sought to be fostered by the enactment of this Chapter is predicated upon the theory that the murderer himself will not profit by his own wrongdoing; however, this principle does not extend to those related to the slayer, when they are named in the insurance contract as alternative beneficiaries. Gardner v. Nationwide Life Ins. Co., 22 N.C. App. 404, 206 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 658, 207 S.E.2d 753 (1974).

The provisions of this Chapter shall not affect the right of any person who, before the interests of the slayer have been adjudicated, acquires from the slayer for adequate consideration property or an interest therein which the slayer would have received except for the terms of this Chapter, provided the same is acquired without notice of circumstances tending to bring it within the provisions of this Chapter; but all consideration received by the slayer shall be held by him in trust for the persons entitled to the property under the provisions of this Chapter, and the slayer shall also be liable both for any portion of such consideration which he may have dissipated, and for any difference between the actual value of the property and the amount of such consideration. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 4.

General Provisions.

§ 31A-13. Record determining slayer admissible in evidence.

The record of the judicial proceeding in which the slayer was determined to be such, pursuant to G.S. 31A-3 of this Chapter, shall be admissible in evidence for or against a claimant of property in any civil action arising under this Chapter. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the beneficiary's rights to the proceeds of an insurance policy when he takes the life of the insured, see 54 N.C.L. Rev. 1085 (1976).

CASE NOTES

This section is simply a statutory exception to the universal rule that the record of a conviction in a criminal proceeding is not admissible in a subsequent civil action to prove the guilt or innocence of the person tried. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

It has no applicability where the alleged wrongdoer has not been determined a "slayer" within the purview of § 31A-3(3). Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

If the party seeking to disqualify the beneficiary cannot proceed under this Chapter — as when the jury in the criminal proceeding finds the wrongdoer guilty of involuntary manslaughter — then his only remaining remedy is to proceed under the common law. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

Where Wrongdoer Convicted of Crime Not Amounting to "Willful and Unlawful Killing". — When the wrongdoer is not disqualified by this Chapter from receiving the insurance proceeds, and the common law must be relied on for such disqualification, the record of a criminal conviction of the wrongdoer for a crime not amounting to a "willful and unlawful killing," such as a conviction for involuntary manslaughter, is not admissible, and it is necessary to prove at the trial the factual circumstances relating to the killing from which the court can determine the issue. Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

The Uniform Simultaneous Death Act, G.S. 28A-24-1 through G.S. 28A-24-7, shall not apply to cases governed by this Chapter. (1961, c. 210, s. 1; 1979, c. 107, s. 5.)

§ 31A-15. Chapter to be broadly construed.

This Chapter shall not be considered penal in nature, but shall be construed broadly in order to effect the policy of this State that no person shall be allowed to profit by his own wrong. As to all acts specifically provided for in this Chapter, the rules, remedies, and procedures herein specified shall be exclusive, and as to all acts not specifically provided for in this Chapter, all rules, remedies, and procedures, if any, which now exist or hereafter may exist either by virtue of statute, or by virtue of the inherent powers of any court of competent jurisdiction, or otherwise, shall be applicable. (1961, c. 210, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

As to legislative history, see Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

This section preserved the common law, both substantively and procedurally, as to all acts not specifically provided for in this Chapter. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975); Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

This Chapter does not wholly supplant the common law, which prevents a beneficiary in a policy of life insurance whose culpable negligence caused the death of the insured from collecting the proceeds of the policy. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975); Smith v. Independent Life Ins. Co., 43 N.C. App. 269, 258 S.E.2d 864 (1979).

The provisions of this Chapter do not completely supplant the common-law principle prevailing in North Carolina that a person should not be allowed to profit by his own wrong. Lofton v. Lofton, 26 N.C. App. 203, 215 S.E.2d 861 (1975).

If the party seeking to disqualify the beneficiary cannot proceed under this Chapter, as when the jury in the criminal proceeding finds the wrongdoer guilty of involuntary manslaughter, then his only remaining remedy is to proceed under the common law. Quick v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co., 287 N.C. 47, 213 S.E.2d 563 (1975).

(9) Repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 684, s. 2,

(9c) Beneficiary under any other testamentary or nontestamentary instrument, including a beneficiary under:

a. Any qualified or nonqualified deferred compensation, employee benefit, retirement or death benefit, plan, fund, annuity, contract, policy, program or instrument, either funded or unfunded, which is established or maintained to provide retirement income or death benefits or results in, or is intended to result in, deferral of income;

(10) The personal representative appointed under Chapter 28A of any of the above, or the attorney-in-fact of any of the above may renounce in whole or in part the right of succession to any property or interest therein, including a future interest, by filing a written instrument under the provisions of this Chapter. estate, and gift tax purposes, unless expressly provided otherwise in the instrument creating the interest.

CASE NOTES

Public policy of this State permits renunciation of property interests transferred by will. Sedberry v. Johnson, 62 N.C. App. 425, 302 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 322, 307 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Wrongful Death Recoveries. — The legislature did not intend for the renouncement statute to apply to wrongful death recoveries. The language of the renouncement statute, contains a long and specific list of the capacities in which one must succeed to an interest which may be renounced and that list, as exhaustive as it was obviously intended to be, does not include beneficiaries of wrongful death recoveries. Evans v. Diaz, 333 N.C. 774, 430 S.E.2d 244 (1993).

Other Renunciation Procedures Not Abridged. — While a statutory method for accomplishing renunciation is provided in this section and § 31B-2, such provision expressly does not abridge the right to waive, release, disclaim or renounce property or an interest therein under any other statute or as otherwise provided by law. Sedberry v. Johnson, 62 N.C. App. 425, 302 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 322, 307 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

When Release by Heir of Expectant Share Is Binding. — The release by an heir of an expectant share is binding if the release is given for a valuable consideration and the consideration given for the release is not "grossly inadequate," or procured by fraud or undue influence. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976).

Separation Agreement as Renunciation. — Where a husband executes a will divising and bequeathing all his property to his wife, the spouses thereafter enter a separation agreement in which each "waives and renounces all rights ... under any previously executed will of the other," and the husband subsequently dies without having revoked or modified his will, the separation agreement constitutes a valid renunciation which adeems the devise and bequest to the wife. Sedberry v. Johnson, 62 N.C. App. 425, 302 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 322, 307 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Beneficiary of a spendthrift trust created by trustor's will, who had only a life estate in the trust fund, while his unborn children and brothers and sisters had a contingent interest in the remainder, could renounce his life estate, but could not renounce the interest of his unborn children or accelerate the remainder for the benefit of his brothers and sisters. Stewart v. Johnson, 88 N.C. App. 277, 362 S.E.2d 849 (1987), cert. denied, 373 S.E.2d 124 (1988).

(a) Except as otherwise provided in the testamentary or nontestamentary instrument, a fiduciary under a testamentary or nontestamentary instrument may renounce, in whole or in part, fiduciary rights, privileges, powers, and immunities by executing and by delivering, filing, or recording a written renunciation pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 31B-2. A fiduciary may not renounce the rights of beneficiaries unless the instrument creating the fiduciary relationship authorizes such a renunciation.

(b) The instrument of renunciation shall (i) describe any fiduciary right, power, privilege, or immunity renounced, (ii) declare the renunciation and the extent thereof, and (iii) be signed and acknowledged by the fiduciary authorized to renounce. (1989, c. 684, s. 3.)

§ 31B-2. Time and place of filing renunciation.

(a) To be a qualified disclaimer for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes, an instrument renouncing a present interest shall be filed within the time period required under the applicable federal statute for a renunciation to be given effect as a disclaimer for federal estate and gift tax purposes. If there is no such federal statute the instrument shall be filed not later than nine months after the date the transfer of the renounced interest to the renouncer was complete for the purpose of such taxes.

(b) An instrument renouncing a future interest shall be filed not later than six months after the event by which the taker of the property or interest is finally ascertained and his interest indefeasibly vested and he is entitled to possession even though such renunciation may not be recognized as a disclaimer for federal estate tax purposes.

(c) The renunciation shall be filed with the clerk of court of the county in which proceedings have been commenced for the administration of the estate of the deceased owner or deceased donee of the power or, if they have not been commenced, in which they could be commenced. A copy of the renunciation shall be delivered in person or mailed by registered or certified mail to any personal representative, or other fiduciary of the decedent or donee of the power. If the property interest renounced includes any proceeds of a life insurance policy being renounced pursuant to G.S. 31B-1(a)(5) the person renouncing shall mail, by registered or certified mail, a copy of the renunciation to the insurance company issuing the policy. If the property or property interest renounced is created by nontestamentary instrument, a copy of the renunciation shall be delivered in person, or mailed by registered or certified mail, to the trustee or other person who has legal title to, or possession of, the property or property interest renounced.

(d) If real property or an interest therein is renounced, a copy of the renunciation shall also be filed for recording in the office of the register of deeds of all counties wherein any part of the interest renounced is situated. The renunciation shall be indexed in the grantor's index under (i) the name of the deceased owner or donee of the power, and (ii) the name of the person renouncing. The renunciation of an interest, or a part thereof, in real property shall not be effective to renounce such interest until a copy of the renunciation is filed for recording in the office of the register of deeds in the county wherein such interest or part thereof is situated. A spouse of a person renouncing real property or an interest in real property shall have no statutory dower, inchoate marital rights, or any other interest in the real property or real property interest renounced. (1975, c. 371, s. 1; 1979, c. 525, s. 7; 1983, c. 66, s. 2; 1989, c. 684, s. 4; 1991, c. 744, s. 1; 1998-148, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-148, which amended subsection (a) of this section by adding language regarding qualified disclaimers for federal and state inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes, provides in s. 6: "This act is effective when it becomes law and applies to all renunciations executed on or after the effective date of this act, whether qualified or nonqualified for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes. This act shall not apply to any renunciation executed before the effective date of this section whether qualified or nonqualified for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes, of an interest in a testamentary or inter vivos trust, unless the trustee within six months after the effective date of this act executes and records with the clerk of court of the county in which probate proceedings have been commenced, if any, or the county in which the property is located, an instrument evidencing the acceleration of the possession and enjoyment of the renounced interest to persons in esse at the time of the filing of the renunciation. This act shall not apply to remove the rights of a current beneficiary who has received an interest in a trust between the date of the filing of a renunciation and the date of the filing by a trustee pursuant to the preceding sentence."

CASE NOTES

Other Renunciation Procedures Not Abridged. — While a statutory method for accomplishing renunciation is provided in § 31B-1 and this section, such provision expressly does not abridge the right to waive, release, disclaim or renounce property or an interest therein under any other statute or as otherwise provided by law. Sedberry v. Johnson, 62 N.C. App. 425, 302 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 322, 307 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

§ 31B-3. Effect of renunciation.

(a) Unless the decedent, donee of a power of appointment, or creator of an interest under an inter vivos instrument has otherwise provided in the instrument creating the interest, the property or interest renounced devolves as follows:

(1) If the renunciation is filed within the time period described in G.S. 31B-2(a), the property or interest renounced devolves as if the renouncer had predeceased the date the transfer of the renounced interest to the renouncer was complete for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes, or, in the case of the renunciation of a fiduciary right, power, privilege, or immunity, the property or interest subject to the power devolves as if the fiduciary right, power, privilege, or immunity never existed. Any such renunciation relates back for all purposes to the date the transfer of the renounced interest to the renouncer was complete for the purpose of those taxes.

(2) If the renunciation is not filed within the time period described in G.S. 31B-2(a), the property or interest devolves as if the renouncer had died on the date the renunciation is filed, or, in the case of the renunciation of a fiduciary right, power, privilege, or immunity, the property or interest subject to the power devolves as if the fiduciary right, power, privilege, or immunity ceased to exist as of the date the renunciation is filed.

(3) Any future interest that takes effect in possession or enjoyment after the termination of the estate or interest renounced takes effect as if the renouncer had died on the date determined under subdivision (1) or (2) of this subsection, and upon the filing of the renunciation the persons in being as of the time the renouncer is deemed to have died will immediately become entitled to possession or enjoyment of any such future interest.

(b) In the event that the property or interest renounced was created by testamentary disposition, the devolution of the property or interest renounced shall be governed by G.S. 31-42(a) notwithstanding that in fact the renouncer has not actually died before the testator.

(c) In the event that the decedent dies intestate, or the ownership or succession to property or to an interest is to be determined as though a decedent had died intestate, and the renouncer has living issue who would have been entitled to an interest in the property or interest if the renouncer had predeceased the decedent, then the property or interest renounced shall be distributed to such issue, per stirpes. If the renouncer does not have such issue, then the property or interest shall be distributed as though the renouncer had predeceased the decedent. (1975, c. 371, s. 1; 1979, c. 525, s. 6; 1989, c. 684, s. 5; 1993, c. 308, ss. 1, 2; 1998-148, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-148, which rewrote subsection (a) of this section, provides in s. 6: "This act is effective when it becomes law and applies to all renunciations executed on or after the effective date of this act, whether qualified or nonqualified for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes. This act shall not apply to any renunciation executed before the effective date of this section whether qualified or nonqualified for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes, of an interest in a testamentary or inter vivos trust, unless the trustee within six months after the effective date of this act executes and records with the clerk of court of the county in which probate proceedings have been commenced, if any, or the county in which the property is located, an instrument evidencing the acceleration of the possession and enjoyment of the renounced interest to persons in esse at the time of the filing of the renunciation. This act shall not apply to remove the rights of a current beneficiary who has received an interest in a trust between the date of the filing of a renunciation and the date of the filing by a trustee pursuant to the preceding sentence."

CASE NOTES

A renunciation is not a grant of legal title by the renouncer. It merely triggers a set of statutorily defined legal rights which ultimately determine ownership. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A renunciation relates back to the death of the testator or intestate. The renouncer never actually holds legal title to the property. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A parol trust may not be engrafted upon a renounced interest. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

Action Seeking Constructive Trust. — Plaintiff, who sought to assert that defendant unduly influenced his decision to sign a "Petition to Renounce" his interest in will, could maintain an action seeking the declaration of a constructive trust. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

§ 31B-4. Waiver and bar.

(a) The right to renounce property or an interest therein is barred by:
(1) An assignment, conveyance, encumbrance, pledge, or transfer of the property or interest, or a contract therefor by the person authorized to renounce,
(2) A written waiver of the right to renounce, or
(3) Repealed by Session Laws 1998-148, s. 4.
(4) A sale of the property or interest under judicial sale made before the renunciation is effected.

(b) The renunciation or the written waiver of the right to renounce is binding upon the renouncer or person waiving and all persons claiming through or under him.

(c) A fiduciary's application for appointment or assumption of duties as fiduciary does not waive or bar the fiduciary's right to renounce a right, power, privilege, or immunity.

(d) No person shall be liable for distributing or disposing of property in reliance upon the terms of a renunciation that is invalid for the reason that the right of renunciation has been waived or barred, if the distribution or disposition is otherwise proper, and the person has no actual knowledge of the facts that constitute a waiver or bar to the right of renunciation.

(e) The right to renounce property or an interest in property pursuant to this Chapter is not barred by an acceptance of the property, interest, or benefit thereunder; provided, however, an acceptance of the property, interest, or benefit thereunder may preclude such renunciation from being a qualified renunciation for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes. (1975, c. 371, s. 1; 1989, c. 684, s. 6; 1998-148, ss. 4, 5; 2000-140, s. 8.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-148, which repealed subdivision (a)(3) of this section regarding acceptance of property, interest, or benefit, and added subsection (e) of this section, provides in s. 6: "This act is effective when it becomes law and applies to all renunciations executed on or after the effective date of this act, whether qualified or nonqualified for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes. This act shall not apply to any renunciation executed before the effective date of this section whether qualified or nonqualified for federal and State inheritance, estate, and gift tax purposes, of an interest in a testamentary or inter vivos trust, unless the trustee within six months after the effective date of this act executes and records with the clerk of court of the county in which probate proceedings have been commenced, if any, or the county in which the property is located, an instrument evidencing the acceleration of the possession and enjoyment of the renounced interest to persons in esse at the time of the filing of the renunciation. This act shall not apply to remove the rights of a current beneficiary who has received an interest in a trust between the date of the filing of a renunciation and the date of the filing by a trustee pursuant to the preceding sentence."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-140, s. 8, effective July 21, 2000, added "or" at the end of subdivision (a)(2).

§ 31B-5. Exclusiveness of remedy.

This Chapter does not exclude or abridge any other rights or procedures existing under any other statute or otherwise provided by law to waive, release, refuse to accept, disclaim or renounce property or an interest therein, or any fiduciary right, power, privilege, or immunity. (1975, c. 371, s. 1; 1989, c. 684, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

A renunciation is not a grant of legal title by the renouncer. It merely triggers a set of statutorily defined legal rights which ultimately determine ownership. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A renunciation relates back to the death of the testator or intestate. The renouncer never actually holds legal title to the property. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A beneficiary's right to renounce exists irrespective of statutory authority. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

Other Renunciation Procedures Not Abridged. — While a statutory method for accomplishing renunciation is provided in §§ 31B-1 and 31B-2, such provision expressly does not abridge the right to waive, release, disclaim or renounce property or an interest therein under any other statute or as otherwise provided by law. Sedberry v. Johnson, 62 N.C. App. 425, 302 S.E.2d 924, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 322, 307 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Time for Renunciation. — A devisee may disclaim or renounce a right under a will, but he or she must do so within a reasonable time. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

A parol trust may not be engrafted upon a renounced interest. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

Action Seeking Constructive Trust. — Plaintiff, who sought to assert that defendant unduly influenced his decision to sign a "Petition to Renounce" his interest in will, could maintain an action seeking the declaration of a constructive trust. Hinson v. Hinson, 80 N.C. App. 561, 343 S.E.2d 266 (1986), decided under § 29-10 as it read prior to Oct. 1, 1975.

§ 31B-6. Application of Chapter.

A present interest in property existing on October 1, 1975, as to which the time for filing a renunciation under this Chapter has not expired may be renounced within six months after October 1, 1975. A future interest in property existing on October 1, 1975, as to which the time for filing a renunciation under this Chapter has not expired may be renounced within six months after October 1, 1975, or within six months after the future interest has become indefeasibly vested and the taker is entitled to possession, whichever is later. (1975, c. 371, s. 1.)

§ 31B-7. Short title.

This Chapter may be cited as the Renunciation of Property and Renunciation of Fiduciary Powers Act. (1975, c. 371, s. 1; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1024, s. 11.)

Chapter 31C.

Uniform Disposition of Community Property Rights at Death Act.

§ 31C-1. Application.

This Chapter applies to the disposition at death of the following property acquired by a married person:

(1) All personal property, wherever situated:
   a. Which was acquired as or became, and remained, community property under the laws of another jurisdiction; or
   b. All or the proportionate part of that property acquired with the rents, issues, or income of, or the proceeds from, or in exchange for, that community property; or
   c. Traceable to that community property;
(2) All or the proportionate part of any real property situated in this State which was acquired with the rents, issues or income of, the proceeds from, or in exchange for, property acquired as or which became, and remained, community property under the laws of another jurisdiction, or property traceable to that community property. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1981 property law, see 60 N.C.L. Rev. 1420 (1982).

§ 31C-2. Rebuttable presumptions.

In determining whether this Chapter applies to specific property the following rebuttable presumptions apply:

(1) Property acquired during marriage by a spouse of that marriage while domiciled in a jurisdiction under whose laws property could then be acquired as community property is presumed to have been acquired as or to have become, and remained, property to which this Chapter applies; and
(2) Real property situated in this State and personal property wherever situated, acquired by a married person while domiciled in a jurisdiction under whose laws property could not then be acquired as community property, title to which was taken in a form which created rights of survivorship, is presumed not to be property to which this Chapter applies. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

§ 31C-3. Disposition of community property upon death.

Upon death of a married person, one half of the property to which this Chapter applies is the property of the surviving spouse and is not subject to testamentary disposition by the decedent or distribution under the laws of succession of this State. One half of that property is the property of the decedent and is subject to testamentary disposition or distribution under the laws of succession of this State. With respect to property to which this Chapter applies, the one half of the property of the decedent is not subject to the surviving spouse's right to petition for an elective share under the provisions of Article 1A of Chapter 30, and is not subject to the right to elect a life estate under the provisions of Article 8 of Chapter 29. (1981, c. 882, s. 1; 2000-178, s. 7.)

Cross References. — As to right of elective share, see § 30-3.1 et seq.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-178, s. 7, effective January 1, 2001, and applicable to estates of decedents dying on or after that date, substituted "petition for an elective share" for "dissent from the will" and substituted "Article 1A of Chapter 30" for "Article 1 of Chapter 30."

§ 31C-4. Perfection of title of surviving spouse.

If the title to any property to which this Chapter applies was held by the decedent at the time of death, or by a trustee of a revocable inter vivos trust created by the decedent, title of the surviving spouse may be perfected by an order of the clerk of superior court who appointed the decedent's personal representative or by execution of an instrument by the personal representative or the heirs or devisees of the decedent with the approval of the said clerk. Neither the personal representative nor the court in which the decedent's estate is being administered has a duty to discover or attempt to discover whether property held by the decedent is property to which this Chapter applies, unless a written demand is made by the surviving spouse or the spouse's successor in interest. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

§ 31C-5. Perfection of title of personal representative, heir or devisee; duty of personal representative.

If the title to any property to which this Chapter applies is held by the surviving spouse at the time of the decedent's death, the personal representative or an heir or devisee of the decedent may institute an action to perfect title to the property. The personal representative has no fiduciary duty to discover or attempt to discover whether any property held by the surviving spouse is property to which this Chapter applies, unless a written demand is made by an heir, devisee, or creditor of the decedent. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

§ 31C-6. Written demand.

(a) Written demand in this Chapter shall be made by a surviving spouse, the spouse's successor in interest, or the decedent's heirs or devisees not later than six months after the decedent's will has been admitted to probate, or not later than six months after the appointment of an administrator if there is no will, or not later than six months after the decedent's death if the property to which this Chapter applies is held in an inter vivos trust created by the decedent; and written demand by a creditor of the decedent shall be made within the period for presentation of a claim against the decedent's estate as set out in Article 19 of Chapter 28A.

(b) Written demand in this Chapter shall be delivered in person or by registered mail to the personal representative. As used in this Chapter, the personal representative may also mean the trustee of an inter vivos trust created by the decedent who has legal title to, or possession of, the property to which this Chapter applies. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

§ 31C-7. Purchaser for value or lender.

(a) If a surviving spouse has apparent title to property to which this Chapter applies, a purchaser for value or a lender taking a security interest in the property takes his interest in the property free of any rights of the personal representative or an heir or devisee of the decedent.

(b) If a personal representative or an heir or devisee of the decedent has apparent title to property to which this Chapter applies, a purchaser for value or a lender taking a security interest in the property takes his interest in the property free of any rights of the surviving spouse.

(c) A purchaser for value or a lender need not inquire whether a vendor or borrower acted properly.

(d) The proceeds of a sale or creation of a security interest shall be treated in the same manner as the property transferred to the purchaser for value or a lender. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

§ 31C-8. Creditors' rights.

This Chapter does not affect rights of creditors with respect to property to which this Chapter applies. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

§ 31C-9. Severing or altering of married persons.

This Chapter does not prevent married persons from severing or altering their interests in property to which this Chapter applies. (1981, c. 882, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Act. — The purpose of the Uniform Fiduciaries Act was to relax the common-law standard of care owed by banks to principals when dealing with their fiduciaries. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

§ 32-2. Definition of terms.

(a) In this Article unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires:

"Bank" includes any person or association of persons, whether incorporated or not, carrying on the business of banking.

"Fiduciary" includes a trustee under any trust, expressed, implied, resulting or constructive, executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, curator, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, assignee for the benefit of creditors, partner, agent, officer of a corporation, public or private, public officer, or any other person acting in a fiduciary capacity for any person, trust or estate.

"Person" includes a corporation, partnership, or other association, or two or more persons having a joint or common interest.

"Principal" includes any person to whom a fiduciary as such owes an obligation.

(b) A thing is done "in good faith" within the meaning of this Article when it is in fact done honestly, whether it be done negligently or not. (1923, c. 85, s. 1; C.S., s. 1864(e); 1965, c. 628, s. 2.)

"Fiduciary Relationship." — A fiduciary relationship exists where there has been a special confidence reposed in one who in equity and good conscience is bound to act in good faith and in due regard to the one reposing confidence. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

It is not necessary that there be a technical or legal relationship for a fiduciary relationship to exist. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

If as an executor, as a cotenant or simply as an individual, a person undertook to manage and generally control a tract of land for the benefit of his co-owners, causing them to repose special faith, confidence and trust in him to represent their best interest with respect to the property, he occupied a fiduciary relationship to them. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

While a fiduciary relationship ordinarily does not arise between tenants in common from the simple fact of their cotenancy, such a relationship may be created by their conduct, as where one cotenant assumes to act for the benefit of his cotenants. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Fiduciaries must act in good faith. They can never paramount their personal interest over the interest of those for whom they have assumed to act. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Interests May Not Conflict. — A person occupying a place of trust and confidence may not place himself in a position where his own interest may conflict with the interest of those for whom he acts. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

A fiduciary who acquires an outstanding title adverse to his cestuis que trustent is considered in equity as having acquired it for their benefit. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

An executor acts in a fiduciary capacity. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

"Good Faith." — By defining "good faith" in subsection (b) of this section in terms of an act done honestly although perhaps negligently, the drafters of the act implicitly revealed their intention that the term "bad faith" requires a showing of some indicia of dishonest conduct or a showing of facts and circumstances so cogent and obvious that to remain passive would amount to a deliberate desire to evade knowledge because of a belief or fear that inquiry would disclose a defect in the transaction. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

Liability of Executor. — An executor, in performing those duties related to managing the estate's assets, acts as a trustee to beneficiaries of the estate. As such, the executor is liable for the depreciation of assets which an ordinarily prudent fiduciary would not have allowed to occur. Fortune v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 87 N.C. App. 1, 359 S.E.2d 801 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 146, 371 S.E.2d 483 (1988).

§ 32-3. Application of payments made to fiduciaries.

A person who in good faith pays or transfers to a fiduciary any money or other property, which the fiduciary as such is authorized to receive, is not responsible for the proper application thereof by the fiduciary; and any right or title acquired from the fiduciary in consideration of such payment or transfer is not invalid in consequence of a misapplication by the fiduciary. (1923, c. 85, s. 2; C.S., s. 1864(f).)

§ 32-5. Transfer of negotiable instrument by fiduciary.

If any negotiable instrument payable or indorsed to a fiduciary as such is indorsed by a fiduciary, or if any negotiable instrument payable or indorsed to his principal is indorsed by a fiduciary empowered to indorse such instrument on behalf of his principal, the indorsee is not bound to inquire whether the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in indorsing or delivering the instrument, and is not chargeable with notice that the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary unless he takes the instrument with actual knowledge of such breach or with knowledge of such facts that his action in taking the instrument amounts to bad faith. If, however, such instrument is transferred by the fiduciary in payment of or as security for a personal debt of the fiduciary to the actual knowledge of the creditor, or is transferred in any transaction known by the transferee to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary, the creditor or other transferee is liable to the principal if the fiduciary in fact commits a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in transferring the instrument. (1923, c. 85, s. 4; C.S., s. 1864(h).)

CASE NOTES

Prior to enactment of the Uniform Commercial Code, § 25-1-101 et seq., the uniform application of the N.I.L. was followed. See Setzer v. Deal, 135 N.C. 428, 47 S.E. 466 (1904); J.L. Smathers & Co. v. Toxaway Hotel Co., 162 N.C. 346, 78 S.E. 224 (1913); J.L. Smathers & Co. v. Toxaway Hotel Co., 167 N.C. 469, 83 S.E. 844 (1914).

§ 32-6. Check drawn by fiduciary payable to third person.

If a check or other bill of exchange is drawn by a fiduciary as such, or in the name of his principal by a fiduciary empowered to draw such instrument in the name of his principal, the payee is not bound to inquire whether the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in drawing or delivering the instrument, and is not chargeable with notice that the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary unless he takes the instrument with actual knowledge of such breach or with knowledge of such facts that his action in taking the instrument amounts to bad faith. If, however, such instrument is payable to a personal creditor of the fiduciary and delivered to the creditor in payment of or as security for a personal debt of the fiduciary to the actual knowledge of the creditor, or is drawn and delivered in any transaction known by the payee to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary, the creditor or other payee is liable to the principal if the fiduciary in fact commits a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in drawing or delivering the instrument. (1923, c. 85, s. 5; C.S., s. 1864(i).)

CASE NOTES

Section Illustrates General Rule of Liability. — The history of this provision indicates that it was intended to illustrate the general rule of liability rather than to create an exception to it. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Payee's Liability. — For the payee to become liable under this section it must be found either that it had actual knowledge of the misappropriation or that it acted in bad faith. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Contributory Negligence of Principal. — Liability is based on payee's conscious conduct or "bad faith" and contributory neglect of principal would not negate such fault. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Test for Determining Bad Faith. — In determining "bad faith" courts ask whether it was "commercially" unjustifiable for the payee to disregard and refuse to learn facts readily available. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Bad faith in taking commercial paper does not necessarily involve furtive motives, for it exists when the creditor has notice of facts which, if unexplained, would show that he was taking the property of one who owed him nothing, in payment of a claim that he held against someone else. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

When Remaining Passive Is Bad Faith. — At some point, obvious circumstances become so cogent that it is "bad faith" to remain passive. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Neither criminal fraud nor downright corruption is an essential ingredient of legal "bad faith." Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Agreement Protecting Bank Void When Bank Acts in Bad Faith. — Any agreement protecting a bank from liability for assisting a fiduciary in a misappropriation when the bank acts in "bad faith" or with "actual knowledge" of the fiduciary's breach is void. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Fact That Bank Is Designated Payee Not Enough to Attribute "Actual Knowledge" or "Bad Faith." — The bank is not liable for cashing the first check in the series and paying the proceeds to the fiduciary, since the mere fact that the bank was designated as payee was not enough to attribute to it either "actual knowledge" or "bad faith," but it did act in "bad faith," even if it lacked "actual knowledge," when it received the second check in the series and credited the proceeds to the fiduciary's debt. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

"Actual knowledge" means express factual information that funds are being used for private purposes. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

The crediting of checks to fiduciary's private debts constitutes either "actual knowledge" or "bad faith." Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

While a bank may have acted innocently in cashing a first check, it lost this innocence when a second check was received and used to pay fiduciary's personal obligation. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

A bank, having gained "actual knowledge" of a breach of a fiduciary obligation when it received a second check in series and applied it in reduction of fiduciary's personal debt, could not divest itself of its continuing knowledge of the faithlessness of the fiduciary. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Creditor's Liability for "Actual Knowledge." — If the crediting of checks to fiduciary's private debts constitutes "actual knowledge," the creditor is liable because from the circumstances it would necessarily have "actual knowledge" that the fiduciary was misappropriating his principal's funds. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bank of Charlotte, 340 F.2d 550 (4th Cir. 1965).

Evidence Sufficient for Jury. — Admissions by defendant that it entered into contracts for the sale of certain lands to an individual and that in payment of the sum due upon the execution of the contracts it accepted checks drawn on the funds of a corporation by the individual as president of the corporation, together with evidence that the individual had no authority to so use the corporate funds, that the corporation was not indebted to him, and that the transaction was not made for the corporation, was sufficient to be submitted to the jury in an action by the receiver of the corporation under the provisions of this section. LaVecchia v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 218 N.C. 35, 9 S.E.2d 489 (1940).

Judgment on Pleadings. — Allegations of defendant's acceptance of a corporate check in payment of individual obligation of the president does not entitle the plaintiff to judgment on the pleadings. LaVecchia v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 216 N.C. 28, 3 S.E.2d 276 (1939).

§ 32-7. Check drawn by and payable to fiduciary.

If a check or other bill of exchange is drawn by a fiduciary as such or in the name of his principal by a fiduciary empowered to draw such instrument in the name of his principal, payable to the fiduciary personally, or payable to a third person and by him transferred to the fiduciary, and is thereafter transferred by the fiduciary, whether in payment of a personal debt of the fiduciary or otherwise, the transferee is not bound to inquire whether the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in transferring the instrument, and is not chargeable with notice that the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary unless he takes the instrument with actual knowledge of such breach or with knowledge of such facts that his action in taking the instrument amounts to bad faith. (1923, c. 85, s. 6; C.S., s. 1864(j).)

§ 32-8. Deposit in name of fiduciary as such.

If a deposit is made in a bank to the credit of a fiduciary as such, the bank is authorized to pay the amount of the deposit or any part thereof upon the check of the fiduciary, signed with the name in which such deposit is entered, without being liable to the principal, unless the bank pays the check with actual knowledge that the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in drawing the check or with knowledge of such facts that its action in paying the check amounts to bad faith.

If, however, such a check is payable to the drawee bank and is delivered to it in payment of or as security for a personal debt of the fiduciary to it, the bank is liable to the principal if the fiduciary in fact commits a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in drawing or delivering the check. (1923, c. 85, s. 7; C.S., s. 1864(k).)

Legal Periodicals. — For discussion of section, see 1 N.C.L. Rev. 291 (1923).

§ 32-9. Deposit in name of principal.

If a check is drawn upon the account of his principal in a bank by a fiduciary who is empowered to draw checks upon his principal's account, the bank is authorized to pay such check without being liable to the principal, unless the bank pays the check with actual knowledge that the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in drawing such check, or with knowledge of such facts that its action in paying the check amounts to bad faith. If, however, such a check is payable to the drawee bank and is delivered to it in payment of or as security for a personal debt of the fiduciary to it, the bank is liable to the principal if the fiduciary in fact commits a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in drawing or delivering the check. (1923, c. 85, s. 8; C.S., s. 1864(l).)

CASE NOTES

Distinction Between Negligence and Bad Faith. — The distinction between negligence and bad faith is that bad faith, or dishonesty, unlike negligence, is willful. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979).

Showing of mere negligence is clearly not sufficient to establish "bad faith." Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979).

Mere failure to make inquiry, even though there be suspicious circumstances, does not constitute bad faith, unless such failure is due to the deliberate desire to evade knowledge because of a belief or fear that inquiry would disclose a vice or defect in the transaction — that is to say, where there is an intentional closing of the eyes or stopping of the ears. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979).

What Constitutes "Bad Faith." — By defining "good faith" in § 32-2(b) in terms of an act done honestly although perhaps negligently, the drafters of the act implicitly revealed their intention that the term "bad faith" requires a showing of some indicia of dishonest conduct or a showing of facts and circumstances so cogent and obvious that to remain passive would amount to a deliberate desire to evade knowledge because of a belief or fear that inquiry would disclose a defect in the transaction. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979).

Bank's violation of this section of the Uniform Fiduciaries Act was held not to constitute an unfair or deceptive trade practice where the breach of fiduciary duty was committed by a trustee, and there was an absence of actual knowledge or bad faith by the bank. Moretz v. Miller, 126 N.C. App. 514, 486 S.E.2d 85 (1997).

Applied in Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

§ 32-10. Deposit in fiduciary's personal account.

If a fiduciary makes a deposit in a bank to his personal credit of checks drawn by him upon an account in his own name as fiduciary or of checks payable to him as fiduciary or of checks drawn by him upon an account in the name of his principal if he is empowered to draw checks thereon, or checks payable to his principal and indorsed by him, if he is empowered to indorse such checks, or if he otherwise makes a deposit of funds held by him as fiduciary, the bank receiving such deposit is not bound to inquire whether the fiduciary is committing thereby a breach of his obligation as fiduciary; and the bank is authorized to pay the amount of the deposit or any part thereof upon the personal check of the fiduciary without being liable to the principal, unless the bank receives the deposit or pays the check with actual knowledge that the fiduciary is committing a breach of his obligation as fiduciary in making such deposit or in drawing such check, or with knowledge of such facts that its action in receiving the deposit or paying the check amounts to bad faith. (1923, c. 85, s. 9; C.S., s. 1864(m).)

§ 32-11. Deposit in names of two or more trustees.

When a deposit is made in a bank in the name of two or more persons as trustees and a check is drawn upon the trust account by any trustee or trustees authorized by the other trustee or trustees to draw checks upon the trust account, neither the payee nor other holder nor the bank is bound to inquire whether it is a breach of trust to authorize such trustee or trustees to draw checks upon the trust account, and is not liable unless the circumstances be such that the action of the payee or other holder or the bank amounts to bad faith. (1923, c. 85, s. 10; C.S., s. 1864(n).)

§ 32-12. Cases not provided for in Article.

In any case not provided for in this Article the rules of law and equity, including the law merchant and those rules of law and equity relating to trusts, agency, negotiable instruments and banking, shall continue to apply. (1923, c. 85, s. 12; C.S., s. 1864(p); 1965, c. 628, s. 2.)

§ 32-13. Uniformity of interpretation.

This Article shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of those states which enact it. (1923, c. 85, s. 13; C.S., s. 1864(q); 1965, c. 628, s. 2.)

§ 32-25. Definition.

As used in this Article, the term "fiduciary" means the one or more executors of the estate of a decedent, or the one or more trustees of a testamentary or inter vivos trust estate, whichever in a particular case shall be appropriate. (1965, c. 628, s. 1.)

§ 32-26. Incorporation by reference of powers enumerated in § 32-27; restriction on exercise of such powers.

(a) By an express intention of the testator or settlor so to do contained in a will, or in an instrument in writing whereby a trust estate is created inter vivos, any or all of the powers or any portion thereof enumerated in G.S. 32-27, as they exist at the time of the signing of the will by the testator or at the time of the signing by the first settlor who signs the trust instrument, may be, by appropriate reference made thereto, incorporated in such will or other written instrument, with the same effect as though such language were set forth verbatim in the instrument. Incorporation of one or more of the powers contained in G.S. 32-27 by reference to that section shall be in addition to and not in limitation of the common law or statutory powers of the fiduciary.

(b) No power of authority conferred upon a fiduciary as provided in this Article shall be exercised by such fiduciary in such a manner as, in the aggregate, to deprive the trust or the estate involved of an otherwise available tax exemption, deduction or credit, expressly including the marital deduction, or operate to impose a tax upon a donor or testator or other person as owner of any portion of the trust or estate involved. "Tax" includes, but is not limited to, any federal, State, or local income, gift, estate or inheritance tax.

(c) Nothing herein shall be construed to prevent the incorporation of the powers enumerated in G.S. 32-27 in any other kind of instrument or agreement. (1965, c. 628, s. 1.)

§ 32-27. Powers which may be incorporated by reference in trust instrument.

The following powers may be incorporated by reference as provided in G.S. 32-26:

(1) Retain Original Property. — To retain for such time as the fiduciary shall deem advisable any property, real or personal, which the fiduciary may receive, even though the retention of such property by reason of its character, amount, proportion to the total estate or otherwise would not be appropriate for the fiduciary apart from this provision.

(2) Sell and Exchange Property. — To sell, exchange, give options upon, partition or otherwise dispose of any property or interest therein which the fiduciary may hold from time to time, with or without order of court, at public or private sale or otherwise, upon such terms and conditions, including credit, and for such consideration as the fiduciary shall deem advisable, and to transfer and convey the property or interest therein which is at the disposal of the fiduciary, in fee simple absolute or otherwise, free of all trust; and the party dealing with the fiduciary shall not be under a duty to follow the proceeds or other consideration received by the fiduciary from such sale or exchange.

(3) Invest and Reinvest. — To invest and reinvest, as the fiduciary shall deem advisable, in stocks (common or preferred), bonds, debentures, notes, mortgages or other securities, in or outside the United States; in insurance contracts on the life of any beneficiary or of any person in whom a beneficiary has an insurable interest, or in annuity contracts for any beneficiary, in any real or personal property, in investment trusts; in participations in common trust funds, and generally in such property as the fiduciary shall deem advisable, even though such investment shall not be of the character approved by applicable law but for this provision.

(4) Invest without Diversification. — To make investments which cause a greater proportion of the total property held by the fiduciary to be invested in investments of one type or of one company than would be considered appropriate for the fiduciary apart from this provision.

(5) Continue Business. — To the extent and upon such terms and conditions and for such periods of time as the fiduciary shall deem necessary or advisable, to continue or participate in the operation of any business or other enterprise, whatever its form of organization, including but not limited to the power:

a. To effect incorporation, dissolution, or other change in the form of the organization of the business or enterprise;
b. To dispose of any interest therein or acquire the interest of others therein;
c. To contribute thereto or invest therein additional capital or to lend money thereto, in any such case upon such terms and conditions as the fiduciary shall approve from time to time;
d. To determine whether the liabilities incurred in the conduct of the business are to be chargeable solely to the part of the estate or trust set aside for use in the business or to the estate or trust as a whole; and
e. In all cases in which the fiduciary is required to file accounts in any court or in any other public office, it shall not be necessary to itemize receipts and disbursements and distributions of property but it shall be sufficient for the fiduciary to show in the account a single figure or consolidation of figures, and the fiduciary shall be permitted to account for money and property received from the business and any payments made to the business in lump sum without itemization.

(6) Form Corporation or Other Entity. — To form a corporation or other entity and to transfer, assign, and convey to such corporation or entity all or any part of the estate or of any trust property in exchange for the stock, securities or obligations of any such corporation or entity, and to continue to hold such stock and securities and obligations.

f. To decline to serve as a fiduciary if the fiduciary reasonably believes that there is or may be a conflict of interest between it in its fiduciary capacity and in its individual capacity because of potential claims or liabilities which may be asserted against it on behalf of the trust or estate because of the type or condition of assets held therein.

g. For purposes of this subsection "environmental law" means any federal, state, or local law, rule, regulation, or ordinance relating to protection of the environment or human health. (24) Employ and Compensate Agents, etc. — To employ and compensate, out of income or principal or both and in such proportion as the fiduciary shall deem advisable, persons deemed by the fiduciary needful to advise or assist in the proper settlement of the estate or administration of any trust, including, but not limited to, agents, accountants, brokers, attorneys-at-law, attorneys-in-fact, investment brokers, rental agents, realtors, appraisers, and tax specialists; and to do so without liability for any neglect, omission, misconduct, or default of such agent or representative provided he was selected and retained with due care on the part of the fiduciary.

(25a) Divide One Trust into Several Trusts and Make Distributions From Those Trusts. —

a. To divide the funds and properties constituting any trusts into two or more identical separate trusts that represent two or more fractional shares of the funds and properties being divided, or to hold any addition or contribution to an existing trust as a separate, identical trust, and to make distributions of income and principal by a method other than pro rata from the separate trusts so created as the fiduciary determines to be in the best interests of the trust beneficiaries. In any case where two separate, identical trusts are created pursuant to this sub-subdivision, one of which is fully exempt from the federal generation-skipping transfer tax and one of which is fully subject to that tax, the fiduciary may thereafter, to the extent possible consistent with the terms of the governing instrument, determine the value of any mandatory or discretionary distributions to trust beneficiaries on the basis of the combined value of both trusts, but may satisfy such distributions from the separate trusts in a manner designed to minimize the current and potential generation-skipping transfer tax.

b. To divide the funds and properties constituting any trusts into two or more separate, nonidentical trusts if (i) the new trusts so created are not inconsistent with the terms of the governing instrument; and (ii) the terms of the new trusts provide in the aggregate for the same succession of interests and beneficiaries as are provided in the original trust.

c. To fund the new trusts created pursuant to the authority granted under this subdivision either (i) by pro rata allocation of the assets of the original trust; (ii) based upon the fair market value of the assets at the date of division; or (iii) in a manner fairly reflecting the net appreciation or depreciation of the trust assets measured from the valuation date to the date of division.

(25b) Consolidate Similar Trusts. — When the trustee is trustee of more than one trust, the terms of which are substantially similar and the beneficiaries of which are identical, to consolidate the assets of those trusts and administer the assets as one trust under the terms of one of the trusts.

(27) Distribute in Cash or Kind. — To make distribution of capital assets of the estate or trust in kind or in cash, or partially in kind and partially in cash, in divided or undivided interests, either pro rata or by a method other than pro rata among all distributees, without regard to the income tax basis or other special tax attributes of such assets, as the fiduciary finds to be most practicable and for the best interests of the distributees; and to determine the value of capital assets for the purpose of making distribution thereof if and when there be more than one distributee thereof, which determination shall be binding upon the distributees unless clearly capricious, erroneous and inequitable; provided, however, that the fiduciary shall not exercise any power under this subdivision unless the fiduciary holds title to or an interest in the property to be distributed and is required or authorized to make distribution thereof.

(28) Pay to or for Minors or Incompetents. — To make payments in money, or in property in lieu of money, to or for a minor or incompetent in any one or more of the following ways:

c. To the legal or natural guardian of such minor or incompetent;

d. To any other person, whether or not appointed guardian of the person by any court, who shall, in fact, have the care and custody of the person of such minor or incompetent.

The fiduciary shall not be under any duty to see to the application of the payments so made, if the fiduciary exercised due care in the selection of the person, including the minor or incompetent, to whom such payments were made; and the receipt of such person shall be full acquittance to the fiduciary.

(28a) Pay to Custodian Under Uniform Gifts or Transfers to Minors Act. — To make any distribution of income or principal, including real property, for the benefit of any distributee to a custodian under the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, Chapter 35A of the General Statutes, or under the provisions of any similar statute in the state where the minor or the custodian resides. Unless a custodian is specifically named in the governing instrument, the fiduciary shall have absolute discretion to nominate any qualified individual or financial institution, including the fiduciary, to serve as custodian, and to nominate one or more substitute custodians.

(29) Apportion and Allocate Receipts and Expenses. — Where not otherwise provided by the Principal and Income Act of 1973, as contained in Chapter 37 of the General Statutes, to determine:

a. What is principal and what is income of any estate or trust and to allocate or apportion receipts and expenses as between principal and income in the exercise of the fiduciary's discretion, and, by way of illustration and not limitation of the fiduciary's discretion, to charge premiums on securities purchased at a premium against principal or income or partly against each;

b. Whether to apply stock dividends and other noncash dividends to income or principal or apportion them as the fiduciary shall deem advisable; and

c. What expenses, costs, taxes (other than estate, inheritance, and succession taxes and other governmental charges) shall be charged against principal or income or apportioned between principal and income and in what proportions.

(30) Make Contracts and Execute Instruments. — To make contracts and to execute instruments, under seal or otherwise, as may be necessary in the exercise of the powers herein granted.

(31) The foregoing powers shall be limited as follows for any trust which shall be classified as a "private foundation" as that term is defined by section 509 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws (including each nonexempt charitable trust described in section 4947(a)(1) of the code which is treated as a private foundation) or nonexempt split-interest trust described in section 4947(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws (but only to the extent that section 508(e) of the code is applicable to such nonexempt split-interest trust under section 4947(a)(2)):

a. The fiduciary shall make distributions of such amounts, for each taxable year, at such time and in such manner as not to become subject to the tax imposed by section 4942 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

b. No fiduciary shall engage in any act of self-dealing as defined in section 4941(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

c. No fiduciary shall retain any excess business holdings as defined in section 4943(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

d. No fiduciary shall make any investments in such manner as to subject the trust to tax under section 4944 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

e. No fiduciary shall make any taxable expenditures as defined in section 4945(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws. CASE NOTES

Sale of Real Property Devised to Testator's Son. — Where a will granted the executor all of the power set forth in this section, neither the will nor this section gave the executor the authority to sell real property devised to the testator's minor son without prior court approval, since the title to the real property vested in the devisee son upon the testator's death, and the executor did not "hold" the property and it was not "at his disposal" within the meaning of this section. Montgomery v. Hinton, 45 N.C. App. 271, 262 S.E.2d 697 (1980).

Power of Executor. — As the executor had the sole power to settle claims, plaintiff had no right under the deed of separation, the escrow agreement, or the buy-sell agreement to challenge the purchase price of stock. Long v. Long, 119 N.C. App. 500, 459 S.E.2d 58 (1995).

Deed of Trust. — In the determination of whether a deed of trust conveyed by the executor is a debt of the estate, the burden is on the party asserting the validity of the debt as an obligation of the estate to show that the executor acted within his authority as executor. Hunter v. Newsom, 121 N.C. App. 564, 468 S.E.2d 802 (1996).

§ 32-28. Appointment of ancillary trustee.

In the event that any property in which a legal or beneficial interest is or may become a part of the assets of a trust whether by purchase, foreclosure, testamentary disposition, transfer inter vivos or in any other manner, in a state or states other than the State of North Carolina or in the District of Columbia or any possession of the United States, the North Carolina trustee is empowered to name an individual or corporate trustee qualified to act in any such other jurisdiction in connection with the property situated therein as ancillary trustee of such property and require such security as may be designated by the North Carolina trustee. The ancillary trustee so appointed shall have all rights, powers, discretions, responsibilities and duties as are delegated to it by the North Carolina trustee, within the limits of the authority possessed by the North Carolina trustee, but shall exercise and discharge the same subject to such limitations or directions of the North Carolina trustee as shall be specified in the instrument evidencing the appointment. The ancillary trustee shall be answerable to the North Carolina trustee for all moneys, assets or other property entrusted to it or received by it in connection with the administration of the trust. The North Carolina trustee may remove such ancillary trustee and may or may not appoint a successor at any time or from time to time as to any or all of the assets. Provided, however, that if the ancillary trustee is to be appointed in any jurisdiction that requires any kind of procedure or judicial order for the appointment of such an ancillary trustee or to authorize it to act, the North Carolina trustee and the ancillary trustee must conform to all such requirements. (1973, c. 186.)

Article 4.

Restrictions on Exercise of Power for Fiduciary's Benefit.

§ 32-34. Restriction on exercise of power for fiduciary's benefit.

(a) For purposes of this section:

(1) "General power of appointment" means any power that would cause income to be taxed to the fiduciary in his individual capacity under section 678 of the Internal Revenue Code and any power that would be a general power of appointment, in whole or in part, under section 2041(b)(1) or 2514(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.

(2) "Internal Revenue Code" means the "Code" as defined in G.S. 105-228.90.

(3) The term "fiduciary" has the meaning set forth in G.S. 32-25.

(b) Unless application of this section is clearly negated by specific reference in the will, trust document, or other written instrument appointing a fiduciary, the following provisions apply to any fiduciary, whether acting as a sole fiduciary or as a co-fiduciary.

(1) Any power conferred upon a fiduciary in his capacity as a fiduciary, but not in his capacity as a beneficiary, which would, except for this section, constitute in whole or in part, a general power of appointment, may not be exercised by the fiduciary in favor of himself, his estate, his creditors, or the creditors of his estate, but may be exercised in any manner provided in subdivision (2) of this subsection.

(2) A power described in subdivision (1) of this subsection may be exercised as follows:

a. The fiduciary may exercise the power in favor of a person other than himself, his estate, his creditors, or the creditors of his estate.

b. If the power described in subdivision (1) of this subsection is conferred upon two or more fiduciaries, it may be exercised by the fiduciary or fiduciaries who are not disqualified from exercising the power as if they were the only fiduciary or fiduciaries.

c. If all of the serving fiduciaries are disqualified from exercising a power, the court that would have jurisdiction to appoint a fiduciary under the instrument, if there were no fiduciary currently serving, shall appoint a special fiduciary whose only power is to exercise the power that cannot be exercised by the other fiduciaries by reason of subdivision (1) of this subsection.

(3) Any power conferred upon the fiduciary in his capacity as a fiduciary to allocate receipts and expenses as between income and principal in his own favor must be exercised in accordance with the provisions of Article 2 of Chapter 37 of the General Statutes, the Principal and Income Act of 1973.

(c) Subsection (b) of this section does not apply to revocable trusts in which the fiduciary of the trust is also the creator of the trust and is still living.

(d) This section applies to all fiduciary relationships in existence on July 1, 1991, and to all other fiduciary relationships that come into existence after that date. The provisions of subsection (b) of this section are declaratory of existing law, and neither modify nor amend existing fiduciary relationships. (1975, c. 135, s. 1; 1991, c. 174, s. 1; 2001-413, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 5, effective September 14, 2001, substituted "G.S. 105-228.90" for "G.S. 105-2.1" at the end of subdivision (a)(2).

CASE NOTES

Withdrawal of Money for Legal Fees Held Proper. — Where lawyer placed settlement proceeds into an account and later withdrew money for services rendered by law firm, lawyer did not violate subsection (a) of this section which prohibits fiduciaries from making distributions to themselves; plaintiff's argument that the definition of fiduciary in § 32-2 applies to subsection (a) was not supported by the statute and the payment by a lawyer to himself of the legal fee for services rendered in a piece of litigation out of the proceeds of settlement of that litigation is not the discretionary disbursement of principal or income to oneself prohibited by this section. Williams v. Randolph, 94 N.C. App. 413, 380 S.E.2d 553, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 437, 384 S.E.2d 547 (1989).

§§ 32-35 through 32-49: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 5.

Compensation.

§ 32-50. Compensation.

(a) Express Trust in Writing. — Unless otherwise provided in the instrument creating the trust relationship, a trustee under an express trust in writing, either inter vivos or testamentary, shall receive compensation for serving as a trustee as follows:

(1) Income Compensation. — An annual charge on gross income of:
   a. Five percent (5%) on the first five thousand dollars ($5,000) of income;
   b. Four percent (4%) on the next seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500) of income;
   c. Three percent (3%) on the next twelve thousand five hundred dollars ($12,500) of income;
   d. Two and one-half percent (2½%) on the next twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) of income;
   e. Two percent (2%) on all income over fifty thousand dollars ($50,000).

(2) Compensation on Principal Consisting of Personal Property. — An annual charge on the current value of that portion of the principal consisting of personal property, of:
   a. Four-tenths (4/10) of one percent (1%) on the first twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) of principal;
   b. Three-tenths (3/10) of one percent (1%) on the next twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) of principal;
   c. Two-tenths (2/10) of one percent (1%) on the next fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) of principal;
   d. One-tenth (1/10) of one percent (1%) on the next one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) of principal;
   e. One-twentieth (1/20) of one percent (1%) on all principal over two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000).

(3) Maximum Compensation. — In addition to the minimum compensation set out in (1) and (2) above, the clerk of superior court at the written request of the trustee may in his discretion allow additional compensation in those cases where the trustee has rendered services beyond the routine services expected by a trustee but in no event shall the total annual aggregate compensation exceed five percent (5%) upon the gross income and the expenditures made in accordance with law, and five-tenths (5/10) of one percent (1%) upon the current value of principal, both real and personal property, held as assets of the trust. In determining the amount of such additional compensation, if any, the clerk of superior court shall consider the time, responsibility, and skill involved in the management activities of the trustee.

For purposes of determining the annual compensation on principal, the current value of the principal shall be determined as of the date of the first annual accounting and each year thereafter on the anniversary of that date by an appraisal of the trustee and certified to the clerk of superior court.

When computing the current value of real property for purposes of subdivision (3) of this subsection (a) the value of a usual dwelling house occupied by a beneficiary and lands reasonably necessary to the use and enjoyment thereof shall not be included.

This section is not applicable to trustees under bond issues, trustees of corporate trusts, employee benefit trusts, deeds of trusts of real property used for purposes of securing loans, or trusts for similar purposes.

(b) Effect of Provisions in the Instrument. — Nothing in the provisions of this section shall be interpreted to prevent a corporate trustee from applying its regularly adopted schedule of compensation in effect and applicable at the time of performance of such services where the settlor or testator in the instrument creating the trust has so stipulated. In those instances where the compensation provision in the instrument creating the trust relationship provides that the compensation shall not exceed the maximum allowed by law this shall be construed as an expression of intention that the compensation shall not exceed the maximum compensation as provided in G.S. 32-50(a)(3), above.

(c) Other Fiduciary Relationships. — Unless otherwise provided, fiduciaries other than trustees under express trusts shall be entitled to compensation fixed in the discretion of the clerk of superior court not to exceed five percent (5%) upon the amounts of receipts, including the value of all personal and real property when received, and upon the expenditures made in accordance with law. In determining the amount of such compensation, both upon the property received and upon expenditures made, the clerk of superior court shall consider the time, responsibility, trouble and skill involved in the management of such property. The clerk of superior court may allow compensation from time to time during the course of the management but the total amount allowed shall be determined on final settlement and shall not exceed the limit fixed in this subsection.

(d) Opening Charge. — Unless otherwise provided in the instrument, a successor trustee or a trustee of a testamentary trust who did not serve as a personal representative for the estate, may make a written request to the clerk of superior court for an allowance of an opening charge for his services as a trustee. The clerk of superior court may in his discretion allow such opening charge not to exceed one percent (1%) of the value of the principal, both real and personal, received. In determining the amount of such charge, if any, the clerk of superior court shall consider the time, responsibility, and skill involved in the opening of the trust or other fiduciary relationship.

(e) Closing Charge. — Unless otherwise provided in the instrument, a trustee of an express trust or other fiduciary may make a written request to the clerk of superior court for the allowance of a closing charge. If the clerk of superior court makes a written finding of fact that there are unusual circumstances supporting such a request he may in his discretion allow a closing charge not to exceed one percent (1%) of the principal, both real and personal. In determining the amount of such charge, if any, the clerk of superior court shall consider the time, responsibility, and skill involved in the closing of the trust or other fiduciary relationship.

(f) Oral Trust Agreements. — Unless otherwise provided in the oral trust agreement, a trustee under a valid oral trust agreement shall receive compensation in accordance with subsection (a).

(g) Principal Less than Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000). — Notwithstanding subsections (a), (b) and (c) above, when the gross value of the principal is ten thousand dollars ($10,000) or less, the clerk of superior court is authorized and empowered to fix the compensation to be received by the trustee or fiduciary in an amount as the clerk in his discretion, deems just and adequate.

(h) Compensation Considered Costs of Management. — All compensation, whether allocated to income or principal shall be charged as part of the costs of management and, upon allowance, may be retained out of the assets against creditors and all other persons claiming an interest.

(i) Charges for Management; Appeals. — Nothing in this section shall be construed:

(1) To prevent the clerk of superior court from allowing reasonable sums for necessary charges and disbursements incurred in the management of the principal; or

(2) To abridge the right of any interested party to appeal an order of the clerk.

(j) Default or Misconduct. — No fiduciary or trustee who has been guilty of default or misconduct in the due execution of his office resulting in the revocation of his appointment shall be entitled to any compensation under the provisions of this Article.

(k) Income Tax Withholding. — For the purpose of computing the compensation whenever any portion of the dividends, interest, rents or other amounts payable to a fiduciary or trustee is required by any law of the United States or other governmental unit to be withheld for income tax purposes by the person, corporation, organization or governmental unit paying the same, the amount so withheld shall be deemed to be income. (1977, c. 814, s. 1.)

Actions of Trustee Not Shown by Increase in Money. — The mere fact that a trust made money is not sufficient to prove that defendant trustee acted openly, fairly and honestly. Estate of Smith ex rel. § 32-51. Counsel fees allowable to attorneys serving as fiduciaries.

The clerk of superior court, in his discretion, is authorized and empowered to allow counsel fees to an attorney serving as a fiduciary or trustee (in addition to the compensation allowed him as a fiduciary or trustee) where such attorney in behalf of the trust or fiduciary relationship renders professional services, as an attorney, which are beyond the ordinary routine of management and of a type which would reasonably justify the retention of legal counsel by any fiduciary or trustee not himself licensed to practice law. (1977, c. 814, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Foreclosure Proceedings. — When a trustee of a deed of trust who is also a licensed attorney performs such extraordinary services as described in this section in connection with a foreclosure proceeding, counsel is entitled under § 45-21.20 to an award of attorney's fees as an "expense[] incurred with respect to the sale or proposed sale. . . ." In re Newcomb, 112 N.C. App. 67, 434 S.E.2d 648 (1993).

Statute Not Applicable Where Attorney Not Representing Estate. — Where attorney placed settlement proceeds in an account and later withdrew money for services which law firm had rendered, attorney did not violate this section by failing to have the legal fee approved by the clerk of superior court since attorney was not serving as the fiduciary or personal representative for the estate but as the attorney for the personal representative; therefore, this section had no applicability to the facts of the case. Williams v. Randolph, 94 N.C. App. 413, 380 S.E.2d 553, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 437, 384 S.E.2d 547 (1989).

The provisions of this Article shall apply to all trusts and fiduciary relationships created on or after January 1, 1978, and to all express trusts in writing existing on January 1, 1978 if the instrument does not contain any provision relating to compensation. (1977, c. 814, s. 1.)

Session Laws 1995, c. 331, which amended this section, in s. 6 provides that this act is not intended to alter or otherwise affect the law of this State regarding presumptions of fraud or fiduciary responsibilities.

CASE NOTES

Power to Make Gifts of Property Generally. — Since the power to make a gift of the principal's property is potentially hazardous or adverse to the principal's interests, such power will not be lightly inferred from broad grants of power contained in a general power of attorney. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

Power of attorney set forth in this section and the powers granted attorneys-in-fact by § 32A-2(1), standing alone, do not authorize an attorney-in-fact to make gifts of the principal's real property. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

The basic premise behind the majority rule that a general power of attorney does not include authority to make gifts of property, is that an attorney-in-fact is presumed to act in the best interests of the principal. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

Power to Make Gift of Real Property Conferred. — Where power of attorney executed by decedent went beyond the short form and expressly provided that attorney-in-fact's powers were to include the power to transfer real estate, the document did expressly confer upon the attorney-in-fact the power to make a gift of real property. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Codification of Chapter. — Session Laws 1983, c. 626, ratified on June 27, 1983, and effective October 1, 1983, as introduced and as enacted, amended the General Statutes by adding a new Chapter 32B. However, at the time there was no Chapter 32A in the General Statutes, and therefore under the authority of G.S. 164-10, and in conformity with the usual rules of codification, the Division of Legislative Drafting and Codification of the Department of Justice authorized the codification of the new provisions as Chapter 32A. See opinion of the Attorney General to Mr. A.E. Blackburn, Clerk of Superior Court, Forsyth County, 53 N.C.A.G. 76 (1984).

Reference to Chapter 32B. — A power of attorney that makes reference to Chapter 32B is legally effective as a durable power of attorney. See opinion of the Attorney General to Mr. A.E. Blackburn, Clerk of Superior Court, Forsyth County, 53 N.C.A.G. 76 (1984).

Reference to Chapter 32A. — A power of attorney that makes reference to Chapter 32A is legally effective as a durable power of attorney. See opinion of the Attorney General to Mr. A.E. Blackburn, Clerk of Superior Court, Forsyth County, 53 N.C.A.G. 76 (1984).

A reference to either Chapter 32A or 32B may be used; however, it is suggested that a reference to Chapter 32A will be less confusing. See opinion of the Attorney General to Mr. A.E. Blackburn, Clerk of Superior Court, Forsyth County, 53 N.C.A.G. 76 (1984).

§ 32A-2. Powers conferred by the Statutory Short Form Power of Attorney set out in G.S. 32A-1.

The Statutory Short Form Power of Attorney set out in G.S. 32A-1 confers the following powers on the attorney-in-fact named therein:

(1) Real Property Transactions. — To lease, purchase, exchange, and acquire, and to agree, bargain, and contract for the lease, purchase, exchange, and acquisition of, and to accept, take, receive, and possess any interest in real property whatsoever, on such terms and conditions, and under such covenants, as said attorney-in-fact shall deem proper; and to maintain, repair, improve, manage, insure, rent, lease, sell, convey, subject to liens, mortgage, subject to deeds of trust, and in any way or manner deal with all or any part of any interest in real property whatsoever, that the principal owns at the time of execution or may thereafter acquire, for under such terms and conditions, and under such covenants, as said attorney-in-fact shall deem proper.

(2) Personal Property Transactions. — To lease, purchase, exchange, and acquire, and to agree, bargain, and contract for the lease, purchase, exchange, and acquisition of, and to accept, take, receive, and possess any personal property whatsoever, tangible or intangible, or interest thereto, on such terms and conditions, and under such covenants, as said attorney-in-fact shall deem proper; and to maintain, repair, improve, manage, insure, rent, lease, sell, convey, subject to liens and mortgages, and hypothecate, and in any way or manner deal with all or any part of any personal property whatsoever, tangible or intangible, or any interest therein, that the principal owns at the time of execution or may thereafter acquire, under such terms and conditions, and under such covenants, as said attorney-in-fact shall deem proper.

(3) Bond, Share, Stock, Securities and Commodity Transactions. — To request, ask, demand, sue for, recover, collect, receive, and hold and possess any bond, share, instrument of similar character, commodity interest or any instrument with respect thereto together with the interest, dividends, proceeds, or other distributions connected therewith, as now are, or shall hereafter become, owned by, or due, owing payable, or belonging to, the principal at the time of execution or in which the principal may thereafter acquire interest, to have, use, and take all lawful means and equitable and legal remedies, procedures, and writs in the name of the principal for the collection and recovery thereof, and to adjust, sell, compromise, and agree for the same, and to make, execute, and deliver for the principal, all endorsements, acquittances, releases, receipts, or other sufficient discharges for the same.

(4) Banking Transaction. — To make, receive, sign, endorse, execute, acknowledge, deliver, and possess checks, drafts, bills of exchange, letters of credit, notes, stock certificates, withdrawal receipts and deposit instruments relating to accounts or deposits in, or certificates of deposit of, banks, savings and loan or other institutions or associations for the principal.

(5) Safe Deposits. — To have free access at any time or times to any safe deposit box or vault to which the principal might have access as lessee or owner.

(6) Business Operating Transactions. — To conduct, engage in, and transact any and all lawful business of whatever nature or kind for the principal.

(7) Insurance Transactions. — To exercise or perform any act, power, duty, right or obligation whatsoever in regard to any contract of life, accident, health, disability or liability insurance or any combination of such insurance procured by or on behalf of the principal prior to execution; and to procure new, different or additional contracts of insurance for the principal and to designate the beneficiary of any such contract of insurance, provided, however, that the agent himself cannot be such beneficiary unless the agent is spouse, child, grandchild, parent, brother or sister of the principal.

(8) Estate Transactions. — To request, ask, demand, sue for, recover, collect, receive, and hold and possess all legacies, bequests, devises, as are, owned by, or due, owing, payable, or belonging to, the principal at the time of execution or in which the principal may thereafter acquire interest, to have, use, and take all lawful means and equitable and legal remedies, procedures, and writs in the name of the principal for the collection and recovery thereof, and to adjust, sell, compromise, and agree for the same, and to make, execute, and deliver for the principal, all endorsements, acquittances, releases, receipts, or other sufficient discharges for the same.

(9) Personal Relationships and Affairs. — To do all acts necessary for maintaining the customary standard of living of the principal, the spouse and children, and other dependents of the principal; to provide medical, dental and surgical care, hospitalization and custodial care for the principal, the spouse, and children, and other dependents of the principal; to continue whatever provision has been made by the principal, for the principal, the spouse, and children, and other dependents of the principal, with respect to automobiles, or other means of transportation; to continue whatever charge accounts have been operated by the principal, for the convenience of the principal, the spouse, and children, and other dependents of the principal, to open such new accounts as the attorney-in-fact shall think to be desirable for the accomplishment of any of the purposes enumerated in this section, and to pay the items charged on such accounts by any person authorized or permitted by the principal or the attorney-in-fact to make such charges; to continue the discharge of any services or duties assumed by the principal, to any parent, relative or friend of the principal; to continue payments incidental to the membership or affiliation of the principal in any church, club, society, order or other organization, or to continue contributions thereto.

In the event the attorney-in-fact named pursuant to G.S. 32A-1 makes a decision regarding the health care of the principal that is contradictory to a decision made by a health care agent appointed pursuant to Article 3 of this Chapter, the decision of the health care agent shall overrule the decision of the attorney-in-fact.

(10) Social Security and Unemployment. — To prepare, execute and file all social security, unemployment insurance and information returns required by the laws of the United States, or of any state or subdivision thereof, or of any foreign government.

(11) Benefits from Military Service. — To execute vouchers in the name of the principal for any and all allowances and reimbursements payable by the United States, or subdivision thereof, to the principal, arising from or based upon military service and to receive, to endorse and to collect the proceeds of any check payable to the order of the principal drawn on the treasurer or other fiscal officer or depository of the United States or subdivision thereof; to take possession and to order the removal and shipment, of any property of the principal from any post, warehouse, depot, dock or other place of storage or safekeeping, either governmental or private, to execute and to deliver any release, voucher, receipt, bill of lading, shipping ticket, certificate or other instrument which the agent shall think to be desirable or necessary for such purpose; to prepare, to file and to prosecute the claim of the principal to any benefit or assistance, financial or otherwise, to which the principal is, or claims to be, entitled, under the provisions of any statute or regulation existing at the creation of the agency or thereafter enacted by the United States or by any state or by any subdivision thereof, or by any foreign government, which benefit or assistance arises from or is based upon military service performed prior to or after execution.

(12) Tax matters. — To prepare, execute, verify and file in the name of the principal and on behalf of the principal any and all types of tax returns, amended returns, declaration of estimated tax, report, protest, application for correction of assessed valuation of real or other property, appeal, brief, claim for refund, or petition, including petition to the Tax Court of the United States, in connection with any tax imposed or proposed to be imposed by any government, or claimed, levied or assessed by any government, and to pay any such tax and to obtain any extension of time for any of the foregoing; to execute waivers or consents agreeing to a later determination and assessment of taxes than is provided by any statute of limitations; to execute waivers of restriction on the assessment and collection of deficiency in any tax; to execute closing agreements and all other documents, instruments and papers relating to any tax liability of any sort; to institute and carry on through counsel any proceeding in connection with determining or contesting any such tax or to recover any tax paid or to resist any claim for additional tax on any proposed assessment or levy thereof; and to enter into any agreements or stipulations for compromise or other adjustments or disposition of any tax.

(13) Employment of Agents. — To employ agents such as legal counsel, accountants or other professional representation as may be appropriate and to grant such agents such powers of attorney or other appropriate authorization as may be required in connection with such representation or by the Internal Revenue Service or other governmental authority.

(14) Gifts to Charities, and to Individuals Other Than the Attorney-In-Fact. —

a. Except as provided in G.S. 32A-2(14)b., to make gifts of any of the principal's property to any individual other than the attorney-in-fact or to any organization described in sections 170(c) and 2522(a) of the Internal Revenue Code or corresponding future provisions of federal tax law, or both, in accordance with the principal's personal history of making or joining in the making of lifetime gifts. As used in this subdivision "Internal Revenue Code" means the "Code" as defined in G.S. 105-228.90.

b. Except as provided in G.S. 32A-2(14)c., or unless gifts are expressly authorized by the power of attorney under G.S. 32A-2(15), a power described in G.S. 32A-2(14)a. may not be exercised by the attorney-in-fact in favor of the attorney-in-fact or the estate, creditors, or creditors of the estate of the attorney-in-fact.

c. If the power described in G.S. 32A-2(14)a. is conferred upon two or more attorneys-in-fact, it may be exercised by the attorney-in-fact or attorneys-in-fact who are not disqualified by G.S. 32A-2(14)b. from exercising the power of appointment as if they were the only attorney-in-fact or attorneys-in-fact.

d. An attorney-in-fact expressly authorized by this section to make gifts of the principal's property may elect to request the clerk of the superior court to issue an order to make a gift of the property of the principal.

(15) Gifts to the Named Attorney-In-Fact. — To make gifts to the attorney-in-fact named in the power of attorney or the estate, creditors, or creditors of the estate of the attorney-in-fact, in accordance with the principal's personal history of making or joining in the making of lifetime gifts. (1983, c. 626, s. 1; 1985, c. 618, s. 2; 1987, c. 77, s. 1; 1991, c. 639, s. 2; 1995, c. 331, ss. 2-4; 1999-385, ss. 1, 2; 2001-413, s. 5.1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 331, which amended this section, in s. 6 provides that this act is not intended to alter or otherwise affect the law of this State regarding presumptions of fraud or fiduciary responsibilities.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 5.1, effective September 14, 2001, substituted "G.S. 105-228.90" for "G.S. 105-2.1" at the end of subdivision (14)a.

CASE NOTES

Gifts of Real Property Generally. — The legislature did not intend to include the power to give a gift of real property under this statute. Whitford v. Gaskill, 119 N.C. App. 790, 460 S.E.2d 346 (1995), modified, 345 N.C. 762, 489 S.E.2d 177 (1997).

The power to give a gift of real property must be expressly conferred; general language of the power to transfer, along with the statutory form, will not suffice. Whitford v. Gaskill, 119 N.C. App. 790, 460 S.E.2d 346 (1995), modified, 345 N.C. 762, 489 S.E.2d 177 (1997).

Since the power to make a gift of the principal's property is potentially hazardous or adverse to the principal's interests, such power will not be lightly inferred from broad grants of power contained in a general power of attorney. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

Power of attorney set forth in § 32A-1 and the powers granted attorneys-in-fact by subsection (1), standing alone, do not authorize an attorney-in-fact to make gifts of the principal's real property. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

The basic premise behind the majority rule that a general power of attorney does not include authority to make gifts of property, is that an attorney-in-fact is presumed to act in the best interests of the principal. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

Power to Make Gift of Real Property Conferred. — Where power of attorney executed by decedent went beyond the short form and expressly provided that attorney-in-fact's powers were to include the power to transfer real estate, the document did expressly confer upon the attorney-in-fact the power to make a gift of real property. Whitford v. Gaskill, 345 N.C. 475, 480 S.E.2d 690 (1997).

§ 32A-3. Provisions not exclusive; reference to Chapter 32B.

(a) The provisions of this Article are not exclusive and shall not bar the use of any other or different form of power of attorney desired by the parties concerned.

(b) A power of attorney under the provisions of this Article may refer to Chapter 32B as the same is set out in Chapter 626 of the 1983 Session Laws. (1983, c. 626, s. 1; 1985, c. 609, s. 4.)

Article 2.

Durable Power of Attorney.

§ 32A-8. Definition.

A durable power of attorney is a power of attorney by which a principal designates another his attorney-in-fact in writing and the writing contains a statement that it is executed pursuant to the provisions of this Article or the words "This power of attorney shall not be affected by my subsequent incapacity or mental incompetence," or "This power of attorney shall become effective after I become incapacitated or mentally incompetent," or similar words showing the intent of the principal that the authority conferred shall be exercisable notwithstanding the principal's subsequent incapacity or mental incompetence. Unless the durable power of attorney provides otherwise, where the grant of power or authority conferred by a durable power of attorney is effective only upon the principal's subsequent incapacity or mental incompetence, any person to whom such writing is presented, in the absence of actual knowledge to the contrary, shall be entitled to rely on an affidavit, executed by the attorney-in-fact and setting forth that such condition exists, as conclusive proof of such incapacity or mental incompetence, subject to the provisions of G.S. 32A-13. (1983, c. 626, s. 1; 1991, c. 173, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on continuing power of attorney, see 5 Campbell L. Rev. 305 (1983).

§ 32A-9. Registered durable power of attorney not affected by incapacity or mental incompetence.

(a) All acts done by an attorney-in-fact pursuant to a durable power of attorney during any period of incapacity or mental incompetence of the principal have the same effect and inure to the benefit of and bind the principal and his successors in interest as if the principal were not incapacitated or mentally incompetent if the power of attorney has been registered under the provisions of subsection (b).

(b) No power of attorney executed pursuant to the provisions of this Article shall be valid subsequent to the principal's incapacity or mental incompetence unless it is registered in the office of the register of deeds of that county in this State designated in the power of attorney, or if no place of registration is designated, in the office of the register of deeds of the county in which the principal has his legal residence at the time of such registration or, if the principal has no legal residence in this State at the time of registration or the attorney-in-fact is uncertain as to the principal's residence in this State, in some county in the State in which the principal owns property or the county in which one or more of the attorneys-in-fact reside. A power of attorney executed pursuant to the provision of this Article shall be valid even though the time of such registration is subsequent to the incapacity or mental incompetence of the principal.

(c) Any person dealing in good faith with an attorney-in-fact acting under a power of attorney executed under this Article shall be protected to the full extent of the powers conferred upon such attorney-in-fact, and no person so dealing with such attorney-in-fact shall be responsible for the misapplication of any money or other property paid or transferred to such attorney-in-fact. (1983, c. 626, s. 1; 1987, c. 77, s. 2.)

§ 32A-10. Relation of attorney-in-fact to court-appointed fiduciary.

(a) If, following execution of a durable power of attorney, a court of the principal's domicile appoints a conservator, guardian of the principal's person or estate, or other fiduciary charged with the management of all of the principal's property or all of his property except specified exclusions, the attorney-in-fact is accountable to the fiduciary as well as to the principal. The fiduciary has the same power to revoke or amend the power of attorney that the principal would have had if he were not incapacitated or mentally incompetent.

(b) A principal may nominate, by a durable power of attorney, the conservator, guardian of his estate, or guardian of his person for consideration by the court if protective proceedings for the principal's person or estate are thereafter commenced. The court shall make its appointment in accordance with the principal's most recent nomination in a durable power of attorney except for good cause or disqualification. (1983, c. 626, s. 1.)

§ 32A-11. File with clerk, records, inventories, accounts, fees, and commissions.

(a) Within 30 days after registration of the power of attorney as provided in G.S. 32A-9(b), the attorney-in-fact shall file with the clerk of superior court in the county of such registration a copy of the power of attorney. Every attorney-in-fact acting under a power of attorney under this Article subsequent to the principal's incapacity or mental incompetence shall keep full and accurate records of all transactions in which he acts as agent of the principal and of all property of the principal in his hands and the disposition thereof.

(b) Any provision in the power of attorney waiving or requiring the rendering of inventories and accounts shall govern, and a power of attorney that waives the requirement to file inventories and accounts need not be filed with the clerk of superior court. Otherwise, subsequent to the principal's incapacity or mental incompetence, the attorney-in-fact shall file in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the power of attorney is filed, inventories of the property of the principal in his hands and annual and final accounts of the receipt and disposition of property of the principal and of other transactions in behalf of the principal. The power of the clerk to enforce the filing and his duties in respect to audit and recording of such accounts shall be the same as those in respect to the accounts of administrators, but the fees and charges of the clerk shall be computed or fixed only with relation to property of the principal required to be shown in the accounts and inventories. The fees and charges of the clerk shall be paid by the attorney-in-fact out of the principal's money or other property and allowed in his accounts. If the powers of an attorney-in-fact shall terminate for any reason whatever, he, or his executors or administrators, shall have the right to have a judicial settlement of a final account by any procedure available to executors, administrators or guardians.

(c) In the event that any power of attorney executed pursuant to the provisions of this Article does not contain the amount of commissions that the attorney-in-fact is entitled to receive or the way such commissions are to be determined, and the principal should thereafter become incapacitated or mentally incompetent, the commissions such attorney-in-fact shall receive subsequent to the principal's incapacity or mental incompetence shall be fixed in the discretion of the clerk of superior court pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 32-50(c). (1983, c. 626, s. 1.)

§ 32A-12. Appointment, resignation, removal, and substitutions.

(a) A power of attorney executed under this Article may contain any provisions, not unlawful, relating to the appointment, resignation, removal and substitution of an attorney-in-fact, and to the rights, powers, duties and responsibilities of the attorney-in-fact.

(b) If all attorneys-in-fact named in the instrument or substituted shall die, or cease to exist, or shall become incapable of acting, and all methods for substitution provided in the instrument have been exhausted, such power of attorney shall cease to be effective. Any substitution by a person authorized to make it shall be in writing signed and acknowledged by such person. Notice of every other substitution shall be in writing and acknowledged by the person substituted. No substitution or notice subsequent to the principal's subsequent incapacity or mental incompetence shall be effective until it has been recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county in which the power of attorney has been recorded. (1983, c. 626, s. 1.)

§ 32A-13. Revocation.

(a) Every power of attorney executed pursuant to the provisions of this Article and registered in an office of the register of deeds in this State as provided in G.S. 32A-9(b) shall be revoked by:

(1) The death of the principal; or

(2) Registration in the office of the register of deeds where the power of attorney has been registered of an instrument of revocation executed and acknowledged by the principal while he is not incapacitated or mentally incompetent, or by the registration in such office of an instrument of revocation executed by any person or corporation who is given such power of revocation in the power of attorney, or by this Article, with proof of service thereof in either case on the attorney-in-fact in the manner prescribed for service of summons in civil actions.

(b) Every power of attorney executed pursuant to the provisions of this Article which has not been registered in an office of the register of deeds in this State shall be revoked by:

(1) The death of the principal;

(2) Any method provided in the power of attorney;

(3) Being burnt, torn, canceled, obliterated, or destroyed, with the intent and for the purpose of revoking it, by the principal himself or by another person in his presence and by his direction, while the principal is not incapacitated or mentally incompetent; or

(4) A subsequent written revocatory document executed and acknowledged in the manner provided herein for the execution of durable powers of attorney by the principal while not incapacitated or mentally incompetent and delivered to the attorney-in-fact in person or to his last known address by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested.

(c) As to acts undertaken in good faith reliance upon an affidavit executed by the attorney-in-fact stating that he did not have, at the time of exercise of the power, actual knowledge of the termination of the power by revocation pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 32A-13(b) or by the principal's death, such affidavit is conclusive proof of the nonrevocation or nontermination of the power at that time. This section does not affect any provision in a power of attorney for its termination by the expiration of time or occurrence of an event other than an express revocation. (1983, c. 626, s. 1; 1991, c. 173, s. 2.)

(b) A power of attorney under the provisions of this Article may refer to Chapter 32B as the same is set out in Chapter 626 of the 1983 Session Laws. (1983, c. 626, s. 1; 1985, c. 609, s. 5; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 992, s. 1.)

Article 2A.

Authority of Attorney-In-Fact to Make Gifts.

§ 32A-14.1. Gifts under power of attorney.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, if any power of attorney authorizes an attorney-in-fact to do, execute, or perform any act that the principal might or could do or evidences the principal's intent to give the attorney-in-fact full power to handle the principal's affairs or deal with the principal's property, the attorney-in-fact shall have the power and authority to make gifts in any amount of any of the principal's property to any individual or to any organization described in sections 170(c) and 2522(a) of the Internal Revenue Code or corresponding future provisions of federal tax law, or both, in accordance with the principal's personal history of making or joining in the making of lifetime gifts. As used in this subsection, "Internal Revenue Code" means the "Code" as defined in G.S. 105-228.90.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, or unless gifts are expressly authorized by the power of attorney, a power described in subsection (a) of this section may not be exercised by the attorney-in-fact in favor of the attorney-in-fact or the estate, creditors, or the creditors of the estate of the attorney-in-fact.

(c) If the power of attorney described in subsection (a) of this section is conferred upon two or more attorneys-in-fact, it may be exercised by the attorney-in-fact or attorneys-in-fact who are not disqualified by subsection (b) of this section from exercising the power of appointment as if they were the only attorney-in-fact or attorneys-in-fact. If the power of attorney described in subsection (a) of this section is conferred upon one attorney-in-fact, the power of attorney may be exercised by the attorney-in-fact in favor of the attorney-in-fact or the estate, creditors, or the creditors of the estate of the attorney-in-fact pursuant to an order issued by the clerk in accordance with the procedures and provisions of Article 2B of this Chapter.

(d) Subsection (a) of this section shall not in any way impair the right, power, or ability of any principal, by express terms in the power of attorney, to authorize or limit the authority of any attorney-in-fact to make gifts of the principal's property.

(e) An attorney-in-fact expressly authorized by this section to make gifts of the principal's property may elect to request that the clerk of the superior court issue an order approving a gift or gifts of the property of the principal.

§ 32A-14.10. Gifts authorized by court order.

An attorney-in-fact, acting under a power of attorney that does not contain the grant of power set out in G.S. 32A-14.1 and does not expressly authorize gifts of the principal's property, may initiate a special proceeding before the clerk of superior court in accordance with the procedures of Article 33 of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes for authority to make gifts of the principal's property to the extent not inconsistent with the express terms of the power of attorney. The principal and any guardian ad litem appointed for the principal are the defendants in a proceeding pursuant to this Article. The clerk may issue an order setting forth the amounts, frequency, recipients, and proportions of any gifts of the principal's property after considering all relevant factors, including, but not limited to: (i) the size of the principal's estate; (ii) the principal's foreseeable obligations; (iii) the principal's foreseeable maintenance needs; (iv) the principal's personal history of making or joining in the making of lifetime gifts; (v) the principal's estate plan; and (vi) the tax effects of the gifts. If there is no appeal from the decision and order of the clerk within the time prescribed by law, the clerk's order shall be submitted to the judge of the superior court and approved by the court before the order becomes effective. (1995, c. 331, s. 5.)

§ 32A-14.11. Appeal; stay effected by appeal.

Any party in interest may appeal from the decision of the clerk to the judge of the superior court. The procedure for appeal is governed by Article 27A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. An appeal taken from the decision of the clerk stays the decision and order of the clerk until the cause is heard and determined by the judge upon the appeal taken. (1995, c. 331, s. 5; 1999-216, s. 7.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 331, which enacted this article, in s. 6 provides that this act is not intended to alter or otherwise affect the law of this State with regard to presumptions of fraud of fiduciary responsibilities.

§ 32A-14.12. Costs and fees.

All costs and fees arising in connection with a proceeding under this Article shall be assessed the same as costs and fees are assessed in special proceedings governed by Article 33 of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. (1995, c. 331, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 331, which enacted this article, in s. 6 provides that this act is not intended to alter or otherwise affect the law of this State with regard to presumptions of fraud or fiduciary responsibilities.

Article 3.

Health Care Powers of Attorney.

§ 32A-15. General purpose of this Article.

(a) The General Assembly recognizes as a matter of public policy the fundamental right of an individual to control the decisions relating to his or her medical care, and that this right may be exercised on behalf of the individual by an agent chosen by the individual.

(b) The purpose of this Article is to establish an additional, nonexclusive method for an individual to exercise his or her right to give, withhold, or withdraw consent to medical treatment, including mental health treatment, when the individual lacks sufficient understanding or capacity to make or communicate health care decisions.

(c) This Article is intended and shall be construed to be consistent with the provisions of Article 23 of Chapter 90 of the General Statutes provided that in the event of a conflict between the provisions of this Article and Article 23 of Chapter 90, the provisions of Article 23 of Chapter 90 control. If no declaration has been executed by the principal as provided in G.S. 90-321 that expressly covers the principal's present condition and if the health care agent has been given the specific authority in a health care power of attorney to authorize the withholding or discontinuing of life-sustaining procedures when the principal is in the present condition, these procedures may be withheld or discontinued as provided in the health care power of attorney upon the direction and under the supervision of the attending physician. In this case, G.S. 90-322 does not apply.

(d) This Article is intended and shall be construed to be consistent with the provisions of Part 3 of Article 16 of Chapter 130A of the General Statutes. In the event of a conflict between the provisions of this Article and Part 3 of Article 16 of Chapter 130A, the provisions of Part 3 of Article 16 of Chapter 130A control. (1991, c. 639, s. 1; 1993, c. 523, s. 1; 1998-198, s. 1; 1998-217, s. 53.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 523, which amended this section, in s. 4 provides that powers of attorney made before October 1, 1993, remain in full force and effect.

§ 32A-16. Definitions.

As used in this Article, unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the following terms have the meanings specified:

(1) "Health care" means any care, treatment, service, or procedure to maintain, diagnose, treat, or provide for the principal's physical or mental health or personal care and comfort including, life-sustaining procedures. "Health care" includes mental health treatment as defined in subdivision (8) of this section.

(2) "Health care agent" means the person appointed as a health care attorney-in-fact.

(3) "Health care power of attorney" means a written instrument, signed in the presence of two qualified witnesses, and acknowledged before a notary public, pursuant to which an attorney-in-fact or agent is appointed to act for the principal in matters relating to the health care of the principal, and which substantially meets the requirements of this Article.

(4) "Life-sustaining procedures" are those forms of care or treatment which only serve to artificially prolong the dying process and may include mechanical ventilation, dialysis, antibiotics, artificial nutrition and hydration, and other forms of treatment which sustain, restore or supplant vital bodily functions, but do not include care necessary to provide comfort or to alleviate pain.

(5) "Principal" means the person making the health care power of attorney.

(6) "Qualified witness" means a witness in whose presence the principal has executed the health care power of attorney, who believes the principal to be of sound mind, and who states that he (i) is not related within the third degree to the principal nor to the principal's spouse, (ii) does not know nor have a reasonable expectation that he would be entitled to any portion of the estate of the principal upon the principal's death under any existing will or codicil of the principal or under the Intestate Succession Act as it then provides, (iii) is not the attending physician or mental health treatment provider of the principal, nor an employee of the attending physician or mental health treatment provider, nor an employee of a health facility in which the principal is a patient, nor an employee of a nursing home or any group-care home in which the principal resides, and (iv) does not have a claim against any portion of the estate of the principal at the time of the principal's execution of the health care power of attorney.

(7) "Advance instruction for mental health treatment" or "advance instruction" means a written instrument as defined in G.S. 122C-72(1) pursuant to which the principal makes a declaration of instructions, information, and preferences regarding mental health treatment.

(8) "Mental health treatment" means the process of providing for the physical, emotional, psychological, and social needs of the principal for the principal's mental illness. "Mental health treatment" includes, but is not limited to, electroconvulsive treatment, treatment of mental illness with psychotropic medication, and admission to and retention in a facility for care or treatment of mental illness. (1991, c. 639, s. 1; 1998-198, s. 1; 1998-217, s. 53.)

§ 32A-17. Who may make a health care power of attorney.

Any person having understanding and capacity to make and communicate health care decisions, who is 18 years of age or older, may make a health care power of attorney. (1991, c. 639, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on the standard of mental capacity in North Carolina for legal transactions of the elderly, see 32 Wake Forest L. Rev. 563 (1997).

§ 32A-18. Who may act as a health care attorney-in-fact.

Any competent person who is not engaged in providing health care to the principal for remuneration, and who is 18 years of age or older, may act as a health care agent. (1991, c. 639, s. 1.)

§ 32A-19. Extent of authority; limitations of authority.

(a) A principal, pursuant to a health care power of attorney, may grant to the health care agent full power and authority to make health care decisions to the same extent that the principal could make those decisions for himself or herself if he or she had understanding and capacity to make and communicate health care decisions, including without limitation, the power to authorize withholding or discontinuing life-sustaining procedures and the power to authorize the giving or withholding of mental health treatment. A health care power of attorney may also contain or incorporate by reference any lawful guidelines or directions relating to the health care of the principal as the principal deems appropriate.

(a1) A health care power of attorney may incorporate or be combined with an advance instruction for mental health treatment prepared pursuant to Part 2 of Article 3 of Chapter 122C of the General Statutes. A health care agent's decisions about mental health treatment shall be consistent with any statements the principal has expressed in an advance instruction for mental health treatment if one so exists, and if none exists, shall be consistent with what the agent believes in good faith to be the manner in which the principal would act if the principal did not lack sufficient understanding or capacity to make or communicate health care decisions. A health care agent is not subject to criminal prosecution, civil liability, or professional disciplinary action for any action taken in good faith pursuant to an advance instruction for mental health treatment.

(b) A health care power of attorney may authorize the health care agent to exercise any and all rights the principal may have with respect to anatomical gifts, the authorization of any autopsy, and the disposition of remains.

(c) A health care power of attorney may contain, and the authority of the health care agent shall be subject to, the specific limitations or restrictions as the principal deems appropriate.

(d) The powers and authority granted to the health care agent pursuant to a health care power of attorney shall be limited to the matters addressed in it, and, except as necessary to exercise such powers and authority relating to health care, shall not confer any power or authority with respect to the property or financial affairs of the principal.

(e) This Article shall not be construed to invalidate a power of attorney that authorizes an agent to make health care decisions for the principal, which was executed prior to October 1, 1991.

(f) A health care power of attorney does not limit any authority in Article 5 of Chapter 122C of the General Statutes either to take a person into custody or to admit, retain, or treat a person in a facility. (1991, c. 639, s. 1; 1998-198, s. 1; 1998-217, s. 53.)

Editor's Note. — This section was amended by Session Laws 1998-198, s. 1, in the coded bill drafting format provided by § 120-20.1. The subsection designations have been set out above at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

§ 32A-20. Effectiveness and duration; revocation.

(a) A health care power of attorney shall become effective when and if the physician or physicians or, in the case of mental health treatment, physician or eligible psychologist as defined in G.S. 122C-3(13d), designated by the principal determine in writing that the principal lacks sufficient understanding or capacity to make or communicate decisions relating to the health care of the principal, and shall continue in effect during the incapacity of the principal. The determination shall be made by the principal's attending physician or eligible psychologist if the physician or physicians or eligible psychologist designated by the principal is unavailable or is otherwise unable or unwilling to make this determination or if the principal failed to designate a physician or physicians or eligible psychologist to make this determination. A health care power of attorney may include a provision that, if the principal does not designate a physician for reasons based on his religious or moral beliefs as specified in the health care power of attorney, a person designated by the principal in the health care power of attorney may certify in writing, acknowledged before a notary public, that the principal lacks sufficient understanding or capacity to make or communicate decisions relating to his health care. The person so designated must be a competent person 18 years of age or older, not engaged in providing health care to the principal for remuneration, and must be a person other than the health care agent.

(b) A health care power of attorney is revoked by the death of the principal. A health care power of attorney may be revoked by the principal at any time, so long as the principal is capable of making and communicating health care decisions. The principal may exercise this right of revocation by executing and acknowledging an instrument of revocation, by executing and acknowledging a subsequent health care power of attorney, or in any other manner by which the principal is able to communicate an intent to revoke. This revocation becomes effective only upon communication by the principal to each health care agent named in the revoked health care power of attorney and to the principal's attending physician or eligible psychologist.

(c) The authority of a health care agent who is the spouse of the principal shall be revoked upon the entry by a court of a decree of divorce or separation between the principal and the health care agent; provided that if the health care power of attorney designates a successor health care agent, the successor shall serve as the health care agent, and the health care power of attorney shall not be revoked. (1991, c. 639, s. 1; 1993, c. 523, s. 2; 1998-198, s. 1; 1998-217, s. 53.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 523, which amended this section, in s. 4 provides that powers of attorney made before October 1, 1993 remain in full force and effect.

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on the standard of mental capacity in North Carolina for legal transactions of the elderly, see 32 Wake Forest L. Rev. 563 (1997).

§ 32A-21. Appointment, resignation, removal, and substitution.

(a) A health care power of attorney may contain provisions relating to the appointment, resignation, removal and substitution of the health care agent.

(b) If all health care agents named in the instrument or substituted, die or for any reason fail or refuse to act, and all methods of substitution have been exhausted, the health care power of attorney shall cease to be effective. (1991, c. 639, s. 1.)

§ 32A-22. Relation of the health care agent to a court-appointed fiduciary and to a general attorney-in-fact.

(a) If, following the execution of a health care power of attorney, a court of competent jurisdiction appoints a guardian of the person of the principal, or a general guardian with powers over the person of the principal, the health care power of attorney shall cease to be effective upon the appointment and qualification of the guardian. The guardian shall act consistently with G.S. 35A-1201(a)(5).

(b) A principal may nominate, by a health care power of attorney, the guardian of the person of the principal if a guardianship proceeding is thereafter commenced. The court shall make its appointment in accordance with the principal's most recent nomination in an unrevoked health care power of attorney, except for good cause shown.

(c) The execution of a health care power of attorney shall not revoke, restrict or otherwise affect any nonhealth care powers granted by the principal to an attorney-in-fact pursuant to a general power of attorney; provided that the powers granted to the health care agent with respect to health care matters shall be superior to any similar powers granted by the principal to an attorney-in-fact under a general power of attorney.

(d) A health care power of attorney may be combined with or incorporated into a general power of attorney which is executed in accordance with the requirements of this Article. (1991, c. 639, s. 1; 1998-198, s. 1; 1998-217, s. 53.)

§ 32A-23. Article 2, Chapter 32A, not applicable.

The provisions of Article 2 of this Chapter shall not be applicable to a health care power of attorney executed pursuant to this Article. (1991, c. 639, s. 1.)

§ 32A-24. Reliance on health care power of attorney; defense.

(a) Any physician or other health care provider involved in the medical care of the principal may rely upon the authority of the health care agent contained in a signed and acknowledged health care power of attorney in the absence of actual knowledge of revocation of the health care power of attorney. The physician or health care provider may rely upon a copy of the health care power of attorney obtained from the Advance Health Care Directive Registry maintained by the Secretary of State pursuant to Article 21 of Chapter 130A of the General Statutes to the same extent that the individual may rely upon the original document.

(b) All health care decisions made by a health care agent pursuant to a health care power of attorney during any period following a determination that the principal lacks understanding or capacity to make or communicate health care decisions shall have the same effect as if the principal were not incapacitated and were present and acting on his or her own behalf. Any health care provider relying in good faith on the authority of a health care agent shall be protected to the full extent of the power conferred upon the health care agent, and no person so relying on the authority of the health care agent shall be liable, by reason of his reliance, for actions taken pursuant to a decision of the health care agent.

(c) The withholding or withdrawal of life-sustaining procedures by or under the orders of a physician pursuant to the authorization of a health care agent shall not be considered suicide or the cause of death for any civil or criminal purpose nor shall it be considered unprofessional conduct or a lack of professional competence. Any person, institution or facility, including without limitation the health care agent and the attending physician, against whom criminal or civil liability is asserted because of conduct described in this section, may interpose this section as a defense. (1991, c. 639, s. 1; 2001-455, s. 3; 2001-513, s. 30(b).)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-455, s. 3, as amended by Session Laws 2001-513, s. 30(b), effective May 1, 2002, added the last sentence in subsection (a).

§ 32A-25. Statutory form health care power of attorney.

The use of the following form in the creation of a health care power of attorney is lawful and, when used, it shall meet the requirements of and be construed in accordance with the provisions of this Article:

(Notice: This document gives the person you designate your health care agent broad powers to make health care decisions, including mental health treatment decisions, for you. Except to the extent that you express specific limitations or restrictions on the authority of your health care agent, this power includes the power to consent to your doctor not giving treatment or stopping treatment necessary to keep you alive, admit you to a facility, and administer certain treatments and medications. This power exists only as to those health care decisions for which you are unable to give informed consent.

This form does not impose a duty on your health care agent to exercise granted powers, but when a power is exercised, your health care agent will have to use due care to act in your best interests and in accordance with this document. For mental health treatment decisions, your health care agent will act according to how the health care agent believes you would act if you were making the decision. Because the powers granted by this document are broad and sweeping, you should discuss your wishes concerning life-sustaining procedures, mental health treatment, and other health care decisions with your health care agent.

Use of this form in the creation of a health care power of attorney is lawful and is authorized pursuant to North Carolina law. However, use of this form is an optional and nonexclusive method for creating a health care power of attorney and North Carolina law does not bar the use of any other or different form of power of attorney for health care that meets the statutory requirements.)

1. Designation of health care agent.

I, _____, being of sound mind, hereby appoint

Name: _____

Home Address: _____

Home Telephone Number _____ Work Telephone Number _____

as my health care attorney-in-fact (herein referred to as my "health care agent") to act for me and in my name (in any way I could act in person) to make health care decisions for me as authorized in this document.

If the person named as my health care agent is not reasonably available or is unable or unwilling to act as my agent, then I appoint the following persons (each to act alone and successively, in the order named), to serve in that capacity: (Optional)

A. Name: _____

Home Address: _____

Home Telephone Number _____ Work Telephone Number _____

B. Name: _____
Home Address: _____
Home Telephone Number _____ Work Telephone Number _____

Each successor health care agent designated shall be vested with the same power and duties as if originally named as my health care agent.

2. Effectiveness of appointment.

(Notice: This health care power of attorney may be revoked by you at any time in any manner by which you are able to communicate your intent to revoke to your health care agent and your attending physician.)

Absent revocation, the authority granted in this document shall become effective when and if the physician or physicians designated below determine that I lack sufficient understanding or capacity to make or communicate decisions relating to my health care and will continue in effect during my incapacity, until my death. This determination shall be made by the following physician or physicians. For decisions related to mental health treatment, this determination shall be made by the following physician or eligible psychologist. 3. General statement of authority granted.

Except as indicated in section 4 below, I hereby grant to my health care agent named above full power and authority to make health care decisions, including mental health treatment decisions, on my behalf, including, but not limited to, the following:

A. To request, review, and receive any information, verbal or written, regarding my physical or mental health, including, but not limited to, medical and hospital records, and to consent to the disclosure of this information.

B. To employ or discharge my health care providers.

C. To consent to and authorize my admission to and discharge from a hospital, nursing or convalescent home, or other institution.

D. To consent to and authorize my admission to and retention in a facility for the care or treatment of mental illness.

E. To consent to and authorize the administration of medications for mental health treatment and electroconvulsive treatment (ECT) commonly referred to as "shock treatment".

F. To give consent for, to withdraw consent for, or to withhold consent for, X ray, anesthesia, medication, surgery, and all other diagnostic and treatment procedures ordered by or under the authorization of a licensed physician, dentist, or podiatrist. This authorization specifically includes the power to consent to measures for relief of pain.

G. To authorize the withholding or withdrawal of life-sustaining procedures when and if my physician determines that I am terminally ill, permanently in a coma, suffer severe dementia, or am in a persistent vegetative state. Life-sustaining procedures are those forms of medical care that only serve to artificially prolong the dying process and may include mechanical ventilation, dialysis, antibiotics, artificial nutrition and hydration, and other forms of medical treatment which sustain, restore or supplant vital bodily functions. Life-sustaining procedures do not include care necessary to provide comfort or alleviate pain.

I DESIRE THAT MY LIFE NOT BE PROLONGED BY LIFE-SUSTAINING PROCEDURES IF I AM TERMINALLY ILL, PERMANENTLY IN A COMA, SUFFER SEVERE DEMENTIA, OR AM IN A PERSISTENT VEGETATIVE STATE.

H. To exercise any right I may have to make a disposition of any part or all of my body for medical purposes, to donate my organs, to authorize an autopsy, and to direct the disposition of my remains.

I. To take any lawful actions that may be necessary to carry out these decisions, including the granting of releases of liability to medical providers.

4. Special provisions and limitations.

(Notice: The above grant of power is intended to be as broad as possible so that your health care agent will have authority to make any decisions you could make to obtain or terminate any type of health care. If you wish to limit the scope of your health care agent's powers, you may do so in this section.)

A. In exercising the authority to make health care decisions on my behalf, the authority of my health care agent is subject to the following special provisions and limitations (Here you may include any specific limitations you deem appropriate such as: your own definition of when life-sustaining treatment should be withheld or discontinued, or instructions to refuse any specific types of treatment that are inconsistent with your religious beliefs, or unacceptable to you for any other reason.):

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 523, which amended this section, in s. 4, provides that powers of attorney made before October 1, 1993 remain in full force and effect.

This section was amended by Session Laws 1998-198, s. 1, in the coded bill drafting format provided by § 120-20.1. At the beginning of the form, the amendment included a heading without the proper bill drafting coding, which read "HEALTH CARE POWER OF ATTORNEY". The form has been set out in the manner above at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

§ 32A-26. Health care power of attorney and declaration of desire for natural death.

A health care power of attorney meeting the requirements of this Article may be combined with or incorporated into a Declaration of A Desire For A Natural Death which meets the requirements of Article 23 of Chapter 90 of the General Statutes. (1991, c. 639, s. 1.)

§ 32A-27: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 4.

Consent to Health Care for Minor.

§ 32A-28. Purpose.

(a) The General Assembly recognizes as a matter of public policy the fundamental right of a parent to delegate decisions relating to health care for the parent's minor child where the parent is unavailable for a period of time by reason of travel or otherwise.

(b) The purpose of this Article is to establish a nonexclusive method for a parent to authorize in the parent's absence consent to health care for the parent's minor child. This Article is not intended to be in derogation of the common law or of Article 1A of Chapter 90 of the General Statutes. (1993, c. 150, s. 1.)

§ 32A-29. Definitions.

As used in this Article, unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the term:

(1) "Agent" means the person authorized pursuant to this Article to consent to and authorize health care for a minor child.

(2) "Authorization to consent to health care for minor" means a written instrument, signed by the custodial parent and acknowledged before a notary public, pursuant to which the custodial parent authorizes an agent to authorize and consent to health care for the minor child of the custodial parent, and which substantially meets the requirements of this Article.

(3) "Custodial parent" means a parent having sole or joint legal custody of that parent's minor child.

(4) "Health care" means any care, treatment, service or procedure to maintain, diagnose, treat, or provide for a minor child's physical or mental or personal care and comfort, including life sustaining procedures and dental care.

(5) "Life sustaining procedures" are those forms of care or treatment which only serve to artificially prolong life and may include mechanical ventilation, dialysis, antibiotics, artificial nutrition and hydration, and other forms of treatment which sustain, restore, or supplant vital bodily functions, but do not include care necessary to provide comfort or to alleviate pain.

(6) "Minor or minor child" means an individual who has not attained the age of 18 years and who has not been emancipated. (1993, c. 150, s. 1.)

§ 32A-30. Who may make an authorization to consent to health care for minor.

Any custodial parent having understanding and capacity to make and communicate health care decisions who is 18 years of age or older or who is emancipated may make an authorization to consent to health care for the parent's minor child. (1993, c. 150, s. 1.)

§ 32A-31. Extent and limitations of authority.

(a) A custodial parent of a minor child, pursuant to an authorization to consent to health care for minor, may grant an agent full power and authority to consent to and authorize health care for the minor child to the same extent that a custodial parent could give such consent and authorization.

(b) An authorization to consent to health care for minor may contain, and the authority of the agent designated shall be subject to, any specific limitations or restrictions as the custodial parent deems appropriate.

(c) A custodial parent may not, pursuant to an authorization to consent to health care for minor, authorize an agent to consent to the withholding or withdrawal of life sustaining procedures. (1993, c. 150, s. 1.)

§ 32A-32. Duration of authorization; revocation.

(a) An authorization to consent to health care for minor shall be automatically revoked as follows:

(1) If the authorization to consent to health care for minor specifies a date after which it shall not be effective, then the authorization shall be automatically revoked upon such date.

(2) An authorization to consent to health care for minor shall be revoked upon the minor child's attainment of the age of 18 years or upon the minor child's emancipation.

(3) An authorization to consent to health care for minor executed by a custodial parent shall be revoked upon the termination of such custodial parent's rights to custody of the minor child.

(b) An authorization to consent to health care for minor may be revoked at any time by the custodial parent making such authorization. The custodial parent may exercise such right of revocation by executing and acknowledging an instrument of revocation, by executing and acknowledging a subsequent authorization to consent to health care for the minor, or in any other manner in which the custodial parent is able to communicate the parent's intent to revoke. Such revocation shall become effective only upon communication by the custodial parent to the agent named in the revoked authorization.

(c) In the event of a disagreement regarding the health care for a minor child between two or more agents authorized pursuant to this Article to consent to and authorize health care for a minor, or between any such agent and a parent of the minor, whether or not the parent is a custodial parent, then any authorization to consent to health care for minor designating any person as an agent shall be revoked during the period of such disagreement, and the provisions of health care for the minor during such period shall be governed by the common law, the provisions of Article 1A of Chapter 90, and other provisions of law, as if no authorization to consent to health care for minor had been executed.

(d) An authorization to consent to health care for minor shall not be affected by the subsequent incapacity or mental incompetence of the custodial parent making such authorization. (1993, c. 150, s. 1.)

§ 32A-33. Reliance on authorization to consent to health care for minor.

(a) Any physician, dentist, or other health care provider involved in the health care of a minor child may rely upon the authority of the agent named in a signed and acknowledged authorization to consent to health care for minor in the absence of actual knowledge that the authorization has been revoked or is otherwise invalid.

(b) Any consent to health care for a minor child given by an agent pursuant to an authorization to consent to health care for minor shall have the same effect as if the custodial parent making the authorization were present and acting on behalf of the parent's minor child. Any physician, dentist, or other health care provider relying in good faith on the authority of an agent shall be protected to the full extent of the power conferred upon the agent, and no person so relying on the authority of the agent shall be liable, by reason of reliance, for actions taken pursuant to a consent of the agent. (1993, c. 150, s. 1.)

§ 32A-34. Statutory form authorization to consent to health care for minor.

The use of the following form in the creation of any authorization to consent to health care for minor is lawful and, when used, it shall meet the requirements and be construed in accordance with the provisions of this Article.

"Authorization to Consent to Health Care for Minor."

I, _____, of _____ County, _____, am the custodial parent having legal custody of _____, a minor child, age _____, born _____, _____. CASE NOTES

Cited in Schout v. Schout, 140 N.C. App. 722, 538 S.E.2d 213 (2000).

§ 33A-2. Scope and jurisdiction.

(a) This Chapter applies to a transfer if at the time of the transfer, the transferor, the minor, or the custodian is a resident of this State or the custodial property is located in this State and the transfer instrument refers to this Chapter in the designation under G.S. 33A-9(a) by which the transfer is made. The custodianship so created remains subject to this Chapter despite a subsequent change in residence of a transferor, the minor, or the custodian, or the removal of custodial property from this State.

(b) A person designated as custodian under this Chapter is subject to personal jurisdiction in this State with respect to any matter relating to the custodianship.

(c) A transfer that purports to be made and which is valid under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act, or a substantially similar act, of another state is governed by the law of the designated state and may be executed and is enforceable in this State if at the time of the transfer, the transferor, the minor, or the custodian is a resident of the designated state or the custodial property is located in the designated state.

(d) This Chapter shall not be construed to be the exclusive procedures for transferring property interests to minors and any other procedure for such transfers authorized by the law of this State and, not specifically repealed shall continue in effect. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-3. Nomination of custodian.

(a) A person having the right to designate the recipient of property transferable upon the occurrence of a future event may revocably nominate a custodian to receive the property for a minor beneficiary upon the occurrence of the event by naming the custodian followed in substance by the words: "as custodian for _____ (name of minor) under the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act." The nomination may name one or more persons as substitute custodians to whom the property must be transferred, in the order named, if the first nominated custodian dies before the transfer or is unable, declines, or is ineligible to serve. The nomination may be made in a will, a trust, a deed, an instrument exercising a power of appointment, or in a writing designating a beneficiary of contractual rights which is registered with or delivered to the payor, issuer, or other obligor of the contractual rights.

(b) A custodian nominated under this section must be a person to whom a transfer of property of that kind may be made under G.S. 33A-9(a).

(c) The nomination of a custodian under this section does not create custodial property until the nominating instrument becomes irrevocable or a transfer to the nominated custodian is completed under G.S. 33A-9. Unless the nomination of a custodian has been revoked, upon the occurrence of the future event the custodianship becomes effective and the custodian shall enforce a transfer of the custodial property pursuant to G.S. 33A-9. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-4. Transfer by gift or exercise of power of appointment.

A person may make a transfer by irrevocable gift to, or the irrevocable exercise of a power of appointment in favor of, a custodian for the benefit of a minor pursuant to G.S. 33A-9. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-6. Other transfer by fiduciary.

(a) Subject to subsection (c), a personal representative or trustee may make an irrevocable transfer to the transferor or to another adult or trust company as custodian for the benefit of a minor pursuant to G.S. 33A-9, in the absence of a will or under a will or trust that does not contain an authorization to do so.

(b) Subject to subsection (c), a guardian may make an irrevocable transfer to the transferor or to another adult or trust company as custodian for the benefit of the minor pursuant to Section 33A-9.

(c) A transfer under subsection (a) or (b) may be made only if (i) the personal representative, trustee, or guardian considers the transfer to be in the best interest of the minor, and (ii) the transfer is not prohibited by or inconsistent with provisions of the applicable will, trust agreement, or other governing instrument. If the value of the property transferred under subsections (a) or (b) will total more than ten thousand dollars ($10,000), whether in one or more transfers, that transfer must be authorized by the court. If a transfer under subsections (a) or (b) is to the transferor then the transfer must be authorized by the court. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-7. Transfer by obligor.

(a) Subject to subsections (b) and (c), a person not subject to Section 33A-5 or 33A-6 who holds property of or owes a liquidated debt to a minor not having a guardian may make an irrevocable transfer to a custodian for the benefit of the minor pursuant to Section 33A-9.

(b) If a person having the right to do so under Section 33A-3 has nominated a custodian under that section to receive the custodial property, the transfer must be made to that person.

(c) If no custodian has been nominated under Section 33A-3, or all persons so nominated as custodian die before the transfer or are unable, decline, or are ineligible to serve, a transfer under this section may be made to an adult member of the minor's family or to a trust company if the aggregate value of the property does not exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in value. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-8. Receipt for custodial property.

A written acknowledgement by a custodian of delivery authorized by this Chapter constitutes a sufficient receipt and discharge for custodial property transferred to the custodian. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-9. Manner of creating custodial property and effecting transfer; designation of initial custodian; control.

Dated: _____

(Signature of Custodian)

(c) A transferor shall place the custodian in control of the custodial property as soon as practicable. (1987, c. 563, s. 2; 1997-456, s. 27.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in Jimenez v. Brown, 131 N.C. App. 818, 509 S.E.2d 241 (1998).

§ 33A-10. Single custodianship.

A transfer may be made only for one minor, and only one person may be the custodian. All custodial property held under this Chapter by the same custodian for the benefit of the same minor constitutes a single custodianship. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-11. Validity and effect of transfer.

(a) The validity of a transfer made in a manner prescribed in this Chapter is not affected by:

(1) Failure of the transferor to comply with G.S. 33A-9(c) concerning control;

(2) Designation of an ineligible custodian, except designation of the transferor in the case of property for which the transferor is ineligible to serve as custodian under G.S. 33A-9(a);

(3) Death or incapacity of a person nominated under G.S. 33A-3 or designated under G.S. 33A-9 as custodian or the disclaimer of the office by that person; or

(4) The use of an abbreviation in referring to this Chapter or the equivalent act of another state.

(b) A transfer made pursuant to G.S. 33A-9 is irrevocable, and the custodial property is indefeasibly vested in the minor, but the custodian has all the rights, powers, duties, and authority provided in this Chapter, and neither the minor nor the minor's legal representative has any right, power, duty, or authority with respect to the custodial property except as provided in this Chapter.

(c) By making a transfer, the transferor incorporates in the disposition all the provisions of this Chapter and grants to the custodian, and to any third person dealing with a person designated as custodian, the respective powers, rights, and immunities provided in this Chapter. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in Jimenez v. Brown, 131 N.C. App. 818, 509 S.E.2d 241 (1998).

§ 33A-12. Care of custodial property.

(a) A custodian shall:

(1) Take control of custodial property;

(2) Register or record title to custodial property if appropriate; and

(3) Collect, hold, manage, invest, and reinvest custodial property.

(b) In dealing with custodial property, a custodian shall observe the standard of care that would be observed by a prudent person dealing with property of another and is not limited by any other statute restricting investments by fiduciaries. If a custodian has a special skill or expertise or is named custodian on the basis of representations of a special skill or expertise, the custodian shall use that skill or expertise. However, a custodian, in the custodian's discretion and without liability to the minor or the minor's estate, may retain any custodial property received from a transferor.

(c) A custodian may invest in or pay premiums on life insurance or endowment policies on (i) the life of the minor only if the minor or the minor's estate or the custodian in the capacity of custodian is the sole beneficiary, or (ii) the life of another person in whom the minor has an insurable interest only to the extent that the minor, the minor's estate, or the custodian in the capacity of custodian, is the irrevocable beneficiary.

(d) A custodian at all times shall keep custodial property separate and distinct from all other property in a manner sufficient to identify it clearly as custodial property of the minor. Custodial property may be held with other owners if owned as tenants in common, provided that the property interest of the owners is fixed. Custodial property subject to recordation is so identified if it is recorded, and custodial property subject to registration is so identified if it is either registered, or held in an account designated, in the name of the custodian, followed in substance by the words: "as a custodian for _____ (name of minor) under the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act."

(e) A custodian shall keep records of all transactions with respect to custodial property, including information necessary for the preparation of the minor's tax returns, and shall make them available for inspection at reasonable intervals by a parent or legal representative of the minor, or by the minor if the minor has attained the age of 14 years. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in Jimenez v. Brown, 131 N.C. App. 818, 509 S.E.2d 241 (1998).

§ 33A-13. Powers of custodian.

(a) A custodian, acting in a custodial capacity, has all the rights, powers, and authority over custodial property that unmarried adult owners have over their own property, but a custodian may exercise those rights, powers, and authority in the capacity of a custodian only.

(b) This section does not relieve a custodian from liability for breach of G.S. 33A-12. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-14. Use of custodial property.

(a) A custodian may deliver or pay to the minor or expend for the minor's benefit so much of the custodial property as the custodian considers advisable for the use and benefit of the minor, without court order and without regard to (i) the duty or ability of the custodian personally or of any other person to support the minor, or (ii) any other income or property of the minor which may be applicable or available for that purpose.

(b) On petition of an interested person or the minor if the minor has attained the age of 14 years, the court may order the custodian to deliver or pay to the minor or expend for the minor's benefit so much of the custodial property as the court considers advisable for the use and benefit of the minor.

(c) A delivery, payment, or expenditure under this section is in addition to, not in substitution for, and does not affect any obligation of a person to support the minor. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-15. Custodian's expenses, compensation, and bond.

(a) A custodian is entitled to pay from and to be reimbursed from custodial property for reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of the custodian's duties.

(b) Except for one who is a transferor under G.S. 33A-4, a custodian has a noncumulative election during each calendar year to charge reasonable compensation for services performed during that year.

(c) Except as provided in G.S. 33A-18(f), a custodian need not give a bond. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-16. Exemption of third person from liability.

A third person in good faith and without court order may act on the instructions of or otherwise deal with any person purporting to make a transfer or purporting to act in the capacity of a custodian and, in the absence of knowledge, is not responsible for determining:

(1) The validity of the purported custodian's designation;

(2) The propriety of, or the authority under this Chapter for, any act of the purported custodian;

(3) The validity or propriety under this Chapter of any instrument or instructions executed or given either by the person purporting to make a transfer or by the purported custodian; or

(4) The propriety of the application of any property of the minor delivered to the purported custodian. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-17. Liability to third persons.

(a) A claim based on (i) a contract entered into by a custodian acting in a custodial capacity, (ii) an obligation arising from the ownership or control of custodial property, or (iii) a tort committed during the custodianship, may be asserted against the custodial property by proceeding against the custodian in the custodial capacity, whether or not the custodian or the minor is personally liable therefor.

(b) A custodian may be held personally liable:

(1) On a contract properly entered into in the custodial capacity if the custodian fails to reveal that capacity and to identify the custodianship in the contract; or

(2) For an obligation arising from control of custodial property or for a tort committed during the custodianship if the custodian is personally at fault.

(c) A minor is not personally liable for an obligation arising from ownership of custodial property or for a tort committed during the custodianship unless the minor is personally at fault. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Attachment by Creditors for Debts Incurred in Tort Action. — An irrevocable custodial account set up under this section by a judgment debtor for his son could not be attached by judgment creditors, where the tort on which the creditors' judgment was based occurred before the custodianship was established. Jimenez v. Brown, 131 N.C. App. 818, 509 S.E.2d 241 (1998).

§ 33A-18. Renunciation, resignation, death, or removal of custodian; designation of successor custodian.

(a) A person nominated under G.S. 33A-3 or designated under G.S. 33A-9 as custodian may decline to serve by delivering a written disclaimer to the person who made the nomination or to the transferor or the transferor's legal representative. If the event giving rise to a transfer has not occurred and no substitute custodian able, willing, and eligible to serve was nominated under G.S. 33A-3, the person who made the nomination may nominate a substitute custodian under G.S. 33A-3; otherwise the transferor or the transferor's legal representative shall designate a substitute custodian at the time of the transfer, in either case from among the persons eligible to serve as custodian for that kind of property under G.S. 33A-9(a).

(b) A custodian at any time may designate a trust company or an adult other than the transferor under G.S. 33A-4 as successor custodian by executing and dating an instrument of designation before a subscribing witness other than the successor. If the instrument of designation does not contain or is not accompanied by the resignation of the custodian, the designation of the successor does not take effect until the custodian resigns, dies, becomes incapacitated, or is removed.

(c) A custodian may resign at any time by delivering written notice to the minor if the minor has attained the age of 14 years and to the successor custodian and by delivering the custodial property to the successor custodian.

(d) If a custodian is ineligible, dies, or becomes incapacitated without having effectively designated a successor and the minor has attained the age of 14 years, the minor may designate as successor custodian, in the manner prescribed in subsection (b), an adult member of the minor's family, a guardian of the minor, or a trust company. If the minor has not attained the age of 14 years or fails to act within 60 days after the ineligibility, death, or incapacity, the guardian of the minor becomes successor custodian. If the minor has no guardian or the guardian declines to act, the transferor, the legal representative of the transferor or of the custodian, an adult member of the minor's family, or any other interested person may petition the court to designate a successor custodian.

(e) A custodian who declines to serve under subsection (a) or resigns under subsection (c), or the legal representative of a deceased or incapacitated custodian, as soon as practicable, shall put the custodial property and records in the possession and control of the successor custodian. The successor custodian by action may enforce the obligation to deliver custodial property and records and becomes responsible for each item as received.

(f) A transferor, the legal representative of a transferor, an adult member of the minor's family, a guardian of the person of the minor, the guardian of the minor, or the minor if the minor has attained the age of 14 years may petition the court to remove the custodian for cause and to designate a successor custodian other than a transferor under G.S. 33A-4 or to require the custodian to give appropriate bond. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-19. Accounting by and determination of liability of custodian.

(a) A minor who has attained the age of 14 years, the minor's guardian of the person or legal representative, an adult member of the minor's family, a transferor, or a transferor's legal representative may petition the court (i) for an accounting by the custodian or the custodian's legal representative; or (ii) for a determination of responsibility, as between the custodial property and the custodian personally, for claims against the custodial property unless the responsibility has been adjudicated in an action under G.S. 33A-17 to which the minor or the minor's legal representative was a party.

(b) A successor custodian may petition the court for an accounting by the predecessor custodian.

(c) The court, in a proceeding under this Chapter or the presiding judge in any other proceeding, may require or permit the custodian or the custodian's legal representative to account.

(d) If a custodian is removed under G.S. 33A-18(f), the court shall require an accounting and order delivery of the custodial property and records to the successor custodian and the execution of all instruments required for transfer of the custodial property. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-20. Termination of custodianship.

The custodian shall transfer in an appropriate manner the custodial property to the minor or to the minor's estate upon the earlier of:

(1) The minor's attainment of 21 years of age with respect to custodial property transferred under G.S. 33A-4 or G.S. 33A-5, except that any transferor may have custodial property transferred to the minor at any time after the age of 18 and before the age of 21 by a designation in the following words or their equivalent: "The custodian shall transfer this property to _____ (name of minor) when he reaches the age of ____ (age after 18 and before 21).";

(2) The minor's attainment of age 18 with respect to custodial property transferred under G.S. 33A-6 or G.S. 33A-7; or

(3) The minor's death. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

§ 33A-21. Applicability.

This Chapter applies to a transfer within the scope of G.S. 33A-2 made after October 1, 1987, if:

(1) The transfer purports to have been made under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act of North Carolina; or

(2) The instrument by which the transfer purports to have been made uses in substance the designation "as custodian under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act" or "as custodian under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act" of any other state, and the application of this Chapter is necessary to validate the transfer. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-22. Effect on existing custodianships.

(a) Any transfer of custodial property as now defined in this Chapter made before October 1, 1987, is validated notwithstanding that there was no specific authority in the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act of North Carolina for the coverage of custodial property of that kind or for a transfer from that source at the time the transfer was made.

(b) This Chapter applies to all transfers made before October 1, 1987, in a manner and form prescribed in the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act of North Carolina, except insofar as the application impairs constitutionally vested rights or extends the duration of custodianships in existence on October 1, 1987.

(c) G.S. 33A-1 and G.S. 33A-20 with respect to the age of a minor for whom custodial property is held under this Chapter shall not apply to custodial property held in a custodianship that terminated because of the minor's attainment of the age of majority and before October 1, 1987. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

The UTMA age provisions did not apply to a custodianship established for the plaintiff by her grandparents where to do so would impair her constitutionally vested rights and would extend the duration of the custodianship beyond her eighteenth birthday. Schout v. Schout, 140 N.C. App. 722, 538 S.E.2d 213 (2000).

§ 33A-23. Uniformity of application and construction.

This Chapter shall be applied and construed to effect its general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to the subject of this Chapter among states enacting it. (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

§ 33A-24. Short title.

This Chapter may be cited as the "North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act." (1987, c. 563, s. 2.)

Chapter 33B.

North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act (hereinafter "the North Carolina Act") is based upon the Uniform Custodial Trust Act (hereinafter "the Uniform Act"). The most significant differences between the North Carolina Act and the Uniform Act are (i) the deletion of references to multiple beneficiaries, (ii) changes made to be consistent with Chapter 35A of the General Statutes, relating to guardianship, (iii) the addition of witness and acknowledgment requirements for writings or instruments designating someone other than the beneficiary's estate to receive the custodial trust property at the beneficiary's death, and (iv) the addition of a limitation on the aggregate value of transfers or declarations of property to the corpus of a custodial trust. The preference for single beneficiaries reflects a belief that the complexity raised by multiple beneficiaries is not justified by any competing benefit when the ease of creating a separate custodial trust for each individual beneficiary is considered. The drafters believed that although there is no absolute need for the North Carolina Act to be consistent with Chapter 35A, consistency in the various types of guardians, coordination of the use of the terms "incapacitated" and "incompetency," and the incorporation of the procedures and flexibility of Chapter 35A are all desirable goals.

It is believed that the North Carolina Act will be used for two main purposes. The first will be for the creation of a statutory trust with a built-in set of principles and forms that can be used for providing support to an incapacitated person. The second purpose is to allow an individual, while competent, to designate a person to act as the individual's trustee in the event of the individual's incapacity.

The North Carolina Commentary reflects changes to the Uniform Act that were made by the drafters. The Commentary discusses most but not all changes made by the General Assembly.

Editor's Note. — Permission to include the Official Comments was granted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and The American Law Institute. It is believed that the Official Comments will prove of value to the practitioner in understanding and applying the text of this Chapter.

§ 33B-1. Definitions.

As used in this act:

(1) "Adult" means an individual who is at least 21 years of age.

(2) "Beneficiary" means an individual for whom property has been transferred to or held under a declaration of trust by a custodial trustee for the individual's use and benefit under this act.

(3) "Guardian of the estate" means a guardian appointed for the purpose of managing the property, estate, and business affairs of a ward, or a person legally authorized to perform substantially the same functions. As used in this act the term "guardian of the estate" includes a general guardian or guardian of the estate appointed under the provisions of Chapter 35A of the General Statutes.

(4) "Court" means the clerk of superior court of this State.

(5) "Custodial trust property" means an interest in property transferred to or held under a declaration of trust by a custodial trustee under this act and the income from and proceeds of that interest.

(6) "Custodial trustee" means a person designated as trustee of a custodial trust under this act or a substitute or successor to the person designated.

(7) "Guardian of the person" means a guardian appointed for the purpose of performing duties relating to the care, custody, and control of a ward, but not a person who is only a guardian ad litem. As used in this act the term "guardian of the person" includes a general guardian or guardian of the person appointed under the provisions of Chapter 35A of the General Statutes.

(8) "Incapacitated" means lacking the ability to manage property and business affairs effectively by reason of mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, confinement, detention by a foreign power, disappearance, being under 21 years of age, or other disabling cause.

(9) "Legal representative" means a personal representative or guardian of the estate.

(10) "Member of the beneficiary's family" means a beneficiary's spouse, descendant, parent, grandparent, brother, sister, uncle or aunt, whether of the whole or half blood or by adoption.

(11) "Person" means an individual, corporation, business trust, estate, trust, partnership, joint venture, association, or any other legal or commercial entity.

(12) "Personal representative" means an executor, administrator, or special administrator of a decedent's estate, a person legally authorized to perform substantially the same function, or a successor to any of them.

(13) "State" means a state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

(14) "Transferor" means a person who creates a custodial trust by transfer or declaration.

(15) "Trust company" means a financial institution, corporation, or other legal entity, authorized to exercise general trust powers in North Carolina.

(16) "General guardian" means a guardian of both the estate and the person. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) "Adult" is a person 18 years of age for the purpose of custodial trusts. The result of this is that a person 18 years of age will be eligible to be a custodial trustee under this Act, although he or she may not be eligible under UTMA since minor custodianships under UTMA may run to age 21 and the minor could in some cases be older than the custodian. As the Comments under Section 1 of UTMA explain, the age of 21 was retained under that Act because the Internal Revenue Code continues to permit a "minority trust" under Section 2053(c), to continue in effect until age 21 and because it was believed that most transferors creating trusts or custodianships for minors would prefer to retain the property under management for the benefit of the young person as long as possible. The difference has little or no practical consequence and serves the purpose of each Act.

(3) "Conservator" is defined broadly to permit identification of a person functioning as a conservator.

(4) "Court" means _____ court. Here the likelihood is that most states would utilize the same court, e.g., the probate court, that deals with conservators and estates.

(5 and 6) The terms, "custodial trust property" and "custodial trustee," are used throughout to identify clearly the statutory trust property and trustee under this Act. The statutory trust concept is used throughout the Act.

(7) A definition of guardian has been included and is based on the Uniform Probate Code Section 5-103(6).

(8) A definition of incapacitated has been included, for the purpose of this Act, because incapacity of the beneficiary converts the trust from a revocable trust to a discretionary trust. The definition is taken from the Uniform Probate Code Section 5-401(c) relating to the person who is unable to manage property. Compare Uniform Probate Code Section 5-103(7). Note that Section 10(a)(ii) permits a transferor to direct that the trust shall be administered as one for an incapacitated person. Section 10 deals specifically with the determination of incapacity.

(10) The beneficiary's family is broadly defined to identify persons who may have standing to seek judicial intervention or accounting (Sections 13 and 15).

(11) The definition of a person is taken from the Uniform Probate Code Section 1-201(29).

(12) Personal representative is broadly defined and the definition reflects that in the Uniform Probate Code Section 1-201(30).

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The definition of "adult" is modified to mean an individual who is at least 21 rather than 18 years of age. The term "conservator" and its definition are replaced with the term "guardian of the estate" and its definition from the guardianship statutes, Chapter 35A of the General Statutes. The term "guardian" and its definition are replaced with the term "guardian of the person" and its definition from the guardianship statutes, Chapter 35A of the General Statutes. The definitions of "guardian of the estate" and "guardian of the person" are modified to include a general guardian or guardian of the estate whose powers are limited in accordance with an order of the court concerning the extent of incompetence under G.S. 35A-1112(d). The term "general guardian" is added and defined to be a guardian of both the estate and the person. The term "court" is defined to mean the clerk of superior court of this State. The definition of "incapacitated" is modified to substitute "being under 21 years of age" for "minority." The definition of "legal representative" is modified to substitute "guardian of the estate" for "conservator." The definition of "member of the beneficiary's family" is modified to delete the references to "stepchild" and "stepparent," paralleling a change in the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act and reflecting the drafters' belief that the inclusion of the references in the definition is undesirable. The definition of "trust company" is modified to refer to a legal entity authorized to exercise general trust powers in North Carolina.

§ 33B-2. Custodial trust; general.

(a) A person may create a custodial trust of property by a written transfer of the property to a trust company or an adult other than the transferor executed in any lawful manner, naming as beneficiary an individual, who may be the transferor, in which the transferee is designated, in substance, as custodial trustee under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act. A transfer is executed in a lawful manner if the formalities, if any, of the transfer of the particular property necessary under general principles of law are satisfied.

(b) An adult may create a custodial trust of property by a written declaration which names as beneficiary an individual other than the declarant. The declaration shall be evidenced by registration of the property or by other instrument of declaration executed in any lawful manner, describing the property and designating the declarant, in substance, as custodial trustee under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act. A registration or other declaration of trust for the sole benefit of the declarant is not a custodial trust under this act. A registration or declaration is executed in a lawful manner if the formalities, if any, of the transfer of the beneficial interest in the particular property under general principles of law are satisfied.

(c) Title to custodial trust property is in the custodial trustee, and the beneficial interest is in the beneficiary.

(d) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this section, a transferor may not terminate a custodial trust.

(e) The beneficiary, if not incapacitated, or the guardian of the estate of an incapacitated beneficiary, may terminate a custodial trust by delivering to the custodial trustee a writing signed by the beneficiary or guardian of the estate declaring the termination. If not previously terminated, the custodial trust terminates on the death of the beneficiary.

(f) Any person may augment existing custodial trust property by the addition of other property pursuant to a written instrument satisfying the requirements of subsections (a) or (b) of this section.

(g) The transferor may designate, or authorize the designation of, a successor custodial trustee in the trust instrument.

(h) This act does not displace or restrict other means of creating trusts. A trust, the terms of which do not conform to this act, may be enforceable according to its terms under the law. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Section 2 is the principal provision authorizing the creation of a custodial trust and utilizes the concept of incorporation by reference when the transferee or titleholder of property is designated as custodial trustee under the Act. Section 2 sets forth the general effect of such a transfer. Section 18 provides forms which satisfy the requirements of this section and identifies customary methods of transferring assets to create a custodial trust.

Section 2(a) provides that a trust may be created by transfer to another for the benefit of the transferor or another. This is expected to be the most common way in which a custodial trust would be created. However, a custodial trust may also be created by declaration of trust by the owner of property to hold it for the benefit of another as is provided in Section 2(b). A declaration in trust by the owner of property for the sole benefit of the owner is not contemplated by this Act because such an attempt may be considered ineffective as a trust due to the total identity of the trustee and beneficiary. However, the doctrine of merger would not preclude an effective transfer under this Act for the benefit of the transferor and one or more other beneficiaries. See Section 6.

A custodial trust could be created by the exercise of a valid power of attorney or power of appointment given by the owner of property as one of the transfers "consistent with law."

These alternatives permit the major uses of the custodial trust to be accomplished expeditiously. For example, an older person, wishing to be relieved of management of property may transfer property to another for benefit of the transferor or of the transferor's spouse or child. The declaration may be used to establish a trust of which the owner is trustee to continue management of the property for benefit of another, such as a spouse or child. The trust may include a provision for distribution of assets remaining at the beneficiary's death directly to a named distributee.

This Act does not preclude the creation of trusts under other existing law, statutory or nonstatutory, but is designed to facilitate the creation of simple trusts incorporating the provisions of this Act. The written transfer or declaration "consistent with law" requires that the formalities of the transfer of particular property necessary under other law will be observed, e.g., if land is involved, the requirements of a proper deed and recording must be satisfied.

Section 2(c) provides for the retention of the beneficial interest in the custodial trust property in the beneficiary and, of course, not in the custodial trustee. The extensive control and benefit in the beneficiary who is not incapacitated maintains the simplicity of the trust and avoids tax complexity. The custodial trustee is given the title to the property and authority to act with regard to the property only as is authorized by the statute. The custodial trustee's powers are enumerated in Section 8.

Section 2(e) gives the adult beneficiary, who is not incapacitated, the power to terminate the custodial trust at any time during his or her lifetime. This power of termination exists in any beneficiary who is not incapacitated whether the beneficiary was or was not the transferor. A beneficiary may be determined to be incapacitated or the transferor may designate that the trust is to be administered as a trust for an incapacitated beneficiary under Section 10, in which event the beneficiary does not have the power to terminate. However, the designation of incapacity by the transferor can be modified by the trustee or the court by reason of changed circumstances pursuant to Section 10. The Act precludes termination by exercise of a durable power of attorney if the beneficiary is incompetent (Section 7(f)). If the donor prefers not to permit the beneficiary the power to terminate or to designate the beneficiary as incapacitated under Section 10, an individually drafted trust outside the scope of this Act would seem appropriate.

Upon termination of a custodial trust, the custodial trust property must be distributed as provided in Section 17.

A transfer under this Act is irrevocable except to the extent the beneficiary may terminate it. Hence, a transfer to a trustee for benefit of a person other than the transferor is not revocable by the transferor. If a power of revocation were retained by the transferor, that would be a trust outside the scope of this Act and enforceable under general law pursuant to subsection 2(h).

This Act does not provide for protection of the custodial trust assets from the claims of creditors of the beneficiary, whether those are general or governmental creditors. Other laws of the state remain unaffected. In this regard, unusual problems of handicapped persons and the coordination of resources and state or federal services call for special provision and planning outside the scope of this Act.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section is modified for clarification and to conform to the decision not to authorize multiple beneficiaries. See comments to G.S. 33B-6. The section is also modified to limit those who may be custodial trustees to natural persons and trust companies authorized to act in a fiduciary capacity under North Carolina law.

§ 33B-3. Custodial trust to begin in the future.

(a) A person may create a custodial trust to begin in the future by designating the transferee in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act". A designation under this section may be made in:

(1) A will;
(2) A trust;
(3) An insurance policy;
(4) A deed;
(5) A payable-on-death account;
(6) An instrument exercising a power of appointment, provided that the donor of the power has not expressly prohibited the exercise of the power in favor of a custodial trustee, and provided further that the beneficiary of the custodial trust is a permissible object of the power, although the custodial trustee need not be a permissible object of the power; or
(7) A writing designating a beneficiary of contractual rights, including but not limited to rights under a pension or profit sharing plan, which is registered with or delivered to the fiduciary, payor, issuer, or obligor of the contractual right.

(b) Persons may be designated as substitute or successor custodial trustees to whom the property must be paid or transferred in the order named if the preceding designated custodial trustee is unable or unwilling to serve. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section permits a future custodial trustee to be designated to receive property for the beneficiary of a custodial trust to be effective upon the occurrence of a future event or transfer. To accommodate changes in circumstances during the passage of time, one or more successors or substitute custodial trustees can also be designated. The designation of the future custodial trustee and the beneficiary can be made in an instrument which is revocable or irrevocable depending upon the nature of the transaction or transfer. Any person designated as a future custodial trustee may decline to serve before the transfer occurs or may resign under Section 13 after the transfer.

The source of this section is Section 3 of UTMA.

The enacting state's rule against perpetuities may limit or affect the creation of a custodial trust upon the occurrence of a future event, but because the use of a custodial trust usually contemplates dispositions for the benefit of living persons, perpetuity problems should rarely arise.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The designation of a future custodial trustee under this section is revocable or irrevocable depending upon the nature of the transaction or transfer. For example, the designation of a future custodial trustee in a will ordinarily would be revocable until the death of the testator, because wills are freely revocable. On the other hand, the designation of a future custodial trustee in a deed ordinarily would become irrevocable upon delivery of the deed, because deeds usually are irrevocable.

In order to avoid confusion between revocable and irrevocable transfers, this section is rewritten to list separately the types of transactions or transfers to which it applies. New subsection (a) deletes some ambiguous language about "property payable or transferable upon a future event ..." in favor of a simpler concept of "a custodial trust to begin in the future." To aid in this restructuring, former subsection (c) is incorporated into new subsection (a).

The list of transactions deletes the term "multiple party account" in favor of the term "payable-on-death account." The term "multiple party account" is a Uniform Probate Code term that has no statutory use in North Carolina. Further, certain types of multiple party accounts are not properly within the scope of this section; for example, a depositor's establishing a joint account between the depositor and a custodian would be a present transfer governed by G.S. 33B-2.

The list of transactions adds the term "pension or profit sharing plan" as a specific example of payments pursuant to contract. This term appears also in G.S. 36A-6 (which exempts employee trusts from the Rule Against Perpetuities). The requirement of registration or delivery of the writing under subdivision (a)(7) is mentioned in this subdivision but not in others because the law applicable to the other kinds of transactions is well settled. This organization avoids an ambiguity in the Uniform Act as to whether the registration or delivery requirement applies to all kinds of transactions.

The catchline of this section is changed from "Custodial trustee for future payment or delivery" to "Custodial trust to begin in the future" to clarify the concept of the section.

§ 33B-4. Form and effect of receipt and acceptance by custodial trustee; jurisdiction.

(a) Obligations of a custodial trustee, including the obligation to follow directions of the beneficiary, arise under this act upon the custodial trustee's acceptance, express or implied, of the custodial trust property.

(b) The custodial trustee's acceptance may be evidenced by a writing stating in substance:

"CUSTODIAL TRUSTEE'S RECEIPT AND ACCEPTANCE

I, _____, (name of custodial trustee) acknowledge receipt of the custodial trust property described below or in the attached instrument and accept the custodial trust as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act. I undertake to administer and distribute the custodial trust property pursuant to the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act. My obligations as custodial trustee are subject to the directions of the beneficiary unless the beneficiary is designated as, is, or becomes incapacitated. The custodial trust property consists of _____.

Dated: _____

(Signature of Custodial Trustee)".

(c) Upon accepting custodial trust property, a person designated as custodial trustee under this act is subject to personal jurisdiction in this State with respect to any matter relating to the custodial trust. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Although a custodial trust is created by a transfer that satisfies Section 2 of the Act, the responsibility and obligations upon the trustee do not arise until the trustee has accepted the transfer. This detailed section is included to call the attention of the parties to the effective receipt and acceptance by the custodial trustee. Once a custodial trustee accepts the transfer of the custodial trust property, the custodial trustee assumes the obligation of a custodial trustee under this Act. The acceptance can be expressed or implied, but it is recommended that the written acceptance provided for in Section 4(b) be utilized. By the acceptance the custodial trustee submits to the personal jurisdiction of the courts of the enacting state for the purpose of the custodial trust, despite subsequent relocation of the parties or of the custodial trust property. The principal sources of these provisions are Sections 8 and 9 of UTMA and the analogous provisions under the Uniform Probate Code, Sections 3-602, 5-208, 5-307, 7-103.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section is modified for clarification. The phrase "in this State" is substituted for the phrase "of the court" to reflect the intended use of the term "court" in the Uniform Act, i.e., to provide for the exercise of personal jurisdiction over custodial trustees by the courts of this State.

§ 33B-5. Transfer to custodial trustee by fiduciary or obligor; facility of payment.

(a) A person, including a fiduciary other than a custodial trustee, who holds property of or owes a debt to an incapacitated individual not having a guardian of the estate may make a transfer to an adult member of the beneficiary's family or to a trust company as custodial trustee for the use and benefit of the incapacitated individual. If the value of the property or the debt exceeds twenty thousand dollars ($20,000), the transfer is not effective unless authorized by the court.

(b) A written acknowledgment of delivery, signed by a custodial trustee, is a sufficient receipt and discharge for property transferred to the custodial trustee pursuant to this section.

(c) This section shall not apply when the disposition of the property has been directed by an instrument designating a custodial trustee pursuant to G.S. 33B-3. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section is in the nature of a facility-of-payment provision that permits persons owing money to an incapacitated individual to discharge a fixed obligation by a payment to a custodial trustee under this Act. The section does not authorize the custodial trustee to settle claims for disputed amounts but only to acknowledge an effective receipt of property paid or delivered. It is based primarily on Sections 6 and 7 of UTMA and includes the protections of Section 8 of UTMA as well. It permits a custodial trust to be established as a substitute for a conservatorship to receive payments due an incapacitated individual. Also, see Section 11, which protects transferors and other third parties dealing with the custodial trustee.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

A designation under this section may be made in a will, a trust, a deed, a payable-on-death account, an insurance policy or an instrument exercising a power of appointment. A designation may also be made by a writing designating a beneficiary of contractual rights that is registered with or delivered to the fiduciary, payor, issuer, or obligor of the contractual right. Subsection (c) is added to clarify that the section cannot be used to defeat a custodial trust created under G.S. 33B-3.

§ 33B-6. Single beneficiaries; separate custodial trusts.

(a) Beneficial interests in a custodial trust may not be created for multiple beneficiaries.

(b) All custodial trust property held under this act by the same custodial trustee for the use and benefit of a single beneficiary may be administered as a single custodial trust. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This Act, unlike UTMA, does not preclude a custodial trust for more than one beneficiary. Adult persons creating custodial trusts are likely to set up custodial trusts in various forms, e.g., parents may wish to set up a custodial trust for their children or for themselves, then for a spouse, etc. However, the interests of each beneficiary are separate and the custodial trustee is obligated under subsection (c) to account separately to each beneficiary for administration of the beneficiary's interest in the custodial trust.

Subsection (b) allows a custodial trustee who is administering multiple custodial trusts for the same beneficiary to administer the custodial trusts as a single custodial trust. For example, if multiple trusts are created for an incapacitated beneficiary, the custodial trustee can administer them as a single custodial trust.

This section is modified to eliminate references to multiple beneficiaries of a custodial trust. While there are benefits to allowing multiple beneficiaries, the complexities arising from joint beneficiaries raise questions that are unnecessary in light of the ease of creating more than one custodial trust. The drafters believed that allowing multiple beneficiaries and a right of survivorship in the custodial trust property would raise a host of questions that are inconsistent with the overall goal of a mechanically simple statutory trust, the main incidents of which are designed to be practicable.

Under the provisions of G.S. 33B-17(a)(3)a. and b., a successor to the property following a termination of the custodial trust can be designated by either the creating instrument or a competent beneficiary. The drafters believed that no additional survivorship provisions are warranted.

Subsection (b) is modified for clarification.

§ 33B-7. General duties of custodial trustee.

(a) If appropriate, a custodial trustee shall register or record the instrument vesting title to custodial trust property.

(b) If the beneficiary is not incapacitated, a custodial trustee shall follow the directions of the beneficiary in the management, control, investment, or retention of the custodial trust property.

If the beneficiary is incapacitated or the beneficiary has capacity but has not given direction, the custodial trustee shall observe the standard of care that would be observed by a prudent person dealing with property of another and is not limited by any other law restricting investments by fiduciaries. However, a custodial trustee, in the custodial trustee's discretion, may retain any custodial trust property received from the transferor.

If a custodial trustee has a special skill or expertise or is named custodial trustee on the basis of representation of a special skill or expertise, the custodial trustee shall observe the standard of care expected of one with that skill or expertise.

(c) Subject to subsection (b) of this section, a custodial trustee shall take control of and collect, hold, manage, invest, and reinvest custodial trust property.

(d) A custodial trustee at all times shall keep custodial trust property of which the custodial trustee has control, separate from all other property in a manner sufficient to identify it clearly as custodial trust property of the beneficiary. Custodial trust property, the title to which is subject to recordation, is adequately identified as such if an appropriate instrument so identifying the property is recorded in the name of the custodial trustee, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act". Custodial trust property subject to registration is so identified if it is registered, or held in an account in the name of the custodial trustee, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act".

(e) A custodial trustee shall keep records of all transactions with respect to custodial trust property, including information necessary for the preparation of tax returns, and shall make the records and information available at reasonable times to the beneficiary or legal representative of the beneficiary.

(f) Unless the durable power of attorney specifically provides otherwise, the exercise of the durable power of attorney for an incapacitated beneficiary is not effective to terminate or direct the administration or distribution of a custodial trust. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Subsection (b) restates and confirms the control by the beneficiary who is not incapacitated. However, the trustee has a reasonable obligation to act when the beneficiary has not directed him. Under Sections 9 and 10, when a beneficiary becomes incapacitated, the custodial trust becomes a discretionary trust and the trustee is subject to the control of the statute and not the beneficiary's direction. The custodial trustee is subject to the usual trustee's standard as taken from Section 7-302 of the Uniform Probate Code. The statute also imposes a slightly higher standard on professional fiduciaries acting under the statute. Otherwise, much of this section is taken from Section 12 of UTMA. Whenever recordable assets, such as land, are in the custodial trust, the trustee would be expected to record title to the asset. The section is entitled "general duties" because there are additional specific duties identified in other sections such as Section 9.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

Subsections (b) and (d) are modified for clarification. Subsection (f) is modified to add the introductory phrase "[u]nless the durable power of attorney specifically provides otherwise."

§ 33B-8. General powers of custodial trustee.

(a) A custodial trustee, acting in a fiduciary capacity, has all the rights and powers over custodial trust property which an unmarried adult owner has over individually owned property, but a custodial trustee may exercise those rights and powers in a fiduciary capacity only.

(b) This section does not relieve a custodial trustee from liability for a violation of G.S. 33B-7. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section is taken from Section 13 of UTMA. It grants the trustee very broad powers over the property, subject, however, to the Prudent Person Rule and to the obligations set out in the Act. An alternative approach to subsection (a) that might be taken by an enacting state is to refer to the existing statutes granting powers to a trustee, such as the Uniform Trustee's Powers Act. For example: [(a) A custodial trustee has the powers of a trustee under the Uniform Trustee's Powers Act.]

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section is identical to the comparable section of the Uniform Act.

§ 33B-9. Use of custodial trust property.

(a) A custodial trustee shall pay to the beneficiary or expend for the beneficiary's use and benefit so much or all of the custodial trust property as the beneficiary while not incapacitated may direct from time to time.

(b) If the beneficiary is incapacitated, the custodial trustee shall expend so much or all of the custodial trust property as the custodial trustee considers advisable for the use and benefit of the beneficiary and the spouse and children, and other dependents of the beneficiary. Expenditures may be made in the manner, when, and to the extent that the custodial trustee determines suitable and proper, without court order and without regard to other support, income, or property of the beneficiary.

(c) A custodial trustee may establish checking, savings, or other similar accounts of reasonable amounts from which either the custodial trustee or the beneficiary may withdraw funds or against which either may draw checks. Funds withdrawn from, or checks written against, the account of the beneficiary are distributions of custodial trust property by the custodial trustee to the beneficiary. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

This section provides that the custodial trustee is obligated to follow the directions of the beneficiary who is not incapacitated in paying over or expending custodial trust property. If the beneficiary is incapacitated, this section imposes duties on the custodial trustee to apply funds for the beneficiary similar to those imposed on custodians for minors under Section 14 of UTMA. In addition, however, subsection (b) authorizes a custodial trustee to pay over or expend custodial trust property for the use and benefit of the incapacitated beneficiary's dependents who were supported by the beneficiary at the time the beneficiary became incapacitated or for whom there is a legal obligation to support.

The use-and-benefits standard for the expenditure of custodial property is intended to avoid any implication that the custodial trust property can be used only for the required support of the incapacitated beneficiary.

Subsection (c) allows a custodial trustee tomaintain a bank account, of an amount reasonable under the circumstances, with the beneficiary whereby both the beneficiary and the custodial trustee may write checks on the account. This may be used as one method of making money available for the beneficiary's personal needs. Many incapacitated persons, unable to manage business affairs, are still competent to pay personal expenses. This type of arrangement would be important to them. A custodial trustee should maintain, of course, a separate bank account for use in managing the custodial trust property and investments.

An alternative approach might be taken to this section that refers to the distributive powers of a conservator under the laws of the enacting state, in the event that state should prefer that incorporation by reference. For example: [The custodial trustee has the distributive powers of a conservator under the Uniform Probate Code.]

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The drafters were concerned with the broad discretion provided by this section to the custodial trustee when the beneficiary is incompetent. The concern focused on the provisions of subsection (b) stating that the custodial trustee may expend so much of the custodial trust property as the custodial trustee "considers advisable" and may do so "in the manner, when, and to the extent that the custodial trustee determines suitable and proper." There was also concern with the indefiniteness of the phrase "individuals who were supported by the beneficiary," which appears in the Uniform Act. The words "the spouse and children, and other dependents of the beneficiary" are substituted for the words "individuals who were supported by the beneficiary when the beneficiary became incapacitated, or who are legally entitled to support by the beneficiary." The drafters thought it would rarely be desirable to have the custodial trust property used for a person who did not fall within the substituted language (which has been taken from G.S. 32A-2(a) relating to durable powers of attorney). Also, by limiting the custodial trustee's discretion regarding which individuals may receive the custodial trust property, the concerns over the broad discretion granted to the custodial trustee in the administration of the custodial trust are lessened.

Subsection (c) is modified for clarification.

(a) The custodial trustee shall administer the custodial trust as for an incapacitated beneficiary if (i) the custodial trust was created under G.S. 33B-5, (ii) the transferor has so directed in the instrument creating the custodial trust, (iii) a determination that a beneficiary is an incompetent adult has been made under the provisions of Chapter 35A, including a determination of limited incompetence under the provisions of G.S. 35A-1112(d), unless the court provided otherwise, or (iv) the custodial trustee has determined that the beneficiary is incapacitated under subsection (b) of this section.

(b) A custodial trustee may determine that the beneficiary is incapacitated in reliance upon (i) previous direction or authority given by the beneficiary while not incapacitated, including direction or authority pursuant to a durable power of attorney, (ii) the certificate of the beneficiary's physician, (iii) authority given to the custodial trustee in the instrument creating the trust to determine the incapacity of the beneficiary after the creation of the custodial trust, or (iv) other reasonable evidence.

(c) If a custodial trustee for an incapacitated beneficiary determines that the beneficiary's incapacity has ceased, or that circumstances concerning the beneficiary's ability to manage property and business affairs have changed since the creation of a custodial trust directing administration as for an incapacitated beneficiary, the custodial trustee may administer the trust as for a beneficiary who is not incapacitated.

(d) Regardless of whether any determination of incapacity under subsection (b) of this section has or has not been made, the beneficiary, the custodial trustee, or other person interested in the custodial trust property or the welfare of the beneficiary, may petition under the procedures of Chapter 35A for a determination by the court whether the beneficiary is or continues to be incapacitated as defined in G.S. 33B-1(8). A determination of incapacity does not require appointment of a guardian of the estate unless in the discretion of the court such appointment is otherwise warranted.

(e) Incapacity of a beneficiary does not terminate (i) the custodial trust, (ii) any designation of a successor custodial trustee, (iii) rights or powers of the custodial trustee, or (iv) any immunities of third persons acting on instructions of the custodial trustee.

(f) A custodial trustee shall not be liable for any determinations authorized by this section regarding the capacity or incapacity of the beneficiary made in good faith. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This is one of the more important sections of the Act under which the custodial trustee may determine that the beneficiary is incapacitated so the trust will change from one subject to the control of the beneficiary to a discretionary trust for the beneficiary. Subsection (b) allows the custodial trustee to determine that the beneficiary is incapacitated provided the determination is based upon the certificate of the beneficiary's physician, the prior direction or authority of the beneficiary, or other reasonable evidence. That authority could be evidenced, for example, by a durable power of attorney executed by the beneficiary prior to becoming incapacitated even though that power of attorney is not otherwise effective to control management or termination of the custodial trust. Such a durable power of attorney could be given to a child, spouse, friend, or other trusted individual. In addition, specific authority is provided in subsection (d) for the beneficiary, the custodial trustee, or other interested person to seek a declaration from the court as to the capacity of the beneficiary for the purposes of this Act. This is important to the custodial trustee, as his duties and responsibilities change on the event of the beneficiary's incapacity.

This section is not a proceeding for the appointment of a conservator, and it is not contemplated that such a declaration would lead to court appointment of a conservator or guardian unless other factors would warrant such appointment. The existence of a comprehensive and well-managed custodial trust would be one factor that would tend to avoid the necessity for the appointment of a conservator or guardian of the estate.

This section also does not provide a proceeding to attack the legal competence of a transferor in setting up a trust under Section 2. Rather, Section 10 relates to a management matter in a validly established custodial trust.

Subsection (f) provides that the incapacity of the beneficiary does not terminate the custodial trust. If the beneficiary becomes incapacitated, the authority of the custodial trustee continues and the custodial trustee must follow the statutory provisions of the Act relating to managing custodial trusts for incapacitated individuals.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

Subdivision (a)(iii) is added to permit a custodial trustee to administer the custodial trust as for an incapacitated beneficiary if a determination of incompetency has been made under Chapter 35A of the General Statutes, including a determination of limited incompetence under the provisions of G.S. 35A-1112(d). For clarification, a reference to subsection (b) is inserted in subdivision (a)(iv), thereby eliminating any interpretation that subdivision (a)(iv) provides additional independent authority for a custodial trustee to make a determination of incapacity. Subdivision (b)(iii) is added to permit a custodial trustee to determine that the beneficiary is incapacitated in reliance upon authority given to the custodial trustee in the instrument creating the custodial trust. In subdivision (b)(iv), "reasonable" is substituted for "persuasive" because "reasonable" has more object connotation. Subsection (c) is modified by substituting "determines" for "reasonably concludes" to conform the language of the subsection to the language of the new subsection (f). Subsection (d) is modified to clarify that when the petition for a determination of incapacity is filed under the provisions of subsection (d), the procedures of Chapter 35A regarding the determination of incompetency are to be used, but that the substantive criteria set out in the definition of "incapacitated" contain in G.S. 33B-1(8) are the criteria to be used in the proceedings. Subsection (e) of the Uniform Act is deleted because the drafters believed that the subsection would be interpreted as expanding the authority of the custodial trustee under subsection (b) to determine that the beneficiary is incapacitated in reliance upon other reasonable evidence. The drafters believed that subsection (e) would expose the custodial trustee to liability to a greater degree than subsection (a) or (b) and that subsection (e) would in effect defeat what the drafters tried to accomplish in modifying subsections (a) and (b). Subsection (f) has no counterpart in the Uniform Act and states what is believed to be implicit in the Uniform Act.

§ 33B-11. Third-party transactions.

A third person in good faith and without a court order may act on instructions of, or otherwise deal with, a person purporting to make a transfer as, or to act in the capacity of, a custodial trustee. In the absence of actual knowledge to the contrary, the third person is not responsible for determining:

(1) The validity of the purported custodial trustee's designation;

(2) The propriety of, or the authority under this act for, any action of the purported custodial trustee;

(3) The validity or propriety of an instrument executed or instruction given pursuant to this act either by the person purporting to make a transfer or declaration or by the purported custodial trustee; or

(4) The propriety of the application of property vested in the purported custodial trustee. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section is based upon Section 16 of the UTMA and protects third persons who deal in good faith with the custodial trustee.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The catchline to this section is modified for clarification. The first sentence of this section is modified for grammatical reasons, with no intent to change the meaning of the section. The word "actual" is inserted before the word "knowledge" in the introductory language of the second sentence of this section for clarification.

§ 33B-12. Liability to the third person.

(a) A claim based on (i) a contract entered into by a custodial trustee acting in a fiduciary capacity, (ii) an obligation arising from the ownership or control of custodial trust property, (iii) a tort committed in the course of administering the custodial trust, may be asserted by a third person against the custodial trust property by proceeding against the custodial trustee in a fiduciary capacity, whether or not the custodial trustee or the beneficiary is personally liable.

(b) A custodial trustee may be held personally liable to a third person:

(1) On a contract entered into in a fiduciary capacity if the custodial trustee fails to reveal that capacity or to identify the custodial trust in the contract; or

(2) For an obligation arising from control of custodial trust property or for a tort committed in the course of the administration of the custodial trust if the custodial trustee is personally at fault.

(c) A beneficiary is not personally liable to a third person for an obligation arising from beneficial ownership of custodial trust property or for a tort committed in the course of administration of the custodial trust unless the beneficiary is personally in possession of the custodial trust property giving rise to the liability or is personally at fault.

(d) Subsections (b) and (c) of this section do not preclude actions or proceedings to establish liability of the custodial trustee or beneficiary as owner or possessor of the custodial trust property to the extent that person is protected as the insured by liability insurance. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section is patterned after Section 17 of the UTMA and that section in turn was based upon Sections 5-428 and 7-306 of the Uniform Probate Code limiting the liability of conservators and trustees. See also Restatement of Trusts, 2d Sections 265 and 277. The effect of this section is to limit the claims of third parties to recourse against custodial trust property as both the custodial trustee and the beneficiary are protected from personal liability absent personal fault on their part. This section does not alter the obligations between the custodial trustee and the beneficiary arising out of the administration of the estate and the accounting for that administration.

There may be cases in which a custodial trustee or beneficiary may have a right to possession of custodial trust property and may insure against liability arising out of possession or control of the property as a named insured, e.g., under homeowner's or automobile liability insurance. In such a case, the beneficiary should be permitted as a party defendant under subsection (d) but only to the extent of the protection of the liability insurance.

Subsection (a) is subdivided for ease of reading. Subsection (b) is modified to state the liability of the custodial trustee in positive rather than negative terms. Subsection (d) is modified for clarification.

§ 33B-13. Declination, resignation, incapacity, death, or removal of custodial trustee; designation of successor custodial trustee.

(a) Before accepting the custodial trust property, a person designated as custodial trustee may decline to serve by notifying the person who made the designation, the transferor, or the transferor's legal representative. In such case, the transferor or the transferor's legal representative may designate a substitute custodial trustee. If the custodial trust is being created under G.S. 33B-3, the substitute custodial trustee designated under G.S. 33B-3 becomes the custodial trustee, or, if a substitute custodial trustee has not been designated, the person who made the designation may designate a substitute custodial trustee pursuant to G.S. 33B-3.

(b) A custodial trustee who has accepted the custodial trust property may resign by (i) delivering written notice to a successor custodial trustee, if any, the beneficiary, and, if the beneficiary is incapacitated, to the beneficiary's guardian of the estate, if any, and (ii) transferring and, where appropriate, registering or recording an instrument relating to the custodial trust property in the name of the successor custodial trustee identified under subsection (c) of this section.

(c) If a custodial trustee or successor custodial trustee is ineligible, resigns, dies, or becomes incapacitated, the successor designated under G.S. 33B-2 or G.S. 33B-3 becomes custodial trustee. If there is no effective provision for a successor, the beneficiary, if not incapacitated, may designate a successor custodial trustee; if the beneficiary fails to act within 90 days, the resigning custodial trustee may designate a successor custodial trustee. If there is no effective provision for a successor custodial trustee and if the beneficiary is incapacitated, the beneficiary's guardian of the estate becomes successor custodial trustee. If the beneficiary does not have a guardian of the estate or the guardian of the estate fails to act as custodial trustee, the resigning custodial trustee may designate a successor custodial trustee.

(d) If a successor custodial trustee is not designated pursuant to subsection (c) of this section, the following persons may in the order listed petition the court to designate a successor custodial trustee: the transferor, the legal representative of the transferor, the legal representative of the custodial trustee, the general guardian of the beneficiary, the guardian of the estate of the beneficiary, an adult member of the beneficiary's family, a person interested in the custodial trust property, or a person interested in the welfare of the beneficiary.

(e) A custodial trustee who declines to serve or resigns, or the legal representative of a deceased or incapacitated custodial trustee shall put the custodial trust property and records in the possession and control of the successor custodial trustee as soon as practical. The successor custodial trustee shall enforce the obligation to deliver custodial trust property and records.

(f) A beneficiary, the beneficiary's guardian of the estate, an adult member of the beneficiary's family, a guardian of the person of the beneficiary, a person interested in the custodial trust property, or a person interested in the welfare of the beneficiary, may petition the court (i) to remove the custodial trustee for cause and to designate a successor custodial trustee, (ii) to require the custodial trustee to furnish a bond or other security for the faithful performance of fiduciary duties, or (iii) for other appropriate relief. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section follows many of the provisions of Section 18 of UTMA with some substantive changes. It is designed to accommodate in a single section the circumstances in which a custodial trustee would be replaced by another custodial trustee. Under subsection (b), if the beneficiary is incapacitated, a custodial trustee who resigns must give written notice to both the beneficiary and the beneficiary's conservator if one exists. Under subsection (c), a beneficiary who is not incapacitated may designate, without limitation, a successor custodial trustee. If, however, the beneficiary fails to act or is incapacitated, the procedure to be followed is very similar to that found in UTMA except that the nonincapacitated beneficiary has 90 days to act and if the beneficiary has no conservator or if the conservator declines to act, the custodial trustee may eventually designate a successor custodial trustee.

Under subsection (f), the beneficiary, whether or not incapacitated, can petition the court to remove the custodial trustee for cause and to designate a successor trustee, or the court may require the custodial trustee to give bond or other appropriate relief.

This section, unlike Section 18 of UTMA, does not give the custodial trustee the general power to designate a successor custodial trustee but rather limits that power to the situation in which the procedure for designating successor custodial trustees by others has been exhausted.

This section is modified for clarification and to establish the priority of those involved in the selection of successor custodial trustees.

The second sentence of subsection (e) is modified by substituting "shall" for "may" to conform to existing trust practice, which dictates that a successor trustee obtain a full and complete accounting from his predecessor.

§ 33B-14. Expenses, compensation, and bond of custodial trustee.

Except as otherwise provided in the instrument creating the custodial trust, in an agreement with the beneficiary, or by court order, a custodial trustee:

(1) Is entitled to reimbursement from custodial trust property for reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of fiduciary services;

(2) May charge, no later than six months after the end of each calendar year, a reasonable compensation for fiduciary services performed during that year; and

(3) Need not furnish a bond or other security for the faithful performance of fiduciary duties. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section follows the pattern of Section 15 of the UTMA except it does subject the arrangements for payment of expenses, compensation, and bond to provisions in the custodial trust instrument or agreement of the beneficiary or court order.

As in UTMA, the provisions with regard to compensation are designed to avoid imputed compensation to the custodian who waives compensation and also to avoid the accumulation of claims for compensation until the termination of the custodial trust. Although the ability to control these matters by the trust instrument or agreement of the beneficiary seems to be implied, as was assumed in UTMA, it is here expressly stated because of the possibility of informal arrangements with persons as trustees.

Subdivision (2) is modified for simplification.

§ 33B-15. Reporting and accounting by custodial trustee; determination of liability of custodial trustee.

(a) Upon the acceptance of custodial trust property, the custodial trustee shall provide a written statement that the custodial trust property is held pursuant to this act and describing the custodial trust property. The custodial trustee shall thereafter provide a written statement of the administration of the custodial trust property (i) once each year, (ii) upon request at reasonable times by the beneficiary or the beneficiary's legal representative, (iii) upon resignation or removal of the custodial trustee, and (iv) upon termination of the custodial trust. The statements must be provided to the beneficiary or to the beneficiary's legal representative. Upon termination of the beneficiary's interest, the custodial trustee shall furnish a statement to the person to whom the custodial trust property is to be delivered.

(b) A beneficiary, the beneficiary's legal representative, an adult member of the beneficiary's family, a person interested in the custodial trust property, or a person interested in the welfare of the beneficiary may petition the court for an accounting by the custodial trustee or the custodial trustee's legal representative.

(c) A successor custodial trustee may petition the court for an accounting by a predecessor custodial trustee or the legal representative of a predecessor custodial trustee.

(d) In an action or proceeding under this act or in any other proceeding, the court may require or permit the custodial trustee or the custodial trustee's legal representative to account. The custodial trustee or the custodial trustee's legal representative may petition the court for approval of annual or final accounts.

(e) If a custodial trustee is removed, the court shall require an accounting and order delivery of the custodial trust property and records to the successor custodial trustee and the execution of all instruments required for transfer of the custodial trust property.

(f) On petition of the custodial trustee or any person who could petition for an accounting, the court, after notice to interested persons, may issue instructions to the custodial trustee or review the propriety of the acts of a custodial trustee or the reasonableness of compensation determined by the custodial trustee or others. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

This section requires that the custodial trustee inform the beneficiary of the initiation of the trust and provide reasonably current reports of the administration of the custodial trust to the beneficiary or the beneficiary's legal representative. Even though some custodial trustees may act informally, it seems appropriate that both the trustee and the beneficiary be expected to exchange complete information concerning the administration of the trust at least once each year. In some cases, more frequent exchanges of information between the custodial trustee and beneficiary would be expected, e.g., when they use a bank account to which both have access. This is particularly true with regard to necessary information for tax reporting by the parties involved. This section assumes the usual minimum components of an account, i.e., assets and values at the beginning of the accounting period, receipts, and disbursements during the accounting period and assets and their values on hand or available for distribution at the close of the accounting period.

Subsection (a) identifies the necessary reports and accountings for the parties, and subsection (b) identifies a broad group of persons who may petition the court for an accounting by the custodial trustee or the custodial trustee's legal representative. Much of the section is drawn from Section 19 of the UTMA modified to fit the custodial trust. Subsection (f) recognizes the inherent power of the court to instruct trustees and review their actions. This paragraph is patterned after Uniform Probate Code Section 7-205.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The language "that the custodial trust property is held pursuant to this act and" is inserted in the first sentence of subsection (a) for the purpose of insuring that the transfer is a present interest for gift tax purposes. The language ", if any" is deleted from the third sentence of subsection (a) and "current" is deleted from the fourth sentence of subsection (a) as being unnecessary. The language "annual or" is inserted in the second sentence of subsection (d) to allow the custodial trustee or the custodial trustee's legal representative to petition the court for approval of annual accounts as well as final accounts. Apparently the language "for the services of the custodial trustee" was inadvertently deleted from subsection (f).

§ 33B-16. Limitations of action against custodial trustee.

(a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, a claim for relief against a custodial trustee for accounting or breach of duty is barred as to a beneficiary, a person to whom custodial trust property is to be paid or delivered, or the legal representative of an incapacitated or deceased beneficiary or payee:

(1) Who has received a final account or statement fully disclosing the matter unless an action or proceeding to assert the claim is commenced within two years after receipt of the final account or statement; or

(2) Who has not received a final account or statement fully disclosing the matter unless an action or proceeding to assert the claim is commenced within three years after the termination of the custodial trust.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a claim for relief to recover from a custodial trustee for fraud, misrepresentation, or concealment is barred unless an action or proceeding to assert the claim is commenced within five years after the termination of the custodial trust.

(c) A claim for relief is not barred by this section if the claimant:

(1) Is a minor, until the earlier of two years after the claimant becomes an adult or dies;

(2) Is an incapacitated adult, until the earliest of two years after (i) the appointment of a guardian of the estate, (ii) the removal of the incapacity, or (iii) the death of the claimant; or

(3) Was an adult, now deceased, who was not incapacitated, until two years after the claimant's death if the claim was not barred by adjudication, consent, or limitation prior to the claimant's death. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

In an effort to provide as comprehensive a statute as possible to inform the parties of substantially all of their obligations and rights, statutes of limitation are provided in this section. The limitations provided in this section are derived from the Uniform Probate Code, Sections 1-106 and 7-307, and from the Missouri Custodial Act.

The nature of the limitations imposed by the section are illustrated by the situation in which a custodial trustee is removed, resigns, or dies. If the former custodial trustee accounts as required under Section 13 on removal or resignation, or the deceased custodial trustee's personal representative accounts, the two-year limitation of subsection (a)(1) applies. Should the former custodial trustee or the personal representative fail to account, then, subsection (a)(2) would apply to limit the time in which a proceeding to assert the claim could be commenced. This time would begin to run on the date the trust terminated. Of course, if the claim is one for fraud or concealment, the longer time limitation of subsection (b) would apply. In any event, should the beneficiary become incapacitated or die before the applicable time limitation had expired, the tolling provision of subsection (c) could postpone the time bar until two years after removal of the disability or death.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The following modifications are made for clarification: the reference to subsection (b) is added to subsection (a); the Uniform Act's language "unless previously barred by adjudication, consent, or limitation," is deleted from subsection (a); and the Uniform Act's language "related to the final settlement of the custodial trust or concealment of the existence of the custodial trust," is deleted from subsection (b). The language "if the claim was not barred by adjudication, consent, or limitation prior to the claimant's death" is inserted in subdivision (c)(3) to eliminate the possibility that the subdivision might be interpreted to revive a claim barred prior to the death of the claimant.

§ 33B-17. Distribution on termination.

(a) Upon termination of a custodial trust, the custodial trustee shall transfer the unexpended custodial trust property:

(1) To the beneficiary, if not incapacitated or deceased;

(2) To the guardian of the estate or other recipient designated by the court for an incapacitated beneficiary; or

(3) Upon the beneficiary's death, in the following order:

a. As last directed in a writing signed by the deceased beneficiary while not incapacitated and received by the custodial trustee during the life of the deceased beneficiary;

b. As designated in the instrument creating the custodial trust; or

c. To the estate of the deceased beneficiary.

(b) If, when the custodial trust would otherwise terminate, the distributee is incapacitated, the custodial trust continues for the use and benefit of the distributee as beneficiary until the incapacity is removed or the custodial trust is otherwise terminated.

(c) Death of a beneficiary does not terminate the power of the custodial trustee to discharge obligations of the custodial trustee or beneficiary incurred before the termination of the custodial trust.

(d) The writing described in G.S. 33B-17(a)(3)a. or the instrument described in G.S. 33B-17(a)(3)b. must also be signed by at least two witnesses, neither of whom is the custodial trustee or the distributee of the custodial trust property, and be acknowledged by the beneficiary or transferor before an individual authorized to administer oaths or take acknowledgements. Failure to comply with the witness or acknowledgement requirement shall not affect the validity of the custodial trust during the life of the beneficiary, but shall invalidate only the direction or designation of the distributee on termination of the custodial trust under G.S. 33B-17(a)(3)a. or G.S. 33B-17(a)(3)b., and upon termination of the custodial trust the custodial trustee shall transfer the unexpended custodial trust property according to the remaining provisions of this section. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section controls distribution of the custodial trust property when the custodial trust is terminated under Section 2(e). It is designed to provide for efficient and certain distribution without judicial proceedings. Subsection (a)(3) is an important provision for avoiding complications on distribution and provides that distribution may be controlled first, by the direction of the deceased beneficiary or second, by the custodial trust instrument (see Sections 2, 6 and 18) and, only if no effective prior designation for the payment or distribution of the property on the death of the beneficiary has been made, shall it pass through the beneficiary's estate.

The direction to the custodial trustee by the beneficiary, who is not incapacitated, for distribution on termination of the custodial trust may be in any written form clearly identifying the distributee. For example, the following direction would be adequate under the statute:

I, _____ (name of beneficiary) hereby direct _____ (name of trustee) as custodial trustee, to transfer and pay the unexpended balance of the custodial trust property of which I am beneficiary to _____ as distributee on the termination of the trust at my death. In the event of the prior death of _____ above named as distributee, I designate _____ as distributee of the custodial trust property.

Subdivision (a)(3)(ii) of the Uniform Act, relating to the concept of multiple beneficiaries, is deleted.

Subsection (d), which has no counterpart in the Uniform Act, was added by the General Assembly to require a writing or instrument designating someone other than the beneficiary's estate to receive the custodial trust property at the beneficiary's death (i) to be signed by at least two witnesses, neither of whom is the custodial trustee or the distributee of the custodial trust property and (ii) to be acknowledged by the beneficiary or transferor before an individual authorized to administer oaths or take acknowledgments. These requirements apply only where someone other than the beneficiary's estate is designated to receive the custodial trust property at the beneficiary's death.

§ 33B-18. Methods and forms of creating custodial trusts.

(b) Any customary methods of transferring or evidencing ownership of property may be used to create a custodial trust, including, but not limited to, any of the following:

(1) Registration of a security in the name of a trust company, an adult other than the transferor, or the transferor if the beneficiary is other than the transferor, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act";

(2) Delivery of a certificated security, or a document necessary for the transfer of an uncertificated security, together with any necessary endorsement, to an adult other than the transferor or to a trust company as custodial trustee, accompanied by an instrument in substantially the form prescribed in subsection (a)(1);

(3) Payment of money or transfer of a security held in the name of a broker or a financial institution or its nominee to a broker or financial institution for credit to an account in the name of a trust company, an adult other than the transferor, or the transferor if the beneficiary is other than the transferor, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act";

(4) Registration of ownership of a life or endowment insurance policy or annuity contract with the issuer in the name of a trust company, an adult other than the transferor, or the transferor if the beneficiary is other than the transferor, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act";

(5) Delivery of a written assignment to an adult other than the transferor or to a trust company designated in the assignment in substance by the words "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act";

(6) Irrevocable exercise of a power of appointment, pursuant to its terms, in favor of a trust company, an adult other than the donee of the power, or the donee who holds the power if the beneficiary is other than the donee, designated in the appointment in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act";

(7) Delivery of a written notification or assignment of a right to future payment under a contract to an obligor which transfers the right under the contract to a trust company, an adult other than the transferor, or the transferor if the beneficiary is other than the transferor, designated in the notification or assignment in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act";

(8) Execution and delivery of a conveyance of an interest in real property in the name of a trust company, an adult other than the transferor, or the transferor if the beneficiary is other than the transferor, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act";

(9) Issuance of a certificate of title by an agency of a state or of the United States which evidences title to tangible personal property:

a. Issued in the name of a trust company, an adult other than the transferor, or the transferor if the beneficiary is other than the transferor, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act"; or

b. Delivered to a trust company or an adult other than the transferor or endorsed by the transferor to that person, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act"; or

(10) Execution and delivery of an instrument of gift to a trust company or an adult other than the transferor, designated in substance "as custodial trustee for _____ (name of beneficiary) under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act". (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section largely follows Section 9 of UTMA. It provides instructional detail for forms and methods of transferring assets that satisfy the requirements of the statute. Although many of the customary methods of transferring assets are identified, these methods are not intended to be exclusive since any type of property that can be transferred by any legal means is intended to be within the scope of the statute, provided the requirements of Section 2 are met. The method of transfer or conveyance appropriate to the asset should be used, e.g., if land is involved, a deed or conveyance that satisfies the local requirements would be appropriate. In the effort to make the statute as self-contained and as fully explanatory as possible, these provisions for implementation are included in the statute rather than being appended or inserted in the Comments.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

The forms in subsection (a) were modified by the General Assembly to conform to the witness and acknowledgment requirements of G.S. 33B-17(d). The witness and acknowledgment provisions in the forms are necessary only where someone other than the beneficiary's estate is designated to receive the custodial trust property at the beneficiary's death. As provided in G.S. 33B-17(d), failure to comply with the witness or acknowledge requirement shall not affect the validity of the custodial trust during the life of the beneficiary.

The phrase ", but not limited to," is inserted in the introductory language to subsection (b) to clarify that the list of methods of transferring property is illustrative and nonexclusive. Clarifying stylistic changes are made to the Uniform Act's language in subdivisions (b)(5), (6) and (7) by changing "whose name in the assignment is designated," "whose name in the appointment is designated," and "whose name in the notification or assignment is designated" to "designated in the assignment," "designated in the appointment," and "designated in the notification or assignment," respectively. Subdivision (b)(8) is modified by deleting the reference to recordation because recordation (as opposed to delivery of the deed) generally is technically unnecessary for the validity of a conveyance or transfer of an interest in real property in North Carolina. G.S. 47-26 however requires deeds of gift, which would include deeds of gift to a custodial trustee, to be recorded within two years; therefore, under most circumstances the custodial trustee has a duty to record the deed. A change similar to the change made in subdivision (b)(8) was made in the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act.

§ 33B-19. Applicable law.

(a) This act applies to a transfer or declaration creating a custodial trust that refers to this act if, at the time of the transfer or declaration, the transferor, beneficiary, or custodial trustee is a resident of or has its principal place of business in this State or the custodial trust property is located in this State. The custodial trust remains subject to this act despite a later change in residence or principal place of business of the transferor, beneficiary, or custodial trustee, or removal of the custodial trust property from this State.

(b) A transfer made pursuant to an act of another state substantially similar to this act is governed by the law of that state and may be enforced in this State. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section is designed to avoid confusion in the event a party or assets are removed from the state.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section is identical to the comparable section of the Uniform Act.

§ 33B-20. Uniformity of application and construction.

This act shall be applied and construed to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to the subject of this act among states enacting it. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section is identical to the comparable section of the Uniform Act.

§ 33B-21. Short title.

This act may be cited as the "North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act". (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section is identical to the comparable section of the Uniform Act, except that the words "North Carolina" are inserted before the words "Uniform Custodial Trust Act."

§ 33B-22. Limitation on value of custodial trust property.

Transfers or declarations of property to the corpus of a custodial trust under this act shall not exceed in the aggregate one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) in value, exclusive of the value of the transferor's or declarant's personal residence. This limitation shall not apply to any appreciation in the value of the corpus held in the custodial trust. A good faith violation of this section shall not invalidate a custodial trust. (1995, c. 486, s. 1.)

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section, which was added by the General Assembly, has no counterpart in the Uniform Act.

Chapter 34.

Veterans' Guardianship Act.

§ 34-1. Title.

This Chapter shall be known as "The Veterans' Guardianship Act." (1929, c. 33, s. 1.)

§ 34-2. Definitions.

In this Chapter:

The term "benefits" shall mean all moneys payable by the United States through the Bureau.

The term "Bureau" means the United States Veterans' Bureau or its successor.

The term "Director" means the Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau or his successor.

"Estate" means income on hand and assets acquired partially or wholly with "income."

The term "guardian" as used herein shall mean any person acting as a fiduciary for a ward.

"Income" means moneys received from the Veterans Administration and revenue or profit from any property wholly or partially acquired therewith.

The term "person" includes a partnership, corporation or an association.

The term "ward" means a beneficiary of the Bureau. (1929, c. 33, s. 2; 1945, c. 723, s. 2; 1961, c. 396, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The successor of the United States Veterans' Bureau is the Veterans Administration.

§ 34-2.1. Guardian's powers as to property; validation of prior acts.

Any guardian appointed under the provisions of this Chapter may be guardian of all property, real or personal, belonging to the ward to the same extent as a guardian appointed under the provisions of Chapter 35A of the General Statutes, and the provisions of such Chapter concerning the custody, management and disposal of property shall apply in any case not provided for by this Chapter. All acts heretofore performed by guardians appointed under the provisions of this Chapter with respect to the custody, management and disposal of property of wards are hereby validated where no provision for such acts was provided for by this Chapter, if such acts were performed under and in conformity with the provisions of Chapter 35A of the General Statutes. (1955, c. 1272, s. 1; 1987, c. 550, s. 18.)

§ 34-3. Appointment of guardian for wards entitled to benefits from United States Veterans' Bureau.

Whenever, pursuant to any law of the United States or regulation of the Bureau, the Director requires, prior to payment of benefits, that a guardian be appointed for a ward, such appointment shall be made in the manner hereinafter provided. (1929, c. 33, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — The successor of the United States Veterans' Bureau is the Veterans Administration.

§ 34-4. Guardian may not be named for more than five wards; exceptions; banks and trust companies, public guardians, or where wards are members of same family.

It shall be unlawful for any person, other than a public guardian qualified under Article 11, Chapter 35A, General Statutes of North Carolina, to accept appointment as guardian of any United States Veterans Administration ward, if such person shall at the time of such appointment be acting as guardian for five wards. For the purpose of this section, all minors of same family unit shall constitute one ward. In all appointments of a public guardian for United States Veterans Administration wards, the guardian shall furnish a separate bond for each appointment as required by G.S. 34-9. If, in any case, an attorney for the United States Veterans Administration presents a petition under this section alleging that an individual guardian other than a public guardian is acting in a fiduciary capacity for more than five wards and requesting discharge of the guardian for that reason, then the court, upon satisfactory evidence that the individual guardian is acting in a fiduciary capacity for more than five wards, must require a final accounting forthwith from such guardian and shall discharge the guardian in such case. Upon the termination of a public guardian's term of office, he may be permitted to retain any appointments made during his term of office.

This section shall not apply to banks and trust companies licensed to do trust business in North Carolina. (1929, c. 33, s. 4; 1967, c. 564, s. 1; 1987, c. 550, s. 19.)

§ 34-5. Petition for appointment of guardian.

A petition for the appointment of a guardian may be filed in any court of competent jurisdiction by or on behalf of any person who under existing law is entitled to priority of appointment. If there be no person so entitled or if the person so entitled shall neglect or refuse to file such a petition within thirty days after mailing of notice by the Bureau to the last known address of such person indicating the necessity for the same, a petition for such appointment may be filed in any court of competent jurisdiction by or on behalf of any responsible person residing in this State.

The petition for appointment shall set forth the name, age, place of residence of the ward, the names and places of residence of the nearest relative, if known, and the fact that such ward is entitled to receive moneys payable by or through the Bureau and shall set forth the amount of moneys then due and the amount of probable future payments.

The petition shall also set forth the name and address of the person or institution, if any, having actual custody of the ward.

In the case of a mentally incompetent ward the petition shall show that such ward has been rated incompetent on examination by the Bureau in accordance with the laws and regulations governing the Bureau. (1929, c. 33, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — The successor of the United States Veterans' Bureau is the Veterans Administration.

§ 34-6. Certificate of Director prima facie evidence of necessity for appointment of guardian of minor.

Where a petition is filed for the appointment of a guardian of a minor ward a certificate of the Director, or his representative, setting forth the age of such minor as shown by the records of the Bureau and the fact that the appointment of a guardian is a condition precedent to the payment of any moneys due the minor by the Bureau, shall be prima facie evidence of the necessity of such appointment. (1929, c. 33, s. 6.)

Editor's Note. — The successor of the United States Veterans' Bureau is the Veterans Administration.

§ 34-7. Certificate as evidence in regard to guardianship of mentally incompetent wards.

Where a petition is filed for the appointment of a guardian of a mentally incompetent ward a certificate of the Director, or his representative, setting forth the fact that such person has been rated incompetent by the Bureau on examination in accordance with the laws and regulations governing such Bureau; and that the appointment of a guardian is a condition precedent to the payment of any moneys due such person by the Bureau, shall be prima facie evidence of the necessity for such appointment. (1929, c. 33, s. 7.)

Editor's Note. — The successor of the United States Veterans' Bureau is the Veterans Administration.

§ 34-8. Notice of filing of petition.

Upon the filing of a petition for the appointment of a guardian, under the provisions of this Chapter, the court shall cause such notice to be given as provided by law. (1929, c. 33, s. 8.)

§ 34-9. Qualifications of guardian; surety bond.

Before making an appointment under the provisions of this Chapter the court shall be satisfied that the guardian whose appointment is sought is a fit and proper person to be appointed. Upon the appointment being made the guardian shall execute and file a surety bond to be approved by the court in an amount not less than the sum then due and estimated to become payable during the ensuing year. The said bond shall be in the form and be conditioned as required of guardians appointed under the guardianship laws of this State. The court shall have power from time to time to require the guardian to file an additional bond.

No bond shall be required of the banks and trust companies licensed to do trust business in North Carolina. (1929, c. 33, s. 9.)

§ 34-10. Guardian's accounts to be filed; hearing on accounts.

Every guardian, who shall receive on account of his ward any moneys from the Bureau, shall file with the court annually, on the anniversary date of the appointment, in addition to such other accounts as may be required by the court, a full, true, and accurate account under oath of all moneys so received by him, of all disbursements thereof, and showing the balance thereof in his hands at the date of such account and how invested. A certified copy of each of such accounts filed with the court shall be sent by the guardian to the office of the Bureau having jurisdiction over the area in which such court is located.

At the time such account is filed the clerk of the superior court shall require the guardian to exhibit to the court all investments and bank statements showing cash balance and the clerk of the superior court shall certify on the original account and the certified copy which the guardian sends the Bureau that an examination was made of all investments and cash balance and that same are correctly stated in the account; provided that banks, organized under the laws of North Carolina or the Acts of Congress, engaged in doing a trust and fiduciary business in this State, when acting as guardian, or in other fiduciary capacity, shall be exempt from the requirement of exhibiting such investments and bank statements, and the clerk of the superior court shall not be required to so certify as to the accounts of such banks, except that in addition to the officer verifying the accounts, there shall be added a certificate of another officer of the bank certifying that all assets referred to in the account are held by the guardian or by a clearing corporation for the guardian. If objections are raised to such an accounting, the court shall fix a time and place for the the hearing thereon not less than 15 days nor more than 30 days from the date of filing such objections, and notice shall be given by the court to the aforesaid Bureau office and the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs by mail not less than 15 days prior to the date fixed for the hearing. Notice of such hearing shall also be given to the guardian. (1929, c. 33, s. 10; 1933, c. 262, s. 1; 1945, c. 723, s. 2; 1961, c. 396, s. 2; 1967, c. 564, s. 5; 1973, c. 497, s. 6; c. 620, s. 9.)

§ 34-11. Failure to file account cause for removal.

If any guardian shall fail to file any account of the moneys received by him from the Bureau on account of his ward within 30 days after such account is required by either the court or the Bureau, or shall fail to furnish the Bureau

a copy of his accounts as required by this Chapter, such failure shall be grounds for removal. (1929, c. 33, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — The successor of the United States Veterans' Bureau is the Veterans Administration.

§ 34-12. Compensation at five percent; additional compensation; premiums on bonds.

Compensation payable to guardians shall not exceed five percent (5%) of the income of the ward during any year, except that the court may approve compensation in the accounting in an amount not to exceed twenty-five dollars ($25.00) from an estate where the income for any one year is less than five hundred dollars ($500.00). In the event of extraordinary services rendered by such guardian the court may, upon petition and after hearing thereon, authorize additional compensation therefor, payable from the estate of the ward. Notice of such petition and hearing shall be given the proper office of the Bureau and the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs in the manner provided in G.S. 34-10. No compensation shall be allowed on the corpus of an estate received from a preceding guardian. The guardian may be allowed from the estate of his ward reasonable premiums paid by him to any corporate surety upon his bond. (1929, c. 33, s. 12; 1945, c. 723, s. 2; 1967, c. 564, ss. 2, 5; 1973, c. 620, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Appeal from Award of Additional Compensation. — Where the clerk entered an order allowing a guardian additional compensation for extraordinary services and the Veterans Administration failed to perfect its appeal from the clerk's order, and thereafter applied to the judge of the superior court for a writ of certiorari, the petition for certiorari was denied upon the court's finding of laches and demerit. In re Snelgrove, 208 N.C. 670, 182 S.E. 335 (1935).

§ 34-13. Investment of funds.

Every guardian shall invest the funds of the estate in any of the following securities:

(1) United States government bonds.

(2) State of North Carolina bonds issued since the year 1872.

(3) By loaning the same upon real estate securities in which the guardian has no interest, such loans not to exceed fifty percent (50%) of the actual appraised or assessed value, whichever may be lower, and said loans when made to be evidenced by a note, or notes, or bond, or bonds, under the seal of the borrower and secured by first mortgage or first deed of trust. Said guardian before making such investment on real estate mortgages shall secure a certificate of title from some reputable attorney certifying that the same is first lien on real estate and also setting forth the tax valuation thereof for the current year: Provided, said guardian may purchase with said funds a home or farm for the sole use of said ward or his dependents upon petition and order of the clerk of superior court, said order to be approved by the resident or presiding judge of the superior court, and provided further that copy of said petition shall be forwarded to said Bureau before consideration thereof by said court. Any guardian may encumber the home or farm so purchased for the entire purchase price or balance thereof to enable the ward to obtain benefits provided in Title 38, U.S. Code, Chapter 37, upon petition to and order of the clerk of superior court of the county of appointment of said guardian and approved by the resident or presiding judge of the superior court. Notice of hearing on such petition, together with copy of the petition, shall be given to the United States Veterans Administration and the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs by mail not less than 15 days prior to the date fixed for the hearing.

(4) Any form of investment allowed by law to the State Treasurer under G.S. 147-69.1.

(5) Repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 467, s. 22.

It shall be the duty of guardians who shall have funds invested other than as provided for in this section to liquidate same within one year from the passage of this law: Provided, however, that upon the approval of the judge of the superior court, either residing in or presiding over the courts of the district, the clerk of the superior court may authorize the guardian to extend from time to time, the time for sale or collection of any such investments; that no extension shall be made to cover a period of more than one year from the time the extension is made.

The clerk of the superior court of any county in the State or any guardian who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1929, c. 33, s. 13; 1933, c. 262, s. 2; 1957, c. 199; 1959, c. 1015, s. 1; 1967, c. 564, ss. 3, 4; 1973, c. 620, s. 9; 1979, c. 467, s. 22; 1993, c. 539, s. 401; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 34-14. Application of ward's estate.

A guardian may apply any income received from the Veterans Administration for the benefit of the ward in the same manner and to the same extent as other income of the estate without the necessity of securing an order of court. A guardian shall not apply any portion of the estate of his ward for the support and maintenance of any person other than his ward, except upon order of the court after a hearing, notice of which has been given the proper officer of the Bureau and the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs in the manner provided in G.S. 34-10. § 34-14.1. Payment of veterans' benefits to relatives.

(a) It shall be lawful for a guardian or trustee of a mentally disordered or incompetent Veterans Administration beneficiary to pay to or for maintenance from the ward prior to the appointment of said guardian or trustee, such an amount for support and maintenance as shall be approved by the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction over such guardian or trustee;

(1) The spouse or children or mother or father of the ward, whether or not said spouse or children or mother or father received any part of their

(2) A brother, sister, nephew, niece, uncle, aunt, or any other relative of the ward, who, prior to the appointment of said guardian or trustee, received some part of his or her maintenance from said ward, such an amount for support and maintenance as shall be approved by the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction over said guardian or trustee and by a superior court judge.

(b) Such approval may be granted upon a duly verified petition filed before the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction of such guardian or trustees setting forth

(1) The amount of benefits received by the guardian or trustee on behalf of the ward from the Veterans Administration;

(2) The amount of periodic disbursements, if any, made by such guardian or trustee for the maintenance and support of the ward;

(3) The person for whose maintenance and support payment is to be made and the relationship of such person to the ward;

(4) If the person for whose maintenance and support payment is to be made is one described in subsection (a)(2) above, facts showing that prior to the appointment of said guardian or trustee such person received some part of his or her maintenance from said ward;

(5) The amount to be paid and the period when such payments are to be made.

Notice of hearing upon such petition shall be as provided by G.S. 34-14, and no person or persons, other than the guardian or trustees and petitioner, need to be made parties to any such proceeding. If the guardian or trustee is the petitioner, no other parties shall be necessary. (1945, c. 479, ss. 1, 2; 1953, c. 122, s. 1; 1955, c. 1272, s. 2.)

Whenever a copy of any public record is required by the Bureau or the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs to be used in determining the eligibility of any person to participate in benefits made available by such Bureau, the official charged with the custody of such public record shall without charge provide the applicant for such benefits or any person acting on his behalf or the representative of such Bureau or the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs with a certified copy of such record. When a minor ward for whom a guardian has been appointed under the provisions of this Chapter or other laws of this State shall have attained his or her majority, and if incompetent shall be declared competent by the Bureau and by an order of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which such guardian was appointed, and when any incompetent ward, not a minor, shall be declared competent by said Bureau and by an order of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which such guardian was appointed, the guardian shall upon making a satisfactory accounting be discharged upon a petition filed for that purpose. The certificate of the Director, or his representative, setting forth the fact that an incompetent ward has been rated competent by the Bureau on examination in accordance with the laws and regulations governing such Bureau shall be prima facie evidence upon which the court may declare such ward competent. It shall be the responsibility of the State institution to provide or pay for the cost and expense of the operations authorized in this section for those persons residents or patients in State institutions. CASE NOTES

Legislative Classification Is Reasonable. — Considering the object of this Article, which is to prevent the procreation of children by a mentally ill or retarded individual who probably would be unable to care for a child or children and who is likely to procreate a child or children who probably would have serious physical, mental or nervous diseases or deficiencies, the classification under this statute is reasonable. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

The legislative classification of mentally retarded persons is neither arbitrary nor capricious, but rests upon respectable medical knowledge and opinion that such persons are in fact different from the general population and may rationally be accorded different treatment for their benefit and the benefit of the public. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

Article Not Unconstitutionally Vague or Arbitrary. — This section and §§ 35-37 through 35-50, inclusive, provide a sufficient judicial standard and are not unconstitutionally vague or arbitrary. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Not a Violation of Equal Protection. — Since the North Carolina law applies equally to all those named, this section and §§ 35-37 through 35-50, inclusive, do not violate the equal protection clauses of the United States or North Carolina Constitutions. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

This section and § 35-37 do not violate the equal protection clauses of the United States or North Carolina Constitutions since they provide for the sterilization of all mentally ill or retarded persons inside or outside an institution who meet the requirements of these statutes. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Compelling State Interest Involved. — State interests in the sterilization of mentally ill or retarded persons rise to the level of a compelling state interest. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

All mentally retarded persons are sufficiently different from the general population to justify classification for some purposes without meeting the compelling governmental interest test. But the right to procreate is a fundamental one and under equal protection challenge sterilization cannot be ordered short of demonstrating a compelling governmental interest. This Article is narrowly drawn to express only the legitimate state interest of preventing the birth of a defective child or the birth of a nondefective child that cannot be cared for by its parent, and so viewed, the state's interest rises to the dignity of a compelling one. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

Valid Exercise of Police Power. — The sterilization of mentally ill or retarded persons under the safeguards set out in this Article is a valid and reasonable exercise of the police power. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Not Cruel and Unusual Punishment. — The contention that sterilization amounts to cruel and unusual punishment is without basis in law since the cruel and unusual punishment clause of the Constitution refers to those persons convicted of a crime, and sterilization under this section is not a criminal proceeding. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Application of Statute by Courts. — Though the sterilization statutes have been determined to meet the tests of constitutionality, the absence of standards and statutory definitions requires that the courts construe and apply the statutory provisions to the evidence in each case so as to adequately protect the respondent's fundamental rights. In re Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 649, 263 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

The object of this Article is to prevent the procreation of children by a mentally ill or retarded individual who, because of physical, mental or nervous disease or deficiency which is not likely to materially improve, would probably be unable to care for a child or children and who would likely, unless sterilized, procreate a child or children who probably would have serious physical, mental or nervous diseases or deficiencies. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Concerns of State in Authorizing Sterilization. — The welfare of the parent and the future life and health of the unborn child are the chief concerns of the State in authorizing sterilization of individuals under certain circumstances. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

The right to procreate is not absolute but is vulnerable to a certain degree of state regulation. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

The welfare of all citizens should take precedence over the rights of individuals to procreate. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Right to Prevent Procreation of Children Who Will Become State Burden. — The people of North Carolina have a right to prevent the procreation of children who will become a burden on the State. In re Moore, 289

N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Former Law Unconstitutional. — See Brewer v. Valk, 204 N.C. 186, 167 S.E. 638 (1933).

§ 35-37. Sterilization of mentally retarded not in State institutions.

The parent or guardian of a mentally ill or mentally retarded person, or the county director of social services, or other public official performing the functions of such director, is hereby authorized to petition the district court of his county for the sterilization operation of any mentally ill or retarded resident of the county, not a resident or patient of any State institution, or of any mentally ill or retarded person who is on parole from a State institution considered in the best interest of the mental, moral, or physical improvement of such resident, or for the public good, provided that no operation authorized in this section shall be lawful unless and until the provisions of this Article shall first be complied with. It shall be the responsibility of the board of commissioners of the respective counties to provide or pay for the cost and expense of the operations authorized in this section for those persons residents in their respective counties. (1933, c. 224, s. 2; 1961, c. 186; 1967, c. 138, s. 2; 1973, c. 1281; 1981, c. 102, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in In re Truesdell, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

§ 35-38. Who shall perform sterilization operations upon the mentally retarded.

No operation under this Article shall be performed by other than a duly qualified and licensed North Carolina physician or surgeon, pursuant to Chapter 90 of the General Statutes as amended, and by him only upon a written order signed by the court having authority under the provisions of either G.S. 35-43 or G.S. 35-44. The petitioner will select the physician or surgeon to perform the sterilization operation and notify the patient and next of kin. If however, the patient or next of kin wishes to select a physician or surgeon other than the one selected by the petitioner, it will be the responsibility of the patient or next of kin to pay for the costs and expense of the sterilization operation. In the event the patient or next of kin is unable to provide for payment of the physician or surgeon selected by them, the operation will be performed by the physician or surgeon selected by the petitioner. (1933, c. 224, s. 3; 1961, c. 186; 1967, c. 138, s. 3; 1969, c. 982; 1973, c. 1281.)

It shall be the duty of such petitioner promptly to institute proceedings as provided by this Article in any of the following circumstances:

(1) When in his opinion it is for the best interest of the mental, moral or physical improvement of the patient, resident of an institution, or noninstitutional individual, that he or she be sterilized.

(2) When in his opinion it is for the public good that such patient, resident of an institution, or noninstitutional individual be sterilized.

(3) When in his opinion such patient, resident of an institution, or noninstitutional individual would be likely, unless sterilized, to procreate a child or children who would have a tendency to serious physical, mental, or nervous disease or deficiency; or, because of a physical, mental, or nervous disease or deficiency which is not likely to materially improve, the person would be unable to care for a child or children.

(4) Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 102, s. 4. (1933, c. 224, s. 4; 1935, c. 463, s. 1; 1937, c. 243; 1961, c. 186; 1967, c. 138, s. 4; 1969, c. 982; 1973, c. 476, s. 133.3; c. 1281; 1981, c. 102, s. 4.)

For note, "In re Truesdell: North Carolina Adopts Two New and Conflicting Standards for Sterilization of Mentally Retarded Persons," see 64 N.C.L. Rev. 1196 (1986).

CASE NOTES

Does Not Violate Equal Protection. — The legislative dual purpose — to prevent the birth of a defective child or the birth of a nondefective child that cannot be cared for by its parent — reflects a compelling state interest, and the classification rests upon a difference having a fair and substantial relation to the object of the legislation and does not, therefore, violate the equal protection clause of the U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

Section Neither Overbroad Nor Vague. — This section is not overly broad. Although it permits initiation of the sterilization procedure against any and all members of the class, it does not contemplate that all members of the class will be sterilized. Nor is the standard of selection so vague that it cannot be comprehended and applied. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

The legislative classification is itself narrowed as to impact so that only mentally retarded persons who are sexually active, and unwilling or incapable of controlling procreation by other contraceptive means, and who are found to be likely to procreate a defective child, or who would be unable because of the degree of retardation to be able to care for a child, may be sterilized. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

Subdivisions (1) through (3) make out a complete and sensible scheme: that the public servant concern himself either with the best interest of the retarded person or the best interest of the public, or both, and that he act to begin the procedure only when in his opinion the retarded person would either likely procreate a defective child or would himself be unable to care for his own child or children. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

Former Subdivision (4) Unconstitutional. See North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

The purpose of the standards governing mentally ill or retarded persons is to prevent unnecessary and unwarranted abridgment of the respondent's fundamental procreative rights while at the same time allowing the State to further its interests. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

The statutory phrase "care for a child" is not defined, but the courts in construing the phrase must find whether the evidence establishes a minimum standard of care consistent with both State interest and fundamental parental rights. The petitioner has the burden of proving at least probable inability to provide a reasonable domestic environment for the child. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Findings Required. — In each case the trial court must carefully review the living conditions of the respondent to determine the substantial likelihood that he or she will voluntarily, or otherwise, engage in sexual activity likely to cause impregnation. This will necessarily include an inquiry into the respondent's home environment, daily schedule, social activities, and the degree of supervision entailed in each aspect of this schedule. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

For purposes of instituting sterilization proceedings under this section, a determination that a proposed sterilization is in the respondent's best interests must include a determination that the respondent is sexually active and that no temporary measure for birth control or contraception will adequately meet the respondent's needs, in addition to the statutory grounds regarding defective offspring and parental unfitness. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Before a sterilization can be ordered there must be a showing that the subject be shown to be likely to engage in sexual activity without utilizing contraceptive devices and is, therefore, likely to become impregnated. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

"Best Interest" Alone as Basis for Compulsory Sterilization. — Although subdivision (1) provides that social services shall petition for sterilization if it would be in the "best interests" of the mentally retarded individual, this language is not contained in § 35-43, the provision which specifically outlines the findings to be made by the trial judge. It is, therefore, doubtful whether compulsory sterilization can be ordered on the basis of undefined "best interests" alone in view of the fundamental interest at stake. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Petitioner must establish by clear, strong and convincing evidence that respondent is unable or unwilling to control procreation by alternative, less drastic contraceptive methods, including, but not limited to, supervision, education and training. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

§ 35-40. Contents of petition.

The petition shall contain allegations of the results of psychological or psychiatric tests supporting the assertion that such person is subject to the provisions of this Article; shall contain the statement of a physician who has examined such person affirming whether or not there is any known contraindication to the requested surgical procedure; shall state the name and address of the physician or surgeon who will perform the operation; and shall contain the written consent or objection of the next of kin, the legal guardian or, if there is no next of kin and no known legal guardian a guardian ad litem who shall be appointed by the district court judge and who shall make investigation and report to the court before the hearing shall commence. The petition should also contain the consent or objection of the person upon whom the sterilization operation is to be performed. In the event the person upon whom the operation is to be performed is not capable of giving consent or objection, there must be a certification by the petitioner that the procedure has been explained to the person upon whom the operation is to be performed. (1933, c. 224, s. 8; 1935, c. 463, s. 2; 1973, c. 476, s. 133.3; c. 1281.)

CASE NOTES

This Article does not define sterilization or indicate which medical procedure is to be used when a sterilization is ordered. This section suggests the existence of various alternative means of sterilization. The statutes are otherwise silent as to the procedures to be used. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

§ 35-41. Copy of petition served on patient.

At least 20 days prior to the hearing on the petition in the district court, a copy of such petition must be served upon the resident of the institution, patient, or noninstitutional individual and to the legal or natural guardian, guardian ad litem, or next of kin of the resident of the institution, patient, or noninstitutional individual. (1933, c. 224, s. 9; 1935, c. 463, ss. 3, 6; 1947, c. 93; 1961, c. 186; 1969, c. 982; 1971, c. 528, s. 33; c. 1231, s. 1; 1973, c. 476, s. 133.3; c. 1281.)

§ 35-42. Judge to order investigation.

If the petitioner instituting the sterilization proceedings is other than the county director of social services the judge shall order the county director of social services in the county in which the person upon whom the operation is to be performed has domicile to investigate and make recommendations to him regarding the case. (1973, c. 1281.)

§ 35-43. Hearing before the judge of district court.

Should the petitioner, the person subject to the petition, or any other interested party request a hearing, a hearing shall be held in the district court before the judge without a jury. In the absence of written objection filed with the court by the person alleged to be subject to this section or by any other interested party on his or her behalf, the court may render judgment without the appearance of witnesses. In the event a hearing is requested the district attorney for the district in which the petition is heard or the district attorney's assistant may present the evidence for the petitioner. The respondent shall be entitled to examine the petitioner's witnesses and shall be entitled to present evidence in his own behalf. If the judge of the district court shall find from the evidence that the person alleged to be subject to this section is subject to it and that because of a physical, mental, or nervous disease or deficiency which is not likely to materially improve, the person would probably be unable to care for a child or children, or because the person would be likely, unless sterilized, to procreate a child or children which probably would have serious physical, mental, or nervous diseases or deficiencies, he shall enter an order and judgment authorizing the physician or surgeon named in the petition to perform the operation. (1973, c. 1281; 1975, c. 520, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Practice and Procedure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section is procedurally adequate to survive challenge under the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

The provisions of this section far exceed the minimum requirements of procedural due process. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

This section provides an adequate judicial standard to guide the court in reaching a decision as to whether to authorize the sterilization of an individual. In re Moore, 289 N.C.

95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Legislative Intent. — It is clear from the language of this section that the General Assembly intended to provide the mentally ill and defective with sufficient safeguards to prevent misuse of this potentially dangerous procedure. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

The purpose of the standards governing mentally ill or retarded persons is to prevent unnecessary and unwarranted abridgment of the respondent's fundamental procreative rights while at the same time allowing the State to further its interests. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Sterilization may not be ordered if there is a less drastic means available. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

The statute does not limit unfitness to mental retardation. The term "physical, mental or nervous disease or deficiency" includes qualities other than diminished intelligence, and the range of retardation can vary from mild to severe. In re Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 649, 263 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

A presumption of unfitness founded solely on retardation is unwarranted. In re Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 649, 263 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

"Best Interest" Alone as Basis for Compulsory Sterilization. — Although § 35-39 states that social services shall petition for sterilization if it would be in the "best interests" of the mentally retarded individual, this language is not contained in this section. It is, therefore, doubtful whether compulsory sterilization can be ordered on the basis of undefined "best interest" alone in view of the fundamental interest at stake. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

The statutory phrase "care for the child" is not defined, but the courts in construing the phrase must find whether the evidence establishes a minimum standard of care consistent with both state interest and fundamental parental rights. In re Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 649, 263 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 686 (1980); In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

II. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Findings Required. — Before the district court judge may enter an order requiring that the operation be performed, he must make the findings of fact required by this section, which amounts to a judicial determination that the allegations contained in the petition are true. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

This section means that the judge must find that the subject is likely to engage in sexual activity without utilizing contraceptive devices and is therefore likely to impregnate or become impregnated. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

The trial court must carefully review the living conditions of the respondent to determine the substantial likelihood that he or she will voluntarily, or otherwise, engage in sexual activity likely to cause impregnation. This will necessarily include an inquiry into the respondent's home environment, daily schedule, social activities, and the degree of supervision entailed in each aspect of this schedule. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

The court must consider and make findings relative to the possibility that the respondent will experience trauma or psychological damage if she becomes pregnant or gives birth, and, conversely, the possibility of trauma or psychological damage from the sterilization operation. The latter consideration, of course, would also be applicable to a male candidate for sterilization. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Before a sterilization can be ordered there must be a showing that the subject be shown to be likely to engage in sexual activity without utilizing contraceptive devices and is, therefore, likely to become impregnated. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

The petitioner must prove by clear, strong and convincing evidence that there is a substantial likelihood that respondent will voluntarily or otherwise engage in sexual activity likely to cause impregnation before the district court judge may enter an order and judgment authorizing a sterilization procedure. In re Truesdell, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Emergency Situations. — Under § 35-49, in life-threatening or emergency situations where sterilization is medically necessary, a petition could be granted absent a showing of the factors required by this section. In re Truesdell, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

The burden on the petitioner to show personality defects or traits of unfitness apart from retardation increases as the retardation ranges from severe to mild. In re

Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 649, 263 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

Inability to Provide Child a Reasonable Environment Must Be Shown. — The petitioner has the burden of proving at least probable inability to provide a reasonable domestic environment for the child. In re Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 649, 263 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

Evidence Must Establish Compelling State Interest. — The absence of statutory guidance for determining what constitutes proper care of a child and a person's inability to provide that care places on the courts the burden of requiring that the evidence establishes conclusively a compelling state interest before the fundamental right of procreation can be infringed. In re Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 649, 263 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

Relevant Evidence. — In an involuntary sterilization proceeding based on the ground that respondent because of mental deficiency would probably be unfit to care for a child, evidence concerning respondent's morals, sexual activity, and attitude toward birth control and her statements to a psychiatrist that in her youth she would get impatient and angry with children left in her care by her parents were relevant on the issues of fitness and care and whether respondent's condition was likely to improve materially. In re Johnson, 45 N.C. App. 644, 263 S.E.2d 822 (1980).

There is no statutory or constitutional authority for considering menstrual problems with respect to involuntary sterilization. The State's compelling interest is in the prevention of conception, not in the problems respondent's menstruation may pose for her, and certainly not in the problem it poses for her caretaker. Rather, the inquiry must focus on which method or surgical procedure for sterilization poses the least health risk and the least intrusion into respondent's bodily integrity. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

No constitutional mandate requires the State to obtain a medical expert on behalf of an indigent respondent. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

The right of cross-examination is specifically provided by this section. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Only Requirement Is Written Objection to Sterilization. — In order to assure the right of cross-examination under this section, the only requirement is that the respondent, his guardian, attorney or other interested party object in writing to the sterilization. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Such Requirement Is Not Unduly Burdensome. — Since respondent is represented at every stage of the proceeding, the requirement that respondent, his guardian, attorney or other interested party object in writing to the sterilization is not unduly burdensome. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Burden and Standard of Proof. — Although this section does not specify the burden of proof that the petitioner must meet before the order authorizing the sterilization can be entered, in keeping with the intent of the General Assembly that the rights of the individual must be fully protected, the evidence must be clear, strong and convincing before such an order may be entered. In re Moore, 289 N.C. 95, 221 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

This section means that before an order of sterilization can be entered, there must be findings from evidence that is clear, strong and convincing that the subject is likely to engage in sexual activity without using contraceptive devices and that either a defective child is likely to be born or a child born that cannot be cared for by its parent. North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

The petitioner must establish by clear, strong and convincing evidence that respondent is unable or unwilling to control procreation by alternative, less drastic contraceptive methods, including, but not limited to, supervision, education and training. In re Truesdell, 63 N.C. App. 258, 304 S.E.2d 793 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

The petitioner who seeks sterilization pursuant to this section must satisfy the standards listed by the Court of Appeals in its opinion in North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976). In addition, the trial judge, in his discretion, may consider certain other factors that he considers to be reflective of the best interests of the respondent in any particular circumstance. In re Truesdell, 313 N.C. 421, 329 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Instruction on Standard of Proof. — Where the judge in his charge in effect equated proof by clear, strong and convincing evidence and proof by the greater weight of the evidence, the instruction was error. In re Johnson, 36 N.C. App. 133, 243 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

The judge should not attempt to define the term "clear, strong and convincing" in his charge. Whether the evidence is clear, strong and convincing is for the jury to resolve. In re Johnson, 36 N.C. App. 133, 243 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

Prejudicial Comment on Effect of Sterilization Laws. — An explanation by the judge in his charge of the necessity and effect of laws authorizing sterilization could only result in prejudice to the respondent. It is very likely that it led the jury to believe that the judge felt it should answer the issue in favor of petitioner. In re Johnson, 36 N.C. App. 133, 243 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

Prejudicial Comment on Procreation of Mentally Defective Child. — Where there was no allegation and no evidence to support a finding on the second ground, the likelihood of procreating a mentally defective child, but the judge, nevertheless, repeatedly gave instructions on that part of the statute and included in his final mandate an instruction that the jury answer the issue in favor of petitioner if it found that respondent would be likely, unless sterilized, to procreate a child who would probably have serious mental, physical, or nervous disease or deficiency, the instruction was erroneous and prejudicial to respondent. In re Johnson, 36 N.C. App. 133, 243 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

§ 35-44. Appeals.

An appeal to the superior court may be had by the person alleged to be subject to this section or any other interested party on such judgment in the district court if filed within 15 days following the date the court judgment is entered. The proceedings before the superior court shall constitute a trial de novo, and upon application of either party shall be heard before a jury. The district attorney for the district in which the petition is heard or his assistant may present the evidence for the petitioner. The respondent shall be entitled to examine the petitioner's witnesses and to present evidence in his own behalf. Any decision of the superior court in such cases may be appealed to the appellate courts as in other civil cases. The cost of the appeal, if any, to the superior court and higher courts shall be taxed as in other civil cases and the pendency of any appeal shall stay the proceedings in the lower court until the appeal be finally determined. Paupers' affidavits regarding court costs and costs of appeal may be filed as in other cases made and provided by the laws of this State. (1933, c. 224, ss. 13, 14; 1935, c. 463, ss. 4, 5; 1969, c. 44, s. 44; 1973, c. 476, s. 133.3; c. 1281; 1975, c. 520, s. 2.)

§ 35-45. Right to counsel.

The person alleged to be subject to the provisions of this section shall have the right to counsel at all stages of the proceedings provided for herein. This person and all others served with the notification provided for in G.S. 35-41 shall be fully informed of the person's entitlement to counsel at the time of this service of notice. This information shall be given in language and in a manner calculated to insure, insofar as such is possible in view of the individual's capability to comprehend it, that the recipient understands the entitlement. Every person subject to be sterilized under this Article after the filing of the petition shall have counsel at every stage of the proceedings. If there is a conflict between the election of the person concerned and that of the other persons being served with notice, determination of the question of representation by counsel shall be made by the court having jurisdiction of the case. The person concerned may, in any instance, be represented by counsel retained by him. In cases of claimed indigency, a request for counsel shall be processed in the manner provided for in Subchapter IX, Chapter 7A, General Statutes of North Carolina. (1973, c. 1281.)

SUBCHAPTER I. PROCEEDINGS TO DETERMINE INCOMPETENCE.

ARTICLE 1.

Determination of Incompetence.

When used in this Subchapter:

(1) "Autism" means a physical disorder of the brain which causes disturbances in the developmental rate of physical, social, and language skills; abnormal responses to sensations; absence of or delay in speech or language; or abnormal ways of relating to people, objects, and events. Autism occurs sometimes by itself and sometimes in conjunction with other brain-functioning disorders.

(2) "Cerebral palsy" means a muscle dysfunction, characterized by impairment of movement, often combined with speech impairment, and caused by abnormality of or damage to the brain.

(3) "Clerk" means the clerk of superior court.

(4) "Designated agency" means the State or local human services agency designated by the clerk in the clerk's order to prepare, cause to be prepared, or assemble a multidisciplinary evaluation and to perform other functions as the clerk may order. A designated agency includes, without limitation, State, local, regional, or area mental health, mental retardation, vocational rehabilitation, public health, social service, and developmental disabilities agencies, and diagnostic evaluation centers.

(5) "Epilepsy" means a group of neurological conditions characterized by abnormal electrical-chemical discharge in the brain. This discharge is manifested in various forms of physical activity called seizures, which range from momentary lapses of consciousness to convulsive movements.

(6) "Guardian ad litem" means a guardian appointed pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17, Rules of Civil Procedure.

(7) "Incompetent adult" means an adult or emancipated minor who lacks sufficient capacity to manage the adult's own affairs or to make or communicate important decisions concerning the adult's person, family, or property whether the lack of capacity is due to mental illness, mental retardation, epilepsy, cerebral palsy, autism, inebriety, senility, disease, injury, or similar cause or condition.

(8) "Incompetent child" means a minor who is at least 17 1/2 years of age and who, other than by reason of minority, lacks sufficient capacity to make or communicate important decisions concerning the child's person, family, or property whether the lack of capacity is due to mental illness, mental retardation, epilepsy, cerebral palsy, autism, inebriety, disease, injury, or similar cause or condition.

(9) "Indigent" means unable to pay for legal representation and other necessary expenses of a proceeding brought under this Subchapter.

(10) "Inebriety" means the habitual use of alcohol or drugs rendering a person incompetent to transact ordinary business concerning the person's estate, dangerous to person or property, cruel and intolerable to family, or unable to provide for family.

(11) "Interim guardian" means a guardian, appointed prior to adjudication of incompetence and for a temporary period, for a person who requires immediate intervention to address conditions that constitute imminent or foreseeable risk of harm to the person's physical well-being or to the person's estate.

(12) "Mental illness" means an illness that so lessens the capacity of a person to use self-control, judgment, and discretion in the conduct of the person's affairs and social relations as to make it necessary or advisable for the person to be under treatment, care, supervision, guidance, or control. The term "mental illness" encompasses "mental disease", "mental disorder", "lunacy", "unsoundness of mind", and "insanity".

(13) "Mental retardation" means significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested before age 22.

(14) "Multidisciplinary evaluation" means an evaluation that contains current medical, psychological, and social work evaluations as directed by the clerk and that may include current evaluations by professionals in other disciplines, including without limitation education, vocational rehabilitation, occupational therapy, vocational therapy, psychiatry, speech-and-hearing, and communications disorders. The evaluation is current if made not more than one year from the date on which it is presented to or considered by the court. The evaluation shall set forth the nature and extent of the disability and recommend a guardianship plan and program.

(15) "Respondent" means a person who is alleged to be incompetent in a proceeding under this Subchapter.

(16) "Treatment facility" has the same meaning as "facility" in G.S. 122C-3(14), and includes group homes, halfway houses, and other community-based residential facilities.

(17) "Ward" means a person who has been adjudicated incompetent or an adult or minor for whom a guardian has been appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 11; 1997-443, s. 11A.11.)

CASE NOTES

Chapter Sets Out Sole Procedure for Determining Incompetency. — Although § 1A-1, Rule 17 may have once allowed the trial court to conduct a competency hearing, that procedure was preempted on October 1, 1987, by the enactment of this Chapter, which sets forth the sole procedure for determining the incompetency of infants and adults. Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

And Adjudication of Incompetency Must Be Within Perimeters of This Chapter. — The language of § 35A-1102 requires any adjudication of incompetency to take place within the perimeters of this Chapter, even if the person sought to be declared incompetent does not challenge the action. However, § 1A-1, Rule 17 still exists as a means of appointment of a guardian ad litem where incompetency has already been determined. Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Incompetency Resulting from Abuse. — Plaintiff's repression of memories and post-traumatic stress syndrome suffered as a result of her grandmother's alleged sexual, physical, and emotional abuse rendered plaintiff "incompetent", thereby tolling the statutes of limitations so that summary judgment for defendant was improper. Leonard v. England, 115 N.C. App. 103, 445 S.E.2d 50, cert. granted, 337 N.C. 801, 449 S.E.2d 571 (1994), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 113, 455 S.E.2d 663 (1995).

This Chapter has had a significant impact on § 1A-1, Rule 25(b), which discusses the continuation of an action when one party becomes incompetent. In a situation where no incompetency adjudication has yet occurred, the action contemplated in the last clause of § 1A-1, Rule 25(b) would be referral of the competency issue to the clerk of superior court for action under this Chapter. Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990) (holding that plaintiff lacked standing to challenge on appeal the district court's appointment of guardian ad litem for defendant).

"Incompetent Adult" not Shown. — "Incompetent adult" not shown within the meaning of subdivision (7) of this section where the adult was able to arrange for places to live, signed leases, cooked, went shopping, held several jobs, attended college, obtained driver's licenses, drove vehicles, owned farmland, traveled and lived in foreign countries, produced a ballet, and created music. Soderlund v. Kuch, 143 N.C. App. 361, 546 S.E.2d 632 (2001), review denied, 353 N.C. 729, 551 S.E.2d 438 (2001).

Quoted in Dunkley v. Shoemate, 121 N.C. App. 360, 465 S.E.2d 319 (1996); Johnson v. Jones Group, Inc., 123 N.C. App. 219, 472 S.E.2d 587 (1996).

Applied in Soderlund v. North Carolina Sch. of Arts, 125 N.C. App. 386, 481 S.E.2d 336 (1997); State v. Young, 140 N.C. App. 1, 535 S.E.2d 380 (2000), cert. denied, 353 N.C. 397, 547 S.E.2d 429 (2001), appeal dismissed, 353 N.C. 397, 547 S.E.2d 429 (2001).

This Article establishes the exclusive procedure for adjudicating a person to be an incompetent adult or an incompetent child. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Adult Must Be Declared Incompetent. — The terms of a will may not create a guardianship for an adult heir who has not been declared incompetent through the provisions of Chapter 35A. In re Efird, 114 N.C. App. 638, 442 S.E.2d 381 (1994).

§ 35A-1103. Jurisdiction; venue.

(a) The clerk in each county shall have original jurisdiction over proceedings under this Subchapter.

(b) Venue for proceedings under this Subchapter shall be in the county in which the respondent resides or is domiciled or is an inpatient in a treatment facility. If the county of residence or domicile cannot be determined, venue shall be in the county where the respondent is present.

(c) If proceedings involving the same respondent are brought under this Subchapter in more than one county in which venue is proper, venue shall be in the county in which proceedings were commenced first.

(d) If the clerk in the county in which a proceeding under this Subchapter is brought has an interest, direct or indirect, in the proceeding, jurisdiction with respect thereto shall be vested in any superior court judge residing or presiding in the district, and the jurisdiction of the superior court judge shall extend to all things which the clerk might have done. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1104. Change of venue.

The clerk, on motion of a party, or the clerk's own motion, may order a change of venue upon finding that no hardship or prejudice to the respondent will result from a change of venue. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1105. Petition before clerk.

A verified petition for the adjudication of incompetence of an adult, or of a minor who is within six months of reaching majority, may be filed with the clerk by any person, including any State or local human services agency through its authorized representative. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 22; 1997-443, s. 11A.12.)

(1) The name, age, address, and county of residence of the respondent;

(2) The name, address, and county of residence of the petitioner, and his interest in the proceeding;

(3) A general statement of the respondent's assets and liabilities with an estimate of the value of any property, including any compensation, insurance, pension, or allowance to which he is entitled;

(4) A statement of the facts tending to show that the respondent is incompetent and the reason or reasons why the adjudication of incompetence is sought;

(5) The name, address, and county of residence of the respondent's next of kin and other persons known to have an interest in the proceeding;

(6) Facts regarding the adjudication of respondent's incompetence by a court of another state, if an adjudication is sought on that basis pursuant to G.S. 35A-1113(1). (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1107. Right to counsel or guardian ad litem.

The respondent is entitled to be represented by counsel of his own choice or by an appointed guardian ad litem. Upon filing of the petition, an attorney shall be appointed as guardian ad litem to represent the respondent unless the respondent retains his own counsel, in which event the guardian ad litem may be discharged. Appointment and discharge of an appointed guardian ad litem shall be in accordance with rules adopted by the Office of Indigent Defense Services. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 2000-144, s. 33.)

Cross References. — For the Indigent Defense Services Act, see Chapter 7A, Subchapter IX, Article 39B.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-144, s. 33, effective July 1, 2001, substituted "an appointed" for "court-appointed" in the first sentence, in the second sentence substituted "petition, an attorney shall be appointed as guardian ad litem to" for "petition, the clerk shall appoint as guardian ad litem an attorney who shall" and added "may be discharged" and added the last sentence.

§ 35A-1108. Issuance of notice.

(a) Within five days after filing of the petition, the clerk shall issue a written notice of the date, time, and place for a hearing on the petition, which shall be held not less than 10 days nor more than 30 days after service of the notice and petition on the respondent, unless the clerk extends the time for good cause or for preparation of a multidisciplinary evaluation as provided in G.S. 35A-1111.

(b) If a multidisciplinary evaluation is ordered after a notice of hearing has been issued, the clerk may extend the time for hearing and issue a notice to the parties that the hearing has been continued, the reason therefor, and the date, time, and place of the new hearing, which shall not be less than 10 days nor more than 30 days after service of such notice on the respondent.

(c) Subsequent notices to the parties shall be served as provided by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5, Rules of Civil Procedure, unless the clerk orders otherwise. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Stated in In re Ward, 112 N.C. App. 202, 435 S.E.2d 125 (1993).

§ 35A-1109. Service of notice and petition.

Copies of the petition and initial notice of hearing shall be personally served on the respondent. Respondent's counsel or guardian ad litem shall be served pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4, Rules of Civil Procedure. A sheriff who serves the notice and petition shall do so without demanding his fees in advance. The petitioner, within five days after filing the petition, shall mail or cause to be mailed, by first-class mail, copies of the notice and petition to the respondent's next of kin alleged in the petition and any other persons the clerk may designate, unless such person has accepted notice. Proof of such mailing or acceptance shall be by affidavit or certificate of acceptance of notice filed with the clerk. The clerk shall mail, by first-class mail, copies of subsequent notices to the next of kin alleged in the petition and to such other persons as the clerk deems appropriate. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 18.)

§ 35A-1110. Right to jury.

The respondent has a right, upon request by him, his counsel, or his guardian ad litem, to trial by jury. Failure to request a trial by jury shall constitute a waiver of the right. The clerk may nevertheless require trial by jury in accordance with G.S. 1A-1, Rule 39(b), Rules of Civil Procedure, by entering an order for trial by jury on his own motion. The jury shall be composed of 12 persons chosen from the county's jury list in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 9 of the General Statutes. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

(a) To assist in determining the nature and extent of a respondent's disability, or to assist in developing an appropriate guardianship plan and program, the clerk, on his own motion or the motion of any party, may order that a multidisciplinary evaluation of the respondent be performed. A request for a multidisciplinary evaluation shall be made in writing and filed with the clerk within 10 days after service of the petition on the respondent.

(b) If a multidisciplinary evaluation is ordered, the clerk shall name a designated agency and order it to prepare, cause to be prepared, or assemble a current multidisciplinary evaluation of the respondent. The agency shall file the evaluation with the clerk not later than 30 days after the agency receives the clerk's order. The multidisciplinary evaluation shall be filed in the proceeding for adjudication of incompetence, in the proceeding for appointment of a guardian under Subchapter II of this Chapter, or both. Unless otherwise ordered by the clerk, the agency shall send copies of the evaluation to the petitioner and the counsel or guardian ad litem for the respondent not later than 30 days after the agency receives the clerk's order. The evaluation shall be kept under such conditions as directed by the clerk and its contents revealed only as directed by the clerk. The evaluation shall not be a public record and shall not be released except by order of the clerk.

(c) If a multidisciplinary evaluation does not contain medical, psychological, or social work evaluations ordered by the clerk, the designated agency nevertheless shall file the evaluation with the clerk and send copies as required by subsection (b). In a transmittal letter, the agency shall explain why the evaluation does not contain such medical, psychological, or social work evaluations.

(d) The clerk may order that the respondent attend a multidisciplinary evaluation for the purpose of being evaluated.

(e) The multidisciplinary evaluation may be considered at the hearing for adjudication of incompetence, the hearing for appointment of a guardian under Subchapter II of this Chapter, or both. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1112. Hearing on petition; adjudication order.

(a) The hearing on the petition shall be at the date, time, and place set forth in the final notice of hearing and shall be open to the public unless the respondent or his counsel or guardian ad litem requests otherwise, in which event the clerk shall exclude all persons other than those directly involved in or testifying at the hearing.

(b) The petitioner and the respondent are entitled to present testimony and documentary evidence, to subpoena witnesses and the production of documents, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses.

(c) The clerk shall dismiss the proceeding if the finder of fact, whether the clerk or a jury, does not find the respondent to be incompetent.

(d) If the finder of fact, whether the clerk or the jury, finds by clear, cogent, and convincing evidence that the respondent is incompetent, the clerk shall enter an order adjudicating the respondent incompetent. The clerk may include in the order findings on the nature and extent of the ward's incompetence.

(e) Following an adjudication of incompetence, the clerk shall either appoint a guardian pursuant to Subchapter II of this Chapter or, for good cause shown, transfer the proceeding for the appointment of a guardian to any county identified in G.S. 35A-1103. The transferring clerk shall enter a written order authorizing the transfer. The clerk in the transferring county shall transfer all original papers and documents, including the multidisciplinary evaluation, if any, to the transferee county and close his file with a copy of the adjudication order and transfer order.

(f) If the adjudication occurs in any county other than the county of the respondent's residence, a certified copy of the adjudication order shall be sent to the clerk in the county of the ward's legal residence, to be filed and indexed as in a special proceeding of that county.

(g) Except as provided in G.S. 35A-1114(f), a proceeding filed under this Article may be voluntarily dismissed as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41, Rules of Civil Procedure. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Burden of Proof. — Incompetency must be proven by clear, cogent, and convincing evidence. In re Efird, 114 N.C. App. 638, 442 S.E.2d 381 (1994).

§ 35A-1113. Hearing when incompetence determined in another state.

When the petition alleges that the respondent is incompetent on the basis of an adjudication that occurred in another state, the clerk in his discretion may:

(1) Adjudicate incompetence on the basis of the prior adjudication, if the clerk first finds by clear, cogent, and convincing evidence that:
   a. The respondent is represented by an attorney or guardian ad litem; and
   b. A certified copy of an order adjudicating the respondent incompetent has been filed in the proceeding; and
   c. The prior adjudication was made by a court of competent jurisdiction on grounds comparable to a ground for adjudication of incompetence under this Article; and
   d. The respondent, subsequent to the adjudication of incompetence in another state, assumed residence in North Carolina and needs a guardian in this State; or

(2) Decline to adjudicate incompetence on the basis of the other state's adjudication, and proceed with an adjudicatory hearing as in any other case pursuant to this Article. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1114. Appointment of interim guardian.

(a) At the time of or subsequent to the filing of a petition under this Article, the petitioner may also file a verified motion with the clerk seeking the appointment of an interim guardian.

(b) The motion shall set forth facts tending to show:

(1) That there is reasonable cause to believe that the respondent is incompetent, and

(2) One or both of the following:
   a. That the respondent is in a condition that constitutes or reasonably appears to constitute an imminent or foreseeable risk of harm to his physical well-being and that requires immediate intervention;

b. That there is or reasonably appears to be an imminent or foreseeable risk of harm to the respondent's estate that requires immediate intervention in order to protect the respondent's interest, and

(3) That the respondent needs an interim guardian to be appointed immediately to intervene on his behalf prior to the adjudication hearing.

(c) Upon filing of the motion for appointment of an interim guardian, the clerk shall immediately set a date, time, and place for a hearing on the motion. The motion and a notice setting the date, time, and place for the hearing shall be served promptly on the respondent and on his counsel or guardian ad litem and other persons the clerk may designate. The hearing shall be held as soon as possible but no later than 15 days after the motion has been served on the respondent.

(d) If at the hearing the clerk finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that the respondent is incompetent, and:

(1) That the respondent is in a condition that constitutes or reasonably appears to constitute an imminent or foreseeable risk of harm to his physical well-being, and that there is immediate need for a guardian to provide consent or take other steps to protect the respondent, or

(2) That there is or reasonably appears to be an imminent or foreseeable risk of harm to the respondent's estate, and that immediate intervention is required in order to protect the respondent's interest, the clerk shall immediately enter an order appointing an interim guardian.

(e) The clerk's order appointing an interim guardian shall include specific findings of fact to support the clerk's conclusions, and shall set forth the interim guardian's powers and duties. Such powers and duties shall be limited and shall extend only so far and so long as necessary to meet the conditions necessitating the appointment of an interim guardian. In any event, the interim guardianship shall terminate on the earliest of the following: the date specified in the clerk's order; 45 days after entry of the clerk's order unless the clerk, for good cause shown, extends that period for up to 45 additional days; when any guardians are appointed following an adjudication of incompetence; or when the petition is dismissed by the court. An interim guardian whose authority relates only to the person of the respondent shall not be required to post a bond. If the interim guardian has authority related to the respondent's estate, the interim guardian shall post a bond in an amount determined by the clerk, with any conditions the clerk may impose, and shall render an account as directed by the clerk.

(f) When a motion for appointment of an interim guardian has been made, the petitioner may voluntarily dismiss the petition for adjudication of incompetence only prior to the hearing on the motion for appointment of an interim guardian. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 12.)

§ 35A-1115. Appeal from clerk's order.

Appeal from an order adjudicating incompetence shall be to the superior court for hearing de novo and thence to the Court of Appeals. An appeal does not stay the appointment of a guardian unless so ordered by the superior court or the Court of Appeals. The Court of Appeals may request the Attorney General to represent the petitioner on any appeal by the respondent to the Appellate Division of the General Court of Justice, but the Department of Justice shall not be required to pay any of the costs of the appeal. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1116. Costs and fees.

(a) Except as otherwise provided herein, costs shall be assessed as in special proceedings. Costs, including any reasonable fees and expenses of counsel for the petitioner which the clerk, in his discretion, may allow, may be taxed against either party in the discretion of the court unless:

(1) The clerk finds that the petitioner did not have reasonable grounds to bring the proceeding, in which case costs shall be taxed to the petitioner; or

(2) The respondent is indigent, in which case the costs shall be waived by the clerk if not taxed against the petitioner as provided above or otherwise paid as provided in subsection (b) or (c).

(b) The cost of a multidisciplinary evaluation order pursuant to G.S. 35A-1111 shall be assessed as follows:

(1) If the respondent is adjudicated incompetent and is not indigent, the cost shall be assessed against the respondent;

(2) If the respondent is adjudicated incompetent and is indigent, the cost shall be borne by the Department of Health and Human Services;

(3) If the respondent is not adjudicated incompetent, the cost may be taxed against either party, apportioned among the parties, or borne by the Department of Health and Human Services, in the discretion of the court.

(c) Witness fees and the fees of court-appointed counsel or guardian ad litem shall be paid by:

(1) The respondent, if the respondent is adjudicated incompetent and is not indigent;

(2) The petitioner, if the respondent is not adjudicated incompetent and the clerk finds that there were not reasonable grounds to bring the proceeding;

(3) The Administrative Office of the Courts in all other cases.

(d) The provisions of this section shall also apply to all parties to any proceedings under this Chapter, including a guardian who has been removed from office and the sureties on the guardian's bond. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 15; 1995, c. 235, s. 9; 1997-443, s. 11A.118(a).)

Article 2.

Appointment of Guardian.

§ 35A-1120. Appointment of guardian.

If the respondent is adjudicated incompetent, a guardian or guardians shall be appointed in the manner provided for in Subchapter II of this Chapter. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Article 3.

Restoration to Competency.

§ 35A-1130. Proceedings before clerk.

(a) The guardian, ward, or any other interested person may petition for restoration of the ward to competency by filing a motion in the cause of the incompetency proceeding with the clerk who is exercising jurisdiction therein. The motion shall be verified and shall set forth facts tending to show that the ward is competent.

(b) Upon receipt of the motion, the clerk shall set a date, time, and place for a hearing, which shall be not less than 10 days or more than 30 days from service of the motion and notice of hearing on the ward and the guardian, or on the one of them who is not the petitioner, unless the clerk for good cause directs otherwise. The petitioner shall cause notice and a copy of the motion to be served on the guardian and ward (but not on one who is the petitioner) and any other parties to the incompetency proceeding. Service shall be in accordance with provisions of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4, Rules of Civil Procedure.

(c) At the hearing on the motion, the ward shall be entitled to be represented by counsel or guardian ad litem, and a guardian ad litem shall be appointed in accordance with rules adopted by the Office of Indigent Defense Services if the ward is indigent and not represented by counsel. Upon motion of any party or the clerk's own motion, the clerk may order a multidisciplinary evaluation. The ward has a right, upon request by him, his counsel, or his guardian ad litem to trial by jury. Failure to request a trial by jury shall constitute a waiver of the right. The clerk may nevertheless require trial by jury in accordance with G.S. 1A-1, Rule 39(b), Rules of Civil Procedure, by entering an order for trial by jury on his own motion. Provided, if there is a jury in a proceeding for restoration to competency, it shall be a jury of six persons selected in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 9 of the General Statutes.

(d) If the clerk or jury finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the ward is competent, the clerk shall enter an order adjudicating that the ward is restored to competency. Upon such adjudication, the ward is authorized to manage his affairs, make contracts, control and sell his property, both real and personal, and exercise all rights as if he had never been adjudicated incompetent.

(e) The filing and approval of final accounts from the guardian and the discharge of the guardian shall be as provided in Subchapter II of this Chapter.

(f) If the clerk or jury fails to find that the ward should be restored to competency, the clerk shall enter an order denying the petition. The ward may appeal from the clerk's order to the superior court for trial de novo. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 2000-144, s. 34.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under former § 35-4 and prior law.

Constitutionality of Section. — Former section, requiring that only six freeholders (now six people chosen in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 9) shall be summoned to inquire into the sanity of the person alleged to be insane, is constitutional. Groves v. Ware, 182 N.C. 553, 109 S.E. 568 (1921).

Section May Not Be Invoked by Person Committed to State Mental Institution. — A person committed to a State mental institution under Article 3 of former Chapter 122 could not invoke the provisions of former § 35-4 for restoration of sanity by jury trial. The remedy is by habeas corpus. In re Harris, 241 N.C. 179, 84 S.E.2d 808 (1954).

Ex parte proceedings to remove a guardian of an insane person, without notice to such guardian, are void. Sims v. Sims, 121 N.C. 297, 28 S.E. 407, 40 L.R.A. 737, 61 Am. St. R. 665 (1897).

Clerk's Authority to Reopen Proceeding. — Clerk had original jurisdiction to appoint a guardian and could reopen the incompetency proceeding, where an interested party was not notified of the original proceeding. In re Ward, 337 N.C. 443, 446 S.E.2d 40 (1994).

SUBCHAPTER II. GUARDIAN AND WARD.

ARTICLE 4.

Purpose and Scope; Jurisdiction; Venue.

§ 35A-1201. Purpose.

(a) The General Assembly of North Carolina recognizes that:

(1) Some minors and incompetent persons, regardless of where they are living, require the assistance of a guardian in order to help them exercise their rights, including the management of their property and personal affairs.

(2) Incompetent persons who are not able to act effectively on their own behalf have a right to a qualified, responsible guardian.

(3) The essential purpose of guardianship for an incompetent person is to replace the individual's authority to make decisions with the authority of a guardian when the individual does not have adequate capacity to make such decisions.

(4) Limiting the rights of an incompetent person by appointing a guardian for him should not be undertaken unless it is clear that a guardian will give the individual a fuller capacity for exercising his rights.

(5) Guardianship should seek to preserve for the incompetent person the opportunity to exercise those rights that are within his comprehension and judgment, allowing for the possibility of error to the same degree as is allowed to persons who are not incompetent. To the maximum extent of his capabilities, an incompetent person should be permitted to participate as fully as possible in all decisions that will affect him.

(6) Minors, because they are legally incompetent to transact business or give consent for most purposes, need responsible, accountable adults to handle property or benefits to which they are entitled. Parents are the natural guardians of the person of their minor children, but unemancipated minors, when they do not have natural guardians, need some other responsible, accountable adult to be responsible for their personal welfare and for personal decision-making on their behalf.

(b) The purposes of this Subchapter are:

(1) To establish standards and procedures for the appointment of guardians of the person, guardians of the estate, and general guardians for incompetent persons and for minors who need guardians;

(2) To specify the powers and duties of such guardians;

(3) To provide for the protection of the person and conservation of the estate of the ward through periodic accountings and reports; and

(4) To provide for the termination of guardianships. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1202. Definitions.

When used in this Subchapter, unless a contrary intent is indicated or the context requires otherwise:

(1) "Accounting" means the financial or status reports filed with the clerk, designated agency, respondent, or other person or party with whom such reports are required to be filed.

(2) "Clerk" means the clerk of superior court.

(3) "Designated agency" means the State or local human services agency designated by the clerk in an order to prepare, cause to be prepared, or assemble a multidisciplinary evaluation and to perform other functions as the clerk may order. A designated agency includes, without limitation, State, local, regional or area mental health, mental retardation, vocational rehabilitation, public health, social service, and developmental disabilities agencies, and diagnostic evaluation centers.

(4) "Disinterested public agent" means:

a. The director or assistant directors of a local human services agency, or

b. An adult officer, agent, or employee of a State human services agency.

The fact that a disinterested public agent is employed by a State or local human services agency that provides financial assistance, services, or treatment to a ward does not disqualify that person from being appointed as guardian.

(5) "Estate" means any interest in real property, choses in action, intangible personal property, and tangible personal property, and includes any interest in joint accounts or jointly held property.

(6) "Financial report" means the report filed by the guardian concerning all financial transactions, including receipts and expenditures of the ward's money, sale of the ward's property, or other transactions involving the ward's property.

(7) "General guardian" means a guardian of both the estate and the person.
(8) "Guardian ad litem" means a guardian appointed pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17, Rules of Civil Procedure.
(9) "Guardian of the estate" means a guardian appointed solely for the purpose of managing the property, estate, and business affairs of a ward.
(10) "Guardian of the person" means a guardian appointed solely for the purpose of performing duties relating to the care, custody, and control of a ward.
(11) "Incompetent person" means a person who has been adjudicated to be an "incompetent adult" or "incompetent child" as defined in G.S. 35A-1101(7) or (8).
(12) "Minor" means a person who is under the age of 18, is not married, and has not been legally emancipated.
(13) "Multidisciplinary evaluation" means an evaluation that contains current medical, psychological, and social work evaluations as directed by the clerk and that may contain current evaluations by professionals in other disciplines, including without limitation education, vocational rehabilitation, occupational therapy, vocational therapy, psychiatry, speech-and-hearing, and communications disorders. The evaluation is current if made not more than one year from the date on which it is presented to or considered by the court. The evaluation shall set forth the nature and extent of the disability and recommend a guardianship plan and program.
(14) "Status report" means the report required by G.S. 35A-1242 to be filed by the general guardian or guardian of the person. A status report shall include a report of a recent medical and dental examination of the ward by one or more physicians or dentists, a report on the guardian's performance of the duties set forth in this Chapter and in the clerk's order appointing the guardian, and a report on the ward's condition, needs, and development. The clerk may direct that the report contain other or different information. The report may also contain, without limitation, reports of mental health or mental retardation professionals, psychologists, social workers, persons in loco parentis, a member of a multidisciplinary evaluation team, a designated agency, a disinterested public agent or agency, a guardian ad litem, a guardian of the estate, an interim guardian, a successor guardian, an officer, official, employee or agent of the Department of Health and Human Services, or any other interested persons including, if applicable to the ward's situation, group home parents or supervisors, employers, members of the staff of a treatment facility, or foster parents.
(15) "Ward" means a person who has been adjudicated incompetent or an adult or minor for whom a guardian has been appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1997-443, s. 11A.13.)

CASE NOTES

Stated in Valles de Portillo v. D.H. Griffin Wrecking Co., 134 N.C. App. 714, 518 S.E.2d 555 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 186, 541 S.E.2d 727 (1999).

(a) Clerks of superior court in their respective counties have original jurisdiction for the appointment of guardians of the person, guardians of the estate, or general guardians for incompetent persons and of related proceedings brought or filed under this Subchapter. Clerks of superior court in their respective counties have original jurisdiction for the appointment of guardians of the estate for minors, for the appointment of guardians of the person or general guardians for minors who have no natural guardian, and of related proceedings brought or filed under this Subchapter.

(b) The clerk shall retain jurisdiction following appointment of a guardian in order to assure compliance with the clerk's orders and those of the superior court. The clerk shall have authority to remove a guardian for cause and shall appoint a successor guardian, following the criteria set forth in G.S. 35A-1213 or G.S. 35A-1224, after removal, death, or resignation of a guardian.

(c) The clerk shall have authority to determine disputes between guardians and to adjust the amount of the guardian's bond.

(d) Any party or any other interested person may petition the clerk to exercise the authority conferred on the clerk by this section.

(e) Where a guardian or trustee has been appointed for a ward under Chapter 33 or Chapter 35 of the General Statutes, the clerk, upon his own motion or the motion of that guardian or trustee or any other interested person, may designate that guardian or trustee or appoint another qualified person as guardian of the person, guardian of the estate, or general guardian of the ward under this Chapter; provided, the authority of a guardian or trustee properly appointed under Chapter 33 or Chapter 35 of the General Statutes to continue serving in that capacity is not dependent on such motion and designation. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Chapter 33 and most of Chapter 35, referred to in this section, have been repealed and/or recodified. As to incompetency and guardianship, see now Chapter 35A, § 35A-1101 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under former § 33-1 and prior law.

Clerk's Authority to Reopen Proceeding. — Clerk had original jurisdiction to appoint a guardian and could reopen the incompetency proceeding, where an interested party was not notified of the original proceeding. In re Ward, 337 N.C. 443, 446 S.E.2d 40 (1994).

The powers which a court of equity formerly exercised in regard to orphans and their estates are now conferred upon the clerk of the superior court by former §§ 33-1 and 33-6. Duffy v. Williams, 133 N.C. 195, 45 S.E. 548 (1903).

The superior court has no power to appoint a general guardian, in the absence of other matters of which the court has jurisdiction. In re Simmons, 266 N.C. 702, 147 S.E.2d 231 (1966).

Residence of Infant. — The word "reside" as used in this section, relating to the appointment of guardians, has been construed to mean the domicile of the infant. And a legitimate child, whose father is alive, takes at birth, and continues during minority, the domicile of his father, following it as it changes. Upon the death of the father his domicile at death continues to be the domicile of his minor child until the domicile of such child is legally changed. In re Hall's Guardianship, 235 N.C. 697, 71 S.E.2d 140 (1952).

Where both parents of an infant are dead and he is taken to the home of his paternal grandparents and resides with them, regardless of what theretofore may have been his domicile, the domicile of his grandparents then becomes his domicile. Hence, the clerk of superior court of the county in which the grandparents reside has jurisdiction of him. In re Hall's Guardianship, 235 N.C. 697, 71 S.E.2d 140 (1952).

Appointment by General Assembly. — An act of the General Assembly authorizing a certain person "to act as guardian" of another without giving bond, is constitutional, and is in itself an appointment without intervention of the clerk. Henderson v. Bowed, 116 N.C. 795, 21 S.E. 692 (1895).

The appointment of a guardian is a matter of discretion, the exercise of which cannot be reviewable by the Supreme Court. Battle v. Vick, 15 N.C. 294 (1833).

Not Bound by Choice of the Minor. — In early cases it was held that the court in appointing a guardian was not bound by the choice of the minor, but could appoint the person, who, in its discretion, would best perform the duty. Wynne v. Always, 5 N.C. 38 (1804); Grant v. Whitaker, 5 N.C. 231 (1809).

Person Related to Ward. — Courts are empowered to appoint as guardian such person as they may think proper, without regard to the kinship of the guardian to the ward. Mills v. McAllister, 2 N.C. 303 (1796).

Custody of Child. — The jurisdiction of superior court clerks in the appointment of guardians of infants, etc., does not extend to a case where the petitioner asks for the custody of a child who had been placed by its mother under the control of another. In re Lewis, 88 N.C. 31 (1883).

Removal of Guardian. — A ward may not bring an action in the superior court by her next friend to remove her guardian appointed by the clerk. Moses v. Moses, 204 N.C. 657, 169 S.E. 273 (1933).

Termination of Guardianship When Ward Reaches Majority. — When one is appointed as guardian for a minor, his right to act terminates when the ward reaches his majority. In re Simmons, 256 N.C. 184, 123 S.E.2d 614 (1962).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

A clerk of superior court may appoint a guardian of the person when there is no natural guardian for a minor. See opinion of Attorney General to Ms. Diana Morgan, Assistant Clerk of Superior Court, Brunswick County, 54 N.C.A.G. 31 (1984), rendered under former § 33-1.

Clerk of Court as "Court of Competent Jurisdiction." — If a purchaser or beneficiary of a preneed contract has been adjudicated incompetent, the clerk of the superior court is a "court of competent jurisdiction" and, a hearing should be held in order for the clerk to make findings establishing that it is in the best interest of the ward to revoke the contract. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. William R. Hoke, Attorney for the North Carolina State Board of Mortuary Science, — N.C.A.G. — (November 3, 1995).

(a) Venue for the appointment of a guardian for an incompetent person is in the county in which the person was adjudicated to be incompetent unless the clerk in that county has transferred the matter to a different county, in which case venue is in the county to which the matter has been transferred.

(b) Venue for the appointment of a guardian for a minor is in the county in which the minor resides or is domiciled.

(c) Venue for the appointment of an ancillary guardian for a nonresident of the State of North Carolina who is a minor or who has been adjudicated incompetent in another state, and who has a guardian of the estate or general guardian in the state of his residence, is in any county in which is located real estate in which the nonresident ward has an ownership or other interest, or if the nonresident ward has no such interest in real estate, any county in which the nonresident owns or has an interest in personal property. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under former § 33-1.

Residence of Infant. — The word "reside" as used in former § 33-1 relating to the appointment of guardians has been construed to mean the domicile of the infant. And a legitimate child, whose father is alive, takes at birth, and continues during minority, the domicile of his father — following is as it changes. Upon the death of the father his domicile at death continues to be the domicile of his minor child until the domicile of such child is legally changed. In re Hall's Guardianship, 235 N.C. 697, 71 S.E.2d 140 (1952).

Where both parents of an infant are dead and he is taken to the home of his paternal grandparents and resides with them, regardless of what theretofore may have been his domicile, the domicile of his grandparents then becomes his domicile. Hence, the clerk of superior court of the county in which the grandparents reside has jurisdiction of him. In re Hall's Guardianship, 235 N.C. 697, 71 S.E.2d 140 (1952).

§ 35A-1205. Transfer to different county.

At any time before or after appointing a guardian for a minor or incompetent person the clerk may, on a motion filed in the cause or on the court's own motion, for good cause order that the matter be transferred to a different county. The transferring clerk shall enter a written order directing the transfer under such conditions as the clerk specifies. The clerk in the transferring county shall transfer all original papers, documents, and orders from the guardianship and the incompetency proceeding, if any, to the clerk of the transferee county, along with the order directing the transfer. The clerk in the transferee county shall docket and file the papers in the estates division as a basis for jurisdiction in all subsequent proceedings. The clerk in the transferring county shall close his file with a copy of the transfer order and any order adjudicating incompetence or appointing a guardian. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1206. Letters of appointment.

Whenever a guardian has been duly appointed and qualified under this Subchapter, the clerk shall issue to the guardian letters of appointment signed by the clerk and sealed with the clerk's seal of office. In all cases, the clerk shall specify in the order and letters of appointment whether the guardian is a guardian of the estate, a guardian of the person, or a general guardian. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under former law.

The appointment of a guardian can be shown only by the records in the office of the clerk of the superior court by whom the appointment was made, or by letters of appointment issued by the clerk as required by this section, and parol evidence tending to show appointment is incompetent. Buncombe County v. Cain, 210 N.C. 766, 188 S.E. 399 (1936).

§ 35A-1207. Motions in the cause.

(a) Any interested person may file a motion in the cause with the clerk in the county where a guardianship is docketed to request modification of the order appointing a guardian or guardians or consideration of any matter pertaining to the guardianship.

(b) The clerk shall treat all such requests, however labeled, as motions in the cause.

(c) A movant under this section shall obtain from the clerk a time, date, and place for a hearing on the motion, and shall serve the motion and notice of hearing on all other parties and such other persons as the clerk directs as provided by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, unless the clerk orders otherwise.

(d) If the clerk finds reasonable cause to believe that an emergency exists that threatens the physical well-being of the ward or constitutes a risk of substantial injury to the ward's estate, the clerk may enter an appropriate ex parte order to address the emergency pending the disposition of the matter at the hearing. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Chapter 35A contemplates a spousal support obligation. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Any interested person, including a spouse, may seek payment of an obligation from an incompetent's estate by filing a motion in the cause under this section. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

The duty to provide support to a dependent spouse is a continuing obligation, fairly chargeable to the estate of an incompetent; therefore, incompetent's wife's complaint for support stated a legally recognized claim. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Clerk of Superior Court Has Power to Determine Whether Incompetent's Spouse Is Granted Support. — The clerk of superior court—after first ensuring that the estate is ample to meet the expenses of caring for the incompetent has residual equitable power under Chapter 35A to examine the facts and circumstances of the case to determine whether the incompetent's spouse should be granted support from her husband's estate and the right to continue to live in his home; factors the clerk may consider include the size and condition of the estate, the present and future demands against it, and the spouse's needs. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

The district court was not the proper forum in which to seek spousal support from the estate of an incompetent; the superior court is the only proper division to hear matters regarding the administration of incompetents' estates; therefore, the incompetent's spouse should have made her demand for support before the clerk of superior court either as a motion in the cause pursuant to this section, or as a special proceeding for the sale of her husband's property under § 35A-1307. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

The estate of an incompetent may not be so depleted in favor of a spouse as to compromise the quality of care provided to the incompetent, or to force the incompetent to become a public charge; rather, in the limited instance in which an incompetent's estate is ample to provide for his own care and maintenance, an award of spousal support may properly be charged against the estate. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

If the guardian questions the propriety of a particular charge against the estate, he may seek prior court approval before making payment by filing a motion in the cause with the superior court clerk. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Article 5.

Appointment of Guardian for Incompetent Person.

§ 35A-1210. Application before clerk.

Any individual, corporation, or disinterested public agent may file an application for the appointment of a guardian for an incompetent person by filing the same with the clerk. The application may be joined with or filed subsequent to a petition for the adjudication of incompetence under Subchapter I of this Chapter. The application shall set forth, to the extent known and to the extent such information is not already a matter of record in the case:

(1) The name, age, address, and county of residence of the ward or respondent;

(2) The name, address, and county of residence of the applicant, his relationship if any to the respondent or ward, and his interest in the proceeding;

(3) The name, address, and county of residence of the respondent's next to kin and other persons known to have an interest in the proceeding;

(4) A general statement of the ward's or respondent's assets and liabilities with an estimate of the value of any property, including any income and receivables to which he is entitled; and

(5) Whether the applicant seeks the appointment of a guardian of the person, a guardian of the estate, or a general guardian, and whom the applicant recommends or seeks to have appointed as such guardian or guardians. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 35-1.6 and 35-2 and prior law.

Nature of Proceeding. — An inquisition under this section as regards the person whose sanity is in question is a proceeding in personam; as it affects his property is a proceeding in rem. Such an inquisition is certainly not a criminal action as contemplated by § 1-5. It is not a civil action as defined in § 1-2. And by § 1-3 "every other remedy is a special proceeding." Certainly such an inquisition is of a civil nature, though it would seem it is not a special proceeding under § 1-3. In re Dunn, 239 N.C. 378, 79 S.E.2d 921 (1954).

Right to Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard. — When a party's lack of mental capacity is asserted and denied, and he has not previously been adjudicated incompetent to manage his affairs, he is entitled to notice and an opportunity to be heard before either a next friend or a guardian ad litem can be appointed for him. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

It is fundamental that one accused of incompetency is entitled to notice of the proceedings and a reasonable opportunity to rebut the allegations of the petition. In re Robinson, 26 N.C. App. 341, 215 S.E.2d 631 (1975).

Notice to Alleged Incompetent Serves Function of Summons. — The effect of former section is to provide that the proceeding may be commenced by the filing of the petition, and that the inquisition may be held upon the notice therein provided being served upon the alleged incompetent, thereby dispensing with the necessity of issuing a summons. The notice to an incompetent to appear at a time and place named to present evidence and show cause, if any, why he should not be declared incompetent serves every function of a summons. In re Barker, 210 N.C. 617, 188 S.E. 205 (1936).

Presence of Party. — The person alleged to be incompetent has a right to be present at the inquest, and if this right be denied him, it is good cause for setting aside the inquisition. Bethea v. McLennon, 23 N.C. 523 (1841).

Right to Traverse Inquisition. — From the earliest times the common law and the course of the legislation in common-law states has guarded sedulously the right of persons accused of incompetency of any kind to traverse the inquisition or other proceeding in the nature of one de lunatico inquirendo. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Conclusiveness of Adjudication. — An adjudication of insanity is conclusive as to the parties to the proceeding and their privies, but as to others it is evidence of incompetency and raises a mere presumption to that effect which is not conclusive but may be rebutted. Medical College v. Maynard, 236 N.C. 506, 73 S.E.2d 315 (1952).

The executed contract of a mentally incompetent person is ordinarily voidable and not void. If, however, the person has been adjudged incompetent from want of understanding to manage his affairs and the court has appointed a guardian for him, he is conclusively presumed insane insofar as parties and privies to the guardianship proceedings are concerned; as to all others, it is presumptive (but rebuttable) proof of the ward's incapacity. Chesson v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 268 N.C. 98, 150 S.E.2d 40 (1966).

The test for mental competence to enter into a release is the same as that controlling the running of the statute of limitations, i.e., whether at the time of execution of the release, the party challenging the release had the mental competence to manage his own affairs. Cox v. Jefferson-Pilot Fire & Cas. Co., 80 N.C. App. 122, 341 S.E.2d 608, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 702, 347 S.E.2d 38 (1986).

Guardian of a young incompetent adult, appointed by the State, acted under color of State law and was a State actor for purposes of jurisdiction under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in a suit brought by ward's next friend seeking appropriate treatment for the ward. Thomas S. v. Morrow, 781 F.2d 367 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1124, 106 S. Ct. 1992, 90 L. Ed. 2d 673, 479 U.S. 869, 107 S. Ct. 235, 93 L. Ed. 2d 161 (1986) upholding federal district court's order directing guardian and Secretary of North Carolina Department of Human Resources to furnish specific treatment for the ward, but directing the district court to delete from its order the direction that the guardian perform his duties under State law.

II. INABILITY TO MANAGE OWN AFFAIRS.

The word "affairs" encompasses a person's entire property and business, not just one transaction or one piece of property to which he may have a unique attachment. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Test of Incompetence to Manage Own Affairs. — Under former § 35-2, if a person's mental condition is such that he is incapable of transacting the ordinary business involved in taking care of his property, if he is incapable of exercising rational judgment and weighing the consequences of his acts upon himself, his family, his property and estate, he is incompetent to manage his affairs. On the other hand, if he understands what is necessarily required for the management of his ordinary business affairs and is able to perform those acts with reasonable continuity, if he comprehends the effect of what he does, and can exercise his own will, he is not lacking in understanding within the meaning of the law, and he cannot be deprived of the control of his litigation or property. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

There is no completely satisfactory definition of the phrase "incompetent from want of understanding to manage his own affairs." Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Incompetency to administer one's property obviously depends upon the general frame and habit of mind, and not upon specific actions, such as may be reflected by eccentricities, prejudices, or the holding of particular beliefs. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

As to the requirement that an adult plaintiff be non compos mentis before the court has jurisdiction to appoint a next friend for him, see Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

More Efficient Management of Property by Another Is Insufficient Ground. — To authorize the appointment of next friend or guardian ad litem, it is not enough to show that another might manage a man's property more wisely or efficiently than he himself. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Mere weakness of mind will not be sufficient to put a person among those who are incompetent to manage their own affairs. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Eccentricity, like profligacy, may coexist with the ability to manage one's property. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

III. APPOINTMENT OF GUARDIAN.

Mental incapacity is only cause for appointment of a guardian under this section. Former section does not make physical incapacity alone, however complete, grounds for such appointment. Goodson v. Lehmon, 224 N.C. 616, 31 S.E.2d 756 (1944).

Ward Presumed to Lack Capacity after Guardian Appointed. — Where a person has been adjudged incompetent for want of understanding to manage his own affairs, under former section, and the court has appointed a guardian, and not a trustee, the ward is conclusively presumed to lack mental capacity to manage his own affairs, insofar as parties and privies to the proceeding are concerned; and, while not conclusive as to others, it is presumptive, and the presumption continues unless rebutted in a proper proceeding. Sutton v. Sutton, 222 N.C. 274, 22 S.E.2d 553 (1942).

An inquisition is not always a condition precedent for the appointment of a next friend or a guardian ad litem. In an emergency, when it is necessary, pendente lite, to safeguard the property of a person non compos mentis whose incompetency has not been adjudicated, the protection of the court may be invoked in his behalf by one acting as next friend. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

No Substantial Difference between Next Friend and Guardian Ad Litem. — Although technically a next friend represents a plaintiff and a guardian ad litem represents a defendant, there is no substantial difference between the two. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

The class of persons for whom next friends and guardians ad litem may be appointed are the same. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Neither a next friend nor a guardian ad litem has authority to receive money or administer the litigant's property. His powers are coterminous with the beginning and end of the litigation in which he is appointed. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

§ 35A-1211. Service of application, motions, and notices.

(a) Application for appointment of a guardian and related motions and notices shall be served on the respondent, respondent's counsel or guardian ad litem, other parties of record, and such other persons as the clerk shall direct.

(b) When the application for appointment of a guardian is joined with a petition for adjudication of incompetence, the application shall be served with and in the same manner as the petition for adjudication of incompetence. When the application is filed subsequent to the petition for adjudication of incompetence, the applicant shall serve the application as provided by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5, Rules of Civil Procedure, unless the clerk directs otherwise. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 25.)

§ 35A-1212. Hearing before clerk on appointment of guardian.

(a) The clerk shall make such inquiry and receive such evidence as the clerk deems necessary to determine:

(1) The nature and extent of the needed guardianship;

(2) The assets, liabilities, and needs of the ward; and

(3) Who, in the clerk's discretion, can most suitably serve as the guardian or guardians.

(b) If a current multidisciplinary evaluation is not available and the clerk determines that one is necessary, the clerk, on his own motion or the motion of any party, may order that such an evaluation be performed pursuant to G.S. 35A-1111. The provisions of that section shall apply to such an order for a multidisciplinary evaluation following an adjudication of incompetence.

(c) The clerk may require a report prepared by a designated agency to evaluate the suitability of a prospective guardian, to include a recommendation as to an appropriate party or parties to serve as guardian, or both, based on the nature and extent of the needed guardianship and the ward's assets, liabilities, and needs.

(d) If a designated agency has not been named pursuant to G.S. 35A-1111, the clerk may, at any time he finds that the best interest of the ward would be served thereby, name a designated agency. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1213. Qualifications of guardians.

(a) The clerk may appoint as guardian an adult individual, a corporation, or a disinterested public agent. The applicant may submit to the clerk the name or names of potential guardians, and the clerk may consider the recommendations of the next of kin or other persons.

(b) An individual appointed as general guardian or guardian of the estate must be a resident of the State of North Carolina. A nonresident of the State of North Carolina, to be appointed as guardian of the person of a North Carolina resident, must indicate in writing his willingness to submit to the jurisdiction of the North Carolina courts in matters relating to the guardianship and must appoint a resident agent to accept service of process for the guardian in all actions or proceedings with respect to the guardianship. Such appointment must be approved by and filed with the clerk, and any agent so appointed must notify the clerk of any change in the agent's address or legal residence. The clerk may require a nonresident guardian to post a bond or other security for the faithful performance of the guardian's duties.

(c) A corporation may be appointed as guardian only if it is authorized by its charter to serve as a guardian or in similar fiduciary capacities.

(d) A disinterested public agent who is appointed by the clerk to serve as guardian is authorized and required to do so; provided, if at the time of the appointment or any time subsequent thereto the disinterested public agent believes that his role or the role of his agency in relation to the ward is such that his service as guardian would constitute a conflict of interest, or if he knows of any other reason that his service as guardian may not be in the ward's best interest, he shall bring such matter to the attention of the clerk and seek the appointment of a different guardian. A disinterested public agent who is appointed as guardian shall serve in that capacity by virtue of his office or employment, which shall be identified in the clerk's order and in the letters of appointment. When the disinterested public agent's office or employment terminates, his successor in office or employment, or his immediate supervisor if there is no successor, shall succeed him as guardian without further proceedings unless the clerk orders otherwise.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an employee of a treatment facility, as defined in G.S. 35A-1101(16), may not serve as guardian for a ward who is an inpatient in or resident of the facility in which the employee works; provided, this subsection shall not apply to or affect the validity of any appointment of a guardian that occurred before October 1, 1987. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The court correctly dismissed the plaintiff's challenge to this section due to a lack of standing where he failed to allege that the court would have named him his grandmother's guardian in the absence of the residency requirements of this section. Jones v. Jones, — F.3d —, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 12271 (4th Cir. June 5, 2000).

§ 35A-1214. Priorities for appointment.

The clerk shall consider appointing a guardian according to the following order of priority: an individual; a corporation; or a disinterested public agent. No public agent shall be appointed guardian until diligent efforts have been made to find an appropriate individual or corporation to serve as guardian, but in every instance the clerk shall base the appointment of a guardian or guardians on the best interest of the ward. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1215. Clerk's order; issuance of letters of appointment.

(a) When appointing a guardian, the clerk shall enter an order setting forth:

(1) The nature of the guardianship or guardianships to be created and the name of the person or entity appointed to fill each guardianship; and

(2) The powers and duties of the guardian or guardians, which shall include, unless the clerk orders otherwise, (i) with respect to a guardian of the person and general guardian, the powers and duties provided under G.S. 35A, Article 8, and (ii) with respect to a guardian of the estate and general guardian, the powers, and duties provided under G.S. 35A, Article 9 and Subchapter III; and

(3) The identity of the designated agency if there is one.

(b) The clerk may order that the ward retain certain legal rights and privileges to which he was entitled before he was adjudged incompetent; provided, any such order shall include findings as to the nature and extent of the ward's incompetence as it relates to the ward's need for a guardian or guardians.

(c) The clerk shall issue the guardian or guardians letters of appointment as provided in G.S. 35A-1206. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1216. Rule-making power of Secretary of Health and Human Services.

The Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services shall adopt rules concerning the guardianship responsibilities of disinterested public agents. The rules shall provide, among other things, that disinterested public agents shall undertake or have received training concerning the powers and responsibilities of guardians. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1997-443, s. 11A.15.)

§§ 35A-1217 through 35A-1219: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 6.

Appointment of Guardian for a Minor.

§ 35A-1220. Absence of natural guardian.

When a minor either has no natural guardian or has been abandoned, and the minor requires services from the county department of social services, the social services director in the county in which the minor resides or is domiciled shall be the guardian of the person of the minor until the appointment of a general guardian or guardian of the person for the minor under this Subchapter or the entry of an order by a court of competent jurisdiction awarding custody of the minor or appointing a general guardian or guardian of the person for the minor. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1221. Application before clerk.

Any person or corporation, including any State or local human services agency through its authorized representative, may make application for the appointment of a guardian of the estate for any minor or for the appointment of a guardian of the person or general guardian for any minor who has no natural guardian by filing an application with the clerk. The application shall set forth, to the extent known:

(1) The minor's name, date of birth, address, and county of residence;
(2) The names and address of the minor's parents, if living, and of other persons known to have an interest in the application for appointment of a guardian; the name of and date of death of the minor's deceased parent or parents;
(3) The applicant's name, address, county of residence, relationship if any to the minor, and interest in the proceeding;
(4) If a guardian has been appointed for the minor or custody of the minor has been awarded, a statement of the facts relating thereto and a copy of any guardianship or custody order, if available;
(5) A general statement of the minor's assets and liabilities with an estimate of the value of any property, including any income and receivables to which he is entitled;
(6) A statement of the reason or reasons that the appointment of a guardian is sought; whether the applicant seeks the appointment of a guardian of the person, a guardian of the estate, or a general guardian; and whom the applicant recommends or seeks to have appointed as such guardian or guardians; and
(7) Any other information that will assist the clerk in determining the need for a guardian or in appointing a guardian. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 24; 1997-443, s. 11A.16.)

§ 35A-1222. Service of application and notices.

A copy of the application and written notice of the time, date, and place set for a hearing shall be served on each parent, guardian, and legal custodian of the minor who is not an applicant, and on any other person the clerk may direct, including the minor. Service shall be provided by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4, Rules of Civil Procedure, unless the clerk directs otherwise. When service is made by the sheriff, the sheriff shall make such service without demanding his fees in advance. Parties may waive their right to notice of the hearing and the clerk may proceed to consider the application upon determining that all necessary parties are before the court and agree to have the application considered. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 19.)

§ 35A-1223. Hearing before clerk on appointment of guardian.

The clerk shall receive evidence necessary to determine whether a guardian of the person, a guardian of the estate, or a general guardian is required. If the court determines that a guardian or guardians are required, the court shall receive evidence necessary to determine the minor's assets, liabilities, and needs, and who the guardian or guardians shall be. The hearing may be informal and the clerk may consider whatever testimony, written reports, affidavits, documents, or other evidence the clerk finds necessary to determine the minor's best interest. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1224. Criteria for appointment of guardians.

(a) The clerk may appoint a guardian of the estate for any minor. The clerk may appoint a guardian of the person or a general guardian only for a minor who has no natural guardian.

(b) The clerk may appoint as guardian of the person or general guardian only an adult individual whether or not that individual is a resident of the State of North Carolina.

(c) The clerk may appoint as guardian of the estate an adult individual whether or not that individual is a resident of the State of North Carolina or a corporation that is authorized by its charter to serve as a guardian or in similar fiduciary capacities.

(d) If the minor's parent or parents have made a testamentary recommendation pursuant to G.S. 35A-1225 for the appointment of a guardian, the clerk shall give substantial weight to such recommendation; provided, such recommendation may not affect the rights of a surviving parent who has not willfully abandoned the minor, and the clerk shall in every instance base the appointment of a guardian or guardians on the minor's best interest.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an employee of a treatment facility, as defined in G.S. 35A-1101(16), may not serve as guardian for a ward who is an inpatient in or resident of the facility in which the employee works; provided, this subsection shall not apply to or affect the validity of any appointment of a guardian that occurred before October 1, 1987. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989 c. 473, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Appointment of Person to Receive Minor's Death Benefits. — Clerk of Superior Court may not appoint a "general guardian" for a minor if a natural guardian, such as a biological mother, exists; however, clerk of Superior Court may appoint "some other person" to receive death benefits on behalf of minor. Valles de Portillo v. D.H. Griffin Wrecking Co., 134 N.C. App. 714, 518 S.E.2d 555 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 186, 541 S.E.2d 727 (1999).

§ 35A-1225. Testamentary recommendation; guardian for incompetent minor.

(a) Parents are presumed to know the best interest of their children. Any parent may by last will and testament recommend a guardian for any of his or her minor children, whether born at the parent's death or en ventre sa mere, for such time as the child remains under 18 years of age, unmarried, and unemancipated, or for any less time. Such will may be made without regard to whether the testator is an adult or a minor. If both parents make such recommendations, the will with the latest date shall, in the absence of other relevant factors, prevail. In the absence of a surviving parent, such recommendation shall be a strong guide for the clerk in appointing a guardian, but the clerk is not bound by the recommendation if the clerk finds that a different appointment is in the minor's best interest. If the will specifically so directs, a guardian appointed pursuant to such recommendation may be permitted to qualify and serve without giving bond, unless the clerk finds as a fact that the interest of the minor would be best served by requiring the guardian to give bond.

(b) Any person authorized by law to recommend a guardian for a minor by his last will and testament or other writing may direct that the guardian appointed for his incompetent child shall petition the clerk during the six months before the child reaches majority for an adjudication of incompetence and appointment of a guardian under the provisions of this Chapter. If so directed, the guardian shall timely file such a petition unless the minor is no longer incompetent. Notwithstanding the absence of such provision in a will or other writing, the guardian of an incompetent child, or any other person, may file such petition during the six months before the minor reaches majority or thereafter. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 33-2 and prior law.

Section Controls Appointment. — A father cannot appoint a guardian for his children, nor impose on anyone the duties and obligations of that office, except pursuant to former section. Peyton v. Smith, 22 N.C. 325 (1839). See Long v. Rhymes, 6 N.C. 122 (1812).

And Applies Only to Testator's Children. — A testator cannot appoint a testamentary guardian except for his own children. Camp v. Pittman, 90 N.C. 615 (1884).

Appointment by Will. — A last will and testament cannot operate to appoint a guardian for an adult child regardless of the disability. In re Efird, 114 N.C. App. 638, 442 S.E.2d 381 (1994).

Former section does not authorize a grandfather to appoint a guardian for his grandchildren. Williamson v. Jordon, 45 N.C. 46 (1852). See Johnson v. Salsbury, 232 N.C. 432, 61 S.E.2d 327 (1950).

Bequest to Son as Trustee for Grandchildren. — Testatrix bequeathed certain property to her grandchildren with subsequent provisions that it was her will and desire that her son be appointed their guardian and that the guardian should hold and manage the property for the grandchildren with power to sell, convey or exchange the securities. It was held that since testatrix could not appoint a testamentary guardian for her grandchildren the provisions will be interpreted as bequeathing the property to testatrix' son as trustee for testatrix' grandchildren, in order that each provision of the instrument be given effect consistent with testatrix' intention. Johnson v. Salsbury, 232 N.C. 432, 61 S.E.2d 327 (1950).

Interpretation of Will. — Where it can clearly be collected from the will of a father that certain persons are thereby appointed to have the custody of the persons and the estate of his children, until they arrive at age, such an appointment will be held to constitute them guardians, as though the appropriate term had been used. Peyton v. Smith, 22 N.C. 325 (1839).

Rights of Both Parents Are Recognized. — In former sections and other statutes, the legislature has recognized the human as well as the legal relation between parent and child, the paramount and the subordinate, the present and the inchoate, rights of the father and the mother, and has wisely provided that both the parents shall have adequate opportunity to be heard and, except in rare cases, shall give their consent before the legal relation is severed or the domestic circle is broken. Truelove v. Parker, 191 N.C. 430, 132 S.E. 295 (1926).

Father Not Regarded as Wrongdoer When He Acts in Good Faith with Child's Money. — Since under former section the father is natural guardian for his minor children he should not be regarded as a trespasser or a wrongdoer when he acts in good faith with his child's money and makes purchases for its benefit. Lifsey v. Bullock, 11 F. Supp. 728 (M.D.N.C. 1935).

After considering the evidence, the clerk shall enter an appropriate order. If the clerk determines that a guardian or guardians should be appointed, the order may set forth:

(1) Findings as to the minor's circumstances, assets, and liabilities as they relate to his needs for a guardian or guardians; and

(2) Whether there shall be one or more guardians, his or their identity, and if more than one, who shall be guardian of the person and who shall be guardian of the estate. The clerk shall issue the guardian or guardians letters of appointment as provided in G.S. 35A-1206. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1227. Funds owed to minors.

(a) Certain insurance proceeds or other funds to which a minor is entitled may be paid to and administered by the public guardian or the clerk as provided in G.S. 7A-111.

(b) A devise or legacy of personal property to a minor may be distributed to the minor's parent or guardian with the approval of the clerk as provided in G.S. 28A-22-7.

(c) A personal representative or collector who holds property due a minor without a guardian may deliver the property to the clerk as provided in G.S. 28A-23-2.

(d) Inter vivos or testamentary transfers to minors may be made and administered according to the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, Chapter 33A of the General Statutes. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 23.)

§ 35A-1228. Guardians of children of servicemen; allotments and allowances.

In all cases where a person serving in the armed forces of the United States has made an allotment or allowance to a resident of this State who is his child or other minor dependent as provided by the Wartime Allowance to Service Men's Dependents Act or any other act of Congress, the clerk in the county of the minor's residence may act as temporary guardian, or appoint some suitable person to act as temporary guardian, of the person's minor dependent for purposes of receiving and disbursing allotments and allowance funds for the benefit of the minor dependent, when:

(1) The other parent of the child or other minor dependent, or other person designated in the allowance or allotment to receive and disburse such moneys for the benefit of the minor dependent, dies or becomes mentally incompetent; and

(2) The person serving in the armed forces of the United States is reported as missing in action or as a prisoner of war and is unable to designate another person to receive and disburse the allotment or allowance to the minor dependent. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1229: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 7.

Guardian's Bond.

§ 35A-1230. Bond required before receiving property.

Except as otherwise provided by G.S. 35A-1225(a), no general guardian or guardian of the estate shall be permitted to receive the ward's property until he has given sufficient surety, approved by the clerk, to account for and apply the same under the direction of the court, provided that if the guardian is a nonresident of this State and the value of the property received exceeds one thousand dollars ($1,000) the surety shall be a bond under G.S. 35A-1231(a) executed by a duly authorized surety company, or secured by cash in an amount equal to the amount of the bond or by a mortgage executed under Chapter 109 of the General Statutes on real estate located in the county, the value of which, excluding all prior liens and encumbrances, shall be at least one and one-fourth times the amount of the bond; and further provided that the nonresident shall appoint a resident agent to accept service of process in all actions and proceedings with respect to the guardianship. The clerk shall not require a guardian of the person who is a resident of North Carolina to post a bond; the clerk may require a nonresident guardian of the person to post a bond or other security for the faithful performance of the guardian's duties. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Chapter 109 of the General Statutes, referred to in the section above, has been recodified as Articles 72 through 77 of Chapter 58 (§ 58-72-1 et seq. through § 58-77-1 et seq.) under the authority of Session Laws 1987, c. 752, s. 9 and Session Laws 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 975, s. 34.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

Presumption of Giving of Bond. — When the fact that a guardian was appointed is admitted, a presumption arises that a guardian bond was given, since such a bond is a prerequisite to the appointment. Kello v. Maget, 18 N.C. 414 (1835).

When Denial of Guardianship Not Permissible. — Where there is evidence that one had been appointed and had acted as guardian, neither he nor his administrators can deny that he was guardian on the ground that he had not given bond. Latham v. Wilcox, 99 N.C. 367, 6 S.E. 711 (1888).

The surety on a guardianship bond is estopped to deny the validity of the appointment of a guardian when the bond signed by the surety recites that the guardian has been duly appointed. Phipps v. Royal Indem. Co., 201 N.C. 561, 161 S.E. 69 (1931).

Omission by the clerk to take the bond required on the appointment of a guardian does not destroy the efficacy of the appointment. Howerton v. Sexton, 104 N.C. 75, 10 S.E. 148 (1889).

Liability on Bond. — A guardian and his bondsmen are liable for all moneys due his wards which he has collected or ought to have collected. Loftin v. Cobb, 126 N.C. 58, 35 S.E. 230 (1900).

Where the administrator of a former guardian himself becomes guardian, he and his guardian bondsmen become liable for any balance due from the solvent estate of the former guardian. Loftin v. Cobb, 126 N.C. 58, 35 S.E. 230 (1900).

§ 35A-1231. Terms and conditions of bond; increase on sale of realty or personal property.

(a) Before issuing letters of appointment to a general guardian or guardian of the estate the clerk shall require the guardian to give a bond payable to the State. The clerk shall determine the value of all the ward's personal property and the rents and profits of the ward's real estate by examining, under oath, the applicant for guardianship or any other person or persons. The penalty in the bond shall be set as follows:

(1) Where the bond is executed by personal sureties, the penalty must be at least double the value so determined by the clerk;

(2) Where the bond is executed by a duly authorized surety company, the penalty may be fixed at not less than one and one-fourth times the value so determined by the clerk;

(3) Provided, however, the clerk may accept bond in estates where the value determined by the clerk exceeds the sum of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), in a sum equal to one hundred and ten percent (110%) of the determined value.

The bond must be secured with two or more sufficient sureties, jointly and severally bound, and must be acknowledged before and approved by the clerk. The bond must be conditioned on the guardian's faithfully executing the trust reposed in him as such and obeying all lawful orders of the clerk or judge relating to the guardianship of the estate committed to him. The bond must be recorded in the office of the clerk appointing the guardian, except, if the guardianship is transferred to a different county, it must be recorded in the office of the clerk in the county where the guardianship is docketed.

(b) If the court orders a sale of the ward's real property, or if the guardian expects or offers to sell personal property that he knows or has reason to know has a value greater than the value used in determining the amount of the bond posted, the guardian shall, before receiving the proceeds of the sale, furnish bond or increase his existing bond to cover the proceeds if real estate is sold, or to cover the increased value if personal property is sold. The bond, or the increase in the existing bond, shall be twice the amount of the proceeds of any real property sold, or of the increased value of any personal property sold, except where the bond is executed by a duly authorized surety company, in which case the penalty of the bond need not exceed one and one-fourth times the amount of the real property sold or the increased value of the personal property sold. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, 473, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 33-13 and prior law.

Former section contemplates that the bond shall be signed and acknowledged by the guardian as principal, as well as by the sureties. Cheshire v. Howard, 207 N.C. 566, 178 S.E. 348 (1935).

And Acceptance without Guardian's Signature Is an Irregularity. — The acceptance and approval of the bond by the clerk of the superior court without the signature of the guardian as principal is an irregularity, but such irregularity does not render the bond void either as to the principal or as to his sureties. Cheshire v. Howard, 207 N.C. 566, 178 S.E. 348 (1935).

A guardian's bond is not strictly a record of the court, although the fact that it was made and accepted may be. An action may therefore be brought on the bond after its loss or destruction, without any previous application to the court to restore it as a record. Harrell v. Hare, 70 N.C. 658 (1874).

Failure to Insert Penalty. — A guardian's bond is not binding on the sureties thereto where it did not state the amount of the penalty at the time it was signed, and they did not afterwards authorize anyone to insert the amount. Rollins v. Ebbs, 137 N.C. 355, 49 S.E. 341 (1904), aff'd on rehearing, 138 N.C. 140, 50 S.E. 577 (1905).

Failure to Collect Money. — Where a guardian ought to receive a certain amount of money and does not, but takes something else, his own bond for instance, in place of the money, he and his sureties are liable. State ex rel. Avent v. Womack, 72 N.C. 397 (1875).

Bank Intermingling Trust Funds. — A bank, as guardian, in not investing the funds of its ward, but intermingling them with other funds of the bank, was faithless to the trust reposed in it; and, under the terms of this action, its bondsman must suffer the loss for such faithlessness. Roebuck v. National Sur. Co., 200 N.C. 196, 156 S.E. 531 (1931).

Responsible for Laches. — A guardian is responsible on his bond for any loss resulting from his laches in failing to sue. Cross v. Craven, 120 N.C. 331, 26 S.E. 940 (1897).

Limit of Liability for Realty. — The guardian's bond is not responsible in any way for the realty beyond the rents and profits. Cross v. Craven, 120 N.C. 331, 26 S.E. 940 (1897).

Liability on Note for Ward's Board. — The sureties on a guardian's bond are not responsible for the nonpayment of a note given by the guardian, and signed by him as guardian, for the board and tuition of his ward. McKinnon v. McKinnon, 81 N.C. 201 (1879).

Surety as a Party in Interest. — When a guardian fails to "faithfully execute the trust reposed in him as such," upon which his bond is conditioned, the surety thereon is subjected to liability, and as a party in interest is entitled to have the wrong remedied. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Lawing, 223 N.C. 8, 25 S.E.2d 183 (1943).

§ 35A-1232. Exclusion of deposited money in computing amount of bond.

(a) When it appears that the ward's estate includes money that has been or will be deposited in a bank in this State or invested in an account in an insured savings and loan association upon condition that the money or securities will not be withdrawn except on authorization of the court, the court may, in its discretion, order that the money be so deposited or invested and exclude such deposited money from the computation of the amount of the bond or reduce the amount of the bond in respect of such money to such an amount as it may deem reasonable.

(b) The applicant for letters of guardianship may deliver to any such bank or association any such money in his possession or may allow such bank or association to retain any such money already deposited or invested with it; in either event, the applicant shall secure and file with the court a written receipt including the agreement of the bank or association, duly acknowledged by an authorized officer of the bank or association, that the money shall not be allowed to be withdrawn except on authorization of the court. In so receiving and retaining such money, the bank or association shall be protected to the same extent as though it had received the same from a person to whom letters of guardianship had been issued.

(c) The term "account in an insured savings and loan association" as used in this section means any account in a savings and loan association that is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, or by a mutual deposit guaranty association authorized by Article 7A of Chapter 54 of the North Carolina General Statutes.

(d) The term "money" as used in this section means the principal of the ward's estate and does not include the income earned by the principal which may be withdrawn without any authorization of the court. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Article 7A of Chapter 54, referred to in subsection (c), was repealed. For similar provisions, see § 54B-236 et seq.

§ 35A-1233. Clerk's authority to reduce penalty of bond.

When a guardian has disbursed either income or income and principal of the estate according to law, for the purchase of real estate or the support and maintenance of the ward or the ward and his dependents or any lawful cause, and when the personal assets and income of the estate from all sources in the hands of the guardian have been diminished, the penalty of the guardian's bond may be reduced in the discretion of the clerk to an amount not less than the amount that would be required if the guardian were first qualifying to administer the personal assets and income. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1234. Action on bond.

Any person injured by a breach of the condition of the guardian's bond may prosecute a suit thereon, as in other actions. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

Jurisdiction of Action. — The clerk has no jurisdiction of a suit on a guardian's bond. Such suit must be brought in the superior court. Rowland v. Thompson, 65 N.C. 110 (1871).

Action in Name of State. — An action on a guardian's bond should be in the name of the State, for the benefit of the plaintiff, and not in the name of the plaintiff. Carmichael v. Moore, 88 N.C. 29 (1883); Williams v. McNair, 98 N.C. 332, 4 S.E. 131 (1887); Norman v. Walker, 101 N.C. 24, 7 S.E. 468 (1888).

Proper Relator. — When the share of an infant in an estate in the hands of his guardian is assigned, the assignee, and not the infant, is the proper relator in an action on the guardian's bond. State ex rel. Petty v. Rousseau, 94 N.C. 355 (1886).

A creditor of a guardian is not the proper relator in an action upon his bond. McKinnon v. McKinnon, 81 N.C. 201 (1879).

Unnecessary Parties. — In an action against the surety on a guardian's bond, when the guardian has defaulted and his whereabouts is unknown, and the defendant is the sole surety, and claims that the guardian, who was assistant clerk of the superior court, had given to the clerk a bond for the faithful performance of his duties as assistant clerk, neither the clerk nor the bonding company on the assistant clerk's bond is a necessary or proper party to said action. Phipps v. Royal Indem. Co., 201 N.C. 561, 161 S.E. 69 (1931).

Condition of Bond Set Out in Complaint. — In an action on a guardian's bond, it is necessary that conditions of the bond which are alleged to have been broken should be set forth in the complaint. McKinnon v. McKinnon, 81 N.C. 201 (1879).

Bond Must Be Proved. — A guardian's bond is not a record, and, before it can be read in evidence in any case, it must be proved like all other bonds. Butler v. Durham, 38 N.C. 589 (1845).

Evidence of a balance in the hands of a guardian as shown of his annual account was admissible against a surety under the Laws of 1884. Loftin v. Cobb, 126 N.C. 58, 35 S.E. 230 (1900).

Defenses. — The same defense which might be made to an action at law or suit in equity, brought in the name of the ward himself against the guardian, is good in an action brought on the guardian's bond. State ex rel. Clark v. Cordon, 30 N.C. 179 (1847).

Same — Settlement. — A full settlement of a suit brought by a ward on a guardian's bond, made after the ward becomes of age, in the presence of the ward's mother, and by the advice of her counsel, and a final judgment thereon, is a bar to a subsequent action on the bond. State ex rel. Dean v. Ragsdale, 80 N.C. 215 (1879).

Where in a suit on a guardian's bond it appeared that the account between the guardian and the ward had been settled, and that the guardian gave his own bond to the ward, which was received by the latter in satisfaction of the balance due, and he then gave his guardian a receipt, this was a sufficient defense to the suit on the bond. State ex rel. Clark v. Cordon, 30 N.C. 179 (1847).

Same — Statute of Limitations. — An action by the ward against the sureties on the bond of the guardian is barred after three years from the time the ward becomes 21 years old if the guardian makes no final settlement, and within six years if the guardian makes a final settlement. Self v. Shugart, 135 N.C. 185, 47 S.E. 484 (1904).

Amount of Recovery. — In an action upon a guardian's bond the recovery against either the principal or the surety cannot exceed the penalty thereof, but should be for the penal sum of the bond, and to be discharged on payment of the damages sustained. Anthony v. Estes, 101 N.C. 541, 8 S.E. 347 (1888).

Same — Measure of Damages. — The measure of damages in an action upon a guardian's bond for a failure to perform any duty required of him is the amount of the principal received, with compound interest at 6% until the ward arrives at full age. Topping v. Windley, 99 N.C. 4, 5 S.E. 14 (1888).

§ 35A-1235. One bond sufficient when several wards have estate in common.

When the same person is appointed guardian for two or more minors or incompetent persons possessed of one estate in common, the clerk may take one bond only in such case, upon which each of the wards or their heirs or personal representatives may have a separate action. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1236. Renewal of bond.

Every guardian who is required to post a bond and who does so other than through a duly authorized surety company shall renew his bond before the clerk every three years during the continuance of the guardianship. The clerk shall issue a citation against every such guardian failing to renew his bond, requiring the guardian to renew the bond within 20 days after service of the citation. On return of the citation duly served and failure of the guardian to comply, the clerk shall remove the guardian and appoint a successor. This section shall not apply to a guardian whose bond is executed by a duly authorized surety company. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

An ordinary guardian has no fixed term of office. While the former statute requires a renewal of the bond every three years there is no requirement for a new appointment. Thornton v. Barbour, 204 N.C. 583, 169 S.E. 153 (1933).

Liability for Failure to Enforce Renewal. — A clerk and his sureties are not liable upon his official bond for his failure to issue a citation requiring a guardian to renew his bond. State ex rel. Jones v. Biggs, 46 N.C. 364 (1854); Sullivan v. Lowe, 64 N.C. 500 (1870).

§ 35A-1237. Relief of endangered sureties.

Any surety of a guardian, who is in danger of sustaining loss by his suretyship, may file a motion in the cause before the clerk where the guardianship is docketed, setting forth the circumstances of his case and demanding relief. The guardian shall have 10 days after service of the motion to answer the motion. If, upon the hearing, the clerk deems the surety entitled to relief, the clerk may order the guardian to give a new bond or to indemnify the surety against apprehended loss, or may remove the guardian from his trust. If the guardian fails to give a new bond or security to indemnify within a reasonable time when required to do so, the clerk must enter a peremptory order for his removal, and his authority as guardian shall cease. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 20.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 33-17 and prior law.

A surety is not discharged from liability by the guardian giving a new bond with other sureties. Jones v. Blanton, 41 N.C. 115 (1848).

New Bond Is Additional Security. — When, under former section, new sureties are ordered to be given, the obligation of the bond given by the new sureties extends to the entire guardianship, retrospective as well as prospective. Such a bond is at least an additional and cumulative security for the ward. Bell's Adm'r v. Jasper, 37 N.C. 597 (1843).

And where a guardian gives several successive bonds, the sureties on each stand in the relation of cosureties to the sureties on every other bond; the only qualification to the rule being that the sureties are bound to contribution only according to the amount of the penalty of the bond in which each class is bound. Jones v. Hays, 38 N.C. 502 (1845); Thornton v. Barbour, 204 N.C. 583, 169 S.E. 153 (1933).

Where Counter-Security Given. — Where the sureties of a guardian obtained an order for counter-security, and at that time the guardian owed his ward, and never afterwards returned an account nor made a payment, no presumption of satisfaction at that or any subsequent time arose from the fact that he was then able to pay the sum he owed; and the sureties on the first bond were liable for it, though the order for counter-security expressly released them. Foye v. Bell, 18 N.C. 475 (1836).

The clerk is not empowered by any express statute to release sureties, upon bonds approved by him, especially at a time when the principal is in default. Former section provides a remedy for dissatisfied sureties upon guardian bonds, but release is not one of the remedies therein contemplated. Thornton v. Barbour, 204 N.C. 583, 169 S.E. 153 (1933).

Successor Guardian and Ward Are Not Bound by Adjudication if Not Parties. — A determination in a proceeding between the surety and the former guardian is not conclusive as against a successor guardian and the ward, neither of whom was a party to that proceeding when the adjudication was made. State ex rel. N.W. Bank v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 268 N.C. 234, 150 S.E.2d 396 (1966).

§ 35A-1238. Clerk's liability.

(a) If any clerk commits the estate of a ward to the guardianship of any person without taking good and sufficient bond for the same as required by law, the clerk shall be liable on his official bond, at the suit of the aggrieved party, for all loss and damages sustained for want of sufficient bond being taken; but if the sureties were good at the time of their being accepted, the clerk shall not be liable.

(b) If any clerk willfully or negligently does, or omits to do, any other act prohibited, or other duty imposed on him by law, by which act or omission the estate of any ward suffers damage, the clerk shall be liable on his official bond, at the suit of the aggrieved party, for all loss and damages sustained from such act or omission. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

A clerk and sureties on his official bond are liable for loss resulting from a failure to take a good guardian's bond, and the record of the appointment of the guardian is sufficient evidence of such appointment. Topping v. Windley, 99 N.C. 4, 5 S.E. 14 (1888).

The giving of the bond required of a guardian is not essential to the validity of the appointment itself. The failure to take the bond, however, subjects the clerk to the consequences of such omission. Howerton v. Sexton, 104 N.C. 75, 10 S.E. 148 (1889).

When Action Lies. — No action can be maintained on the bond given by a clerk conditioned for the faithful performance of his duty, except where there have been such damages sustained as would give the party a right to maintain an action on the case for the neglect of his official duty. State ex rel. Jones v. Briggs, 46 N.C. 364 (1854).

§ 35A-1239. Health and Human Services bond.

The Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services shall require or purchase individual or blanket bonds for all disinterested public agents appointed to be guardians, whether they serve as guardians of the estate, guardians of the person, or general guardians, or one blanket bond covering all agents, the bond or bonds to be conditioned upon faithful performance of their duties as guardians and made payable to the State. The premiums shall be paid by the State. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1997-443, s. 11A.17.)

Article 8.

Powers and Duties of Guardian of the Person.

§ 35A-1240. Applicability of Article.

This Article applies only to guardians of the person, including general guardians exercising authority as guardian of the person. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1241. Powers and duties of guardian of the person.

(a) To the extent that it is not inconsistent with the terms of any order of the clerk or any other court of competent jurisdiction, a guardian of the person has the following powers and duties:

(1) The guardian of the person is entitled to custody of the person of his ward and shall make provision for his ward's care, comfort, and maintenance, and shall, as appropriate to the ward's needs, arrange for his training, education, employment, rehabilitation or habilitation. The guardian of the person shall take reasonable care of the ward's clothing, furniture, vehicles, and other personal effects that are with the ward.

(2) The guardian of the person may establish the ward's place of abode within or without this State. In arranging for a place of abode, the guardian of the person shall give preference to places within this State over places not in this State if in-State and out-of-State places are substantially equivalent. He also shall give preference to places that are not treatment facilities. If the only available and appropriate places of domicile are treatment facilities, he shall give preference to community-based treatment facilities, such as group homes or nursing homes, over treatment facilities that are not community-based.

(3) The guardian of the person may give any consent or approval that may be necessary to enable the ward to receive medical, legal, psychological, or other professional care, counsel, treatment, or service. He may not, however, consent to the sterilization of a mentally ill or mentally retarded ward. Such sterilization may be performed only after compliance with Chapter 35, Article 7. The guardian of the person may give any other consent or approval on the ward's behalf that may be required or in the ward's best interest. He may petition the clerk for the clerk's concurrence in the consent or approval.

(b) A guardian of the person is entitled to be reimbursed out of the ward's estate for reasonable and proper expenditures incurred in the performance of his duties as guardian of the ward's person.

(c) A guardian of the person, if he has acted within the limits imposed on him by this Article or the order of appointment or both, shall not be liable for damages to the ward or the ward's estate, merely by reason of the guardian's:

(1) Authorizing or giving any consent or approval necessary to enable the ward to receive legal, psychological, or other professional care, counsel, treatment, or service, in a situation where the damages result from the negligence or other acts of a third person; or

(2) Authorizing medical treatment or surgery for his ward, if the guardian acted in good faith and was not negligent. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1242. Status reports for incompetent wards.

(a) Any corporation or disinterested public agent that is guardian of the person for an incompetent person, within six months after being appointed, shall file an initial status report with the designated agency, if there is one, or with the clerk. Such guardian shall file a second status report with the designated agency or the clerk one year after being appointed, and subsequent reports annually thereafter. The clerk may order any other guardian of the person to file status reports. If a guardian required by this section to file a status report is employed by the designated agency, the guardian shall file any required status report with both the designated agency and the clerk.

(b) Each status report shall be filed under the guardian's oath or affirmation that the report is complete and accurate so far as he is informed and can determine.

(c) A clerk or designated agency that receives a status report shall not make the status report available to anyone other than the guardian, the ward, the court, or State or local human resource agencies providing services to the ward. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1243. Duties of designated agency.

(a) Within 30 days after it receives a status report, the designated agency shall certify to the clerk that it has reviewed the report and shall mail a copy of its certification to the guardian.

(b) At the same time, the designated agency may:

(1) Send its written comments on the report to the clerk, the guardian, or any other person who may have an interest in the ward's welfare;

(2) Notify the guardian that it is able to help the guardian in the performance of his duties;

(3) Petition the clerk for an order requiring the guardian to perform the duties imposed on him by the clerk or this Article if it appears that the guardian is not performing those duties;

(4) Petition the clerk for an order modifying the terms of the guardianship or the guardianship program or plan if it appears that such should be modified;

(5) Petition the clerk for an order removing the guardian from his duties and appointing a successor guardian if it appears that the guardian should be removed for cause;

(6) Petition the clerk for an adjudication of restoration to competency; or

(7) Petition the clerk for any other appropriate orders.

(c) If the designated agency files such a petition, it shall cause the petition to be signed and acknowledged by the officer, official, employee, or agent who has personal knowledge of the facts set forth in the petition, and it shall set forth all facts known to it that tend to support the relief sought by the petition.

(d) The clerk shall take appropriate action upon the petition in accordance with other provisions or requirements of this Chapter. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1244. Procedure to compel status reports.

If a guardian of the person fails to file a status report as required, or renders an unsatisfactory report, the clerk shall, on his own motion or the request of an interested party, promptly order the guardian to render a full and satisfactory report within 20 days after service of the order. If, after due service of the order, the guardian does not file such report, or obtain further time in which to file it, on or before the return day of the order, the clerk may remove him from office or may issue an order or notice to show cause for civil or criminal contempt as provided in Chapter 5A of the General Statutes. In such proceedings, the defaulting guardian may be held personally liable for the costs of the proceeding, including the costs of service of all notices or motions incidental thereto, or the amount of the costs of the proceeding may be deducted from any commissions due to the guardian of the person. Where a corporation or disinterested public agent is guardian of the person, the president or director or person or persons having charge of the guardianship for the corporation or agency, or the person to whom the duty of making status reports has been assigned by the corporation or agency, may be proceeded against as herein provided as if he or they were the guardian personally, provided, the corporation or agency itself may also be fined and/or removed as guardian for such failure or omission. Article 9.

§ 35A-1250. Applicability of Article.

(a) This Article applies only to guardians of the estate, including general guardians exercising authority as guardian of the estate. A guardian of the estate or general guardian shall have all the powers and duties under this Article unless those are inconsistent with the clerk's order appointing a guardian, in which case the clerk's order shall prevail.

(b) Nothing contained in this Article shall be construed as authorizing any departure from the express terms or limitations set forth in any court order creating or limiting the guardian's powers and duties. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1251. Guardian's powers in administering incompetent ward's estate.

In the case of an incompetent ward, a general guardian or guardian of the estate has the power to perform in a reasonable and prudent manner every act that a reasonable and prudent person would perform incident to the collection, preservation, management, and use of the ward's estate to accomplish the desired result of administering the ward's estate legally and in the ward's best interest, including but not limited to the following specific powers:

(1) To take possession, for the ward's use, of all the ward's estate, as defined in G.S. 35A-1202(5).

(2) To receive assets due the ward from any source.

(3) To maintain any appropriate action or proceeding to recover possession of any of the ward's property, to determine the title thereto, or to recover damages for any injury done to any of the ward's property; also, to compromise, adjust, arbitrate, sue on or defend, abandon, or otherwise deal with and settle any other claims in favor of or against the ward.

(4) To complete performance of contracts entered into by the ward that continue as obligations of the ward or his estate, or to refuse to complete the contracts, as the guardian determines to be in the ward's best interests, taking into account any cause of action that might be maintained against the ward for failure to complete the contract.

(5) To abandon or relinquish all rights in any property when, in the guardian's opinion, acting reasonably and in good faith, it is valueless, or is so encumbered or is otherwise in a condition that it is of no benefit or value to the ward or his estate.

(5a) To renounce any interest in property as provided in Chapter 31B of the General Statutes, or as otherwise allowed by law.

(6) To vote shares of stock or other securities in person or by general or limited proxy, and to pay sums chargeable or accruing against or on account of securities owned by the ward.

(7) To insure the ward's assets against damage or loss, at the expense of the ward's estate.

(8) To pay the ward's debts and obligations that were incurred prior to the date of adjudication of incompetence or appointment of a guardian when the debt or obligation was incurred for necessary living expenses or taxes; or when the debt or obligation involves a specific lien on real or personal property, if the ward has an equity in the property on which there is a specific lien; or when the guardian is convinced that payment of the debt or obligation is in the best interest of the ward or his estate.

(9) To renew the ward's obligations for the payment of money. The guardian's execution of any obligation for the payment of money pursuant to this subsection shall not be held or construed to be binding on the guardian personally.

(10) To pay taxes, assessments, and other expenses incident to the collection, care, administration, and protection of the ward's estate.

(11) To sell or exercise stock subscription or conversion rights; consent, directly or through a committee or other agent, to the reorganization, consolidation, merger, dissolution, or liquidation of a corporation or other business enterprise.

(12) To expend estate income on the ward's behalf and to petition the court for prior approval of expenditures from estate principal.

(13) To pay from the ward's estate necessary expenses of administering the ward's estate.

(14) To employ persons, including attorneys, auditors, investment advisors, appraisers, or agents to advise or assist him in the performance of his duties as guardian.

(15) To continue any business or venture or farming operation in which the ward was engaged, where that continuation is reasonably necessary or desirable to preserve the value, including goodwill, of the ward's interest in the business.

(16) To acquire and retain every kind of property and every kind of investment, including specifically, but without in any way limiting the generality of the foregoing, bonds, debentures, and other corporate or governmental obligations; stocks, preferred or common; real estate mortgages; shares in building and loan associations or savings and loan associations; annual premium or single premium life, endowment, or annuity contracts; and securities of any management type investment company or investment trust registered under the Federal Investment Company Act of 1940, as from time to time amended.

(17)a. Without a court order to lease any of the ward's real estate for a term of not more than three years, or to sell, lease or exchange any of the ward's personal property including securities, provided that the aggregate value of all items of the ward's tangible personal property sold without court order over the duration of the estate shall not exceed one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500). When any item of the ward's tangible personal property has a value which when increased by the value of all other tangible personal property previously sold in the estate without a court order would exceed one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500), a guardian may sell the item only as provided in subdivision (17)b.

b. A guardian who is required by subdivision (17)a to do so shall, and any other guardian who so desires may, by motion in the cause, request the court to issue him an order to lease any of the ward's real estate or to sell any item or items of the ward's personal property. Notice of the motion and of the date, time and place of a hearing thereon shall be served, as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5, Rules of Civil Procedure, upon all parties of record and upon any other persons the clerk may direct, and the court may issue the order after conducting a hearing and upon any conditions that the court may require; provided that:

1. A sale, lease, or exchange under this subdivision may not be subject to Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes unless the order so requires; and
2. The power granted in this subdivision shall not affect the power of the guardian to petition the court for prior approval of expenditures from estate principal under subdivision (12) of this section.

(18) To foreclose, as an incident to the collection of any bond, note or other obligation, any mortgage, deed or trust, or other lien securing the bond, note or other obligation, and to bid in the property at a foreclosure sale, or to acquire the property deed from the mortgagor or obligor without foreclosure; and to retain the property so bid in or taken over without foreclosure.

(19) To borrow money for any periods of time and upon the terms and conditions as to rates, maturities, renewals, and security as the guardian shall deem advisable, including the power of a corporate guardian to borrow from its own banking department, for the purpose of paying debts, taxes, and other claims against the ward, and to mortgage, pledge, or otherwise encumber that portion of the ward's estate as may be required to secure the loan or loans; provided, in respect to the borrowing of money on the security of the ward's real property, Subchapter III of this Chapter is controlling.

(20) To execute and deliver all instruments that will accomplish or facilitate the exercise of the powers vested in the guardian.

(21) To expend estate income for the support, maintenance, and education of the ward's minor children, spouse, and dependents, and to petition the court for prior approval of expenditures from estate principal for these purposes; provided, the clerk, in the original order appointing the guardian or a subsequent order, may require that the expenditures from estate income also be approved in advance. In determining whether and in what amount to make or approve these expenditures, the guardian or clerk shall take into account the ward's legal obligations to his minor children, spouse, and dependents; the sufficiency of the ward's estate to meet the ward's needs; the needs and resources of the ward's minor children, spouse, and dependents; and the ward's conduct or expressed wishes, prior to becoming incompetent, in regard to the support of these persons.

(22) To transfer to the spouse of the ward those amounts authorized for transfer to the spouse pursuant to 42 United States Code § 1396r-5.

(23) To create a trust for the benefit of the ward pursuant to 42 United States Code § 1396p(d)(4), provided that all amounts remaining in the trust upon the death of the ward, other than those amounts which must be paid to a state government, are to be paid to the estate of the ward.

(24) To petition the court for prior approval of transfers of assets of the ward to a revocable trust executed by the ward prior to the ward being declared incompetent, provided that the ward executed a paper-writing with all the formalities required by the laws of North Carolina for the execution of a valid will prior to the ward being declared incompetent and that will directs that the assets that are being transferred to the trust are to be distributed to the trust at the ward's death or the revocable trust has the same dispositive provisions as the ward's will or provides that the assets in the trust are to be distributed to the ward's estate upon the death of the ward. The guardian may at any time withdraw any assets (or the proceeds of the sale of any assets) transferred by the guardian to the trust upon 30 days' written notice to the trustee of the trust; provided, however, no assets which have been distributed or otherwise disposed of by the trustee (before the notice is received by the trustee) in accordance with the terms of the trust can be so withdrawn. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under former § 33-20 and prior law.

Guardian Is Under Fiduciary Obligation to Manage Estate Reasonably and Prudently. — The guardian is always under a fiduciary obligation to manage the estate reasonably, prudently, and in the ward's best interest, and in all cases, the guardian's management of the estate will eventually be subject to judicial scrutiny. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Guardian Must Preserve Estate and Enforce Ward's Rights. — It is the duty of the guardian to preserve the estate of the ward and to take practicable action to enforce the ward's rights against others. Kuykendall v. Proctor, 270 N.C. 510, 155 S.E.2d 293 (1967).

He Must Diligently Collect Obligation Owing Ward. — It is the duty of a guardian of the estate of an incompetent person to exercise due diligence in the collection of an obligation owing to the ward. The guardian is liable to the ward's estate for any loss to it by his failure to do so. Kuykendall v. Proctor, 270 N.C. 510, 155 S.E.2d 293 (1967).

Including Damages for Wrongs Done Ward. — It is the duty of the guardian of the estate of an incompetent to collect, insofar as practicable, all moneys due the ward, including damages for wrongs done to the ward which are known to the guardian. Kuykendall v. Proctor, 270 N.C. 510, 155 S.E.2d 293 (1967); State ex rel. Duckett v. Pettee, 50 N.C. App. 119, 273 S.E.2d 317 (1980).

He Is Liable for All He Ought to Have Received. — A guardian is liable not only for what he receives, but for all he ought to have received of his ward's estate. Kuykendall v. Proctor, 270 N.C. 510, 155 S.E.2d 293 (1967).

A guardian is liable for what he ought to receive, as well as for what he does receive; and if he ought to receive a certain amount of money and does not, but takes something else, his own bond for instance, in the place of money, he and his sureties are liable. State ex rel. Avent v. Womack, 72 N.C. 397 (1875).

Where a guardian carelessly and without deliberation accepts for his wards from an insolvent debtor an amount less than they are entitled to receive from a fund, he is liable to the wards for what he failed to collect. Culp v. Stanford, 112 N.C. 664, 16 S.E. 761 (1893), distinguishing Luton v. Wilcox, 83 N.C. 20 (1880).

By Exercise of Diligence and Good Faith. — A guardian is responsible, not only for what he receives, but for all he might have received by the exercise of ordinary diligence and the highest degree of good faith. State ex rel. Armfield v. Brown, 73 N.C. 81 (1875).

But He Need Not Resort to Extraordinary Remedies. — Guardians are not responsible for losses to their wards attributable to their not having resorted to new and extraordinary remedies, the force and effect of which are doubtful. White v. Robinson, 64 N.C. 698 (1870).

A guardian in managing his ward's estate must act in good faith and with that care and judgment that a man of ordinary prudence exercises in his own affairs. Luton v. Wilcox, 83 N.C. 20 (1880).

Guardian Is Empowered to Make Expenditures Without Prior Court Approval Except When Property Mortgaged or Sold. — In most cases, a guardian is empowered under Chapter 35A to make expenditures from an incompetent ward's estate without prior court approval; prior approval of expenditures is necessary only when the incompetent's property is to be mortgaged or sold, or when the expenditures will be made from estate principal. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Accepting Unsecured Note. — A guardian who accepts an unsecured note in payment of a debt due his ward is guilty of laches, and is liable to his ward for the amount of such note. Covington v. Leak, 65 N.C. 594 (1871).

Where a guardian accepts from an administrator a smaller sum than the wards' share in the estate, the wards may, at their option, sue the guardian or the administrator for the deficiency. Alexander v. Alexander, 120 N.C. 472, 27 S.E. 121 (1897).

Failure to Sue before Insolvency of Debtor. — Where a guardian negligently fails to sue on note due his ward's estate until the parties thereto are insolvent, he is liable for his negligence. Coggins v. Flythe, 113 N.C. 102, 18 S.E. 96 (1893).

Where a guardian waited six months after the principal in a note held by him as guardian died insolvent before he sued the surety, who also became insolvent before the suit was brought, the guardian having an opportunity all the time of knowing the true condition of the obligors, it was held that by his laches he made himself responsible for the loss of the debt. Williamson v. Williams, 59 N.C. 62 (1860), distinguishing Deberry v. Ivey, 55 N.C. 370 (1856); Davis v. Marcum, 57 N.C. 189 (1858).

Failure to Collect Note during Civil War. — A guardian, who acted in good faith and was not guilty of culpable negligence, was held not to be responsible for omitting to collect a note during the Civil War, when it appeared that both of the two obligors were solvent during the war, and were made insolvent by its results. Love v. Logan, 69 N.C. 70 (1873).

The guardian can select the forum, under former section, as there is no statute to the contrary. Lawson v. Langley, 211 N.C. 526, 191 S.E. 229 (1937).

No Authority to Bring Divorce Action. — Nowhere in former Chapter 33 or Chapter 35 is there express statutory authority for the general guardian of an incompetent to bring an action for divorce. Freeman v. Freeman, 34 N.C. App. 301, 237 S.E.2d 857 (1977).

An action for divorce based upon one year's separation cannot be maintained by a general guardian on behalf of an incompetent. Freeman v. Freeman, 34 N.C. App. 301, 237 S.E.2d 857 (1977).

An action for divorce based upon one year's separation is not a necessary action within former § 33-20. Freeman v. Freeman, 34 N.C. App. 301, 237 S.E.2d 857 (1977).

Payment of funds to guardian under War Risk Insurance Act vests title in the ward and operates to discharge the obligation of the United States. Hence, the deposit of the funds in a bank duly appointed guardian, and which later became insolvent, does not entitle the surety on the guardianship bond to a preference for the amount of the deposit. In re Home Sav. Bank, 204 N.C. 454, 168 S.E. 688 (1933).

As to exchange of security for debt due ward, see Christman v. Wright, 38 N.C. 549 (1845).

As to compromise of claim for personal injury to ward, see Bunch v. Foreman Blades Lumber Co., 174 N.C. 8, 93 S.E. 374 (1917).

As to statute of limitations upon discovery of fraud, see Johnson v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 217 N.C. 139, 7 S.E.2d 475, 128 A.L.R. 1375 (1940).

Settlement of Ward's Partnership Interest upon Incorporation. — Court had jurisdiction under former § 33-20 to determine guardian's petition relative to acceptance of settlement of ward's interest in partnership under contemplated organization of corporation to take over assets of partnership, since matter involved was not a sale, lease or mortgage of ward's property cognizable under former §§ 35-10 and 35-11. In re Edwards, 243 N.C. 70, 89 S.E.2d 746 (1955).

The clerk properly denied petitioner's request for leave to disclaim her incompetents' interests in an estate where no evidence in the record indicated that either of the incompetents would, if mentally competent, disclaim her inheritance under the will in favor of the other legatees (although the sisters of one of the incompetents had disclaimed their inheritances in favor of their children so as to avoid estate taxes) and where the petitioner had a personal, albeit indirect, stake in the disclaimer; additionally, such a disclaimer would also create an artificial need for public assistance. Currin v. Johnson, 140 N.C. App. 767, 538 S.E.2d 626 (2000).

Conclusion of Law. — The court committed reversible error in allowing a assistant clerk to testify in the embezzlement and perjury case against an attorney regarding the legality of his actions in handling decedent's estate, since that was the fundamental question the jury had to answer. State v. Linney, 138 N.C. App. 169, 531 S.E.2d 245 (2000).

§ 35A-1252. Guardian's powers in administering minor ward's estate.

In the case of a minor ward, a general guardian or guardian of the estate has the power to perform in a reasonable and prudent manner every act that a reasonable and prudent person would perform incident to the collection, preservation, management, and use of the ward's estate to accomplish the desired result of administering the ward's estate legally and in the ward's best interest, including but not limited to the following specific powers:

(1) To take possession, for the ward's use, of all the ward's estate, as defined in G.S. 35A-1202(5).

(2) To receive assets due the ward from any source.

(3) To maintain any appropriate action or proceeding to obtain support to which the ward is legally entitled, to recover possession of any of the ward's property, to determine the title thereto, or to recover damages for any injury done to any of the ward's property; also, to compromise, adjust, arbitrate, sue on or defend, abandon, or otherwise deal with and settle any other claims in favor of or against the ward.

(4) To abandon or relinquish all rights in any property when, in the guardian's opinion, acting reasonably and in good faith, it is valueless, or is so encumbered or is otherwise in such condition that it is of no benefit or value to the ward or his estate.

(4a) To renounce any interest in property as provided in Chapter 31B of the General Statutes, or as otherwise allowed by law.

(5) To vote shares of stock or other securities in person or by general or limited proxy, and to pay sums chargeable or accruing against or on account of securities owned by the ward.

(6) To insure the ward's assets against damage or loss, at the expense of the ward's estate.

(7) To pay taxes, assessments, and other expenses incident to the collection, care, administration, and protection of the ward's estate.

(8) To sell or exercise stock subscription or conversion rights; consent, directly or through a committee or other agent, to the reorganization, consolidation, merger, dissolution, or liquidation of a corporation or other business enterprise.

(9) To expend estate income on the ward's behalf and to petition the court for prior approval of expenditures from estate principal; provided, neither the existence of the estate nor the guardian's authority to make expenditures therefrom shall be construed as affecting the legal duty that a parent or other person may have to support and provide for the ward.

(10) To pay from the ward's estate necessary expenses of administering the ward's estate.

(11) To employ persons, including attorneys, auditors, investment advisors, appraisers, or agents to advise or assist him in the performance of his duties as guardian.

(12) To continue any business or venture or farming operation in which the ward was engaged, where such continuation is reasonably necessary or desirable to preserve the value, including goodwill, of the ward's interest in such business.

(13) To acquire and retain every kind of property and every kind of investment, including specifically, but without in any way limiting the generality of the foregoing bonds, debentures, and other corporate or governmental obligations; stocks, preferred or common; real estate mortgages; shares in building and loan associations or savings and loan associations; annual premium or single premium life, endowment, or annuity contracts; and securities of any management type investment company or investment trust registered under the Federal Investment Company Act of 1940, as from time to time amended.

(14)a. Without a court order to lease any of the ward's real estate for a term of not more than three years, or to sell, lease or exchange any of the ward's personal property including securities, provided that the aggregate value of all items of the ward's tangible personal property sold without court order over the duration of the estate shall not exceed one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500). When any item of the ward's tangible personal property has a value which when increased by the value of all other tangible personal property previously sold in the estate without a court order would exceed one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500), a guardian may sell the item only as provided in subdivision (14)b.

b. A guardian who is required by subdivision (14)a to do so shall, and any other guardian who so desires may, by motion in the cause, request the court to issue him an order to lease any of the ward's real estate or to sell any item or items of the ward's personal property. Notice of the motion and of the date, time and place of a hearing thereon shall be served, as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5, Rules of Civil Procedure, upon all parties of record and upon such other persons as the clerk may direct, and the court may issue the order after hearing and upon such conditions as the court may require; provided that:

1. A sale, lease, or exchange under this subdivision may not be subject to Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes unless the order so requires; and
2. The power granted in this subdivision shall not affect the power of the guardian to petition the court for prior approval of expenditures from estate principal under subdivision (9) of this section.

(15) To foreclose, as an incident to the collection of any bond, note or other obligation, any mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien securing such bond, note or other obligation, and to bid in the property at such foreclosure sale, or to acquire the property by deed from the mortgagor or obligor without foreclosure; and to retain the property so bid in or taken over without foreclosure.

(16) To borrow money for such periods of time and upon such terms and conditions as to rates, maturities, renewals, and security as the guardian shall deem advisable, including the power of a corporate guardian to borrow from its own banking department, for the purpose of paying debts, taxes, and other claims against the ward, and to mortgage, pledge, or otherwise encumber such portion of the ward's estate as may be required to secure such loan or loans; provided, in respect to the borrowing of money on the security of the ward's real property, Subchapter III of this Chapter is controlling.

(17) To execute and deliver all instruments that will accomplish or facilitate the exercise of the powers vested in the guardian. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 4; 1995, c. 235, s. 7.)

Where a guardian waited six months after the principal in a note held by him as guardian died insolvent before he sued the surety, who also became insolvent before the suit was brought, the guardian having an opportunity all the time of knowing the true condition of the obligors, it was held that by his laches he made himself responsible for the loss of the debt. Williamson v. Williams, 59 N.C. 62 (1860), distinguishing Deberry v. Ivey, 55 N.C. 370 (1856); Davis v. Marcum, 57 N.C. 189 (1858).

Failure to Collect Note during Civil War. — A guardian, who acted in good faith and was not guilty of culpable negligence, was held not to the responsible for omitting to collect a note during the Civil War, when it appeared that both of the two obligors were solvent during the war, and were made insolvent by its results. Love v. Logan, 69 N.C. 70 (1873).

The guardian can select the forum, under former section, as there is no statute to the contrary. Lawson v. Langley, 211 N.C. 526, 191 S.E. 229 (1937).

Payment of funds to guardian under War Risk Insurance Act vests title in the ward and operates to discharge the obligation of the United States. Hence, the deposit of the funds in a bank duly appointed guardian, and which later became insolvent, does not entitle the surety on the guardianship bond to a preference for the amount of the deposit. In re Home Sav. Bank, 204 N.C. 454, 168 S.E. 688 (1933).

As to exchange of security for debt due ward, see Christman v. Wright, 38 N.C. 549 (1845).

As to compromise of claim for personal injury to ward, see Bunch v. Foreman Blades Lumber Co., 174 N.C. 8, 93 S.E. 374 (1917).

As to statute of limitations upon discovery of fraud, see Johnson v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 217 N.C. 139, 7 S.E.2d 475, 128 A.L.R. 1375 (1940).

Settlement of Ward's Partnership Interest upon Incorporation. — Court had jurisdiction under former § 33-20 to determine guardian's petition relative to acceptance of settlement of ward's interest in partnership under contemplated organization of corporation to take over assets of partnership, since matter involved was not a sale, lease or mortgage of ward's property cognizable under former §§ 35-10 and 35-11. In re Edwards, 243 N.C. 70, 89 S.E.2d 746 (1955).

§ 35A-1253. Specific duties of guardian of estate.

In addition to any other duties imposed by law or by order of the clerk, a general guardian or guardian of the estate shall have the following specific duties:

(1) To take possession, for the ward's use, of all his estate.

(2) To diligently endeavor to collect, by all lawful means, all bonds, notes, obligations, or moneys due his ward.

(3) To pay income taxes, property taxes, or other taxes or assessments owed by the ward, out of the ward's estate, as required by law. If any guardian allows his ward's lands to be sold for nonpayment of taxes or assessments, he shall be liable to his ward for the full value thereof.

(4) To observe the standard of judgment and care under the circumstances then prevailing that an ordinarily prudent person of discretion and intelligence, who is a fiduciary of the property of others, would observe as such fiduciary in acquiring, investing, reinvesting, exchanging, retaining, selling, and managing the ward's property. If the guardian has special skills or is named as guardian on the basis of representations of special skills or expertise, to use those skills.

(5) To obey all lawful orders of the court pertaining to the guardianship and to comply with the accounting requirements of this Subchapter.

Nothing in this section shall be construed as broadening the powers granted in G.S. 35A-1251 or G.S. 35A-1252. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§§ 35A-1254 through 35A-1259: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 10.

Returns and Accounting.

§ 35A-1260. Applicability.

This Article applies only to general guardians and guardians of the estate. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1261. Inventory or account within three months.

Every guardian, within three months after his appointment, shall file with the clerk an inventory or account, upon oath, of the estate of his ward; but the clerk may extend such time not exceeding six months, for good cause shown. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 26.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under former law.

Guardian Subject to Orders of Clerk by Whom Appointed. — In the administration of the estate of an incompetent, the guardian is subject to the orders of the clerk by whom he was appointed and to whom he is required by former sections to account. Read v. Turner, 200 N.C. 773, 158 S.E. 475 (1931).

§ 35A-1262. Procedure to compel inventory or account.

(a) In cases of default to file the inventory or account required by G.S. 35A-1261, the clerk must issue an order requiring the guardian to file the inventory or account within the time specified in the order, or to show cause why he should not be removed from office or held in civil contempt, or both. If after due service of the order, the guardian does not, within the time specified in the order, file such inventory or account, or obtain further time to file the same, the clerk may remove him from office, hold him in civil contempt as provided in Article 2 of Chapter 5A, or both.

(b) The guardian shall be personally liable for the costs of any proceeding incident to his failure to file the inventory or account required by G.S. 35A-1261. Such costs shall be taxed against him by the clerk and may be collected by deduction from any commissions that may be found due the guardian upon final settlement of the estate. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 27.)

§ 35A-1263.1. Supplemental inventory.

Whenever any property not included in the original inventory report becomes known to the guardian or whenever the guardian learns that the valuation or description of any property or interest therein indicated in the original inventory is erroneous or misleading, he shall prepare and file with the clerk a supplementary inventory in the same manner as prescribed for the original inventory. The clerk shall record the supplemental inventory with the original inventory. A guardian who fails to file a supplementary inventory as required by this section shall be subject to the enforcement provisions of G.S. 35A-1262. (1989, c. 473, s. 29.)

§ 35A-1264. Annual accounts.

Every guardian shall, within 30 days after the expiration of one year from the date of his qualification or appointment, and annually, so long as any of the estate remains in his control, file in the office of the clerk an inventory and account, under oath, of the amount of property received by him, or invested by him, and the manner and nature of such investment, and his receipts and disbursements for the past year in the form of debit and credit. The guardian shall produce vouchers for all payments or verified proof for all payments in lieu of vouchers. The clerk may examine on oath such accounting party, or any other person, concerning the receipts, disbursements or any other matter relating to the estate; and having carefully revised and audited such account, if he approve the same, he must endorse his approval thereon, which shall be deemed prima facie evidence of correctness. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

Definition of "Account". — An "account" is used in former section in the sense of a statement in writing of debits and credits, or of receipts and payments. And when not only an account, but payment or settlement is intended, additional words are used to express that idea. State v. Dunn, 134 N.C. 663, 46 S.E. 949 (1904).

Ward Can Demand Annual Statement. — A ward is entitled to demand of her guardian an annual statement of the manner and nature of his investments of her estate. Moore v. Askew, 85 N.C. 199 (1881).

What to Be Set Out. — It is the duty of a guardian in making his annual returns to set out the manner in which he has invested the ward's estate, and the nature of the securities which he holds as guardian. State ex rel. Collins v. Gooch, 97 N.C. 186, 1 S.E. 653 (1887).

The annual account of a guardian is competent evidence against him, and presumptive evidence against his sureties. Loftin v. Cobb, 126 N.C. 58, 35 S.E. 230 (1900).

Of Good Faith. — No higher evidence can be offered of that good faith required of a guardian than perfect candor, full information, and minute, detailed accounts. Moore v. Askew, 85 N.C. 199 (1881).

And Is Prima Facie Correct When Accepted by the Court. — The ex parte settlement made by a guardian with the court having jurisdiction of such matters, is, when accepted by the court, prima facie correct, and while not conclusive upon creditors or next of kin, and strict proof and specific assignment of errors are not required as in actions to surcharge a stated account, nevertheless the burden is on the party attacking such settlement to establish, by a preponderance of testimony, its incorrectness. State ex rel. Turner v. Turner, 104 N.C. 566, 10 S.E. 606 (1889).

Editor's Note. — The opinion cited below was issued under former § 33-39.

Disapproval of Guardian's Final Account Where Distribution of Ward's Estate Is to Ward's Distributee Rather Than Ward's Administrator. — Honorable Lanie M. Hayes, Clerk of Superior Court, Warren County, 40 N.C.A.G. 32 (1969).

§ 35A-1265. Procedure to compel accounting.

(a) If any guardian omits to account, as directed in G.S. 35A-1264, or renders an insufficient and unsatisfactory account, the clerk shall forthwith order such guardian to render a full and satisfactory account, as required by law, within 20 days after service of the order. Upon return of the order, duly served, if the guardian fails to appear or refuses to exhibit such account, the clerk may issue an attachment against him for contempt and commit him until he exhibits such account, and may likewise remove him from office. In all proceedings hereunder the defaulting guardian will be liable personally for the costs of the said proceedings, including the costs of service of all notices or writs incidental to, or thereby acquiring, and also including reasonable attorney fees and expenses incurred by a successor guardian or other person in bringing any such proceeding, or other proceedings deemed reasonable and necessary to discover or obtain possession of assets of the ward in the possession of the defaulting guardian or which the defaulting guardian should have discovered or which the defaulting guardian should have turned over to the successor guardian. The amount of the costs and attorney fees and expenses of such proceeding may be deducted from any commissions which may be found due said guardian on settlement of the estate.

(b) Where a corporation is guardian, the president, cashier, trust officer or the person or persons having charge of the particular estate for the corporation, or the person to whom the duty of making reports of said estate has been assigned by the officers or directors of the corporation, may be proceeded against and committed to jail as herein provided as if he or they were the guardian or guardians personally: Provided, it is found as a fact that the failure or omission to file such account or to obey the order of the court in reference thereto is willful on the part of the officer charged therewith: Provided further, the corporation itself may be fined and/or removed as such guardian for such failure or omission. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 16.)

Removal for Failure to Account. — See Sanderson v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 369 (1878); In re Dixon, 156 N.C. 26, 72 S.E. 71 (1911).

§ 35A-1266. Final account and discharge of guardian.

Within 60 days after a guardianship is terminated under G.S. 35A-1295, the guardian shall file a final account for the period from the end of the period of his most recent annual account to the date of that event. If the clerk, after review of the guardian's account, approves the account, the clerk shall enter an order discharging the guardian from further liability. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 32.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

Former section is not intended to bestow upon the guardian the ward's moneys and properties for six months (now 60 days) after he becomes of age, nor to deprive him of the right to bring an action to recover them during the period, but simply means that the guardian is presumed to have settled with his ward within such six months (now 60 days), and after its lapse the clerk can call on the guardian to file his final account, with the receipts of the ward, in full settlement, to complete the record in his office, for the section states that such return shall be "audited and recorded." Self v. Shugart, 135 N.C. 185, 47 S.E. 484 (1904).

Jurisdiction. — The clerk of the superior court has jurisdiction of settlements between guardian and ward, and, of course, between the guardian and the ward's personal representative. McNeill v. Hodges, 105 N.C. 52, 11 S.E. 265 (1890); McLean v. Breece, 113 N.C. 390, 18 S.E. 694 (1893).

"Audit" Construed. — When the former section directs that the clerk shall "audit" the account, it implies that he shall pursue the usual course which has been found to be just and convenient in such cases. Rowland v. Thompson, 64 N.C. 714 (1870).

Action Barred 10 Years after Ward Comes of Age. — Ten years after the ward comes of age bars an action by him against his guardian for settlement. Dunn v. Beaman, 126 N.C. 766, 36 S.E. 172, petition to rehear dismissed, 127 N.C. 578, 38 S.E. 1006 (1900).

When Action Barred as to Sureties. — An action for breach of the guardianship bond based upon former section is barred as to the sureties after three years from the date the guardian should have made payment, and the fact that the guardian continued to pay the ward interest on the amount due the ward for several years after the ward's majority does not affect the running of the statute as to the sureties. State ex rel. Finn v. Fountain, 205 N.C. 217, 171 S.E. 85 (1933). See Copley v. Scarlett, 214 N.C. 31, 197 S.E. 623 (1938).

Judgment Is an Estoppel. — The clerk of the superior court, having jurisdiction of proceedings against a guardian for a settlement, a judgment rendered therein is an estoppel to an action in the superior court between the same parties and upon the same question, and cannot be attacked collaterally, but can be impeached for fraud only by a direct proceeding for that purpose. Donnelly v. Wilcox, 113 N.C. 408, 18 S.E. 339 (1893).

Distributees May Have Accounting. — The express trust existing between the guardian and ward terminates at death of the latter, and the ward's distributees may have letters of administration taken out and call for an accounting. Lowder v. Hathcock, 150 N.C. 438, 64 S.E. 194 (1909).

Effect of Wrongful Settlement. — Where a guardian surrendered his office in March to one whom he supposed to be his legal successor and made a settlement with him, though he was not regularly appointed guardian until December following, but in the meantime acted as such in good faith, it was held that the management of the fund from March to December must be treated as an exercise of an agency of the former guardian, whose bond is responsible for any loss resulting therefrom. Jennings v. Copeland, 90 N.C. 572 (1884).

Editor's Note. — The opinions cited below were issued under former § 33-41.

Disapproval of Guardian's Final Account Where Distribution of Ward's Estate Is to Ward's Distributee Rather Than to Ward's Administrator. — See opinion of the Attorney General to Honorable Lanie M. Hayes, Clerk of Superior Court, Warren County, 40 N.C.A.G. 32 (1969).

Coming of Age Occurs at Age 18. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Fred P. Parker, Jr., 41 N.C.A.G. 450 (1971).

§ 35A-1267. Expenses and disbursements credited to guardian.

Every guardian may charge in his annual account all reasonable disbursements and expenses; and if it appear that he has really and bona fide disbursed more in one year than the profits of the ward's estate, for his education and maintenance, the guardian shall be allowed and paid for the same out of the profits of the estate in any other year; but such disbursements must, in all cases, be suitable to the degree and circumstances of the estate of the ward. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to expense of bond being lawful expense, see § 58-73-35.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

A guardian should be charged with what he receives and credited with what he pays out, when it does not appear that he collected anything prematurely or kept on hand any unreasonable sum. Freeman v. Wilson, 74 N.C. 368 (1876).

Credit for Paying Debts Due. — When the guardian in good faith pays debts that ought to be paid, and by so doing the ward's estate suffers no prejudice, he will be allowed credit for disbursements of assets in his hands in such respects. Adams v. Thomas, 83 N.C. 521 (1880); McLean v. Breece, 113 N.C. 390, 18 S.E. 694 (1893).

Disbursement Where Ward Deceased and Only Child Is of Age. — Where, in the settlement of the guardian's account, the ward is dead and his only child is of age, and it appears that the guardian, in good faith, paid debts without prejudice to the estate, the disbursement would be allowed. McLean v. Breece, 113 N.C. 390, 18 S.E. 694 (1893).

Exceeding Income of Estate. — In paying the accounts of a guardian, he cannot, except under rare circumstances, be allowed disbursements beyond the income of his ward. Caffey v. McMichael, 64 N.C. 507 (1870); Johnston v. Haynes, 68 N.C. 514 (1873).

A guardian will not be permitted to use more than the accruing profits of his ward's estate in the maintenance and education of the ward, except with the sanction of the court, or in extreme cases of urgent necessity. Tharington v. Tharington, 99 N.C. 118, 5 S.E. 414 (1888).

Same — Clerk May Allow Credit. — The clerk of the superior court may allow a guardian credit for money necessarily expended in the education of the ward, though the amount exceeded the income and was made without the permission of the clerk. Duffy v. Williams, 133 N.C. 195, 45 S.E. 548 (1903).

Same — Setting Ward Up in Business. — A guardian who advances money for his ward over and above the income of his estate, in order to set him up in business, or for other purposes, without applying to the court for leave, is not entitled to charge the ward with it. Shaw v. Coble, 63 N.C. 377 (1869).

Father as Guardian May Not Charge Children for Education. — A father, or his trustee, in settling his accounts as guardian for his children, has no right to charge the children with the amount expended for their education. Walker v. Crowder, 37 N.C. 478 (1843).

Nor for Child's Maintenance without Court Approval. — A father, though he be the guardian of his minor child's estate, is not ordinarily permitted to charge for its maintenance, and, if able, he is himself bound to maintain his child; if not so, he must, before applying any of his ward's income to that end, procure the sanction of the proper court. Burke v. Turner, 85 N.C. 500 (1881).

May Not Charge for Board and Other Necessaries. — Where a stepfather becomes guardian to his stepchild, he is not entitled to charge for board and other necessaries furnished to his ward antecedently to his appointment as guardian; the infant being incompetent to contract therefor. Barnes v. Ward, 45 N.C. 93 (1852).

Payments to Mother for Board of Wards after Majority. — A guardian is not chargeable with moneys paid to the mother of his wards for their board after their arrival at full age, no objection being urged against the propriety or justness of the claim, or of the price paid. McNeill v. Hodges, 83 N.C. 504 (1880).

Counsel Fees. — A guardian should be allowed reasonable attorneys' fees paid in good faith. Burke v. Turner, 85 N.C. 500 (1881).

The employment of counsel for legal advice and assistance in connection with the administration of the wards' estate is a proper expense to be charged in the guardian's account, if in reasonable amount, and for the benefit of the wards. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Lawing, 225 N.C. 103, 33 S.E.2d 609 (1945).

Fees paid by a guardian to the counsel for services rendered in obtaining an unfair settlement with the ward, and in aiding the guardian to cover up the fraud, cannot be allowed the latter in his settlement. Johnston v. Haynes, 68 N.C. 509 (1873).

Where the interests of the guardian and wards are antagonistic and the services rendered by the attorney are in the interest of the former rather than the latter the obligation to pay therefor is the individual liability of the guardian. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Lawing, 225 N.C. 103, 33 S.E.2d 609 (1945), citing Lightner v. Boone, 221 N.C. 78, 19 S.E.2d 144 (1942).

§ 35A-1268. Guardian to exhibit investments and bank statements.

At the time the accounts required by this Article and other provisions of law are filed, the clerk shall require the guardian to exhibit to the court all investments and bank statements showing cash balance, and the clerk shall certify on the original account that an examination was made of all investments and the cash balance, and that the same are correctly stated in the account: Provided, such examination may be made by the clerk in the county in which such guardian resides or the county in which such securities are located and, when the guardian is a duly authorized bank or trust company, such examination may be made by the clerk in the county in which such bank or trust company has its principal office or in which such securities are located; the certificate of the clerk of such county shall be accepted by the clerk of any county in which such guardian is required to file an account; provided that banks organized under the laws of North Carolina or the acts of Congress, engaged in doing a trust and fiduciary business in this State, when acting as guardian or in other fiduciary capacity, shall be exempt from the requirements of this section, when a certificate executed by a trust examiner employed by a governmental unit, by a bank's internal auditors who are responsible only to the bank's board of directors or by an independent certified public accountant who is responsible only to the bank's board of directors is exhibited to the clerk and when said certificate shows that the securities have been examined within one year and that the securities were held at the time of the examination by the fiduciary or by a clearing corporation for the fiduciary and that the person making such certification has no reason to believe said securities are not still so held. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to abridge the inherent right of the clerk to require the production of securities, should he desire to do so. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1269. Commissions.

The clerk shall allow commissions to the guardian for his time and trouble in the management of the ward's estate, in the same manner and under the same rules and restrictions as allowances are made to executors, administrators and collectors under the provisions of G.S. 28A-23-3 and G.S. 28A-23-4. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1989, c. 473, s. 21.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

Commissions are only a compensation to the guardian for his time and trouble in managing his ward's estate. Walton v. Erwin, 36 N.C. 136 (1840).

And the time spent in the management of his ward's estate may be considered in fixing his commissions, but cannot be separately charged. Shutt v. Carloss, 36 N.C. 232 (1840).

Guardian is entitled to commissions, although he omitted to keep and render regular accounts, where no imputation is cast upon his integrity by reason of the neglect. McNeill v. Hodges, 83 N.C. 504 (1880).

But where he is grossly negligent, it is otherwise. Topping v. Windley, 99 N.C. 4, 5 S.E. 14 (1888).

Payments to Guardian's Firm. — A guardian is entitled to commissions on payments made for his ward for goods bought of a firm of which the guardian was a member. Williamson v. Williams, 59 N.C. 62 (1860).

When Ward Boards with Guardian. — A guardian is not entitled to commissions on charges for board while the ward lived with the guardian's family. Williamson v. Williams, 59 N.C. 62 (1860).

Securities Delivered at Majority. — Commissions should be allowed a guardian on the amount of the notes and other securities for debt delivered to the ward upon the termination of the guardianship. Whitford v. Foy, 65 N.C. 265 (1871).

Disbursement after Ward's Majority. — A guardian is not entitled to commissions upon any disbursement made after his ward arrives at full age. McNeill v. Hodges, 83 N.C. 504 (1880).

Bank as Administrator and Guardian of Distributee. — Where a bank, acting as administrator and as guardian for one of the distributees, pays over to itself as guardian the distributive share of its ward, such amount is cash received by it as guardian, and it is entitled by law to commissions thereon. Rose v. Bank of Wadesboro, 217 N.C. 600, 9 S.E.2d 2 (1940).

Using Ward's Money in Own Business. — A guardian will be allowed commissions, although he uses his ward's money in his business, if he makes regular returns, so as to show at all times what amount is due his ward. Carr v. Askew, 94 N.C. 194 (1886), distinguishing Burke v. Turner, 85 N.C. 500 (1881). See Fisher v. Brown, 135 N.C. 198, 47 S.E. 398 (1904).

Same — Gross Negligence. — A guardian is not entitled to commissions on money collected and used by him in his own business where he was guilty of gross negligence in not making his returns. Burke v. Turner, 85 N.C. 500 (1881).

Rate of Commission. — Reasonable commissions will always be allowed to a guardian unless in cases of fraud or very culpable negligence. The rate will depend upon a variety of circumstances, such as the amount of the estate, the trouble in managing it, whether fees have been paid to counsel for assisting him in the management, the last of which will lessen it. Whitford v. Foy, 65 N.C. 265 (1871).

Same — Two and One-Half Percent. — Two and one-half percent was ample commission to a guardian receiving most of the ward's property, without litigation or difficulty, in the shape of notes payable to himself, which he retained six years collecting but little interest, when he voluntarily resigned and delivered the notes to his successor. Walton v. Erwin, 36 N.C. 136 (1840).

Same — Five Percent. — Five percent was not an unreasonable allowance to a guardian as commissions on his receipts and disbursements, when these were numerous, and extended over a period of 14 years. Covington v. Leak, 65 N.C. 594 (1871).

Commission of the highest percentage allowed by statute, will be allowed to a guardian only in a case of the greatest merit, as where his duties have been troublesome and of long continuance. Walton v. Erwin, 36 N.C. 136 (1840).

Referee's Decision Usually Adopted. — The amount of allowance of commissions to a guardian by a referee is usually adopted by the court, unless it is shown to be excessive. Johnston v. Haynes, 68 N.C. 514 (1873); Whitford v. Foy, 71 N.C. 527 (1874).

Appellate Review of Referee's Finding. — An appellate court will not review the finding of a referee as to the commissions allowed a guardian, unless such commissions are shown to be grossly erroneous. Whitford v. Foy, 71 N.C. 527 (1874).

Article 11.

Public Guardians.

§ 35A-1270. Appointment; term; oath.

There may be in every county a public guardian, to be appointed by the clerk for a term of eight years. The public guardian shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation faithfully and honestly to discharge the duties imposed upon him; the oath or affirmation so taken and subscribed shall be filed in the office of the clerk. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1271. Bond of public guardian; increasing bond.

The public guardian shall enter into bond with three or more sureties, approved by the clerk in the penal sum of six thousand dollars ($6,000), payable to the State of North Carolina, conditioned faithfully to perform the duties of his office and obey all lawful orders of the superior or other courts touching said guardianship of all wards, money or estate that may come into his hands. Whenever the aggregate value of the real and personal estate belonging to his several wards exceeds one-half the bond herein required the clerk shall require him to enlarge his bond in amount so as to cover at least double the aggregate amount under his control as guardian. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1272. Powers, duties, liabilities, compensation.

The powers and duties of said public guardian shall be the same as other guardians, and he shall be subject to the same liabilities as other guardians under the existing laws, and shall receive the same compensation as other guardians. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1273. When letters issue to public guardian.

The public guardian shall apply for and obtain letters of guardianship in the following cases:

(1) When a period of six months has elapsed from the discovery of any property belonging to any minor or incompetent person without guardian.

(2) When any person entitled to letters of guardianship shall request in writing the clerk to issue letters to the public guardian; but it is lawful and the duty of the clerk to revoke said letters of guardianship at any time after issuing the same upon application in writing by any person entitled to qualify as guardian, setting forth a sufficient cause for such revocation. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Article 12.

Nonresident Ward Having Property in State.

§ 35A-1280. Appointment of ancillary guardian.

(a) A clerk may appoint an ancillary guardian whenever it appears by petition or application and due proof to the satisfaction of the clerk that:

(1) There is in the county of the clerk's jurisdiction real or personal property in which a nonresident of the State of North Carolina has an ownership or other interest; and

(2) The nonresident is incompetent or is a minor and a guardian of the estate or general guardian, or a comparable fiduciary, has been appointed and is still serving for the nonresident in the state of his or her residence; and

(3) That the nonresident ward has no guardian in the State of North Carolina.

(b) Except as otherwise ordered by the clerk or provided herein, an ancillary guardian shall have all the powers, duties, and responsibilities with respect to the nonresident ward's estate in the State of North Carolina as guardians otherwise appointed have. An ancillary guardian shall annually make an accounting to the court in this State and remit to the guardian in the state of the ward's residence any net rents of the real estate or any proceeds of sale.

(c) A certified or exemplified copy of letters of appointment or other official record of a court of record appointing a guardian for a nonresident in the state of his residence shall be conclusive proof of the fact of the ward's minority or incompetence and of the appointment of the guardian in the state of the ward's residence; provided, that the letters of appointment or other record shall show that the guardianship is still in effect in the state of the ward's residence and that the ward's incompetence or minority still exists.

(d) Upon the appointment of an ancillary guardian under this Article, the clerk shall notify the appropriate court in the county of the ward's residence and the guardian in the state of the ward's residence. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1281. Removal of ward's personalty from State.

(a) For purposes of this section, the term "personal estate" means:

(1) Personal property;

(2) Personal property substituted for realty by decree of court;

(3) Any money arising from the sale of real estate, whether the same be in the hands of any guardian residing in this State; or in the hands of any executor, administrator, or other person holding for the ward; or, if not being adversely held and claimed, not in the lawful possession or control of any person.

(b) Where any ward residing in another state or territory, or in the District of Columbia, or Canada, or other foreign country, is entitled to any personal estate in this State, the ward's guardian or trustee duly appointed at the place where such ward resides, or, in the event no guardian or trustee has been appointed, the court or officer of the court authorized by the laws of such place to receive moneys belonging to any ward when no guardian or trustee has been appointed, may apply to have such estate removed to the residence of the ward by petition filed before the clerk in the county in which the property or some portion thereof is situated. Such petition shall be proceeded with as in other cases of special proceedings.

(c) The petitioner must show to the court a copy of his appointment as a guardian or trustee and bond duly authenticated, and must prove to the court that the bond is sufficient, in the ability of the sureties as well as in amount, to secure all the estate of the ward wherever situated: Provided, that in all cases where a banking institution, resident and doing business in a foreign state, is a guardian or trustee of any person and is not required to execute a bond to qualify as guardian or trustee under the laws of the state in which such guardian or trustee qualified and was appointed, and no sureties are or were required by the state in which said banking institution qualified as guardian or trustee, and this fact affirmatively appears to the court, then the personal estate of the ward may be removed from this State without the finding of a court with reference to any sureties, and the court in which the petition for the removal of the property of the ward is filed may order the transfer and removal of the property of the ward and the payment and delivery of the same to the nonresident guardian or trustee without regard to whether a nonresident guardian or trustee has filed a bond with sureties; and the finding of the court that the said guardian or trustee is a banking institution and has duly qualified and been appointed guardian or trustee under the laws of the state where the ward is resident shall be sufficient. Any person may be made a party defendant to the proceeding who may be made a party defendant in civil actions under the provisions of Chapter 1A of the General Statutes. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 33-48 and prior law.

When Local Guardian Not Necessary. — Where a foreign guardian has been duly appointed in the state of his own residence and that of his wards, and has filed a certified copy of his appointment, with a bond sufficient both as to the amount and the financial ability of the sureties to protect the estate of his wards and in conformity with former § 33-48 and former § 33-49, with his petition to the clerk of the court as required by these statutes, it is not necessary that a local guardian be appointed, but the court in this State, before which the matter is properly pending, may order that the foreign guardian be permitted to withdraw the estate of his wards to the place of foreign jurisdiction. Cilley v. Geitner, 183 N.C. 528, 111 S.E. 866 (1922).

When Guardian Must Be Resident. — Where the infant grandchildren of the testator take upon a contingency, as directed by the will, properly probated here, it is required that the guardian appointed be a resident of this State, according to our law, unless the funds have been properly removed to another state, under former §§ 33-48 and 33-49; and the law of this State governs the interpretation of the will when the testator died domiciled here. Cilley v. Geitner, 182 N.C. 714, 110 S.E. 61 (1921).

Foreign Guardian as Next Friend. — A guardian appointed in another state has no authority to represent his wards in suits and proceedings in this State, but when he brings suit for them as guardian it will be treated as if he were their next friend. Tate v. Mott, 96 N.C. 19, 2 S.E. 176 (1887).

Removal Held Properly Refused. — Where it appeared that the property in this State of a ward residing in another state consisted of good bonds at interest in the hands of his guardian here, a part of which arose from the sale of land, and the ward was nearly of age, and there was no special necessity made to appear for making a transfer of the property, the court of equity, in the exercise of its discretion, refused to order a transfer of the estate to the hands of a guardian appointed in such other state. Douglas v. Caldwell, 59 N.C. 20 (1860).

A guardian in another state of nonresident wards may proceed to obtain possession of the property bequeathed to the wards and in the hands of an executor in this State under a will duly probated here under the provisions of former § 33-48 and § 36A-13, relating to property in the hands of a trustee residing in this State, is not applicable. Fidelity Trust Co. v. Walton, 198 N.C. 790, 153 S.E. 401 (1930).

The petition and proceeding prescribed by former § 33-48 are jurisdictional, in order to authorize the transfer of the funds of an infant domiciled in this State to a guardian in another state; and an order, by the judge of the superior court or clerk, for its transfer otherwise is void. State ex rel. Page v. Sawyer, 223 N.C. 102, 25 S.E.2d 443 (1943).

Article 13.

Removal or Resignation of Guardian; Successor Guardian; Estates Without Guardians; Termination of Guardianship.

§ 35A-1290. Removal by Clerk.

(a) The clerk has the power and authority on information or complaint made to remove any guardian appointed under the provisions of this Subchapter, to appoint successor guardians, and to make rules or enter orders for the better management of estates and the better care and maintenance of wards and their dependents.

(b) It is the clerk's duty to remove a guardian or to take other action sufficient to protect the ward's interests in the following cases:

(1) The guardian wastes the ward's money or estate or converts it to his own use.

(2) The guardian in any manner mismanages the ward's estate.

(3) The guardian neglects to care for or maintain the ward or his dependents in a suitable manner.

(4) The guardian or his sureties are likely to become insolvent or to become nonresidents of the State.

(5) The original appointment was made on the basis of a false representation or a mistake.

(6) The guardian has violated a fiduciary duty through default or misconduct.

(7) The guardian has a private interest, whether direct or indirect, that might tend to hinder or be adverse to carrying out his duties as guardian.

(c) It is the clerk's duty to remove a guardian in the following cases:

(1) The guardian has been adjudged incompetent by a court of competent jurisdiction and has not been restored to competence.

(2) The guardian has been convicted of a felony under the laws of the United States or of any state or territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia and his citizenship has not been restored.

(3) The guardian was originally unqualified for appointment and continues to be unqualified, or the guardian would no longer qualify for appointment as guardian due to a change in residence, a change in the charter of a corporate guardian, or any other reason.

(4) The guardian is the ward's spouse and has lost his rights as provided by Chapter 31A of the General Statutes.

(5) The guardian fails to post, renew, or increase a bond as required by law or by order of the court.

(6) The guardian refuses or fails without justification to obey any citation, notice, or process served on him in regard to the guardianship.

(7) The guardian fails to file required accountings with the clerk.

(8) The clerk finds the guardian unsuitable to continue serving as guardian for any reason. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under former § 33-9 and prior law.

Testamentary guardian ought not to be removed without a showing of such waste, insolvency, or misconduct that the ward will be unable to recover the balance due on the final settlement. Sanderson v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 369 (1878).

Personal Use of Ward's Funds. — The use by a guardian of the funds of his ward for his own use is sufficient to warrant his removal. Ury v. Brown, 129 N.C. 270, 40 S.E. 4 (1901).

Showing Required for Removal of Legal Guardian. — A legal guardian of a child's person, unlike a mere custodian, is not removable for a mere change of circumstances; unfitness or neglect of duty must be shown. In re Williamson, 77 N.C. App. 53, 334 S.E.2d 428 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 194, 341 S.E.2d 584 (1986).

Subsection (b)(7) authorizes the removal of a guardian where there is a showing of any potential for conflict between the interests of the ward and those of the guardian. In re Estate of Armfield, 113 N.C. App. 467, 439 S.E.2d 216 (1994).

The words "might tend" in subsection (b)(7) established a minimal showing of possible conflicting interest for the removal of a guardian. In re Estate of Armfield, 113 N.C. App. 467, 439 S.E.2d 216 (1994).

Section 1-276 [see now § 1-301.1 et seq.] Is Inapplicable to Removals. — Appeals under § 1-276 [see now § 1-301.1 et seq.] are confined to civil actions and special proceedings. The decisions are plenary that the removal of a guardian is neither. In re Simmons, 266 N.C. 702, 147 S.E.2d 231 (1966).

Appellate Jurisdiction of Superior Court over Removals Is Derivative. — In the appointment and removal of guardians, the appellate jurisdiction of the superior court is derivative, and appeals present for review only errors of law committed by the clerk. In re Simmons, 266 N.C. 702, 147 S.E.2d 231 (1966).

A ward may not bring action in superior court by next friend to remove guardian appointed by the clerk, and for the appointment of another guardian, the superior court in such instance being without jurisdiction. Moses v. Moses, 204 N.C. 657, 169 S.E. 273 (1933).

Under Former Law. — As to removal of guardian by county court, see Bray v. Brumsey, 5 N.C. 227 (1809); Cooke v. Beale, 33 N.C. 36 (1850).

§ 35A-1291. Interlocutory orders on revocation.

In all cases where the letters of a guardian are revoked, the clerk may, pending the resolution of any controversy in respect to such removal, make such interlocutory orders and decrees as the clerk finds necessary for the protection of the ward or the ward's estate or the other party seeking relief by such revocation. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1292. Resignation.

(a) Any guardian who wishes to resign may apply in writing to the clerk, setting forth the circumstances of the case. If a general guardian or guardian of the estate, at the time of making the application, also exhibits his final account for settlement, and if the clerk is satisfied that the guardian has fully accounted, the clerk may accept the resignation of the guardian and discharge him and appoint a successor guardian, but the guardian so discharged and his sureties are still liable in relation to all matters connected with the guardianship before the discharge.

(b) A general guardian who wishes to resign as guardian of the estate of the ward but continue as guardian of the person of the ward may apply for the partial resignation by petition as provided in subsection (a) of this section. If the general guardian also exhibits his final account as guardian of the estate for settlement, and if the clerk is satisfied that the general guardian has fully accounted as guardian of the estate, the clerk may accept the resignation of the general guardian as guardian of the estate, discharge him as guardian of the estate, and issue to him letters of appointment as guardian of the person, but the general guardian so discharged as guardian of the estate and his sureties are still liable in relation to all matters connected with the guardianship of the estate before the discharge. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under former law.

Liability Continues. — Where permission is given to a guardian by the judge of probate to file an ex parte final account and turn over his guardianship to another, he is not thereby discharged from liabilities connected with his trust and arising before such resignation. He is still bound to account with the ward, or the succeeding guardian, when so required. Luton v. Wilcox, 83 N.C. 20 (1880).

§ 35A-1293. Appointment of successor guardian.

Upon the removal, death, or resignation of a guardian, the clerk shall appoint a successor guardian following the same criteria that would apply to the initial appointment of a guardian. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1294. Estates without guardians.

(a) Whenever a general guardian or guardian of the estate is removed, resigns, or stops serving without making a full and proper accounting, the successor guardian, or the clerk if there is no successor guardian, shall initiate a proceeding to compel an accounting. The surety or sureties on the previous guardian's bond shall be served with notice of the proceeding.

(b) If no successor guardian has been appointed, the clerk may act as receiver or appoint some discreet person as a receiver to take possession of the ward's estate, to collect all moneys due the ward, and to secure, lend, invest, or apply the same for the benefit and advantage of the ward, under the direction of the clerk until a successor guardian is appointed. The accounts of the receiver shall be returned, audited, and settled as the clerk may direct. The receiver shall be allowed such amounts for his time, trouble, and responsibility as seem to the clerk reasonable and proper. Such receivership may continue until a suitable guardian can be appointed.

(c) When another guardian is appointed, he may apply by motion, on notice, to the clerk for an order directing the receiver to pay over all the money, estate, and effects of the ward. If no such guardian is appointed, the ward shall have the same remedy against the receiver on becoming age 18 or otherwise emancipated if the ward is a minor or on being restored to competence if the ward is an incompetent person. In the event of the ward's death, his executor, administrator, or collector, and the heir or personal representative of the ward shall have the same remedy against the receiver. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to receivers, see § 1-501 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former law.

The receiver does not have the powers of a guardian, but acts under the control of the court until another guardian is appointed. Temple v. Williams, 91 N.C. 82 (1884).

Liability of Receiver. — As a general rule, a receiver is responsible for his own neglect only, and is protected when he acts in entire good faith. State ex rel. Collins v. Gooch, 97 N.C. 186, 1 S.E. 653 (1887).

Same — Similar to Guardian's. — When a receiver is appointed to take charge of an infant's estate who has no guardian, and is directed to lend out the money and pay the income over to the ward, he will be held to the same accountability as a guardian. State ex rel. Collins v. Gooch, 97 N.C. 186, 1 S.E. 653 (1887).

Liability for Failure of Bank. — A receiver may keep money in a bank as a safe place of deposit, or may use the bank as a means of transmitting money to distant places, and if he uses reasonable diligence, he will not be held liable if the bank fails. State ex rel. Collins v. Gooch, 97 N.C. 186, 1 S.E. 653 (1887).

Where a receiver was appointed to take charge of an infant's estate and invest the same, and report to the court annually, and he deposited a portion of the money in a bank in another state to his credit as receiver, on which deposit he was paid interest by the bank, which afterwards failed, it was held that the receiver was liable for the loss, as he had failed to report to the court the manner in which he had invested the infant's estate, although he had acted in the best faith. State ex rel. Collins v. Gooch, 97 N.C. 186, 1 S.E. 653 (1887).

Liability on Official Bond of Clerk. — When the clerk of the superior court is appointed receiver of a minor's estate under this section, he takes and holds the funds by virtue of his office as clerk, and his sureties upon his official bond as such officer are liable for any failure of duty on his part in that respect. State ex rel. Boothe v. Upchurch, 110 N.C. 62, 14 S.E. 642 (1892). See State ex rel. Rogers v. Odom, 86 N.C. 432 (1882).

The sureties on the clerk's official bond are liable for any breach of his duties as receiver. Waters v. Melson, 112 N.C. 89, 16 S.E. 918 (1893).

Action Against Receiver. — It is not necessary to obtain leave of the court before commencing an action for failure of the clerk to fulfill his duty when appointed receiver under former section. State ex rel. Boothe v. Upchurch, 110 N.C. 62, 14 S.E. 642 (1892).

Same — Burden of Proof. — The burden is upon a receiver and his sureties to show that he used due diligence in investing the money in his hands. Waters v. Melson, 112 N.C. 89, 16 S.E. 918 (1893).

Settlement Not Conclusive against Ward. — A settlement made with a receiver appointed under former section, even if had under direction of the court, is not conclusive against the ward, but only raises a presumption that the account and settlement are correct. Such presumption may be disproved. Temple v. Williams, 91 N.C. 82 (1884).

§ 35A-1295. Termination of guardianship.

(a) Every guardianship shall be terminated and all powers and duties of the guardian provided in Article 9 of this Chapter shall cease when the ward:

(1) Ceases to be a minor as defined in G.S. 35A-1202(12),

(2) Is adjudicated to be restored to competency pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 35A-1130, or

(3) Dies.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a), a guardian of the estate or a general guardian is responsible for all accountings required by Article 10 of this Chapter until the guardian is discharged by the clerk. (1989, c. 473, s. 31.)

§§ 35A-1296 through 35A-1300: Reserved for future codification purposes.

SUBCHAPTER III. MANAGEMENT OF WARD'S ESTATE.

Article 14.

Sale, Mortgage, Exchange or Lease of Ward's Estate.

§ 35A-1301. Special proceedings to sell, exchange, mortgage, or lease.

(a) Whenever used herein, the word "guardian" shall be construed to include general guardian, guardian of the estate, ancillary guardian, next friend, guardian ad litem, or commissioner of the court acting pursuant to this Article, but not a guardian who is guardian of the person only; and the word "mortgage" shall be construed to include deeds of trust.

(b) A guardian may apply to the clerk, by verified petition setting forth the facts, to sell, mortgage, exchange, or lease for a term of more than three years, any part of his ward's real estate, and such proceeding shall be conducted as in other cases of special proceedings. The clerk, in his discretion, may direct that the next of kin or presumptive heirs of the ward be made parties to such proceeding. The clerk may order a sale, mortgage, exchange, or lease to be made by the guardian in such way and on such terms as may be most advantageous to the interest of the ward, upon finding by satisfactory proof that:

(1) The ward's interest would be materially promoted by such sale, mortgage, exchange, or lease, or

(2) The ward's personal estate has been exhausted or is insufficient for his support and the ward is likely to become chargeable on the county, or

(3) A sale, mortgage, exchange, or lease of any part of the ward's real estate is necessary for his maintenance or for the discharge of debts unavoidably incurred for his maintenance, or

(4) Any part of the ward's real estate is required for public purposes, or

(5) There is a valid debt or demand against the estate of the ward; provided, when an order is entered under this subdivision, (i) it shall authorize the sale of only so much of the real estate as may be sufficient to discharge such debt or demand, and (ii) the proceeds of sale shall be considered as assets in the hands of the guardian for the benefit of creditors, in like manner as assets in the hands of a personal representative, and the same proceedings may be had against the guardian with respect to such assets as might be taken against an executor, administrator or collector in similar cases.

The order shall specify particularly the property thus to be disposed of, with the terms of leasing or sale or exchange or mortgage, and shall be entered at length on the records of the court. The guardian may not mortgage the property of his ward for a term of years in excess of the term fixed by the court in its order.

(c) In the case of a ward who is a minor, no sale, mortgage, exchange, or lease under this Article shall be made until approved by the superior court judge, nor shall the same be valid, nor any conveyance of the title made, unless confirmed and directed by the judge, and the proceeds of the sale, mortgage, exchange, or lease shall be exclusively applied and secured to such purposes and on such trusts as the judge shall specify.

(d) All petitions filed under this section wherein an order is sought for the sale, mortgage, exchange, or lease of the ward's real estate shall be filed in the county in which all or any part of the real estate is situated.

(e) The procedure for a sale pursuant to this section shall be as provided by Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes.

(f) Nothing herein contained shall be construed to divest the court of the power to order private sales as heretofore ordered in proper cases.

(g) On and after June 1, 1973, no sales of property belonging to minors or incompetent persons prior to that date by next friend, guardian ad litem, or commissioner of the court regular in all other respects shall be declared invalid nor shall any claim or defense be asserted on the grounds that said sale was not made by a duly appointed guardian as provided herein or on the grounds that said minor or incompetent person was not represented by a duly appointed guardian. CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Payment of Debts or Demands Against Estate.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under former § 33-31 and prior law.

Not Applicable to Settlement or Partition. — Former section does not apply either to the settlement of estates or to partition. Clark v. Carolina Homes, Inc., 189 N.C. 703, 128 S.E. 20 (1925).

Jurisdiction of Court. — The superior courts have authority in all proper cases to direct a sale of the property of infants, both real and personal, for their benefit and advantage. Williams v. Harrington, 33 N.C. 616 (1850); Ex parte Dodd, 62 N.C. 97 (1867); Sutton v. Schonwald, 86 N.C. 198 (1882); Morris v. Gentry, 89 N.C. 248 (1883); Tate v. Mott, 96 N.C. 19, 2 S.E. 176 (1887).

Clerk and Court Have Concurrent Jurisdiction. — By former section the clerk and court in term have concurrent jurisdiction in the manner of ordering a sale of infants' lands upon petition of their guardian. Barcello v. Hapgood, 118 N.C. 712, 24 S.E. 124 (1896).

Clerk's Jurisdiction Is Statutory. — A clerk of the superior court has no jurisdiction with respect to infants or with respect to property, real or personal, of infants, except such as in conferred by statute. Wilson v. Pemberton, 266 N.C. 782, 147 S.E.2d 217 (1966).

Petition Signed by Person Not a Qualified Guardian Confers No Jurisdiction on Clerk. — A clerk of the superior court has jurisdiction to order the sale of a ward's lands only upon petition verified by the duly appointed and qualified guardian of the ward, and where such petition is filed and signed by a person purporting to act as guardian, but who had not been appointed guardian and had not qualified by filing bond, the petition confers no jurisdiction on the clerk. Buncombe County v. Cain, 210 N.C. 766, 188 S.E. 399 (1936).

And in Such Case the Purchaser at Sale Acquires No Title Adverse to Infant. — A purchaser of an infant's property at a sale made under an order which is void because the clerk who made the order had no jurisdiction of the proceeding in which the order was made, acquires no right, title, interest, or estate in said property, adverse to the infant. Buncombe County v. Cain, 210 N.C. 766, 188 S.E. 399 (1936).

When Prior Court Approval of Expenditures Required. — In most cases, a guardian is empowered under Chapter 35A to make expenditures from an incompetent ward's estate without prior court approval; prior approval of expenditures is necessary only when the incompetent's property is to be mortgaged or sold, or when the expenditures will be made from estate principal. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Compliance with Statutory Requirements Presumed. — Although former section must be strictly complied with, where a guardian has applied for permission to mortgage her wards' land, and the clerk has entered an order therefor, which order has been approved by the court, there is a presumption that the statutory requirements have been met. Quick v. Federal Land Bank, 208 N.C. 562, 181 S.E. 746 (1935).

The power of a guardian to make disposition of his ward's estate is very carefully regulated, and the sale is not allowed except by order of court, which order must have the supervision, approval and confirmation of the resident judge of the district or the judge regularly holding the courts of the district. Pike v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 274 N.C. 1, 161 S.E.2d 453 (1968).

Proof Required. — Former section contemplates that, in addition to the verified petition of the guardian, there shall be required other satisfactory proof of the truth of the matter alleged. In re Propst, 144 N.C. 562, 144 N.C. 563, 57 S.E. 342, 57 S.E. 342 (1907).

The "satisfactory proof" required under former section must be some proof in addition to the guardian's petition and must show the necessity for the proposed sale. In re Thomas, 290 N.C. 410, 226 S.E.2d 371 (1976).

Sale May Be Private. — The sale by order of the court may be either public or private. Former § 33-21 does not apply when the sale is by order of court. Barcello v. Hapgood, 118 N.C. 712, 24 S.E. 124 (1896).

Title at Unauthorized Private Sale. — A guardian, having offered at public sale the land of his wards in accordance with an order of the court, and having failed to sell for want of a bid at a fair price, subsequently sold the land at private sale upon terms approved by the court. It was held that the purchaser at such private sale obtained a good title. Rowland v. Thompson, 73 N.C. 504 (1875).

The court may sell the land of minors for better investment, when they are properly represented before the court. Hutchinson v.

Hutchinson, 126 N.C. 671, 36 S.E. 149 (1900).

When Foreign Guardian May Sell. — Where a foreign guardian has complied with the provisions of former §§ 33-48 and 33-49 which authorize him to withdraw the estate of his wards to the place of their residence and to a court of foreign jurisdiction, he may, in the same proceedings, and incident thereto, have the real property of his wards sold and converted into money in conformity with the provisions of former section, when the wards are represented therein by their next friend, and it is made to appear that their interests will be promoted thereby, etc. Cilley v. Geitner, 183 N.C. 528, 111 S.E. 866 (1922).

As to sale of contingent interests, see Smith v. Witter, 174 N.C. 616, 94 S.E. 402 (1917).

Guardian Cannot Purchase. — It is well settled that a guardian cannot purchase at his own sale, and that all such purchases may be treated as invalid, at the option of the wards, even when no unfairness in the sale and purchase has been shown. But this does not apply to a sale made by a master. Patton v. Thompson, 55 N.C. 285 (1855); Lee v. Howell, 69 N.C. 200 (1873).

When Guardian Liable. — Where a guardian obtains a decree for the sale of his ward's land, it must appear, in order to make him liable for any loss in consequence of such sale, that he wilfully practiced a deception on the court by false allegations and false evidence, or by industriously concealing material facts. Harrison v. Bradley, 40 N.C. 136 (1847).

No Liability on Implied Warranty of Authority. — A guardian who contracts to convey the property of his ward is not liable on an implied warranty of authority. Pike v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 274 N.C. 1, 161 S.E.2d 453 (1968).

A guardian may not be authorized to join with the life tenant in executing a mortgage on lands in which his wards own the remainder in order to refund notes executed by the life tenant representing a part of the moneys expended by the life tenant in making permanent improvements upon the land, since the remaindermen being in no way liable for the sums expended by the life tenant, the execution of the mortgage could not be to the interest of the remaindermen. Hall v. Hall, 219 N.C. 805, 15 S.E.2d 273 (1941).

Mortgage Valid in Part. — Under the presumption that the provisions of former section were followed, mortgage executed by guardian was held valid as to funds used for permanent improvements on land, but void as to funds used to purchase livestock. Quick v. Federal Land Bank, 208 N.C. 562, 181 S.E. 746 (1935).

Court May Authorize Lease Extending Beyond Period of Minority. — Since the superior courts in proper instances have authority to order a sale of infants' real estate and to order and approve execution of a mortgage on same by the guardian for a period exceeding the minority of the wards, such statutory power, together with the inherent jurisdiction of courts of equity over the estates of infants, give courts of equity plenary jurisdiction to order and empower a guardian to execute a lease on the real estate belonging to his wards for a period exceeding the guardianship or the minority of the wards, upon its findings that such would be to the best interest of the infant wards. Coxe v. Charles Stores Co., 215 N.C. 380, 1 S.E.2d 848, 121 A.L.R. 959 (1939).

Confirmation of Sale. — While a formal direction to make title is not always necessary a confirmation of the sale cannot be dispensed with. In re Dickerson, 111 N.C. 108, 15 S.E. 1025 (1892).

Where an order confirming a sale of lands for partition does not provide for the disbursement of the funds, and the sum received in cash is properly paid into court and properly disbursed to the parties, the share of the minors therein being less than $100 and being paid to their mother for their benefit, under § 2-53 (see now 7A-111), the sale was not void. Ex parte Huffstetler, 203 N.C. 796, 167 S.E. 65 (1933).

Order of Sale Must Be Approved. — The power of a guardian to make disposition of his ward's real estate is very carefully regulated and a sale is not allowed except on petition filed, and the order must in all cases have the supervision and approval of the judge. Morton v. Pine Lumber Co., 178 N.C. 163, 100 S.E. 322 (1919).

Approval of Order by Emergency Judge. — An emergency judge has no power to approve and confirm an order of the clerk for the sale or mortgage of lands by a guardian when such emergency judge is not holding court in the county. Ipock v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 206 N.C. 791, 175 S.E. 127 (1934).

Approval of Order Nunc Pro Tunc. — Where a guardian executed a note and deed of trust under an order made by the clerk without the approval of the judge, and the judge later approved the order nunc pro tunc, the defect was cured so as to come within former section. Powell v. Armour Fertilizer Works, 205 N.C. 311, 170 S.E. 916 (1933); Ipock v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 206 N.C. 791, 175 S.E. 127 (1934).

When Sale May Be Set Aside. — Where the court, without taking any means to ascertain the necessity for a sale, directed it to be made, and that it should be "first advertised at the courthouse and three other public places," and no bid be received less than $125, and that the guardian should make conveyance, it was held that it was not error to set aside the sale and direct another. In re Dickerson, 111 N.C. 108, 15 S.E. 1025 (1892).

Title Not Affected by Reversal of Decree. — Where land of an infant was sold under a decree of the court upon petition of a guardian, the title acquired is not rendered invalid by the reversal of the decree on account of irregularity in the proceeding of which the purchaser had no notice. Sutton v. Schonwald, 86 N.C. 198 (1882).

Prior Debts of Mentally Disordered Person. — As to debts contracted prior to inquisition of incompetence, see Blake v. Respass, 77 N.C. 193 (1877); Adams v. Thomas, 81 N.C. 296 (1879).

As to sale of contingent interest, see Smith v. Witter, 174 N.C. 616, 94 S.E. 402 (1917).

As to satisfaction of judgment, see Blake v. Respass, 77 N.C. 193 (1877).

II. PAYMENT OF DEBTS OR DEMANDS AGAINST ESTATE.

Court should first ascertain that there are debts due from the ward, which render the sale of his property expedient, and should also select the part or parts of the property which can be disposed of with least injury to the ward. Leary v. Fletcher, 23 N.C. 259 (1840).

Same — Sufficiency of Order. — An order authorizing a guardian, under certain circumstances, to sell the land of his ward, must first show that it was ascertained that there were debts due from the ward, and then specify what particular land is to be sold for their payment. Spruill v. Davenport, 48 N.C. 42 (1855).

Sufficient Specification of Land. — An order "to sell the land of the ward named in the petition, adjoining the lands of A, B, and others, containing about 110 acres," it not appearing that the ward had other land, was held a sufficient specification of the land under the statute. Pendleton v. Trueblood, 48 N.C. 96 (1855).

Insufficient Specification of Land. — An order that the guardian sell the land of his ward, or so much thereof as will be sufficient to discharge his debts, is fatally defective and void, and vests no title in those who bought at the sale. Leary v. Fletcher, 23 N.C. 259 (1840); Ducket v. Skinner, 33 N.C. 431 (1850).

Sale Void Where Debts Not Shown. — A sale of a ward's land on petition of the guardian to pay debts is void where it is not made to appear that the court passed on and ascertained the fact that there were debts against the ward's estate. Coffield v. McLean, 49 N.C. 15 (1856).

But the amount of the debts, or to whom due, need not be set forth in the order. Spruill v. Davenport, 48 N.C. 42 (1855); Pendleton v. Trueblood, 48 N.C. 96 (1855).

Proceeds Subject to Attachment. — Money from the sale of land which belonged to wards is subject to attachment in the hands of the clerk after the confirmation of the sale. Leroy v. Jacobsky, 136 N.C. 443, 48 S.E. 796 (1904).

Priority in Payment of Debts. — When a guardian of an infant, under an order of court, sells his ward's land for payment of the debts of the ancestor, he is bound to observe the same priority in the payment of the debts as an administrator or executor in applying the personal assets. Merchant v. Sanderlin, 25 N.C. 501 (1843).

Sale of Incompetent's Property. — See Howard v. Thompson, 30 N.C. 367 (1848).

§ 35A-1302. Procedure when real estate lies in county in which guardian does not reside.

In all cases where a guardian is appointed under the authority of Chapter 35A and such guardian applies to the court for an order to sell, mortgage, or exchange all or part of his ward's real estate, and such real estate is situated in a county other than the county in which the guardian is appointed and qualified, the guardian shall first apply to the clerk of the county in which he was appointed and qualified for an order showing that the sale, mortgage, or exchange of his ward's real estate is necessary or that the ward's interest would be materially promoted thereby. The clerk to whom such application is made shall hear and pass upon the same and enter his findings and order as to whether said sale, mortgage, or exchange is necessary or would materially promote the ward's interest, and said order and findings shall be certified to the clerk of the county in which the ward's land, or some part of it, is located and before whom any petition or application is filed for the sale, mortgage, or exchange of said land. Such findings and orders so certified shall be considered by the court along with all other evidence and circumstances in passing upon the petition in which an order is sought for the sale, mortgage, or exchange of said land. In the case of a ward who is a minor, before such findings and orders shall become effective the same shall be approved by the superior court judge holding the courts of the district or by the resident judge. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1303. Fund from sale has character of estate sold and subject to same trusts.

Whenever, in consequence of any sale under G.S. 35A-1301, the real or personal property of the ward is saved from demands to which in the first instance it may be liable, the final decree shall declare and set apart a portion of the personal or real estate thus saved, of value equal to the real and personal estate sold, as property exchanged for that sold; and in all sales by guardians whereby real is substituted by personal, or personal by real property, the beneficial interest in the property acquired shall be enjoyed, alienated, devised or bequeathed, and shall descend and be distributed, as by law the property sold might and would have been had it not been sold, until it be reconverted from the character thus impressed upon it by some act of the owner and restored to its character proper. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 33-32 and prior law.

Proceeds of Sale of Land Retain Character of Real Estate. — When an undivided interest of an insane person in land was sold by his guardian under court order, the proceeds of sale retained the character of real estate for the purpose of devolution on his death intestate while still insane, and would go as his interest in the land would had it not been sold. Brown v. Cowper, 247 N.C. 1, 100 S.E.2d 305 (1957).

The general rule is that where the real estate of an incompetent is sold under a statute or by order of court, the proceeds of sale remain realty for the purpose of devolution on his death intestate while still an incompetent. Grant v. Banks, 270 N.C. 473, 155 S.E.2d 87 (1967), commented on in 46 N.C.L. Rev. 687 (1968).

Purchase Back of Identical Real Property Sold. — In view of the general rule as to the sale of an insane person's real property under a court order, and in view of this section, a conveyance of real property by the guardian of an insane person and the purchase back of the identical real property at a foreclosure sale by the use of unpaid purchase money notes would not break the line of descent. Brown v. Cowper, 247 N.C. 1, 100 S.E.2d 305 (1957).

Exchange of Real Property for Real Property. — Former § 33-32 does not in explicit words refer to the case where real property is substituted for real property. However, considering the general rule as to the sale of an insane person's real property under a court order, and the purpose and intent of former § 33-32, an undivided interest in land conveyed to an insane person in exchange for his interest in other tracts of land transmitted to him by descent from his mother would, upon his death intestate and continuously insane since before the appointment of his guardian until his death, nothing else appearing, descend as by law his undivided interest in the other tracts would descend, if his undivided interest in the other tracts of land had not been sold, conveyed and exchanged. Brown v. Cowper, 247 N.C. 1, 100 S.E.2d 305 (1957).

Husband Who Received Proceeds Had No Right to Complain of Procedure. — It is the duty of the court, when the real estate of an infant is sold under its decree, to direct the proceeds to be held as real estate, yet the husband of such infant, who has received the proceeds from his wife's guardian, has no right to complain that such course has not been adopted. Harrison v. Bradley, 40 N.C. 136 (1847).

Where infant's land was sold for her benefit and she married and died before becoming of age, it was held that the money retained the character of real property. Wood v. Reeves, 58 N.C. 271 (1859).

§ 35A-1305. When timber may be sold.

In case the land cannot be rented for enough to pay the taxes and other dues thereof, and there is not money sufficient for that purpose, the guardian, with the consent of the clerk, may annually dispose of or use so much of the lightwood, and box or rent so many pine trees, or sell so much of the timber on the same, as may raise enough to pay the taxes and other duties thereon, and no more. In addition, the guardian, with the consent of the clerk, may annually dispose of, use, or sell so much of the timber as is necessary to maintain good forestry practices. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under former law.

Sale without Authority. — Where a guardian sold timber on the land of his ward without an order of the court (now consent of superior court clerk), and took a note for the purchase money, the maker of such note cannot set up the failure of the guardian to observe the statutory mandate. Evans v. Williamson, 79 N.C. 86 (1878).

§ 35A-1306. Abandoned incompetent spouse.

(a) A guardian of a married person found incompetent who has been abandoned, whether the guardian was appointed before or after the abandonment, may initiate a special proceeding before the clerk having jurisdiction over the ward requesting the issuance of an order authorizing the sale of the ward's separate real property without the joinder of the abandoning spouse.

(b) The ward's spouse shall be served with notice of the special proceeding in accordance with G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4.

(c) If the clerk finds:

(1) That the spouse of the ward has willfully and without just cause abandoned the ward for a period of more than one year; and

(2) That the spouse of the ward has knowledge of the guardianship, or that the guardian has made a reasonable attempt to notify the spouse of the guardianship; and

(3) That an order authorizing the sale of the separate real property of the ward is in the best interest of the ward; the clerk may issue such an order thereby barring the abandoning spouse from all right, title and interest in any of the ward's separate real property sold pursuant to such an order. (1987, c. 550, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

When Prior Court Approval of Expenditures Required. — In most cases, a guardian is empowered under Chapter 35A to make expenditures from an incompetent ward's estate without prior court approval; prior approval of expenditures is necessary only when the incompetent's property is to be mortgaged or sold, or when the expenditures will be made from estate principal. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

§ 35A-1307. Spouse of incompetent husband or wife entitled to special proceeding for sale of real property.

Every married person whose husband or wife is adjudged incompetent and is confined in a mental hospital or other institution in this State, and who was living with the incompetent spouse at the time of commitment shall, if he or she be in needy circumstances, have the right to bring a special proceeding before the clerk to sell the real property of the incompetent spouse, or so much thereof as is deemed expedient, and have the proceeds applied for support: Provided, that said proceeding shall be approved by the judge of the superior court holding the courts of the superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1 where the said property is situated. When the deed of the commissioner appointed by the court, conveying the lands belonging to the incompetent spouse is executed, probated, and registered, it conveys a good and indefeasible title to the purchaser. (1987, c. 550, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 83; 1989, c. 473, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

The duty to provide support to a dependent spouse is a continuing obligation, fairly chargeable to the estate of an incompetent; therefore, incompetent's wife's complaint for support stated a legally recognized claim. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Clerk of Superior Court Has Power to Determine Whether Spouse Should Be Granted Support. — The clerk of superior court—after first ensuring that the estate is ample to meet the expenses of caring for the incompetent—has residual equitable power under Chapter 35A to examine the facts and circumstances of the case to determine whether the incompetent's spouse should be granted support from her husband's estate and the right to continue to live in his home; factors the clerk may consider include the size and condition of the estate, the present and future demands against it, and the spouse's needs. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

The district court was not the proper forum in which to seek spousal support from the estate of an incompetent; the superior court is the only proper division to hear matters regarding the administration of incompetents' estates; therefore, the incompetent's spouse should have made her demand for support before the clerk of superior court either as a motion in the cause pursuant to § 35A-1207, or as a special proceeding for the sale of her husband's property under this section. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Article 15.

Mortgage or Sale of Estates Held by the Entireties.

§ 35A-1310. Where one spouse or both incompetent; special proceeding before clerk.

In all cases where a husband and wife shall be seized of property as an estate by the entireties, and the wife or the husband or both shall be or become mentally incompetent to execute a conveyance of the estate so held, and the interest of said parties shall make it necessary or desirable that such property be mortgaged or sold, it shall be lawful for the mentally competent spouse and/or the guardian of the mentally incompetent spouse, and/or the guardians of both (where both are mentally incompetent) to file a petition with the clerk of the superior court in the county where the lands are located, setting forth all facts relative to the status of the owners, and showing the necessity or desirability of the sale or mortgage of said property, and the clerk, after first finding as a fact that either the husband or wife, or both, are mentally incompetent, shall have power to authorize the interested parties and/or their guardians to execute a mortgage, deed of trust, deed, or other conveyance of such property, provided it shall appear to said clerk's satisfaction that same is necessary or to the best advantage of the parties, and not prejudicial to the interest of the mentally incompetent spouse. All petitions filed under the authority of this section shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county where the real estate or any part of same is situated. (1935, c. 59, s. 1; 1945, c. 426, s. 5; c. 1084, s. 5; 1987, c. 550, s. 2.)

Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

§ 35A-1311. General law applicable; approved by judge.

The proceedings herein provided for shall be conducted under and shall be governed by laws pertaining to special proceedings, and it shall be necessary for any sale or mortgage or other conveyance herein authorized to be approved by a superior court judge who has jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1 wherein the property or any part of same is located. (1935, c. 59, s. 2; 1945, c. 426, s. 6; 1987, c. 550, s. 2; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 84.)

CASE NOTES

When Prior Court Approval of Expenditures Required. — In most cases, a guardian is empowered under Chapter 35A to make expenditures from an incompetent ward's estate without prior court approval; prior approval of expenditures is necessary only when the incompetent's property is to be mortgaged or sold, or when the expenditures will be made from estate principal. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Sale May Be Authorized. — Former § 35-15 does not limit the court's power in authorizing a mortgage. The court may authorize a sale. Perry v. Jolly, 259 N.C. 305, 130 S.E.2d 654 (1963), decided under § 35-15, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 2.

Sale Transfers Right of Survivorship to Fund. — A sale does not destroy or separate the interests of the tenants by entireties if one of the parties is incompetent. The right of survivorship is transferred to the fund. Perry v. Jolly, 259 N.C. 305, 130 S.E.2d 654 (1963), decided under § 35-15, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 2.

§ 35A-1312. Proceeding valid in passing title.

Any mortgage, deed, or deed of trust executed under authority of this Article by a regularly conducted special proceeding as provided shall have the force and effect of passing title to said property to the same extent as a deed executed jointly by husband and wife, where both are mentally capable of executing a conveyance. (1935, c. 59, s. 3; 1987, c. 550, s. 2.)

§ 35A-1313. Clerk may direct application of funds; purchasers and mortgagees protected.

In all cases conducted under this Article it shall be competent for the court, in its discretion, to direct the application of funds arising from a sale or mortgage of such property in such manner as may appear necessary or expedient for the protection of the interest of the mentally incompetent spouse: Provided, however, this section shall not be construed as requiring a purchaser or any other party advancing money on the property to see to the proper application of such money, but such purchaser or other party shall acquire title unaffected by the provisions of this section. (1935, c. 59, s. 4; 1987, c. 550, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-17, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 2.

The discretion given the court by former § 35-17 is limited to the protection of the incompetent's interests. Perry v. Jolly, 259 N.C. 305, 130 S.E.2d 654 (1963).

The power to dissolve the rights of survivorship incident to the entireties estate is not within the court's discretion. Perry v. Jolly, 259 N.C. 305, 130 S.E.2d 654 (1963).

§ 35A-1314. Prior sales and mortgages validated.

Any and all special proceedings under which estates by the entireties have been sold or mortgaged prior to March 5, 1935, under circumstances contemplated in this Article are hereby in all respects ratified and confirmed, provided that such proceeding or proceedings are otherwise regular and conformable to law. Surplus Income and Advancements.

§ 35A-1320: Repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 473, s. 14.

Editor's Note. — This Article is former Article 5 of Chapter 35, as recodified by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 3.

§ 35A-1321. Advancement of surplus income to certain relatives.

When any incompetent person, of full age, and not having made a valid will, has children or grandchildren (such grandchildren being the issue of a deceased child), and is possessed of an estate, real or personal, whose annual income is more than sufficient abundantly and amply to support himself, and to support, maintain and educate the members of his family, with all the necessaries and suitable comforts of life, it is lawful for the clerk of the superior court for the county in which such person has his residence to order from time to time, and so often as may be judged expedient, that fit and proper advancements be made, out of the surplus of such income, to any such child, or grandchild, not being a member of his family and entitled to be supported, educated and maintained out of the estate of such person. Whenever any incompetent person of full age, not being married and not having issue, be possessed, or his guardian be possessed for him, of any estate, real or personal, or of an income which is more than sufficient amply to provide for such person, it shall be lawful for the clerk of the superior court for the county in which such person resided prior to incompetency to order from time to time, and so often as he may deem expedient, that fit and proper advancements be made, out of the surplus of such estate or income, to his or her parents, brothers and sisters, or grandparents to whose support, prior to his incompetency, he contributed in whole or in part. (R.C., c. 57, s. 9; Code, s. 1677; Rev., s. 1900; C.S., s. 2296; Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 93; 1971, c. 528, s. 32; 1977, c. 725, s. 5; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under § 35-20, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 3, and under former provisions.

History of former §§ 35-20 through 35-27. — See Ford v. Security Nat'l Bank, 249 N.C. 141, 105 S.E.2d 421 (1958).

Home Purchased in Name of Incompetent for Use by Sister. — The evidence tended to show that petitioner was the sister of an insane veteran, that prior to and after entering the army he assisted in her support, that he was unmarried and had no other dependents, that his guardian had on hand more than enough to amply provide for his support, and that petitioner was destitute and without means of support. It was held that the clerk of the superior court, with the approval of the resident judge or presiding judge, had the power, upon proper findings from the evidence, to order guardian to purchase a home in the name of the incompetent for the use of petitioner, and to advance petitioner a reasonable sum monthly for her support. § 35A-1322. Advancement to adult child or grandchild.

When such incompetent person is possessed of a real or personal estate in excess of an amount more than sufficient to abundantly and amply support himself with all the necessaries and suitable comforts of life and has no minor children nor immediate family dependent upon him for support, education or maintenance, such advancements may be made out of such excess of the principal of his estate to such child or grandchild of age for the better promotion or advancement in life or in business of such child or grandchild: Provided, that the order for such advancement shall be approved by the resident or presiding judge of the district who shall find the facts in said order of approval. (1925, c. 136, s. 1; 1977, c. 725, s. 5; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-21, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 3.

Findings Sufficient to Support Order for Advancements. — Finding to the effect that an incompetent was incurably insane, that his estate was greatly in excess of any needs for his support, hospitalization and maintenance, that his adult children were in dire financial need, and that advancements to them from their father's estate under this section would operate for the better promotion and advancement in life of the children, support an order directing advancements to be made to the children out of the surplus estate of the incompetent. Ford v. Security Nat'l Bank, 249 N.C. 141, 105 S.E.2d 421 (1958).

§ 35A-1323. For what purpose and to whom advanced.

Such advancements shall be ordered only for the better promotion in life of such as are of age, or married, and for the maintenance, support and education of such as are under the age of 21 years and unmarried; and in all cases the sums ordered shall be paid to such persons as, in the opinion of the clerk, will most effectually execute the purpose of the advancement. (R.C., c. 57, s. 10; Code, s. 1678; Rev., s. 1901; C.S., s. 2297; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-22, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 3.

Evidence Showing Need and Proper Purpose for Advancements. — Where the impoverished condition of an incompetent's adult children and the adequacy of his estate were not challenged, and while the order for advancements did not restrict the use of the funds to the purchase of a home, the applicants had requested advancements for that purpose, it was held that the evidence demonstrated a need and a proper purpose for advancements, and was sufficient to support the findings and the judgment. Ford v. Security Nat'l Bank, 249 N.C. 141, 105 S.E.2d 421 (1958).

§ 35A-1324. Distributees to be parties to proceeding for advancements.

In every application for such advancements, the guardian of the incompetent person and all such other persons shall be parties as would at that time be entitled to a distributive share of his estate if he were then dead. (R.C., c. 57, s. 11; Code, s. 1679; Rev., s. 1902; C.S., s. 2298; 1977, c. 725, s. 5; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-23, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 3.

In a proceeding requesting an increase in the allowance to the dependent of a permanently insane veteran, all persons who would be entitled to a distributive share of the estate in case of death are necessary parties under this section. Patrick v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 241 N.C. 76, 84 S.E.2d 277 (1954).

§ 35A-1325. Advancements to be equal; accounted for on death.

The clerk, in ordering such advancements, shall, as far as practicable, so order the same as that, on the death of the incompetent person, his estate shall be distributed among his distributees in the same equal manner as if the advancements had been made by the person himself; and on his death every sum advanced to a child or grandchild shall be an advancement, and shall bear interest from the time it may be received. (R.C., c. 57, s. 12; Code, s. 1680; Rev., s. 1903; C.S., s. 2299; 1977, c. 725, s. 5; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

§ 35A-1326. Advancements to those most in need.

When the surplus aforesaid or advancement from the principal estate is not sufficient to make distribution among all the parties, the clerk may select and decree advancement to such of them as may most need the same, and may apportion the sum decreed in such amounts as are expedient and proper. (R.C., c. 57, s. 13; Code, s. 1681; Rev., s. 1904; C.S., s. 2300; 1925, c. 136, s. 2; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

§ 35A-1327. Advancements to be secured against waste.

It is the duty of the clerk to withhold advancements from such persons as will probably waste them, or so to secure the same, when they may have families, that it may be applied to their support and comfort; but any sum so advanced shall be regarded as an advancement to such persons. (R.C., c. 57, s. 14; Code, s. 1682; Rev., s. 1905; C.S., s. 2301; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-26, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 3.

Order Not Reversed Because Advancements Not Secured against Waste. — An order under former § 35-21 would not be held erroneous for want of direction in the order securing the advancements from being wasted, where the finding that the advancements would operate for the better promotion in life of the children was supported by evidence, even though it might later turn out that the advancements were wasted. Ford v. Security Nat'l Bank, 249 N.C. 141, 105 S.E.2d 421 (1958).

§ 35A-1328. Appeal; removal to superior court.

Any person made a party may appeal from any order of the clerk; or may, when the pleadings are finished, require that all further proceedings shall be had in the superior court. (R.C., c. 57, s. 15; Code, s. 1683; Rev., s. 1906; C.S., s. 2302; 1987, c. 550, s. 3.)

§ 35A-1329. Advancements only when incompetence permanent.

No such application shall be allowed under this Article but in cases of such permanent and continued incompetence as that the incompetent person shall be judged by the clerk to be incapable, notwithstanding any lucid intervals, to make advancements with prudence and discretion. (R.C., c. 57, s. 16; Code, s. 1684; Rev., s. 1907; C.S., s. 2303; 1987, c. 550, ss. 3, 3.1.)

§ 35A-1330. Orders suspended upon restoration of competence.

Gifts from Income for Certain Purposes.

§ 35A-1335. Gifts authorized with approval of judge of superior court.

With the approval of the resident judge of the superior court of the district in which the guardian was appointed, upon a duly verified petition the guardian of a person judicially declared to be incompetent may, from the income of the incompetent, make gifts to the State of North Carolina, its agencies, counties or municipalities, or to the United States or its agencies or instrumentalities, or for religious, charitable, literary, scientific, historical, medical or educational purposes, or to individuals including the guardian. References in this Article to the "guardian" include any Trustee appointed by the court under prior law as fiduciary for the incompetent ward's estate. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under § 35-29.1, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 4.

Article Limits Power of Trustee or Guardian to Make Gifts. — Former Articles 5A, 5B, and 5C of Chapter 35 limit the power of a guardian or a trustee to make gifts of the character enumerated therein. He may do so only with the approval of the resident judge of the superior court of the county in which the guardian or trustee was appointed. To secure approval, the guardian or trustee must file a verified petition setting out what authority he wishes and the reasons justifying his request. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

Income or Corpus of Incompetent's Estate Cannot Be Taken Except for His Support or Debts. — A court of equity may not, either in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction or with legislative sanction granted by former §§ 35-29.1, 35-29.4, 35-29.5, 35-29.10, 35-29.11 and 35-29.16, authorize the taking of income or corpus of the estate of an incompetent for a purpose other than the incompetent's own support and the discharge of the incompetent's legal obligations. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 261 N.C. 1, 134 S.E.2d 85 (1964).

Thus, Court May Not Authorize Gift Because It Believes Gift Should Be Made. — To authorize a gift from an incompetent's estate "if the court under all of the circumstances believes that such gift should be made," would permit the court to do that which the incompetent had not done and would not do if sane. Such an order would amount to a taking of property in derogation of incompetent's constitutional rights. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 261 N.C. 1, 134 S.E.2d 85 (1964).

But Proposed Act by Trustee Need Not Enhance Ward's Estate. — No court should authorize a guardian, or trustee, of an estate of an incompetent to act in a manner which will prove detrimental to the estate of his ward; but it does not follow that the proposed action must be one which benefits or enhances the estate of the ward. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

And Gifts of Income or Principal May Be Authorized. — While an incompetent's property may not, either with legislative sanction or court order, be taken for charitable purposes notwithstanding the part not taken is ample for incompetent's needs, it is nonetheless true that courts of equity have authorized the gift of a part of incompetent's income or principal. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 261 N.C. 1, 134 S.E.2d 85 (1964).

On Finding Incompetent Would Probably Have Made Gift if Sane. — A court may authorize a fiduciary to make a gift of a part of the estate of an incompetent only on a finding, on a preponderance of the evidence, at a hearing of which interested parties have notice, that the incompetent, if then of sound mind, would make the gift. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 261 N.C. 1, 134 S.E.2d 85 (1964); In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

What it is necessary to establish is that the act proposed by the trustee of an incompetent is that which it is probable the incompetent would himself have done, or as it is probable he would have acted for himself, if he were of sound mind. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

§ 35A-1336. Prerequisites to approval by judge of gifts for governmental or charitable purposes.

The judge shall not approve gifts from income for governmental or charitable purposes unless it appears to the judge's satisfaction that all of the following apply:

(1) After making the gifts and the payment of federal and State income taxes, the remaining income of the incompetent will be reasonable and adequate to provide for the support, maintenance, comfort and welfare of the incompetent and those legally entitled to support from the incompetent in order to maintain the incompetent and those dependents in the manner to which the incompetent and those dependents are accustomed and in keeping with their station in life.
(2) Each donee is a donee to which a competent donor could make a gift, without limit as to amount, without incurring federal or State gift tax liability.
(3) Each donee is a donee qualified to receive tax deductible gifts under federal and State income tax laws.
(4) The aggregate of the gifts does not exceed the percentage of income fixed by federal law as the maximum deduction allowable for the gifts in computing federal income tax liability. (1963, c. 111, s. 2; 1987, c. 550, s. 4; 1999-270, s. 2.)

§ 35A-1336.1. Prerequisites to approval by judge of gifts to individuals.

The judge shall not approve gifts from income to individuals unless it appears to the judge's satisfaction that both the following requirements are met:

(1) After making the gifts and paying federal and State income taxes, the remaining income of the incompetent will be reasonable and adequate to provide for the support, maintenance, comfort, and welfare of the incompetent and those legally entitled to support from the incompetent in order to maintain the incompetent and those dependents in the manner to which the incompetent and those dependents are accustomed and in keeping with their station in life;
(2) The judge determines that either:
   a. The incompetent, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a paper-writing with the formalities required by the laws of North Carolina for the execution of a valid will, including a paper-writing naming as beneficiary a revocable trust created by the incompetent, and each donee is entitled to one or more specific legacies, bequests, devises, or distributions of specific amounts of money, income, or property under the paper-writing or the revocable trust or both or is a residuary legatee, devisee, or beneficiary designated in the paper-writing or revocable trust or both; or
   b. That so far as is known the incompetent has not, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a will which could be probated upon the death of the incompetent, and each donee is a person who would share in the incompetent's estate, if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of the approval of the gifts; or
   c. The donee is the spouse, parent, descendent of the incompetent, or descendant of the incompetent's parent, and the amount of the gift does not exceed the federal annual gift tax exclusion.

The judge may order that the gifts be made in cash or in specific assets and may order that the gifts be made outright, in trust, under the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act, or otherwise. The judge may also order that the gifts be treated as an advancement of some or all of the amount the donee would otherwise receive at the incompetent's death. (1999-270, s. 3.)

§ 35A-1337. Fact that incompetent had not previously made similar gifts.

The judge shall not withhold his approval merely because the incompetent, prior to becoming incompetent, had not made gifts to the same donees or other gifts similar in amount or type. (1963, c. 111, s. 3; 1987, c. 550, s. 4.)

§ 35A-1338. Validity of gift.

A gift made with the approval of the judge under the provisions of this Article shall be deemed a gift by the incompetent and shall be as valid in all respects as if made by a competent person. (1963, c. 111, s. 4; 1987, c. 550, s. 4.)

Gifts from Principal for Certain Purposes.

§ 35A-1340. Gifts authorized with approval of judge of superior court.

With the approval of the resident judge of the superior court of the district in which the guardian was appointed upon a duly verified petition, the guardian of a person judicially declared to be incompetent may, from the principal of the incompetent's estate, make gifts to the State of North Carolina, its agencies, counties or municipalities, or the United States or its agencies or instrumentalities, or for religious, charitable, literary, scientific, historical, medical or educational purposes, or to individuals including the guardian. The incompetent's estate shall consist of all assets owned by the incompetent, including nonprobate assets. For purposes of this Article, nonprobate assets are those which would not be distributable in accordance with the incompetent's valid probated will or the provisions of Chapter 29 at the incompetent's death. The incompetent's nonprobate estate would include nonprobate assets only. References in this Article to the "guardian" include any Trustee appointed by the court under prior law as fiduciary for the incompetent ward's estate. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-29.5, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 5.

Income or Corpus of Incompetent's Estate Cannot Be Taken Except for His Support or Debts. — A court of equity may not, either in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction or with legislative sanction granted by former §§ 35-29.1, 35-29.4, 35-29.5, 35-29.10, 35-29.11 and 35-29.16, authorize the taking of income or corpus of the estate of an incompetent for a purpose other than the incompetent's own support and the discharge of the incompetent's legal obligations. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 261 N.C. 1, 134 S.E.2d 85 (1964).

§ 35A-1341. Prerequisites to approval by judge of gifts for governmental or charitable purposes.

The judge shall not approve any gifts from principal for governmental or charitable purposes unless it appears to the judge's satisfaction all of the following requirements are met:

(1) The making of the gifts will not leave the incompetent's remaining principal estate insufficient to provide reasonable and adequate income for the support, maintenance, comfort and welfare of the incompetent and those legally entitled to support from the incompetent in order to maintain the incompetent and these dependents in the manner to which the incompetent and those dependents are accustomed and in keeping with their station in life.

(2) Each donee is a donee to which a competent donor could make a gift, without limit as to amount, without incurring federal or State gift tax liability.

(3) Each donee is a donee qualified to receive tax deductible gifts under federal and State income tax laws.

(4) The making of the gifts will not jeopardize the rights of any creditor of the incompetent.

(5) It is improbable that the incompetent will recover competency during his or her lifetime.

(5a) Sufficient credible evidence is presented to the court that the proposed gift is of a nature which the incompetent would have approved prior to being declared incompetent.

(6) Either a. or b. applies:

a. All of the following apply:

1. The incompetent, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a paper-writing with the formalities required by the laws of North Carolina for the execution of a valid will, including a paper-writing naming as beneficiary a revocable trust created by the incompetent.
2. Specific legacies, bequests, devises, or nondiscretionary distributions of specific amounts of money, income or property included in the paper-writing or revocable trust or both, will not be jeopardized by making the gifts.
3. All residuary legatees, devisees and beneficiaries designated in the paper-writing or revocable trust or both, who would take under the paper-writing or revocable trust or both, if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval of the gifts and the paper-writing was probated as the incompetent's will and the spouse, if any, of the incompetent have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for the gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of superior court of the county in which the guardian was appointed, within the 10-day period.

b. Both of the following apply:
1. That so far as is known the incompetent has not prior to being declared incompetent, executed a will which could be probated upon the death of the incompetent; and
2. All persons who would share in the incompetent's intestate estate, if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval, have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for the gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of the superior court, of the county in which the guardian was appointed, within the 10-day period.

(7) If the gift for which approval is sought is of a nonprobate asset, all persons who would share in that nonprobate asset if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for the gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of superior court of the county in which the guardian was appointed within the 10-day period. This notice requirement shall be in addition to the notice requirements contained in G.S. 35A-1341(6)a.3. and (6)b.2. (1963, c. 112, s. 2; 1987, c. 550, s. 5; 1999-270, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-29.6, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 5.

The proceeding under former Article 5B of Chapter 35 is in personam. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

The incompetent and her guardian are the only necessary parties. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

Section Requires Notice to Those Who May Benefit on Incompetent's Death. — Former § 35-29.6 makes a condition precedent to the judge's approval "at least 10 days' written notice that approval for such gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of the superior court, of the county in which the guardian or trustee was appointed," to those named as legatees or devisees, if incompetent has executed a will, or to those who would be heirs and distributees if the incompetent died intestate contemporaneously with the filing of the petition. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

And They Are Given Opportunity to Present Facts to Court. — Former § 35-29.6 recognizes the contingent or potential interest of those who would probably benefit financially by the death of an incompetent; and, because of their interest, notice must be given to them. Those who must have notice are given an opportunity to present to the court facts which will assist the court in determining whether the action proposed by the trustee is detrimental to the estate of the incompetent, or whether the incompetent, if then competent, would probably not act as the trustee proposes to act. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

But They Are Not Parties to Trustee's Proceeding. — Those named as beneficiaries in an incompetent's will have no interest in her properties so long as she lives. They take at her death only such properties as she then owns. They are not parties, and former § 35-29.6 does not purport to make them parties, to a proceeding initiated by the trustee. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

Personal Service of Notice Outside State. — See In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

§ 35A-1341.1. Prerequisites to approval by judge of gifts to individuals.

The judge shall not approve gifts from principal to individuals unless it appears to the judge's satisfaction that all of the following requirements have been met:

(1) Making the gifts will not leave the incompetent's remaining principal estate insufficient to provide reasonable and adequate income for the support, maintenance, comfort, and welfare of the incompetent in order to maintain the incompetent and any dependents legally entitled to support from the incompetent in the manner to which the incompetent and those dependents are accustomed and in keeping with their station in life.

(2) The making of the gifts will not jeopardize the rights of any existing creditor of the incompetent.

(3) It is improbable that the incompetent will recover competency during his or her lifetime.

(4) The judge determines that either a., b., c., or d. applies.

a. All of the following apply:

1. The incompetent, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a paper-writing with the formalities required by the laws of North Carolina for the execution of a valid will, including a paper-writing naming as beneficiary a revocable trust created by the incompetent.

2. Each donee is entitled to one or more specific legacies, bequests, devises, or distributions of specific amounts of money, income, or property under either the paper-writing or revocable trust or both or is a residuary legatee, devisee, or beneficiary designated in the paper-writing or revocable trust or both.

3. The making of the gifts will not jeopardize any specific legacy, bequest, devise, or distribution of specific amounts of money, income, or property.

b. That so far as is known the incompetent has not, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a will which could be probated upon the death of the incompetent, and each donee is a person who would share in the incompetent's intestate estate, if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval of the gifts.

c. The donee is a person who would share in the incompetent's nonprobate estate, if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval.

d. The donee is the spouse, parent, descendant of the incompetent, or descendant of the incompetent's parent, and the amount of the gift does not exceed the federal annual gift tax exclusion.

(5) If the incompetent, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a paper-writing with the formalities required by the laws of North Carolina for the execution of a valid will, including a paper-writing naming as beneficiary a revocable trust created by the incompetent; then all residuary legatees, devisees, and beneficiaries designated in the paper-writing or revocable trust or both, who would take under the paper-writing or revocable trust or both if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval of the gifts and the paper-writing was probated as the incompetent's will, the spouse, if any, of the incompetent and all persons identified in G.S. 35A-1341.1(7) have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for the gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of superior court of the county in which the guardian was appointed, within the 10-day period.

(6) If so far as is known, the incompetent has not, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a will which could be probated upon the death of the incompetent, all persons who would share in the incompetent's estate, if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval, have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for the gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the guardian was appointed, within the 10-day period.

(7) If the gift for which approval is sought is of a nonprobate asset, all persons who would share in that nonprobate asset if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for the gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the guardian was appointed within the 10-day period. This notice requirement shall be in addition to the notice requirements contained in G.S. 35A-1341.1(5) and (6) above.

The judge may order that the gifts be made in cash or in specific assets and may order that the gifts be made outright, in trust, under the North Carolina Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, under the North Carolina Uniform Custodial Trust Act, or otherwise. The judge may also order that the gifts be treated as an advancement of some or all of the amount the donee would otherwise receive at the incompetent's death. (1999-270, s. 6.)

§ 35A-1342. Who deemed specific and residuary legatees and devisees of incompetent under § 35A-1341.

For purposes of G.S. 35A-1341(6)a and G.S. 35A-1341.1(4) and (5), if the paper-writing provides for the residuary estate to be placed in trust for a term of years, or if the paper-writing names as beneficiary a revocable trust created by the incompetent, and the trust or trusts include dispositive provisions which provide that assets continue in trust for a term of years with stated amounts of income payable to designated beneficiaries during the term and stated amounts payable to designated beneficiaries upon termination of the trust or trusts, the designated beneficiaries shall be deemed to be specific legatees, devisees, and beneficiaries and those taking the remaining income of the trust or trusts and, at the end of the term, the remaining principal shall be deemed to be residuary legatees, devisees, and beneficiaries who would take under the paper-writing or revocable trust or both if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval of the gifts. In no case shall any prospective executor or trustee be considered either a specific or residuary legatee, devisee, or beneficiary on the sole basis of prospective service as executor or trustee. (1963, c. 112, s. 3; 1987, c. 550, s. 5; 1999-270, s. 7.)

§ 35A-1343. Notice to minors and incompetents under § 35A-1341 and § 35A-1341.1.

If any person, to whom notice must be given under the provisions of G.S. 35A-1341 and G.S. 35A-1341.1 is a minor or is incompetent, or is an unborn or unascertained beneficiary, then the notice shall be given to his duly appointed guardian or other duly appointed representative: Provided, that if a minor, incompetent, unborn, or unascertained beneficiary has no guardian or representative, then a guardian ad litem shall be appointed by the judge and the guardian ad litem shall be given the notice herein required. (1963, c. 112, s. 4; 1987, c. 550, s. 5; 1999-270, s. 8.)

§ 35A-1344. Objections to proposed gift; fact that incompetent had previously made similar gifts.

If any objection is filed by one to whom notice has been given under the terms of this Article, the clerk shall bring it to the attention of the judge, who shall hear the same, and determine the validity and materiality of such objection and make his order accordingly. If no such objection is filed, the judge shall include a finding to that effect in such order as he may make. The judge shall not withhold his approval merely because the incompetent, prior to becoming incompetent, had not made gifts to the same donees or other gifts similar in amount or type. (1963, c. 112, s. 5; 1987, c. 550, s. 5.)

§ 35A-1345. Validity of gift.

A gift made with the approval of the judge under the provisions of this Article shall be deemed to be a gift made by the incompetent, and shall be as valid in all respects as if made by a competent person. (1963, c. 112, s. 6; 1987, c. 550, s. 5.)

Article 19.

Declaring Revocable Trust Irrevocable and Making Gift of Incompetent's Life Interest Therein.

§ 35A-1350. Declaration and gift for certain purposes authorized with approval of judge of superior court.

When a person has created a revocable trust, reserving the income for life, and thereafter has been judicially declared to be incompetent, the guardian or trustee of such incompetent, with the approval of the resident judge of the superior court of the district in which he was appointed, upon a duly verified petition may declare the trust to be irrevocable and make a gift of the life interest of the incompetent to the State of North Carolina, its agencies, counties or municipalities, or to the United States or its agencies or instrumentalities, or for religious, charitable, literary, scientific, historical, medical or educational purposes. (1963, c. 113, s. 1; 1987, c. 550, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under § 35-29.11, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 6.

Income or Corpus of Incompetent's Estate Cannot Be Taken Except for His Support or Debts. — A court of equity may not, either in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction or with legislative sanction granted by former §§ 35-29.1, 35-29.4, 35-29.5, 35-29.10, 35-29.11 and 35-29.16, authorize the taking of income or corpus of the estate of an incompetent for a purpose other than the incompetent's own support and the discharge of the incompetent's legal obligations. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 261 N.C. 1, 134 S.E.2d 85 (1964).

Modification of Trust Does Not Rewrite Contract. — Modification of a trust by making it irrevocable and donating the income for the life of the incompetent trustor to certain designated charities does not rewrite the contract so as to affect the rights of the ultimate beneficiaries, but merely authorizes the trustees to do those things which the trustor, if competent, would probably have done. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

§ 35A-1351. Prerequisites to approval of gift.

The judge shall not approve the gift unless it appears to his satisfaction that:

(1) It is improbable that the incompetent will recover competency during his or her lifetime;

(2) The estate of the incompetent, after making the gift and after payment of any gift taxes which may be incurred by reason of the declaration of irrevocability, will be sufficient to provide reasonable and adequate income for the support, maintenance, comfort and welfare of the incompetent and those legally entitled to support from the incompetent in order to maintain the incompetent and such dependents in the manner to which the incompetent and such dependents are accustomed and in keeping with their station in life (and in no event less than twice the average, for the five calendar years preceding the calendar year of such gift, of expenditures for the incompetent's support, maintenance, comfort and welfare);

(3) Each donee of any part of the life interest is a donee to which a competent donor could make a gift, without limit as to amount, without incurring federal or State gift tax liability;

(4) Each donee of any part of the life interest is a donee qualified to receive tax deductible gifts under federal and State income tax laws.

(5) Either:

a. 1. The incompetent, prior to being declared incompetent, executed a paper-writing, with the formalities required by the laws of North Carolina for the execution of a valid will;

2. Specific legacies, bequests or devises of specific amounts of money, income or property included in such paper-writing, will not be jeopardized by making such gifts;

3. All residuary legatees and devisees designated in such paper-writing, who would take under the paper-writing if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval of such gifts, and such paper-writing was probated as the incompetent's will and the spouse, if any, of such incompetent have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for such gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of superior court, of the county in which the guardian or trustee was appointed, within the 10-day period; or

b. 1. That so far as is known the incompetent has not prior to being declared incompetent, executed a will which could be probated upon the death of the incompetent; and

2. All persons who would share in the incompetent's estate, if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval, have been given at least 10 days' written notice that approval for such gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of the superior court, of the county in which the guardian or trustee was appointed, within the 10-day period. (1963, c. 113, s. 2; 1987, c. 550, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case cited below was decided under § 35-29.12, which was recodified as this section by Session Laws 1987, c. 550, s. 6.

The proceeding under former Article 5C of Chapter 35 was in personam. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

The incompetent and her guardian are the only necessary parties. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

Section Requires Notice to Those Who May Benefit on Incompetent's Death. — Former § 35-29.12 makes a condition precedent to the judge's approval "at least 10 days' written notice that approval for such gifts will be sought and that objection may be filed with the clerk of the superior court, of the county in which the guardian or trustee was appointed," to those named as legatees or devisees, if incompetent has executed a will, or to those who would be heirs and distributees if the incompetent died intestate contemporaneously with the filing of the petition. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

And They Are Given Opportunity to Present Facts to Court. — Former § 35-29.12 recognizes the contingent or potential interest of those who would probably benefit financially by the death of an incompetent; and, because of their interest, notice must be given to them. Those who must have notice are given an opportunity to present to the court facts which will assist the court in determining whether the action proposed by the trustee is detrimental to the estate of the incompetent, or whether the incompetent, if then competent, would probably not act as the trustee proposes to act. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

But They Are Not Parties to Trustee's Proceeding. — Those named as beneficiaries in an incompetent's will have no interest in her properties so long as she lives. They take at her death only such properties as she then owns. They are not parties, and former § 35-29.12 does not purport to make them parties, to a proceeding initiated by the trustee. In re Trusteeship of Kenan, 262 N.C. 627, 138 S.E.2d 547 (1964).

§ 35A-1352. Who deemed specific and residuary legatees and devisees of incompetent under § 35A-1351.

For purposes of G.S. 35A-1351(5)a of this Article, if such paper-writing provides for the residuary estate to be placed in trust for a term of years, with stated amounts of income payable to designated beneficiaries during the term and stated amounts payable to designated beneficiaries upon termination of the trust, such designated beneficiaries shall be deemed to be specific legatees and devisees and those taking the remaining income of the trust and, at the end of the term, the remaining principal shall be deemed to be residuary legatees or devisees who would take under the paper-writing if the incompetent died contemporaneously with the signing of the order of approval of such gifts. In no case shall any prospective executor or trustee be considered either a specific or residuary legatee or devisee. (1963, c. 113, s. 3; 1987, c. 550, s. 6.)

§ 35A-1353. Notice to minors and incompetents under § 35A-1351.

If any person, to whom notice must be given under the provisions of G.S. 35A-1351(5) of this Article, is a minor or is incompetent, then the notice shall be given to his duly appointed guardian or other duly appointed representative: Provided, that if a minor or incompetent has no such guardian or representative, then a guardian ad litem shall be appointed by the judge and such guardian ad litem shall be given the notice herein required. (1963, c. 113, s. 4; 1987, c. 550, s. 6.)

§ 35A-1355. Validity of declaration and gift.

Such declaration and gift, when made with the approval of the judge and under the provisions of this Article, shall be deemed to be the declaration and gift of the incompetent and shall be as valid in all respects as if made by a competent person. (1963, c. 113, s. 6; 1987, c. 550, s. 6.)

SUBCHAPTER IV. STANDBY GUARDIANS FOR MINOR CHILDREN.

ARTICLE 21.

Standby Guardianship.

§ 35A-1370. Definitions.

For purposes of this Article:

(1) "Alternate standby guardian" means a person identified in either a petition or designation to become the guardian of the person or, when appropriate, the general guardian of a minor child, pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373 or to G.S. 35A-1374, when the person identified as the standby guardian and the designator or petitioner has identified an alternate standby guardian.

(2) "Attending physician" means the physician who has primary responsibility for the treatment and care of the parent or legal guardian. When more than one physician shares this responsibility, or when a physician is acting on the primary physician's behalf, any such physician may act as the attending physician pursuant to this section. When no physician has this responsibility, a physician who is familiar with the petitioner's medical condition may act as the attending physician pursuant to this Article.

(3) "Debilitation" means a chronic and substantial inability, as a result of a physically debilitating illness, disease, or injury, to care for one's minor child.

(4) "Designation" means a written document voluntarily executed by the designator pursuant to this Article.

(5) "Designator" means a person who suffers from a progressive chronic illness or an irreversible fatal illness and who is the biological or adoptive parent, the guardian of the person, or the general guardian of a minor child. A designation under this Article may be made on behalf of a designator by the guardian of the person or the general guardian of the designator.

(6) "Determination of debilitation" means a written determination made by the attending physician which contains the physician's opinion to a reasonable degree of medical certainty regarding the nature, cause, extent, and probable duration of the debilitation of the petitioner or designator.

(7) "Determination of incapacity" means a written determination made by the attending physician which contains the physician's opinion to a reasonable degree of medical certainty regarding the nature, cause, extent, and probable duration of the incapacity of the petitioner or designator.
(8) "Incapacity" means a chronic and substantial inability, as a result of mental or organic impairment, to understand the nature and consequences of decisions concerning the care of one's minor child, and a consequent inability to make these decisions.
(9) "Minor child" means an unemancipated child or children under the age of 18 years.
(10) "Petitioner" means a person who suffers from a progressive chronic illness or an irreversible fatal illness and who is the biological parent, the adoptive parent, the guardian of the person, or the general guardian of a minor child. A proceeding under this Article may be initiated and pursued on behalf of a petitioner by the guardian of the person, the general guardian of the petitioner, or by a person appointed by the clerk of superior court pursuant to Rule 17 of the Rules of Civil Procedure as guardian ad litem for the purpose of initiating and pursuing a proceeding under this Article on behalf of a petitioner.
(11) "Standby guardian" means a person appointed pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373 or designated pursuant to G.S. 35A-1374 to become the guardian of the person or, when appropriate, the general guardian of a minor child upon the death of a petitioner or designator, upon a determination of debilitation or incapacity of a petitioner or designator, or with the consent of a petitioner or designator.
(12) "Triggering event" means an event stated in the designation executed or order entered under this Article which empowers the standby guardian, or the alternate standby guardian, if one is identified and the standby guardian is unwilling or unable to serve, to assume the duties of the office, which event may be the death of a petitioner or designator, incapacity of a petitioner or designator, debilitation of a petitioner or designator with the petitioner's or designator's consent, or the consent of the petitioner or designator, whichever occurs first. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The sections in this Article have been renumbered at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes, the section numbers in the enacting act having been §§ 35A-1370 to 35A-1381.

§ 35A-1371. Jurisdiction; limits.

Notwithstanding the provisions of Subchapter II of this Chapter, the clerk of superior court shall have original jurisdiction for the appointment of a standby guardian for a minor child under this Article. Provided that the clerk shall have no jurisdiction, no standby guardian may be appointed under this Article, and no designation may become effective under this Article when a district court has assumed jurisdiction over the minor child in an action under Chapter 50 of the General Statutes or in an abuse, neglect, or dependency proceeding under Subchapter I of Chapter 7B of the General Statutes, or when a court in another state has assumed such jurisdiction under a comparable statute. (1995, c. 313, s. 1; 1998-202, s. 13(g).)

§ 35A-1372. Standby guardianship; applicability.

This Article provides two methods for appointing a standby guardian: by petition pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373 or by designation pursuant to G.S. 35A-1374. If a standby guardian is unwilling or unable to serve as a standby guardian and the designator or petitioner has identified an alternate standby guardian, then the alternate standby guardian shall become the standby guardian, upon the same conditions as set forth in this Article. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1373. Appointment by petition of standby guardian; petition, notice, hearing, order.

(a) A petitioner shall commence a proceeding under this Article for the appointment of a standby guardian of a minor child by filing a petition with the clerk of superior court of the county in which the minor child resides or is domiciled at the time of filing. A petition filed by a guardian of the person or a general guardian of the minor child who was appointed under this Chapter shall be treated as a motion in the cause in the original guardianship, but the provisions of this section shall otherwise apply.

(b) A petition for the judicial appointment of a standby guardian of a minor child shall:

(1) Identify the petitioner, the minor child, the person designated to be the standby guardian, and the person designated to be the alternate standby guardian, if any;

(2) State that the authority of the standby guardian is to become effective upon the death of the petitioner, upon the incapacity of the petitioner, upon the debilitation of the petitioner with the consent of the petitioner, or upon the petitioner's signing of a written consent stating that the standby guardian's authority is in effect, whichever occurs first;

(3) State that the petitioner suffers from a progressively chronic illness or an irreversible fatal illness, and the basis for such a statement, such as the date and source of a medical diagnosis, without requiring the identification of the illness in question;

(4) State whether there are any lawsuits, in this or any other jurisdiction, involving the minor child and, if so, identify the parties, the case numbers, and the states and counties where filed; and

(5) Be verified by the petitioner in front of a notary public or another person authorized to administer oaths.

(c) A copy of the petition and written notice of the time, date, and place set for a hearing shall be served upon any biological or adoptive parent of the minor child who is not a petitioner, and on any other person the clerk may direct, including the minor child. Service shall be made pursuant to Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, unless the clerk directs otherwise. When service is made by the sheriff, the sheriff shall make such service without demanding his fees in advance. Parties may waive their right to notice of the hearing and the clerk may proceed to consider the petition upon determining that all necessary parties are before the court and agree to have the petition considered.

(d) If at or before the hearing any parent entitled to notice under subsection (c) of this section presents to the clerk a written claim for custody of the minor child, the clerk shall stay further proceedings under this Article pending the filing of a complaint for custody of the minor child under Chapter 50 of the General Statutes and, upon the filing of such a complaint, shall dismiss the petition. If no such complaint is filed within 30 days after the claim is presented, the clerk shall conduct a hearing and enter an order as provided for in this section.

(e) The petitioner's appearance at the hearing shall not be required if the petitioner is medically unable to appear, unless the clerk determines that the petitioner is able with reasonable accommodation to appear and that the interests of justice require that the petitioner be present at the hearing.

(f) At the hearing, the clerk shall receive evidence necessary to determine whether the requirements of this Article for the appointment of a standby guardian have been satisfied. If the clerk finds that the petitioner suffers from a progressive chronic illness or an irreversible fatal illness, that the best interests of the minor child will be promoted by the appointment of a standby guardian of the person or general guardian, and that the standby guardian and the alternate standby guardian, if any, are fit to serve as guardian of the person or general guardian of the minor child, the clerk shall enter an order appointing the standby guardian named in the petition as standby guardian of the person or standby general guardian of the minor child and shall issue letters of appointment to the standby guardian. The order may also appoint the alternate standby guardian named in the petition as the alternate standby guardian of the person or alternate general guardian of the minor child in the event that the person named as standby guardian is unwilling or unable to serve as standby guardian and shall provide that, upon a showing of that unwillingness or inability, letters of appointment will be issued to the alternate standby guardian.

(g) Letters of appointment issued pursuant to this section shall state that the authority of the standby guardian or alternate standby guardian of the person or the standby guardian or alternate standby general guardian is effective upon the receipt by the guardian of a determination of the death of the petitioner, upon receipt of a determination of the incapacity of the petitioner, upon receipt of a determination of the debilitation of the petitioner and the petitioner's consent, whichever occurs first, and shall also provide that the authority of the standby guardian may earlier become effective upon written consent of the petitioner pursuant to subsection (l) of this section.

(h) If at any time prior to the commencement of the authority of the standby guardian the clerk, upon motion of the petitioner or any person entitled to notice under subsection (c) of this section and after hearing, finds that the requirements of subsection (f) of this section are no longer satisfied, the clerk shall rescind the order.

(i) Where the order provides that the authority of the standby guardian is effective upon receipt of a determination of the death of the petitioner, the standby guardian's authority shall commence upon the standby guardian's receipt of proof of death of the petitioner such as a copy of a death certificate or a funeral home receipt. The standby guardian shall file the proof of death in the office of the clerk who entered the order within 90 days of the date of the petitioner's death or the standby guardian's authority may be rescinded by the clerk.

(j) Where the order provides that the authority of the standby guardian is effective upon receipt of a determination of the incapacity of the petitioner, the standby guardian's authority shall commence upon the standby guardian's receipt of a copy of the determination of incapacity made pursuant to G.S. 35A-1375. The standby guardian shall file a copy of the determination of incapacity in the office of the clerk who entered the order within 90 days of the date of the receipt of such determination, or the standby guardian's authority may be rescinded by the clerk.

(k) Where the order provides that the authority of the standby guardian is effective upon receipt of a determination of the debilitation of the petitioner, the standby guardian's authority shall commence upon the standby guardian's receipt of a copy of the determination of debilitation made pursuant to G.S. 35A-1375, as well as a written consent signed by the petitioner. The standby guardian shall file a copy of the determination of debilitation and the written consent in the office of the clerk who entered the order within 90 days of the date of the receipt of such determination, or the standby guardian's authority may be rescinded by the clerk.

(l) Notwithstanding subsections (i), (j), and (k) of this section, a standby guardian's authority shall commence upon the standby guardian's receipt of the petitioner's written consent to such commencement, signed by the petitioner in the presence of two witnesses who are at least 18 years of age, other than the standby guardian or the alternate standby guardian, who shall also sign the writing. Another person may sign the written consent on the petitioner's behalf and at the petitioner's direction if the petitioner is physically unable to do so, provided such consent is signed in the presence of the petitioner and the two witnesses. The standby guardian shall file the written consent in the office of the clerk who entered the order within 90 days of the date of such written consent, or the standby guardian's authority may be rescinded by the clerk.

(m) The petitioner may revoke a standby guardianship created under this section by executing a written revocation, filing it in the office of the clerk who entered the order, and promptly providing the standby guardian with a copy of the revocation.

(n) A person appointed standby guardian pursuant to this section may at any time before the commencement of the person's authority renounce the appointment by executing a written renunciation and filing it with the clerk who entered the order and promptly providing the petitioner with a copy of the renunciation. Upon the filing of a renunciation, the clerk shall issue letters of appointment to the alternate standby guardian, if any. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1374. Appointment by written designation; form.

(a) A designator may designate a standby guardian by means of a written designation, signed by the designator in the presence of two witnesses at least 18 years of age, other than the standby guardian or alternate standby guardian, who shall also sign the writing. Another person may sign the written designation on the behalf of and at the direction of the designator if the designator is physically unable to do so, provided that the designation is signed in the presence of the designator and the two witnesses.

(b) A designation of a standby guardian shall identify the designator, the minor child, the person designated to be the standby guardian, and the person designated to be the alternate standby guardian, if any, and shall indicate that the designator intends for the standby guardian or the alternate standby guardian to become the minor child's guardian in the event that the designator either:

(1) Becomes incapacitated;

(2) Becomes debilitated and consents to the commencement of the standby guardian's authority;

(3) Dies prior to the commencement of a judicial proceeding to appoint a guardian of the person or general guardian of a minor child; or

(4) Consents to the commencement of the standby guardian's authority.

(c) The authority of the standby guardian under a designation shall commence upon the same conditions as set forth in G.S. 35A- 1373(i) through (l).

(d) The standby guardian or, if the standby guardian is unable or unwilling to serve, the alternate standby guardian shall commence a proceeding under this Article to be appointed guardian of the person or general guardian of the minor child by filing a petition with the clerk of superior court of the county in which the minor child resides or is domiciled at the time of filing. The petition shall be filed after receipt of either:

(1) A copy of a determination of incapacity made pursuant to G.S. 35A-1375;

(2) A copy of a determination of debilitation made pursuant to G.S. 35A-1375 and a copy of the designator's written consent to such commencement;

(3) A copy of the designator's written consent to such commencement, made pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373(l); or

(4) Proof of death of the designator, such as a copy of a death certificate or a funeral home receipt.

(e) The standby guardian shall file a petition pursuant to subsection (d) of this section within 90 days of the date of the commencement of the standby guardian's authority under this section, or the standby guardian's authority shall lapse after the expiration of those 90 days, to recommence only upon filing of the petition.

(f) A petition filed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section shall:

(3) If the petition is by a person designated as an alternate standby guardian, state that the person designated as the standby guardian is unwilling or unable to act as standby guardian, and the basis for that statement; and

(4) State whether there are any lawsuits, in this State or any other jurisdiction, involving the minor child and, if so, identify the parties, the case numbers, and the states and counties where filed; and

(5) Be verified by the standby guardian or alternate standby guardian in front of a notary public or another person authorized to administer oaths.

(g) A copy of the petition and written notice of the time, date, and place set for a hearing shall be served upon any biological or adoptive parent of the minor child who is not a designator, and on any other person the clerk may direct, including the minor child. Service shall be made pursuant to Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, unless the clerk directs otherwise. When service is made by the sheriff, the sheriff shall make such service without demanding his fees in advance. Parties may waive their right to notice of the hearing and the clerk may proceed to consider the petition upon determining that all necessary parties are before the court and agree to have the petition considered.

(h) If at or before the hearing any parent entitled to notice under subsection (c) of this section presents to the clerk a written claim for custody of the minor child, the clerk shall stay further proceedings under this Article pending the filing of a complaint for custody of the minor child under Chapter 50 of the General Statutes and, upon the filing of such a complaint, shall dismiss the petition. If no such complaint is filed within 30 days after the claim is presented, the clerk shall conduct a hearing and enter an order as provided for in this section.

(i) At the hearing, the clerk shall receive evidence necessary to determine whether the requirements of this section have been satisfied. The clerk shall enter an order appointing the standby guardian or alternate standby guardian as guardian of the person or general guardian of the minor child if the clerk finds that:

(1) The person was duly designated as a standby guardian or alternate standby guardian;

(2) That (i) there has been a determination of incapacity; (ii) there has been a determination of debilitation and the designator has consented to the commencement of the standby guardian's authority; (iii) the designator has consented to that commencement; or (iv) the designator has died, such information coming from a document, such as a copy of a death certificate or a funeral home receipt;

(3) That the best interests of the minor child will be promoted by the appointment of the person designated as standby guardian or alternate standby guardian as guardian of the person or general guardian of the minor child;

(4) That the standby guardian or alternate standby guardian is fit to serve as guardian of the person or general guardian of the minor child; and

(5) That, if the petition is by a person designated as an alternate standby guardian, the person designated as standby guardian is unwilling or unable to serve as standby guardian.

(j) The designator may revoke a standby guardianship created under this section by:

(1) Notifying the standby guardian in writing of the intent to revoke the standby guardianship prior to the filing of the petition under this section; or

(2) Where the petition has already been filed, by executing a written revocation, filing it in the office of the clerk with whom the petition was filed, and promptly providing the standby guardian with a copy of the written revocation. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

(b) A determination of incapacity or debilitation shall:

(1) Be made by the attending physician to a reasonable degree of medical certainty;

(2) Be in writing; and

(3) Contain the attending physician's opinion regarding the cause and nature of the incapacity or debilitation, as well as its extent and probable duration.

(c) The attending physician shall provide a copy of the determination of incapacity or debilitation to the standby guardian, if the standby guardian's identity is known to the physician.

(d) The standby guardian shall ensure that the petitioner or designator is informed of the commencement of the standby guardian's authority as a result of a determination of incapacity or debilitation and of the possibility of a future suspension of the standby guardian's authority pursuant to G.S. 35A-1376. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1376. Restoration of capacity or ability; suspension of guardianship.

In the event that the authority of the standby guardian becomes effective upon the receipt of a determination of incapacity or debilitation and the petitioner or designator is subsequently restored to capacity or ability to care for the child, the authority of the standby guardian based on that incapacity or debilitation shall be suspended. The attending physician shall provide a copy of the determination of restored capacity or ability to the standby guardian, if the identity of the standby guardian is known to the attending physician. If an order appointing the standby guardian as guardian of the person or general guardian of the minor child has been entered, the standby guardian shall, and the petitioner or designator may, file a copy of the determination of restored capacity or ability in the office of the clerk who entered the order. A determination of restored capacity or ability shall:

(1) Be made by the attending physician to a reasonable degree of medical certainty;
(2) Be in writing; and
(3) Contain the attending physician's opinion regarding the cause and nature of the parent's or legal guardian's restoration to capacity or ability.

Any order appointing the standby guardian as guardian of the person or general guardian of the minor child shall remain in full force and effect, and the authority of the standby guardian shall recommence upon the standby guardian's receipt of a subsequent determination of the petitioner's or designator's incapacity, pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373(j), or upon the standby guardian's receipt of a subsequent determination of debilitation pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373(k), or upon the receipt of proof of death of the petitioner or designator, or upon the written consent of the petitioner or designator, pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373(l). (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1377. Authority concurrent to parental rights.

The commencement of the standby guardian's authority pursuant to a determination of incapacity, determination of debilitation, or written consent shall not itself divest the petitioner or designator of any parental or guardianship rights, but shall confer upon the standby guardian concurrent authority with respect to the minor child. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1378. Powers and duties.

A standby guardian designated pursuant to G.S. 35A-1374 and a guardian of the person or general guardian appointed pursuant to this Article have all of the powers, authority, duties, and responsibilities of a guardian appointed pursuant to Subchapter II of this Chapter. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1379. Appointment of guardian ad litem.

(a) The clerk may appoint a volunteer guardian ad litem, if available, to represent the best interests of the minor child and, where appropriate, express the wishes of the minor child.

(b) The duties of the guardian ad litem, when appointed, shall be to make an investigation to determine the facts, the needs of the minor child and the available resources within the family to meet those needs, and to protect and promote the best interests of the minor child until formally relieved of the responsibility by the clerk.

(c) The court may order the guardian ad litem to conduct an investigation to determine the fitness of the intended standby guardian and alternate standby guardian, if any, to perform the duties of standby guardian. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1380. Bond.

The bond requirements of Article 7 of this Chapter shall apply to a guardian of the person or general guardian appointed pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373 or G.S. 35A-1374, provided that: (i) the clerk need not require a bond if the bond requirement is waived in writing by the petitioner or designator; and (ii) a general guardian appointed pursuant to G.S. 35A-1373 shall not be required to furnish a bond until a triggering event has occurred. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1381. Accounting.

The accounting requirements of Article 10 of this Chapter apply to a general guardian appointed pursuant to this Article. (1995, c. 313, s. 1.)

§ 35A-1382. Termination.

Any standby guardianship created under this Article shall continue until the child reaches 18 years of age unless sooner terminated by order of the clerk who entered the order appointing the standby guardian, by revocation pursuant to this Article, or by renunciation pursuant to this Article. A standby guardianship shall terminate, and the authority of the standby guardian designated pursuant to G.S. 35A-1374 or of a guardian of the person or general guardian appointed pursuant to this Article shall cease, upon the entry of an order of the district court granting custody of the minor child to any other person. § 36A-2. Investment; prudent person rule.

(a) In acquiring, investing, reinvesting, exchanging, retaining, selling, and managing property for the benefit of another, a fiduciary shall observe the standard of judgment and care under the circumstances then prevailing, which an ordinarily prudent person of discretion and intelligence, who is a fiduciary of the property of others, would observe as such fiduciary; and if the fiduciary has special skills or is named a fiduciary on the basis of representations of special skills or expertise, he is under a duty to use those skills. This subsection and subsection (b) of this section do not apply to trusts governed by Article 15 of this Chapter.

(b) Within the limitations of the foregoing standard, a fiduciary is authorized to acquire and retain every kind of property and every kind of investment, including specifically, but without in any way limiting the generality of the foregoing, bonds, debentures, and other corporate or governmental obligations; stocks, preferred or common; real estate mortgages; shares in building and loan associations or savings and loan associations; annual premium or single premium life, endowment, or annuity contracts; and securities of any management type investment company or investment trust registered under the Federal Investment Company Act of 1940, as from time to time amended.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section and Article 15 of this Chapter, the duties of a trustee with respect to acquiring or retaining a contract of insurance upon the life of the settlor, or the lives of the settlor and the settlor's spouse, do not include a duty (i) to determine whether any such contract is or remains a proper investment; (ii) to exercise policy options available under any such contract; or (iii) to diversify any such contract. A trustee is not liable to the beneficiaries of the trust or to any other party for any loss arising from the absence of those duties upon the trustee.

(d) The trustee of a trust described under subsection (c) of this section established prior to October 1, 1995, shall notify the settlor in writing that, unless the settlor provides written notice to the contrary to the trustee within 60 days of the trustee's notice, the provisions of subsection (c) of this section shall apply to the trust. Subsection (c) of this section shall not apply if, within 60 days of the trustee's notice, the settlor notifies the trustee that subsection (c) of this section shall not apply. CASE NOTES

Liability of Executor. — An executor, in performing those duties related to managing the estate's assets, acts as a trustee to beneficiaries of the estate. As such, the executor is liable for the depreciation of assets which an ordinarily prudent fiduciary would not have allowed to occur. Fortune v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 87 N.C. App. 1, 359 S.E.2d 801 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 146, 371 S.E.2d 483 (1988).

Standard Not Superseded by Grant of Discretion. — The prudent man fiduciary standard is not superseded by a grant of discretion in the trust document. Pittman v. Barker, 117 N.C. App. 580, 452 S.E.2d 326, cert. denied, 340 N.C. 261, 456 S.E.2d 833 (1995).

Violation of Standard Shown. — Trustee violated the prudent man standard by failing to balance the investment of the trust's assets between income and growth investments and by favoring the interests of the life beneficiaries over those of the remaindermen. Pittman v. Barker, 117 N.C. App. 580, 452 S.E.2d 326, cert. denied, 340 N.C. 261, 456 S.E.2d 833 (1995).

§ 36A-3. Terms of creating instrument.

(a) Nothing contained in this Article shall be construed as authorizing any departure from the express terms or limitations set forth in any will, agreement, court order, or other instrument creating or defining the fiduciary's powers and duties.

(b) A fiduciary holding funds for investment who is specifically directed or authorized by an instrument creating the fiduciary relationship to retain the stock of a bank or trust company that is a member of a bank holding company currently fully registered under an act of Congress entitled Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as the same may be amended from time to time, shall be considered as being directed or authorized to retain the stock of such bank holding company.

(c) Whenever a fiduciary holding funds for investment is directed, required, authorized, or permitted by an instrument creating the fiduciary relationship to invest in United States government obligations, the fiduciary may, in the absence of an express prohibition in the instrument, invest in and hold such obligations either directly or in the form of interests in a money market mutual fund registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, 15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1, et seq., as from time to time amended, the portfolio of which is limited to United States government obligations and repurchase agreements fully collateralized thereby.

(d) Whenever an instrument reserves to the settlor or vests in any person, including an advisory or investment committee or one or more co-fiduciaries, the authority to direct the making or retention of any investment to the exclusion of the fiduciary or to the exclusion of one or more of several co-fiduciaries, the excluded fiduciary or co-fiduciary who has no discretion in selecting the person authorized to make or retain investments is not liable to the beneficiaries or to the trust for the decisions or actions of the settlor or other person authorized to direct the making or retention of investments. As used in this subsection, the term "person" includes an individual, a corporation, or any legal or commercial entity authorized to hold property or do business in the State. (1973, c. 1277; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1985, c. 538, s. 1; 2001-413, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1985, c. 538, which added subsection (c), provided in s. 2: "This act shall become effective October 1, 1985, and applies to such instruments whether created before or after October 1, 1985."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 4, effective September 14, 2001, and applicable to actions by personal representatives on or after that date, added subsection (d).

(1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

(1) No such order of any clerk of superior court shall be valid and in force until approved by a superior court judge who has jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in that county; and

(2) No such order shall be made, in the case of a petition, until after a hearing, as to which notice of the application shall have been given to all persons interested in such property as required in other special proceedings; and

(2) To review trustees' fees pursuant to G.S. 32-50 and review and settle interim or final and accounts;

(3) To ascertain beneficiaries, to determine any question arising in the administration or distribution of any trust, including questions of construction of trust instruments, and to determine the existence or nonexistence of trusts created other than by will and the existence or nonexistence of any immunity, power, privilege, duty, or right. The clerk, on the clerk's own motion, may determine that a proceeding to determine an issue listed in this subdivision shall be originally heard by a superior court judge.

(b) The management and distribution of a trust estate, submission of accounts and reports to beneficiaries, payment of trustees' fees and other obligations of a trust, acceptance and change of trusteeship, and other aspects of the administration of a trust shall proceed expeditiously, consistent with the terms of the trust, free of judicial intervention and without order, approval, or other action of any court, subject to the jurisdiction of the clerk as invoked by interested parties or as otherwise exercised as provided by law. Nothing in this section shall be construed (i) to confer upon the clerk any authority to regulate or supervise the actions of a trustee except to the extent that the trustee's actions are inconsistent with the provisions of the governing instrument or of State law, or (ii) to confer upon any interested person any additional right, remedy, or cause of action not otherwise conferred by law.

(c) Nothing in this section affects the right of a person to file an action for declaratory relief under the provisions of Article 26 of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. (2001-413, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under prior law.

Jurisdiction of Clerk Is Statutory. — The equitable jurisdiction of the superior courts does not extend to the clerks of court unless expressly given by statute, and this and following sections giving clerks of court a limited power to appoint trustees in certain instances will not be extended to give them jurisdiction of any proceeding unless clearly within the provisions of the statutes. In re Smith, 200 N.C. 272, 156 S.E. 494 (1931).

Special Proceeding to Resign. — A proceeding by a trustee for the purpose of resigning his trust is denominated a special proceeding. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

Order Accepting Resignation Is Interlocutory. — The order of the clerk of the superior court accepting the resignation of a trustee in a special proceeding pursuant to this section is an interlocutory order regardless of whether an appeal is taken therefrom or not, since even in the absence of an appeal former § 36-12 required that such order be approved by the judge of the superior court before it becomes effective. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

The clerk has power to set aside his prior order accepting the resignation of a trustee and appointing a successor when no appeal has been taken and the order has not been approved by the judge of the superior court. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

Subsequent Valid Order Affirmed on Appeal. — Where the clerk of the court in the exercise of his valid discretionary power, has set aside his order accepting the resignation of a trustee, his subsequent valid order entered in proceedings consonant with statutory requirements and approved by the judge of the superior court in the exercise of judgment and discretion, will be affirmed on appeal. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

Appointment by Clerk. — Where a charitable trust is created by a written instrument the court may appoint a trustee, in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction, to execute the trust when the instrument fails to designate one, or the one designated fails or refuses to act, or one may be appointed under the provisions of this section. Ladies Benevolent Soc'y v. Orrell, 195 N.C. 405, 142 S.E. 493 (1928).

Where the trustee appointed by will to administer an active trust dies, the clerk of the superior court is without authority to appoint a successor, since the clerk has no authority to administer an equity unless empowered to do so by statute, and this section authorizes the clerk to appoint a successor trustee only when the former trustee resigns. Cheshire v. First Presbyterian Church, 221 N.C. 205, 19 S.E.2d 855 (1942).

Loss of Unrecorded Order. — A finding by the court that, upon due consideration of the evidence and the available records in the office of the clerk, the order appointing a successor trustee had been approved by the court was sufficient to meet the requirements of this section though the order of approval had been lost without being recorded. State Trust Co. v. Toms, 244 N.C. 645, 94 S.E.2d 806 (1956).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes the repeal of this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-24.1. Trust proceedings; venue.

(a) If the trustee is required to account to the clerk, then unless the terms of the governing instrument provide otherwise, venue for proceedings under G.S. 36A-23.1 involving trusts is the place where the accountings are filed.

(b) If the trustee is not required to account to the clerk, then unless the terms of the governing instrument provide otherwise, venue for proceedings under G.S. 36A-23.1 involving trusts is in any county of this State in which the trust has its principal place of administration or where any beneficiary resides.

(c) Unless otherwise designated in the governing instrument, the principal place of administration of the trust is the trustee's usual place of business where the records pertaining to the trust are kept, or at the trustee's residence if the trustee has no such place of business. In the case of cotrustees, the principal place of administration, if not otherwise designated in the governing instrument, is:

(1) The usual place of business of the corporate trustee if there is but one corporate or cotrustee;

(2) The usual place of business or residence of any of the cotrustees. (2001-413, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes the repeal of this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-25.1. Trust proceedings; dismissal of matters relating to foreign trusts.

The clerk of superior court shall not, over the objection of a party, entertain proceedings under G.S. 36A-23.1 involving a trust having its principal place of administration in another state, except:

(1) When all appropriate parties could not be bound by litigation in the courts of the state in which the trust had its principal place of administration; or

(2) When the interests of justice otherwise would be seriously impaired.

The clerk may condition a stay or dismissal of a proceeding under this section on the consent of any party to jurisdiction of the state in which the trust has its principal place of administration, or the clerk may grant a continuance or enter any other appropriate order. (2001-413, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes the repeal of this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-26.1. Trust proceedings; necessary parties.

Proceedings under G.S. 36A-23.1 are initiated by filing a petition or complaint in the office of the clerk of superior court. Upon the filing of the petition, the clerk shall docket the cause as an estate matter. All known beneficiaries, trustees, or cotrustees not joined as petitioners shall be joined as respondents. The clerk shall issue the summons for the respondents. The clerk may order notification of additional persons. An order is valid as to all persons who are given notice of the proceeding even if all interested persons are not notified. The beneficiaries, creditors, or any other persons interested in the trust estate have the right to answer the petition and to offer evidence against granting the petition. The clerk shall then proceed to hear and determine the matter as provided for in G.S. 1-301.3. (2001-413, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-26.2. Waiver of notice.

An interested person, or a person representing an interested person as provided in G.S. 36A-26.3, may waive notice by a writing signed by the person or the person's attorney and filed in the proceeding. (2001-413, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-26.3. When parties represented by others.

In proceedings involving trusts, the following rules apply:

(1) Interests to be affected shall be described in pleadings that give reasonable information to interested persons by name or class, by reference to the instrument creating the interests, or in some other appropriate manner.

(2) Interested persons shall be represented by others in the following cases:

a. The sole holder or all coholders of a power of revocation or a presently exercisable general power of appointment, including one in the form of a power of amendment, shall represent other persons to the extent that their interests, as objects, takers in default, or otherwise, are subject to the power.

b. If the clerk finds that there is no conflict of interest between the interested person and the person representing the interested person, or among persons represented, a guardian of the estate shall represent the person whose estate the guardian controls; a guardian of the person shall represent the ward if no guardian of the ward's estate has been appointed; a trustee shall represent beneficiaries of the trust in proceedings to probate a will establishing or adding to the trust, to review the acts or accounts of a prior fiduciary, and in other proceedings involving creditors or other third parties; and a personal representative shall represent persons interested in the undistributed assets of the decedent's estate in actions or proceedings by or against the estate. If there is no conflict of interest and no guardian of the estate or guardian of the person has been appointed, a parent shall represent a minor child.

c. If the clerk finds that another party has an interest in the proceeding substantially identical to the interest of an unborn or unascertained person who is not otherwise represented, that party shall represent the unborn or unascertained person.

d. At any point in a proceeding, a clerk shall allow an attorney-in-fact to represent the attorney-in-fact's principal, provided that, if the principal is incapacitated, the power of attorney is durable as defined in G.S. 32A-8, and provided that the power of attorney grants to the attorney-in-fact either (i) the authority to do, execute, or perform any act that the principal might or could do or otherwise evidences the principal's intent to give the attorney-in-fact full power to handle the principal's affairs or deal with the principal's property; (ii) the powers described under G.S. 32A-2(2) and G.S. 32A-2(8) and, if interests in real property are affected, the powers described in G.S. 32A-2(1); or (iii) other direct or indirect authority the clerk deems sufficient in the clerk's discretion.

(3) At any point in the proceeding, the clerk may appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the interest of a minor, an incapacitated, unborn, or unascertained person, or a person whose identity is unknown, if the clerk determines that representation of the interest otherwise would be inadequate. If not precluded by a conflict of interest, a guardian ad litem may be appointed to represent several persons or interests. The clerk shall set forth the clerk's reasons for appointing a guardian ad litem as a part of the record of the proceedings.

Nothing in this section authorizes the disbursement of funds distributable to an interested person to a person authorized to represent that person under this section. (2001-413, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-27. Appeal.

Any party in interest may appeal from the decision of the clerk to a superior court judge as provided for estate matters in G.S. 1-301.3. (1911, c. 39, s. 4; C.S., s. 4027; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1999-216, s. 8; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 8, effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to the act that are entered on or after that date, rewrote the section.

Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, deleted "stay effected by appeal" from the end of the section catchline, and rewrote the section.

§ 36A-28: Repealed by Session Laws 1999-216, s. 2, effective January 1, 2000.

Cross References. — For provisions similar to the subject matter of this section, see § 1-301.3.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 23, provides that the act is effective January 1, 2000 and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to the act that are entered on or after that date.

§ 36A-29. Final accounting before resignation.

If the trustee is required to account to the clerk of superior court, then unless the terms ofthe governing instrument provide otherwise, no trustee shall be permitted to resign as trustee until a final account of the trust estate is filed with the clerk, and until the court shall be satisfied that the account is true and correct. (1911, c. 39, s. 6; C.S., s. 4029; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, rewrote the section.

§ 36A-30: Repealed by Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes the repeal of this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-31. When bond required.

A trustee need not provide bond to secure performance of the trustee's duties unless required by the terms of the governing instrument, reasonably requested by a beneficiary, or found by the clerk to be necessary to protect the interests of beneficiaries who are not able to protect themselves and whose interests otherwise are not adequately represented. However, in no event shall bond be required if the governing instrument directs otherwise. On petition of the trustee or other interested person, the clerk may excuse a requirement of bond, reduce the amount of the bond, release the surety, or permit the substitution of another bond with the same or different sureties. If the governing instrument is silent as to the requirement of a bond and the clerk finds that no bond is necessary, or if the clerk excuses or reduces the bond requirement, the clerk's decision must be approved by a superior court judge unless all beneficiaries have been notified of the decision. If bond is required, it shall be in a sum double the value of the personal property to come into the trustee's hands when bond is executed by a personal surety, and in an amount not less than one and one-fourth times the value of all personal property of the trust estate when the bond is secured by a suretyship bond executed by a corporate surety company authorized by the Commissioner of Insurance to do business in this State, provided that the clerk of superior court, when the value of the personal property exceeds one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), may accept bond in an amount equal to the value of the personal property plus ten percent (10%) thereof, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the trustee's duties and for the payment to the persons entitled to receive all moneys, assets, or other things of value which may come into the trustee's hands. All bonds executed under the provisions of this Article shall be filed with the clerk. (1911, c. 39, s. 7; C.S., s. 4031; 1951, c. 264; 1965, c. 1177, s. 1; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 2001-413, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Laches in Objecting to Lack of Bond. — Failure of order appointing successor trustee to include provision for the giving of a bond could not be raised by beneficiaries of the trust 16 years after the order was entered. State Trust Co. v. Toms, 244 N.C. 645, 94 S.E.2d 806 (1956), decided under prior law.

§ 36A-32. Rights and duties devolve on successor.

A successor trustee shall succeed to all the rights, powers, and privileges, and shall be subject to all the duties, liabilities, and responsibilities that were imposed upon the original trustee unless a contrary intent appears from the governing instrument. (1911, c. 39, s. 8; C.S., s. 4032; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, substituted "Upon the acceptance by the court of the resignation of any trustee, and upon the appointment by the court of his successor in the manner provided by this Article" for "a" at the beginning of the section, and substituted "governing instrument" for "creating instrument" at the end thereof.

CASE NOTES

Cited in Freer v. Weinstein, 91 N.C. App. 138, 370 S.E.2d 860 (1988).

§ 36A-33. Appointment of successor trustee on clerk's own motion.

Unless the governing instrument provides otherwise, if the trustee is required to account to the clerk of court, nothing in this Article shall be construed to limit the authority of the clerk to appoint a successor trustee to a deceased or incapacitated trustee upon the clerk's own motion. (1953, c. 1255; 1965, c. 1177, s. 2; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1999-118, s. 2; 1999-216, s. 9; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 9, effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to the act that are entered on or after that date, in the last sentence of the first paragraph, substituted "order or judgment" for "decision" and substituted "Article 27A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes" for "G.S. 36A-27 and 36A-28."

Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, rewrote the section.

CASE NOTES

Appointment Prior to Effective Date of Section. — Prior to the enactment of former § 36-18.1 (now this section) a clerk of the superior court had no power to appoint successor trustees of a charitable trust such authority being vested solely in the superior court under former § 36-21 (now § 36A-49) and not in the respective clerks thereof. Mast v. Blackburn, 248 N.C. 231, 102 S.E.2d 812 (1958), decided under prior law.

The appointment by the clerk of successor trustees of a charitable trust in ex parte proceeding prior to the effective date of former § 36-18.1 (now this section) section is void, and such appointees may not maintain an action to restrain others from interfering with their asserted rights as trustees, but successor trustees may be appointed by the judge of the superior court nunc pro tunc under former § 36-21 (now § 36A-49) or by the clerk under this section. Mast v. Blackburn, 248 N.C. 231, 102 S.E.2d 812 (1958), decided under prior law.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes the repeal of these sections effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-36. Appointment of special trustee.

If it appears necessary to the protection of the trust estate, the clerk of superior court having jurisdiction over the administration of the trust may appoint a special trustee until a successor trustee can be appointed or, where a trust has terminated, to distribute the assets. A special trustee may be appointed without notice and may be removed whenever the court so orders. The special trustee shall give such bond, if any, as the court may require and shall have the powers conferred by the order of appointment. (1977, c. 502, s. 2; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, substituted "over the administration" for "of the administration" in the first sentence.

§ 36A-37. Consolidation, merger, reorganization, reincorporation, or transfer of assets and liabilities by a corporate trustee.

Whenever any corporate trustee doing business in this State shall consolidate or merge with or shall sell to and transfer its assets and liabilities to any other corporation, or where such corporate trustee is in any manner reorganized or reincorporated, all existing rights, powers, duties, and liabilities of such consolidating, merging, transferring, reorganizing or reincorporating corporation as trustee shall, upon the effective date of such consolidation, merger, reorganization or reincorporation, or sale and transfer, vest in and devolve upon the transferee corporation or the consolidated, merged, reorganized or reincorporated corporation in the manner prescribed in G.S. 53-17. (1977, c. 502, s. 2; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, inserted a comma following "where such corporate trustee is in any manner reorganized or reincorporated."

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes the repeal of this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§ 36A-39. Powers of cotrustees.

Unless otherwise provided in the governing instrument, if one of several trustees dies, resigns, or is removed, the remaining trustees shall have all rights, title, and powers of all the original trustees. If the governing instrument manifests an intent that a successor trustee be appointed to fill a vacancy, the remaining trustees may exercise the powers of all the original trustees until such time as a successor is appointed, except those powers which the remaining trustees are prohibited from exercising under the governing instrument or by law. (1977, c. 502, s. 2; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, twice substituted "governing instrument" for "creating instrument", and at the end substituted "appointed, except those powers which the remaining trustees are prohibited from exercising under the governing instrument or by law" for "appointed".

§ 36A-40. Vesting of title.

A special or successor trustee is vested with the title of the predecessor trustee. A predecessor trustee shall execute such documents transferring title to trust property as may be appropriate to facilitate administration of the trust and upon the predecessor trustee's failure to do so, the clerk may order the predecessor trustee to execute such documents, or the clerk may transfer title. (1977, c. 502, s. 2; 2001-413, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 1, effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date, rewrote the section.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2001-413, s. 10, makes the repeal of this section effective January 1, 2002, and applicable to all trustees covered by the provisions of Article 36A of the General Statutes, whether administering trusts established before, on or after that date.

§§ 36A-42 through 36A-46: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 4.

Charitable Trusts.

§ 36A-47. Trustees to file accounts; exceptions.

When real or personal property has been granted by deed, will, or otherwise, for such charitable purposes as are allowed by law, it shall be the duty of those to whom are confided the management of the property and the execution of the trust, to file in writing annually a full and particular account thereof with the clerk of the superior court of the county where the charity is to take effect.

This section shall not apply to real or personal property granted by deed, will or otherwise in trust or any other manner for the use and benefit of churches, hospitals, educational institutions and organizations or other incorporated or unincorporated religious and charitable institutions; provided, however, all trusts for the benefit of churches, hospitals and charitable institutions may be required to file such account upon the request of the clerk of the superior court or the verified written request of an interested citizen when in the opinion of the clerk of the superior court such request is bona fide and the interest of the public would be promoted by the filing of such report. (43 Eliz., c. 4; 1832, c. 14, s. 1; R.C., c. 18, s. 1; Code, s. 2342; Rev., s. 3922; C.S., s. 4033; 1951, c. 1008, s. 1; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

The policy of protecting charitable trusts is repeatedly declared throughout the statutory provisions of this Chapter. Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

Policy Is to Preserve Intent of Testator or Donor. — The public policy of North Carolina is to preserve, to the fullest extent possible, the manifested intention of a testator or donor to bestow a gift for charitable purposes. Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

§ 36A-48. Action for account; court to enforce trust.

If G.S. 36A-47 be not complied with, or there is reason to believe that the property has been mismanaged through negligence or fraud, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court in his discretion to give notice thereof to the Attorney General or district attorney who represents the State in the superior court for that county; and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General or such district attorney upon notice from the clerk or upon his own motion to bring an action in the name of the State against the grantees, executors, or trustees of the charitable fund, calling on them to render a full and minute account of their proceedings in relation to the administration of the fund and the execution of the trust. The Attorney General or district attorney may also, at the suggestion of two reputable citizens, commence an action as aforesaid, and, in either case, the court may make such order and decree as shall seem best calculated to enforce the performance of the trust.

In furtherance of his responsibilities in the area of charitable trusts the Attorney General may request the result or report of any investigation or audit conducted by any local, State or federal agency. CASE NOTES

The trustees of a charitable trust who violate its provisions are subject to the procedure prescribed by this section, and where the trust is created by will the trust estate is not forfeited in favor of a residuary legatee solely upon the ground that the moneys derived have been diverted to other uses than the testator intended. Humphrey v. Board of Trustees, 203 N.C. 201, 165 S.E. 547 (1932), decided under prior law.

Negligence or Fraud in Mismanagement of Trust. — In the absence of a showing of special interest, a party seeking enforcement of a charitable trust should have the Attorney General or district attorney commence an action pursuant to the provisions of this section when it appears that the trust is being mismanaged through negligence or fraud. Kania v. Chatham, 297 N.C. 290, 254 S.E.2d 528 (1979).

§ 36A-49. Not void for indefiniteness; title in trustee; vacancies.

No gift, grant, bequest or devise, whether in trust or otherwise, to religious, educational, charitable or benevolent uses or for the purpose of providing for the care or maintenance of any part of any cemetery, public or private, shall be invalid by reason of any indefiniteness or uncertainty of the objects or beneficiaries of such trust, or because said instrument confers upon the trustee or trustees discretionary powers in the selection and designation of the objects or beneficiaries of such trust or in carrying out the purpose thereof, or by reason of the same in contravening any statute or rule against perpetuities. If a trustee or trustees are named in the instrument creating such a gift, grant, bequest or devise, the legal title to the property given, granted, bequeathed or devised for such purpose shall vest in such trustee or trustees and its or their successor or successors duly appointed in accordance with the terms of such instrument. If no trustee or trustees be named in said instrument, or if a vacancy or vacancies shall occur in the trusteeship, and no method is provided in such instrument for filling such vacancy or vacancies, then the clerk of superior court of the proper county shall appoint a trustee or trustees, pursuant to G.S. 36A-23, to execute said trust in accordance with the true intent and meaning of the instrument creating the same. Such trustee or trustees when so appointed shall be vested with all the power and authority, discretionary or otherwise, conferred by such instrument. (1925, c. 264, s. 1; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases below were decided under prior law.

The rule against perpetuities does not apply to charitable trusts. Penick v. Bank of Wadesboro, 218 N.C. 686, 12 S.E.2d 253 (1940); American Trust Co. v. Williamson, 228 N.C. 458, 46 S.E.2d 104 (1948); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. John Thomasson Constr. Co., 275 N.C. 399, 168 S.E.2d 358 (1969).

Charitable trusts are not subject to the rule against perpetuities, this section being merely declaratory of the existing law, and limitations over from one charity to another may be made to take effect after the period prescribed by the rule against perpetuities. Williams v. Williams, 215 N.C. 739, 3 S.E.2d 334 (1939).

Restraints on Alienation of Property Are Not Void. — North Carolina has tacitly recognized the right of a donor to restrain alienation of property in charitable trusts since it recognizes the right of the court, in its equitable jurisdiction, to order the sale of trust property under certain conditions, even when the trust forbids the trustee to mortgage or sell. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. John Thomasson Constr. Co., 275 N.C. 399, 168 S.E.2d 358 (1969).

Charitable trusts are exceptions to the rule that a restraint on alienation is void. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. John Thomasson Constr. Co., 275 N.C. 399, 168 S.E.2d 358 (1969).

Equity Courts May Modify Terms of Charitable Trust. — Courts in the exercise of their equitable jurisdiction may modify the terms of a charitable trust when it appears that some exigency, contingency, or emergency not anticipated by the trustor has arisen requiring a disregard of a specific provision of the trust in order to preserve the trust estate or protect the cestuis. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. John Thomasson Constr. Co., 275 N.C. 399, 168 S.E.2d 358 (1969).

Court May Order Real Property Sold and Reinvested. — In order to accomplish the ultimate purpose or intent of the trustor, the court may order real property sold and reinvested in other property when a change in circumstances makes such sale necessary to accomplish the purposes of the trust, even though the trust forbids the trustees to mortgage or sell the property. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. John Thomasson Constr. Co., 275 N.C. 399, 168 S.E.2d 358 (1969).

Courts of equity have long exercised the jurisdiction to sell property devised for charitable uses, where, on account of changed conditions, the charity would fail or its usefulness would be materially impaired without a sale. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. John Thomasson Constr. Co., 275 N.C. 399, 168 S.E.2d 358 (1969).

Appointment of Trustee upon Occurrence of Vacancy. — Where land is conveyed to trustees and their successors for specified charitable purposes, the court may appoint trustees upon failure of the successors to the original trustees, since equity will not permit a trust to fail for want of a trustee, but said trustees should be appointed by the court upon proper application. Lassiter v. Jones, 215 N.C. 298, 1 S.E.2d 845 (1939).

Trusts Held Valid. — A devise of all the income and profits of lands in trust for a charitable organization of a certain church "to be used by the stewards of the church in defraying the expenses of the institution" is a sufficient designation of the stewards of that church as trustees for the execution of the trust contemplated by the instrument, and to vest in them the title and right of possession for its purposes. Ladies Benevolent Soc'y v. Orrell, 195 N.C. 405, 142 S.E. 493 (1928).

Devise establishing trust for the advancement of a religious denomination held not void for indefiniteness. Williams v. Williams, 215 N.C. 739, 3 S.E.2d 334 (1939).

A gift to the trustees of a named church, in trust for the home and foreign missions and benevolent causes of that church, was held valid under this section and good as against the contention that no cause was named capable of enforcing a lawful claim, as each benevolent cause supported by that church had an interest in the devise. King v. Richardson, 46 F. Supp. 510 (M.D.N.C. 1942), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 136 F.2d 849 (4th Cir. 1943).

Trust Held Invalid. — Bequest of a certain sum to be held in trust, and paid out in 20 years "to such corporations or associations of individuals as will in their judgment best promote the cause of preventing cruelty to animals in the vicinity of Asheville," held void for uncertainty. Woodcock v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 214 N.C. 224, 199 S.E. 20 (1938).

Devise Giving Trustees Power to Convey. — A devise of property in trust subject to an intervening life estate, with direction to the trustees to keep the principal invested and use the proceeds for purposes designated, gives the trustees the power to convey the real estate in fee, since the right to invest and use the proceeds necessarily implies the power to convert into proceeds by sale. Hall v. Wardwell, 228 N.C. 562, 46 S.E.2d 556 (1948).

Details of Administration May Be Left to Trustee. — A charity in its legal sense is a gift to be applied consistently with existing laws for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons, and it is the policy of this State, as indicated by our statutes, not to declare such gift void because created for the benefit of an indefinite class, and if the founder describes the general nature of the charitable trust he may leave details of its administration to duly appointed trustees. Whitsett v. Clapp, 200 N.C. 647, 158 S.E. 183 (1931).

§ 36A-50. Trusts created in other states valid.

Every such religious, educational or charitable trust created by any person domiciled in another state, which shall be valid under the laws of the state of the domicile of such creator or donor, shall be deemed and held in all respects valid under the laws of this State, even though one or more of the trustees named in the instrument creating said trust shall be domiciled in another state or one or more of the beneficiaries named in said trust shall reside or be located in a foreign state. (1925, c. 264, s. 2; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-51. Application of § 36A-50.

G.S. 36A-50 shall apply to all trusts heretofore or hereafter created in which one or more of the beneficiaries or objects of such trust shall reside or be located in this State. (1925, c. 264, s. 3; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-52. Gifts, etc., for religious, educational, charitable or benevolent uses or purposes.

(a) Declaration of Policy. — It is hereby declared to be the policy of the State of North Carolina that gifts, transfers, grants, bequests, and devises for religious, educational, charitable, or benevolent uses or purposes, or for some or all of such uses or purposes, are and shall be valid, notwithstanding the fact that any such gift, transfer, grant, bequest, or devise shall be in general terms, and this section shall be construed liberally to effect the policy herein declared.

(b) No Gift, Transfer, Etc., Invalid for Indefiniteness. — No gift, transfer, grant, bequest, or devise of property or income or both, in trust or otherwise, for religious, educational, charitable, or benevolent purposes, or for some or all of such purposes, is or shall be void or invalid because such gift, transfer, grant, bequest, or devise is in general terms, or is uncertain as to the specific purposes, objects, or beneficiaries thereof, or because the trustee, donee, transferee, grantee, legatee, or devisee, or some or all of them, is given no specific instructions, powers, or duties as to the manner or means of affecting such purposes. When any such gift, transfer, grant, bequest, or devise has been or shall be made in general terms the trustee, donee, transferee, grantee, legatee, or devisee, or other person, corporation, association, or entity charged with carrying such purposes into effect, shall have the right and power: To prescribe or to select from time to time one or more specific objects or purposes for which any trust or any property or income shall be held and administered; to select or to create the machinery for the accomplishment of such objects and purposes, selected as hereinabove provided, or as provided by the donor, transferor, grantor, or testator, including, by way of illustration but not of limitation, the accomplishment of such objects and purposes by the acts of such trustee or trustees, donee, transferee, grantee, legatee, or devisee, or their agents or servants, or by the creation of corporations or associations or other legal entities for such purpose, or by making grants to corporations, associations, or other organizations then existing, or to be organized, through and by which such purposes can or may be accomplished, or by some or all of the said means of accomplishment, or any other means of accomplishment not prohibited by law.

(c) Enforcement. — Any gift, transfer, grant, bequest, or devise for religious, educational, charitable, or benevolent uses or purposes which is or shall be valid under the provisions of this section may be enforced in a suit for a writ of mandamus by the Attorney General of the State of North Carolina in any court of the State having original jurisdiction in equity, and such court shall have the power to enter judgment requiring the trustee, donee, transferee, grantee, legatee, or devisee, as the case may be, to make such selection as may be required of the purposes for which the property or income, or both, shall be applied, and the means, method, and manner of applying the same. The remedy for enforcement as herein provided is in addition to any other means of enforcement now in existence or which may be hereafter provided for by act of the General Assembly.

(d) Construction with Other Acts. — This section is in addition to any prior act or acts of the General Assembly adopted for the purpose of preserving and sustaining any gift, transfer, grant, bequest, or devise for religious, educational, charitable, or benevolent uses or purposes, and any such prior act or acts or any part thereof which will aid the provisions of this section in sustaining and preserving any such gift, transfer, grant, bequest, or devise shall be read and construed in conjunction herewith. (1947, c. 630, ss. 1-4; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1993, c. 553, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For discussion of this section, see 25 N.C.L. Rev. 476 (1947).

As to the doctrine of cy pres in North Carolina, see 27 N.C.L. Rev. 591 (1949).

CASE NOTES

The General Assembly acted within its competence in enacting this section. Banner v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 266 N.C. 337, 146 S.E.2d 89 (1966), decided under prior law.

Funds Turned Over to National Charity by County Chapter. — Where a county chapter of a national charity was required to turn over surplus funds to the national office, such funds were not impressed with a trust restricting use of the money to care of persons in the county, since the county chapter agreed to be governed by national regulations and the national organization did not mislead the county chapter into a belief that a certain percentage of funds would be retained within the county. National Found. v. First Nat'l Bank, 288 F.2d 831 (4th Cir. 1961), decided under prior law.

§ 36A-53. Charitable Trusts Administration Act.

(a) If a trust for charity is or becomes illegal, or impossible or impracticable of fulfillment or if a devise or bequest for charity, at the time it was intended to become effective is illegal, or impossible or impracticable of fulfillment, and if the settlor, or testator, manifested a general intention to devote the property to charity, any judge of the superior court may, on application of any trustee, executor, administrator or any interested party, or the Attorney General, order an administration of the trust, devise or bequest as nearly as possible to fulfill the manifested general charitable intention of the settlor or testator. In every such proceeding, the Attorney General, as representative of the public interest, shall be notified and given an opportunity to be heard. This section shall not be applicable if the settlor or testator has provided, either directly or indirectly, for an alternative plan in the event the charitable trust, devise or bequest is or becomes illegal, impossible or impracticable of fulfillment. However, if the alternative plan is also a charitable trust or devise or bequest for charity and such trust, devise or bequest for charity fails, the intention shown in the original plan shall prevail in the application of this section.

(b) If a federal estate tax deduction is not allowable at the time of a decedent's death because of the failure of an interest in property which passes from the decedent under a will or trust to a person, or for a use, described in section 2055(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, to meet the requirements of subsections 2055(e)(2)(A) or (B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, then in order that such deduction shall nevertheless be allowable under section 2055(e)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, any judge of the superior court may, on application of any trustee, executor, administrator or any interested party and either (i) with the written consent of the charitable beneficiaries, the noncharitable beneficiaries not under any legal disability, and duly appointed guardians or guardians ad litem acting on behalf of any beneficiaries under legal disability, or (ii) upon a finding that the interest of such beneficiaries is substantially preserved, order an amendment to the trust so that the remainder interest is in a trust which is a charitable remainder annuity trust, a charitable remainder unitrust (as those terms are described in section 664 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) or a pooled income fund (as that term is described in section 642(c)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), or so that any other interest of a charitable beneficiary is in the form of a guaranteed annuity or is a fixed percentage distributed yearly of the fair market value of the property (to be determined yearly), in accordance with the provisions of section 2055(e)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. In every such proceeding, the Attorney General, as representative of the public interest, shall be notified, and given an opportunity to be heard.

(c) The words "charity" and "charitable," as used in this section shall include, but shall not be limited to, any eleemosynary, religious, benevolent, educational, scientific, or literary purpose.

(d) The words "impracticable of fulfillment," as used in this section shall include, but shall not be limited to, the failure of any trust for charity, testamentary or inter vivos, (including, without limitation, trusts described in section 509 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws and charitable remainder trusts described in section 664 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws) to include, if required to do so by section 508(e) or section 4947(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws, the provisions relating to governing instruments set forth in section 508(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws. (1967, c. 119; 1971, c. 1136, s. 2; 1975, c. 552; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1979, c. 772; 1981, c. 546; 1991, c. 747, s. 3; c. 761, s. 37.5.)

Editor's Note. — The Special Report of the General Statutes Commission on Chapter 119, Session Laws 1967, which enacted former § 36-23.2, provided in part as follows:

"This section is based largely upon the Model Act Concerning the Administration of Charitable Trusts, Devises and Bequests, which was prepared by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

"This section will meet the problem which exists when the person who creates a charitable trust, bequest or devise is dead or otherwise unable to modify the gift to meet unforeseen changes in the circumstances.

"This section applies only to cases of charitable gifts, created by trust or will, which fail, and not to trusts, devises or bequests created for private purposes.

"The application of this section is limited to those cases in which no provision for an alternative plan has been made, and a person creating a charitable trust, bequest or devise is free, as he has always been, to provide for the disposition of the property and prevent the court's having to make the determination.

"The definition of the words "charity" and "charitable" is not limited to those particular purposes listed in this section."

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under prior law.

Section Sanctions and Defines Public Policy. — It has long been a strong public policy that, if possible, gifts for charitable purposes should not fail because of unforeseen events, but that the courts should assist in carrying out charitable purposes. This section lends statutory sanction and definition to that policy. Special Report of the General Statutes Commission on Chapter 119, Session Laws 1967; Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

Legislative Intent. — This section represents an obvious intent on the part of the legislature to invest the superior courts of this State with the power of cy pres. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

The cy pres doctrine is the rule which courts of equity use when a gift given for a particular charitable purpose cannot be applied according to the exact intention of the donor. In such cases, the court will direct that the gift be applied as nearly as possible in conformity with the original purpose and intent of the testator. Cy pres literally means "as near as possible." Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

Courts May Apply Cy Pres Doctrine. — This section expressly gives the courts the power to apply the cy pres doctrine to charitable trusts. YWCA v. Morgan, 281 N.C. 485, 189 S.E.2d 169 (1972).

The cy pres doctrine came into the law of North Carolina in 1967 when this section became effective. Wilson v. First Presbyterian Church, 284 N.C. 284, 200 S.E.2d 769 (1973).

Prior Law. — Before October 1, 1967 North Carolina rejected the cy pres doctrine as such, while upholding modification of charitable trusts provisions under the court's general equitable power to supervise trust administration. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.W.2d 356 (1971).

"Charity" Defined. — A charity may be defined as a gift to be applied consistently with existing laws, for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons, either by bringing their minds or hearts under the influence of education or religion, by relieving their bodies from disease, suffering or constraint, by assisting them to establish themselves in life, or by erecting or maintaining public buildings or works or otherwise lessening the burdens of government. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

"Charitable Trust". — A charitable trust has been defined as a fiduciary relationship with respect to property, arising as a result of a manifestation of an intent to create it, and subjecting the person by whom the property is held to equitable duties to deal with the property for a charitable purpose. YWCA v. Morgan, 281 N.C. 485, 189 S.E.2d 169 (1972).

Generally, when a trust is created for any lawful purpose which promotes the well-being of mankind and does not contravene public policy, it is charitable in its purpose. YWCA v. Morgan, 281 N.C. 485, 189 S.E.2d 169 (1972).

Subsection (b) of this section applies only to wills and trusts created prior to December 31, 1978. Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

For case discussing the legislature's purpose in enacting subsection (d) of this section see Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

Limitations on Use of Funds. — Property conveyed to a trustee for a charitable purpose is limited to the uses set forth in the terms of the trust, and that property conveyed to a charitable corporation, free of a trust, is limited to the purposes set forth in its corporate charter. YWCA v. Morgan, 281 N.C. 485, 189 S.E.2d 169 (1972).

Failure of method designed by trust for carrying out a general charitable purpose does not destroy the trust. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

The substantial intention shall not depend on the insufficiency of the formal intention. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

And the general intent of the testator must prevail over the particular mode prescribed. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

Fulfillment of Settlor's Primary Objective. — Where the construction of a new dramatic arts facility at a university, made possible by the legislative grant of sufficient funds, expressly made "impracticable" the achievement of a trust, in that the settlor's primary objective had been fulfilled, the trial court did not err in ruling that this charitable trust had become "impossible or impracticable of fulfillment" within the meaning of this section. Board of Trustees v. Unknown & Unascertained Heirs, 311 N.C. 644, 319 S.E.2d 239 (1984).

Mode for Administering Trust Must Be Either Impossible or Impracticable. — In order for this section to apply, the evidence presented must establish that the mode directed by the settlor for administering the trust has become either impossible or impracticable for the reasons asserted in the petition, or because of the facts found by the court. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

Power of Court to Modify Trust. — When there is a charitable trust, bequest, or devise evidencing a general charitable intent by the grantor, and the specific, express purpose cannot be fulfilled because of illegality, impossibility or impracticability, this section specifically empowers the court, in the absence of alternate disposition, to modify the trust so as to apply the fund to a purpose as nearly as possible like the originally expressed purpose. YWCA v. Morgan, 281 N.C. 485, 189 S.E.2d 169 (1972).

Where the trust provisions no longer serve the intended purpose of providing medical and hospital services to people who cannot afford to pay for such services, and where the will itself contains no alternative plan, the superior court may order an administration of the trust which would as nearly as possible fulfill the general charitable intention of the testatrix. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

The statutory scheme of subsection (a) of this section, and the strong public policy embodied therein, is merely reflective of the well-established principle that courts, in the exercise of their equitable powers, may modify the terms of a trust instrument, consistent with the settlor's intentions, in order to preserve the trust. Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

All that need be shown to enable a superior court judge to order an administration of the trust is that: (1) the trust is a charitable trust, i.e., that the settlor, or testator, manifested a general intention to devote the property to charity; (2) the trust is or becomes illegal, or impossible or impracticable of fulfillment; and (3) no alternative disposition is made of the corpus in the event the charitable trust fails. Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

Application of Section. — The legislature has clearly indicated that the prohibition against self-dealing is not the only administrative requirement the omission of which will invoke the application of this section. Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

The failure to include the prohibition against self-dealing and the failure to include the other required administrative provisions renders a trust "impracticable of fulfillment" under this section. Edmisten v. Sands, 307 N.C. 670, 300 S.E.2d 387 (1983).

To invoke the application of this section, plaintiff must show that the three following conditions exist: (1) That the testatrix manifested a general charitable intent; (2) that the trust has become either illegal, impossible or impracticable of fulfillment; and (3) that the testatrix made no provision for alternative disposition of the trust corpus in the event that the charitable trust fails. Board of Trustees v. Unknown & Unascertained Heirs, 311 N.C. 644, 319 S.E.2d 239 (1984).

Application of Cy Pres Doctrine Held Erroneous. — Where testator's will itself clearly reflected only the testator's specific intent to aid a particular hospital, and there was no other evidence to the contrary, the trial court's finding that the testator manifested a general charitable intent was not supported by the evidence, and the trial court erred in finding and concluding that the cy pres doctrine was applicable. Trustees of L.C. Wagner Trust v. Barium Springs Home for Children, Inc., 102 N.C. App. 136, 401 S.E.2d 807, rev'd on other grounds, 330 N.C. 187, 409 S.E.2d 913 (1991).

Superior Court Cannot Modify Every Trust Becoming Impracticable. — Under the doctrine of this section, the superior court does not have authority to modify every charitable trust when it becomes impracticable to carry out the original purpose of the settlor or testator. Wilson v. First Presbyterian Church, 284 N.C. 284, 200 S.E.2d 769 (1973).

When Power to Modify Is Conferred. — Power to modify a charitable trust when it becomes impracticable to carry out the original purpose of the settlor or testator is conferred upon the superior court only where the instrument creating the trust, interpreted in the light of all the circumstances known to the settlor or testator, manifests a "general intention to devote the property to charity." Wilson v. First Presbyterian Church, 284 N.C. 284, 200 S.E.2d 769 (1973).

Equitable Jurisdiction to Supervise Administration of Fund. — Notwithstanding the impossibility of effectuating a particular method prescribed for carrying out the provisions of a trust, the court will exercise its equitable jurisdiction and supervise the administration of the fund so as to accomplish the purposes expressed in the will. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 265, 182 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

§ 36A-54. Charitable trusts tax exempt status.

(a) Notwithstanding any provisions in the laws of this State or in the governing instrument to the contrary unless otherwise decreed by a court of competent jurisdiction except as provided in subsection (b), the governing instrument of each trust which is a private foundation described in section 509 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (including each nonexempt charitable trust described in section 4947(a)(1) of the Code which is treated as a private foundation) and the governing instrument of each nonexempt split-interest trust described in section 4947(a)(2) of the Code (but only to the extent that section 508(e) of the Code is applicable to such nonexempt split-interest trust under section 4947(a)(2) of the Code) shall be deemed to contain the following provisions: "The trust shall make distributions at such time and in such manner as not to subject it to tax under section 4942 of the Code; the trust shall not engage in any act of self-dealing which would subject it to tax under section 4941 of the Code; the trust shall not retain any excess business holdings which would subject it to tax under section 4943 of the Code; the trust shall not make any investments which would subject it to tax under section 4944 of the Code; and the trust shall not make any taxable expenditures which would subject it to tax under section 4945 of the Code." With respect to any such trust created prior to January 1, 1970, this subsection (a) shall apply only for its taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1972.

(a1) Notwithstanding any provisions in the laws of this State or in the governing instrument to the contrary, unless otherwise decreed by a court of competent jurisdiction except as provided in subsection (b), the governing instrument of each trust that is a nonexempt charitable trust described in section 4947(a)(1) of the Code shall be deemed to contain the following provisions:

(1) The trust shall be operated exclusively for charitable, educational, religious and scientific purposes within the meaning of section 501(c)(3) and section 170(c)(2) of the Code.

(2) Upon any dissolution, winding up, or liquidation of the trust, its assets shall be distributed for one or more exempt purposes within the meaning of section 501(c)(3) of the Code, or shall be distributed to the federal government, or a state or local government for a public purpose.

(b) The trustee of any trust described in subsections (a) or (a1) may, (i) without judicial proceedings, amend such trust to expressly exclude the application of subsections (a) or (a1) by executing a written amendment to the trust and filing a duplicate original of such amendment with the Attorney General of the State of North Carolina, and upon filing of such amendment, subsections (a) or (a1) shall not apply to such trust, or (ii) institute an action in the superior court of North Carolina seeking reformation of the trust instrument pursuant to the authority set forth in G.S. 36A-53.

(c) All references in this section to the "code" are to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and all references in this section to specific sections of the Code include corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws. Article 4A.

Charitable Remainder Trusts Administration Act.

§ 36A-59.1. Short title.

This Article shall be known as the Charitable Remainder Trusts Administration Act. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 2, provided: "This act is effective upon ratification [June 18, 1982] and applies to all charitable remainder annuity trusts and all charitable remainder unitrusts that would not qualify for the deduction pursuant to section 2055 or section 2522 of the Code in the absence of this Article that are in existence on that date or are established after that date. For trusts in existence on that date, this act relates back to the date of creation of the trust."

§ 36A-59.2. General rule.

Notwithstanding any provisions in the laws of this State or in the governing instruments to the contrary, any charitable remainder annuity trust and any charitable remainder unitrust that cannot qualify for a deduction for federal tax purposes under section 2055 or section 2522 of the Code in the absence of this Article shall be administered in accordance with this Article. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.3. Definitions.

The following definitions apply to this Article unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

(1) "Charitable remainder trust" means a trust that provides for a specified distribution at least annually for either life or a term of years to one or more beneficiaries, at least one of which is not a charity, (hereinafter referred to as "beneficiaries") with an irrevocable remainder interest to be held for the benefit of, or paid over to, charity. For purposes of this Article, only a charitable remainder annuity trust or a charitable remainder unitrust is considered a charitable remainder trust.

(2) "Charitable remainder annuity trust" means a charitable remainder trust:

a. From which a sum certain (which is not less than five percent (5%) of the initial net fair market value of all property placed in trust) is to be paid at least annually to one or more persons (at least one of which is not an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code and, in the case of individuals, only to an individual who was living at the time of the creation of the trust) for a term of years (not in excess of 20 years) or for the life or lives of such individual or individuals; provided, however, that in the case of an individual, such amount to be paid to such individual may be subject to a qualified contingency according to the terms of the governing instrument;

b. From which no amount other than the payments described in a above may be paid to and/or for the use of anyone other than an organization that is or was described in section 170(c) of the Code; and

c. Following the termination of the payments described in a above, the remainder interest in the trust is to be transferred to, or for the use of, an organization that is or was described in section 170(c) of the Code or is to be retained by the trust for such a use.

(3) "Charitable remainder unitrust" means a charitable remainder trust:

a. From which a fixed percentage (which is not less than five percent (5%)) of the net fair market value of its assets, valued annually, is to be paid at least annually to one or more persons (at least one of which is not an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code and, in the case of individuals, only to an individual who was living at the time of the creation of the trust) for a term of years (not in excess of 20 years) or for the life or lives of such individual or individuals; provided, however, that in the case of an individual, such amount to be paid to such individual may be made subject to a qualified contingency according to the terms of the governing instrument;

b. From which no amount other than the payments described in a above may be paid to or for the use of anyone other than an organization that is or was an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code; and

c. Following the termination of the payments described in a above, the remainder interest in the trust is to be transferred to, or for the use of, an organization that is or was described in section 170(c) of the Code, or is to be retained by the trust for such a use.

Notwithstanding the provisions of a and b above, the trust instrument may provide that the trustee shall pay to the income beneficiary for any year (i) the amount of the trust income if that amount is less than the amount required to be distributed under a above, and (ii) any amount of the trust income that exceeds the amount required to be distributed under a above to the extent that (by reason of a) the aggregate of the amounts paid in prior years is less than the aggregate of the required amounts.

(4) "Code" means the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 as amended.

(5) "Qualified contingency" means any provision of the governing instrument which provides that, upon the happening of a contingency, the payments made to an individual noncharitable beneficiary of a charitable remainder trust will terminate not later than such payments would otherwise terminate under the governing instrument. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 1; 1985, c. 406, ss. 1-3.)

§ 36A-59.4. Administrative provisions applicable to both charitable remainder annuity trusts and charitable remainder unitrusts.

(a) Creation of Remainder Interests in Charity. — Upon the termination of the noncharitable interests, the trustee shall distribute all of the then principal and income of the trust, other than any amount due the noncharitable beneficiary or beneficiaries, to the designated charity or charities, or shall hold the property in trust for the designated charity or charities in accordance with the terms of the trust document.

(b) Selection of Alternate Charitable Beneficiary if Remaindermen Do Not Qualify Under Section 170(c) of the Code at Time of Distribution. — If the designated charity is not an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code at the time when any principal or income of the trust is to be distributed to it, the trustee shall distribute the principal or income to one or more organizations then described in section 170(c) of the Code selected in accordance with the terms of the trust instrument. If the trust instrument does not provide for a method of selecting alternate charitable beneficiaries that are then qualified under section 170(c) of the Code, the trustee shall, in his sole discretion, select alternate trust beneficiaries that are qualified under section 170(c) of the Code.

(b1) Selection of Alternative Charitable Beneficiary if Remaindermen do not Qualify under Section 170(b)(1)(A) of the Code at Time of Distribution. — Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of G.S. 36A-59.4(b), if the designated charity is, at the time of the creation of the trust, an organization described in both Section 170(b)(1)(A) and Section 170(c) of the Code, and if the designated charity is not an organization described in both Section 170(b)(1)(A) and Section 170(c) of the Code when any principal or income of the trust is to be distributed to it, the trustee shall distribute the principal or income to one or more organizations then described in both Section 170(b)(1)(A) and Section 170(c) of the Code selected in accordance with the terms of the governing instrument; provided, however, that in the event the governing instrument does not provide a method of selecting alternative charitable beneficiaries that are then described in both Section 170(b)(1)(A) and Section 170(c) of the Code, the trustee shall, in his sole discretion, select one or more alternative charitable beneficiaries that are described in both Section 170(b)(1)(A) and Section 170(c) of the Code and shall distribute the principal or income to the organization or organizations so selected in such shares as the trustee, in his sole discretion, shall determine.

(c) Prohibitions Governing Trustees. — Except for payment of the annuity amount or the unitrust amount to the beneficiaries, whichever is applicable the trustee is prohibited from engaging in any act of self-dealing as defined in section 4941(d) of the Code, retaining any excess business holdings as defined in section 4943(c) of the Code that would subject the trust to tax under section 4943 of the Code, making any investments that would subject the trust to tax under section 4944 of the Code, and making any taxable expenditures as defined in section 4945(d) of the Code. The trustee shall make distributions at such time and in such manner as not to subject the trust to tax under section 4942 of the Code.

(d) Distribution to Charity During Term of Noncharitable Interests and Distributions in Kind. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides for distribution to charity during the term of the noncharitable interests, the trustee may pay to the designated charity the amounts specified in the governing instrument that exceed the annuity amount or the unitrust amount payable to any of the beneficiaries for the taxable year of the trust in which the income is earned. If the governing instrument of the trust provides for distribution to charity in kind, the adjusted basis for federal income tax purposes of any trust property the trustee distributes in kind to charity during the term of the noncharitable interests must be fairly representative of the adjusted basis for such purposes of all trust property available for distribution on the date of distribution.

(e) Investment Restrictions on Trustee. — Nothing in the trust instrument shall be construed to restrict the trustee from investing the trust assets in a manner that could result in the annual realization of a reasonable amount of income or gain from the sale or disposition of trust assets.

(f) Distribution from Trust Used to Administer an Estate to Charitable Remainder Trust. — If the governing instrument of a revocable inter vivos trust provides that the revocable inter vivos trust will be used partially to administer the estate of the grantor or for some other purpose, and further provides the assets will then be distributed to another trust that is a charitable remainder trust, upon the death of the grantor, or upon the occurrence of any event that causes the trust to become irrevocable, the trust shall become irrevocable and the trustee of this trust shall perform any remaining duties or obligations provided for in the trust instrument and then transfer the property specified in the governing instrument to the trustee of the charitable remainder trust to be held, administered and distributed in the manner and according to the terms and conditions provided by the charitable remainder trust.

(g) Payment of Taxes by Noncharitable Beneficiary. — In the case of any inter vivos charitable remainder trust which is liable to pay, from trust property, any federal estate, State inheritance or other similar death taxes by reason of the death of the grantor of such trust, the interest of any noncharitable beneficiary of such trust shall terminate upon the death of the grantor unless such noncharitable beneficiary shall furnish to the trust sufficient funds for payment of all such taxes attributable to the interest of such noncharitable beneficiary in the trust property, and such termination shall be deemed as the occurrence of a qualified contingency. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 1; 1985, c. 406, ss. 4, 5.)

§ 36A-59.5. Administrative provisions applicable to charitable remainder annuity trusts only.

(a) Creation of Annuity Amount for Period of Years or Life. — The trustee shall pay the annuity amount designated in the trust instrument to the beneficiaries named in the trust instrument during their lives (or if the governing instrument so provides, for a period of 20 years or less) in each taxable year of the trust. The annuity amount shall be paid annually or in more frequent equal or unequal installments if the governing instrument so provides. The annuity amount shall be paid from income, and, to the extent that income is not sufficient, from principal. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the annuity amount shall be added to principal.

The total amount payable at least annually to a person or persons named in the trust document, at least one of which is not an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code, may not be less than five percent (5%) of the initial net fair market value of the property placed in trust as finally determined for federal tax purposes, except as provided in subsection (g).

(b) Computation of Annuity Amount in Short and Final Taxable Years. — For a short taxable year and for the taxable year in which the noncharitable beneficiary's interest terminates by death or otherwise, the trustee shall prorate the annuity amount on a daily basis.

(c) Prohibition of Additional Contributions. — No additional contributions shall be made to the trust after the initial contribution.

(d) Deferral of Annuity Amount during Period of Administration or Settlement. — When property passes to the trust at the death of the grantor, the obligation to pay the annuity amount commences with the date of death of the grantor, but payment of the annuity amount may be deferred from the date of the grantor's death to the end of the taxable year in which complete funding of the trust occurs. Within a reasonable time after the end of the taxable year in which the complete funding of the trust occurs, the trustee must pay to the beneficiary, in the case of an underpayment, or must receive from the beneficiary, in the case of an overpayment, the difference between:

(1) Any annuity amount actually paid, plus interest on such amounts computed at ten percent (10%) a year, compounded annually; and

(2) The annuity amounts payable, determined under the method described in Section 1.664-1(a)(5) of the federal income tax regulations, plus interest on such amounts computed at ten percent (10%) a year, compounded annually.

Notwithstanding the foregoing sentence, in computing any underpayment or overpayment of the annuity amounts, if the governing instrument was executed or last amended prior to August 9, 1984, and if the governing instrument does not specify that a ten percent (10%) rate of interest shall be used, the underpayment or overpayment of the annuity amounts shall be computed using an interest rate at six percent (6%) a year, compounded annually.

(e) Dollar Amount Annuity May Be Stated as Fraction or Percentage. — If the governing instrument of the trust states the amount of the annuity as a fraction or a percentage, the trustee shall pay to the beneficiaries in each taxable year of the trust during their lives an annuity amount equal to a percentage (that percentage being stipulated in the governing instrument of the trust and, in any event, being five percent (5%) or greater) of the initial net fair market value of the assets constituting the trust. In determining this amount, assets shall be valued at their values as finally determined for federal tax purposes. If the fiduciary incorrectly determines the initial net fair market value of the assets constituting the trust, then, within a reasonable period after a final determination, the trustee shall pay to the beneficiaries in the case of an undervaluation or shall receive from the beneficiaries in the case of an overvaluation an amount equal to the difference between the annuity amount properly payable and the annuity amount actually paid.

(f) Annuity Amount May Be Allocated Among Class of Noncharitable Beneficiaries in Discretion of Trustee. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides that the annuity trust amount may be allocated among a class of noncharitable beneficiaries in the discretion of the trustee, then the trustee shall pay the annuity amount, which is defined in the governing instrument of the trust, in each taxable year of the trust to the member or members of the class of noncharitable beneficiaries in such amount and proportions as the trustee in its absolute discretion shall from time to time determine until the last of the noncharitable beneficiaries dies. The trustee may pay the entire annuity amount to one member of this class or may apportion it among the various members in such manner as the trustee shall from time to time deem advisable as long as the power to allocate does not cause any person to be treated as the owner of any part of the trust under the rules of section 671 through section 678 of the Code. If the class provided for in the governing instrument is open, then the distribution shall be for a period of years not to exceed 20, notwithstanding a provision to the contrary in the trust instrument. If the class provided for in the governing instrument is closed at the creation of the trust, and all members of the class are ascertainable, the distribution may be for the lives of the members of the class or for a period not exceeding 20 years. The trustee shall pay the entire annuity amount for each taxable year annually and may not delay payment of the annuity amount.

(g) Reduction of Annuity Amount if Part of Corpus Is Paid to Charity at Expiration of Term of Years or on Death of Recipient. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides for the reduction of the annuity amount if part of the corpus is paid to charity at the expiration of a term of years or upon the death of a recipient, then during the term of years or during the joint lives of the noncharitable beneficiaries, the trustee shall, in each taxable year of the trust, pay a total annuity amount of at least five percent (5%) of the initial net fair market value of the assets placed in trust. Upon the expiration of the term of years or the death of a beneficiary, the trustee shall distribute an amount or percentage of the trust assets, as provided in the governing instrument of the trust, to the charity named in the governing instrument, and thereafter, the trustee shall pay, annually or in more frequent installments, to the survivors for their lives, an annuity amount that in each taxable year of the trust, bears the same ratio to five percent (5%) of the initial net fair market value of the trust assets as the net fair market value of the trust assets valued as of the date of distribution, less the amount or percentage of trust assets distributed to the charity, bears to the net fair market value of the trust assets as of the date of distribution.

(h) Termination of Annuity Amount on Payment Date Preceding Termination of Noncharitable Interest. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides that payment of the annuity amount may terminate with the regular payment preceding the termination of all noncharitable interests, then the trustee shall pay to the noncharitable beneficiary during the term of the noncharitable interest the annuity amount, defined in the trust document, in each taxable year of the trust. The obligation of the trustee to pay the annuity amount shall terminate with the payment preceding the death of the noncharitable beneficiary or other event that terminates the noncharitable interest.

(i) Retention of Testamentary Power to Revoke Noncharitable Interest. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides that the grantor of the trust shall retain the power, exercisable only by will, to revoke or terminate the interest of any recipient other than an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code, then the trustee shall pay to the grantor during his life the annuity amount, as defined in the governing instrument of the trust, and, upon the death of the grantor, if the noncharitable beneficiary survives the grantor the trustee shall pay to the noncharitable beneficiary during his life the annuity amount equal to the amount paid to the grantor. The grantor shall have the power, exercisable only by his will, to revoke and terminate the interest of the noncharitable beneficiary under the trust. Upon the first to occur of (i) the death of the survivor of the grantor and noncharitable beneficiary or (ii) the death of the grantor if he effectively exercised his testamentary power to revoke and terminate the interest of the noncharitable beneficiary, the trustee shall distribute all of the then principal and income of the trust, other than any amount due the grantor or noncharitable beneficiary, to the charity named in the trust document or, if the governing instrument so provides, the trustee shall continue to hold the principal and income in trust for the charity or for the charitable purposes specified in the trust. No other retained power to terminate an interest in the trust shall be effective. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 1; 1985, c. 406, s. 6.)

§ 36A-59.6. Administrative provisions applicable to charitable remainder unitrusts only.

(a) Creation of Unitrust Amount for a Period of Years or Life. — The trustee shall pay to the beneficiaries named in the trust investment in each taxable year of the trust during their lives, or, if the governing instrument so provides, for a period not exceeding 20 years, a unitrust amount equal to a fixed percentage, as stated in the governing instrument of the trust, of the net fair market value of the trust assets valued annually on the date or by the method designated in the governing instrument of the trust or, if no date or method is specified, on the date or by the method selected by the trustee in his discretion, so long as the same valuation date or dates or valuation methods are used each year. The unitrust amount shall be paid annually or in more frequent equal or unequal installments if the governing instrument so provides. The unitrust amount shall be paid from income, and, to the extent that income is not sufficient, from principal. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the unitrust amount shall be added to principal.

The fixed percentage to be paid at least annually to all beneficiaries cannot be less than five percent (5%).

(b) Unitrust Amount Expressed as the Lesser of Income or a Fixed Percentage. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides that the trustee shall pay, instead of a regular unitrust amount (the fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the trust assets, determined annually), the amount of trust income for the taxable year to the extent that this amount is not greater than the amount required to be distributed as a regular unitrust amount for that taxable year and/or the amount of the trust income for the taxable year that exceeds the regular unitrust amount for that taxable year to the extent that the aggregate of the amounts paid in prior years is less than the aggregate of the regular unitrust amount for those prior years, then the trustee shall pay to the beneficiaries in each taxable year of the trust during their lives, or for a period not exceeding 20 years if the trust agreement so provides, an amount equal to the lesser of (i) the trust income for the taxable year, as defined in section 643(b) of the Code and the regulations thereunder, and (ii) the percentage, as stated in the governing instrument, of the net fair market value of the trust assets valued as of the taxable year decreased as elsewhere provided if the taxable year is a short taxable year or is the taxable year in which the noncharitable interest terminates by death or otherwise, and increased as elsewhere provided if additional contributions are made in the taxable year.

If the governing instrument of the trust so provides and if the trust income for any taxable year exceeds the amount determined under (ii) above, the payment to beneficiaries shall also include the excess income to the extent that the aggregate of the amounts paid to beneficiaries in prior years is less than the percentage of the aggregate net fair market value of the trust assets, which percentage is defined in the governing instrument of the trust, for these years. Payments to beneficiaries shall be made annually or in more frequent equal or unequal installments if the governing instrument so provides. Any income of the trust in excess of such payments shall be added to principal.

(c) Adjustment for Incorrect Valuation. — If the fiduciary incorrectly determines the net fair market value of the trust assets for any taxable year, the trustee shall, within a reasonable period after the final determination of the correct value, pay to the beneficiaries in the case of an undervaluation or receive from the beneficiaries in the case of an overvaluation an amount equal to the difference between the unitrust amount properly payable and the unitrust amount actually paid.

(d) Computation of Unitrust Amount in Short and Final Taxable Years. — For a short taxable year and for the taxable year in which the noncharitable beneficiary's interest terminates by death or otherwise, the trustee shall prorate the unitrust amount on a daily basis. If a trust provides for a valuation date other than the first day of the taxable year, and the valuation date does not occur in a taxable year of the trust because the taxable year is either a short taxable year or is the taxable year in which the noncharitable interests terminate, the trust assets shall be valued as of the last day of the short taxable year or the day on which the noncharitable interests terminate, as appropriate.

(e) Additional Contributions. — If the governing instrument does not prohibit additional contributions and additional contributions are made to the trust after the initial contribution in the trust, the unitrust amount for the taxable year in which the additional contributions are made shall be a fixed percentage, as stated in the governing instrument of the trust, of the sum of (i) the net fair market value of trust assets, excluding the additional contributions and any income from or appreciation of these contributions and (ii) that proportion of the value of the additional contributions excluded under (i) which the number of days in the period beginning with the date of contribution and ending with the earlier of the last day of the taxable year or the day the noncharitable beneficiary's interest terminated bears to the number of days in the period beginning on the first day of the taxable year and ending with the earlier of the last day in the taxable year or the day the noncharitable beneficiary's interest terminated. If no valuation date occurs after the contributions are made, the assets so added shall be valued as of the time of contribution.

(f) Deferral of Unitrust Amount During Period of Administration or Settlement. — When property passes to the trust at the death of the grantor, the obligation to pay the unitrust amount commences with the date of the grantor's death, but payment of the unitrust amount may be deferred from the date of the grantor's death to the end of the taxable year of the trust in which complete funding of the trust occurs. Within a reasonable time after the end of the taxable year in which the complete funding of the trust occurs, the trustee must pay to the beneficiary, in the case of an underpayment, or must receive from the beneficiary, in the case of an overpayment, the difference between:

(1) Any unitrust amounts actually paid, plus interest on such amounts computed at ten percent (10%) a year, compounded annually; and

(2) The unitrust amounts payable, determined under the method described in Section 1.664-1(a)(5) of the federal income tax regulations, plus interest on such amounts computed at ten percent (10%) a year, compounded annually.

Notwithstanding the foregoing sentence, in computing any underpayment or overpayment of the unitrust amounts, if the governing instrument was executed or last amended prior to August 9, 1984, and if the governing instrument does not specify that a ten percent (10%) rate of interest shall be used, the underpayment or overpayment of the unitrust amounts shall be computed using an interest rate of six percent (6%) a year, compounded annually.

(g) Unitrust Amount May Be Allocated among Class of Noncharitable Beneficiaries in Discretion of Trustee. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides that the unitrust amount may be allocated to a class of noncharitable beneficiaries in the discretion of the trustee, then the trustee shall pay, in each taxable year of the trust, the unitrust amount to the member or members of the class of noncharitable beneficiaries in such amounts and proportions as the trustee in its absolute discretion shall from time to time determine until the last of the noncharitable beneficiaries dies. The trustee may pay the unitrust amount to any one member of the class or may apportion it among the various members in such manner as the trustee shall from time to time deem advisable as long as the power to allocate does not cause any person to be treated as the owner of any part of the trust under the rules of section 671 through section 678 of the Code. If the class provided for in the governing instrument is open, the distribution shall be for a period not exceeding 20 years, notwithstanding a provision to the contrary in the trust instrument. If the class provided for in the governing instrument is closed at the creation of the trust, and all members of the class are ascertainable, the distribution may be for the lives of the members of the class or for a period not exceeding 20 years. The trustee shall pay the entire unitrust amount for each taxable year annually and may not delay payment of the unitrust amount.

(h) Reduction of Unitrust Amount if Part of Corpus Is Paid to Charity at Expiration of Term of Years or on Death of a Recipient. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides for the reduction of the unitrust amount if part of the corpus is paid to charity at the expiration of a term of years or upon the death of a recipient, then during the term of years or during the joint lives of the noncharitable beneficiaries the trustee shall, in each taxable year of the trust, pay the total unitrust amount equal to a percentage of the net fair market value of the trust assets valued annually, which shall not be less than five percent (5%). Upon expiration of the term of years or the death of a recipient, the trustee shall distribute an amount or percentage of the trust assets, as provided in the governing instrument of the trust, to the charity named in the governing instrument, and thereafter the trustee shall pay to the survivors for their lives a unitrust amount in each taxable year of the trust equal to at least five percent (5%) (the actual percentage being defined in the trust instrument) of the net fair market value of the remaining trust assets valued annually.

(i) Termination of Unitrust Amount on Payment Date Preceding Termination of Noncharitable Interests. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides that payment of the unitrust amount may terminate with the regular payment preceding the termination of all noncharitable interests, then the trustee shall pay the unitrust amount to the noncharitable beneficiary in each taxable year of the trust during the term of the noncharitable interest. The obligation of the trustee to pay the unitrust amount terminates with the payment preceding the termination of the noncharitable interest by death or otherwise. The five percent (5%) requirement provided in subsection (a) shall be met until the termination of all payments of the unitrust amount.

(j) Retention of Testamentary Power to Revoke Noncharitable Interest. — If the governing instrument of the trust provides that the grantor of the trust shall retain the power, exercisable only by will, to revoke or terminate the interest of any recipient other than an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code, then the trustee shall pay the unitrust amount to the grantor during his life and, upon the death of the grantor, shall pay the unitrust amount to the noncharitable beneficiary during his life provided the noncharitable beneficiary survives the grantor. The grantor shall have the power, exercisable only by his will, to revoke and terminate the interest of the noncharitable beneficiary under the trust. Upon the first to occur of (i) the death of the survivor of the grantor and the noncharitable beneficiary or (ii) the death of the grantor if he effectively exercised his testamentary power to revoke and terminate the interest of the noncharitable beneficiary, the trustee shall distribute all of the then principal and income of the trust, other than any amount due the noncharitable beneficiaries, to the charity named in the trust document or, if the governing instrument so provides, the trustee shall continue to hold the principal and income in trust for the charity or for the charitable purposes specified in the trust. No other retained power to terminate an interest in the trust shall be effective. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 1; 1985, c. 406, s. 7.)

§ 36A-59.7. Interpretation.

This Article shall be interpreted and construed to effectuate its general purpose to cause all charitable remainder annuity trusts and all charitable remainder unitrusts to be administered in accordance with the provisions of section 2055 and section 2522 of the Code and the regulations thereunder. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1252, s. 1.)

Article 4B.

North Carolina Community Trust Act.

§ 36A-59.10. North Carolina Community Trust for Persons with Severe Chronic Disabilities; findings.

(a) This Article shall be known and may be cited as the "North Carolina Community Trust for Persons with Severe Chronic Disabilities Act".

(b) The General Assembly finds that it is in the public interest to encourage activities by voluntary associations and private citizens which will supplement and augment those services provided by local, State, and federal government agencies in discharge of their responsibilities toward individuals with severe chronic disabilities. The General Assembly further finds that, as a result of changing social, economic, and demographic trends, families of persons with severe chronic disabilities are increasingly aware of the need for a vehicle by which they can assure ongoing individualized personal concern for a severely disabled family member who may survive his parents or other family members, and provide for the efficient management of small legacies or trust funds to be used for the benefit of such a disabled person. In a number of other states voluntary associations have established foundations or trusts intended to be responsive to these concerns. Therefore, the General Assembly finds that North Carolina will benefit by the enactment of enabling legislation expressly authorizing the formation of community trusts in accordance with criteria set forth by statute and administered by the Secretary of State, pursuant to Chapter 55A of the General Statutes. These community trusts permit the pooling of resources contributed by families or persons with philanthropic intent, along with the reservation of portions of these funds for the use and benefit of designated beneficiaries.

(c) This Article shall be liberally construed and applied to promote its underlying purposes and policies, which are, among others, to:

(1) Encourage the orderly establishment of community trusts for the benefit of persons with severe chronic disabilities;

(2) Ensure that community trusts are administered properly and that the managing boards of the trusts are free from conflicts of interest;

(3) Facilitate sound administration of trust funds for persons with severe chronic disabilities by allowing family members and others to pool resources in order to make professional management investment more efficient;

(4) Provide parents of persons with severe chronic disabilities peace of mind in knowing that a means exists to ensure that the interests of their children who have severe chronic disabilities are properly looked after and managed after the parents die or become incapacitated;

(5) Help make guardians available for persons with severe chronic disabilities who are incompetent, when no other family member is available for this purpose;

(6) Encourage the availability of private resources to purchase for persons with severe chronic disabilities goods and services that are not available through any governmental or charitable program and to conserve these resources by limiting purchases to those which are not available from other sources;

(7) Encourage the inclusion, as beneficiaries of community trusts, of persons who lack resources and whose families are indigent, in a way that does not diminish the resources available to other beneficiaries whose families have contributed to the trust; and

(8) Remove the disincentives that discourage parents and others from setting aside funds for the future protection of persons with severe chronic disabilities by ensuring that the interest of beneficiaries in community trusts are not considered assets or income that would disqualify them from any governmental or charitable entitlement program with an economic means test. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.11. Definitions.

As used in this Article, unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

(1) "Beneficiary" means any person with a severe chronic disability who has qualified as a member of the community trust program and who has the right to receive those services and benefits vested with the management of the business and affairs of a corporation, formed for the purpose of managing a community trust, irrespective of the name by which the group is designated.

(2) "Community trust" means a nonprofit organization that offers the following services:

a. Administration of special trust funds for persons with severe chronic disabilities;

b. Follow along services;

c. Guardianship for persons with severe chronic disabilities who are incompetent, when no other family member or immediate friend is available for this purpose; and

d. Advice and counsel to persons who have been appointed as individual guardians of the persons or estates of persons with severe chronic disabilities.

(3) "Follow along services" means those services offered by community trusts that are designed to ensure that the needs of each beneficiary are being met for as long as may be required and may include periodic visits to the beneficiary and to the places where the beneficiary receives services, participation in the development of individualized plans being made by service providers for the beneficiary, and other similar services consistent with the purposes of this Article.

(4) "Severe chronic disability" means a physical or mental impairment that is expected to give rise to a long-term need for specialized health, social, and other services, and which makes the person with such a disability dependent upon others for assistance to secure these services.

(5) "Trustee" means any member of the board of a corporation, formed for the purpose of managing a community trust, whether that member is designated as a trustee, director, manager, governor, or by any other title.

(6) "Surplus trust funds" means funds accumulated in the trust from contributions made on behalf of an individual beneficiary which, after the death of the beneficiary, are determined by the board to be in excess of the actual cost of providing services during the beneficiary's lifetime, including the beneficiary's share of administrative costs. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.12. Scope.

This Article shall apply to every community trust established in this State. In addition to meeting the other requirements of this Article, every board which administers a community trust shall incorporate as a nonprofit corporation pursuant to Chapter 55A of the General Statutes. Except as otherwise provided herein, the provisions of Chapter 55A of the General Statutes shall apply to the community trusts. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.13. Administration; powers and duties.

(a) Every community trust shall be administered by a board. The board shall be comprised of no less than nine and no more than 21 members, at least one-third of whom shall be parents or relatives of persons with severe chronic disabilities. No board member shall be a provider of habilitative, health, social, or educational services to persons with severe chronic disabilities or an employee of such a service provider. The board may, however, allow service providers to serve on the board in an advisory capacity. Board members shall be selected, to the maximum extent possible, from geographic areas throughout the area served by the trust.

The certificate of incorporation filed with the Secretary of State pursuant to Chapter 55A of the General Statutes shall, in addition to the requirements set forth in that title, demonstrate that the requirements of this section have been met.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, no trustee may be compensated for services provided as a member of the board of a community trust. No fees or commissions shall be paid to these trustees; however, a trustee may be paid for necessary expenses incurred by the trustee and may receive indemnification as permitted under Chapter 55A of the General Statutes.

(b1) For every community trust incorporated under this Article, the corporation itself shall be considered the trustee of any funds administered by it. No individual board member shall be considered to be trustee of any fund deposited on behalf of any individual beneficiary with severe chronic disabilities.

(c) The board shall adopt bylaws that shall include a declaration delineating the primary geographic area serviced by the trust and the principal services to be provided and shall file the bylaws with the Secretary of State.

(d) The board may retain paid staff as it considers necessary to provide follow along services to the extent required by each beneficiary. The community trust may authorize the expenditure of funds for any goods or services which, in its sole discretion, it determines will promote the well-being of any beneficiary, including recreational services. The community trust may pay for the burial of any beneficiary. The community trust, however, may not expend funds for any goods or services of comparable quality to those available to any particular beneficiary through any governmental or charitable program, insurance, or other sources. The community trust may expend funds to meet the reasonable costs of administering the community trust.

(e) The community trust is not required to provide services to a beneficiary who is a competent adult and who has refused to accept the services. Further, the community trust shall not provide services of a nature or in a manner that would be contrary to the public policy of this State at the time the services are to be provided. In either case, the community trust may offer alternate services that are consistent with the purposes of this Article and in keeping with the best interests of the beneficiary.

(f) The community trust may accept appointment as guardian of the person, guardian of the estate, or guardian of both on behalf of any beneficiary. If the community trust accepts appointment as guardian of the person of an individual, it shall assign a staff member to carry out its responsibilities as the guardian. The community trust may, on request, offer consultative and professional assistance to an individual, private or public guardian of any of its beneficiaries.

(g) The community trust may accept contributions, bequests, and designations under life insurance policies to the community trust on behalf of individuals with severe chronic disabilities for the purpose of qualifying them as beneficiaries.

(h) At the time a contribution, bequest, or assignment of insurance proceeds is made, the trustor shall receive a written statement of the services to be provided to the beneficiary. The statement shall include a starting date for the delivery of services or the condition precedent, such as the death of the trustor, which shall determine the starting date. The statement shall describe the frequency with which services shall be provided and their duration, and the criteria or procedures for modifying the program of services from time to time in the best interests of the beneficiary. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.14. Accountability.

Along with the annual report filed with the Secretary of State pursuant to Chapter 55A of the General Statutes, the community trust shall file an itemized statement which shows the funds collected for the year, income earned, salaries, other expenses incurred, and the opening and final trust balances. A copy of this statement shall be made available, upon request, to any beneficiary, trustor, or designee of the trustor. In addition, once annually, each trustor or the trustor's designee shall receive a detailed individual statement of the services provided to the trustor's beneficiary during the previous 12 months and the services to be provided during the following 12 months. The community trust shall make a copy of the individual statement available to any beneficiary, upon request. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.15. Gifts, surplus trust funds.

The community trust may accept gifts and use surplus trust funds for the purpose of qualifying as beneficiaries any indigent person whose family members lack the resources to make a full contribution on that person's behalf. The extent and character of the services and selection of beneficiaries are at the discretion of the community trust. The community trust may not use surplus trust funds to make any charitable contribution on behalf of any beneficiary or any group or class of beneficiaries. The community trust may accept gifts to meet start-up costs, reduce the charges to the trust for the cost of administration, and for any other purpose that is consistent with this Article. Gifts made to the trust for an unspecified purpose shall be used by the community trust either to qualify indigent persons whose families lack the means to qualify them as beneficiaries of the trust or to meet any start-up costs that the trust incurs. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.16. Special requests on behalf of beneficiary.

The community trust may agree to fulfill any special requests made on behalf of a beneficiary as long as the requests are consistent with this Article and provided an adequate contribution has been made for this purpose on behalf of a beneficiary. The community trust may agree to serve as trustee for any individual trust created on behalf of a beneficiary, regardless of whether the trust is revocable or irrevocable, has one or more remaindermen or contingent beneficiaries, or any other condition, so long as the individual trust is consistent with the purposes of this Article. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.17. Irrevocability; impossibility of fulfillment.

A community trust for persons with severe chronic disabilities is irrevocable, but the trustees in their sole discretion may provide compensation for any contribution to the trust to any trustor who, upon good cause, withdraws a beneficiary designated by the trustor from the trust, or if it becomes impossible to fulfill the conditions of the trust with regard to an individual beneficiary for reasons other than the death of the beneficiary. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.18. Beneficiary's interest in trust not asset for income eligibility determination.

Notwithstanding any provisions of Chapter 108A of the General Statutes, the beneficiary's interest in any community trust shall not be deemed to be an asset for the purpose of determining income eligibility for any publicly operated program, nor shall that interest be reached in satisfaction of a claim for support and maintenance of the beneficiary. No agency shall reduce the benefits of services available to any individual because that person is the beneficiary of a community trust. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.19. Trust not subject to law against perpetuities, restraints on alienation.

A community trust shall not be subject to or held to be in violation of any principle of law against perpetuities or restraints on alienation or perpetual accumulations of trusts. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 36A-59.20. Settlement; trustee limitations.

The community trust shall settle a community trust by filing a final accounting in the superior court. In addition, at any time prior to the settlement of the final account, the community trust, the Secretary of State, or the Attorney General may bring an action for the dissolution of a nonprofit corporation in the superior court for the purpose of terminating the trust or merging it with another charitable trust.

No trustee or any private individual shall be entitled to share in the distribution of any of the trust assets upon dissolution, merger, or settlement of the community trust. Upon dissolution, merger, or settlement, the superior court shall distribute all of the remaining net assets of the community trust in a manner that is consistent with the purposes of this Article. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 768, s. 1.)

(2) "Person" means an individual, a corporation, a partnership, an association, a joint stock company, a business trust, an unincorporated organization, or two or more persons having a joint or common interest.

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on this Article, see 17 N.C.L. Rev. 396 (1939).

CASE NOTES

Applicability. — The Uniform Trusts Act did not apply to case where executor exercised option to purchase land owned by estate; nothing in the language of the will expressly created a trust. Kapp v. Kapp, 336 N.C. 295, 442 S.E.2d 499, rehearing denied, 336 N.C. 786, 447 S.E.2d 424 (1994).

§ 36A-61. Bank account to pay special debts.

(a) Whenever a bank account shall, by entries made on the books of the depositor and the bank at the time of the deposit, be created exclusively for the purpose of paying dividends, interest or interest coupons, salaries, wages, or pensions or other benefits to employees, and the depositor at the time of opening such account does not expressly otherwise declare, the depositor shall be deemed a trustee of such account for the creditors to be paid therefrom, subject to such power or revocation as the depositor may have reserved by agreement with the bank.

(b) If any beneficiary for whom such a trust is created does not present his claim to the bank for payment within one year after it is due, the depositor who created such trust may revoke it as to such creditor. (1939, c. 197, s. 2; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-62. Loan of trust funds.

Except as hereinafter provided in this Article, no corporate trustee shall lend trust funds to itself or an affiliate, or other business associate, or to any director, officer, or employee of itself or of an affiliate, nor shall any noncorporate trustee lend trust funds to himself, or to his relative, employer, employee, partner, affiliate, or other business associate. (1939, c. 197, s. 3; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-63. Funds held by a corporation exercising fiduciary powers awaiting investment or distribution.

(a) Funds held in a fiduciary capacity by a bank, trust company, savings and loan association, or other corporation authorized to exercise the powers of a fiduciary, awaiting investment or distribution shall not be held uninvested or undistributed any longer than is reasonable for the proper management of the account. A corporation acting in a fiduciary capacity has complied with this requirement if such funds awaiting investment or distribution in excess of one thousand dollars ($1,000) are invested or distributed within 30 days of receipt or accumulation thereof.

(b) Funds held in a fiduciary capacity by a bank, awaiting investment or distribution may, unless prohibited by the instrument creating the fiduciary relationship, be deposited in the commercial or savings or other department of the bank, provided that it shall first set aside under control of the trust department as collateral security, such securities as may be found listed in G.S. 142-34 as being eligible for the investment of the sinking funds of the State of North Carolina equal in market value of such deposited funds, or readily marketable commercial bonds having not less than a recognized "A" rating equal to one hundred and twenty-five percent (125%) of the funds so deposited.

The securities so deposited or securities substituted therefor as collateral in the trust department by the commercial or savings or other department (as well as the deposit of cash in the commercial or savings or other department by the trust department) shall be held pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 53-43(6).

If such funds are deposited in a bank insured under the provisions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the above collateral security will be required only for that portion of uninvested balances of each trust which are not fully insured under the provisions of that corporation.

(c) Funds held in a fiduciary capacity by a corporate fiduciary awaiting investment or distribution may, unless prohibited by the instrument creating the fiduciary relationship, be invested in short-term, trust-quality investment vehicles, through the medium of a collective investment fund or otherwise.

(d) In addition to any other compensation to which it may be entitled under G.S. 28A-23-3, 32-50, 34-12, 35A-1269, or under any other authority, a corporation acting in a fiduciary capacity shall be allowed to charge a fee for the temporary investment of funds held awaiting investment or distribution, which fee may be calculated upon the amount of such funds actually invested and upon the income produced thereby. The fee authorized by this subsection shall not exceed twelve percent (12%) of the income produced by such investment. A corporation acting in a fiduciary capacity has complied with its duty to disclose fees and practices in connection with the investment of fiduciary funds awaiting investment or distribution if the corporation's periodic statements set forth the method of computing such fees. (1939, c. 197, s. 4; 1963, c. 243, ss. 1, 2; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1989, c. 443.)

Editor's Note. — Section 142-34, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1983, c. 913, s. 30.

§ 36A-64. Loan to trust.

A trustee may make a loan to a trust account and may take as security therefor assets of the trust account provided that such transaction is fair. (1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-65. Trustee loaning from one trust to another trust.

A trustee may make a loan to a trust account from the funds belonging to another trust account, when the instrument creating the account from which the loan is made (i) authorizes the making of such loan and (ii) designates the trust account to which the loan is made, provided that the transaction is fair to both accounts. (1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-66. Trustee buying from or selling to self.

No trustee shall directly or indirectly buy or sell any property for the trust from or to itself or an affiliate; or from or to a director, officer, or employee of such trustee or of an affiliate, or from or to a relative, employer, partner, or other business associate. (1939, c. 197, s. 5; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

The purpose of this section is to clarify and strengthen rules regarding loyalty by a trustee to the interests of his cestuis que trust. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Johnston, 269

N.C. 701, 153 S.E.2d 449 (1967), decided under prior law.

Court May Relieve Trustee of Restriction of This Section. — Section 36A-80, by allowing a court of competent jurisdiction to relieve the trustee of "any or all of the duties and restrictions" placed upon him by this Article, gives statutory authority to the court to relieve the trustee of the restriction that he cannot purchase property from the trust. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Johnston, 269 N.C. 701, 153 S.E.2d 449 (1967), decided under prior law.

Recognizing and reaffirming the stern rule of equity that a trustee cannot be both vendor and vendee, there are rare and justifiable exceptions when the court, in the exercise of its inherent equitable powers, may authorize a purchase of trust property by the trustee, upon full findings of fact that (1) complete disclosure of all facts was made by the trustee, (2) the sale would materially promote the best interests of the trust and its beneficiaries, and (3) there are no other purchasers willing to pay the same or a greater price than offered by the trustee. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Johnston, 269 N.C. 701, 153 S.E.2d 449 (1967), decided under prior law.

§ 36A-66.1. Investments in securities by banks or trust companies.

Unless the governing instrument, court order, or a statute specifically directs otherwise, a bank or trust company serving as trustee, guardian, agent, or in any other fiduciary capacity may invest in any security authorized by this Chapter even if such fiduciary or an affiliate thereof, as defined in G.S. 36A-60(1), participates or has participated as a member of a syndicate underwriting such security, if:

(1) The fiduciary does not purchase the security from itself or its affiliate; and

(2) The fiduciary does not purchase the security from another syndicate member or an affiliate, pursuant to an implied or express agreement between the fiduciary or its affiliate and a selling member or its affiliate, to purchase all or part of each other's underwriting commitments. (1985, c. 549, s. 1.)

§ 36A-66.2. Trustee investment in mutual funds advised by trustee.

(a) Unless prohibited or otherwise limited by an instrument governing a fiduciary relationship, a corporate trustee may invest in the securities of, or any other interest in, any open end or closed end management type investment company or investment trust registered under the "Investment Company Act of 1940", 15 U.S.C. § 80a-1 et seq., notwithstanding that the corporate trustee or affiliate of the corporate trustee provides services to the investment company or investment trust such as that of investment advisor, custodian, transfer agent, registrar, sponsor, distributor, manager, or otherwise and receives or has received remuneration for those services; provided that the corporate trustee shall make such investment only if that investment is in the best interest of the beneficiary of the account. With respect to any funds so invested, the corporate trustee shall conspicuously disclose by statement, prospectus, or otherwise to all current income beneficiaries of an account the rate, formula, or other method by which the remuneration for those services is determined. This disclosure shall be in addition to such disclosure of any trustee fee charged by the corporate trustee with respect to said funds.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the total amount of all fees, charges, remuneration, and compensation derived from the trust assets by the corporate trustee, or its affiliate, or both, shall be reasonable. (1993, c. 126, s. 1.)

§ 36A-67. Corporate trustee buying its own stock.

No corporate trustee shall purchase for a trust shares of its own stock, or its bonds or other securities, or the stocks, bonds or other securities of an affiliate. (1939, c. 197, s. 7; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-68. Trustee selling assets from one trust to another trust.

A trustee may sell assets held by it as fiduciary in one trust account to itself as trustee in another trust account if the transaction is fair to both accounts and if the transaction is expressly authorized by the instrument or instruments creating the accounts. (1939, c. 197, s. 6; 1945, c. 127, s. 3; c. 743, s. 3; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-69. Voting stock.

A trustee owning shares of corporate stock or other securities may vote them in person or by general or limited proxy, and may execute waivers, consents or objections with respect to such stock or securities, but shall be liable for any loss resulting to the beneficiaries from a failure to use reasonable care in deciding how to vote the stock or securities, in voting them or in not voting them. (1939, c. 197, s. 8; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1991, c. 460, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to trustee's power to vote stock, see § 55-7-24(b).

§ 36A-70. Trustees holding stock or other securities in name of nominee.

A trustee may hold shares of stock or other securities in the name of a nominee, without mention of the trust relationship in the instrument representing stock or other securities or in registration records of the issuer thereof; provided, that

(1) The records and all reports or accounts rendered by the trustee clearly show the ownership of the stock or other securities by the trustee and the facts regarding its holdings, and

(2) The nominee shall not have possession of the stock or other securities or access thereto except under the immediate supervision of the trustee or when such securities are deposited by the fiduciary in a clearing corporation as defined in G.S. 25-8-102.

The trustee shall be personally liable for any acts or omissions of such nominee in connection with such stock or other securities so held, as if such had done such acts or been guilty of such omissions. (1939, c. 197, s. 9; 1945, c. 292; 1973, c. 144; c. 497, s. 1; 1975, c. 121; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1997-181, s. 24.)

§ 36A-71. Bank and trust company assets kept separate, records of securities.

Every trust company shall keep its trust assets separate and distinct from assets owned by the bank. The books and accounts of the trust company shall at all times show the ownership of all moneys, funds, investments, and property held by the company. Stock or other securities may be kept by the company in either of the following ways:

(1) All certificates representing the securities of an account may be held separate from those of all other accounts; or

(2) Certificates representing the securities of the same class of the same issuer held for particular accounts may be held in bulk without certification as to ownership attached and, to the extent feasible, certificates of small denomination may be merged into one or more certificates of larger denomination, provided that the trust company, when operating under the method of safekeeping security certificates described in this subdivision shall be subject to such rules and regulations as, in the case of State-chartered institutions, the State Banking Commission and, in the case of national banking associations, the Comptroller of the Currency, may from time to time issue and, upon demand by any person to whom it has a duty to account, it shall certify in writing the securities held by it for an account. (1973, c. 497, s. 2; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-72. Powers attached to office.

Unless it is otherwise provided by the trust instrument, or an amendment thereof, or by court order, all powers of a trustee shall be attached to the office and shall not be personal. (1939, c. 197, s. 10; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-73. Powers exercisable by one or more trustees.

(a) If there are more than two trustees and the trust instrument expressly makes provision for the execution of any of the powers of trustees by all of them or by any one or more of them, the provisions of the trust instrument govern.

(b) If there is no governing provision in the trust instrument, cotrustees may, by written agreement signed by all of them and filed with and approved by the clerk of superior court of the county which is the principal place of administration of the trust, provide that any one or more of the following powers of trustees may be exercised by any designated one or more of them:

(1) Open bank accounts and draw checks thereon;

(2) Subject to the provisions of G.S. 105-24, enter any safe-deposit box of the deceased or any safe-deposit box rented by the trust;

(3) Employ attorneys and accountants;

(4) List property for taxes and prepare and file State, municipal and county tax returns;

(5) Collect claims and debts due the trust and give receipts therefor;

(6) Pay claims against and debts of the trust;

(7) Compromise claims in favor of or against the trust;

(8) Have custody of property of the trust.

For the purposes of this subsection, when there are cotrustees, the principal place of administration of the trust is (i) the usual place of business of the corporate trustee if there is but one corporate cotrustee, or (ii) the usual place of business or residence of the individual trustee who is a professional fiduciary if there is but one such person and no corporate trustee, and (iii) the usual place of business or residence of any of the cotrustees as agreed upon by them.

(c) Subject to subsection (a) of this section, if two or more trustees own shares of corporate stock or other securities, their acts with respect to voting shall have the following effect:

(1) If only one votes, in person or by proxy, his act binds all;

(2) If more than one vote, in person or by proxy, the act of the majority so voting binds all;

(3) If more than one vote, in person or by proxy, but the vote is evenly split on any particular matter, each faction is entitled to vote the stock or other securities in question proportionately.

(d) Subject to the provisions of subsections (a), (b) and (c) of this section, all other acts and duties must be performed by both of the trustees if there are two, or by a majority of them if there are more than two.

No trustee who has not joined in exercising a power shall be liable to the beneficiaries or to others for the consequences of such exercise, nor shall a dissenting trustee be liable for the consequences of an act in which he joins at the direction of his cotrustees, if he expressed his dissent in writing to any of his cotrustees at or before the time of such joinder.

(e) No trustee shall be relieved of liability on his bond or otherwise by entering into any agreement under this section. (1939, c. 197, s. 11; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1991, c. 460, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Section 105-24, referred to in subdivision (b)(2) above, has been repealed.

§ 36A-74. Contracts of trustee.

(a) Whenever a trustee shall make a contract which is within his powers as trustee, or a predecessor trustee shall have made such a contract, and a cause of action shall arise thereon, the party in whose favor the cause of action has accrued may sue the trustee in his representative capacity, and any judgment rendered, in such action in favor of the plaintiff shall be collectible (by execution) out of the trust property. In such an action the plaintiff need not prove that the trustee could have secured reimbursement from the trust fund if he had paid the plaintiff's claim.

(b) No judgment shall be rendered in favor of the plaintiff in such action unless he proves that within 30 days after the beginning of such action, or within such other time as the court may fix, and more than 30 days prior to obtaining the judgment, he notified each of the beneficiaries known to the trustee who then had a present interest, or in the case of a charitable trust the Attorney General and any corporation which is a beneficiary or agency in the performance of such charitable trust, of the existence and nature of the action. Such notice shall be given by mailing copies thereof in postpaid envelopes addressed to the parties to be notified at their last known addresses. The trustee shall furnish the plaintiff a list of the parties to be notified, and their addresses, within 10 days after written demand therefor, and notification of the persons on such list shall constitute compliance with the duty placed on the plaintiff by this section. Any beneficiary, or in the case of charitable trusts the Attorney General and any corporation which is a beneficiary or agency in the performance of such charitable trust, may intervene in such action and contest the right of the plaintiff to recover.

(c) The plaintiff may also hold the trustee who made the contract personally liable on such contract, if the contract does not exclude such personal liability. The addition of the word "trustee" or the words "as trustee" after the signature of a trustee to a contract shall be deemed prima facie evidence of an intent to exclude the trustee from personal liability. (1939, c. 197, s. 12; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Protection of Beneficiaries of Charitable Trusts. — The State as parens patriae, through its Attorney General, has the common-law right and power to protect the beneficiaries of charitable trusts and the property to which they are or may be entitled. Sigmund Sternberger Found. v. Tannenbaum, 273 N.C. 658, 161 S.E.2d 116 (1968), decided under prior law.

Enforcement of Gift or Trust. — Because of the public interest necessarily involved in a charitable trust or gift to charity and essential to its legal classification as a charity, it is generally recognized that the Attorney General, in his capacity as representative of the State and of the public, is the, or at least a, proper party to institute and maintain proceedings for the enforcement of such a gift or trust. Sigmund Sternberger Found. v. Tannenbaum, 273 N.C. 658, 161 S.E.2d 116 (1968), decided under prior law.

Applied in Church v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 63 N.C. App. 359, 304 S.E.2d 633 (1983).

§ 36A-75. Exoneration or reimbursement for torts.

(a) A trustee who has incurred personal liability for a tort committed in the administration of the trust is entitled to exoneration therefor from the trust property if he has not discharged the claim, or to be reimbursed therefor out of trust funds if he has paid the claim, if

(1) The tort was a common incident of the kind of business activity in which the trustee was properly engaged for the trust, or,

(2) Although the tort was not a common incident of such activity if neither the trustee nor any officer or employee of the trustee was guilty of personal fault in incurring the liability.

(b) If a trustee commits a tort which increases the value of the trust property, he shall be entitled to exoneration or reimbursement with respect thereto to the extent of such increase in value, even though he would not otherwise be entitled to exoneration or reimbursement.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to change the existing law with regard to the liability of trustees of charitable trusts for torts of themselves or their employees. (1939, c. 197, s. 13; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-76. Tort liability of trust estate.

(a) Where a trustee or his predecessor has incurred personal liability for a tort committed in the course of his administration, the trustee in his representative capacity may be sued and collection had from the trust property, if the court shall determine in such action that

(1) The tort was a common incident of the kind of business activity in which the trustee or his predecessor was properly engaged for the trust; or

(2) That, although the tort was not a common incident of such activity, neither the trustee nor his predecessor, nor any officer or employee of the trustee or his predecessor, was guilty of personal fault in incurring the liability; or

(3) That, although the tort did not fall within subdivision (1) or (2) above, it increased the value of the trust property.

If the tort is within subdivision (1) or (2) above, collection may be had of the full amount of damage proved; and if the tort is within subdivision (3) above, collection may be had only to the extent of the increase in the value of the trust property.

(b) In an action against the trustee in his representative capacity under this section the plaintiff need not prove that the trustee could have secured reimbursement from the trust fund if he had paid the plaintiff's claim.

(c) No judgment shall be rendered in favor of the plaintiff in such action unless he proves that within 30 days after the beginning of the action, or within such other period as the court may fix and more than 30 days prior to obtaining the judgment, he notified each of the beneficiaries known to the trustees who then had a present interest of the existence and nature of the action. Such notice shall be given by mailing copies thereof in postpaid envelopes addressed to such beneficiaries at their last known addresses. The trustees shall furnish the plaintiff a list of such beneficiaries and their addresses, within 10 days after written demand therefor, and notification of the persons on such list shall constitute compliance with the duty placed on the plaintiff by this section. Any beneficiary may intervene in such action and contest the right of the plaintiff to recover.

(d) The trustee may also be held personally liable for any tort committed by him, or by his agents or employees in the course of their employments, subject to the rights of exoneration or reimbursement provided in G.S. 36A-75.

(e) Nothing in this section shall be construed to change the existing law with regard to the liability of trustees of charitable trusts for torts of themselves or their employees. (1939, c. 197, s. 14; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-77. Withdrawals from mingled trust funds.

Where a person who is a trustee of two or more trusts has mingled the funds of two or more trusts in the same aggregate of cash, or in the same bank or brokerage account or other investment, and a withdrawal is made therefrom by the trustee for his own benefit, or for the benefit of a third person not a beneficiary or creditor of one or more of the trusts, or for an unknown purpose, such a withdrawal shall be charged first to the amount of cash, credit, or other property of the trustee in the mingled fund, if any, and after the exhaustion of the trustee's cash, credit, or other property, then to the several trusts in proportion to their several interests in the cash, credit, or other property at the time of the withdrawal. (1939, c. 197, s. 15; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-78. Power of settlor.

The settlor of any trust affected by this Article may, by provision in the instrument creating the trust if the trust was created by a writing, or by oral statement to the trustee at the time of the creation of the trust if the trust was created orally, or by an amendment of the trust if the settlor reserved the power to amend the trust, relieve liabilities which would otherwise be imposed upon him by this Article; or alter or deny to his trustee any or all of the privileges and powers conferred upon the trustee by this Article; or add duties, restrictions, liabilities, privileges, or powers, to those imposed or granted by this Article; but no act of the settlor shall relieve a trustee from the duties, restrictions, and liabilities imposed upon him by G.S. 36A-62, 36A-63 and G.S. 36A-66. (1939, c. 197, s. 19; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Court May Relieve Trustee of Restriction on Purchasing Trust Property. — This section, by allowing a court of competent jurisdiction to relieve the trustee of "any or all of the duties and restrictions" placed upon him by this Article, gives statutory authority to the court to relieve the trustee of the restriction that he cannot purchase property from the trust. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Johnston, 269 N.C. 701, 153 S.E.2d 449 (1967), decided under prior law.

§ 36A-81. Liabilities for violations of Article.

Uniform Common Trust Fund Act.

§ 36A-90. Establishment of common trust funds.

(a) Any bank or trust company duly authorized to act as a fiduciary in this State may establish and maintain one or more common trust funds for the collective investment of funds held in a fiduciary capacity by such bank or trust company hereafter referred to as the "maintaining bank". The maintaining bank may include for the purposes of collective investment in such common trust fund or funds established and maintained by it, funds held in a fiduciary capacity by any other bank or trust company duly authorized to act as a fiduciary, wherever located, which other bank or trust company is hereinafter referred to as the "participating bank".

Provided, however, that the relationship between the maintaining bank and the participating bank is (i) the maintaining bank owns, controls or is affiliated with the participating bank or (ii) a bank holding company owns, controls or is affiliated with both the maintaining bank and the participating bank.

(b) For the purposes of this section, a bank or trust company shall be considered to be owned, controlled or affiliated if twenty-five percent (25%) or more of any class of its voting stock is owned by a bank or bank holding company or if twenty-five percent (25%) or more of any class of its voting stock is owned by one person or no more than 10 persons who are the same person or persons who own twenty-five percent (25%) or more of any class of the voting stock of the maintaining bank.

application to the superior court, secure approval of such an accounting on such conditions as the court may establish. This section shall not affect the duties of the trustees of the participating trusts under the common trust fund to render accounts of their several trusts. (1939, c. 200, s. 2; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

§ 36A-92. Supervision by State Banking Commission.

Article 7.

Trusts of Death Benefits.

§ 36A-100. Interest of trustee as beneficiary of life insurance or other death benefit sufficient to support inter vivos or testamentary trust.

(a) The interest of a trustee as the beneficiary of a life insurance policy is a sufficient property interest or res to support the creation of an inter vivos or testamentary trust notwithstanding the fact that the insured or any other person or persons reserves or has the right to exercise any one or more of the following rights or powers:

(1) To change the beneficiary,
(2) To surrender the policy and receive the cash surrender value,
(3) To borrow from the insurance company issuing the said policy or elsewhere using the said policy as collateral security,
(4) To assign the said policy, or
(5) To exercise any other right in connection with the said policy commonly known as an incident of ownership thereof.

The term "life insurance policy" includes but is not limited to life, annuity, and endowment contracts, or any variation or combination thereof, and any agreement entered into by an insurance company in connection therewith.

(b) The interest of a trustee as the beneficiary of a death benefit under an employee benefit plan or group life insurance policy is a sufficient property interest or res to support the creation of an inter vivos or testamentary trust notwithstanding the fact that the insured, employer, insurer or administrator of the plan reserves or has the right to revoke or otherwise defeat the designation or assignment or to exercise any one or more of the rights or powers incident to employee benefit plans or group life insurance policies.

The term "employee benefit plan" includes but is not limited to pension, retirement, death benefit, deferred compensation, employment, agency, retirement annuity, stock bonus, profit-sharing or employees' savings contracts, plans, systems or trusts; and trusts, securities or accounts established or held pursuant to the federal Self-Employed Individuals Tax Retirement Act of 1962, the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, or similar legislation. The term "group life insurance policy" includes but is not limited to group life, industrial life, accident, and health insurance policies having death benefits.

(c) A person having the right to designate the beneficiary under a life insurance policy, employee benefit plan or group life insurance policy described in subsection (a) or (b) of this section may designate as such beneficiary a trustee named or to be named in his will whether or not the will is in existence at the time of the designation. The proceeds received by the trustee shall be held and disposed of as part of the trust estate under the terms of the will as they exist at the death of the testator. If no qualified trustee makes claim to the proceeds within six months after the death of the decedent or if within that period it is established that no trustee can qualify to receive the proceeds, payments shall be made to the personal representative of the estate of the person making the designation unless it is otherwise provided by an alternative designation or by the policy or plan. The proceeds received by the trustee shall not be subject to claims against the estate of the decedent or to estate or inheritance taxes to any greater extent than if the proceeds were payable directly to the beneficiary or beneficiaries named in the trust. The proceeds may be commingled with any other assets which may properly become part of such trust, but the proceeds shall not become part of the decedent's estate for purposes of trust administration unless the will of the decedent expressly so provides.

(d) Pursuant to the preceding subsection (c) of this section, a decedent may designate a trustee named or to be named in his will as beneficiary of an annuity or other payment described in section 2039(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws. The decedent's will may prohibit the use of such an annuity or other payment for the benefit of the decedent's estate. (1957, c. 1444, s. 1; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1999-337, s. 7.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-337, s. 46, provides: "This act does not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by this act before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor does it affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal."

CASE NOTES

Formality of Will Not Necessary in Executive of Insurance Trust. — The mere fact that the proceeds are not payable until the death of the insured does not make a disposition testamentary. An insurance trust will be upheld even though it has not been executed with the formality necessary to constitute a will. Ballard v. Lance, 6 N.C. App. 24, 169 S.E.2d 199 (1969), decided under prior law.

§ 36A-101. Applicability and construction of Article.

G.S. 36A-100 applies to any beneficiary designation made before or after January 1, 1978, by a person who dies on or after that date. It does not create any implication of invalidity or ineffectiveness as to any beneficiary designation made by a person who dies before January 1, 1978. If any part of the Article is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect the validity of the remaining provisions of this Article. (1957, c. 1444, s. 2; 1977, c. 502, s. 2.)

Article 8.

Testamentary Trustees.

§ 36A-107. Trustees in wills to qualify and file inventories and accounts.

Trustees appointed in any will admitted to probate in this State, into whose hands assets come under the provisions of the will, shall first qualify under the laws applicable to executors, and shall file in the office of the clerk of the county where the will is probated inventories of the assets which come into his hands and annual and final accounts thereof, such as are required of executors and administrators. The power of the clerk to enforce the filing and his duties in respect to auditing and approving shall be the same as in such cases. This section shall not apply to the extent that any will makes a different provision. (1907, c. 804; C.S., s. 51; 1961, c. 519; 1965, c. 1176, s. 1; 1973, c. 1329, s. 4; 1977, c. 502, s. 2; 1985, c. 377, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The trustee's legal existence is derived from the instrument creating the trust, not from adminicular proceedings relating to qualification, posting bond, etc. The trustee takes his position by virtue of the donative acts of the grantor and not from the authority of the court. Lentz v. Lentz, 5 N.C. App. 309, 168 S.E.2d 437 (1969), decided under prior law.

Valid Conveyance Is Not Made Void by Failure of Trustee to Qualify. — An otherwise valid conveyance by a testamentary trustee is not made void by reason of his failure to first qualify as now required by this section. Lentz v. Lentz, 5 N.C. App. 309, 168 S.E.2d 437 (1969), decided under prior law.

There is no requirement that a life tenant must account to the court or to a remainderman. Godfrey v. Patrick, 8 N.C. App. 510, 174 S.E.2d 674 (1970), decided under prior law.

Actions of Trustee Not Shown by Increase in Money. — The mere fact that trust made money is not sufficient to prove that defendant trustee acted openly, fairly and honestly. Estate of Smith ex rel. Smith v. Underwood, 127 N.C. App. 1, 487 S.E.2d 807 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 398, 494 S.E.2d 410 (1997).

Effect Must Be Given a Provision in a Will Which Exempts the Testamentary Trustee from Regular Accountings. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable C.G. Smith, 41 N.C.A.G. 757 (1952), issued under prior law.

§ 36A-108. Registration and indexing.

The Administrative Office of the Courts is authorized to adopt rules regulating the registration or indexing of testamentary trusts. (1985, c. 377, s. 2.)

Article 9.

Alienability of Beneficial Interest; Spendthrift Trust.

§ 36A-115. Alienability of beneficiary's interest; spendthrift trusts.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) hereof, all estates or interests of trust beneficiaries are alienable either voluntarily or involuntarily to the same extent as are legal estates or interests of a similar nature.

(b) Subsection (a) hereof shall not apply to a beneficiary's estate or interest in any one or any combination of one or more of the trusts described below, in which the beneficiary's estate or interest shall not be alienable either voluntarily or involuntarily.

(1) Discretionary Trust. — A trust wherein the amount to be received by the beneficiary, including whether or not the beneficiary is to receive anything at all, is within the discretion of the trustee. A discretionary trust within the meaning of this subsection shall also include a trust for the benefit of one or more classes of beneficiaries as defined in the trust, wherein the amount to be received by any beneficiary or class of beneficiaries, including whether or not that beneficiary or class of beneficiaries is to receive anything at all, is determined by the board of directors of a certification entity. A certification entity is one that delivers on a yearly basis to the trustee a plan describing the categories of persons or entities to whom trust distributions will be made and explaining how each category falls within the definition of class or classes of beneficiaries defined in the trust.

(2) Support Trust. — A trust wherein the trustee has no duty to pay or distribute any particular amount to the beneficiary, but has only a duty to pay or distribute to the beneficiary, or to apply on behalf of the beneficiary such sums as the trustee shall, in his discretion, determine are appropriate for the support, education or maintenance of the beneficiary.

(3) Protective Trust. — A trust wherein the creating instrument provides that the interest of the beneficiary shall cease if

a. The beneficiary alienates or attempts to alienate that interest; or

b. Any creditor attempts to reach the beneficiary's interest by attachment, levy, or otherwise; or

c. The beneficiary becomes insolvent or bankrupt. (1979, c. 180, s. 1; 2000-147, s. 7.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 180, s. 3, provided: "This act shall become effective on October 1, 1979 and shall apply to trusts created on or after the effective date."

Session Laws 2000-147, s. 8(a)-(c), provides:

"(a) Interpretation of Act.--The foregoing sections of this act provide an additional and alternative method for the doing of the things authorized by the act, are supplemental and additional to powers conferred by other laws, and do not derogate any powers now existing.

"(b) References in this act to specific sections or Chapters of the General Statutes are intended to be references to those sections or Chapters as amended and as they may be amended from time to time by the General Assembly.

"(c) This act, being necessary for the health and welfare of the people of the State, shall be liberally construed to effect its purposes."

Session Laws 2000-147, s. 8(d), contains a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-147, s. 7, effective August 2, 2000, added

CASE NOTES

Trust which was created prior to October 1, 1979, was not subject to this section. Lineback ex rel. Hutchens v. Stout, 79 N.C. App. 292, 339 S.E.2d 103 (1986), decided under law in effect prior to this section.

Testamentary trust created for "the lifetime" of beneficiary, the disabled daughter of settlor, containing provision for the distribution of the trust corpus remaining upon beneficiary's death, which was designed so that trust funds would be used to provide supplemental, rather than total, support for the beneficiary, was a discretionary trust and the superior court erred in requiring trustee to expend funds from the trust for the general welfare, support, maintenance and benefit of the beneficiary. Lineback ex rel. Hutchens v. Stout, 79 N.C. App. 292, 339 S.E.2d 103 (1986), decided under law in effect prior to this section.

Applied in Gray v. Ingles Mkts., Inc. Employees' Stock Bonus Plan & Trust (In re DeWeese), 47 Bankr. 251 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1985).

Article 10.

Trust Accounts in Financial Institutions.

§ 36A-120. Payable on Death accounts in financial institution.

Payable on Death accounts created under the provisions of G.S. 53-146.2, G.S. 54C-166, G.S. 54-109.57 or G.S. 54B-129 are governed by the provisions of those statutes. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1078, s. 8; 2001-267, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-267, s. 5, effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to accounts opened on or after that date, substituted "Payable on Death accounts" for "Discretionary revocable trust accounts" in the catchline and for "Trusts" at the beginning of the section, and inserted "G.S. 54C-166."

Article 11.

Termination of Small Trusts.

§ 36A-125: Repealed by Session Laws 1999-266, s. 1, effective January 1, 2000.

Cross References. — As to current provisions on modification and termination of irrevocable trusts, see § 36A-125.1 et seq.

Editor's Note. — Prior to its repeal, this section had been amended by Session Laws 1999-337, s. 8, effective July 22, 1999, which had inserted "estate or" in subsection (a).

Session Laws 1999-266, s. 3, made this act effective January 1, 2000 and provides in part that Session Laws 1999-266, s. 1, is applicable to all trusts created before or after that date.

Article 11A.

Modification and Termination of Irrevocable Trusts.

§ 36A-125.1. Definitions.

As used in this section:

(1) "Beneficiary" means a person who has a present or future interest, vested or contingent, in a trust, including any such person who is not in esse or cannot be determined until the occurrence of a future event.

(2) "Person" means an individual person, a corporation, an organization, or other legal entity.

(3) "Trust" means an express noncharitable trust. A trust is noncharitable if it is neither a wholly charitable trust nor a charitable split-interest trust subject to the provisions of Article 4 or 4A of Chapter 36A of the General Statutes. The term "trust" does not include constructive trusts, resulting trusts, conservatorships, personal representatives, Payable on Death accounts as defined in G.S. 53-146.2, 54-109.57, G.S. 54C-166, and G.S. 54B-130, trust funds subject to G.S. 90-210.61, custodial arrangements pursuant to G.S. 33A-1 through G.S. 33A-24 and G.S. 33B-1 through G.S. 33B-22, business trusts providing for certificates to be issued to beneficiaries, common trust funds, voting trusts, security arrangements, liquidation trusts, and trusts for the primary purpose of paying debts, dividends, interest, salaries, wages, profits, pensions, or employee benefits of any kind, or any arrangement under which a person is nominee or escrowee for another.

(4) "Sole beneficiary" means a beneficiary of a trust for which the settlor does not manifest an intention to give a beneficial interest to anyone else.

(5) "Sui juris" means a person who is in esse and not a minor or otherwise legally incapacitated. With regard to a beneficiary, "sui juris" also means that such beneficiary is ascertained and that the trustee knows the identity of the beneficiary.

(6) "Trustee" means the trustee or trustees acting under an irrevocable trust. (1999-266, s. 2; 2001-267, s. 6.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-266, s. 3, made this Article effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all trusts created before or after that date, except that G.S. 36A-125.6(b) shall not apply to trusts created before October 1, 1991, if the trust instrument contains spendthrift or similar protective provisions, including provisions described in G.S. 36A-115(b)(3).

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-267, s. 6, effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to accounts opened on or after that date, in subdivision (3), substituted "Payable on Death accounts" for "trust accounts," and inserted "G.S. 54C-166."

§ 36A-125.2. Modification or termination where settlor is sole beneficiary.

If a settlor is sui juris and the sole beneficiary of an irrevocable trust, the settlor may compel the modification or termination of the trust without the approval of the court even though the purposes for which the trust was created have not been accomplished. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.3. Modification or termination by consent of settlor and beneficiaries.

(a) If the settlor and all beneficiaries of an irrevocable trust are sui juris and consent, they may compel the modification or termination of the trust without the approval of the court even though the purposes for which the trust was created have not been accomplished.

(b) If any beneficiary does not consent to the modification or termination of the trust or is not sui juris, the other beneficiaries may institute a proceeding before the superior court to compel a modification or partial termination of the trust. The court may, with the consent of the settlor, allow such a modification or partial termination upon a finding that such action would not substantially impair the interests of the beneficiaries who do not consent or who are not sui juris. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.4. Modification or termination by consent of beneficiaries.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, if all beneficiaries of an irrevocable trust consent, they may compel modification or termination of the trust in a proceeding before the superior court.

(b) Where the beneficiaries of an irrevocable trust seek to compel a termination of the trust or modify it in a manner that affects its continuance according to its terms, and if the continuance of the trust is necessary to carry out a material purpose of the trust, the trust cannot be modified or terminated unless the court in its discretion determines that the reason for modifying or terminating the trust under the circumstances substantially outweighs the interest in accomplishing a material purpose of the trust. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.5. Provisions relating to consent of beneficiaries.

For purposes of this Article:

(1) The consent of a beneficiary who is not sui juris may be given in proceedings before the court by a guardian ad litem appointed for that beneficiary if the guardian ad litem finds that it would be appropriate to do so. The guardian ad litem may base a decision to consent to modification or termination of a trust upon a finding that living members of the beneficiary's family would generally benefit from such action.

(2) In determining the class of beneficiaries whose consent is necessary to modify or terminate a trust, the presumption of fertility is rebuttable.

(3) If the trust provides for the disposition of property to a class of persons described only as "heirs" or "next of kin" of any person or uses other words that describe the class of all persons who would take under the rules of intestacy, the court may limit the class of beneficiaries whose consent is needed to compel the modification or termination of the trust to the beneficiaries who are reasonably likely to take under the circumstances. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.6. Modification or termination of a small trust.

(a) In a proceeding before the superior court, the court in its discretion may modify or terminate an irrevocable trust if the court determines that the fair market value of the assets held in trust is so low that the continuance of the trust pursuant to its terms in relation to the cost of its administration would defeat or substantially impair the accomplishment of the purposes of the trust.

(b) (See editor's note for applicability) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, if at any time the trustee of an irrevocable trust determines in good faith that the fair market value of the assets held in trust is fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) or less, and the continuance of the trust pursuant to its terms in relation to the cost of its administration would defeat or substantially impair the accomplishment of the purposes of the trust, the trustee, without approval of the court, may in its discretion terminate the trust and distribute the trust property. The trust property, including principal and undistributed income, shall be paid, in a manner that conforms as nearly as possible to the intention of the settlor as determined by the trustee from the trust instrument, to any one or more of the beneficiaries to whom the income could be paid, or if there is no beneficiary to whom the income could be paid, to any one or more of the beneficiaries. The trustee may enter into an agreement or make such other provisions that the trustee deems necessary or appropriate to protect the interests of the beneficiaries and to carry out the intent and purpose of the trust. The provisions of this subsection shall not apply where the instrument creating the trust, by specific reference to this section, or to former G.S. 36A-125, provides that it shall not apply.

(c) The trustee shall not be liable for such termination and distribution, notwithstanding the existence or potential existence of other beneficiaries who are not sui juris. Any beneficiary receiving a distribution from a trust terminated under this section shall incur no liability and shall not be required to account to anyone for such distribution. (1999-266, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Section 36A-125, referred to in subsection (b) above, has been repealed. See now § 36A-125.1.

Session Laws 1999-266, s. 3, made this section effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all trusts created before or after that date, except that G.S. 36A-125.6(b) shall not apply to trusts created before October 1, 1991, if the trust instrument contains spendthrift or similar protective provisions, including provisions described in G.S. 36A-115(b)(3).

§ 36A-125.7. Modification or termination because of changed circumstances.

(a) In a proceeding before the superior court, the court in its discretion may modify or terminate an irrevocable trust:

(1) If the purpose of the trust has been fulfilled or has become illegal or impossible of fulfillment; or

(2) If, owing to circumstances not known to the settlor and not anticipated by the settlor, the continuation of the trust under its terms would defeat or substantially impair the accomplishment of the purposes of the trust.

(b) In exercising its discretion under subsection (a) of this section, the court may order the trustee to do acts that are not authorized or are prohibited by the trust instrument if necessary to carry out the purposes of the trust. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.8. Inalienability of the beneficiary's interest.

The court, in exercising its discretion to modify or terminate an irrevocable trust pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 36A-125.4, 36A-125.6(a), and G.S. 36A-125.7, and the trustee, in exercising its discretion to terminate a trust pursuant to G.S. 36A-125.6(b), shall consider provisions making the interest of a beneficiary inalienable, including those described in G.S. 36A-115(b), but the court or trustee is not precluded from the exercise of that discretion solely because of such provisions. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.9. Tax consequences.

The court, in exercising its discretion to modify or terminate an irrevocable trust under the provisions of this Article, and the trustee, in exercising its discretion to terminate a trust pursuant to G.S. 36A-125.6(b), shall consider the tax consequences of such modification or termination, if any, to the trust and the beneficiaries of the trust. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.10. Distribution to minors or incompetents.

If any trust property becomes distributable to a minor or incompetent under this Article it may be distributed:

(1) To the guardian of the estate or general guardian of such beneficiary;
(2) In accordance with the North Carolina Uniform Transfer to Minors Act, Chapter 33A of the General Statutes; or
(3) In accordance with the North Carolina Custodial Trust Act, Chapter 33B of the General Statutes. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.11. Procedure.

A proceeding under this Article may be brought under the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act, Article 26 of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes, the provisions of which shall apply to that proceeding to the extent not inconsistent with this Article. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§ 36A-125.12. Exclusiveness of remedy.

This Article does not include or abridge any other rights or proceedings existing under any other statute or otherwise provided by law to modify, terminate, reform, or rescind an irrevocable trust. (1999-266, s. 2.)

§§ 36A-126 through 36A-129: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 12.

Marital Deduction Trusts.

§ 36A-130. Marital deduction trusts.

(a) If a trust created under a will or trust agreement for the benefit of the spouse of the testator or the grantor of the trust, other than a trust which provides that upon the termination of the income interest that the entire remaining trust estate be paid to the estate of the spouse, requires that all the income of the trust be paid not less frequently than annually to the spouse and a federal estate or gift tax marital deduction is claimed with respect to the trust, then, unless the will or trust agreement specifically provides otherwise by reference to this section, any investment in or retention of unproductive property as an asset of the trust is subject to the power of the spouse to require either that the asset be made productive of income, or that it be converted to assets productive of income, within a reasonable period of time.

(b) If, but for the absence of a direction in the will or trust agreement that accrued income shall be paid to the estate of the spouse, a trust created under a will or trust agreement for the benefit of the spouse of the testator or the grantor of the trust would qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction under section 2056(b)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code or the federal gift tax marital deduction under section 2523(f) of the Internal Revenue Code, then, unless the will or trust agreement specifically provides otherwise by reference to this section, upon the termination of the income interest all accrued or undistributed income of the trust at the death of spouse shall be paid to the personal representative of the spouse's estate in accordance with the Principal and Income Act of 1973, Article 2 of Chapter 37 of the General Statutes. (1991, c. 736, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1991, c. 736, s. 3 makes this Article effective July 16, 1991, and applicable to irrevocable trusts in existence or created on or after that date.

§§ 36A-131 through 36A-134: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 13.

Powers of Trustees.

§ 36A-135. Applicability.

(a) This Article applies only to trustees under express trust agreements, including testamentary trusts, whether the trustee is appointed under an express trust agreement or appointed by the clerk of superior court. This Article does not apply to trustees of:

(1) Resulting or constructive trusts;
(2) Business trusts that provide for certificates to be issued to the beneficiary;
(3) Investment trusts;
(4) Voting trusts;
(5) Security instruments;
(6) Trusts created by the judgment or decree of a court;
(7) Liquidation trusts;
(8) Trusts created for the primary purpose of paying dividends, interest, interest coupons, salaries, wages, pensions or profits, or employee benefits of any kind;
(9) Instruments in which a person is nominee or escrowee for another;
(10) Trusts created in deposits in any financial institution; or
(11) Any other trust the nature of which does not allow for general trust administration.

A trustee shall have all the powers and duties under this Article to the extent that such powers and duties are not inconsistent with the powers and duties imposed in the express trust. The powers and duties of more than one trustee are subject to the provisions of G.S. 36A-73.

(b) Nothing contained in this Article shall be construed as authorizing any departure from the express terms or limitations set forth in any express trust agreement creating or limiting the trustee's powers and duties.

(c) The powers contained in this Article are in addition to any other powers granted or provided by law. (1993, c. 377, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 377, s. 4 made this Article effective December 1, 1993, and applicable to all trusts in existence on December 1, 1993 or created on or after December 1, 1993.

§ 36A-136. Powers of a trustee.

A trustee has the power to perform in a reasonable and prudent manner every act that a reasonable and prudent person would perform incident to the collection, preservation, management, use, and distribution of the trust estate to accomplish the desired result of administering the trust estate legally and in the best interest of the trust beneficiaries, including the following specific powers:

(1) To take possession, custody, or control of assets transferred to the trust.

(2) To retain for such time as the trustee shall deem advisable any property, real or personal, which the trustee may receive, even though the retention of such property by reason of its character, amount, or proportion to the total estate, or for any other reason, would not be appropriate for the trustee apart from this provision.

(3) To receive assets from other fiduciaries or other sources.

(4) To compromise, adjust, arbitrate, sue on or defend, abandon, or otherwise deal with and settle claims in favor of or against the estate.

(5) To make, execute, and deliver all instruments, under seal or otherwise, as may be necessary in the exercise of the powers granted in this section.

(6) To abandon or relinquish all rights in any property when, in the trustee's opinion, acting reasonably and in good faith, the property is valueless, or is so encumbered or is otherwise in such condition that it is of no benefit or value to the trust.

(7) To sell, exchange or otherwise dispose of, or grant options with respect to, any personal property of the trust in the manner prescribed by G.S. 36A-137 and G.S. 36A-138.

(8) To sell, exchange, partition, or otherwise dispose of, or grant options with respect to, any real property of the trust in the manner prescribed by G.S. 36A-139 and G.S. 36A-140, provided that if the terms of an express trust grant the trustee the power to sell, exchange, partition, or otherwise dispose of, or grant options with respect to, any real property, the powers contained in the express trust shall control, and the provisions of G.S. 36A-139 and G.S. 36A-140 shall not apply.

(9) To comply with environmental law:

a. To inspect property held by the trustee, including interests in sole proprietorships, partnerships, or corporations, and any assets owned by any such business enterprise, for the purpose of determining compliance with environmental law affecting such property and to respond to any actual or threatened violation of any environmental law affecting the property held by the trustee;

b. To take any action necessary, on behalf of the estate or trust, to prevent, abate, or otherwise remedy any actual or threatened violation of any environmental law affecting property held by the trustee, either before or after the initiation of an enforcement action by any governmental body;

c. To refuse to accept property in trust if the trustee determines that the property to be donated to the trust either is contaminated by a hazardous substance or is being used for an activity directly or indirectly involving a hazardous substance that could result in liability to the trust or otherwise impair the value of the assets held by the trust;

d. To settle or compromise at any time any and all claims against the trust that may be asserted by a governmental body or private party involving the alleged violation of any environmental law affecting the property held in trust;

e. To disclaim any power granted by a document, statute, or rule of law that, in the sole discretion of the trustee, may cause the trustee to incur personal liability under any environmental law; or

f. To decline to serve as a trustee if the trustee reasonably believes that there is or may be a conflict of interest between the trustee in his fiduciary capacity and the trustee in his individual capacity because of potential claims or liabilities that may be asserted against the trustee on behalf of the trust because of the type or condition of assets held by the trust.

For purposes of this subdivision, the term "environmental law" means any federal, state, or local law, rule, regulation, or ordinance relating to protection of the environment or human health. For purposes of this subdivision, the term "hazardous substance" means any substance defined as hazardous or toxic or otherwise regulated by environmental law. The trustee shall be entitled to charge the cost of any inspection, review, abatement, response, cleanup, or remedial action authorized by this subdivision against the income or principal of the trust. A trustee shall not be personally liable to any beneficiary or other party for a decrease in value of assets in trust by reason of the trustee's compliance with any environmental law, specifically including reporting requirements under such law. Neither the acceptance by the trustee of property or a failure by the trustee to inspect property creates any inference as to whether or not there is or may be liability under any environmental law with respect to such property.

(10) To sell or exercise stock subscription or conversion rights, or to consent, directly or through a committee or other agent, to the reorganization, consolidation, merger, dissolution, or liquidation of a corporate or other business enterprise.

(11) To insure the trust's assets against damage or loss, at the expense of the trust.

(12) To pay taxes, assessments, and other expenses incident to the collection, care, administration, and protection of the trust property.

(13) To pay necessary expenses of administering the trust from the trust property.

(14) To employ persons, firms, and corporations, including agents, auditors, accountants, brokers, attorneys-at-law, attorneys-in-fact, investment advisors, appraisers, custodians, rental agents, realtors, and tax specialists to advise or assist the trustee in the performance of the trustee's administrative duties, and to charge the expense of such employment to the trust.

(15) To continue any business, venture, or farming operation in which the trust has an interest, when such continuation is reasonably necessary or desirable to preserve the value, including goodwill, of the trust's interest in such business.

(16) To incorporate, or participate in the incorporation of, any business or venture in which the trust may have an interest.

(17) To invest and reinvest trust property as the trustee deems advisable in accordance with the provisions of the trust or as provided by law.

(18) To lease any property of the trust for a term of not more than three years.

(19) To foreclose, as an incident to the collection of any bond, note, or other obligation, any mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien securing such bond, note, or other obligation, and to bid on the property at the foreclosure sale, or to acquire the property from the mortgagor or obligor without foreclosure, and to retain the property so bid on or taken over without foreclosure.

(20) To borrow money for such periods of time and upon such terms and conditions as to rates, maturities, renewals, and security as the trustee deems advisable, including the power of a corporate trustee to borrow from the trustee's own banking department, for the sole purpose of paying debts, taxes, and other claims against the trust property as may be required to secure such loan or loans, and to renew existing loans either as to maker or endorser.

(21) To allocate items of income or expense to either trust income or principal, as permitted or provided by law.

(22) To make payments of money, or of property in lieu of money, to or for a minor or incompetent in any one or more of the following ways:

a. To such minor or incompetent directly;

b. To any person or institution providing support, maintenance, education, or medical, surgical, hospital, or other institutional care of such minor or incompetent in direct payment for those services;

c. To the legal or natural guardian of such minor or incompetent;

d. To any person, whether or not appointed guardian of the person by any court, who shall in fact have the care and custody of the person of such minor or incompetent;

e. To a custodian for such beneficiary under a uniform gifts or transfers to minors act.

The fiduciary shall not be under any duty to see the application of the payments so made, if the fiduciary exercised due care in the selection of the person, including the minor or incompetent, to whom the payments were made. The receipt by such person shall be full acquittance to the fiduciary.

(23) To deposit, as a trustee, funds of the trust in a bank, including a bank operated by the trustee upon compliance with the provisions of G.S. 36A-63.

(24) To divide one trust into several trusts and make distributions from those trusts in the following manner:

a. To divide the funds and properties constituting any trust into two or more identical separate trusts that represent two or more fractional shares of the funds and properties being divided, or to hold any addition or contribution to an existing trust as a separate, identical trust, and to make distributions of income and principal by a method other than pro rata from the separate trusts so created as the fiduciary determines to be in the best interests of the trust beneficiaries. In any case where two separate, identical trusts are created pursuant to this sub-subdivision, one of which is fully exempt from the federal generation-skipping transfer tax and one of which is fully subject to that tax, the fiduciary may thereafter, to the extent possible consistent with the terms of the governing instrument, determine the value of any mandatory or discretionary distributions to trust beneficiaries on the basis of the combined value of both trusts, but may satisfy such distributions by a method other than pro rata from the separate trusts in a manner designed to minimize the current and potential generation-skipping transfer tax.

b. To divide the funds and properties constituting any trusts into two or more separate, nonidentical trusts if (i) the new trusts so created are not inconsistent with the terms of the governing instrument, and (ii) the terms of the new trusts provide in the aggregate for the same succession of interests and beneficiaries as are provided in the original trust.

Funding of the new trusts created pursuant to the authority granted under this subdivision must either (i) be carried out by pro rata allocation of the assets of the original trust; (ii) be based upon the fair market value of the assets at the date of division; or (iii) be carried out in a manner fairly reflecting the net appreciation or depreciation of the trust assets measured from the valuation date to the date of division. (1993, c. 377, s. 1; 1995, c. 235, s. 4; c. 509, s. 24; 1999-144, s. 2.)

If the clerk of superior court is petitioned and provided with satisfactory proof that the best interest of the estate will be served by private sale, the clerk may authorize a private sale in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1-339.33 through G.S. 1-339.40. § 36A-146. Trusts for cemetery lots.

A trust, contract, or other arrangement to provide for the care of a cemetery lot, grave, crypt, niche, mausoleum, columbarium, grave marker, or monument is valid without regard to remoteness of vesting, duration of the arrangement, or lack of definite beneficiaries to enforce the trust, provided that the trust, contract, or other arrangement meets the requirements of G.S. 28A-19-10, Article 4 of Chapter 65 of the General Statutes, Article 9 of Chapter 65 of the General Statutes, or other applicable law. This section does not revoke, repeal, supersede, or diminish G.S. 36A-49. (1995, c. 225, s. 1.)

§ 36A-147. Trusts for pets.

(a) Subject to the provisions of this section, a trust for the care of one or more designated domestic or pet animals alive at the time of creation of the trust is valid.

(b) Except as expressly provided otherwise in the trust instrument, no portion of the principal or income may be converted to the use of the trustee or to any use other than for the benefit of the designated animal or animals.

(c) The trust terminates at the death of the animal or last surviving animal. Upon termination, the trustee shall transfer the unexpended trust property in the following order:

(1) As directed in the trust instrument;

(2) If the trust was created in a preresiduary clause in the transferor's will or in a codicil to the transferor's will, under the residuary clause in the transferor's will;

(3) If no taker is produced by the application of subdivision (1) or (2) of this subsection, to the transferor or the transferor's heirs determined as of the date of the transferor's death under Chapter 29 of the General Statutes.

(d) The intended use of the principal or income can be enforced by an individual designated for that purpose in the trust instrument or, if none, by an individual appointed by the clerk of superior court having jurisdiction over the decedent's estate upon application to the clerk by an individual.

(e) Except as ordered by the clerk or required by the trust instrument, no filing, report, registration, periodic accounting, separate maintenance of funds, appointment, bond, or fee is required by reason of the existence of the fiduciary relationship of the trustee.

(f) A governing instrument shall be liberally construed to bring the transfer within this section, to presume against the merely precatory or honorary nature of the disposition, and to carry out the general intent of the transferor. Extrinsic evidence shall be admissible in determining the transferor's intent.

(g) The clerk may reduce the amount of the property transferred, if the clerk determines that the amount substantially exceeds the amount required for the intended use. The amount of the reduction, if any, passes as unexpended trust property under subsection (c) of this section.

(h) If no trustee is designated or if no designated trustee agrees to serve or is able to serve, the clerk shall name a trustee. The clerk may order the transfer of the property to another trustee, if required to assure that the intended use is carried out and if no successor trustee is designated in the trust instrument or if no designated successor trustee agrees to serve or is able to serve. The clerk may also make such other orders and determinations as shall be advisable to carry out the intent of the transferor and the purpose of this section. (1995, c. 225, s. 1.)

§ 36A-148. Termination of small trusts.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Article, a trust created under this Article shall terminate upon the balance of the trust corpus falling below the sum of one hundred dollars ($100.00), at which time the remaining balance shall be disbursed as provided in G.S. 36A-147(c). Article 15.

North Carolina Uniform Prudent Investor Act.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

§ 36A-161. Prudent investor rule; applicability.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this section, a trustee who invests and manages trust assets owes a duty to the beneficiaries of the trust to comply with the prudent investor rule set forth in this Article.

(b) The prudent investor rule, a default rule, may be expanded, restricted, eliminated, or otherwise altered by the provisions of a trust which govern or direct investments in a manner inconsistent with this Article. A trustee is not liable to a beneficiary to the extent that the trustee acted in reasonable reliance on the provisions of the trust.

(c) This Article applies to express trusts, including charitable, inter vivos, and testamentary trusts, and trustees of those trusts. The following terms or comparable language in the provisions of a trust, unless otherwise limited or modified, authorizes any investment or strategy permitted under this Article: "investments in accordance with Article 15 of Chapter 36A," "investments permissible by law for investment of trust funds," "legal investments," "authorized investments," "using the judgment and care under the circumstances then prevailing that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence exercise in the management of their own affairs, not in regard to speculation but in regard to the permanent disposition of their funds, considering the probable income as well as the probable safety of their capital," "prudent man rule," "prudent trustee rule," "prudent person rule," and "prudent investor rule."

This Article also applies where a trust contains no investment standard. A reference to "Chapter 36A" in a trust instrument governing a trust executed prior to the effective date of this Article shall be construed to be a reference to this Article.

(d) This Article does not apply:
(1) Unless the provisions of the trust provide otherwise by specific reference to this Article, to:
a. Trusts under any federal employee retirement income security statute or other retirement or pension trusts;
b. Trusts which are created by legislative act;
c. Trusts which are created by or pursuant to premarital or postmarital agreements, divorce settlements, settlements of other proceedings or disputes;
d. Transfers under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act;
e. Transfers under the Uniform Custodial Trust Act; or
f. Honorary trusts, trusts for pets, and trusts for cemetery lots.
(2) To trusts imposed or required under another chapter of the General Statutes or by rule in which the investment of the trust funds is regulated by the other chapter or by rule, unless a provision of the other chapter or the rule provides otherwise by a specific reference to this Article.
(3) To:
a. Constructive trusts and resulting trusts;
b. Guardianship, conservatorship, and estates managed by personal representatives;
c. Payable on Death accounts as defined in G.S. 53-146.2, 54-109.57, 54C-166, and G.S. 54B-130; or
d. Business trusts providing for certificates to be issued to beneficiaries, common trust funds, voting trusts, security arrangements, liquidation trusts, and trusts for the primary purpose of paying debts, dividends, interests, salaries, wages, profits, pensions, or employee benefits of any kind, and any arrangement under which a person is nominee or escrowee for another. (1999-215, s. 1; 2001-267, s. 7.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section imposes the obligation of prudence in the conduct of investment functions and identifies further sections of the Act that specify the attributes of prudent conduct.

Origins. The prudence standard for trust investing traces back to Harvard College v. Amory, 26 Mass. (9 Pick.) 446 (1830). Trustees should "observe how men of prudence, discretion and intelligence manage their own affairs, not in regard to speculation, but in regard to the permanent disposition of their funds, considering the probable income, as well as the probable safety of the capital to be invested." Id. at 461.

Prior legislation. The Model Prudent Man Rule Statute (1942), sponsored by the American Bankers Association, undertook to codify the language of the Amory case. See Mayo A. Shattuck, The Development of the Prudent Man Rule for Fiduciary Investment in the United States in the Twentieth Century, 12 Ohio State L.J. 491, at 501 (1951); for the text of the model act, which inspired many state statutes, see id. at 508-09. Another prominent codification of the Amory standard is Uniform Probate Code § 7-302 (1969), which provides that "the trustee shall observe the standards in dealing with the trust assets that would be observed by a prudent man dealing with the property of another...."

Congress has imposed a comparable prudence standard for the administration of pension and employee benefit trusts in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA), enacted in 1974. ERISA § 404(a)(1)(B), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a), provides that "a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and ... with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of like character and with like aims..."

Prior Restatement. The Restatement of Trusts 2d (1959) also tracked the language of the Amory case: "In making investments of trust funds the trustee is under a duty to the beneficiary ... to make such investments and only such investments as a prudent man would make of his own property having in view the preservation of the estate and the amount and regularity of the income to be derived...." Restatement of Trusts 2d § 227 (1959).

Objective standard. The concept of prudence in the judicial opinions and legislation is essentially relational or comparative. It resembles in this respect the "reasonable person" rule of tort law. A prudent trustee behaves as other trustees similarly situated would behave. The standard is, therefore, objective rather than subjective. Sections 2 through 9 of this Act identify the main factors that bear on prudent investment behavior.

Variation. Almost all of the rules of trust law are default rules, that is, rules that the settlor may alter or abrogate. Subsection (b) carries forward this traditional attribute of trust law. Traditional trust law also allows the beneficiaries of the trust to excuse its performance, when they are all capable and not misinformed. Restatement of Trusts 2d § 216 (1959).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-215, s. 4, made this Article effective January 1, 2000.

Session Laws 1999-215, s. 3, provides: "The Revisor of Statutes shall cause to be printed along with this act all relevant portions of the Official Comments to the Uniform Prudent Investor Act and all explanatory comments of the drafters of this act as the Revisor deems appropriate."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-267, s. 7, effective October 1, 2001, and applicable to accounts opened on or after that date, substituted "Payable on Death accounts" for "Trust accounts" at the beginning of subsection (d)(3)c.

§ 36A-162. Standard of care; portfolio strategy; risk and return objectives.

(a) A trustee shall invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution.

(b) A trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets must be evaluated not in isolation but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust.

(c) Among circumstances that a trustee shall consider in investing and managing trust assets are any of the following as are relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

(1) General economic conditions;
(2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation;
(3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies;
(4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio, which may include financial assets, interests in closely held enterprises, tangible and intangible personal property, and real property;
(5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital;
(6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee;
(7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital; and
(8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

(d) A trustee shall make a reasonable effort to verify facts relevant to the investment and management of trust assets.

(e) A trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment consistent with the standards of this Article.

(f) A trustee who has special skills or expertise, or is named trustee in reliance upon the trustee's representation that the trustee has special skills or expertise, has a duty to use those special skills or expertise. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Section 2 is the heart of the Act. Subsections (a), (b), and (c) are patterned loosely on the language of the Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227 (1992), and on the 1991 Illinois statute, 760 § ILCS 5/5a (1992). Subsection (f) is derived from Uniform Probate Code § 7-302 (1969).

Objective standard. Subsection (a) of this Act carries forward the relational and objective standard made familiar in the Amory case, in earlier prudent investor legislation, and in the Restatements. Early formulations of the prudent person rule were sometimes troubled by the effort to distinguish between the standard of a prudent person investing for another and investing on his or her own account. The language of subsection (a), by relating the trustee's duty to "the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust," should put such questions to rest. The standard is the standard of the prudent investor similarly situated.

Portfolio standard. Subsection (b) emphasizes the consolidated portfolio standard for evaluating investment decisions. An investment that might be imprudent standing alone can become prudent if undertaken in sensible relation to other trust assets, or to other nontrust assets. In the trust setting the term "portfolio" embraces the entire trust estate.

Risk and return. Subsection (b) also sounds the main theme of modern investment practice, sensitivity to the risk/return curve. See generally the works cited in the Prefatory Note to this Act, under "Literature." Returns correlate strongly with risk, but tolerance for risk varies greatly with the financial and other circumstances of the investor, or in the case of a trust, with the purposes of the trust and the relevant circumstances of the beneficiaries. A trust whose main purpose is to support an elderly widow of modest means will have a lower risk tolerance than a trust to accumulate for a young scion of great wealth.

Subsection (b) of this Act follows Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227(a), which provides that the standard of prudent investing "requires the exercise of reasonable care, skill, and caution, and is to be applied to investments not in isolation but in the context of the trust portfolio and as a part of an overall investment strategy, which should incorporate risk and return objectives reasonably suitable to the trust."

Factors affecting investment. Subsection (c) points to certain of the factors that commonly bear on risk/return preferences in fiduciary investing. This listing is nonexclusive. Tax considerations, such as preserving the stepped up basis on death under Internal Revenue Code § 1014 for low-basis assets, have traditionally been exceptionally important in estate planning for affluent persons. Under the present recognition rules of the federal income tax, taxable investors, including trust beneficiaries, are in general best served by an investment strategy that minimizes the taxation incident to portfolio turnover. See generally Robert H. Jeffrey & Robert D. Arnott, Is Your Alpha Big Enough to Cover Its Taxes?, Journal of Portfolio Management 15 (Spring 1993).

Another familiar example of how tax considerations bear upon trust investing: In a regime of pass-through taxation, it may be prudent for the trust to buy lower yielding tax-exempt securities for high-bracket taxpayers, whereas it would ordinarily be imprudent for the trustees of a charitable trust, whose income is tax exempt, to accept the lowered yields associated with tax-exempt securities.

When tax considerations affect beneficiaries differently, the trustee's duty of impartiality requires attention to the competing interests of each of them.

Subsection (c)(8), allowing the trustee to take into account any preferences of the beneficiaries respecting heirlooms or other prized assets, derives from the Illinois act, 760 ILCS § 5/5(a)(4) (1992).

Duty to monitor. Subsections (a) through (d) apply both to investing and managing trust assets. "Managing" embraces monitoring, that is, the trustee's continuing responsibility for oversight of the suitability of investments already made as well as the trustee's decisions respecting new investments.

Duty to investigate. Subsection (d) carries forward the traditional responsibility of the fiduciary investor to examine information likely to bear importantly on the value or the security of an investment — for example, audit reports or records of title. E.g., Estate of Collins, 72 Cal. App. 3d 663, 139 Cal. Rptr. 644 (1977) (trustees lent on a junior mortgage on unimproved real estate, failed to have land appraised, and accepted an unaudited financial statement; held liable for losses).

Abrogating categoric restrictions. Subsection 2(e) clarifies that no particular kind of property or type of investment is inherently imprudent. Traditional trust law was encumbered with a variety of categoric exclusions, such as prohibitions on junior mortgages or new ventures. In some states legislation created so-called "legal lists" of approved trust investments. The universe of investment products changes incessantly. Investments that were at one time thought too risky, such as equities, or more recently, futures, are now used in fiduciary portfolios. By contrast, the investment that was at one time thought ideal for trusts, the long-term bond, has been discovered to import a level of risk and volatility — in this case, inflation risk — that had not been anticipated. Accordingly, section 2(e) of this Act follows Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule in abrogating categoric restrictions. The Restatement says: "Specific investments or techniques are not per se prudent or imprudent. The riskiness of a specific property, and thus the propriety of its inclusion in the trust estate, is not judged in the abstract but in terms of its anticipated effect on the particular trust's portfolio." Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227, Comment f, at 24 (1992). The premise of subsection 2(e) is that trust beneficiaries are better protected by the Act's emphasis on close attention to risk/return objectives as prescribed in subsection 2(b) than in attempts to identify categories of investment that are per se prudent or imprudent.

The Act impliedly disavows the emphasis in older law on avoiding "speculative" or "risky" investments. Low levels of risk may be appropriate in some trust settings but inappropriate in others. It is the trustee's task to invest at a risk level that is suitable to the purposes of the trust.

The abolition of categoric restrictions against types of investment in no way alters the trustee's conventional duty of loyalty, which is reiterated for the purposes of this Act in Section 5. For example, were the trustee to invest in a second mortgage on a piece of real property owned by the trustee, the investment would be wrongful on account of the trustee's breach of the duty to abstain from self-dealing, even though the investment would no longer automatically offend the former categoric restriction against fiduciary investments in junior mortgages.

Professional fiduciaries. The distinction taken in subsection (f) between amateur and professional trustees is familiar law. The prudent investor standard applies to a range of fiduciaries, from the most sophisticated professional investment management firms and corporate fiduciaries, to family members of minimal experience. Because the standard of prudence is relational, it follows that the standard for professional trustees is the standard of prudent professionals; for amateurs, it is the standard of prudent amateurs. Restatement of Trusts 2d § 174 (1959) provides: "The trustee is under a duty to the beneficiary in administering the trust to exercise such care and skill as a man of ordinary prudence would exercise in dealing with his own property; and if the trustee has or procures his appointment as trustee by representing that he has greater skill than that of a man of ordinary prudence, he is under a duty to exercise such skill." Case law strongly supports the concept of the higher standard of care for the trustee representing itself to be expert or professional. See Annot., Standard of Care Required of Trustee Representing Itself to Have Expert Knowledge or Skill, 91 A.L.R. 3d 904 (1979) & 1992 Supp. at 48-49.

The Drafting Committee declined the suggestion that the Act should create an exception to the prudent investor rule (or to the diversification requirement of Section 3) in the case of smaller trusts. The Committee believes that subsections (b) and (c) of the Act emphasize factors that are sensitive to the traits of small trusts; and that subsection (f) adjusts helpfully for the distinction between professional and amateur trusteeship. Furthermore, it is always open to the settlor of a trust under Section 1(b) of the Act to reduce the trustee's standard of care if the settlor deems such a step appropriate. The official comments to the 1992 Restatement observe that pooled investments, such as mutual funds and bank common trust funds, are especially suitable for small trusts. Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227, Comments h, m, at 28, 51; reporter's note to Comment g, id. at 83.

Matters of proof. Although virtually all express trusts are created by written instrument, oral trusts are known, and accordingly, this Act presupposes no formal requirement that trust terms be in writing. When there is a written trust instrument, modern authority strongly favors allowing evidence extrinsic to the instrument to be consulted for the purpose of ascertaining the settlor's intent. See Uniform Probate Code § 2-601 (1990), Comment; Restatement (Third) of Property: Donative Transfers (Preliminary Draft No. 2, ch. 11, Sept. 11, 1992).

§ 36A-163. Diversification.

A trustee shall diversify the investments of the trust unless the trustee reasonably determines that, because of special circumstances, the purposes of the trust are better served without diversifying. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

The language of this section derives from Restatement of Trusts 2d § 228 (1959). ERISA insists upon a comparable rule for pension trusts. ERISA § 404(a)(1)(C), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(C). Case law overwhelmingly supports the duty to diversify. See Annot., Duty of Trustee to Diversify Investments, and Liability for Failure to Do So, 24 A.L.R. 3d 730 (1969) & 1992 Supp. at 78-79.

The 1992 Restatement of Trusts takes the significant step of integrating the diversification requirement into the concept of prudent investing. Section 227(b) of the 1992 Restatement treats diversification as one of the fundamental elements of prudent investing, replacing the separate section 228 of the Restatement of Trusts 2d. The message of the 1992 Restatement, carried forward in Section 3 of this Act, is that prudent investing ordinarily requires diversification.

Circumstances can, however, overcome the duty to diversify. For example, if a tax-sensitive trust owns an underdiversified block of low-basis securities, the tax costs of recognizing the gain may outweigh the advantages of diversifying the holding. The wish to retain a family business is another situation in which the purposes of the trust sometimes override the conventional duty to diversify.

Rationale for diversification. "Diversification reduces risk ... [because] stock price movements are not uniform. They are imperfectly correlated. This means that if one holds a well diversified portfolio, the gains in one investment will cancel out the losses in another." Jonathan R. Macey, An Introduction to Modern Financial Theory 20 (American College of Trust and Estate Counsel Foundation, 1991). For example, during the Arab oil embargo of 1973, international oil stocks suffered declines, but the shares of domestic oil producers and coal companies benefitted. Holding a broad enough portfolio allowed the investor to set off, to some extent, the losses associated with the embargo.

Modern portfolio theory divides risk into the categories of "compensated" and "uncompensated" risk. The risk of owning shares in a mature and well-managed company in a settled industry is less than the risk of owning shares in a start-up high-technology venture. The investor requires a higher expected return to induce the investor to bear the greater risk of disappointment associated with the start-up firm. This is compensated risk — the firm pays the investor for bearing the risk. By contrast, nobody pays the investor for owning too few stocks. The investor who owned only international oils in 1973 was running a risk that could have been reduced by having configured the portfolio differently — to include investments in different industries. This is uncompensated risk - nobody pays the investor for owning shares in too few industries and too few companies. Risk that can be eliminated by adding different stocks (or bonds) is uncompensated risk. The object of diversification is to minimize this uncompensated risk of having too few investments. "As long as stock prices do not move exactly together, the risk of a diversified portfolio will be less than the average risk of the separate holdings." R.A. Brealey, An Introduction to Risk and Return from Common Stocks 103 (2d ed. 1983).

There is no automatic rule for identifying how much diversification is enough. The 1992 Restatement says: "Significant diversification advantages can be achieved with a small number of well-selected securities representing different industries.... Broader diversification is usually to be preferred in trust investing,' and pooled investment vehicles "make thorough diversification practical for most trustees." Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227, General Note on Comments e-h, at 77 (1992). See also Macey, supra, at 23-24; Brealey, supra, at 111-13.

Diversifying by pooling. It is difficult for a small trust fund to diversify thoroughly by constructing its own portfolio of individually selected investments. Transaction costs such as the round-lot (100 share) trading economies make it relatively expensive for a small investor to assemble a broad enough portfolio to minimize uncompensated risk. For this reason, pooled investment vehicles have become the main mechanism for facilitating diversification for the investment needs of smaller trusts.

Most states have legislation authorizing common trust funds; see 3 Austin W. Scott & William F. Fratcher, The Law of Trusts § 227.9, at 463-65 n.26 (4th ed. 1988) (collecting citations to state statutes). As of 1992, 35 states and the District of Columbia had enacted the Uniform Common Trust Fund Act (UCTFA) (1938), overcoming the rule against commingling trust assets and expressly enabling banks and trust companies to establish common trust funds. 7 Uniform Laws Ann. 1992 Supp. at 130

(schedule of adopting states). The Prefatory Note to the UCTFA explains: "The purposes of such a common or joint investment fund are to diversify the investment of the several trusts and thus spread the risk of loss, and to make it easy to invest any amount of trust funds quickly and with a small amount of trouble." 7 Uniform Laws Ann. 402 (1985).

Fiduciary investing in mutual funds. Trusts can also achieve diversification by investing in mutual funds. See Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule, § 227, Comment m, at 99-100 (1992) (endorsing trust investment in mutual funds). ERISA § 401(b)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1101(b)(1), expressly authorizes pension trusts to invest in mutual funds, identified as securities 'issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940...."

§ 36A-164. Duties at inception of trusteeship.

Within a reasonable time after accepting a trusteeship or receiving trust assets, a trustee shall review the trust assets and make and implement decisions concerning the retention and disposition of assets in order to bring the trust portfolio into compliance with the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust, and with the requirements of this Article. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Section 4, requiring the trustee to dispose of unsuitable assets within a reasonable time, is old law, codified in Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 229 (1992), lightly revising Restatement of Trusts 2d § 230 (1959). The duty extends as well to investments that were proper when purchased but subsequently become improper. Restatement of Trusts 2d § 231 (1959). The same standards apply to successor trustees, see Restatement of Trusts 2d § 196 (1959).

The question of what period of time is reasonable turns on the totality of factors affecting the asset and the trust. The 1959 Restatement took the view that "[o]rdinarily any time within a year is reasonable, but under some circumstances a year may be too long a time and under other circumstances a trustee is not liable although he fails to effect the conversion for more than a year." Restatement of Trusts 2d § 230, comment b (1959). The 1992 Restatement retreated from this rule of thumb, saying, "No positive rule can be stated with respect to what constitutes a reasonable time for the sale or exchange of securities." Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 229, comment b (1992).

The criteria and circumstances identified in Section 2 of this Act as bearing upon the prudence of decisions to invest and manage trust assets also pertain to the prudence of decisions to retain or dispose of inception assets under this section.

§ 36A-165. Loyalty.

A trustee shall invest and manage the trust assets solely in the interest of the beneficiaries. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

The duty of loyalty is perhaps the most characteristic rule of trust law, requiring the trustee to act exclusively for the beneficiaries, as opposed to acting for the trustee's own interest or that of third parties. The language of Section 4 of this Act derives from Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 170 (1992), which makes minute changes in Restatement of Trusts 2d § 170 (1959).

The concept that the duty of prudence in trust administration, especially in investing and managing trust assets, entails adherence to the duty of loyalty is familiar. ERISA § 404(a)(1)(B), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(B), extracted in the Comment to Section 1 of this Act, effectively merges the requirements of prudence and loyalty. A fiduciary cannot be prudent in the conduct of investment functions if the fiduciary is sacrificing the interests of the beneficiaries.

The duty of loyalty is not limited to settings entailing self-dealing or conflict of interest in which the trustee would benefit personally from the trust. "The trustee is under a duty to the beneficiary in administering the trust not to be guided by the interest of any third person. Thus, it is improper for the trustee to sell trust property to a third person for the purpose of benefitting the third person rather than the trust." Restatement of Trusts 2d § 170, comment q, at 371 (1959).

No form of so-called "social investing" is consistent with the duty of loyalty if the investment activity entails sacrificing the interests of trust beneficiaries — for example, by accepting below-market returns — in favor of the interests of the persons supposedly benefitted by pursuing the particular social cause. See, e.g., John H. Langbein & Richard Posner, Social Investing and the Law of Trusts, 79 Michigan L. Rev. 72, 96-97 (1980) (collecting authority). For pension trust assets, see generally Ian D. Lanoff, The Social Investment of Private Pension Plan Assets: May it Be Done Lawfully under ERISA?, 31 Labor L.J. 387 (1980). Commentators supporting social investing tend to concede the overriding force of the duty of loyalty. They argue instead that particular schemes of social investing may not result in below-market returns. See, e.g., Marcia O'Brien Hylton, "Socially Responsible" Investing: Doing Good Versus Doing Well in an Inefficient Market, 42 American U.L. Rev. 1 (1992). In 1994 the Department of Labor issued an Interpretive Bulletin reviewing its prior analysis of social investing questions and reiterating that pension trust fiduciaries may invest only in conformity with the prudence and loyalty standards of ERISA §§ 403-404. Interpretive Bulletin 94-1, 59 Fed. Regis. 32606 (Jun. 22, 1994), to be codified as 29 CFR § 2509.94-1. The Bulletin reminds fiduciary investors that they are prohibited from "subordinat[ing] the interests of participants and beneficiaries in their retirement income to unrelated objectives."

§ 36A-166. Impartiality.

If a trust has two or more beneficiaries, the trustee shall act impartially in investing and managing the trust assets, taking into account any differing interests of the beneficiaries. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

The duty of impartiality derives from the duty of loyalty. When the trustee owes duties to more than one beneficiary, loyalty requires the trustee to respect the interests of all the beneficiaries. Prudence in investing and administration requires the trustee to take account of the interests of all the beneficiaries for whom the trustee is acting, especially the conflicts between the interests of beneficiaries interested in income and those interested in principal.

The language of Section 6 derives from Restatement of Trusts 2d § 183 (1959); see also id., § 232. Multiple beneficiaries may be beneficiaries in succession (such as life and remainder interests) or beneficiaries with simultaneous interests (as when the income interest in a trust is being divided among several beneficiaries).

The trustee's duty of impartiality commonly affects the conduct of investment and management functions in the sphere of principal and income allocations. This Act prescribes no regime for allocating receipts and expenses. The details of such allocations are commonly handled under specialized legislation, such as the Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act (1962) (which is presently under study by the Uniform Law Commission with a view toward further revision).

§ 36A-167. Investment costs.

In investing and managing trust assets, a trustee may only incur costs that are appropriate and reasonable in relation to the assets, the purposes of the trust, and the skills of the trustee. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Wasting beneficiaries' money is imprudent. In devising and implementing strategies for the investment and management of trust assets, trustees are obliged to minimize costs.

The language of Section 7 derives from Restatement of Trusts 2d § 188 (1959). The Restatement of Trusts 3d says: "Concerns over compensation and other charges are not an obstacle to a reasonable course of action using mutual funds and other pooling arrangements, but they do require special attention by a trustee.... [I]t is important for trustees to make careful cost comparisons, particularly among similar products of a specific type being considered for a trust portfolio." Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227, comment m, at 58 (1992).

§ 36A-168. Reviewing compliance.

Compliance with the prudent investor rule is determined in light of the facts and circumstances existing at the time of a trustee's decision or action and not by hindsight. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section derives from the 1991 Illinois act, 760 ILCS 5/5(a)(2) (1992), which draws upon Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227, comment b, at 11 (1992). Trustees are not insurers. Not every investment or management decision will turn out in the light of hindsight to have been successful. Hindsight is not the relevant standard. In the language of law and economics, the standard is ex ante, not ex post.

§ 36A-169. Delegation of investment and management functions.

(a) A trustee may delegate investment and management functions if it is prudent to do so under the circumstances. The trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution in:

(1) Selecting an agent;

(2) Establishing the scope and terms of any delegation, consistent with the purposes and terms of the trust; and

(3) Periodically reviewing the agent's actions in order to monitor the agent's performance and compliance with the terms of the delegation.

(b) In performing a delegated function, an agent owes a duty to the trust to exercise reasonable care to comply with the terms of the delegation.

(c) A trustee who complies with the requirements of subsection (a) of this section is not liable to the beneficiaries or to the trust for the decisions or actions of the agent to whom the function was delegated.

(d) By accepting the delegation of a trust function from the trustee of a trust that is subject to the law of this State, an agent submits to the jurisdiction of the courts of this State. (1999-215, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section of the Act reverses the much-criticized rule that forbad trustees to delegate investment and management functions. The language of this section is derived from Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 171 (1992), discussed infra, and from the 1991 Illinois act, 760 ILCS § 5/5.1(b), (c) (1992).

Former law. The former nondelegation rule survived into the 1959 Restatement: "The trustee is under a duty to the beneficiary not to delegate to others the doing of acts which the trustee can reasonably be required personally to perform." The rule put a premium on the frequently arbitrary task of distinguishing discretionary functions that were thought to be nondelegable from supposedly ministerial functions that the trustee was allowed to delegate. Restatement of Trusts 2d § 171 (1959).

The Restatement of Trusts 2d admitted in a comment that "There is not a clear-cut line dividing the acts which a trustee can properly delegate from those which he cannot properly delegate." Instead, the comment directed attention to a list of factors that "may be of importance: (1) the amount of discretion involved; (2) the value and character of the property involved; (3) whether the property is principal or income; (4) the proximity or remoteness of the subject matter of the trust; (5) the character of the act as one involving professional skill or facilities possessed or not possessed by the trustee himself." Restatement of Trusts 2d § 171, comment d (1959). The 1959 Restatement further said: "A trustee cannot properly delegate to another power to select investments." Restatement of Trusts 2d § 171, comment h (1959).

For discussion and criticism of the former rule see William L. Cary & Craig B. Bright, The Delegation of Investment Responsibility for Endowment Funds, 74 Columbia L. Rev. 207 (1974); John H. Langbein & Richard A. Posner, Market Funds and Trust-Investment Law, 1976 American Bar Foundation Research J. 1, 18-24.

The modern trend to favor delegation. The trend of subsequent legislation, culminating in the Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule, has been strongly hostile to the nondelegation rule. See John H. Langbein, Reversing the Nondelegation Rule of Trust-Investment Law, 59 Missouri L. Rev. 105 (1994).

The delegation rule of the Uniform Trustee Powers Act. The Uniform Trustee Powers Act (1964) effectively abrogates the nondelegation rule. It authorizes trustees "to employ persons, including attorneys, auditors, investment advisors, or agents, even if they are associated with the trustee, to advise or assist the trustee in the performance of his administrative duties; to act without independent investigation upon their recommendations; and instead of acting personally, to employ one or more agents to perform any act of administration, whether or not discretionary...." Uniform Trustee Powers Act § 3(24), 7B Uniform Laws Ann. 743 (1985). The Act has been enacted in 16 states, see "Record of Passage of Uniform and Model Acts as of September 30, 1993," 1993-94 Reference Book of Uniform Law Commissioners (unpaginated, following page 111) (1993).

UMIFA's delegation rule. The Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act (1972) (UMIFA), authorizes the governing boards of eleemosynary institutions, who are trustee-like fiduciaries, to delegate investment matters either to a committee of the board or to outside investment advisors, investment counsel, managers, banks, or trust companies. UMIFA § 5, 7A Uniform Laws Ann. 705 (1985). UMIFA has been enacted in 38 states, see "Record of Passage of Uniform and Model Acts as of September 30, 1993," 1993-94 Reference Book of Uniform Law Commissioners (unpaginated, following page 111) (1993).

ERISA's delegation rule. The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, the federal statute that prescribes fiduciary standards for investing the assets of pension and employee benefit plans, allows a pension or employee benefit plan to provide that "authority to manage, acquire or dispose of assets of the plan is delegated to one or more investment managers...." ERISA § 403(a)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(2). Commentators have explained the rationale for ERISA's encouragement of delegation:

> ERISA ... invites the dissolution of unitary trusteeship.... ERISA's fractionation of traditional trusteeship reflects the complexity of the modern pension trust. Because millions, even billions of dollars can be involved, great care is required in investing and safekeeping plan assets. Administering such plans-computing and honoring benefit entitlements across decades of employment and retirement-is also a complex business.... Since, however, neither the sponsor nor any other single entity has a comparative advantage in performing all these functions, the tendency has been for pension plans to use a variety of specialized providers. A consulting actuary, a plan administration firm, or an insurance company may oversee the design of a plan and arrange for processing benefit claims. Investment industry professionals manage the portfolio (the largest plans spread their pension investments among dozens of money management firms).

John H. Langbein & Bruce A. Wolk, Pension and Employee Benefit Law 496 (1990).

The delegation rule of the 1992 Restatement. The Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule (1992) repeals the nondelegation rule of Restatement of Trusts 2d § 171 (1959), extracted supra, and replaces it with substitute text that readsrustee's decision or action and not by hindsight.

> § 171. Duty with Respect to Delegation. A trustee has a duty personally to perform the responsibilities of trusteeship except as a prudent person might delegate those responsibilities to others. In deciding whether, to whom, and in what manner to delegate fiduciary authority in the administration of a trust, and thereafter in supervising agents, the trustee is under a duty to the beneficiaries to exercise fiduciary discretion and to act as a prudent person would act in similar circumstances.

Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 171 (1992). The 1992 Restatement integrates this delegation standard into the prudent investor rule of section 227, providing that "the trustee must ... act with prudence in deciding whether and how to delegate to others...." Restatement of Trusts 3d: Prudent Investor Rule § 227(c) (1992).

Protecting the beneficiary against unreasonable delegation. There is an intrinsic tension in trust law between granting trustees broad powers that facilitate flexible and efficient trust administration, on the one hand, and protecting trust beneficiaries from the misuse of such powers on the other hand. A broad set of trustees' powers, such as those found in most lawyer-drafted instruments and exemplified in the Uniform Trustees' Powers Act, permits the trustee to act vigorously and expeditiously to maximize the interests of the beneficiaries in a variety of transactions and administrative settings. Trust law relies upon the duties of loyalty and prudent administration, and upon procedural safeguards such as periodic accounting and the availability of judicial oversight, to prevent the misuse of these powers. Delegation, which is a species of trustee power, raises the same tension. If the trustee delegates effectively, the beneficiaries obtain the advantage of the agent's specialized investment skills or whatever other attributes induced the trustee to delegate. But if the trustee delegates to a knave or an incompetent, the delegation can work harm upon the beneficiaries.

Section 9 of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act is designed to strike the appropriate balance between the advantages and the hazards of delegation. Section 9 authorizes delegation under the limitations of subsections (a) and (b). Section 9(a) imposes duties of care, skill, and caution on the trustee in selecting the agent, in establishing the terms of the delegation, and in reviewing the agent's compliance.

The trustee's duties of care, skill, and caution in framing the terms of the delegation should protect the beneficiary against overbroad delegation. For example, a trustee could not prudently agree to an investment management agreement containing an exculpation clause that leaves the trust without recourse against reckless mismanagement. Leaving one's beneficiaries remediless against willful wrongdoing is inconsistent with the duty to use care and caution in formulating the terms of the delegation. This sense that it is imprudent to expose beneficiaries to broad exculpation clauses underlies both federal and state legislation restricting exculpation clauses, e.g., ERISA §§ 404(a)(1)(D), 410(a), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1104(a)(1)(D), 1110(a); New York Est. Powers Trusts Law § 11-1.7 (McKinney 1967).

Although subsection (c) of the Act exonerates the trustee from personal responsibility for the agent's conduct when the delegation satisfies the standards of subsection 9(a), subsection 9(b) makes the agent responsible to the trust. The beneficiaries of the trust can, therefore, rely upon the trustee to enforce the terms of the delegation.

Costs. The duty to minimize costs that is articulated in Section 7 of this Act applies to delegation as well as to other aspects of fiduciary investing. In deciding whether to delegate, the trustee must balance the projected benefits against the likely costs. Similarly, in deciding how to delegate, the trustee must take costs into account. The trustee must be alert to protect the beneficiary from "double dipping." If, for example, the trustee's regular compensation schedule presupposes that the trustee will conduct the investment management function, it should ordinarily follow that the trustee will lower its fee when delegating the investment function to an outside manager.

Chapter 36B.

Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act.

COMMENTARY

This commentary contains the official comments of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, the comments of the General Statutes Commission, and reflects amendments made during legislative consideration of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act. Neither the General Statutes Commission nor any legislative official has reviewed and approved this commentary on a line-by-line basis.

§ 36B-1. Definitions.

As used in this Chapter, the following terms have the meanings specified:

(1) "Institution" means an incorporated or unincorporated organization organized and operated exclusively for educational, religious, charitable, or other eleemosynary purposes, or a governmental organization to the extent that it holds funds exclusively for any of these purposes;

(2) "Institutional fund" means a fund held by an institution for its exclusive use, benefit, or purposes, but does not include (i) a fund held for an institution by a trustee that is not an institution, unless the fund is held exclusively for the benefit of either a community foundation or community trust, deemed to be "publicly supported" under the Code, as defined in G.S. 105-134.1(l), and held by:
   a. A bank;
   b. A trust company; or
   c. Another fiduciary that is a trustee of the community foundation or community trust or (ii) a fund in which a beneficiary that is not an institution has an interest, other than possible rights that could arise upon violation or failure of the purposes of the fund or (iii) funds other than endowment funds held by a governmental organization;

(3) "Endowment fund" means an institutional fund, or any part thereof, not wholly expendable by the institution on a current basis under the terms of the applicable gift instrument;

(4) "Governing board" means the body responsible for the management of an institution or of an institutional fund;

(5) "Historic dollar value" means the aggregate fair value in dollars of (i) an endowment fund at the time it became an endowment fund, (ii) each subsequent donation to the fund at the time it is made, and (iii) each accumulation made pursuant to a direction in the applicable gift instrument at the time the accumulation is added to the fund. The determination of historic dollar value made in good faith by the institution is conclusive.

(6) "Gift instrument" means a will, deed, trust, grant, conveyance, agreement, memorandum, writing, or other governing document (including the terms of any institutional solicitations from which an institutional fund resulted) under which property is transferred to or held by an institution as an institutional fund. (1985, c. 98, s. 1; 1991, c. 39, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 1 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act except that G.S. 36B-1(2)(iii) was added by the General Statutes Commission to limit the application of the Act to governmental funds that are endowment funds and, thus, eliminate from the scope of the Act any regulation of the management or investment of funds that are not derived from a charitable gift that is not completely expendable.

The Official Comment of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws states:

"[Subdivision (1)] The Uniform Act applies generally to colleges, universities, hospitals, religious organizations and other institutions of an eleemosynary nature. It applies to a governmental organization to the extent that the organization holds funds for the listed purposes, e.g., a public school which has an endowment fund.

A non-governmental institution which is not 'charitable' in the classic sense is not within the Act, even though it may hold funds for such purpose. If the fund is separate and distinct from the noncharitable organization, the fund itself may be an institution to which the Act applies.

[Subdivision (2)] An institutional fund is any fund held by an institution which it may invest for a long or short term. Excluded from the Act is any fund held by a trustee which is not an institution as defined in this Act, e.g., a bank or trust company, for the benefit of an institution even though the institution is the sole beneficiary.

A fund held by an institution for the benefit of any noninstitutional beneficiary is also excluded. The exclusion would apply to any fund with an individual beneficiary such as an annuity trust or a unitrust. When the interest of a noninstitutional beneficiary is terminated, the fund may then become an institutional fund.

The 'use, benefit, or purposes' of an institution broadly encompasses all of the activities permitted by its charter or other source of authority. A fund to provide scholarships for students or medical care for indigent patients is held by the school or hospital for the institution's purposes. Such a fund is not deemed to be held for the benefit of a particular student or patient as distinct from the use, benefit, or purposes of the institution, nor does the student or patient have an interest in the fund as a 'beneficiary which is not an institution.'

The particular recipient of the aid of a charitable organization is not a 'beneficiary' in the sense of a beneficiary of a private trust; only the Attorney General or similar public authority may enforce a charitable trust. 4 Scott, Law of Trusts § 348 pp. 2768-9 (3d ed. 1967); Bogert, The Law of Trusts and Trustees § 411-15 pp. 317-348 (2d ed. 1962).

[Subdivision (3)] An endowment fund is an institutional fund, or any part thereof, which is held in perpetuity or for a term and which is not wholly expendable by the institution. Implicit in the definition is the continued maintenance of all or a specified portion of the original gift. 'Endowment fund' is specially defined because it is subject to the appropriation rules of Section 2.

A restriction on use that makes a fund an endowment fund arises only from the applicable gift instrument. If a governing board has the power to spend all of a fund but, in its discretion, decides to invest the fund and spend only the yield or appreciation therefrom, the fund does not become an endowment fund under this definition, but it may be described as a 'quasi-endowment fund' or 'fund functioning as endowment.'

A fund which is not an institutional fund originally and therefore not an endowment fund may become an endowment fund at a later time. For example, a fund given to an institution to pay the grantor's widow a life income, with the remainder to the institution, would become an institutional fund on the widow's death, and, if the fund were not then wholly expendable, it would become an endowment fund at that time.

If a gift instrument provided that the institution could use the income from the fund for ten years and thereafter spend the entire principal, the fund would be an endowment fund for the ten-year period and would cease to be an endowment fund at the time it became wholly expendable.

[Subdivision (4)] The definition is meant to designate the policy making or management group which has the responsibility for the affairs of the institution or the fund.

[Subdivision (5)] 'Historic dollar value' is simply the value of the fund expressed in dollars at the time of the original contribution to the fund plus the dollar value of any subsequent gifts to the fund. Accounting entries recording realization of gains or losses to the fund have no effect upon historic dollar value. No increase or decrease in historic dollar value of the fund results from the sale of an asset held by the fund and the reinvestment of the proceeds in another asset.

If the gift instrument directs accumulation, the historic dollar value will increase with each accumulation. For example, if a donor gives an institution $300,000 and directs that the fund is to be accumulated until its value reaches $500,000, the historic dollar value will be the aggregate value of $500,000 at the time the fund becomes available for use by the institution.

If under the terms of the gift instrument a portion of an endowment fund, after passage of time or upon the happening of some event, becomes currently wholly expendable, such portion should be treated as a separate fund and the historic dollar value of the remaining endowment fund should be reduced proportionately.

[Subdivision (6)] A gift instrument establishes the terms of the gift. It may be a writing of any form, or it may result from the institution's solicitation activities, or the bylaws, or other rules of an existing fund."

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1985, c. 98, s. 2, provided: "The Revisor of Statutes shall cause the commentary to each section of Chapter 36B to be printed in the General Statutes. The commentary shall contain the comments of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, the comments of the General Statutes Commission, and shall reflect amendments made during legislative consideration of this act."

§ 36B-2. Appropriation of appreciation.

The governing board may appropriate for expenditure for the uses and purposes for which an endowment fund is established so much of the net appreciation, realized and unrealized, in the fair value of the assets of an endowment fund over the historic dollar value of the fund as is prudent under the standard established by G.S. 36B-6. This section does not limit the authority of the governing board to expend funds as permitted under other law, the terms of the applicable gift instrument, or the charter of the institution. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 2 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act.

The Official Comment of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws states:

"This section authorizes a governing board to expend for the purposes of the fund the increase in value of an endowment fund over the fund's historic dollar value, within the limitations of Section 6 [G.S. 36B-6] which establishes a standard of business care and prudence.

The section does not apply to funds which are wholly expendable by the institution such as so-called 'quasi-endowment funds' or 'funds functioning as endowment,' nor does the section limit or reduce any spending power granted by a gift instrument or otherwise held by the institution.

Unrealized gains and losses must be combined with realized gains and losses to insure that the historic dollar value is not impaired."

§ 36B-3. Rule of construction.

G.S. 36B-2 does not apply if the applicable gift instrument indicates the donor's intention that net appreciation shall not be expended. A restriction upon the expenditure of net appreciation may not be implied from a designation of a gift as an endowment, or from a direction or authorization in the applicable gift instrument to use only "income," "interest," "dividends," or "rents, issues or profits," or "to preserve the principal intact," or a direction which contains other words of similar import. This rule of construction applies to gift instruments executed or in effect before or after July 1, 1985. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 3 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act.

The Official Comment of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws states:

"If a gift instrument expresses or otherwise indicates the donor's intention that the governing board may not appropriate the appreciation in the value of the fund, his wishes will govern.

The rule of construction of this section is based upon the assumption that a grantor who makes an outright gift to an educational, religious, charitable or other eleemosynary institution seldom makes a full statement of his intentions and that his unstated intention is usually quite different from the intention of a grantor who makes a gift to a trust for private beneficiaries. The assumption is that the grantor of a gift to an institution: (1) means to devote to the institution any return or benefit that the institution can obtain from the gift, (2) acknowledges the responsibility of the institutional management to determine the prudent use of the return or benefit over time and (3) usually regards the 'amount' of the gift as the dollars given or the dollar value of the property transferred to the institution at the time of the gift. Thus, in the case of a gift instrument which states no clear intention or merely echoes the rubrics of a private trust, the statutory rule of interpretation should apply.

Some advisers to institutions, aware of the body of private trust law, have interpreted references to 'income' or 'principal' in a gift instrument to evidence a grantor's intent that the private trust rules developed to insure equity between an income beneficiary and a remainderman should be applied to an outright gift to an institutional donee. Neither the facts of donor's intentions nor the law of trusts support such an interpretation of the meaning of gift instruments where an institution is the sole beneficiary.

This section does not purport to change existing law or rights; it simply codifies a rule of construction or interpretation or administration by articulating the presumed intent of a donor in the absence of a statement of the donor's actual intent."

§ 36B-4. Investment authority.

In addition to an investment otherwise authorized by law or by the applicable gift instrument, and without restriction to investments a fiduciary may make, the governing board, subject to any specific limitations set forth in the applicable gift instrument or in the applicable law other than law relating to investments by a fiduciary, may, subject to G.S. 36B-6:

(1) Invest and reinvest an institutional fund in any real or personal property deemed advisable by the governing board, whether or not it produces a current return, including mortgages, stocks, bonds, debentures, and other securities of profit or nonprofit corporations, shares in or obligations of associations, partnerships, or secured obligation of individuals, and obligations of any government or subdivision or instrumentality thereof;

(2) Retain property contributed by a donor to an institutional fund for as long as the governing board deems advisable;

(3) Include all or any part of an institutional fund in any pooled or common fund maintained by the institution; and

(4) Invest all or any part of an institutional fund in any other pooled or common fund available for investment, including shares or interests in regulated investment companies, mutual funds, common trust funds, investment partnerships, real estate investment trusts, or similar organizations in which funds are commingled and investment determinations are made by persons other than the governing board. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 4 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act except that the General Statutes Commission added the words "subject to G.S. 36B-6" at the end of the introductory paragraph to eliminate any question that the section might be construed to abrogate liability.

The General Assembly amended this section by adding the words "secured obligation of" before the word "individuals" in subdivision (1). The amendment limits the obligations of individuals in which the governing board may invest to secured obligations.

The Official Comment of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws states:

"Institutional investment managers suggest that a general grant of investment powers will clarify the authority of a governing board to select investments. Subsection (1) provides broad powers of investment and states that a governing board is not restricted to investments authorized to trustees.

Two other matters of investment policy have been troublesome to boards because of the absence of specific authority. Subsections (2) and (3) provide authority to hold property given by a donor even though it may not be the best investment (ordinarily in the hope of obtaining additional contributions) and to invest in common or pooled investment funds such as the Common Fund for Non-Profit Organizations. See 4 Scott, Law of Trusts § 389 pp. 2997-3000 (3d ed. 1967).

The absence of specific reference to investment for return by an institution in its own facilities does not limit the power of a governing board to make such investments under the general clause of Section 4(1), or other law or the gift instrument.

Section 6 [G.S. 36B-6] establishes the standard of care and prudence under which the investment authority is exercised."

§ 36B-5. Delegation of investment management.

Except as otherwise provided by the applicable gift instrument or by applicable law relating to governmental institutions or funds, the governing board may:

(1) Delegate to its committees, officers or employees of the institution or the fund, or agents, including investment counsel, the authority to act in place of the board in investment and reinvestment of institutional funds;

(2) Contract with independent investment advisors, investment counsel or managers, banks, or trust companies, so to act; and

(3) Authorize the payment of reasonable compensation for investment advisory or management services. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 5 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act except that the General Assembly added the word "reasonable" before the word "compensation" in subdivision (3). The amendment limits the payment of compensation by the governing board for investment advisory or management services to reasonable compensation.

The Official Comment of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws states:

"Questions have arisen about the power of a governing board to delegate investment decisions. In the absence of authority, some boards have tried to follow the nondelegation principles applicable to trustees. Governing boards do, in fact, delegate investment authority, sometimes with rather cumbersome procedures to produce a record of apparent decisions by the boards.

This section clarifies the authority to delegate investment management and to purchase investment advisory and management services. Responsibility for investment policy and selection of competent agents remains with the board under the Section 6 standard of business care and prudence."

§ 36B-6. Standard of conduct.

In the administration of the powers to appropriate net appreciation, to make and retain investments, and to delegate investment management of institutional funds, members of a governing board shall exercise ordinary business care and prudence under the facts and circumstances prevailing at the time of the action or decision. In so doing they shall consider long- and short-term needs of the institution in carrying out its educational, religious, charitable, or other eleemosynary purposes, its present and anticipated financial requirements, expected total return on its investments, price level trends, and general economic conditions. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 6 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act except that the General Assembly added the word "net" before the word "appreciation" in the first sentence of the section. The amendment changes the reference to appropriation of appreciation to appropriation of net appreciation in the statement of the required standard of conduct.

The Official Comment of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws states:

"The section establishes a standard of care and prudence for a member of a governing board. The standard is generally comparable to that of a director of a business corporation rather than that of a private trustee, but it is cast in terms of the duties and responsibilities of a manager of a nonprofit institution.

Officers of a corporation owe a duty of care and loyalty to the corporation, and the more intimate the knowledge of the affairs of the corporation the higher the standard of care. Directors are obligated to act in the utmost good faith and to exercise ordinary business care and prudence in all matters affecting the management of the corporation. This is a proper standard for the managers of a nonprofit institution, whether or not it is incorporated.

The standard of Section 6 was derived in part from Proposed Treasury Regulations § 53.4944-1(a)(2) dealing with the investment responsibility of managers of private foundations.

The standard requires a member of a governing board to weigh the needs of today against those of the future."

§ 36B-7. Release of restrictions on use or investment.

(a) With the written consent of the donor, the governing board may release, in whole or in part, a restriction imposed by the applicable gift instrument on the use or investment of an institutional fund.

(b) If written consent of the donor cannot be obtained by reason of his death, disability, unavailability, or impossibility of identification, the governing board may apply in the name of the institution to the Superior Court for release of a restriction imposed by the applicable gift instrument on the use or investment of an institutional fund. The Attorney General shall be notified of the application and shall be given an opportunity to be heard. If the court finds that the restriction is obsolete, inappropriate, or impracticable, it may by order release the restriction in whole or in part. A release under this subsection may not change an endowment fund to a fund that is not an endowment fund.

(c) A release under this section may not allow a fund to be used for purposes other than the educational, religious, charitable, or other eleemosynary purposes of the institution affected.

(d) This section does not limit the application of G.S. 36A-53 or of the doctrine of cy pres. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 7 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act except that the General Statutes Commission added the words "of G.S. 36A-53 or" in subsection (d) to make it clear that the Act does not purport to limit the application of the Charitable Trusts Administration Act.

The Official Comment of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws states:

"One of the difficulty problems of fund management involves gifts restricted to uses which cannot be feasibly administered or to investments which are no longer available or productive. There should be an expeditious way to make necessary adjustments when the restrictions no longer serve the original purpose. Cy pres has not been a satisfactory answer and is reluctantly applied in some states. See Restatement of Trusts (2d), §§ 381, 399; 4 Scott, Law of Trusts § 399 p. 3084, § 399.4 pp. 3119 et seq. (3d ed. 1967).

This section permits a release of limitations that imperil efficient administration of a fund or prevent sound investment management if the governing board can secure the approval of the donor or the appropriate court.

Although the donor has no property interest in a fund after the gift, nonetheless if it is the donor's limitation that controls the governing board and he or she agrees that the restriction need not apply, the board should be free of the burden. See Restatement of Trusts (2d) § 367. Scott suggests that in minor matters, the consent of the settlor may be effective to remove restrictions upon the trustees in the administration of a charitable trust. 4 Scott, § 367.3 p. 2846 (3d ed. 1967).

If the donor is unable to consent or cannot be identified, the appropriate court may upon application of a governing board release a limitation which is shown to be obsolete, inappropriate or impracticable.

This section authorizes only a release of a limitation. Thus, if a fund were established to provide scholarships for students named Brown from Brown County, Iowa, a donor might acquiesce in a reduction of the limitation to enable the institution to offer scholarships to students from Brown County who are not named Brown, or to students from other counties in Iowa or to students from other states, or he could acquiesce in the release of the restriction to scholarships so that the fund could be used for the general educational purposes of the school.

Subsection (d) makes it clear that the Act does not purport to limit the established doctrine of cy pres. A liberalization of, addition to, or substitute for cy pres is not without respectable support. Professor Kenneth Karst in 'The Efficiency of the Charitable Dollar: An Unfilled State Responsibility,' 73 Harv. L. Rev. 433 (1960) suggested that the doctrine of cy pres be expanded to permit the courts to redirect charitable grants if the purpose had become 'obsolete, or useless, or prejudicial to the public welfare, or are insignificant in comparison with the magnitude of the endowment ...' quoting from the Nathan Report (of the British Committee on the Law and Practice Relating to Charitable Trusts, Cmd. 8710, 1952) quoting the Scotland Education Act 1946, 9-10 Geo. 6, ch. 72 § 119(b). The Uniform Act provision is far less broad; it applies only to the release of restrictions on the gift under limited circumstances.

New England courts apply a rather strict doctrine of separation of powers to deny legislative encroachment on judicial cy pres. The Act is compatible with the New England cases because the final decision is in the courts. See City of Hartford v. Larrabee Fund Association, 161 Conn. 312, 288 A. 2d 71 (1971); Opinion of Justices, 101 N. H. 531, 133 A. 2d 792 (1957).

No federal tax problems for the donor are anticipated by permitting release of a restriction. The donor has no right to enforce the restriction, no interest in the fund and no power to change the eleemosynary beneficiary of the fund. He may only acquiesce in a lessening of a restriction already in effect."

§ 36B-8. Conflict with other law.

To the extent that the provisions of this Chapter are inconsistent with the provisions of either Chapter 36A or Chapter 55A, the provisions of this Chapter shall control. The provisions of this Chapter shall not apply to the University of North Carolina. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section was added by the General Statutes Commission to establish that the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act controls in situations where either Chapter 36A, Trusts and Trustees, or Chapter 55A, Nonprofit Corporation Act, overlaps with its provisions. This section also provides that the Act does not apply to The University of North Carolina because the endowment fund of the University is governed by the provisions of G.S. 116-36.

§ 36B-9. Uniformity of application and construction.

This Chapter shall be so applied and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to the subject of this Chapter among those states which enact it. (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 9 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act.

§ 36B-10. Short title.

This Chapter may be cited as the "Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act." (1985, c. 98, s. 1.)

COMMENTARY

This section is identical to Section 10 of the Uniform Management of Institutional Funds Act.

Article 2.

Principal and Income Act of 1973.

§ 37-16. Short title.

This Article may be cited as the Principal and Income Act of 1973. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-17. Definitions.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Income beneficiary" means the person to whom income is presently payable or for whom it is accumulated for distribution as income.

(2) "Inventory value" means the cost of property purchased by the trustee and the market value of other property at the time it became subject to the trust, but in the case of a testamentary trust the trustee may use any value finally determined for the purposes of an estate or inheritance tax.

(2a) "Living trust" means a trust created during the lifetime of the grantor that can be amended or revoked in its entirety by the grantor, which is fully includable in the grantor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes upon the grantor's death, and which is used for the disposition of all or part of the grantor's estate at the grantor's death to beneficiaries designated in the trust instrument or to further trusts created under the trust instrument.

(2b) "Pecuniary bequest" means either (i) a bequest of a specific sum of money directed under a will, or (ii) a distribution or allocation, either outright or in trust, of a specific sum of money directed under a trust instrument to be made upon the death of the grantor of the trust, upon the death of any beneficiary of the trust, or upon the happening of any other contingency. A "pecuniary bequest" includes sums determined under a mathematical formula contained in the will or governing trust instrument and sums which can be satisfied by a distribution in kind in lieu of a distribution of money.

(3) "Personal representative" shall include executor, any successor executor, administrator of intestate estates, administrator c.t.a., successor administrator, collector, or any fiduciary appointed to administer or conserve an estate.

(4) "Remainderman" means the person entitled to principal, including income which has been accumulated and added to principal.

(5) "Trustee" means an original trustee and any successor or added trustee and, where applicable, the personal representative of a decedent's estate.

(6) "Trust" includes, where applicable, a decedent's estate whether testate or intestate.

(7) "Tax" includes any interest or penalty thereon except where such interest or penalty is separately provided for in this Article. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1993, c. 284, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The definitions in the section above have been set out in alphabetical order at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

§ 37-18. Duty of trustee or personal representative as to receipts and expenditures.

(a) A trust or a decedent's estate shall be administered with due regard to the respective interests of income beneficiaries and remaindermen. A trust or a decedent's estate is so administered with respect to the allocation of receipts and expenditures if a receipt is credited or an expenditure is charged to income or principal or partly to each:

(1) In accordance with the terms of the trust instrument or will, notwithstanding contrary provisions of this Article; or

(2) In the absence of any contrary terms of the trust instrument or will, in accordance with the provisions of this Article; or

(3) If neither of the preceding rules of administration is applicable, in accordance with what is reasonable and equitable in view of the interests of those entitled to income as well as of those entitled to principal, and in view of the manner in which men of ordinary prudence, discretion and judgment would act in the management of their own affairs.

(b) If the trust instrument or will gives the trustee or personal representative discretion in crediting a receipt or charging an expenditure to income or principal or partly to each, no inference of imprudence, partiality or abuse of discretion arises from the fact that the trustee or personal representative has made an allocation contrary to a provision of this Article.

(c) The exercise of powers of allocation of receipts and expenditures contained in or incorporated by reference to G.S. 32-27(29) in wills dated prior to January 1, 1974, shall continue to be valid. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1975, c. 637, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in Trustees of L.C. Wagner Trust v. Barium Springs Home for Children, Inc., 102 N.C. App. 136, 401 S.E.2d 807 (1991).

§ 37-20. When right to income arises; apportionment of income.

(a) An income beneficiary is entitled to income for the period beginning on the date specified in the trust instrument or will, or, if no date is specified, on the date an asset becomes subject to the trust or on the date [day] after the date of the decedent's death and ending on the date the income interest of the beneficiary terminates. In the case of an asset becoming subject to a trust by reason of a will, it becomes subject to the trust as of the date of the death of the testator even though there is an intervening period of administration of the testator's estate.

(b) In the administration of a decedent's estate or when an asset becomes subject to a trust by reason of a will:

(1) Receipts due but not paid at the date of death are principal; and

(2) Receipts in the form of periodic payments (other than corporate distributions to stockholders and receipts incident to the operation of a trade or business), including rent, interest or annuities, not due at the date of death shall be treated as accruing day to day. That portion of any receipt accruing on or before the date of death is principal, and the balance is income.

(c) On termination of an income interest, the income beneficiary whose interest is terminated, or his estate, is entitled to:

(1) Income undistributed on the date of termination;

(2) Income due but not paid to the trustee or personal representative on the date of termination; and

(3) Income in the form of periodic payments (other than corporate distributions to stockholders and receipts incident to the operation of a trade or business), including rent, interest, or annuities, not due on the date of termination, accrued, on a day-to-day basis, on or before the date of termination.

(d) In the administration of a decedent's estate or when an asset becomes subject to a trust, income defined in G.S. 37-24 for the period ending on the date of death or when the asset becomes subject to a trust is principal.

(e) Corporate distributions to stockholders shall be treated as due on the day fixed by the corporation for determination of stockholders of record entitled to distribution or, if no date is fixed, on the date of declaration of the distribution by the corporation.

(f) In all other cases any receipt from an income-producing asset is income as of the date of receipt even though it was earned or accrued in whole or in part before or after such date. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1975, c. 637, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Estate Planning Considerations for the North Carolina Principal and Income Act of 1973," see 8 Campbell L. Rev. 173 (1986).

§ 37-21. Income earned and expenses incurred during administration of a decedent's estate or a living trust.

(a) Unless the will or trust instrument otherwise provides or the court otherwise directs:

(1) All expenses incurred in connection with the administration and settlement of a decedent's estate or in connection with the administration and settlement of a living trust following the grantor's death and prior to the distribution of the trust property to the beneficiaries or to further trusts entitled to succeed to the property after the grantor's death (other than expenses of management and operation of the estate or trust property), including debts, funeral and burial expenses, death taxes, penalties concerning death taxes, and family allowances, shall be charged against the principal of the estate or the living trust; and

(2) Compensation of attorneys, trustees, and personal representatives and court costs, to the extent they are incurred in the administration and settlement of a decedent's estate or of a decedent's living trust (following the death of the grantor of the trust and prior to distribution of the trust property to the beneficiaries or to further trusts entitled to succeed to the property after the grantor's death), shall be charged against the principal of the estate or the living trust; and

(3) All expenses incurred in the management and operation of a decedent's estate or living trust shall be charged against principal or income of the estate or living trust in accordance with the rules applicable to a trustee under the succeeding provisions of this Article.

(b) Unless the will or trust instrument otherwise provides, or the court otherwise directs, income from the assets of a decedent's estate or living trust after the death of the decedent and before distribution, including income from property used to discharge liabilities, shall be determined in accordance with the rules applicable to a trustee under this Chapter and distributed as follows:

(1) To specific legatees, devisees, and distributees the income from the property bequeathed, devised, or directed to be distributed to them respectively, less taxes, ordinary repairs and other expenses of management and operation of the property, and appropriate portions of interest expense accrued since the death of the decedent and taxes imposed on income (excluding taxes chargeable against principal) which accrue during the period of administration of the decedent's estate or living trust;

(1a) To all legatees or distributees of pecuniary bequests, other than pecuniary bequests:

a. To or for the benefit of the decedent's surviving spouse that are or can be qualified for the federal estate tax marital deduction; or

b. To or for the benefit of charitable organizations that are qualified for the federal estate tax charitable deduction, including a charitable remainder trust, as provided in G.S. 37-21.1;

(2) To all other legatees, devisees, and distributees and to all takers by intestacy, the balance of the income, less the balance of taxes, ordinary repairs and other expenses of management and operation of all property from which the estate or living trust is entitled to income, interest expense accrued since the death of the decedent and taxes imposed on income (excluding taxes chargeable against principal) which accrue during the period of administration of the estate or living trust, in proportion to their respective interests in the undistributed assets of the estate or living trust computed at times of distribution on the basis of federal estate tax value.

(c) Income received under subsection (b) by a trustee shall be treated as income of the trust. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1975, c. 19, s. 13; 1993, c. 284, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Estate Planning Considerations for the North Carolina Principal and Income Act of 1973," see 8 Campbell L. Rev. 173 (1986).

§ 37-21.1. Interest on pecuniary bequests.

Unless the will or trust instrument otherwise provides, or the court otherwise directs, interest on pecuniary bequests, other than pecuniary bequests:

(1) To or for the benefit of a decedent's surviving spouse which are or can be qualified for the federal estate tax marital deduction; or

(2) To or for the benefit of charitable organizations which are qualified for the federal estate tax charitable deduction, including a charitable remainder trust, shall be computed as provided in G.S. 24-1 and shall begin to accrue on the date that is one year following either the date of death of the person whose death gives rise to the payment of the pecuniary bequest, or the happening of any other contingency which gives rise to the payment of the pecuniary bequest. (1993, c. 284, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 284, s. 3, made this section effective January 1, 1994, and applicable to trusts in existence on that date or established on or after that date and to tax years of decedents' estates beginning on or after that date.

§ 37-22. Corporate distributions.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, corporate distributions of shares of the distributing corporation, including distributions in the form of a stock split or stock dividend, are principal. A right to subscribe to shares or other securities issued by the distributing corporation accruing to stockholders on account of their stock ownership and the proceeds of any sale of the right are principal.

(b) Except to the extent that the corporation indicates that some part of a corporate distribution is a settlement of preferred or guaranteed dividends accrued since the trustee or personal representative became a stockholder or is in lieu of an ordinary cash dividend, a corporate distribution is principal if the distribution is pursuant to:

(1) A call of shares;

(2) A merger, consolidation, reorganization, or other plan by which assets of the corporation are acquired by another corporation; or

(3) A total or partial liquidation of the corporation, including any distribution which the corporation indicates is a distribution in total or partial liquidation or any distribution of assets, other than cash, pursuant to a court decree or final administrative order by a government agency ordering distribution of the particular assets.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in this section, distributions made from ordinary income by a regulated investment company or by a trust qualifying and electing to be taxed under federal law as a real estate investment trust are income. All other distributions made by the company or trust, including short-term and long-term capital gains distributions, whether in the form of cash or an option to take new stock or cash or an option to purchase additional shares, are principal.

(d) Except as provided in subsections (a), (b), and (c), all corporate distributions are income, including cash dividends, distributions of or rights to subscribe to shares or securities or obligations of corporations other than the distributing corporation, and the proceeds of the rights or property distributions. In addition, in the following instances, a distribution is income notwithstanding that it is in shares of the distributing corporation:

(1) If the distribution is, at the election of any of the shareholders (whether exercised before or after the declaration thereof), payable either in the stock of the distributing corporation or in property;

(2) If the distribution (or a series of distributions of which such distribution is one) has the result of the receipt of property by some shareholders and an increase in the proportionate interests of other shareholders in the assets or earnings and profits of the distributing corporation;

(3) If the distribution (or a series of distributions of which such distribution is one) has the result of the receipt of preferred stock by some common shareholders and the receipt of common stock by other common shareholders; or

(4) If the distribution is with respect to preferred stock, other than an increase in the conversion ratio of convertible preferred stock made solely to take account of a stock dividend or stock split with respect to the stock into which such convertible stock is convertible.

(e) The trustee or personal representative may rely upon any statement of the distributing corporation as to any fact relevant under any provision of this section concerning the source or character of dividends or distributions of corporate assets. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1995, c. 235, s. 10.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Estate Planning Considerations for the North Carolina Principal and Income Act of 1973," see 8 Campbell L. Rev. 173 (1986).

§ 37-23. Bond premium and discount.

(a) Bonds or other obligations for the payment of money are principal at their inventory value, except as provided in subsection (b) for discount bonds. No provision shall be made for amortization of bond premiums or for accumulation for discount. The proceeds of sale, redemption, or other disposition of the bonds or obligations are principal.

(b) The increment in value of a bond or other obligation for the payment of money payable at a future time in accordance with a fixed schedule of appreciation in excess of the price at which it was issued is distributable as income. The increment in value is distributable to the beneficiary who was the income beneficiary at the time of increment from the first principal cash available or, if none is available, when realized by sale, redemption, or other disposition. Whenever unrealized increment is distributed as income but out of principal, the principal shall be reimbursed for the increment when realized. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-24. Business and farming operations.

(a) If a trustee or personal representative uses any part of the principal in the continuance of a business of which the settlor or decedent was a sole proprietor or a partner, the net profits of the business, computed in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles for a comparable business, are income. If a loss results in any fiscal or calendar year, the loss falls on principal and shall not be carried into any other fiscal or calendar year for purposes of calculating net income.

(b) Generally accepted accounting principles shall be used to determine income from an agricultural or farming operation, including the raising of animals or the operation of a nursery. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-25. Disposition of natural resources.

(a) If any part of the principal consists of a right to receive royalties, overriding or limiting royalties, working interests, production payments, net profit interests, or other interests in minerals or other natural resources in, on or under land, the receipts from taking the natural resources from the land shall be allocated as follows:

(1) If received as rent on a lease or extension payments on a lease, the receipts are income.

(2) If received from a production payment, the receipts are income to the extent of any factor for interest or its equivalent provided in the governing instrument. There shall be allocated to principal the fraction of the balance of the receipts which the unrecovered cost of the production payment bears to the balance owed on the production of payment, exclusive of any factor for interest or its equivalent. The receipts not allocated to principal are income.

(3) If received as a royalty, overriding or limited royalty, or bonus, or from a working, net profit, or any other interest in minerals or other natural resources, receipts not provided for in the preceding subdivisions of this section shall be apportioned on a yearly basis in accordance with this subdivision whether or not any natural resource was being taken from the land at the time the trust or decedent's estate came into existence. Fifty percent (50%) of the gross receipts attributable to the permanent severance of the natural resources (but not to exceed sixty-six and two-thirds percent (66⅔%) of the net receipts attributable to the permanent severance of the natural resources remaining after payment of all expenses, direct and indirect, computed without allowance for depletion) shall be added to principal as an allowance for depletion. The balance of the gross receipts, after provision therefrom for all expenses, direct and indirect, is income.

(b) If a trustee or personal representative, on January 1, 1974, held an item of depletable property of a type specified in this section, he shall allocate receipts from the property in the manner used before January 1, 1974, but as to all depletable property acquired after January 1, 1974, by an existing or new trust or decedent's estate, the method of allocation provided herein shall be used.

(c) This section does not apply to timber, water, soil, sod, dirt, turf, or mosses. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Estate Planning Considerations for the North Carolina Principal and Income Act of 1973," see 8 Campbell L. Rev. 173 (1986).

§ 37-26. Timber.

If any part of the principal consists of land from which merchantable timber may be removed, the receipts from taking the timber from the land shall be allocated in accordance with G.S. 37-18(a)(3). (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Estate Planning Considerations for the North Carolina Principal and Income Act of 1973," see 8 Campbell L. Rev. 173 (1986).

§ 37-27. Other property subject to depletion.

Except as provided in G.S. 37-25 and 37-26, if the principal consists of tangible or intangible property subject to depletion, including leaseholds, patents, copyrights, royalty rights, and rights to receive payments on a contract for deferred compensation, or other intangible assets of a wasting nature, receipts from the property, not in excess of five percent (5%) per year of its inventory value or of its fair market value at the end of the particular fiscal or calendar year, whichever is greater, are income and the balance is principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Estate Planning Considerations for the North Carolina Principal and Income Act of 1973," see 8 Campbell L. Rev. 173 (1986).

§ 37-28. Underproductive property.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, a portion of the net proceeds of sale of any part of principal which part has not produced an average net income of at least one percent (1%) per year of its inventory value for more than a year (including as income the value of any beneficial use of the property by the income beneficiary) shall be treated as delayed income to which the income beneficiary is entitled as provided in this section. The net proceeds of sale are the gross proceeds received, including the value of any property received in substitution for the property disposed of, less the expenses, including capital gains tax, if any, incurred in disposition and less any carrying charges paid while the property was underproductive.

(b) The sum allocated as delayed income is the difference between the net proceeds and the amount which, had it been invested at simple interest at four percent (4%) per year while the property was underproductive, would have produced the net proceeds. This sum, plus any carrying charges and expenses previously charged against income while the property was underproductive, less any income received by the income beneficiary from the property and less the value of any beneficial use of the property by the income beneficiary, is income, and the balance is principal.

(c) Anything herein to the contrary notwithstanding:

(1) No amount shall be allocated as delayed income under this section on account of the sale of any underproductive part of principal from a trust, when the whole of such principal has produced an average net income of four percent (4%) per annum of its inventory value for each year that the trust principal included such underproductive part;

(2) The sum allocated as delayed income on account of the sale of the underproductive part of the trust principal shall not exceed that amount which is the difference between the actual average net income of the trust principal and that greater amount which would have been produced if the trust principal had yielded four percent (4%) per annum of its inventory value during the years in which the trust contained such underproductive part.

(d) An income beneficiary or his estate is entitled to delayed income under this section as if it accrued from day to day during the time he was a beneficiary.

(e) If principal subject to this section is disposed of by conversion into property which cannot be apportioned easily, including land or mortgages (for example, realty acquired by or in lieu of foreclosure), the income beneficiary is not, on account of such conversion, entitled to any allocation as delayed income under this section; however, the income beneficiary is entitled to the net income from any property or obligation into which the original principal is converted while the substituted property or obligation is held. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-29. Expenses.

Expenses not included in G.S. 37-30 through 37-39 shall be charged against income if such expenses are ordinary expenses reasonably incurred in connection with the administration, management or preservation of the trust property; otherwise they shall be charged against principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-30. Taxes.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section, regularly recurring taxes assessed against any portion of the principal and any tax levied on receipts defined as income under this Article or the trust instrument shall be charged against income.

(b) Any tax levied upon profits, gains or receipts allocated to principal shall be charged against principal notwithstanding denomination of the tax as an income tax by the taxing authority.

(c) If an estate or inheritance tax is levied in respect of a trust in which both an income beneficiary and a remainderman have an interest, any amount apportioned to the trust shall be charged against principal even though the income beneficiary also has rights in the principal.

(d) One-half of ad valorem taxes and intangibles taxes shall be charged against income, and one-half of such taxes shall be charged against principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1993, c. 284, s. 4; 1995, c. 235, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 284, s. 4, effective January 1, 1994, as amended by Session Laws 1995, c. 235, s. 11, effective October 1, 1995, which in part added subsection (d), is applicable only to expenses described in this section which are paid after October 1, 1995.

§ 37-31. Compensation of trustee.

(a) Unless the court otherwise directs, one half of the regular compensation of the trustee, whether based on a percentage of principal or income, shall be charged against income, and one half of such compensation shall be charged against principal.

(b) Unless the court otherwise directs, compensation of the trustee other than regular compensation shall be charged against principal, including compensation relating to environmental remediation; provided that if the matter relates only to the income interest, the compensation shall be charged to income. Compensation computed on principal as an acceptance, distribution or termination fee shall be charged against principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1993, c. 284, s. 5; 1995, c. 235, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 284, s. 5, was effective January 1, 1994, as amended by Session Laws 1995, c. 235, s. 11, effective October 1, 1995, and applicable only to expenses described in this section which were paid after October 1, 1995.

§ 37-32. Court costs and attorneys' fees.

(a) Unless the court otherwise directs, one half of court costs and attorneys' fees on periodic judicial accountings shall be charged against income and one half shall be charged against principal.

(b) Unless the court otherwise directs, court costs, attorneys' fees and other expenses incurred in any judicial proceeding, other than periodic judicial accountings, shall be charged against income if the matter primarily concerns the income interest and shall be charged against principal if the matter primarily concerns principal and shall be charged one half against each if the primary concern cannot readily be determined. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-33. Management of principal and application of income.

One-half of all expenses reasonably incurred for current management of principal shall be charged against income, and one-half of such expenses shall be charged against principal; except that the direct costs of investing and reinvesting principal shall be charged against principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1993, c. 284, s. 6; 1995, c. 235, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 284, s. 6, was effective January 1, 1994, as amended by Session Laws 1995, c. 235, s. 11, effective October 1, 1995, and applicable only to expenses described in this section which were paid after October 1, 1995.

§ 37-34. Interest and payments on indebtedness.

Interest paid by the trustee, including interest on death tax deficiencies, shall be charged against income. Payments on principal of an indebtedness (including a mortgage amortized by periodic payments of principal) shall be charged against principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-35. Premiums on insurance.

Premiums on insurance taken upon the interests of the income beneficiary, remainderman, or trustee shall be charged against income, except that premiums for surety bonds shall be charged one-half against income and one-half against principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2; 1993, c. 284, s. 7; 1995, c. 235, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 284, s. 7, was effective January 1, 1994, as amended by Session Laws 1995, c. 235, s. 11, effective October 1, 1995, and applicable only to expenses described in this section which were paid after October 1, 1995.

§ 37-36. Repairs, improvements, and special assessments.

(a) Ordinary repairs shall be charged against income.

(b) Expenses, other than ordinary repairs, in connection with the preparation of property for rental or sale, extraordinary repairs, expenditures for capital improvements to principal, and special assessments shall be charged against principal. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-37. Depreciation.

A reasonable allowance for depreciation of property subject to depreciation under generally accepted accounting principles shall be charged against income, but no allowance for depreciation shall be made for that portion of any real property used by a beneficiary as a residence and no allowance for depreciation need be made for any property held by the trustee on January 1, 1974, for which the trustee was not then required to make and was not then making an allowance for depreciation. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

§ 37-38. Spreading charges against income.

§ 37-39. Recurring charges; apportionment.

Regularly recurring charges payable from income shall be apportioned to the same extent and in the same manner that income is apportioned under G.S. 37-20. (1973, c. 729, s. 2.)

Chapter 38.

Boundaries.

§ 38-1. Special proceeding to establish.

The owner of land, any of whose boundary lines are in dispute, may establish any of such lines by special proceedings in the superior court of the county in which the land or any part thereof is situated. (1893, c. 22; Rev., s. 325; C.S., s. 361.)

Cross References. — As to special proceedings generally, see § 1-393 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Statute Is Not Jurisdictional. — Boundary disputes are usually tried by special proceedings brought before the clerk of superior court under this Chapter. This statute is not jurisdictional, however, and by consent a boundary dispute may be originally tried before a superior court judge. Wadsworth v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 38 N.C. App. 1, 247 S.E.2d 25 (1978), vacated on other grounds, 297 N.C. 172, 253 S.E.2d 925 (1979).

Strict Observance of Statutes Required. — As under prior statutes relating to processioning proceedings, a strict observance of statutory provisions in all material respects is required. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964).

Purpose of Processioning. — The primary object of this section and the following sections of this Chapter is to facilitate the speedy determination of disputed boundaries between adjoining landowners who do not contest each other's title to their respective tracts. Parker v. Taylor, 133 N.C. 103, 45 S.E. 473 (1903).

The sole purpose of a processioning proceeding is to establish the true location of disputed boundary lines. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964); Coley v. Morris Tel. Co., 267 N.C. 701, 149 S.E.2d 14 (1966).

The primary purpose of a processioning proceeding is to establish the correct location of the disputed dividing line. Such a proceeding may not be dismissed by a directed verdict. A plaintiff instituting a true processioning proceeding has the legal right to have the line ascertained and fixed by judicial decree regardless of the sufficiency of his evidence to establish the line as contended for by him. Sipe v. Blankenship, 37 N.C. App. 499, 246 S.E.2d 527 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 415, 251 S.E.2d 450 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985).

Only Question Is Location of True Dividing Line. — Ordinarily, in a special proceeding under this Chapter, where it is admitted that the lands of petitioner and respondent adjoin, the only question presented is the location of the true dividing line. Lane v. Lane, 255 N.C. 444, 121 S.E.2d 893 (1961).

Where the only issue to be determined is the location of a dividing line between two parcels of land, the appropriate action is a processioning proceeding as provided by this section; however, in the event title to the land is put in issue, the Clerk may not hear the case, but must transfer it to the Superior Court where it becomes, in effect, an action to quiet title pursuant to § 41-10. Chappell v. Donnelly, 113 N.C. App. 626, 439 S.E.2d 802 (1994).

Title or ownership is not directly put in issue in a processioning proceeding. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964).

Title to the land is not in issue unless so made by the pleadings. Cole v. Seawell, 152 N.C. 349, 67 S.E. 753 (1910).

But Denial of Plaintiff's Ownership Converts Proceeding into Quiet Title Action. — When title is placed in issue by the defendant's denial of the plaintiff's ownership, then, by § 1-399 [see now § 1-301.2], the pending special proceedings are converted into a civil action to quiet title, and the court will try all the issues in controversy connected therewith. Woody v. Fountain, 143 N.C. 66, 55 S.E. 425 (1906). See Roberts v. Sawyer, 229 N.C. 279, 49 S.E.2d 468 (1948); Nesbitt v. Fairview Farms, Inc., 239 N.C. 481, 80 S.E.2d 472 (1954).

Putting Title in Issue Converts Proceeding into Quiet Title Action. — Where the only issue to be tried is the location of a dividing line, it is a processioning proceeding under this Chapter. However, where title to the land is put in issue the clerk has no authority to pass on any question involved. He must transfer the proceeding to the regular session of superior court where it becomes in effect an action to quiet title pursuant to § 41-10. Cobb v. Spurlin, 73 N.C. App. 560, 327 S.E.2d 244 (1985).

When Title Is Not in Dispute. — Where petitioners allege ownership of contiguous tracts by the respective parties, and a dispute between them as to the true dividing line, and respondents do not deny petitioners' allegation of ownership except with respect to lappages and infringements on lands owned by respondent, and join in the prayer that the dividing line be properly located, title is not in dispute. Nesbitt v. Fairview Farms, Inc., 239 N.C. 481, 80 S.E.2d 472 (1954).

Proceeding Instituted by Owner Whose Boundaries Are in Dispute. — A special proceeding under this Chapter may be instituted by an owner of land whose boundary lines are in dispute. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964).

Consent of Both Owners Not Required. — Until the passage of this section the consent of both adjoining landowners was necessary in order to have the dispute as to the bounds of their respective estates judicially determined. Under the present law either of the adjoining proprietors as a matter of right is entitled to have the land processioned, without the other's consent, and, where there has been an appeal, to have all the controverted matters settled by the jury under the guidance of the court. Green v. Williams, 144 N.C. 60, 56 S.E. 549 (1907).

But Dispute as to Boundary Necessary. — To sustain an action to establish the true dividing line between adjoining owners of land, a dispute as to the location of the line must be shown or the case on appeal will be dismissed in the Supreme Court. Wood v. Hughes, 195 N.C. 185, 141 S.E. 569 (1928).

Only disputed boundary lines are the subject of processioning proceedings. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964).

Where the petition in processioning proceedings does not allege what boundary is in dispute between petitioners and respondents, and, while containing a legal description of the lands claimed by petitioners, fails to locate any lines as claimed by petitioners on the earth's surface, the petition is fatally defective and insufficient to confer jurisdiction on the court. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964).

Call in Deed Is Binding. — Plaintiffs in a processioning proceeding, under this Chapter, are bound by the call in their deed for a named corner whether it be marked or unmarked. Cornelison v. Hammond, 224 N.C. 757, 32 S.E.2d 326 (1944).

Where petitioners in a processioning proceeding introduce evidence fixing the corner of a contiguous tract, and the next call in their description is by course and distance to a stone (a corner in dispute), and the evidence is to the effect that the stone was small and had been moved, the disputed corner must, as a matter of law, be fixed at the distance called for from the established corner, with the result that petitioners' evidence is sufficient to support a finding of the corner as contended by them. Allen v. Cates, 262 N.C. 268, 136 S.E.2d 579 (1964).

Effect of Agreement between Parties. — Where, in proceedings to establish the disputed boundaries between adjoining lands, a binding executed agreement between the parties has been established by uncontradicted evidence, the plaintiff is estopped from proceeding under this section, and there is no error in the court's holding that the completed agreement of arbitration operated as an estoppel as a matter of law. Lowder v. Smith, 201 N.C. 642, 161 S.E. 223 (1931).

A boundary line agreement executed by a plaintiff and a defendant is an effective plea in bar to the plaintiff's proceeding to establish the true boundary line between her property and the property of defendant, notwithstanding (1) the plaintiff failed to acknowledge her signature to the agreement before a notary public and (2) the plaintiff did not know where the line would be located on the ground at the time she signed the agreement. Smith v. Digh, 9 N.C. App. 678, 177 S.E.2d 321 (1970).

Questions of Law and Fact as to Lines. — Ordinarily, in a special proceeding brought under this Chapter, "the only question presented is the location of the true dividing line," title or ownership to land not being directly at issue. Particularly, what are petitioners' lines is determinable as a matter of law from the calls in the description of their lands. Where these lines are located on the earth's surface is determinable as a matter of fact. Taylor v. Brittain, 76 N.C. App. 574, 334 S.E.2d 242 (1985), modified and aff'd, 317 N.C. 146, 343 S.E.2d 536 (1986).

Right to Have Issue Answered by Jury. — In a processioning proceeding under this chapter, where the only issue is the true boundary line, plaintiffs, as a matter of right, are entitled to have that issue answered by jury so that controversy may be ended by judicial decree, as the statute is expressly designed to provide a means of settlement by an orderly proceeding in court. Cornelison v. Hammond, 225 N.C. 535, 35 S.E.2d 633 (1945).

A directed verdict is never proper when the question is for the jury, and in processioning proceedings the determination of the boundary is for the jury. Beal v. Dellinger, 38 N.C. App. 732, 248 S.E.2d 775 (1978).

Jury May Fix Boundary According to Evidence Where Petitioner Does Not Meet Burden of Proof. — In processioning proceedings it is the duty of the jury to locate the boundary. If petitioners fail to carry their burden of proof, the jury need not fix the line according to the respondents' contentions, but may locate the boundary wherever they feel the evidence justifies. Beal v. Dellinger, 38 N.C. App. 732, 248 S.E.2d 775 (1978).

Injunctive Relief. — To warrant the granting of an injunction in cases of special proceedings, the relief sought must be subsidiary to the relief asked in the special proceedings. Hunt v. Sneed, 64 N.C. 176 (1870).

Since this section gives no substantive relief — settles no rights, or titles to property — but only locates the dividing lines between the parties, the plaintiff was denied an injunction to restrain the defendant from commissions of trespasses when such order was asked for in the special proceedings instituted to determine the boundary line between the adjoining estates. Wilson v. Alleghany Co., 124 N.C. 7, 32 S.E. 326 (1899). See Jackson v. Jernigan, 216 N.C. 401, 5 S.E.2d 143 (1939).

Equitable Relief of Mutual Mistake. — As the procedure for the application of this section is that prescribed in § 38-3, subsection (d), it was competent for the defendant under former § 1-70 and § 1-399 [see now § 1-301.2] to plead the equitable relief of mutual mistake, having the cause transferred to the civil issue docket, and having the common grantor of the plaintiff and defendant made a party defendant. Smith v. Johnson, 209 N.C. 729, 184 S.E. 486 (1936).

Action of Trespass Converted into Processioning Proceeding. — Where, in an action in trespass, the parties stipulated that each had title to his respective tract, and that the only controversy was as to the true location of the dividing line between the tracts, the action was thereupon converted into a processioning proceeding. It is not thereafter subject to dismissal as in case of nonsuit. Welborn v. Bate Lumber Co., 238 N.C. 238, 77 S.E.2d 612 (1953).

When Nonsuit Not Proper. — Where, in a processioning proceeding it appears that the parties are owners of adjoining tracts and that a bona fide dispute exists between them as to the location of the dividing line, nonsuit is not proper. Plemmons v. Cutshall, 230 N.C. 595, 55 S.E.2d 74 (1949).

Where, in a processioning proceeding, the title of the respective parties is not in dispute, and the only real controversy is as to the location of the dividing line between the lands of the parties, nonsuit is erroneously entered. Brown v. Hodges, 230 N.C. 746, 55 S.E.2d 498 (1949).

Applied in Tice v. Winchester, 225 N.C. 673, 36 S.E.2d 257 (1945); Strickland v. Kornegay, 240 N.C. 758, 83 S.E.2d 903 (1954); Perkins v. Clarke, 241 N.C. 24, 84 S.E.2d 251 (1954); Twiford v. Harrison, 260 N.C. 217, 132 S.E.2d 321 (1963); Metcalf v. McGuinn, 73 N.C. App. 604, 327 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

§ 38-2. Occupation sufficient ownership.

The occupation of land constitutes sufficient ownership for the purposes of this Chapter. (1893, c. 22; 1903, c. 21; Rev., s. 326; C.S., s. 362.)

CASE NOTES

Sufficiency of Ownership — When Title Not in Dispute. — The courts have construed the term "occupation," as used in this section, to mean possession, and uniformly hold that one (a) in possession of the land, and/or (b) whose title thereto is not disputed, so that no issue is raised save only that of the location of the boundary, has sufficient ownership to avail himself of the special proceedings herein provided for. Williams v. Hughes, 124 N.C. 3, 32 S.E. 325 (1899); Parker v. Taylor, 133 N.C. 103, 45 S.E. 473 (1903).

Where it was admitted that plaintiff's title was not in dispute, and that defendant's title was not in dispute except as to the true boundary line, the refusal of the court to submit an issue as to plaintiff's title, in addition to the issue as to the true boundary line, was not error. Clark v. Dill, 208 N.C. 421, 181 S.E. 281 (1935).

Same — When Title Is in Dispute. — Where, however, the defendant puts the title to the land in issue, and the case has taken the form of a civil action, then the plaintiff can no longer rest his case by merely proving his occupation of the land as evidencing the boundary, but must go further and prove his title to the land. Woody v. Fountain, 143 N.C. 66, 55 S.E. 425 (1906). See Williams v. Hughes, 124 N.C. 3, 32 S.E. 325 (1899).

§ 38-3. Procedure.

(a) Petition; Summons; Hearing. — The owner shall file his petition under oath stating therein facts sufficient to constitute the location of such line as claimed by him and making defendants all adjoining owners whose interest may be affected by the location of said line. The clerk shall thereupon issue summons to the defendants as in other cases of special proceedings. If the defendants fail to answer, judgment shall be given establishing the line according to petition. If the answer deny the location set out in the petition, the clerk shall issue an order to the county surveyor or, if cause shown, to any competent surveyor to survey said line or lines according to the contention of both parties, and make report of the same with a map at a time to be fixed by the clerk, not more than 30 days from date of order; to which time the cause shall be continued. The cause shall then be heard by the clerk upon the location of said line or lines and judgment given determining the location thereof.

(b) Appeal to Session. — Either party may within 10 days after such determination by the clerk serve notice of appeal from the ruling of the clerk determining the said location. When notice of appeal is served it shall be the duty of the clerk to transmit the issues raised before him to the next session of the superior court of the county for trial by a jury, when the question shall be heard de novo.

(c) Survey after Judgment. — When final judgment is given in the proceeding the court shall issue an order to the surveyor to run and mark the line or lines as determined in the judgment. The surveyor shall make report including a map of the line as determined, which shall be filed with the judgment roll in the cause and entered with the judgment on the special proceedings docket.

(d) Procedure as in Special Proceedings. — The procedure under this Chapter, the jurisdiction of the court, and the right of appeal shall, in all respects, be the same as in special proceedings except as herein modified. (1893, c. 22; 1903, c. 21; Rev., s. 326; C.S., s. 363; 1971, c. 528, s. 35.)

Cross References. — As to special proceedings generally, see § 1-393 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Issue Is Location of Dividing Line. — In a processioning proceeding under this Chapter when the cause is heard on appeal, unless pleadings are complicated by other allegations the only issue is as to the true location of the dividing line. Cornelison v. Hammond, 225 N.C. 535, 35 S.E.2d 633 (1945).

Applicability of Section. — The procedure prescribed by this section is applicable only in case of a dispute as to the true location of the boundary line between adjoining landowners. Johnson v. Daughety, 270 N.C. 762, 155 S.E.2d 205 (1967).

Compliance with the Procedural Steps Mandatory. — This section must be strictly followed in all material respects and any flagrant or negligent departure therefrom will be fatal to the proceedings. Forney v. Williamson, 98 N.C. 329, 4 S.E. 483 (1887).

But the court will look to substance and not to form of pleadings, and where an affidavit contains a full and explicit denial of the line set out in the plaintiff's petition it will be treated as an answer, since it contains all that is required by the section. Scott v. Kellum, 117 N.C. 664, 23 S.E. 180 (1895).

Parties to Proceeding. — All landowners whose land adjoins the disputed boundary and whose interest may be affected are necessary and proper parties. Landowners whose land adjoins boundary lines which are not in dispute, but which may connect with or intersect the disputed line, are not necessary parties, although they may be joined in the discretion of the trial judge. Metcalf v. McGuinn, 73 N.C. App. 604, 327 S.E.2d 51, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 542, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985).

Effect of Misjoinder of Parties. — A proceeding under the provisions of this section to establish the true dividing line between adjoining owners of land will be dismissed upon demurrer for misjoinder of parties and causes of action that involve the title or interests of others not related to the matter in dispute, and which are entirely independent thereof. Rogers v. Rogers, 192 N.C. 50, 133 S.E. 184 (1926).

Failure to Comply with Subsection (c) Not Fatal. — Trial court correctly found that the prior judgment was res judicata as to the location of boundary line despite the fact the court did not issue an order to the surveyor to run and mark the boundary lines; although the trial court may not have totally complied with this section, the court strictly observed the statutory provisions in all material respects. Tindall v. Willis, 95 N.C. App. 374, 382 S.E.2d 778 (1989).

A defense bond is not required in a special proceeding to establish boundaries. Roberts v. Sawyer, 229 N.C. 279, 49 S.E.2d 468 (1948).

When Transfer to Regular Term Required. — The jurisdiction of the clerk in these special proceedings is limited in its scope. It extends only to those cases in which the only fact in issue is the location of the boundary line between the lands. Where the title to the land is put in issue the clerk has no authority to pass on any question involved, but must transfer the whole proceedings to the regular term of the court. Parker v. Taylor, 133 N.C. 103, 45 S.E. 473 (1903); Smith v. Johnson, 137 N.C. 43, 49 S.E. 62 (1904); Brown v. Hutchinson, 155 N.C. 205, 71 S.E. 302 (1911).

True Location of Disputed Line Must Be Alleged. — Under general rules applicable to pleadings, and specifically under this section, a petitioner must allege the true location of a disputed boundary line. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964).

The portion of this section providing that petitioner allege "facts sufficient to constitute the location of such line as claimed by him," requires that petitioner allege facts as to the location of the (disputed) line as claimed by him with sufficient definiteness that its location on the earth's surface may be determined from petitioner's description thereof. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964); Beal v. Dellinger, 38 N.C. App. 732, 248 S.E.2d 775 (1978).

Parties May Agree to Have Case Heard in First Instance by Presiding Judge. — This section directs that a processioning proceeding be heard first by the clerk. But the direction is not jurisdictional. A stipulation by which the parties agree to bypass the clerk and have the case heard and determined in the first instance by the presiding judge will be upheld. Strickland v. Kornegay, 240 N.C. 758, 83 S.E.2d 903 (1954); Andrews v. Andrews, 252 N.C. 97, 113 S.E.2d 47 (1960).

Proceeding Assimilated to Action to Quiet Title. — If title becomes involved in a processioning proceeding, the proceeding becomes in effect an action to quiet title under § 41-10. Roberts v. Sawyer, 229 N.C. 279, 49 S.E.2d 468 (1948). See Woody v. Fountain, 143 N.C. 66, 55 S.E. 425 (1906).

Where, in a special proceeding under this Chapter to establish a boundary line, the defendant denies by answer the petitioner's title and pleads 20 years' adverse possession under § 1-40 as a defense, the proceeding is assimilated to an action to quiet title under § 41-10 and the clerk, as directed by § 1-399 [see now § 1-301.2], should "transfer the cause to the civil issue docket for trial during term upon all issues raised by pleadings," in accordance with rules of practice applicable to such actions as originally instituted. Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E.2d 79 (1949).

Where, in a special proceeding under this Chapter to establish a boundary line, the defendant by his answer denies the petitioner's title and as a defense pleads seven years' adverse possession under color of title under § 1-38, or 20 years' adverse possession under § 1-40, the proceeding is assimilated to an action to quiet title. In such case, as provided by § 1-399 [see now § 1-301.2], the clerk "shall transfer the cause to the civil issue docket for trial during term upon all issues raised by the pleadings." Lane v. Lane, 255 N.C. 444, 121 S.E.2d 893 (1961).

Transfer of Cause and Injunctive Relief. — When defendant in a processioning proceeding puts title in issue, the cause should be transferred to the civil issue docket for trial, but when he does not do so the proceeding does not involve title or right to possession, but solely the location of the true dividing line, and therefore injunctive relief will not lie at the instance of one party to enjoin the other form retaining possession of the disputed strip, pending the final determination of the proceeding, even in the superior court on appeal, since the restraint sought is not germane to the subject of the action. Jackson v. Jackson, 216 N.C. 401, 5 S.E.2d 143 (1939). See Wilson v. Alleghany Co., 124 N.C. 7, 32 S.E. 326 (1899).

Effect of Erroneous Transfer of Cause. — The fact that the clerk in a processioning proceeding erroneously concludes that the answer converted the proceeding into an action to try title to realty, and thereupon transfers the cause to the civil issue docket for trial, does not deprive the superior court of jurisdiction to determine the processioning proceeding. Lance v. Cogdill, 236 N.C. 134, 71 S.E.2d 918 (1952).

Issues Raised and Waiver of Jury Trial. — Where a special proceeding to establish a boundary line is assimilated to an action to quiet title by the defendant's answer, the issues raised by the pleadings are (1) whether petitioner owns the land described in his petition, and (2) the location of the land so described. In such case if defendant does not tender issues pertinent to the issues above stated he waives his right to a trial by jury. Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E.2d 79 (1949).

Exceptions Not Giving Right to Jury Trial. — Where compulsory reference is ordered in a special proceeding to establish a boundary line, upon defendant's denial of petitioners' title and plea of title by 20 years' advance possession, defendant's exception to the order of reference and exceptions to findings of fact made by the referee do not entitle him to a jury trial when he tenders issues which relate only to questions of fact based upon his exceptions, and fails to tender issues of fact which arise upon the pleadings and to relate such issues to his exceptions and to the findings by their respective numbers. Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E.2d 79 (1949).

Effect of Defendant's Denial of Petitioners' Claims. — The third sentence of this section refers to defendant's failure to file an answer and did not apply where the respondents denied the petitioners' claims and alleged what they considered to be the correct boundary line. Beal v. Dellinger, 38 N.C. App. 732, 248 S.E.2d 775 (1978).

Right to Have Issue Answered by Jury. — In processioning proceedings it is the duty of the jury to locate the boundary. If petitioners fail to carry their burden of proof, the jury need not fix the line according to the respondents' contentions, but may locate the boundary wherever they feel the evidence justifies. Beal v. Dellinger, 38 N.C. App. 732, 248 S.E.2d 775 (1978).

Burden of Proof — Plaintiff. — Upon the institution of the proceedings to ascertain the true dividing line between the lands the burden is on the plaintiff to establish such line. Hill v. Dalton, 140 N.C. 9, 52 S.E. 273 (1905); Woody v. Fountain, 143 N.C. 66, 55 S.E. 425 (1906).

Plaintiff's burden of proof does not shift to the defendant merely because, in addition to denying the line to be as claimed by the plaintiff, he alleges another to be the dividing line. Garris v. Harrington, 167 N.C. 86, 83 S.E. 253 (1914).

The plaintiff is the actor and has the burden of establishing the true location of the dividing line. McCanless v. Ballard, 222 N.C. 701, 24 S.E.2d 525 (1943); Jenkins v. Trantham, 244 N.C. 422, 94 S.E.2d 311 (1956).

The burden of proof rests upon a petitioner to establish the true location of a disputed boundary line. Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964); Coley v. Morris Tel. Co., 267 N.C. 701, 149 S.E.2d 14 (1966).

Same — Defendant. — Where a case was tried by stipulation on the defendant's counterclaim as to the location of the boundary line, the burden of proof was on the defendant to establish the boundary line. Wadsworth v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 38 N.C. App. 1, 247 S.E.2d 25 (1978), vacated on other grounds, 297 N.C. 172, 253 S.E.2d 925 (1979).

If the plaintiffs are unable to show by the greater weight of evidence the location of the true dividing line at a point more favorable to them than the line as contended by the defendants, the jury should answer the issue in accord with the contentions of the defendants. Coley v. Morris Tel. Co., 267 N.C. 701, 149 S.E.2d 14 (1966).

Plaintiffs May Assert Alternative Boundaries. — In a proceeding to establish disputed boundary lines petitioners may contend that the true boundary is shown by the line on surveyor's map marked by letters as alleged in their petition and also may contend that the true boundary is shown by the fence on the surveyor's map by reason of title having vested in them to the land in dispute up to the fence by adverse possession under § 1-40. They may assert both contentions leaving it to the court and jury to say which line, if either, they have carried the burden of establishing. Jenkins v. Trantham, 244 N.C. 422, 94 S.E.2d 311 (1956).

Duty of Jury to Locate Boundary. — In a processioning proceeding, it is the duty of the jury to locate the boundary; petitioner has the burden of proof, and if he fails to carry that burden, the jury, in the absence of agreement that one or the other is the true line, need not fix the boundary according to respondent's contentions, but may locate the line wherever the jury feels the evidence requires. Combs v. Woodie, 53 N.C. App. 789, 281 S.E.2d 705 (1981).

Questions of Law and Fact. — What is the true dividing line between two contiguous tracts of land is a question of law for the court; where such line is actually located on the premises is an issue of fact for the jury. Lance v. Cogdill, 236 N.C. 134, 71 S.E.2d 918 (1952); Welborn v. Bate Lumber Co., 238 N.C. 238, 77 S.E.2d 612 (1953); Andrews v. Andrews, 252 N.C. 97, 113 S.E.2d 47 (1960). See Jenkins v. Trantham, 244 N.C. 422, 94 S.E.2d 311 (1956); Coley v. Morris Tel. Co., 267 N.C. 701, 149 S.E.2d 14 (1966).

Where the true boundary is, is a question of fact for the jury; what the boundary is, is a question of law for the court. Combs v. Woodie, 53 N.C. App. 789, 281 S.E.2d 705 (1981).

A description contained in a junior conveyance cannot be used to locate the lines called for in a prior conveyance. The location of the lines called for in the prior conveyance is a question of fact to be ascertained from the description there given. Coley v. Morris Tel. Co., 267 N.C. 701, 149 S.E.2d 14 (1966).

The provision of a judgment for marking the line as judicially determined, as provided by subsection (c) of this section, was a mere direction for the performance of a ministerial duty which in no way affected the finality of the determination of how the line should be run. Harrill v. Taylor, 247 N.C. 748, 102 S.E.2d 223 (1958).

Evidence Generally. — The general rules for ascertaining boundaries apply equally well when recourse is had through special proceedings. Tallassee Power Co. v. Savage, 170 N.C. 625, 87 S.E. 629 (1916). See Woodard v. Harrell, 191 N.C. 194, 132 S.E. 12 (1926), containing dicta to the effect that parol evidence of location of boundary line may be properly admitted, if the parties were merely locating the true boundary line, but not to show a verbal agreement to change the true dividing line.

Surveyor's Report as Evidence. — The surveyor, when acting under this section, is not in any sense a referee, and his report to the court should not contain conclusions of law, but should only set forth a detailed account of the facts of the case, and when it does this it is entitled to great evidential weight, although it is not conclusive as to the results contained therein. Norwood v. Crawford, 114 N.C. 513, 19 S.E. 349 (1894). See Green v. Williams, 144 N.C. 60, 56 S.E. 549 (1907).

Surveyor may not give his opinion as to where the boundary is. Combs v. Woodie, 53 N.C. App. 789, 281 S.E.2d 705 (1981).

What Report of Processioners Must Contain. — A report of a processioner is radically defective when it does not state, with precision, the claims of the respective parties, so as to show what lines were disputed or how far they were disputed, and no undue laxity in the proceedings in this respect will be tolerated by the court. Hoyle v. Wilson, 29 N.C. 466 (1847).

Where one of the parties objects to the processioner's proceeding, the processioner must, in his return to the court, state "all the circumstances of the case," as for instance, the nature of the objection, the line or lines claimed by each party, etc. Carpenter v. Whitworth, 25 N.C. 204 (1842).

Acts and Admissions of Adjoining Proprietors as Evidence. — When a dividing line between two tracts can be located by the calls in a deed, the statements and acts of adjoining landowners are not competent evidence as to the location of the boundary line, but where the line is in dispute and is unfixed and uncertain, the acts and admissions of the adjoining proprietors recognizing a certain line as the proper boundary line are evidence competent to be submitted to the trier of the facts. Wadsworth v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 38 N.C. App. 1, 247 S.E.2d 25 (1978), vacated on other grounds, 297 N.C. 172, 253 S.E.2d 925 (1979).

The clerk's jurisdiction to enter a judgment by default in a processioning proceeding is based solely on the sentence in the portion of this section reading "If the defendants fail to answer, judgment shall be given establishing the line according to petition." Pruden v. Keemer, 262 N.C. 212, 136 S.E.2d 604 (1964).

Failure to Except to Judgment of Clerk and Take Appeal within Time Allowed. — Where there is a failure to except to judgment of the clerk in a processioning proceeding fixing the boundary line between the contiguous tracts, and a failure to take an appeal from such judgment within the time allowed by this section, without any showing of excusable neglect, a petition for certiorari to review the judgment of the clerk is properly denied. Johnson v. Taylor, 257 N.C. 740, 127 S.E.2d 533 (1962).

Where Judgment Affirmed on Appeal. — Where judgment in a processioning proceeding establishing the dividing line between the tracts of the respective parties is affirmed on appeal, the lower court may retain the cause thereafter only for the purpose of putting into effect the provisions of this section. Nesbitt v. Fairview Farms, Inc., 239 N.C. 481, 80 S.E.2d 472 (1954).

Judgment of Clerk as Res Judicata — Where Title to Land Not in Issue. — Where the only fact in issue is the establishment and location of the boundary line, then the judgment of the clerk is, to this extent, binding on the parties and they may not again litigate on this precise point. Whitaker v. Garren, 167 N.C. 658, 83 S.E. 759 (1914).

The clerk's judgment may not estop the parties from asserting in a separate action title in the land. Nash v. Shute, 182 N.C. 528, 109 S.E. 353 (1921).

Same — Where Title in Issue. — Where, however, the parties join issue upon the title and the case is transferred to the regular term of the court, a judgment therein estops the parties both as to the title and the location of the line. Whitaker v. Garren, 167 N.C. 658, 83 S.E. 759 (1914). See Nash v. Shute, 182 N.C. 528, 109 S.E. 353 (1921).

Parties on Appeal. — Under the provision contained in this section for appeal by either party to the regular term (now session) of the court, other parties having an interest in the locus in quo may, upon motion, be permitted to come in. Batts v. Pridgen, 147 N.C. 133, 60 S.E. 897 (1908).

Applied in Simpson v. Lee, 26 N.C. App. 712, 217 S.E.2d 80 (1975).

§ 38-4. Surveys in disputed boundaries.

(a) When in any action or special proceeding pending in the superior court the boundaries of lands are drawn in question, the court may, if deemed necessary, order a survey of the lands in dispute, in accordance with the boundaries and lines expressed in each party's titles, and such other surveys as shall be deemed useful.

(b) Surveys pursuant to this section shall be made by one surveyor appointed by the court, unless the court, in its discretion, determines that additional surveyors are necessary. The surveyor or surveyors shall proceed according to the order of the court, and make the surveys and as many plats thereof as shall be ordered.

(c) Upon the request of any party to the action or special proceeding, the court shall call such surveyor or surveyors as the court's witness, and any party to such action or proceeding shall have the privilege of direct examination, cross-examination, and impeachment of such witness. The fact that such witness is called by the court shall not change the weight, effect or admissibility of the testimony of such witness, and upon the request of any party to the suit, the court shall so instruct the jury.

(d) The court shall make an allowance for the fees of the surveyor or surveyors and they shall be taxed as a part of the costs. The court may, in its discretion, require the parties to make a deposit to secure the payment of such fees, and may, in its discretion, provide for the payment of such fees prior to the termination of the suit. (1779, c. 157; 1786, c. 252; R.C., c. 31, s. 119; Code, s. 939; Rev., s. 1504; C.S., s. 364; 1967, c. 33.)

CASE NOTES

This section vests in the court a sound discretion within the limits defined. Vance v. Pritchard, 218 N.C. 273, 10 S.E.2d 725 (1940).

Survey Not Required. — While the better practice is to order a survey in a proceeding to establish a boundary line, this section, the pertinent statute, does not require the court to do so. Young v. Young, 76 N.C. App. 93, 331 S.E.2d 769 (1985).

Better Practice Is to Order Survey. — While this section does not require the court to order a survey of the lands in dispute when the boundaries of lands are in question, it is the better practice to do so. Smothers v. Schlosser, 2 N.C. App. 272, 163 S.E.2d 127 (1968).

When Expenses of Surveys Are Taxable as Costs. — The expense of procuring surveys, maps, plans, photographs and documents are not taxable as costs unless there is clear statutory authority therefor or they have been ordered by the court. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Amount of the allowance for fees of the surveyor is within the court's discretion, after considering the evidence as to the work done. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814 (1984).

Unpaid Expenses. — A court which appoints a surveyor does not lack the authority to take heed of his request for unpaid expenses in the same case in which it appointed him, even though the surveyor is not a party to the underlying action. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814 (1984).

Clerk Has No Power to Make Allowance for Costs. — The word "court," as used in the last provision of this section, refers to the judge, and not to the clerk, and where the trial judge has failed to make an order allowing compensation to the surveyor, the clerk has no power to make the allowance; but on appeal from the clerk's refusal, such order will be made by the judge of the superior court. LaRoque v. Kennedy, 156 N.C. 360, 72 S.E. 454 (1911); Cannon v. Briggs, 174 N.C. 740, 94 S.E. 519 (1917); Ipock v. Miller, 245 N.C. 585, 96 S.E.2d 729 (1957).

Where in an action involving a boundary dispute a survey has been ordered and made, and the trial judge has failed to order compensation, the clerk has no authority to do so. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814 (1984).

Correction of Order. — The trial court's failure to allow and tax costs could be considered an oversight or omission in the order, and since the substantive rights of the parties were not affected thereby, the court had authority under § 1A-1, Rule 60(a) to correct the inadvertent omission of costs from its order. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814 (1984).

Applied in Metcalf v. McGuinn, 73 N.C. App.

604, 327 S.E.2d 51, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 542, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985).

Chapter 38A.

Landowner Liability.

§ 38A-1. Purpose.

The purpose of this Chapter is to encourage owners of land to make land and water areas available to the public at no cost for educational and recreational purposes by limiting the liability of the owner to persons entering the land for those purposes. (1995, c. 308, s. 1.)

§ 38A-2. Definitions.

The following definitions shall apply throughout this Chapter, unless otherwise specified:

(1) "Charge" means a price or fee asked for services, entertainment, recreation performed, or products offered for sale on land or in return for an invitation or permission to enter upon land, except as otherwise excluded in this Chapter.

(2) "Educational purpose" means any activity undertaken as part of a formal or informal educational program, and viewing historical, natural, archaeological, or scientific sites.

(3) "Land" means real property, land, and water, but does not mean a dwelling and the property immediately adjacent to and surrounding such dwelling that is generally used for activities associated with occupancy of the dwelling as a living space.

(4) "Owner" means any individual or nongovernmental legal entity that has any fee, leasehold interest, or legal possession, and any employee or agent of such individual or nongovernmental legal entity.

(5) "Recreational purpose" means any activity undertaken for recreation, exercise, education, relaxation, refreshment, diversion, or pleasure. (1995, c. 308, s. 1.)

§ 38A-3. Exclusions.

For purposes of this Chapter, the term "charge" does not include:

(1) Any contribution in kind, services or cash contributed by a person, legal entity, nonprofit organization, or governmental entity other than the owner, whether or not sanctioned or solicited by the owner, the purpose of which is to (i) remedy damage to land caused by educational or recreational use; or (ii) provide warning of hazards on, or remove hazards from, land used for educational or recreational purposes.

(2) Unless otherwise agreed in writing or otherwise provided by the State or federal tax codes, any property tax abatement or relief received by the owner from the State or local taxing authority in exchange for the owner's agreement to open the land for educational or recreational purposes. (1995, c. 308, s. 1.)

§ 38A-4. Limitation of liability.

Except as specifically recognized by or provided for in this chapter, an owner of land who either directly or indirectly invites or permits without charge any person to use such land for educational or recreational purposes owes the person the same duty of care that he owes a trespasser, except nothing in this chapter shall be construed to limit or nullify the doctrine of attractive nuisance and the owner shall inform direct invitees of artificial or unusual hazards of which the owner has actual knowledge. This section does not apply to an owner who invites or permits any person to use land for a purpose for which the land is regularly used and for which a price or fee is usually charged even if it is not charged in that instance, or to an owner whose purpose in extending an invitation or granting permission is to promote a commercial enterprise. When real estate is conveyed to any person, the same shall be held and construed to be a conveyance in fee, whether the word "heir" is used or not, unless such conveyance in plain and express words shows, or it is plainly intended by the conveyance or some part thereof, that the grantor meant to convey an estate of less dignity. CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section changes the common-law rule that in order to convey a fee simple the word "heirs" should appear either in the premises or the habendum of the deed. Carolina Real Estate Co. v. Bland, 152 N.C. 225, 67 S.E. 483 (1910).

The rule of construction in this section prevails over common-law rules to the extent that they conflict. Robinson v. King, 68 N.C. App. 86, 314 S.E.2d 768 (1984).

Even prior to the enactment of the section the courts of this State commenced to draw away from the strictness of the common-law rule in this respect, and a perusal of a large number of cases bearing upon and controlling the subject show a marked tendency to mitigate the harshness of the law. So an exception as to devises and equitable estates had already been made. See Hollowell v. Manly, 179 N.C. 262, 102 S.E. 386 (1920); Whichard v. Whitehurst, 181 N.C. 79, 106 S.E. 463 (1921); Smith v. Proctor, 139 N.C. 314, 51 S.E. 889 (1905).

Deeds Executed Prior to Effective Force of Section. — Although a deed to lands executed and delivered prior to the effective force of this section would not pass an estate in fee simple if the deed entirely omitted the word "heirs" or other appropriate words of inheritance, a deed executed before such date to a school committee "and their successors in office in fee simple" was sufficient to pass a fee simple title of the lands conveyed therein. Tucker v. Smith, 199 N.C. 502, 154 S.E. 826 (1930).

Section Provides Same Rule for Deeds as for Devises. — This section provides the same rule of construction of deeds as is contained in § 31-38 for construction of devises. Vickers v. Leigh, 104 N.C. 248, 10 S.E. 308 (1889).

Decisions Construing § 31-38 Are Pertinent. — Decisions construing § 31-38, pertaining to the construction of wills, are pertinent in construing this section, since the statutes are similar in wording and effect. Artis v. Artis, 228 N.C. 754, 47 S.E.2d 228 (1948).

Fee Simple Presumed Unless Contrary Intention Appears. — All conveyances of land executed since the passage of this section are to be taken to be in fee simple, unless the intent of the grantor is plainly manifest in some part of the instrument to convey an estate of less dignity. It is the legislative will that the intention of the grantor and not the technical words of the common law shall govern. Triplett v. Williams, 149 N.C. 394, 63 S.E. 79 (1908).

By this section a deed, though not using the word "heirs," is a conveyance in fee, unless the contrary intention appears. Holloway v. Green, 167 N.C. 91, 83 S.E. 243 (1914).

The law favors creation of a fee simple estate unless it is clearly shown a lesser estate was intended. Vestal v. Vestal, 49 N.C. App. 263, 271 S.E.2d 306 (1980).

If it appeared that the word "heirs" was omitted because of ignorance, inadvertence or mistake, the word would be supplied so as to pass title in fee in accordance with the intention of the grantor. Vickers v. Leigh, 104 N.C. 248, 10 S.E. 308 (1889).

Presumption Held Rebutted. — The presumption of fee raised by this section was rebutted by the fact that the deed intended to convey only a life estate, which was manifest from the many restraining expressions contained therein. Boomer v. Grantham, 203 N.C. 230, 165 S.E. 698 (1932).

Section Inapplicable When Lesser Estate Intended. — This section does not apply when the deed discloses an intent to convey an estate less than a fee simple. Etheridge v. United States, 218 F. Supp. 809 (E.D.N.C. 1963).

This section does not apply where the granting clause of the deed in plain and explicit words shows that the intention of the grantor was to grant merely a life estate, and the habendum clause creates no estate contradictory or repugnant to that given in the granting clause. Griffin v. Springer, 244 N.C. 95, 92 S.E.2d 682 (1956).

Language in Deed Must Clearly Convey Less than Fee Simple. — The language of the deed must clearly manifest the intention of the parties to convey less than a fee simple absolute. Etheridge v. United States, 218 F. Supp. 809 (E.D.N.C. 1963).

This section does not change a common-law conveyance of inheritance to a conveyance of less effectiveness, i.e., to one conveying only a life estate. Whitley v. Arenson, 219 N.C. 121, 12 S.E.2d 906 (1941).

Absence of Words of Inheritance and Presence of Language Limiting Estate to Life of Grantee. — Under this section, the absence of words of inheritance, such as the use of the word "heir," combined with the presence of language limiting the estate to the term of the grantee's life, should be interpreted to convey a life estate. Robinson v. King, 68 N.C. App. 86, 314 S.E.2d 768 (1984).

Construction of Deed as Imposing Condition Subsequent Is Not Favored. — The law does not favor a construction of the language contained in a deed which would constitute a condition subsequent unless the intention of the parties to create such a restriction upon the title is clearly manifested. Mattox v. State, 280 N.C. 471, 186 S.E.2d 378 (1972).

A fee upon a condition subsequent is not created unless the grantor expressly reserves the right to reenter or provides for a forfeiture or for a reversion or that the instrument shall be null and void. Mattox v. State, 280 N.C. 471, 186 S.E.2d 378 (1972).

If a deed contains both the apt words to create a condition and an express clause of reentry, reverter, or forfeiture, an estate on condition subsequent is created. Mattox v. State, 280 N.C. 471, 186 S.E.2d 378 (1972).

Effect of Restraint upon Alienation. — Where a conveyance is construed under this section to be in fee, any attempt of restraint upon alienation is void, but where relevant, the words therein used may be construed to ascertain whether the intent of the grantor was to convey a fee or an estate of less dignity.

Holloway v. Green, 167 N.C. 91, 83 S.E. 243 (1914).

Determining Whether Grant Is of Easement Appurtenant or in Gross. — The fact that the words "heirs and assigns" are not entered after the name of the grantee of an easement is not controlling in determining whether the easement granted is an easement appurtenant or in gross. Shingleton v. State, 260 N.C. 451, 133 S.E.2d 183 (1963); Gibbs v. Wright, 17 N.C. App. 495, 195 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Applied in New York Life Ins. Co. v. Lassiter, 209 N.C. 156, 183 S.E. 616 (1936); Jackson v. Powell, 225 N.C. 599, 35 S.E.2d 892 (1945); Swaim v. Swaim, 235 N.C. 277, 69 S.E.2d 534 (1952); Crawford v. Wilson, 43 N.C. App. 69, 257 S.E.2d 696 (1979).

II. CONFLICTING CLAUSES.

The intention of the parties must be gathered from the whole instrument in conformity with established principles, and the division of the deed into formal parts is not permitted to prevail against such intention; for substance, not form, is the object sought. Etheridge v. United States, 218 F. Supp. 809 (E.D.N.C. 1963).

Conflict Between Granting Clause and Habendum. — Where a quitclaim deed was ambiguous in that the granting clause gave all right, title, and interest to the grantee, while the habendum clause gave her the land "for and during the term of her natural life," the trial court properly held that the grantee acquired only a life estate under the deed. Robinson v. King, 68 N.C. App. 86, 314 S.E.2d 768 (1984).

The granting clause of a deed was to one of the grantor's sons, his heirs and assigns, and following the description, "this deed is conveyed to the said grantee to him his lifetime and then to his boy children," with habendum to the said son "and his heirs and not to assign only to his brothers their only use and behoof forever" with warranty to the said son "and his heirs and assigns." It was held that the portion of the habendum restraining assignment except to the brothers of the grantee was equally consistent with an assignment of a life estate and with an assignment of the fee, and to hold that the grant to the "son and his heirs" conveyed the fee simple would require that other portions of the instrument expressive of the intent of the grantor be disregarded; thus in accordance with the intention of the grantor as gathered from the entire instrument the deed conveyed a life estate to the son with remainder to the son's male children, the intent of the grantor to convey an estate of less dignity than a fee being apparent. Jefferson v. Jefferson, 219 N.C. 333, 13 S.E.2d 745 (1941).

In event of any repugnancy between granting clause and preceding or succeeding recitals, granting clause will prevail. Elliot v. Cox, 100 N.C. App. 536, 397 S.E.2d 319 (1990).

Section as Curing Repugnancy between Granting Clause and Habendum. — The premises of a deed to land read, among other things, "unto said M.G., her heirs and assigns," and the habendum, "to herself, the said M.G. during her lifetime, and at her death said land is to be equally divided between" her children. It was held that since under this section, the same estate would have passed if the word "heirs," an established formula, had been omitted in the granting clause, there was no repugnance in this deed between the granting clause and habendum. The limitation of the estate in the habendum, and the creation of an estate in remainder therein, were conclusive proof that there was no intention of the grantor to create an estate in fee, but an estate for life to M.G. with a remainder over to her children. Triplett v. Williams, 149 N.C. 394, 63 S.E. 79 (1908).

Rejection of Repugnant Clause Where Granting Clause and Habendum Convey Fee. — Where the granting clause and the habendum convey the entire estate in fee simple, and the warranty is in harmony therewith, a clause in any other part of the instrument which undertakes to divest or limit the fee simple title will be rejected as repugnant to the estate and interest conveyed. Artis v. Artis, 228 N.C. 754, 47 S.E.2d 228 (1948); Pilley v. Smith, 230 N.C. 62, 51 S.E.2d 923 (1949).

Where the granting clause in a deed purported to convey the fee and the habendum and warranties were in harmony therewith, a clause in the description referring to the property conveyed as a right-of-way 100 feet wide did not limit the conveyance to an easement, and the contention that a fee simple was conveyed was supported by this section. McCotter v. Barnes, 247 N.C. 480, 101 S.E.2d 330 (1958).

When the granting clause, the habendum, and the warranty in a deed are clear and unambiguous, and fully sufficient to pass immediately a fee simple estate to the grantee or grantees, a paragraph inserted between the description and the habendum in which grantor seeks to reserve a life estate in himself or another, or to otherwise limit the estate conveyed, will be rejected as repugnant to the estate and interest therein conveyed. Lackey v. Hamlet City Bd. of Educ., 258 N.C. 460, 128 S.E.2d 806 (1963).

Where a reverter clause and purposes for which property was to be held as expressed in the habendum were not irreconcilable with or repugnant to the granting clause, a fee simple determinable was conveyed, it being apparent that the grantors intended to convey an estate of less dignity than a fee simple absolute. Lackey v. Hamlet City Bd. of Educ., 258 N.C. 460, 128 S.E.2d 806 (1963).

Provisions for Reverter Appearing Only in Description Not Valid. — Provisions in a deed for the reverter of title to the grantor are not valid and effective where they appear only at the end of the description and are not referred to elsewhere in the deed. Whetsell v. Jernigan, 29 N.C. 136, 223 S.E.2d 397 (1976).

III. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

The language "for the purpose above named for the term of this conveyance" clearly limits the effect of the conveyance to less than a fee simple absolute. Etheridge v. United States, 218 F. Supp. 809 (E.D.N.C. 1963).

Deed to Husband and Wife and Heirs of Wife. — A deed to a husband and wife, and only to the heirs of the latter, does not pass the fee to the former by virtue of this section, for as to him it is plainly intended that the grantor meant to convey an estate of less dignity. Sprinkle v. Spainhour, 149 N.C. 223, 62 S.E. 910 (1908).

Deed Held to Create Fee on Condition Subsequent. — The words used in a deed "upon condition however," then fully setting out the conditions, followed by a provision that "if and when" the grantee fails to carry out the specified conditions, "the said land shall revert to, and the title shall vest in the grantor, her heirs and assigns, with the same force and effect as if this deed had not been made, executed or delivered," were sufficient to show the grantor intended to create a fee on condition subsequent, and by this language did create such estate. Mattox v. State, 280 N.C. 471, 186 S.E.2d 378 (1972).

Deed Held Not to Impose Condition Subsequent. — A habendum in a deed to incorporators and trustees of a college, "To have and to hold the aforesaid lands and premises to the party of the second part and their successors in office forever, for the only proper use and behalf of said Claremont Female College as foresaid," did not have the effect of appropriating the specific property to school purposes under condition subsequent, but was held to express only the purpose of the grantor in making the deed, and as to third persons the power of the trustees or other corporate authority to convey the property was not impaired. Claremont College v. Riddle, 165 N.C. 211, 81 S.E. 283 (1914).

No Clear Expression of Reversion or Termination. — A deed conveyed a fee simple absolute rather than a fee simple determinable, where the deed conveying land to the United States contained no clear expression of reversion or termination, despite the phrase "use and occupy" in the granting clause and the word "term" in the warranty clause, in which grantor warranted peacable possession "for the purposes above named for the term of this covenant." Station Assocs. v. Dare County, 350 N.C. 367, 513 S.E.2d 789 (1999).

Deed Held to Create Defeasible Fee. — The section was applied where the intent of the donor, appearing by proper construction of a deed, was to give a defeasible fee simple estate of his granddaughter, which was to become absolute upon the birth of a child to her. Sharpe v. Brown, 177 N.C. 294, 98 S.E. 825 (1919).

Section Applied to Reservation of Easement. — This section was applied in holding that a reservation of an easement was a reservation in fee, as no contravening intent appeared from the conveyance. Ruffin v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 151 N.C. 330, 66 S.E. 317 (1909).

Retention of Mineral Rights. — Under this section where a deed conveys land "with the exception of one half of all the mineral found upon the premises, which is hereby expressly reserved," the grantor retains the fee in one half the mineral rights. Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Wyatt, 189 N.C. 107, 126 S.E. 93 (1925).

Deed Allowing Removal of Structures from Conveyed Land. — Since the parties stipulated in the deed that the defendant be allowed to remove from the conveyed land all structures whenever it thought proper, it is obvious that the parties intended a conveyance in other than fee simple. Etheridge v. United States, 218 F. Supp. 809 (E.D.N.C. 1963).

§ 39-1.1. In construing conveyances court shall give effect to intent of the parties.

(a) In construing a conveyance executed after January 1, 1968, in which there are inconsistent clauses, the courts shall determine the effect of the instrument on the basis of the intent of the parties as it appears from all of the provisions of the instrument.

(b) The provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall not prevent the application of the rule in Shelley's case. (1967, c. 1182.)

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent. — By the passage of this section it would appear that it is the legislative will that the intention of the grantor and not the technical words of the common law shall govern. Whetsell v. Jernigan, 291 N.C. 128, 229 S.E.2d 183 (1976); Johnson v. Burrow, 42 N.C. App. 273, 256 S.E.2d 811 (1979).

When the legislature passed this section, it was their primary intention to abolish past rules of construction which required courts to disregard certain clauses if they contradicted the granting clause of a deed. Instead, for conveyances executed after 1 January 1968, the courts would, under this section, consider equally all clauses in a deed when as the intent of parties. Mason-Reel v. Simpson, 100 N.C. App. 651, 397 S.E.2d 755 (1990).

This section does not apply to conveyances executed prior to January 1, 1968. Whetsell v. Jernigan, 291 N.C. 128, 229 S.E.2d 183 (1976); Gamble v. Williams, 39 N.C. App. 630, 251 S.E.2d 625 (1979).

Construction of Conveyances Executed Prior to January 1, 1968. — Since the General Assembly provided that this section should apply to all conveyances executed after January 1, 1968, the court should not change the proposition voiced in Artis v. Artis, 228 N.C. 754, 47 S.E.2d 228 (1948) and Oxendine v. Lewis, 252 N.C. 669, 114 S.E.2d 706 (1960) and other earlier cases in interpreting conveyances executed prior to that date. Waters v. North Carolina Phosphate Corp., 32 N.C. App. 305, 232 S.E.2d 275, cert. denied, Webb v. Bowler, 50 N.C. 362 (1858); Hurdle v. Outlaw, 55 N.C. 75 (1854).

In construing deeds executed prior to January 1, 1968, courts must look to common-law rules. Frye v. Arrington, 58 N.C. App. 180, 292 S.E.2d 772 (1982).

This section is inapplicable to a quitclaim deed that was executed in 1924. Robinson v. King, 68 N.C. App. 86, 314 S.E.2d 768 (1984).

Deeds executed prior to January 1, 1968, are to be construed according to common law rules, as opposed to the statutory rule of construction found in subsection (a) of this section. Ives v. Real-Venture, Inc., 97 N.C. App. 391, 388 S.E.2d 573, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 139, 394 S.E.2d 174 (1990), reconsideration denied, 328 N.C. 271, 400 S.E.2d 452 (1991).

Construction so as to Effectuate Intent. — In construing a conveyance of an easement, whether or not executed prior to January 1, 1968, the effective date of this section, the deed is to be construed in such a way as to effectuate the intention of the parties, as gathered from the entire instrument. Higdon v. Davis, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

In construing a conveyance, the intention of the parties is to be given effect whenever that can be done consistently with rational construction. Robertson v. Hunsinger, 132 N.C. App. 495, 512 S.E.2d 480 (1999).

Deed is to be construed by the court, and meaning of its terms is question of law, not of fact. Elliot v. Cox, 100 N.C. App. 536, 397 S.E.2d 319 (1990).

The meaning of the terms of the deed is a question of law, not of fact. Mason-Reel v. Simpson, 100 N.C. App. 651, 397 S.E.2d 755 (1990).

Intent of Parties to Be Determined by Judge. — In light of the purpose of subsection (a) of this section, the statute's requirement that "the courts" interpret the deed did not change the traditional rule that it is the judge's role to determine the intent of the parties. It was not the legislature's intent to change who interprets the intent of the parties in a deed; rather, the statute was an effort by the legislature to state how "the courts" should interpret the deed. Therefore, under the statute it is the judge's role to determine the intent of the parties. Mason-Reel v. Simpson, 100 N.C. App. 651, 397 S.E.2d 755 (1990); Robertson v. Hunsinger, 132 N.C. App. 495, 512 S.E.2d 480 (1999).

Court Has Power to Determine Intent But Not Issues of Fact. — Generally, where there is no waiver of jury trial or agreement as to facts nor evidence offered, the court is without power to decide a controverted issue of fact raised by the pleadings. However, ambiguous deeds traditionally have been construed by the courts according to rules of construction, rather than by having juries determine factual questions of intent. Mason-Reel v. Simpson, 100 N.C. App. 651, 397 S.E.2d 755 (1990).

Ascertaining Intent of Parties. — In some situations it is necessary to look beyond the four corners of the deed to ascertain the intent of the parties. Intention, as a general rule, must be sought in the terms of the instrument; but if the words used leave the intention in doubt, resort may be had to the circumstances attending the execution of the instrument and the situation of the parties at that time; the tendency of the modern decisions is to treat all uncertainties in a conveyance as ambiguities to be explained by ascertaining, in the manner indicated the intention of the parties; where trial judge chose not to hear evidence of "circumstances attending the execution of the instrument and the situation of the parties at that time," and instead, reasoned that he was able to determine the intent of the parties by considering the entire deed, summary judgment was proper. Mason-Reel v. Simpson, 100 N.C. App. 651, 397 S.E.2d 755 (1990).

Deed is to be construed to ascertain intention of grantor as expressed in language used, construed from four corners of instrument. Elliot v. Cox, 100 N.C. App. 536, 397 S.E.2d 319 (1990).

Introductory Recital Repugnant to Granting Clause. — Introductory recital that defendants claimed created tenancy by entirety was repugnant to granting clause and had to be disregarded. Elliot v. Cox, 100 N.C. App. 536, 397 S.E.2d 319 (1990).

Introductory Recital Was Not Given Effect Over Granting Habendum and Warranty Clauses. — Introductory recital, by virtue of being first in deed, not given effect over granting habendum and warranty clauses which were in accord with each other but inconsistent with introductory recital. Elliot v. Cox, 100 N.C. App. 536, 397 S.E.2d 319 (1990).

Jury Trial Held Unnecessary. — Where the cause of action is in fraud, the defendants would have a basic right to a jury trial. However, judge in action to quiet title based on fraud and on construction of deed considered only the intent of the parties in the deed in question and did not reach the issue of fraud. Once the intent was determined from the four corners of the deed, "fraud" no longer mattered and no jury trial was necessary. The judge was able to dispose of the case on a judgment on the pleadings. Mason-Reel v. Simpson, 100 N.C. App. 651, 397 S.E.2d 755 (1990).

Applied in Waters v. North Carolina Phosphate Corp., 50 N.C. App. 252, 273 S.E.2d 517 (1981); Biggers v. Evangelist, 71 N.C. App. 35, 321 S.E.2d 524 (1984).

§ 39-2. Vagueness of description not to invalidate.

No deed or other writing purporting to convey land or an interest in land shall be declared void for vagueness in the description of the thing intended to be granted by reason of the use of the word "adjoining" instead of the words "bounded by," or for the reason that the boundaries given do not go entirely around the land described: Provided, it can be made to appear to the satisfaction of the jury that the grantor owned at the time of the execution of such deed or paper-writing no other land which at all corresponded to the description contained in such deed or paper-writing. (1891, c. 465, s. 2; Rev., s. 948; C.S., s. 992.)

Cross References. — As to vagueness of description in paper-writing offered as evidence, see § 8-39.

Legal Periodicals. — For note as to the transfer of land by wills in light of Stephenson v. Rowe, 315 N.C. 330, 338 S.E.2d 301 (1986), see 65 N.C.L. Rev. 1488 (1987).

CASE NOTES

This section does not operate retrospectively. See Lowe v. Harris, 112 N.C. 472, 17 S.E. 539 (1893); Hamphill v. Annis, 119 N.C. 514, 26 S.E. 152 (1896).

Section Applies Only Where There Is a Description. — In Harris v. Woodard, 130 N.C. 580, 41 S.E. 790 (1902), it was said that the statute applies only where there is a description which can be aided, but not when there is no description. Bryson v. McCoy, 194 N.C. 91, 138 S.E. 420 (1927); Powell v. Allen, 75 N.C. 450 (1876).

Construction so as to Effectuate Intent. — In construing a conveyance of an easement, whether or not executed prior to January 1, 1968, the effective date of this section, the deed is to be construed in such a way as to effectuate the intention of the parties, as gathered from the entire instrument. Higdon v. Davis, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

A deed which fails to describe any land is as void now as it was prior to the passage of this section. Moore v. Fowle, 139 N.C. 51, 51 S.E. 796 (1905).

Description Too Vague and Indefinite. — A deed which fails to describe with certainty the property sought to be conveyed, does not fix a beginning point or any of the boundaries, and contains no reference to anything extrinsic by reference to which the description could be made certain, is too vague and indefinite to admit of parol evidence of identification, and it being impossible to identify the land sought to be conveyed, the deed is inoperative, this section not applying to such cases. Katz v. Daughtrey, 198 N.C. 393, 151 S.E. 879 (1930); Holloman v. Davis, 238 N.C. 386, 78 S.E.2d 143 (1953).

Description Capable of Being Reduced to Certainty. — A description contained in a deed or contract to convey lands is sufficiently definite to admit of parol evidence of identification when it is capable of being reduced to certainty by reference to something extrinsic to which the instrument refers. Patton v. Sluder, 167 N.C. 500, 83 S.E. 818 (1914).

Descriptions Held Sufficient. — A description in a mortgage of a life estate in lands as being in a certain county and township, containing 20 acres more or less, a part of a certain estate, and giving the names of two parties whose lands join it, is sufficient to admit parol evidence to fit the locus in quo to the description in the instrument, and is not void for vagueness of description under this section. Bissette v. Strickland, 191 N.C. 260, 131 S.E. 655 (1926).

A description of land in a deed, which designates all that tract of land in two certain counties, lying on "both sides of old road between" designated points, and bounded by lands of named owners, "and others," being parts of certain State grants, conveyed by the patentee or enterer to certain grantees, etc., is sufficient under this section to admit of parol evidence in aid of the identification of the lands as those intended to be conveyed. Buckhorn Land & Timber Co. v. Yarbrough, 179 N.C. 335, 102 S.E. 630 (1920).

When land is described as adjoining or bounded by certain other tracts, and (1) there are certain other identifying terms such as "known as the A tract," or (2) there are references to an identifiable muniment or source of title, such as the same land conveyed by B to C, or (3) the land is designated by such a term as the home place of D, or (4) adjoining landowners are named and it is shown that grantor has no other land in the vicinity which may be embraced within such bounds, the description is not void for vagueness and it may be aided by parol evidence. Peel v. Calais, 224 N.C. 421, 31 S.E.2d 440 (1944).

Sufficiency of Description in Will. — Where a will leaves to the widow of the testator for life, "at least 75 acres of land ... to include the dwelling house and to be located as she may want it to be, and as near four-square as is consistent," it is sufficient under this section to be located by parol evidence. Heirs at Law of Freeman v. Ramsey, 189 N.C. 790, 128 S.E. 404 (1925).

Applied in Biggers v. Evangelist, 71 N.C. App. 35, 321 S.E.2d 524 (1984).

Stated in Brown v. Hurley, 243 N.C. 138, 90 S.E.2d 324 (1955).

§ 39-3: Repealed by Session Laws 1961, c. 52.

§ 39-4. Conveyances by infant trustees.

When an infant is seized or possessed of any estate in trust, whether by way of mortgage or otherwise, for another person who may be entitled in law to have a conveyance of such estate, or may be declared to be seized or possessed, in the course of any proceeding in the superior court, the court may decree that the infant shall convey and assure such estate, in such manner as it may direct, to such other person; and every conveyance and assurance made in pursuance of such decree shall be as effectual in law as if made by a person of full age. (1821, c. 1116, ss. 1, 2; R.C., c. 37, s. 27; Code, s. 1265; Rev., s. 1036; C.S., s. 994.)

Legal Periodicals. — For discussion of section, see 3 N.C.L. Rev. 110 (1925).

CASE NOTES

The general rule is that contracts of an infant are voidable at the option of the infant, and when avoided, the contract is null and void ab initio. Pippen v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co., 130 N.C. 23, 40 S.E. 822 (1902).

Exception for Necessaries. — To the general rule, there is one exception as old as the rule itself: "An infant may bind himself for necessaries." Jordan v. Coffield, 70 N.C. 110 (1874); Turner v. Gaither, 83 N.C. 357, 35 Am. Rep. 574 (1880).

Section Calls for Proceeding in Equity. — The language of this section that "the court may decree" is indicative of a proceeding in equity. Riddick v. Davis, 220 N.C. 120, 16 S.E.2d 662 (1941).

Remedy is Exclusive. — The remedy prescribed by this section, relating to the foreclosure of a deed of trust, must be, under our form of civil procedure, an action in the nature of an equitable proceeding to foreclose a mortgage. No other remedy is given by statute. Hence, it is exclusive and must be resorted to, and in the manner prescribed. Riddick v. Davis, 220 N.C. 120, 16 S.E.2d 662 (1941).

Trustors are necessary parties to an action by a purchaser at a foreclosure sale to obtain authority for an infant trustee to execute the deed. Riddick v. Davis, 220 N.C. 120, 16 S.E.2d 662 (1941).

§ 39-5. Official deed, when official selling or empowered to sell is not in office.

When a sheriff, coroner, or tax collector, in virtue of his office, sells any real or personal property and goes out of office before executing a proper deed therefor, he may execute the same after his term of office has expired; and when he dies or removes from the State before executing the deed, his successor in office shall execute it. When a sheriff or tax collector dies having a tax list in his hands for collection, and his personal representative or surety, in collecting the taxes, makes sale according to law, his successor in office shall execute the conveyance for the property to the person entitled. (R.C., c. 37, s. 30; Code, s. 1267; 1891, c. 242; Rev., ss. 950, 951; C.S., s. 995; 1971, c. 528, s. 36.)

CASE NOTES

Section Does Not Extend to Clerks. — This section does not extend to clerks, and they cannot exercise the power herein conferred after going out of office. Shew v. Call, 119 N.C. 450, 26 S.E. 33 (1896).

A tax deed executed by an "ex-sheriff" may be authorized under this section. Southern Immigration, Imp. & Mfg. Co. v. Rosey, 144 N.C. 370, 57 S.E. 2 (1907); McNair v. Boyd, 163 N.C. 478, 79 S.E. 966 (1913).

Deed Executed by Successor in Office. — A deed made by a succeeding sheriff or coroner operates by virtue of this section to pass the title to what was sold. Isler v. Andrews, 66 N.C. 552 (1872); Edwards v. Tipton, 77 N.C. 222 (1877).

Successor May Demand Evidence of Sale and Payment. — Before a successor in office can be required to make a conveyance sought under this section he is entitled to demand clear and conclusive evidence that a sale was made by his predecessor, and also that the purchase price was paid. Harris v. Irwin, 29 N.C. 432 (1847); Isler v. Andrews, 66 N.C. 552 (1872).

Deeds as Evidence. — A sheriff's deed made pursuant to this section after he has gone out of office is still subject to the rule that such deeds are prima facie evidence of sale and execution. But the recitals in a deed made by a successor of the sheriff are only hearsay, as they constitute his opinion based on information and not his own knowledge. Curlee v. Smith, 91 N.C. 172 (1884). See McPherson v. Hussey, 17 N.C. 323 (1833); Edwards v. Tipton, 77 N.C. 222 (1877).

Power to Correct Deeds. — A sheriff's deed is under control of the court, and the court can compel a sheriff to correct his deed; if the sheriff who executes the deed dies, the court can compel his successor to correct the deed, pursuant to this section, hence, the court may on motion during the trial of a suit correct such a deed. Millsaps v. McCormick, 71 N.C. 531 (1874).

§ 39-6. Revocation of deeds of future interests made to persons not in esse.

The grantor in any voluntary conveyance in which some future interest in real estate is conveyed or limited to a person not in esse may, at any time before he comes into being, revoke by deed such interest so conveyed or limited. This deed of revocation shall be registered as other deeds; and the grantor of like interest for a valuable consideration may, with the joinder of the person from whom the consideration moved, revoke said interest in like manner. The grantor, maker or trustor who has heretofore created or may hereafter create a voluntary trust estate in real or personal property for the use and benefit of himself or of any other person or persons in esse with a future contingent interest to some person or persons not in esse or not determined until the happening of a future event may at any time, prior to the happening of the contingency vesting the future estates, revoke the grant of the interest to such person or persons not in esse or not determined by a proper instrument to that effect; and the grantor of like interest for a valuable consideration may, with the joinder of the person from whom the consideration moved, revoke said interest in like manner: Provided, that in the event the instrument creating such estate has been recorded, then the deed of revocation of such estate shall be likewise recorded before it becomes effective: Provided, further, that this section shall not apply to any instrument hereafter executed creating such a future contingent interest when said instrument shall expressly state in effect that the grantor, maker, or trustor may not revoke such interest: Provided, further, that this section shall not apply to any instrument heretofore executed whether or not such instrument contains express provisions that it is irrevocable unless the grantor, maker, or trustor shall within six months after the effective date of this proviso either revoke such future interest, or file with the trustee an instrument stating or declaring that it is his intention to retain the power to revoke under this section: Provided, further, that in the event the instrument creating such estate has been recorded, then the revocation or declaration shall likewise be recorded before it becomes effective. (1893, c. 498; Rev., s. 1045; C.S., s. 996; 1929, c. 305; 1941, c. 264; 1943, c. 437.)

CASE NOTES

The constitutionality of this section was upheld in Stanback v. Citizen's Nat'l Bank, 197 N.C. 292, 148 S.E. 313 (1929).

The 1929 amendment to this section is constitutional as applied to trusts created before the effective date of the amendment. Stanback v. Citizen's Nat'l Bank, 197 N.C. 292, 148 S.E. 313 (1929), distinguishing Roe v. Journegan, 175 N.C. 261, 95 S.E. 495 (1918), and Roe v. Journegan, 181 N.C. 180, 106 S.E. 680 (1921).

1943 Amendment Is Constitutional. — Even though the statutory power of revocation of a voluntary conveyance of future interests in lands limited to persons not in esse be regarded as a vested right, the 1943 amendment to this section, giving the grantor six months after its effective date to exercise the right of revocation or to file notice of intention to do so, is a reasonable limitation, and therefore the application of the limitation of the amendment to deeds executed prior to its effective date is constitutional. Pinkham v. Unborn Children of Pinkham, 227 N.C. 72, 40 S.E.2d 690 (1946).

Purpose of 1943 Amendment. — The 1943 amendment was no doubt enacted to resolve a doubtful situation which had arisen through uncertainty as to the effect of this section on the revocability of trusts, and the incidence of federal taxation on trusts already set up, or hereafter to be created. It was intended to bring North Carolina into line with other states where the irrevocability of trusts could be assured to the grantor or settlor when made. Pinkham v. Unborn Children of Pinkham, 227 N.C. 72, 40 S.E.2d 690 (1946).

Revocation within Six Months of Effective Date of 1943 Amendment. — This section was applied, as to revocation within six months after the effective date of the 1943 amendment, in Kirkland v. Deck, 228 N.C. 439, 45 S.E.2d 538 (1947).

Contingent Interests May Be Affected by Retroactive Laws. — Though vested rights may not be affected by retroactive laws, contingent interests may be affected thereby, and where there is a voluntary trust with the limitation over upon a contingency determinable at some future time as to the persons who take thereunder, the power of revocation of a trust given by this section is not within the constitutional inhibition. Stanback v. Citizen's Nat'l Bank, 197 N.C. 292, 148 S.E. 313 (1929).

Mere expectancies of future contingent interests provided for persons not in esse do not constitute vested rights such as would deprive the legislature of the power to enact this section authorizing revocation of a voluntary grant. MacMillan v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 221 N.C. 352, 20 S.E.2d 276 (1942).

Section before 1929 Amendment Not Retroactive. — This section as it stood before the 1929 amendment did not apply to deeds executed prior to its enactment. Roe v. Journegan, 175 N.C. 261, 95 S.E. 495 (1918); Roe v. Journegan, 181 N.C. 180, 106 S.E. 680 (1921). See Stanback v. Citizen's Nat'l Bank, 197 N.C. 292, 148 S.E. 313 (1929).

Power of Revocation Is Not a Vested Right. — The right to revoke a voluntary conveyance of future interests in lands limited to persons not in esse is a personal power and privilege created by this section and not a vested right within constitutional protection. Pinkham v. Unborn Children of Pinkham, 227 N.C. 72, 40 S.E.2d 690 (1946).

Trustor May Not Withdraw Vested Interest of One in Esse When Trust Created. — This section gives the trustor no right to withdraw a vested interest in property held by one who was in esse when the trust was created, but only to withdraw a future contingent interest to some person or persons not in esse or not determinable until the happening of a future event. Washington v. Ellsworth, 253 N.C. 25, 116 S.E.2d 167 (1960).

Equity Jurisdiction Over Trusts Is Not Involved. — In determining the validity a deed revoking a voluntary conveyance of future interests limited to persons not in esse, the equitable jurisdiction of the court over trust estates is not involved. Pinkham v. Unborn Children of Pinkham, 227 N.C. 72, 40 S.E.2d 690 (1946).

Power of Revocation Rests Solely in Grantor. — The power to revoke future interests conveyed by voluntary deeds to persons not in esse under the provisions of this section, rests solely in the grantor conveying such interests, and where deeds are executed by owner of lands to each of his children for the purpose of dividing his lands among them, the fact that each of the children joins in the deeds to the others gives them no right upon the death of the grantor to revoke the contingent limitation over to unborn children of one of them, since they cannot succeed the grantor in the power of revocation and are strangers to that power. Pinkham v. Unborn Children of Pinkham, 227 N.C. 72, 40 S.E.2d 690 (1946).

A waiver of the right of revocation by the trustor of a voluntary trust when made without consideration, does not preclude the trustor from exercising his right to revoke under this section. MacMillan v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 221 N.C. 352, 20 S.E.2d 276 (1942).

Voluntary Trusts. — A trust estate in personalty created by the donor in consideration of $1.00 and natural love and affection is a voluntary trust revocable by the donor under this section. Stanback v. Citizen's Nat'l Bank, 197 N.C. 292, 148 S.E. 313 (1929).

Deed in Marriage Settlement. — Where a woman received property without restriction from her father's estate and executed a deed in marriage settlement in trust without consideration, the deed was a voluntary trust in contemplation of this section. MacRae v. Commerce Union Trust Co., 199 N.C. 714, 155 S.E. 614 (1930).

Trust Revocable Where Vesting of Remainder Depended on Future Contingency. — Where a voluntary trust was created for the life of the donor's nephew or until he reached the age of 50 years, and at the termination to the nephew's issue or in the absence of issue to his next of kin, those who would take in remainder would take upon a contingency, the vesting of which depended upon the uncertain happening of a future event, and the trust might be revoked by the donor. Stanback v. Citizen's Nat'l Bank, 197 N.C. 292, 148 S.E. 313 (1929).

Trust for Benefit of Children Who May Be Born of Marriage. — Where a woman executes a trust deed of settlement upon her marriage for the benefit of her children who may be born of the marriage, depending upon their reaching a certain age, the trust interest subject to be changed by her during her life, after the birth of children their interests do not ipso facto become vested, and she may revoke the trust upon giving a sufficient deed to that effect and in compliance with the statute. MacRae v. Commerce Union Trust Co., 199 N.C. 714, 155 S.E. 614 (1930).

Revocation with Consent of Only Beneficiary of Remainder in Esse. — Plaintiff executed a voluntary trust in personalty with direction that the income therefrom be paid to her for life and upon her death the trust estate be distributed to her surviving children, and in the event plaintiff should die without issue, the trust estate should be paid to a named beneficiary if living and if he were not then living then to plaintiff's heirs generally. Plaintiff had no children, and executed an instrument in writing revoking the trust upon the payment of a specified sum to the only beneficiary of the remainder in esse, who consented to the revocation of the trust upon the payment to him of the amount agreed. It was held that under the provisions of this section plaintiff was entitled to the revocation of the trust. MacMillan v. Branch Banking & Co., 221 N.C. 352, 20 S.E.2d 276 (1942).

Law Governing Power of Revocation of Trust Settlement. — Where the daughter of a British subject took property absolutely from the trustees under his will upon her marriage, and married in North Carolina, executing in this State a deed of settlement in trust, without consideration, for beneficiaries of this State, upon certain contingencies, the lex loci contractu governing the marriage settlement was that of North Carolina and the settlement was controlled by the provisions of our statutes as to its revocation. MacRae v. Commerce Union Trust Co., 199 N.C. 714, 155 S.E. 614 (1930).

When Child "in Being". — Grantor executed deed to his son for life and then to his son's children in fee. Thereafter the grantor and the grantee undertook to revoke the restrictive provision in the deed and joined in conveying the title to a third person. A child was born of the marriage of the grantee in the original deed less than 280 days after the attempted revocation. It was held that the child was in esse at the time of the attempted revocation and therefore the revocation was ineffectual. For the purpose of capacity to take under a deed, and for the purpose of inheritance, it will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that a child is in esse 280 days prior to its birth. Mackie v. Mackie, 230 N.C. 152, 52 S.E.2d 352 (1949).

Applied in Cutter v. American Trust Co., 213 N.C. 686, 197 S.E. 542 (1938); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Sevier, 41 N.C. App. 762, 255 S.E.2d 636 (1979).

§ 39-6.1. Validation of deeds of revocation of conveyances of future interests to persons not in esse.

All deeds or instruments heretofore executed, revoking any conveyance of future interest made to persons not in esse, are hereby validated insofar as any such deed of revocation may be in conflict with the provisions of G.S. 39-6.

All such deeds of revocation heretofore executed are hereby validated and no such deed of revocation shall be held to be invalid by reason of not having been executed within the six-month period prescribed in the third proviso of G.S. 39-6. (1947, c. 62.)

Any interest or estate in personal property which may be created by last will and testament may also be created by a written instrument of transfer. (1953, c. 198.)

CASE NOTES

The restriction upon the right to create a remainder in personal property after a life estate by deed, or other written instrument, has been eliminated by this section. Ridge v. Bright, 244 N.C. 345, 93 S.E.2d 607 (1956).

§ 39-6.3. Inter vivos and testamentary conveyances of future interests permitted.

(a) The conveyance, by deed or will, of an existing future interest shall not be ineffective on the sole ground that the interest so conveyed is future or contingent. All future interests in real or personal property, including all reversions, executory interests, vested and contingent remainders, rights of entry both before and after breach of condition and possibilities of reverter may be conveyed by the owner thereof, by an otherwise legally effective conveyance, inter vivos or testamentary, subject, however, to all conditions and limitations to which such future interest is subject.

(b) The power to convey as provided in subsection (a), can be exercised by any form of conveyance, inter vivos or testamentary, which is otherwise legally effective in this State at the date of such conveyance to transfer a present estate of the same duration in the property.

(c) This section shall apply only to conveyances which become operative to transfer title on or after October 1, 1961. (1961, c. 435.)

CASE NOTES

Future Interests in Personal Property. — As to personal property permanent in nature the generally accepted rule is that the same future interests that are permissible in the field of real property law are also permissible in the law of personal property. Poindexter v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 258 N.C. 371, 128 S.E.2d 867 (1963).

The grantee can take no greater estate than that possessed by his grantor. Jernigan v. Lee, 279 N.C. 341, 182 S.E.2d 351 (1971).

The grantee of a future interest takes it subject to the same conditions or contingencies imposed upon his grantor. Jernigan v. Lee, 279 N.C. 341, 182 S.E.2d 351 (1971).

Contingent interests are transmissible to executors, and are not lost by the death of the person before the event happens on which they are to vest in possession. Jernigan v. Lee, 279 N.C. 341, 182 S.E.2d 351 (1971).

Contingent Interests May Be Sold, Assigned, Transmitted, or Devised. — Contingent interests, such as contingent remainders, springing uses and executory devises may be sold, assigned, transmitted, or devised provided the identity of the persons who will take the estate upon the happening of the contingency be ascertained. Jernigan v. Lee, 279 N.C. 341, 182 S.E.2d 351 (1971).

Contingent interests may be assigned both in real and personal estate, and by any mode of conveyance by which they might be transferred had they been vested remainders. Jernigan v. Lee, 279 N.C. 341, 182 S.E.2d 351 (1971).

Contingent future interests are subject to execution by a judgment creditor of a remainderman. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. C.P. Robinson Co., 319 N.C. 63, 352 S.E.2d 684 (1987), overruling Watson v. Dodd, 68 N.C. 528 (1873), and Bourne v. Farrar, 180 N.C. 135, 104 S.E. 170 (1920), to the extent that they are inconsistent with this holding.

The interest in an executory devise or bequest is transmissible to the heir or executor of one dying before the happening of the contingency upon which it depends. Jernigan v. Lee, 279 N.C. 341, 182 S.E.2d 351 (1971).

Executory devises are not considered as mere possibilities, but as certain interests and estates. Jernigan v. Lee, 279 N.C. 341, 182 S.E.2d 351 (1971).

Applied in Duplin County Bd. of Educ. v. Carr, 15 N.C. App. 690, 190 S.E.2d 653 (1972).

§ 39-6.4. Creation of easements, restrictions, and conditions.

(a) The holder of legal or equitable title of an interest in real property may create, grant, reserve, or declare valid easements, restrictions, or conditions of record burdening or benefiting the same interest in real property.

(b) Subsection (a) of this section shall not affect the application of the doctrine of merger after the severance and subsequent reunification of title to all of the benefited or burdened real property or interests therein. (1997-333, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-333, s. 2, made this section effective October 1, 1997, and applicable to all easements, restrictions, conditions, or interests created, granted, reserved, or declared before, on, or after the effective date of the act, but not applicable to any litigation pending on the effective date or to any instrument directly or indirectly involved in litigation pending on that date, nor applicable to any litigation in which final judgment has been rendered or to any instrument directly or indirectly involved in any litigation in which final judgment has been rendered on or before that date.

§ 39-6.5. Elimination of seal.

The seal of the signatory shall not be necessary to effect a valid conveyance of an interest in real property; provided, that this section shall not affect the requirement for affixing a seal of the officer taking an acknowledgment of the instrument. (1999-221, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-221, s. 5, made this section effective June 25, 1999, and applicable to instruments registered before, on, or after that date, except that they shall not apply to litigation pending on that date or to any instrument directly or indirectly involved in litigation pending on that date.

Article 2.

Conveyances by Husband and Wife.

§ 39-7. Instruments affecting married person's title; joinder of spouse; exceptions.

(a) In order to waive the elective life estate of either husband or wife as provided for in G.S. 29-30, every conveyance or other instrument affecting the estate, right or title of any married person in lands, tenements or hereditaments must be executed by such husband or wife, and due proof or acknowledgment thereof must be made and certified as provided by law.

(b) A married person may bargain, sell, lease, mortgage, transfer and convey any of his or her separate real estate without joinder or other waiver by his or her spouse if such spouse is incompetent and a guardian or trustee has been appointed as provided by the laws of North Carolina, and if the appropriate instrument is executed by the married person and the guardian or trustee of the incompetent spouse and is probated and registered in accordance with law, it shall convey all the estate and interest as therein intended of the married person in the land conveyed, free and exempt from the elective life estate as provided in G.S. 29-30 and all other interests of the incompetent spouse.

(c) Subsection (a) shall not be construed to require the spouse's joinder or other waiver of the elective life estate of such spouse as provided for in G.S. 29-30 where a different provision is made or provided for in the General

Statutes including, but not limited to, G.S. 39-13, 39-13.3, 39-13.4, 31A-1(d), and 52-10. (C.C.P., s. 429; subsec. 6; 1868-9, c. 277, s. 15; Code, s. 1256; 1899, c. 235, s. 9; Rev., s. 952; C.S., s. 997; 1945, c. 73, s. 4; 1957, c. 598, s. 3; 1965, c. 855.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited in the notes to this section construe the section prior to the 1965 amendment.

Constitutionality. — This section is constitutional. Council v. Pridgen, 153 N.C. 443, 69 S.E. 404 (1910); Jackson v. Beard, 162 N.C. 105, 78 S.E. 6 (1913); Graves v. Johnson, 172 N.C. 176, 90 S.E. 113 (1916).

This section is not in conflict with the constitutional provision which secures to the wife her entire estate, notwithstanding her coverture. Southerland v. Hunter, 93 N.C. 310 (1885).

Compliance with Section Necessary. — Unless the formalities of this section are complied with, the deed is absolutely void. Jackson v. Beard, 162 N.C. 105, 78 S.E. 6 (1913).

Compliance with the statutory requirement in effect at the time the deed was executed was necessary to its validity. Failure to comply with the requirements rendered the deed of a married woman to her husband absolutely void. Noble v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 601, 86 S.E.2d 89 (1955).

The section admits no distinction between legal and equitable interests, and embraces every "estate, right or title," which a married woman may possess in land, and such is the construction put upon it by the court. Clayton v. Rose, 87 N.C. 106 (1882).

Creation of Trust. — A woman under coverture cannot create a trust in land by parol or in any other manner except by embodying it in a written instrument executed in accordance with this section. Ricks v. Wilson, 154 N.C. 282, 70 S.E. 476 (1911).

A power of attorney given by a married woman to dismiss an action concerning her land need not be registered to give it validity. Hollingsworth v. Harman, 83 N.C. 153 (1880).

Deed Executed Same Day That Absolute Divorce Decree Was Rendered. — Where a decree of absolute divorce was rendered and a quitclaim deed from the wife to the husband was executed on the same day, and the requirements necessary to the validity of a deed from a married woman to her husband as prescribed by the statute then in effect were not observed, it was held that if the deed was executed and delivered prior to the rendition of the divorce decree, it would be void, and if it was executed and delivered subsequent thereto, it would be valid. An instruction that if the deed were executed and delivered at approximately the same time as the rendition of the divorce decree as a simultaneous transaction, the deed would be valid, was error. Noble v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 601, 86 S.E.2d 89 (1955).

Liability of Married Woman for Breach of Contract. — Since the enactment of the Martin Act (§ 52-2), it is held that contracts wrongfully broken by married women will subject them to liability for damages, even though they cannot be compelled to convey unless they have been privily examined according to forms of law. In other words they may be liable for damages, although specific performance cannot be required. Lipinsky v. Revell, 167 N.C. 508, 83 S.E. 820 (1914); Royal v. Southerland, 168 N.C. 405, 84 S.E. 708 (1915); Warren v. Dail, 170 N.C. 406, 87 S.E. 126 (1915).

Quoted in Heller v. Heller, 7 N.C. App. 120, 171 S.E.2d 335 (1969).

II. EXECUTION BY BOTH HUSBAND AND WIFE.

A. In General.

It is necessary that a wife's deed be signed by the husband and acknowledged by both husband and wife. Joiner v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 6 F. Supp. 103 (M.D.N.C. 1934).

Veto Power of Husband. — While the husband has no interest in the wife's property, he has a "veto" power over the alienation of her realty by withholding his written assent, without which her conveyances of realty are invalid. Stallings v. Walker, 176 N.C. 321, 97 S.E. 25 (1918).

Husband and Wife Must Execute Same Instrument. — This section clearly contemplates that the same instrument of writing shall be executed by both husband and wife. Green v. Bennett, 120 N.C. 394, 27 S.E. 142 (1897); Slocomb v. Ray, 123 N.C. 571, 31 S.E. 829 (1898).

Reason for Joinder of Husband. — The purpose of this section in making the requirements as to the deeds of a feme covert is stated by Chief Justice Smith in Ferguson v. Kinsland, 93 N.C. 337 (1885), as follows: "The requirement that the husband should execute the same deed with the wife was to afford her his protection against the wiles and insidious arts of others, while her separate and private examination was to secure her against coercion and undue influence from him." And Conner, J., in Ball v. Paquin, 140 N.C. 83, 52 S.E. 410 (1905), says: "For the purpose of throwing around her the protection of her husband's counsel and advice, the legislature declared that with certain exceptions she could not contract without the written consent of her husband." Jackson v. Beard, 162 N.C. 105, 78 S.E. 6 (1913).

Husband May Execute First. — The deed is nonetheless effectual to pass the title of the wife because the husband executes it before she does. Lineberger v. Tidwell, 104 N.C. 506, 10 S.E. 758 (1889).

Binding Dower Interest by Mortgage. — To bind the dower interest by mortgage the husband and wife must join in the execution of the deed; separate conveyances will not comply with the requirement of this section. Slocomb v. Ray, 123 N.C. 571, 31 S.E. 829 (1898), decided prior to the enactment of § 29-4 which abolished dower.

Effect of Husband's Minority. — The part of this section requiring execution by the husband when his wife's lands are conveyed is contractual in its nature; hence when the husband is a minor the conveyance is subject to the usual rules applying to infant's contracts, and he may avoid or ratify it upon reaching his majority. Jackson v. Beard, 162 N.C. 105, 78 S.E. 6 (1913). But see § 39-13.2 which makes married persons under 21 competent to execute certain deeds.

B. Husband's Acknowledgment and Proof of Execution.

Acknowledgment or Proof of Execution Necessary to Pass Title. — The law has been changed to permit the acknowledgment of the husband to be taken after that of the wife and before a different officer (see § 39-8), but this section still requires the acknowledgment of the husband or proof of his execution of the deed to pass the title or interest of the wife; and the principle that the General Assembly has power to prescribe the form in which the assent of the husband to the execution of a deed by the wife shall be evidenced, is unimpaired, and was fully recognized in Warren v. Dail, 170 N.C. 406, 87 S.E. 126 (1915); Graves v. Johnson, 172 N.C. 176, 90 S.E. 113 (1916).

The case of Southerland v. Hunter, 93 N.C. 310 (1885), which has been approved on this point in Lineberger v. Tidwell, 104 N.C. 506, 10 S.E. 758 (1889), and in Slocomb v. Ray, 123 N.C. 571, 31 S.E. 829 (1898), construes § 1256 of the Code (1883), Revisal, § 952, Consolidated Statutes, § 992, which is this section, and it is there held that a deed signed by the husband, but not proved as to him, was ineffectual to pass the title of the wife, although her acknowledgment and private examination were taken. The fact that the General Assembly saw fit to change the statute requiring proof as to the the husband and wife to be taken before the same officer, and that proof as to the husband should precede proof as to the wife, after the decisions of McGlennery v. Miller, 90 N.C. 215 (1884), and Ferguson v. Kinsland, 93 N.C. 337 (1885), and left the statute unchanged as to the requirements that the deed must be proved as to the husband to pass the title or interest of the wife, after the decision in Southerland v. Hunter, furnishes the strongest possible evidence that the General Assembly thought the latter a safeguard which ought to be retained. Graves v. Johnson, 172 N.C. 176, 90 S.E. 113 (1916).

Time of Acknowledgment. — While the husband and wife must both be parties to the same deed, there is manifestly no requirement in the language of the section that the act of acknowledgment by both should be contemporaneous. Lineberger v. Tidwell, 104 N.C. 506, 10 S.E. 758 (1889).

Acknowledgment after Wife's Death. — A deed to lands is only complete upon delivery, and a married woman's deed to her lands requires the written consent of her husband under the form provided for by this section requiring that such conveyance be signed by both the husband and wife; and a deed made and signed in due form by the wife, in which thereafter the husband writes in his name as a grantor, and after her death acknowledges its execution before the clerk, is invalid to pass title. Hensley v. Blankinship, 174 N.C. 759, 94 S.E. 519 (1917).

Consent Proved and Recorded after Wife's Death. — No title is conveyed by a married woman's deed of her separate property where her husband's consent thereto was not proved and recorded until after the death of the wife. Green v. Bennett, 120 N.C. 394, 27 S.E. 142 (1897).

III. EFFECT OF FEME COVERT'S DEED.

How Lands of Feme Covert Bound. — In Green v. Branton, 16 N.C. 500 (1830), the court says that a feme covert can be bound as to her land in only two ways: First, by her deed executed jointly with her husband with her privy examination thereto, and, secondly, by the judgment of a competent court. Smith v. Ingram, 130 N.C. 100, 40 S.E. 984 (1902), petition to rehear dismissed, 132 N.C. 959, 44 S.E. 643 (1903).

Delivery of Deed Not Presumed. — The delivery of a deed will not be presumed from the acknowledgment of the husband and the acknowledgment and privy examination of the wife. Tarlton v. Griggs, 131 N.C. 216, 42 S.E. 591 (1902).

When Deed is Inoperative. — In Scott v. Battle, 85 N.C. 184 (1881), it is held that a feme covert's deed, not executed in the prescribed mode, is wholly inoperative. Clayton v. Rose, 87 N.C. 106 (1882).

A purchase-money deed given by a feme covert, living with her husband, in which the husband does not join and which does not contain any privy examination of the wife, is void because not complying with this section and Art. X, § 6 (see now N.C. Const., Art. X, § 4). Hardy v. Abdallah, 192 N.C. 45, 133 S.E. 195 (1926).

A married woman is not estopped by a deed not executed in the mode prescribed by the statute. Towles v. Fisher, 77 N.C. 437 (1877); Smith v. Ingram, 130 N.C. 100, 40 S.E. 984 (1902), petition to rehear dismissed, 132 N.C. 959, 44 S.E. 643 (1903).

§ 39-7.1. Certain instruments affecting married woman's title not executed by husband validated.

No conveyance, power of attorney, or other instrument affecting the estate, right or title of any married woman in lands, tenements or hereditaments which was executed by such married woman prior to June 8, 1965, shall be invalid for the reason that the instrument was not also executed by the husband of such married woman. (1965, c. 857; 1973, c. 853, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in Faucette v. Griffin, 35 N.C. App. 7, 239 S.E.2d 712 (1978).

§ 39-8. Acknowledgment at different times and places; before different officers; order immaterial.

In all cases of deeds, or other instruments executed by husband and wife and requiring registration, the probate of such instruments as to the husband and due proof or acknowledgment of the wife may be taken before different officers authorized by law to taken probate of deeds, and at different times and places, whether both of said officials reside in this State or only one in this State and the other in another state or country. And in taking the probate of such instruments executed by husband and wife, it is immaterial whether the execution of the instrument was proven as to or acknowledged by the husband before or after due proof as to or acknowledgment of the wife. (1895, c. 136; 1899, c. 235, s. 9; Rev., s. 953; C.S., s. 998; 1945, c. 73, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For repeal of laws requiring private examination of married women, see § 47-14.1.

CASE NOTES

Acknowledgment of Husband Still Required. — The acknowledgment of the husband or proof of his execution of the deed is still required to pass the title or interest of the wife. Graves v. Johnson, 172 N.C. 176, 90 S.E. 113 (1916).

Need Not Be at Same Time or before Same Officer. — It is not necessary that the husband should actually sign at the same time as the wife, or in her presence; nor is it necessary that the proof or acknowledgment of the execution should be at the same time or before the same officer. Lineberger v. Tidwell, 104 N.C. 506, 10 S.E. 758 (1889).

§ 39-9. Absence of wife's acknowledgment does not affect deed as to husband.

When an instrument purports to be signed by a husband and wife the instrument may be ordered registered, if the acknowledgment of the husband is duly taken, but no such instrument shall be the act or deed of the wife unless proven or acknowledged by her according to law. (1889, c. 235, s. 8; 1901, c. 637; Rev., s. 954; C.S., s. 999; 1945, c. 73, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

When Assent of Wife Required. — An unembarrassed owner of land, no matter when the land was acquired, can convey the same, absolutely, or by way of trust or mortgage, free of all homestead rights, without the assent of his wife, subject only to her right of dower (dower was abolished by § 29-4) except in the following cases: (1) Where the land in question has been allotted to him as a homestead, either on his own petition or by an officer, in accordance with law; (2) where no homestead has been allotted, but there are judgements against him which constitute a lien on the land, and upon which execution might issue and make it necessary to have his homestead allotted; (3) where no homestead has been allotted, but he has made a mortgage, reserving an undefined homestead, which mortgage constitutes a lien on the land that could not be foreclosed without allotting a homestead; (4) where the conveyance is fraudulent as to creditors, and no homestead has been allotted in other lands. Hughes v. Hodges, 102 N.C. 236, 102 N.C. 262, 9 S.E. 437, 9 S.E. 437 (1889).

By the eighth section of the tenth article of the Constitution (see N.C. Const., Art. X., § 2(4)), a deed made by the owner of a homestead without the voluntary signature and assent of his wife is void. Wittkowsky v. Gidney, 124 N.C. 437, 32 S.E. 731 (1899).

When Probate Does Not Authorize Registration. — Where the probate of a deed recites the acknowledgment and privy examination of the wife of the grantor only, it is insufficient and does not authorize registration. Hatcher v. Hatcher, 127 N.C. 200, 37 S.E. 207 (1900).

§ 39-10: Repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 375, s. 16.

§ 39-11. Certain conveyances not affected by fraud if acknowledgment or privy examination regular.

No deed conveying lands nor any instrument required or allowed by law to be registered, executed by husband and wife since the eleventh of March, 1889, if the acknowledgment or private examination of the wife is thereto certified as prescribed by law, shall be invalid because its execution or acknowledgment was procured by fraud, duress or undue influence, unless it is shown that the grantee or person to whom the instrument was made participated in the fraud, duress or undue influence, or had notice thereof before the delivery of the instrument. Where such participation or notice is shown, an innocent purchaser for value under the grantee or person to whom the instrument was made shall not be affected by such fraud, duress or undue influence. (1889, c. 389; 1899, c. 235, s. 10; Rev., s. 956; C.S., s. 1001; 1945, c. 73, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

When Privy Examination Was Not Taken. — In an action to invalidate a deed to lands because, in fact, the privy examination of the feme covert, the owner and plaintiff, had not been taken, though it was expressed to have been taken, as required in the certificate of the justice of the peace (now magistrate) the plaintiff may by clear, cogent, and convincing proof show that her examination had not been taken at all, and when, under a proper charge thereon from the judge, the jury has found that such examination was not taken, the verdict will stand, though the grantee may not have been fixed with notice. Davis v. Davis, 146 N.C. 163, 59 S.E. 659 (1907).

Same — Irregularity. — Where the privy examination of a wife was not taken, or was taken in a manner insufficient to fulfill the requirements of the law, though the grantee had no knowledge thereof, the matter is open to judicial investigation. Benedict v. Jones, 129 N.C. 470, 40 S.E. 221 (1901). But see Brite v. Penny, 157 N.C. 110, 72 S.E. 964 (1911).

Presence and Undue Influence of Husband. — The presence and undue influence of the husband at the ceremony of the privy examination would not vitiate a certificate to a deed in all respects regular as against the grantee, unless the grantee had notice of it, and the burden would be upon the plaintiff attacking the validity of the deed for that reason. Brite v. Penny, 157 N.C. 110, 72 S.E. 964 (1911), citing Butner v. Blevins, 125 N.C. 585, 34 S.E. 629 (1899); Davis v. Davis, 146 N.C. 163, 59 S.E. 659 (1907).

Fraud of Probate Officer. — Where a married woman has signed a mortgage or deed of trust to secure borrowed money, she may not have it set aside upon allegation of fraud of a probate officer in taking her separate examination, when she admits that the examination was taken in substantial compliance with the requirement of the statute, and she signed the conveyance, and there is no evidence that the mortgagee participated in the fraud. Whitaker v. Sikes Co., 187 N.C. 613, 122 S.E. 468 (1924).

Even if the justice (now magistrate) practice a fraud upon her, where she does not allege that the party to whom the instrument was made, had any knowledge thereof, or participated in any way in the alleged fraud, she is precluded now from having it adjudged invalid and set aside. Whitaker v. Sikes Co., 187 N.C. 613, 122 S.E. 468 (1924).

Note Procured by Duress. — Upon the principle embodied in this section, a note given by a husband and wife, where the husband procured the wife's execution by duress, is voidable only, and is good in the hands of a bona fide holder. L.A. Randolph Co. v. Lewis, 196 N.C. 51, 144 S.E. 545 (1928).

Guilt of Grantee Must Be Alleged. — A defense by a married woman that her privy examination as to her execution of a deed was procured by fraud and imposition is unavailing unless supported by an allegation that the grantee had notice of or participated in the same. Wachovia Nat'l Bank v. Ireland, 122 N.C. 571, 29 S.E. 835 (1898).

Innocent Purchaser Protected from Guilty Grantee. — This section protects the title of an innocent purchaser for value from a grantee who did have notice of such fraud, duress or undue influence. Butner v. Blevins, 125 N.C. 585, 34 S.E. 629 (1899).

As to married woman's attack upon certificate of acknowledgment and privy examination, see Lee v. Rhodes, 230 N.C. 190, 52 S.E.2d 674 (1949).

§ 39-12. Power of attorney of married person.

Every competent married person of lawful age is authorized to execute, without the joinder of his or her spouse, instruments creating powers of attorney affecting the real and personal property of such married person naming either third parties or, subject to the provisions of G.S. 52-10 or 52-10.1, his or her spouse as attorney-in-fact. When such a married person executes a power of attorney authorized by the preceding sentence naming his or her spouse as attorney in fact the acknowledgment by the spouse of the grantor is not necessary. Such instruments may confer upon the attorney, and the attorney may exercise, any and all powers which lawfully can be conferred upon an attorney-in-fact, including, but not limited to, the authority to join in conveyances of real property for the purpose of waiving or quitclaiming any rights which may be acquired as a surviving spouse under the provisions of G.S. 29-30. (1798, c. 510; R.C., c. 37, s. 11; Code, s. 1257; Rev., s. 957; C.S., s. 1002; 1965, c. 856; 1977, c. 375, s. 7; 1979, c. 528, s. 8.)

Cross References. — As to registration of power of attorney, see § 47-28.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 525, which added the second sentence, provided, in s. 9, that: "A power of attorney executed by a married person naming his or her spouse as attorney in fact during the period between January 1, 1978, and the effective date of this act [May 8, 1979] shall not be invalid because the spouse named as attorney in fact did not acknowledge the power of attorney if otherwise executed in accordance with G.S. 39-12," and provided, in s. 12, that the amendment to this section would not affect pending litigation.

§ 39-13. Spouse need not join in purchase-money mortgage.

The purchaser of real estate who does not pay the whole of the purchase money at the time when he or she takes a deed for title may make a mortgage or deed of trust for securing the payment of such purchase money, or such part thereof as may remain unpaid, which shall be good and effectual against his or her spouse as well as the purchaser, without requiring the spouse to join in the execution of such mortgage or deed of trust. (1868-9, c. 204; Code, s. 1272; Rev., s. 958; 1907, c. 12; C.S., s. 1003; 1965, c. 852.)

CASE NOTES

Dower Right Subject to Defeat. — The dower right (since abolished by § 29-4) of a feme covert may be defeated by a mortgage of the husband alone, when for part of the purchase money. State ex rel. Corporation Comm'n v. Dunn, 174 N.C. 679, 94 S.E. 481 (1917).

Deeds of Trust Substituted for Purchase-Money Deed. — Where two deeds of trust are executed and substituted for the original purchase-money deed of trust, which is canceled, the wife of the grantee acquires no dower right in land, the original debt for the purchase money not having been extinguished. Case v. Fitzsimons, 209 N.C. 783, 184 S.E. 818 (1936).

§ 39-13.1. Validation of certain deeds, etc., executed by married women without private examination.

(a) No deed, contract, conveyance, leasehold or other instrument executed since the seventh day of November, 1944, shall be declared invalid because of the failure to take the private examination of any married woman who was a party to such deed, contract, conveyance, leasehold or other instrument.

(b) Any deed, contract, conveyance, lease or other instrument executed prior to February 7, 1945, which is in all other respects regular except for the failure to take the private examination of a married woman who is a party to such deed, contract, conveyance, lease or other instrument is hereby validated and confirmed to the same extent as if such private examination had been taken, provided that this section shall not apply to any instruments now involved in any pending litigation. (1945, c. 73, s. 211/2; 1969, c. 1008, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

What Deeds Are Cured Under Subsection (a). — The plain language of subsection (a) of this section purports to cure deeds which are void because of failure to conduct a private examination of the wife. Subsection (a) does not purport to cure, and does not in fact cure, deeds which are void because the certifying officer taking the acknowledgment of the wife failed to state in his certificate his findings of fact and conclusions that the conveyance is not "unreasonable or injurious to her," as required under former §§ 47-39 and 52-12. West v. Hays, 82 N.C. App. 574, 346 S.E.2d 690 (1986).

Deed Validated under Subsection (b). — In determining the validity of a 1922 deed from a wife to a husband which was required to be in writing and acknowledged before a certifying officer who was required to make a private examination of the wife touching upon her voluntary execution of the contract, where the only omission was the certificate that the deed was not unreasonable or injurious to her and the deed was in all other respects regular, and there was no contention that there was any defect in the premises, the granting clause, the description, the habendum, or the warranties or that there was anything about the deed which was not regular except the lack of the certificate of the certifying officer as to injury or unreasonableness, this was certainly one of the situations to which this section was intended to apply. Otherwise, the curative statute would be stripped of all meaning. The deed was validated by subsection (b) of this section. Johnson v. Burrow, 42 N.C. App. 273, 256 S.E.2d 811 (1979).

This section would not validate a deed which failed to comply with former § 52-12; even if this section would operate to validate the deed for failure of the certifying officer to conduct a private examination, the deed would still be invalid because the certifying officer failed to find whether or not the deed was unreasonable or injurious to the wife. Dunn v. Pate, 98 N.C. App. 351, 390 S.E.2d 712, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 327 N.C. 427, 395 S.E.2d 676 (1990).

A contract between a husband and wife to make a joint will was void as to the wife because it was not executed by her in accordance with former § 52-6, and its invalidity was not affected by the curative statutes, § 52-8 and this section, where both curative statutes were enacted after the rights of the parties under the contract vested upon the death of the husband, and the contract was not "in all other respects regular" except for the failure to privately examine the wife as required by the curative statutes. Mansour v. Rabil, 277 N.C. 364, 177 S.E.2d 849 (1970).

Stated in Faucette v. Griffin, 35 N.C. App. 7, 239 S.E.2d 712 (1978).

§ 39-13.3. Conveyances between husband and wife.

(a) A conveyance from a husband or wife to the other spouse of real property or any interest therein owned by the grantor alone vests such property or interest in the grantee.

(b) A conveyance of real property, or any interest therein, by a husband or a wife to such husband and wife vests the same in the husband and wife as tenants by the entirety unless a contrary intention is expressed in the conveyance.

(d) The joinder of the spouse of the grantor in any conveyance made by a husband or a wife pursuant to the foregoing provisions of this section is not necessary.

(e) Any conveyance authorized by this section is subject to the provisions of G.S. 52-10 or 52-10.1, except that acknowledgment by the spouse of the grantor is not necessary. (1957, c. 598, s. 1; 1965, c. 878, s. 3; 1977, c. 375, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Section 39-13.5 Creates Exception to Rule in Subsection (b) of This Section. — Section 39-13.5 requires that in order to create a tenancy by the entirety by division deed, the tenant in common must clearly state his intention in the granting clause. Where this was not done, the intention can be supplied by § 39-13.3(b). Section 39-13.5 creates an exception to the rule of § 39-13.3(b) that unless a contrary intent is shown, a deed to a husband and wife vests an estate in them as tenants by the entirety. Under § 39-13.5, it is necessary to say so in the granting clause in order to create a tenancy by the entirety by a division deed. Brown v. Brown, 59 N.C. App. 719, 297 S.E.2d 619 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 388 (1983).

Effect of Separation Agreement on Tenancy by Entirety. — Subsection (c) of this section was not applicable in a divorce action on the issue of whether a separation agreement contractually altered the character of the ownership of a tenancy by the entirety. Branstetter v. Branstetter, 36 N.C. App. 532, 245 S.E.2d 87 (1978).

Wife May Convey as Freely as Husband. — This section and former § 52-6 express a clear legislative intent that so long as the provisions of former § 52-6 are complied with, a wife may convey her separate property to her husband, or to her husband and herself, as freely and with the same consequences as the husband may convey his property to his wife. Skinner v. Skinner, 28 N.C. App. 412, 222 S.E.2d 258, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976).

Property Not Removed from Equitable Distribution Act by Dissolution of Tenancy by Entirety. — Though conveyances from wife to husband dissolved the tenancy by the entirety in the parcels of land and vested title thereto solely in husband, as § 39-13.3(c) provides, he nevertheless acquired title to the property thereunder, not by gift, but during the course of the marriage and before the parties separated, and property so acquired, so the General Assembly has declared, is ipso facto marital property. Thus, contrary to husband's contention, dissolving the tenancy by the entirety did not remove the property involved from the ambit of the Equitable Distribution Act, and the trial judge did not err in finding and concluding otherwise. Beroth v. Beroth, 87 N.C. App. 93, 359 S.E.2d 512, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 296, 362 S.E.2d 778 (1987).

§ 39-13.4. Conveyances by husband or wife under deed of separation.

Any conveyance of real property, or any interest therein, by the husband or wife who have previously executed a valid and lawful deed of separation which authorizes said husband or wife to convey real property or any interest therein without the consent and joinder of the other and which deed of separation or a memorandum of the deed of separation setting forth such authorization is recorded in the county where the land lies, shall be valid to pass such title as the conveying spouse may have to his or her grantee and shall pass such title free and clear of all rights in such property and free and clear of such interest in property that the other spouse might acquire solely as a result of the marriage, including any rights arising under G.S. 29-30, unless an instrument in writing canceling the deed of separation or memorandum thereof and properly executed and acknowledged by said husband and wife is recorded in the office of said register of deeds. The instrument which is registered under this section to authorize the conveyance of an interest in real property or the cancellation of the deed of separation or memorandum thereof shall comply with the provisions of G.S. 52-10 or 52-10.1.

All conveyances of any interest in real property by a spouse who had previously executed a valid and lawful deed of separation, or separation agreement, or property settlement, which authorized the parties thereto to convey real property or any interest therein without the consent and joinder of the other, when said deed of separation, separation agreement, or property settlement, or a memorandum of the deed of separation, separation agreement, property settlement, setting forth such authorization, had been previously recorded in the county where the property is located, and when such conveyances were executed before October 1, 1981, shall be valid to pass such title as the conveying spouse may have to his or her grantee, and shall pass such to him free and clear of rights in such property and free and clear of such interest in such property that the other spouse might acquire solely as a result of the marriage, including any rights arising under G.S. 29-30, unless an instrument in writing canceling the deed of separation, separation agreement, or property settlement, or memorandum thereof, properly executed and acknowledged by said husband and wife, is recorded in the office of said register of deeds. The instrument which is registered under this section to authorize the conveyance of an interest in real property or the cancellation of the deed of separation, separation agreement, property settlement, or memorandum thereof shall comply with G.S. 52-10 or 52-10.1. (1959, c. 512; 1973, c. 133; 1977, c. 375, s. 10; 1981, c. 599, ss. 10, 11.)

CASE NOTES

"Free Trader". — Characterization of a plaintiff as a "free trader" is, in effect, no more than a shorthand description of a woman's freedom to convey realty under this section. The term is derived from practice under old statutes before 1965, and is currently devoid of legal significance. Britt v. Smith, 6 N.C. App. 117, 169 S.E.2d 482 (1969).

§ 39-13.5. Creation of tenancy by entirety in partition of real property.

When either a husband or a wife owns an undivided interest in real property as a tenant in common with some person or persons other than his or her spouse and there occurs an actual partition of the property, a tenancy by the entirety may be created in the husband or wife who owned the undivided interest and his or her spouse in the manner hereinafter provided:

(1) In a division by cross-deed or deeds, between or among the tenants in common provided that the intent of the tenant in common to create a tenancy by the entirety with his or her spouse in this exchange of deeds must be clearly stated in the granting clause of the deed or deeds to such tenant and his or her spouse, and further provided that the deed or deeds to such tenant in common and his or her spouse is signed by such tenant in common and is acknowledged before a certifying officer in accordance with G.S. 52-10;

(2) In a judicial proceeding for partition. In such proceeding, both spouses have the right to become parties to the proceeding and to have their pleadings state that the intent of the tenant in common is to create a tenancy by the entirety with his or her spouse. The order of partition shall provide that the real property assigned to such tenant and his or her spouse shall be owned by them as tenants by the entirety. (1969, c. 748, s. 1; 1977, c. 375, s. 11.)

CASE NOTES

This Section Creates Exception to Rule in § 39-13.3(b). — This section requires that in order to create a tenancy by the entirety by division deed, the tenant in common must clearly state his intention in the granting clause. Where this was not done, the intention can be supplied by § 39-13.3(b). This section creates an exception to the rule of § 39-13.3(b) that unless a contrary intent is shown, a deed to a husband and wife vests an estate in them as tenants by the entirety. § 39-13.6. Control of real property held in tenancy by the entirety.

(a) A husband and wife shall have an equal right to the control, use, possession, rents, income, and profits of real property held by them in tenancy by the entirety. Neither spouse may bargain, sell, lease, mortgage, transfer, convey or in any manner encumber any property so held without the written joinder of the other spouse. This section shall not be construed to require the spouse's joinder where a different provision is made under G.S. 39-13, G.S. 39-13.3, G.S. 39-13.4, or G.S. 52-10.

(b) A conveyance of real property, or any interest therein, to a husband and wife vests title in them as tenants by the entirety when the conveyance is to:

(1) A named man "and wife," or

(2) A named woman "and husband," or

(3) Two named persons, whether or not identified in the conveyance as husband and wife, if at the time of conveyance they are legally married; unless a contrary intention is expressed in the conveyance.

(c) For income tax purposes, each spouse is considered to have received one-half (1/2) the income or loss from property owned by the couple as tenants by the entirety. (1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1245, s. 1; 1983, c. 449, ss. 1, 2.)

CASE NOTES

This section is reflective of changed circumstances in economic relationship and responsibilities among married persons and expresses a public policy of this State that their rights in property should be equalized. Perry v. Perry, 80 N.C. App. 169, 341 S.E.2d 53 (1986), appeal dismissed, 320 N.C. 170, 357 S.E.2d 925 (1987).

Rights of Judgment Creditor Upon Dissolution of Marriage or Death. — A judgment creditor with a claim against one spouse may not have a lien against the entirety property, but the judgment creditor does have rights with respect to the property upon dissolution of the marriage or upon the death of the judgment debtor's spouse. In re Ulmer, 211 Bankr. 523 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1997).

This section expressly changes the common-law incidents of tenancy by the entirety for all real property acquired on and after January 1, 1983. Boyce v. Boyce, 60 N.C. App. 685, 299 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 308 N.C. 190, 302 S.E.2d 242 (1983).

Applicability to tenancies by the entireties which existed prior to January 1, 1983. — Provisions of subsection (a) of this section should generally be construed to apply to tenancies by the entirety which preexisted the effective date of the statute (January 1, 1983) and such application is not, in and of itself, unconstitutional. Perry v. Perry, 80 N.C. App. 169, 341 S.E.2d 53 (1986), appeal dismissed, 320 N.C. 170, 357 S.E.2d 925 (1987).

The General Assembly has clearly manifested its intention that this section, including the "equal right to control" provision of subsection (a), apply to estates by the entirety created before January 1, 1983. Perry v. Perry, 80 N.C. App. 169, 341 S.E.2d 53 (1986), appeal dismissed, 320 N.C. 170, 357 S.E.2d 925 (1987).

A tenant in common has a right to demand an accounting from a co-tenant; furthermore, plaintiff's action for an accounting was still ripe because the statute of limitations did not begin running until her demand for an accounting was refused. Beam v. Beam, 92 N.C. App. 509, 374 S.E.2d 636 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 325 N.C. 428, 383 S.E.2d 656 (1989).

The claim of a vested property right may not rest upon state enforcement of common law which is unconstitutionally discriminatory. Thus, to the extent that defendant husband's claims to the exclusive right of control and income of pre-1983 estates by the entirety were based solely upon the common-law incidents of the tenancy, they would fail, as the right recognized by the common law could not be said to be a "vested property right." Perry v. Perry, 80 N.C. App. 169, 341 S.E.2d 53 (1986), appeal dismissed, 320 N.C. 170, 357 S.E.2d 925 (1987).

Burden of Proving Vested Rights. — There may be circumstances under which a husband's rights to income and control of pre-1983 tenancy by the entirety property, to the exclusion of his wife, may be classified as "vested rights" for reasons other than the common-law incidents of that estate. In such cases, the burden will be upon the husband to demonstrate facts showing why his rights are "vested rights" such that application of the "equal control" provisions of subsection (a) of this section to the estate would violate due process. Perry v. Perry, 80 N.C. App. 169, 341 S.E.2d 53 (1986), appeal dismissed, 320 N.C. 170, 357 S.E.2d 925 (1987).

Once the parties were divorced, they no longer held the property as tenants by the entirety but as tenants in common. Smith v. Smith, 249 N.C. 669, 107 S.E.2d 530 (1959); Beam v. Beam, 92 N.C. App. 509, 374 S.E.2d 636 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 325 N.C. 428, 383 S.E.2d 656 (1989).

Attribution of Income for Child Support Purposes. — Although under the Child Support Guidelines income from rental property is included in the calculation of a parent's gross income, because father and his wife owned property in tenancy by the entirety, he was considered to have received only one-half of the income, or $487.50 per month; it was therefore error for the trial court to attribute the full amount of rental income from the property to father. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 107 N.C. App. 695, 421 S.E.2d 795 (1992).

It is believed that the Official Comments will prove of value to the practitioner in understanding and applying the text of this Chapter.

NORTH CAROLINA INTRODUCTORY COMMENT

Prior to enactment of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (the "UFTA"), the statutory law of fraudulent conveyances in North Carolina was governed principally by former N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-15, which in turn was a substantial reenactment of the Statute of 13 Elizabeth (1570). See Bank of New Hanover v. Adrian, 116 N.C. 537, 21 S.E. 792 (1895). As a reenactment of Elizabethan law, the statute was written in archaic language and was difficult to interpret.

In 1914 the North Carolina Supreme Court clarified fraudulent conveyance law in Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 815 S.E. 162 (1914), by articulating five distinct rules governing recovery under former N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-15. Most published decisions after that date used Aman v. Walker as their point of reference in deciding fraudulent conveyance issues under North Carolina law. Prior to enactment of the UFTA, however, fraudulent conveyance law in North Carolina was developed by a series of ad hoc appellate decisions that are not altogether uniform or consistent.

The UFTA was drafted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (the "NCCUSL") and approved by that organization in 1984. It subsequently was approved by the American Bar Association in 1985. It is the modern successor to the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, which was promulgated by the NCCUSL in 1918. Among other changes from the old act, the UFTA was broadened to make clear that it reaches transfers of personal as well as real property. The UFTA further is intended to function more congruently with the Uniform Commercial Code (codified as Chapter 25 of the North Carolina General Statutes) and the United States Bankruptcy Code (Title 11, U.S. Code).

While there are a number of differences between the UFTA and the old Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, there are a number of close parallels, and interpretations of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act can be useful in understanding the intent of the various provisions of the UFTA. A 1972 note by E. Cader Howard that appeared in the North Carolina Law Review comparing the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act with North Carolina law therefore is of special relevance in considering the changes effected by enactment of the UFTA in North Carolina. Note, "The Law of Fraudulent Conveyances in North Carolina: An Analysis and Comparison With the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyances Act," 50 N.C. L. Rev. 872 (1972).

For purposes of the North Carolina comments that follow, the rules articulated by Aman v. Walker are identified as the respective "principles"; and the note by E. Cader Howard is cited as "Howard," with appropriate page references to the North Carolina Law Review Scope of Repeal. S.L. 1997-291 repealed former fraudulent conveyance law in Article 3 of Chapter 39 of the General Statutes.

The insurance law contains its own provisions concerning fraudulent transfers by insurance companies within one year prior to insolvency. See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-30-140. This statute, based on the comparable provision in bankruptcy law (11 U.S.C. § 548), complements general fraudulent conveyance law and concerns itself solely with transfers made within one year prior to the filing of a petition for liquidation or rehabilitation of an insurance company. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-30-140 is not affected by the enactment of the UFTA.

Other references to fraudulent conveyances or transfers are found in Rule 18(b) of the Rules of Civil Procedure; in N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 25-2-402(b) and 25-2A-308(2) (sales and leases under the UCC); and in N.C. Gen. Stat. § 105-242 (dealing with the time within which judgments for taxes are enforceable). None of these statutes is affected by the enactment of the UFTA.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) The definition of "affiliate" is derived from § 101(2) of the Bankruptcy Code.

(2) The definition of "asset" is substantially to the same effect as the definition of "assets" in § 1 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. The definition in this Act, unlike that in the earlier Act, does not, however require a determination that the property is liable for the debts of the debtor. Thus, an unliquidated claim for damages resulting from personal injury or a contingent claim of a surety for reimbursement, contribution, or subrogation may be counted as an asset for the purpose of determining whether the holder of the claim is solvent as a debtor under § 2 of this Act, although applicable law may not allow such an asset to be levied on and sold by a creditor. Cf. Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co. v. Goldman (In re Ollag Construction Equipment Corp.), 578 F.2d 904, 907-09 (2d Cir. 1978).

Subparagraphs (i), (ii), and (iii) provide clarification by excluding from the term not only generally exempt property but also an interest in a tenancy by the entirety in many states and an interest that is generally beyond reach by unsecured creditors because subject to a valid lien. This Act, like its predecessor and the Statute of 13 Elizabeth, declares rights and provides remedies for unsecured creditors against transfers that impede them in the collection of their claims. The laws protecting valid liens against impairment by levying creditors, exemption statutes, and the rules restricting levyability of interest in entireties property are limitations on the rights and remedies of unsecured creditors, and it is therefore appropriate to exclude property interests that are beyond the reach of unsecured creditors from the definition of "asset" for the purposes of this Act.

A creditor of a joint tenant or tenant in common may ordinarily collect a judgment by process against the tenant's interest, and in some states a creditor of a tenant by the entirety may likewise collect a judgment by process against the tenant's interest. See 2 American Law of Property 10, 22, 28-32 (1952); Craig, An Analysis of Estates by the Entirety in Bankruptcy, 48 Am.Bankr.L.J. 255, 258-59 (1974). The levyable interest of such a tenant is included as an asset under this Act.

The definition of "assets" in the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act excluded property that is exempt from liability for debts. The definition did not, however, exclude all property that cannot be reached by a creditor through judicial proceedings to collect a debt. Thus, it included the interest of a tenant by the entirety although in nearly half the states such an interest cannot be subjected to liability for a debt unless it is an obligation owed jointly by the debtor with his or her cotenant by the entirety. See 2 American Law of Property 29 (1952); Craig, An Analysis of Estates by the Entirety in Bankruptcy, 48 Am.Bankr.L.J. 255, 258 (1974). The definition in this Act requires exclusion of interests in property held by tenants by the entirety that are not subject to collection process by a creditor without a right to proceed against both tenants by the entirety as joint debtors.

The reference to "generally exempt" property in § 1(2)(ii) recognizes that all exemptions are subject to exceptions. Creditors having special rights against generally exempt property typically include claimants for alimony, taxes, wages, the purchase price of the property, and labor or materials that improve the property. See Uniform Exemptions Act § 10 and the accompanying Comment. The fact that a particular creditor may reach generally exempt property by resorting to judicial process does not warrant its inclusion as an asset in determining whether the debtor is insolvent.

Since this Act is not an exclusive law on the subject of voidable transfers and obligations (see Comment (8) to § 4 infra), it does not preclude the holder of a claim that may be collected by process against property generally exempt as to other creditors from obtaining relief from a transfer of such property that hinders, delays, or defrauds the holder of such a claim. Likewise the holder of an unsecured claim enforceable against tenants by the entirety is not precluded by the Act from pursuing a remedy against a transfer of property held by the entirety that hinders, delays, or defrauds the holder of such a claim.

Nonbankruptcy law is the law of a state or federal law that is not part of the Bankruptcy Code, Title 11 of the United States Code. The definition of an "asset" thus does not include property that would be subject to administration for the benefit of creditors under the Bankruptcy Code unless it is subject under other applicable law, state or federal, to process for the collection of a creditor's claim against a single debtor.

(3) The definition of "claim" is derived from § 101(4) of the Bankruptcy Code. Since the purpose of this Act is primarily to protect unsecured creditors against transfers and obligations injurious to their rights, the words "claim" and "debt" as used in the Act generally have reference to an unsecured claim and debt. As the context may indicate, however, usage of the terms is not so restricted. See, e.g.§§ 1(1)(i)(B) and 1(8).

(4) The definition of "creditor" in combination with the definition of "claim" has substantially the same effect as the definition of "creditor" under § 1 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. As under that Act, the holder of an unliquidated tort claim or a contingent claim may be a creditor protected by this Act.

(5) The definition of "debt" is derived from § 101(11) of the Bankruptcy Code.

(6) The definition of "debtor" is new.

(7) The definition of "insider" is derived from § 101(28) of the Bankruptcy Code. The definition has been restricted in clauses (i)(C), (ii)(E), and (iii)(D) to make clear that a partner is not an insider of an individual, corporation, or partnership if any of these latter three persons is only a limited partner. The definition of "insider" in the Bankruptcy Code does not purport to make a limited partner an insider of the partners or of the partnership with which the limited partner is associated, but it is susceptible of a contrary interpretation and one which would extend unduly the scope of the defined relationship when the limited partner is not a person in control of the partnership. The definition of "insider" in this Act also differs from the definition in the Bankruptcy Code in omitting the reference in 11 U.S.C. § 101(28)(D) to an elected official or relative of such an official as an insider of a municipality. As in the Bankruptcy Code (see 11 U.S.C. § 102(3)), the word "includes" is not limiting, however. Thus, a court may find a person living with an individual for an extended time in the same household or as a permanent companion to have the kind of close relationship intended to be covered by the term "insider." Likewise, a trust may be found to be an insider of a beneficiary.

(8) The definition of "lien" is derived from paragraphs (30), (31), (43), and (45) of § 101 of the Bankruptcy Code, which define "judicial lien," "lien," "security interest," and "statutory lien" respectively.

(9) The definition of "person" is adapted from paragraphs (28) and (30) of § 1-201 of the Uniform Commercial Code, defining "organization" and "person" respectively.

(10) The definition of "property" is derived from § 1-201(33) of the Uniform Probate Code. Property includes both real and personal property, whether tangible or intangible, and any interest in property, whether legal or equitable.

(11) The definition of "relative" is derived from § 101(37) of the Bankruptcy Code but is explicit in its references to the spouse of a debtor in view of uncertainty as to whether the common law determines degrees of relationship by affinity.

(12) The definition of "transfer" is derived principally from § 101(48) of the Bankruptcy Code.

(13) The definition of "conveyance" in § 1 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act was similarly comprehensive, and the references in this Act to "payment of money, release, lease, and the creation of a lien or incumbrance" are derived from the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. While the definition in the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act did not explicitly refer to an involuntary transfer, the decisions under that Act were generally consistent with an interpretation that covered such a transfer. See, e.g., Hearn 45 St. Corp. v. Jano, 283 N.Y. 139, 27 N.E.2d 814, 128 A.L.R. 1285 (1940) (execution and foreclosure sales); Lefkowitz v. Finkelstein Trading Corp., 14 F.Supp. 898, 899 (S.D.N.Y. 1936) (execution sale); Langan v. First Trust & Deposit Co., 277 App.Div. 1090, 101 N.Y.S.2d 36 (4th Dept. 1950), aff'd, 302 N.Y. 932, 100 N.E.2d 189 (1951) (mortgage foreclosure); Catabene v. Wallner, 16 N.J.Super. 597, 602, 85 A.2d 300, 302 (1951) (mortgage foreclosure). The definition of "valid lien" is new. A valid lien includes an equitable lien that may not be defeated by a judicial lien creditor. See, e.g., Pearlman v. Reliance Insurance Co., 371 U.S. 132, 136 (1962) (upholding a surety's equitable lien in respect to a fund owing a bankrupt contractor).

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

The definitions of "affiliate," "insider" and "relative" in subdivisions (1), (7) and (11) relate to liability for transfers to insiders described in N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.5(b). This subsection had no counterpart under prior North Carolina law and, accordingly, these definitions have no prior North Carolina equivalent insofar as fraudulent conveyance law is concerned.

The definition of "asset" in subdivision (2) excludes property to the extent it is encumbered by a lien, is generally exempt from the claims of creditors or is held as entireties property. The intent of this definition is that only those transfers that adversely affect unsecured creditors can occasion liability. This is consistent with prior North Carolina law, which disregarded transfers of assets that were entireties property, L & M Gas Co. v. Leggett, 273 N.C. 547, 553, 161 S.E.2d 23, 27-28 (1968), or were subject to a resulting trust, Kelly Springfield Tire Co. v. Lester, 190 N.C. 411, 415, 130 S.E. 45, 47 (1925).

The definition of "claim" in subdivision (3) is broad and includes potential liability on contingent claims. This seems consistent with prior North Carolina law: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 1A-1, Rule 18(b), allows a claim for fraudulent conveyance to be joined with a claim to establish the indebtedness that provides the foundation for the fraudulent conveyance claim. Subdivisions (4), (5) and (6) (providing definitions of "creditor," "debt" and "debtor") are based on the definition of "claim."

The definition of "transfer" in subdivision (12) is broad; this breadth appears to be consistent with prior North Carolina law. See Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 876-77 (1972).

The remaining definitions (of "lien," "valid lien," "person" and "property" in subdivisions (8), (13), (9) and (10)) appear to be straightforward. Prior North Carolina fraudulent conveyance law does not appear to have concerned itself with defining or explaining these terms.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-291, s. 4, made this Article effective October 1, 1997, and applicable to all transfers subject to that act made on or after that date.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 39-15—39-23.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

A prior similar provision is a substantial reenactment of the statute 13 Eliz., c. 5, s. 2. Bank of New Hanover v. Adrian, 116 N.C. 537, 21 S.E. 792 (1895).

Prior to enactment of a prior similar provision it was necessary to invoke the aid of a court of equity to have a deed declared void for fraud, and where, under a statutory provision, deeds were pronounced void as against creditors in order to secure a formal declaration of their invalidity, the moving party must have asked for relief that would have been formerly administered solely in a court of equity. Farthing v. Carrington, 116 N.C. 315, 22 S.E. 9 (1895).

At an early period in the judicial history of this State, it was held that courts of law might hear evidence and pass even incidentally upon the question whether a deed was fraudulent under 13 Eliz. Logan v. Simmons, 18 N.C. 13 (1834); Lee v. Flannagan, 29 N.C. 471 (1847); Hardy & Bro. v. Skinner, 31 N.C. 191 (1848); Helms v. Green, 105 N.C. 251, 11 S.E. 470 (1890).

The statute of 13 Eliz., is declaratory of the common law so far as regards existing creditors; in this sense the statute is sometimes spoken of as being in affirmance of the common law. The remedy given to subsequent creditors rests entirely upon the enactment of the statute. Long v. Wright, 48 N.C. 290 (1856).

The case of Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 81 S.E. 162 (1914), is the cornerstone of the North Carolina fraudulent conveyance law. Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Burton, 599 F. Supp. 1313 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

Section Applies to State. — The statute dealing with fraudulent conveyances applies to the State as well as to individuals, and the State cannot rely on its prerogative. Hoke v. Henderson, 14 N.C. 12 (1831).

It applies to voluntary conveyances of personalty, as well as realty, as against creditors. Garrison v. Brice, 48 N.C. 85 (1855).

It Prevents Passing of Any Estate. — A prior similar provision made fraudulent conveyances absolutely void, and in that way prevented the passing of any estate whatever, as against creditors of the grantor. Flynn v. Williams, 29 N.C. 32 (1846).

It Applies Only to Conveyances Made by Debtor. — The section operating, as it does, to wholly avoid the conveyances coming within its purview, it can be applied only to conveyances made by the debtor himself. Gowing v. Rich, 23 N.C. 553 (1841); United States v. Haddock, 144 F. Supp. 720 (E.D.N.C. 1956); Havee v. Belk, 775 F.2d 1209 (4th Cir. 1985).

Mortgagor Considered Owner. — In expounding the statute against fraudulent conveyances, the mortgagor is considered the owner of the estate, and the mortgagee but an encumbrancer. Wall v. White, 14 N.C. 105 (1831).

For discussion of what constituted valuable consideration under prior similar provisions, see North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Evans, 296 N.C. 374, 250 S.E.2d 231 (1979); Smith-Douglass v. Kornegay, 70 N.C. App. 264, 318 S.E.2d 895 (1984).

Deed of Gift Insufficient Consideration. — Where plaintiffs received their property by deed of gift, the transfer was for insufficient consideration. Thus, the government need only show that the taxpayers were insolvent in order to void the conveyance, and thereby maintain a lien upon plaintiffs' property. Ross v. United States, 861 F. Supp. 406 (E.D.N.C. 1994).

Notice of Claim Sufficient. — Where plaintiff alleged and presented evidence of a claim under former § 39-17 instead of former § 39-15, under the notice pleading requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 8(a), his complaint adequately stated a claim under former § 39-15 because it gave sufficient notice of the claim to enable the defendants to answer and prepare for trial; the complaint was sufficient to put defendants on notice, and the plaintiff was not held to the more stringent requirements found under § 39-17. Lewis v. Blackman, 116 N.C. App. 414, 448 S.E.2d 133 (1994).

Question for Jury. — Whether a conveyance, whatever its form, was in substance and fact a conveyance by the debtor-bankrupt, or by another such as a pledgee, is a jury question. Havee v. Belk, 775 F.2d 1209 (4th Cir. 1985).

Summary judgment is generally inappropriate in an action for fraud because the existence of fraud necessarily involves a question concerning the existence of fraudulent intent, and the intent of a party is a state of mind generally within the exclusive knowledge of the party and that state of mind must, by necessity, be proved by circumstantial evidence. Lewis v. Blackman, 116 N.C. App. 414, 448 S.E.2d 133 (1994).

The statute 27 Elizabeth, from which former § 39-16 is derived, enacts that conveyances of land, made with intent to defraud purchasers, shall only, as against purchasers for good consideration, be void. Under the act it was, of course, held that notice of the fraudulent deed did not impeach the title of the purchaser, because the bad faith of the deed vitiated it, and, with notice of the deed, the purchaser had also notice of the fraud. The legislature thought proper in 1840 to alter this, and to declare that no person shall be deemed a purchaser unless he purchased the land for the full value thereof, without notice, at the time of his purchase, of the conveyance by him alleged to be fraudulent. Hiatt v. Wade, 30 N.C. 340 (1848). See also dissenting opinion in Bank of New Hanover v. Adrian, 116 N.C. 537, 21 S.E. 792 (1895).

Section Construed with Registration Act. — A prior similar provision and the Registration Act (§§ 47-17 to 47-20) were both intended to prevent fraud, and must be construed together with that view. Austin v. Staten, 126 N.C. 783, 36 S.E. 338 (1900).

First Bona Fide Purchaser from Vendor or Vendee Protected. — The statute of 27 Elizabeth being intended for the benefit of purchasers, the first bona fide purchaser, whether from the fraudulent vendor or vendee, is within its operation. Hoke v. Henderson, 14 N.C. 12 (1831).

Equity Will Not Deprive of Legal Advantage. — No one has claims to the consideration of a court of equity superior to those of a purchaser without notice; and there is no case in which the court has interfered to deprive such a purchaser of a legal advantage. Crump v. Black, 41 N.C. 321 (1849).

"Purchaser" Defined. — The term "purchaser" was not used in a prior similar provision in its technical sense for one who comes to an estate by his own act. It was to be received in its popular meaning as denoting one who buys for money and buys fairly and of course at a fair price. Fullenwider v. Roberts, 20 N.C. 420 (1839).

Good faith and a fair price are requisite to constitute a good purchase. Fullenwider v. Roberts, 20 N.C. 420 (1839).

What Is Full Value. — The second purchaser must now, as before the Act of 1885, still be a bona fide purchaser, and for full value. We do not mean to say that he should have paid every dollar the land was worth, but he should have paid a reasonably fair price, such as would indicate fair dealing and not be suggestive of fraud. Austin v. Staten, 126 N.C. 783, 36 S.E. 338 (1900).

Purchase for "a Petty Sum". — When the consideration is pecuniary, a "petty" sum as compared to the value of the land would not help a second over the head of a first conveyance. Fullenwider v. Roberts, 20 N.C. 420 (1839).

One-Half or Two-Thirds Value. — Under a prior similar provision a man could not be held to be a purchaser for a valuable consideration who gives for the land not more than one half or two thirds of the value. Harris v. DeGraffenreid, 33 N.C. 89 (1850).

A mortgage to secure a present loan constitutes the mortgagee a purchaser for value within the meaning of the section. Fowle v. McLean, 168 N.C. 537, 84 S.E. 852 (1915).

Mortgage to Secure Past Indebtedness. — And the same principle obtains in reference to mortgages and deeds of trust to secure a past indebtedness, except as to an estate or interest existent in the property conveyed. Potts v. Blackwell, 57 N.C. 58 (1858); Brem v. Lockhart, 93 N.C. 191 (1885); Fowle v. McLean, 168 N.C. 537, 84 S.E. 852 (1915).

A deed in trust to sell property and pay certain creditors is supported by a valuable consideration, and is valid against a prior deed of gift as being a subsequent sale to a purchaser for a valuable consideration under this section. Ward v. Wooten, 75 N.C. 413 (1876).

Assignee of Fraudulent Vendee. — An assignee for the benefit of creditors of a fraudulent vendee, incurring no new liability on the faith of his title, is not protected. Wallace v. Cohen, 111 N.C. 103, 15 S.E. 892 (1892).

Assignee of a fraudulent vendee takes title subject to any equity, or other right, that attaches to the property in the hands of the debtor. Carpenter v. Duke, 144 N.C. 291, 56 S.E. 938 (1907).

Possession by Third Person Legal Notice. — Where one purchases land which he knows to be in the possession of a person other than the vendor, he is affected with legal notice and must inquire into the title of the possessor. Bost v. Setzer, 87 N.C. 187 (1882).

It is clear that the possession here spoken of is not a possession continued by the fraudulent donor, but is that of the donee himself or his tenant, taken under the conveyance, and that such possession of the donee or for him amounts to notice in respect only to those tracts or parcels to which that possession extends, and cannot affect a person who buys a parcel which is not, at the time of his purchase, in the possession of the fraudulent donee. Wade v. Hiatt, 32 N.C. 302 (1849).

Burden of Proof. — Where both parties claim by deed from a common grantor, the deed of the plaintiff being the younger, but registered first, the plaintiff makes out a prima facie case, and the burden of proof is shifted upon the defendant to attack the bona fides of the plaintiff's deed, and to defeat it, if he can, by establishing fraud. Austin v. Staten, 126 N.C. 783, 36 S.E. 338 (1900).

Section Applies Only to Gifts Inter Vivos. — A prior similar provision makes a qualification in the maxim "A man must to just before he is generous" in cases where the donor, at the time of the gift retained property, fully sufficient and available for the satisfaction of all of his then creditors. But this modification is confined to gifts inter vivos. In respect to legacies, or gifts by will, there has been no modification of the maxim; on the contrary, the legislation upon the subject tends to enforce a strict adherence to it, and the assent of an executor to a legacy, before he has paid all of the debts of the testator, is void as to creditors. Pullen v. Hutchins, 67 N.C. 428 (1872).

When Conveyance May Be Set Aside as Fraudulent. — Before a conveyance may be set aside as fraudulent, the finder of fact must find that the conveyance was voluntary, that the conveyance was made without fair and reasonable consideration and that the conveyance was either made with the intent to defraud creditors or made so that at the time of the conveyance the transferor did not retain sufficient property to satisfy his then existing debts. Valdese Gen. Hosp. v. Burns, 79 N.C. App. 163, 339 S.E.2d 23 (1986).

Voluntariness of Conveyance. — A conveyance is voluntary when it is not for value, i.e., when the purchaser does not pay a reasonably fair price such as would indicate unfair dealing and be suggestive of fraud. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

When Voluntary Deed Void Per Se. — A voluntary deed of land or other property made to a son by a father unable to pay his debts is void per se as to creditors; indeed, such a deed to any person is void, and such a deed appearing, the court declares it void in law. McCanless v. Flinchum, 89 N.C. 373 (1883).

It is a well-settled rule of law in this State that no voluntary deed can be upheld as against creditors, when the bargainor is unable to pay his debts at the time of the execution of the deed. McCanless v. Flinchum, 89 N.C. 373 (1883).

Protection for All Creditors. — One need not be a judgment creditor to be entitled to the protection of this section. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Rights of Prior and Subsequent Creditors. — The controlling principle is stated in Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 81 S.E. 162 (1914), as follows: "If the conveyance is voluntary, and the grantor did not retain property fully sufficient and available to pay his debts then existing, it is invalid as to creditors; but it cannot be impeached by subsequent creditors without proof of the existence of a debt at the time of its execution, which is unpaid, and when this is established and the conveyance avoided, subsequent creditors are let in and the property is subjected to the payment of creditors generally." Sutton v. Wells, 177 N.C. 524, 99 S.E. 365 (1919).

Creditor's Action Prior to Transfer of Assets. — A creditor beginning an action prior to the transfer of assets by defendant is entitled to attack the transfer as fraudulent as to him, although he does not obtain judgment against the defendant until after the transfer of the assets has been accomplished. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Where Grantor Retains Sufficient Property to Pay Debts. — A conveyance of lands to husband and wife by entireties which was paid for by the husband will not be considered as fraudulent with respect to his creditors, when he retained property amply sufficient to pay them at the time of the deed. Finch v. Cecil, 170 N.C. 114, 86 S.E. 991 (1915).

Where a husband makes a gift of land to his wife, without any valuable consideration, but it is admitted he had no fraudulent intent, and he retains property sufficient to pay his debts in existence at the time of the gift, it is not fraudulent as to creditors. Taylor v. Eatman, 92 N.C. 601 (1885).

Sufficiency of Property Retained. — In an action to set aside a deed, evidence that the grantor retained $11,625 to pay debts to the amount of $11,500 was not sufficient to show that the grantor retained property sufficient to pay his debts, in view of the fact the $1,000 worth of the property was of a perishable nature, and the debtor was entitled to $1,000 worth of real estate as his homestead exemption, and $500 worth of property as his personal property exemption. Williams v. Hughes, 136 N.C. 58, 48 S.E. 518 (1904).

Creditor's motion for summary judgment was properly granted where the record showed that the creditor met his burden of proof by uncontroverted evidence that immediately after the conveyances in question, defendant owed plaintiff $56,000, and that she had property worth only $300.00. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Johnson Furn. Co., 34 N.C. App. 134, 237 S.E.2d 313 (1977).

Deed of gift may be fraudulent, though the donor honestly believed that he had property sufficient, at the time of the gift, to satisfy all his debts then existing, when in fact he was mistaken. Black v. Sanders, 46 N.C. 67 (1853).

Corporation Sold Subject to Its Corporate Debt. — A corporation holds its property subject to the payment of the corporate debts, and when a corporation sells or transfers its entire property to a purchaser, knowing the fact, the latter is chargeable with knowledge that the property is subject to the corporate debts and that equity will, in proper cases, allow the corporate creditors to follow the property into the hands of the purchaser, for satisfaction of their claims. Budd Tire Corp. v. Pierce Tire Co., 90 N.C. App. 684, 370 S.E.2d 267 (1988).

When a corporation purchases all or substantially all of the assets of another corporation for grossly inadequate consideration, the transfer will be deemed fraudulent as to the selling corporation's creditors, regardless of whether the parties had the actual intent to defraud. Budd Tire Corp. v. Pierce Tire Co., 90 N.C. App. 684, 370 S.E.2d 267 (1988).

Good will is an asset capable of being fraudulently conveyed, and where the good will is put beyond reach of creditors, equity will allow a money damage award equal to the value of the good will. Budd Tire Corp. v. Pierce Tire Co., 90 N.C. App. 684, 370 S.E.2d 267 (1988).

Where one corporation purchases all or substantially all of the assets of another corporation, including the good will, in a manner deemed fraudulent, the selling corporation's creditors may follow the good will into the hands of the purchasing corporation and obtain a money damage award equal to its value. Budd Tire Corp. v. Pierce Tire Co., 90 N.C. App. 684, 370 S.E.2d 267 (1988).

Judgment in Partition Proceeding as Voluntary Transfer. — A bankrupt was allotted an undivided interest in certain lands as his homestead, and the remainder in such undivided interest was sold to make assets, and at the sale was bought by the bankrupt's wife. The land was then partitioned by order of court, and in the partition proceeding the husband acknowledged the interest in remainder of his wife. It was held that, if the sale of the reversionary interest to the wife was invalid, the judgment in the partition proceeding estopped the husband from denying the interest of his wife, and operated as a gift to her within the meaning of this section, and in the absence of allegations that the husband had debts at the time of the partition, and that he did not retain sufficient assets to pay them, the land could not be reached by a subsequent creditor of the husband. Wallace v. Phillips, 195 N.C. 665, 143 S.E. 244 (1928).

Transfer in Consideration of Support of Debtor for Life. — A contract was made in consideration of support by a son of his father and mother for life, for $100 and certain shares of stock of the father, of the value of $7,000, and the father did not retain sufficient property out of which to pay his then existing creditors. The son acted in good faith without notice or knowledge. It was held that the transfer of the stock to the son was not valid as against his father's creditors beyond the amount he had expended for the support for which he was liable under the terms of the contract. People's Bank & Trust Co. v. Mackorell, 195 N.C. 741, 143 S.E. 518 (1928).

Transfer in Consideration of Support of Debtor's Invalid Children. — Where a deed from father to son provided that the grantee should support his invalid brothers (naming them) and comply with the conditions imposed, it was not voluntary within the meaning of this section, but rests upon a valuable consideration. Worthy v. Brady, 91 N.C. 265 (1884), petition for rehearing dismissed, 108 N.C. 440, 12 S.E. 1034 (1891).

Deed Made for Benefit of Debtor's Family. — Where a deed, conveying all of a debtor's property, and made without consideration, expresses on its face that it is made for the benefit of the debtor and his family, the court can itself pronounce it fraudulent and void as against a then existing creditor. Sturdivant v. Davis, 31 N.C. 365 (1849).

Where Grantor Afterwards Pays Debt. — A voluntary conveyance to a son is not avoided by the fact that the grantor was indebted at the time, if he afterwards paid the debt. Smith v. Reavis, 29 N.C. 341 (1847).

Gifts of Visible Estate and Retention of Choses in Action. — Gifts of visible estate cannot be defeated where the debtor has resources in stocks or other securities of value to meet his liabilities. Worthy v. Brady, 91 N.C. 265 (1884), petition for rehearing dismissed, 108 N.C. 440, 12 S.E. 1034 (1891).

Holder of Bearer Note Secured by Deed of Trust Held Not Necessary Party. — Where the note which a deed of trust purports to secure is payable to bearer, the plaintiff alleges it is "a false and fictitious paper-writing" and that the identity of the supposed bearer "remains unknown to plaintiff," the trustee in the deed of trust which purports to secure the payment of such note is a party to the action and has participated actively in its defense, whatever may be the situation where the holder of the indebtedness is named in the deed of trust and known, the holder of the alleged note cannot be deemed a necessary party to the action to set aside the deed of trust which purports to secure it. Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 148 S.E.2d 1 (1966).

II. WHAT CONVEYANCES FRAUDULENT.

A. In General.

Rule Stated. — The principles to be deduced from the authorities as to fraudulent conveyances, are: (1) If the conveyance is voluntary, and the grantor retains property fully sufficient and available to pay his debts then existing, and there is no actual intent to defraud, the conveyance is valid. (2) If the conveyance is voluntary, and the grantor does not retain property fully sufficient and available to pay his debts then existing, it is invalid as to creditors; but it cannot be impeached by subsequent creditors without proof of the existence of a debt at the time of its execution which is unpaid, and when this is established and the conveyance avoided, subsequent creditors are let in and the property is subjected to the payment of creditors generally. (3) If the conveyance is voluntary and made with the actual intent upon the part of the grantor to defraud creditors, it is void, although this fraudulent intent is not participated in by the grantee, and although property sufficient and available to pay existing debts is retained. (4) If the conveyance is upon a valuable consideration and made with the actual intent to defraud creditors upon the part of the grantor alone, not participated in by the grantee and of which intent he had no notice, it is valid. (5) If the conveyance is upon a valuable consideration, but made with the actual intent to defraud creditors on the part of the grantor, participated in by the grantee or of which he has notice, it is void. Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 81 S.E. 162 (1914); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Evans, 35 N.C. App. 322, 241 S.E.2d 379 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 374, 250 S.E.2d 231 (1979); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979); Wurlitzer Distrib. Corp. v. Schofield, 44 N.C. App. 520, 261 S.E.2d 688 (1980); Wilkinson v. United States, 741 F. Supp. 577 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Prerequisites for Establishing Fraud. — When a conveyance is made by a debtor for valuable consideration, it is fraudulent and may be set aside only when the conveyance was (1) made with the intent to defraud creditors, and (2) the grantee either participated in the intent or had notice of it. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

What Constitutes Transfer. — There is no requirement that borrower must have seen the actual proceeds of the loan in order for her to be able to transfer those proceeds; the immediate application of the proceeds of the loan to the debt incurred by borrower's husband, at her direction, constituted a transfer of funds. Butler v. NationsBank, 58 F.3d 1022 (4th Cir. 1995).

Effect of Consideration. — Although a purchaser may pay a full price for the property, yet if he purchased with the intent to aid his vendor to defeat the latter's creditors his purchase will be void. Eigenbrun v. Smith, 98 N.C. 207, 4 S.E. 122 (1887).

If the conveyance is upon a valuable consideration, but made with the actual intent to defraud creditors on the part of the grantor, participated in by the grantee, or of which he has notice, it is void. Orta v. Schafer, 284 F.2d 114 (4th Cir. 1960), quoting Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 81 S.E. 162 (1914).

A valuable consideration in the law of fraudulent conveyance is not the same as a valuable consideration in the law of contracts. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Evans, 296 N.C. 374, 250 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Valuable consideration is deemed to have been given by the transferee when he suffers a legal detriment and the transferor receives a corresponding benefit. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

A deed of trust or a mortgage made to secure an existing debt is a conveyance for a valuable consideration. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

Preferences. — Every conveyance of property by an insolvent or embarrassed man, to the exclusive satisfaction of the claims of some of his creditors, has necessarily a tendency to defeat or hinder his other creditors in the collection of their demands. But if the sole purpose of such a conveyance be the discharge of an honest debt, it does not fall under operation of the statute against fraudulent conveyances. Hafner v. Irwin, 23 N.C. 490 (1841).

But an agreement by which a conveyance, made for the purpose of preferring a creditor, is to be kept secret until the debtor has an opportunity to get beyond the reach of process issued by his other creditors, renders the conveyance fraudulent towards other creditors, as intended to hinder, delay, or defeat them. Hafner v. Irwin, 23 N.C. 490 (1841).

Intent to defraud creditors may be presumed when the debtor does not retain property sufficient to pay his then-existing debts. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

Conveyance to Trustee for Use of Creditors. — A conveyance to a trustee for the use of creditors, if made with intent to defraud any one of the vendor's creditors, is void, though the trustee be ignorant of such intent, and his conduct is bona fide. Eigenbrun v. Smith, 98 N.C. 207, 4 S.E. 122 (1887). See Royster v. Stallings, 124 N.C. 55, 32 S.E. 384 (1899).

Conveyance to Defeat Claim for Tort. — A secret conveyance of a mill made to defeat, hinder or delay a party injured by the erection thereof in the recovery of his damages, is fraudulent and void as to such party, and the former owner of the mill, notwithstanding such conveyance, continues liable for the damage. Purcell v. McCallum, 18 N.C. 221 (1835).

Where a deed was executed to evade the payment of any judgment that might be recovered against the grantor in an action for slander pending at the time of its execution, it is fraudulent, under a prior similar provision, as to his creditors. Helms v. Green, 105 N.C. 251, 11 S.E. 470 (1890).

Voluntariness of Conveyance. — A conveyance is voluntary when it is not for value, i.e., when the purchaser does not pay a reasonably fair price such as would indicate unfair dealing and be suggestive of fraud. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

A conveyance is deemed to be voluntary when the purchaser does not pay a reasonably fair price such as would indicate unfair dealing and be suggestive of fraud. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Evans, 296 N.C. 374, 250 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

A determination that a conveyance was not made for valuable consideration means that the conveyance was "voluntary." North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Evans, 296 N.C. 374, 250 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

A transfer is "voluntary" when the purchaser does not give value, i.e. does not pay a reasonably fair price. Butler v. NationsBank, 58 F.3d 1022 (4th Cir. 1995).

A transfer is voluntary if the transferor does not receive reasonably equivalent value for her transfer. Butler v. NationsBank, 58 F.3d 1022 (4th Cir. 1995).

If a conveyance is voluntary, and grantor fails to retain sufficient assets to pay his then-existing indebtedness, such conveyance is invalid as to creditors. Tuttle v. Tuttle, 38 N.C. App. 651, 248 S.E.2d 896 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 589, 254 S.E.2d 32 (1979).

Secret Trusts. — In Clement v. Cozart, 109 N.C. 173, 13 S.E. 862 (1891), it was said that if a deed be made, showing upon its face a full valuable consideration, but upon the secret trust that the vendee shall not pay anything therefor, but shall hold the same in contemplation of insolvency for the benefit of the vendor, so as to protect and shield the property against any debts that he may owe at the time, or any liabilities that he may subsequently incur, under a prior similar provision such a deed would be void as to all persons whose claims "are, shall or might be" defrauded thereby. See Morgan v. McLelland, 14 N.C. 82 (1831).

Absolute Transfers Intended as Security. — A deed absolute but executed upon a parol agreement for redemption, is, in law, fraudulent and void against the creditors of the vendor. Gregory v. Perkins, 15 N.C. 50 (1833).

A deed absolute on its face, which is mere security for a debt, is void as against creditors of the grantor. Bernhardt v. Brown, 122 N.C. 587, 29 S.E. 884 (1898).

A deed absolute on its face, but intended as a mortgage only, is fraudulent and void against creditors and purchasers, and against subsequent as well as prior creditors. Halcombe v. Ray, 23 N.C. 340 (1840).

A bond given as a pretext to enable one person to set up a claim to the property of another, so as to defraud the creditors of that other, is void even as between the parties to the same. John G. Powell & Co. v. Inman, 53 N.C. 436 (1862).

Feigned and Covinous Judgment. — A feigned and covinous judgment is made utterly void as against the person who is in anywise hindered, delayed, or defrauded of his debts. Powell v. Howell, 63 N.C. 283 (1869).

Assignment of Life Insurance Policy. — A life insurance policy issued to one for the benefit of himself is an integral part of his estate, and a voluntary assignment thereof to his children, made when he is insolvent, is fraudulent and void. Burton v. Farinholt, 86 N.C. 260 (1882).

Conveyance to Wife or to Wife and Self by Entireties. — Complaint brought by individual who succeeded to the rights of existing creditor by virtue of bond and payment thereunder, alleging that while unable to pay a claim that had been pending against him for two years and while he had no other assets with which to pay his creditors, defendant husband gratuitously conveyed his solely owned real property to himself and defendant wife by the entireties and gratuitously had title to other land that he purchased later put in her name stated a claim for relief against defendant wife, as if the alleged circumstances were established the conveyances would be invalid to existing creditors as a matter of law. Nye v. Oates, 96 N.C. App. 343, 385 S.E.2d 529 (1989).

Conveyance Following Separation Agreement. — Despite contention of creditor of husband that separation agreement executed by husband and wife destroyed tenancy by the entirety and vested a property interest in husband against which creditor was entitled to levy, where husband and wife were not divorced until over 8 months following the conveyance of the marital property to husband's parents, the property remained entirety property at the time of the conveyance, and could not be the subject of a conveyance in defraud of husband's individual creditors. The trial court erred in ordering that creditor was entitled to receive the proceeds of the sale of this property. Dealer Supply Co. v. Greene, 108 N.C. App. 31, 422 S.E.2d 350 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 343, 426 S.E.2d 704 (1993).

When Insolvent Debtor Improves Wife's Estate. — An insolvent debtor cannot withdraw money from his own estate and give it to his wife to be invested by her in the purchase or improvement of her property, and to that extent, when it is done, creditors may subject the property so purchased or improved to the payment of their claims. Michael v. Moore, 157 N.C. 462, 73 S.E. 104 (1911).

Money of Debtor Deposited in Wife's Name. — Where the wife participates in her husband's depositing his money in her name at a bank for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, the attempted appropriation is void under a prior similar provision, which was enacted to prevent fraudulent gifts, and in an appropriate action the deposit will be considered and dealt with as if it stood in the name of the husband. Moore v. Greenville Banking & Trust Co., 173 N.C. 180, 91 S.E. 793 (1917).

B. Intent.

Intent as Essential Element. — The intent is the essential and poisonous element in the transaction, and not merely the effect; since in every conveyance and appropriation of property, the property conveyed is placed beyond the creditor's reach, and he is so far obstructed in the pursuit of his remedy against the debtor's estate. But the inquiry is, was this the purpose of the assignment; and if so, and it was participated in by the assignee or party to take benefit under it, the assignment is invalid, though the debt or liability professed to be the object to be secured be bona fide due, and itself tinged with no vicious ingredient. Moore v. Hinnant, 89 N.C. 455 (1883), petition to modify denied, 90 N.C. 163 (1884).

A prior similar provision was meant to prevent deeds, etc., fraudulent in their concoction, and not merely such as in their effect might delay or hinder other creditors. Moore v. Hinnant, 89 N.C. 455 (1883), petition to modify denied, 90 N.C. 163 (1884).

Intent as Objective Element. — Acts fraudulent in view of the law, because of their necessary tendency to delay or obstruct the creditor in pursuit of his legal remedy, do not cease to be such because the fraud as an independent fact was not then in mind. If a person does and intends to do that which from its consequences the law pronounces fraudulent, he is held to have intended the fraud inseparable from the act. Cheatham v. Hawkins, 80 N.C. 161 (1879).

Sufficiency of Intent. — It is not necessary that there should have been an intent to hinder, delay, and defraud. An intent either to hinder and delay, or an intent to defraud, is sufficient. Peeler v. Peeler, 109 N.C. 628, 14 S.E. 59 (1891); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Intent Shown by Acts and Conduct. — It is not necessary that intent to defraud be proven by expressed declarations, but it may be shown by the acts and conduct of the parties, from which it may be reasonably inferred. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Intent Presumed. — Intent to defraud may be presumed where the transferor fails to retain property sufficient to pay his or her debts. Butler v. NationsBank, 58 F.3d 1022 (4th Cir. 1995).

Deed of Trust Executed with Intent to Delay. — A deed of trust executed by a corporation, or an individual, for the purpose of gaining time at the expense of creditors, in order to dispose of property to advantage and prevent a sacrifice by a sale for cash, when the company or individual has the means and resources from which enough might be realized to pay all the debts, is fraudulent and void as against creditors. London v. Parsley, 52 N.C. 313 (1859).

Fraud a Compound Question of Law and Fact. — In Crow v. Holland, 12 N.C. 481 (1828), it was said: "Fraud is a compound question of law and fact. The facts going to establish it are decided by a jury. Whether, when proved, they will amount to such a fraud as will vacate a grant is a question of law for the court to decide."

Intention Ascertained from "Badges of Fraud". — It is true that courts and juries cannot see and know the intent of an assignor except from his words and acts. Where he expresses his intent — his purpose — to be to defraud his creditors, we need not look further. This will avoid the assignment. But if he has not so declared his purpose, then we have to look to his acts to ascertain the intention with which the assignment was made — to what are called the "badges of fraud." Royster v. Stallings, 124 N.C. 55, 32 S.E. 384 (1899).

Family Relationship as Evidence of Intent. — When property is sold to a family member for less than its reasonable value and the grantor is unable to pay his debts, the close family relationship is strong evidence of fraudulent intent. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Consideration for the conveyance was another circumstance from which the jury inferred fraudulent intent; although defendants contended that there was valuable consideration in that grantee agreed to assume defendants' indebtedness to a third party in the amount of $93,000 grantee was not making regular payments on the note and the noteholder, who was related to the individual defendants, was allowing grantee to pay off the debt by doing work for him. Dellinger Septic Tank Co. v. Sherrill, 94 N.C. App. 105, 379 S.E.2d 688 (1989).

Evidence of Other Debts Admissible to Show Intent. — Where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that defendants owed debts to plaintiff other than the 1981 judgment and that they had not been able to pay those debts, existence of the other debts was relevant on the issue of defendants' intent. Dellinger Septic Tank Co. v. Sherrill, 94 N.C. App. 105, 379 S.E.2d 688 (1989).

Evidence Held Sufficient to Show Intent. — There was sufficient evidence to support the jury's finding that conveyance was made with the actual intent to defraud plaintiff where plaintiff's evidence showed that defendants owed several debts to plaintiff which they were unable to pay and that plaintiff attempted to collect a $5,000 account balance shortly before the conveyance occurred. Dellinger Septic Tank Co. v. Sherrill, 94 N.C. App. 105, 379 S.E.2d 688 (1989).

C. Badges of Fraud.

"Badges of Fraud" Defined. — It frequently becomes necessary, in order to ascertain the debtor's intentions, to look for what are designated as "badges of fraud." These badges of fraud are suspicious circumstances that overhang a transaction, and where the parties to it withhold testimony that it is exclusively within their power to produce, and that would remove all uncertainty, if believed, as to its character, the law puts the interpretation upon such conduct most unfavorable to the suppressing party as it does in all cases where a party purposely or negligently fails to furnish evidence under his control and not accessible to his adversary. Helms v. Green, 105 N.C. 251, 11 S.E. 470 (1890).

The usual badges of fraud are continuation of possession, or a secret trust, or some provision for the ease and comfort or benefit of the assignor, or the insertion of some feigned debt not due by the assignor. Royster v. Stallings, 124 N.C. 55, 32 S.E. 384 (1899).

Retention of Possession Not Fraudulent Per Se. — Possession retained by the vendor of chattel does not, per se, make the sale fraudulent in law. It is but presumptive evidence of fraud, proper to be left to a jury. To repel this presumption the vendee may show that consideration passed, though none is stated in the bill of sale. Howell v. Elliott, 12 N.C. 76 (1826).

Permitting Mortgagor to Remain in Possession of and Sell Stock of Merchandise. — Where mortgagees expressly agree to permit mortgagor to remain in possession of the stock of merchandise and sell the same in the usual course of trade, but do not require him to account for the proceeds of same, until he is adjudged bankrupt, the mortgage is presumptively fraudulent in law, and the burden is upon the mortgagor to rebut that presumption by proof that there were no preexisting debts at the time the mortgage was executed, or that the mortgagor had assets sufficient and available to pay the existing debts exclusive of the property embraced in the mortgage. In re Joseph, 43 F.2d 252 (M.D.N.C. 1930). See Morris Plan Bank v. Cook, 55 F.2d 176 (4th Cir. 1932).

Reservation of Exemptions. — The reservation of exemptions allowed by law in a deed of assignment is no evidence of a fraudulent intent. Barber v. Buffaloe, 111 N.C. 206, 16 S.E. 386 (1892).

Secrecy. — It is a mark of fraud if the transaction is secret; and it is secret if it is done in the presence only of near relatives, who are such persons as may be relied on not to disclose what they know to the neighborhood, or if it is done at such distance from the neighborhood that it is unlikely that the affair will become known to them. Vick v. Kegs, 3 N.C. 126 (1800).

That the only parties present at a conveyance of all the vendor's land in satisfaction of old debts were the vendor and vendee, who were brothers-in-law, and the subscribing witness, also a brother-in-law of the vendee, is a fact calculated to throw suspicion upon the transaction, i.e., is a badge of fraud. Peebles v. Horton, 64 N.C. 374 (1870).

Employing an attorney who resides at some distance, and in another county, to draw the deed of assignment, and making a provision therein authorizing public or private sale for cash, are not circumstances of fraud. Barber v. Buffaloe, 111 N.C. 206, 16 S.E. 386 (1892).

Authorizing Private Sale. — It is no ground for a court to pronounce a deed of trust fraudulent per se, as against other creditors, that the property conveyed was to be sold at a private sale. Burgin v. Burgin, 23 N.C. 453 (1841). See Barber v. Buffaloe, 111 N.C. 206, 16 S.E. 386 (1892).

Evidence of Fraud in Assignment for Creditors. — In Barber v. Buffaloe, 122 N.C. 128, 29 S.E. 336 (1898), it was held that there was sufficient evidence of fraud in an assignment for the benefit of creditors to take the case to the jury. There the party preferred, a relative of the assignor, went 16 miles on Sunday night with the attorney who drew the deed of assignment, bought in the property, with the debt secured, and allowed the assignor to remain in possession free of rent; this was evidence of a secret trust and benefit to the assignor, and the turning point in the case. Royster v. Stallings, 124 N.C. 55, 32 S.E. 384 (1899).

Effect of Testimony as to Bona Fides of Transaction. — The rule laid down in Reiger v. Davis, 67 N.C. 185 (1872), was that when a debtor, much embarrassed, conveys property of much value to a near relative, and the transaction is secret and no one is present to witness the trade but these near relatives, it is regarded as fraudulent, but when these relatives are made witnesses in the cause, and depose to the fairness and bona fides of the transaction, and that, in fact, there was no purpose of secrecy, it then becomes a question for the jury to determine the intent which influenced the parties, and to find it fraudulent, or otherwise, as the evidence may satisfy them. Helms v. Green, 105 N.C. 251, 11 S.E. 470 (1890).

III. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES AND PURCHASERS.

Conveyance Is Valid Between the Parties. — The power of the court to set aside a fraudulent conveyance at the instance of creditors is derived from a prior similar provision, which has not penalized such a transaction by declaring the deed utterly void as against all persons and for all purposes, but has expressly limited the remedy to the aggrieved creditor and has left the deed as it stands between the parties. Lane v. Becton, 225 N.C. 457, 35 S.E.2d 334 (1945).

Valid Against Maker. — A conveyance made with an intent to defraud creditors is nevertheless valid against the maker and all others except creditors and those who purchase under a sale made for their benefit. Saunders v. Lee, 101 N.C. 3, 7 S.E. 590 (1888).

When Parties in Pari Delicto. — In York v. Merritt, 77 N.C. 213 (1877), the action was by the grantee against the grantor for possession of the land conveyed to defraud creditors. The court held that when the parties have united in a transaction to defraud another or others, or the public, or the due administration of justice, or which is against the public policy or contra bonos mores, the courts will not enforce it against either party. Bank of New Hanover v. Adrian, 116 N.C. 537, 21 S.E. 792 (1895).

Grantee Must Be Purchaser for Value to Be Protected. — North Carolina law protects bona fide purchasers from creditors of the grantor. In order to be protected a grantee must first be a purchaser for value. Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Burton, 599 F. Supp. 1313 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

Deed of trust to secure a present loan constitutes the beneficiary a purchaser for value. Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Burton, 599 F. Supp. 1313 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

Bona Fide Purchaser from Fraudulent Grantor. — A bona fide purchaser of personal property, without notice, acquires a good title, though his vendor may have made a prior fraudulent conveyance to a third person. Plummer v. Worley, 35 N.C. 423 (1852).

Purchaser with Notice of Former Fraudulent Conveyance. — Since the passage of the Act of 1840 a purchaser of land with notice at the time of a former fraudulent conveyance is not protected in his purchase, although he paid value therefor. Hiatt v. Wade, 30 N.C. 340 (1848); Triplett v. Witherspoon, 70 N.C. 589 (1874).

Bona Fide Purchaser from Fraudulent Grantee. — A purchaser for a valuable consideration, and without notice, from a fraudulent grantee, acquires a good title against the creditors of the fraudulent grantor. Saunders v. Lee, 101 N.C. 3, 7 S.E. 590 (1888).

Whatever may be said about fairness or unfairness towards creditors, the legislative will gives preference to a bona fide purchaser, for valuable consideration at full price and without notice of the fraud and covin. Saunders v. Lee, 101 N.C. 3, 7 S.E. 590 (1888).

Constructive Notice. — A purchaser from a trustee, under a conveyance containing upon its face evidence of a fraudulent purpose to defeat creditors, takes with notice of such evidence. Eigenbrun v. Smith, 98 N.C. 207, 4 S.E. 122 (1887).

Burden of Proof. — The burden is on the purchaser of property conveyed to defraud creditors to show that he bought for a valuable consideration and without notice. Cox v. Wall, 132 N.C. 730, 44 S.E. 635 (1903).

Where a conveyance from an insolvent husband to his wife is attacked for fraud, the onus is upon the wife to show that a consideration, in the shape of money paid, the discharge of a debt due from him to her, or something of value, actually passed. Peeler v. Peeler, 109 N.C. 628, 14 S.E. 59 (1891).

Section Is Intended as Proviso. — The purpose of the legislature in enacting former § 39-19 was to constitute an independent provision, operating as a proviso to the other sections on fraudulent conveyances. Cox v. Wall, 132 N.C. 730, 44 S.E. 635 (1903).

Scope and Effect. — The proviso can only be made operative by giving to it the scope and effect of purging the original conveyance of the fraud with which it was tainted, by allowing the bona fides and the full valuable consideration of the second conveyance to supply the want of these qualities to the first, so as to perfect the title to the bona fide purchaser, by carrying it back to the donor and claiming the title from him, and thus prevent the title of the first purchaser from being impeached and made void. Young v. Lathrop, 67 N.C. 63, 12 Am. Rep. 603 (1872). See Cox v. Wall, 132 N.C. 730, 44 S.E. 635 (1903).

How Grantee May Protect His Title. — When a grantor executes a deed with intention to defraud his creditors, the grantee can only protect his title by showing that he is a purchaser for a valuable consideration, and without notice of a fraudulent intent on the part of his grantor. Cansler v. Cobb, 77 N.C. 30 (1877); Saunders v. Lee, 101 N.C. 3, 7 S.E. 590 (1888); Morgan v. Bostic, 132 N.C. 743, 44 S.E. 639 (1903).

Bona Fide Purchaser from Fraudulent Vendor Gets Good Title. — Under a prior similar provision, a purchaser for value and without notice of any fraud got good title by conveyance or transfer from a fraudulent vendor. People's Bank & Trust Co. v. Mackorell, 195 N.C. 741, 143 S.E. 518 (1928).

Bona Fide Purchaser from Fraudulent Grantee Before Execution Sale. — Where a fraudulent grantee of land conveyed it to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the fraud, after a creditor of the fraudulent grantor had obtained a judgment against him, but before the land was sold under an execution issued on such judgment and teste of the terms where it was obtained, it was held that by force of the proviso obtained in this section (4th section of the 50th ch. of the Rev. Code, 13 Eliz., c. 5, s. 6), the title of the bona fide purchaser from the fraudulent grantee was to be preferred to that of the purchaser under the execution of the creditor of the fraudulent grantor. Young v. Lathrop, 67 N.C. 63, 12 Am. Rep. 603 (1872).

Trustees and Mortgagees Take Subject to Equities. — It is a settled principle, acted upon every day, that the trustee or mortgagee is a purchaser for a valuable consideration within the provisions of 13 and 27 Elizabeth; but it would seem they take subject to any equity that attached to the property in the hands of the debtor, and cannot discharge themselves from it on the ground of being purchasers without notice. Potts v. Blackwell, 56 N.C. 449 (1857), appeal dismissed, 57 N.C. 58 (1858).

Good Consideration. — "Good consideration" means valuable consideration, or a fair price. Young v. Lathrop, 67 N.C. 63, 12 Am. Rep. 603 (1872); Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N.C. 151, 19 S.E. 351 (1894).

Conveyance to Daughter in Consideration of Services. — Where A made a deed to his daughter, in consideration of services rendered and to be rendered in the future for attending upon him in his old age, with intent to defraud his creditors, the deed is void, even though the daughter had no knowledge of such fraudulent intent. Cansler v. Cobb, 77 N.C. 30 (1877).

When Wife Takes with Notice of Fraud. — Where a husband's conveyance to his wife is executed with a fraudulent intent, and the wife, with a knowledge of his purpose, accepts the benefit of the act and claims under it, she puts herself beyond the pale of the protection offered to innocent purchasers by the section. Peeler v. Peeler, 109 N.C. 628, 14 S.E. 59 (1891).

Section Relates to Matters of Defense. — The matters herein stated were intended to be strictly of a defensive character, and are required to be averred and proved by the party who relies on their existence in order to validate a conveyance which the law has declared to be void because made with a fraudulent intent. Cox v. Wall, 132 N.C. 730, 44 S.E. 635 (1903).

Burden of Proving Consideration and Lack of Notice. — When a deed is made with a fraudulent intent, the law condemns it and pronounces it void, and it remains void, of course, until it is shown for some reason to be valid. Nothing else appearing, it is void, and he who claims under it must aver and prove whatever is necessary to sustain its validity. The burden is on the purchaser, therefore, to show, under the statute, that he purchased not only for value, but without notice. Cox v. Wall, 132 N.C. 730, 44 S.E. 635 (1903), distinguishing Lassiter v. Davis, 64 N.C. 498 (1870); Reiger v. Davis, 67 N.C. 185 (1872). See Morgan v. Bostic, 132 N.C. 743, 44 S.E. 639 (1903).

When Some of Debts Secured Are Fictitious. — A purchaser for value without notice, under a deed in trust in which some of the debts secured are fictitious, gets a good title, even against the creditors of the fraudulent trustor. McCorkle v. Earnhardt, 61 N.C. 300 (1867).

Mortgage Note Tainted with Usury. — A prior similar provision does not purport to protect the innocent holder of a mortgage note which is tainted with usury, but the "purchaser of the estate or property" at the sale under the mortgage, who buys without notice of the usurious taint in the debt secured. The only case in our reports that seems to mitigate against the otherwise uniform tenor of the decisions on this subject is Coor v. Spicer, 65 N.C. 401 (1871), which held that a mortgage given to secure an usurious bond might be enforced in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value. The case recognizes the general rule, but takes mortgages out of it upon the supposed wording of the section. Aside from the fact that it is held expressly otherwise in the latter case of Moore v. Woodward, 83 N.C. 531 (1880), an examination of the section will show that Coor v. Spicer was a palpable inadvertence. Ward v. Sugg, 113 N.C. 489, 18 S.E. 717 (1893).

Where a deed of trust is made to secure certain specified debts, one of which is tainted with usury, and a purchaser buys at the trustee's sale for a valuable consideration without notice of the illegality of the consideration of the said debt, his title is not affected thereby. McNeill v. Riddle, 66 N.C. 290 (1872).

IV. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF CREDITORS.

Minor children are not creditors of their father for their past support furnished them by another, and for which their personal estate was not invaded, and a conveyance executed by him prior to the institution of their action may not be set aside by them under a prior similar provision. Bryant v. Bryant, 212 N.C. 6, 192 S.E. 864 (1937).

Prior and Subsequent Creditors. — Indebtedness at the time of making a voluntary conveyance of part only of the grantor's property is, in respect to subsequent creditors seeking satisfaction out of the property conveyed, merely evidence of fraud, the consideration of which belongs to the jury; but in respect to prior creditors, where debts cannot be otherwise satisfied, it constitutes fraud in law to be declared by the court. O'Daniel v. Crawford, 15 N.C. 197 (1833).

A voluntary conveyance is necessarily and in law fraudulent when opposed to the claim of a prior creditor; as against subsequent creditors, whether the conveyance is fraudulent or not depends upon the bona fides of the transaction, and the question is one of intent, to be passed on by the jury. Clement v. Cozart, 109 N.C. 173, 13 S.E. 862 (1891). See § 39-17 and note.

Action Commenced Prior to Transfer of Assets. — A creditor beginning an action prior to the transfer of assets by defendant is entitled to attack the transfer as fraudulent as to him, although he does not obtain judgment against the defendant until after the transfer of the assets has been accomplished. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Surety on Bond. — The liability of a principal to indemnify a surety on a bond is an existing liability at the time the bond is executed, within the rule that a conveyance with intent to defraud creditors is void as to existing obligations. Graeber v. Sides, 151 N.C. 596, 66 S.E. 600 (1909).

Void in Part, Void in Toto. — If only a part of the consideration of a deed is fraudulent against creditors, the whole deed is void. Hafner v. Irwin, 23 N.C. 490 (1841).

When Trustee in Bankruptcy May Have Conveyance Set Aside. — A trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to have a fraudulent conveyance set aside and to recover the property transferred, if any creditor of the bankrupt would be entitled to do so. Cox v. Wall, 132 N.C. 730, 44 S.E. 635 (1903).

What Constitutes Aid and Assistance. — Aid or assistance is the doing of some act whereby the party is enabled, or it is made easier for him, to do the principal act, or effect some primary purpose. L.M. Wiley & Co. v. McRee, 47 N.C. 349 (1855).

Where a party persuades a debtor, who is temporarily absent from the county of his residence, not to go back into that county, but to go to distant parts, and promises, if he will do so, to send his property from his residence to him, and does afterwards send such property to him, and aids him with money to abscond from where he then is, and goes part of the way with him, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, he is liable under the section. Moore v. Rogers, 48 N.C. 90 (1855).

Aid Consisting Mainly in Words. — There is no distinction between frauds consisting mainly in acts, and those which consist mainly in words, the criterion of the plaintiff's right of action and the defendant's liability being that the plaintiff should have been damaged in consequence of the fraud of the defendant. March v. Wilson, 44 N.C. 143 (1852).

Mere Advice Insufficient. — Simply advising a debtor to run away, though the advice be given to delay, etc., is not equivalent to aiding and assisting, and will not sustain an action under the statute against the fraudulent removing of debtors. L.M. Wiley & Co. v. McRee, 47 N.C. 349 (1855).

Carrying Debtor to Railway Station. — Where a party, with his horse and buggy, carried a debtor to a railroad station, and there procured the money to enable him to leave the State, with the intent to assist him in the purpose of avoiding his creditors, it was held to be a fraudulent removal within this section. Moffit v. Burgess, 53 N.C. 342 (1861).

Property Not Carried Entirely Out of County. — Where a debtor removes out of a county with intent to defraud his creditors, a person who, knowing of such intent, helps him by carrying him or his property a part of the way in order to assist him in getting him out of the county, becomes bound for his debts, although he did not convey the debtor or his goods entirely out of the one county into another. Godsey v. Bason, 30 N.C. 260 (1848).

Liability of Principal When Aid Rendered by Agent. — Where an agent, having money of his principal in his hands for a fair and honest purpose, paid it to his son fraudulently to assist him in absconding, the mere fact that, in a settlement of accounts between the principal and the agent, the former allowed the latter's bill for money thus applied does not amount to such a ratification as to subject the principal. Moore v. Rogers, 51 N.C. 297 (1859).

Knowledge of Particular Debt Unnecessary. — Where a person who has removed a debtor out of a county is sued by a creditor, it is not necessary to show that this person had a knowledge of any particular debt due from the debtor, but is sufficient if the circumstances of the case induce the jury to believe that the removal was made with a view to defraud creditors. Godsey v. Bason, 30 N.C. 260 (1848).

Intent of Escaped Debtor Immaterial. — The declaration of a debtor fraudulently removed, that "he intended to get the defendant into a scrape," was held to be immaterial. Moffit v. Burgess, 53 N.C. 342 (1861).

Action by Bail of One Arrested under Writ of Capias Ad Respondendum. — The bail of a person arrested under a writ of capias ad respondendum may maintain an action on the case at common law against one for fraudulently aiding and assisting the principal to remove from the county, in consequence whereof he had to pay the debt sued on. March v. Wilson, 44 N.C. 143 (1852).

Surety on Constable's Bond Not Creditor. — A surety on a constable's bond, upon which there has been a breach, but no judgment nor payment by him, is not a creditor so as to entitle him to recover against one for fraudulently removing his principal. Booe v. Wilson, 46 N.C. 182 (1853).

Measure of Damages. — In an action under this section the measure of damages is the amount of the debt due by the debtor to the plaintiff. Godsey v. Bason, 30 N.C. 260 (1848).

Same Jury in Suit by Different Creditors. — An action on the case, brought by A against B, for fraudulently removing a debtor, is tried, and a verdict found for defendant. The same jury are tendered in a case of C against B for the same act of removing, and are challenged by the plaintiff. They are under a legal bias by reason of having decided the case of A against B, and the challenge ought to be allowed, and this although additional evidence is to be adduced in the second trial. Baker v. Harris, 60 N.C. 271 (1864).

V. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

Necessary Allegations to Set Aside Gift. — In order for a creditor to set aside a gift from a debtor to his wife as fraudulent against creditors, the complaint must allege that at the time of the alleged gift the donor had not retained property fully sufficient and available to pay his then existing creditors, and in the absence of such allegation a demurrer to the complaint is good. Wallace v. Phillips, 195 N.C. 665, 143 S.E. 244 (1928).

Presumptions and Burden of Proof. — Where there is any evidence tending to show that at the time of the alleged fraudulent conveyance the grantor retained property fully sufficient and available to satisfy his then creditors, the presumption of fraud formerly arising from a voluntary conveyance is removed by this section, and the indebtedness of the grantor is evidence only from which a fraudulent intent may be inferred. Thus a requested instruction is properly refused which requires the defendant to satisfy the jury by the greater weight of the evidence that he retained property fully sufficient and available. Shuford v. Cook, 169 N.C. 52, 85 S.E. 142 (1915), citing Hobbs v. Cashwell, 152 N.C. 183, 67 S.E. 495 (1910). But see Garland v. Arrowood, 177 N.C. 371, 99 S.E. 100 (1919), wherein it was said that where there is a voluntary gift or settlement, the burden of, at least, going forward with proof of retention of sufficient property is on the defendant.

The ultimate burden of proof rests upon the plaintiff to show either actual intent by the defendant grantors to defraud their creditors or failure by them to retain property sufficient to pay the then-existing debts. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Johnson Furn. Co., 34 N.C. App. 134, 237 S.E.2d 313 (1977).

The burden is on plaintiff in an action to set aside a deed as being fraudulent as to creditors to prove that the grantor failed to retain property sufficient and available to pay his then existing creditors. Hood v. Cobb, 207 N.C. 128, 176 S.E. 288 (1934).

The effect of a prior similar provision is to destroy any presumption of vitiating fraud in the making of a voluntary gift or settlement solely from the indebtedness of the donor or settler, and to make the failure to retain property fully sufficient and available for the satisfaction of creditors a requisite of such presumption. Hood v. Cobb, 207 N.C. 128, 176 S.E. 288 (1934); Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 148 S.E.2d 1 (1966).

Even though it is shown that a conveyance by a debtor was voluntary (that is, not for value), the burden of proof is, nevertheless, upon the plaintiff to show that the grantor did not retain property sufficient to pay his debts. Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 148 S.E.2d 1 (1966).

Earlier decisions of the Supreme Court were to the effect that, notwithstanding this section, there was a presumption of fraudulent intent in the case of a voluntary conveyance by a debtor and the burden rested upon the party seeking to uphold the voluntary conveyance to show retention by the grantor of property sufficient to pay his then debts. These cases may no longer be regarded as correct statements of the law of this jurisdiction with regard to the question of which party must ultimately bear the burden of proof upon the question of retention by the grantor of sufficient property to pay his then existing debts. That burden is now placed upon the party attacking the conveyance. Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 148 S.E.2d 1 (1966).

Intent Shown by Acts and Conduct. — It is not necessary that intent to defraud be proven by expressed declarations, but it may be shown by the acts and conduct of the parties, from which it may be reasonably inferred. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Family Relationship as Evidence of Intent. — When property is sold to a family member for less than its reasonable value and the grantor is unable to pay his debts, the close family relationship is strong evidence of fraudulent intent. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Evidence of Other Debts Admissible to Show Intent. — Where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that defendants owed debts to plaintiff other than the 1981 judgment and that they had not been able to pay those debts, existence of the other debts was relevant on the issue of defendants' intent. Dellinger Septic Tank Co. v. Sherrill, 94 N.C. App. 105, 379 S.E.2d 688 (1989).

Transfer Is Evidence of Intent to Defraud. — A prior similar provision provided that the transfer itself is evidence of an intention to defraud the creditor. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. v. Waller, 301 F.2d 839 (4th Cir. 1962).

Evidence of Tax Valuation of Property Retained. — In an action to set aside a deed as being fraudulent as to creditors, evidence of the tax valuation of the other lands of the debtor at the time of the conveyance is competent on the issue of intent to hinder, delay and defraud creditors as tending to show the debtor had reason to believe he was retaining property sufficient and available to pay his then existing creditors. Hood v. Cobb, 207 N.C. 128, 176 S.E. 288 (1934).

If, in order to survive a motion for judgment of nonsuit, the plaintiff must offer evidence sufficient in itself to show that its debtors, the defendant grantors in the deed of trust, did not retain property sufficient to pay their indebtedness to the plaintiff (no other debts being shown in the record), the judgment of nonsuit must be sustained where the only evidence offered by the plaintiff, upon this point, consisted of the tax listings by such defendants of their tangible properties in a particular county. Such tax listings do not negative the possibilities that these defendants, after executing the deed of trust in question, retained, and still retain, bank accounts or other intangible properties in the county or elsewhere, or tangible property, real or personal, located in another county, sufficient to pay the claim of the plaintiff and whatever other indebtedness these defendants may owe. Therefore, the evidence introduced by the plaintiff is not sufficient, alone, to show that the defendant grantors did not retain property sufficient to pay their debts when they executed the deed of trust now under attack. Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 148 S.E.2d 1 (1966).

Subsequent Deed of Sale Not Evidence of Value. — A commissioner's deed of sale of part of the lands of the debtor, executed three years after the execution of the deed sought to be set aside as being fraudulent as to creditors,was held incompetent as evidence under this section, the issue being the value of all the debtor's lands at the time of the voluntary deed attacked in the action. Hood v. Cobb, 207 N.C. 128, 176 S.E. 288 (1934).

Evidence of Grantee's Resulting Trust in Property Conveyed. — Where a deed from a husband to his wife was sought to be set aside by his creditors for fraud, evidence tending to show that she had a resulting trust by reason of her having conveyed the same land to her husband without consideration moving to her was held inadmissible, under the principle that a grantor in a deed to lands may not engraft a resulting trust upon his conveyance of the fee simple title with full covenants and warranty of title. Kelly Springfield Tire Co. v. Lester, 192 N.C. 642, 135 S.E. 778 (1926).

Evidence Sufficient to Carry Issue of Intent to Jury. — Though the ultimate burden of proof rests upon the plaintiff to show either actual intent by the defendant grantors to defraud their creditors or failure by them to retain property sufficient to pay their then existing debts, when the plaintiff introduces an admission by the defendants that their deed of trust was "voluntary," and introduces evidence that they were then indebted to the plaintiff, which debt has not been paid, this is evidence tending to show an intent to delay, hinder, and defraud creditors sufficient to carry the case to the jury for its determination of the issue, and a judgment of nonsuit is improperly granted. Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 148 S.E.2d 1 (1966).

When Question of Fraud for Jury. — A prior similar provision only required the question of fraud to be submitted to a jury in cases where property fully sufficient and available to pay all creditors was retained by the donor. Black v. Sanders, 46 N.C. 67 (1853). See Sturdivant v. Davis, 31 N.C. 365 (1849).

Retention of Sufficient Property Is Question for Jury. — It is a question of fact for the determination of the jury whether the donor had retained property amply sufficient to pay his creditors at the time of his making a gift, within the intent and meaning of the section, which determines the validity of the transaction. Garland v. Arrowood, 177 N.C. 371, 99 S.E. 100 (1919).

Effect of Decree. — When the court has declared a voluntary conveyance void as to the plaintiff, and decreed that it be "set aside, revoked, rescinded, and annulled," it is avoided only as between the parties to the action. Sturges v. Portis Mining Co., 206 F. 534 (E.D.N.C. 1913).

VI. MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

Gifts Between Husband and Wife. — All gifts from a husband to his wife are good inter se, and against all persons claiming under them; and good against all persons, if he is not in debt at the time; but such gifts are voidable as to existing creditors, if their rights are not secured. Walton v. Parish, 95 N.C. 259 (1886).

Husband May Surrender Curtesy Initiate. — Since the Act of 1848, a husband has the right to surrender his estate as tenant by the curtesy initiate and let it merge in the reversion of his wife, who, with the assent of her husband, may sell the same and receive the whole of the purchase money. Teague v. Downs, 69 N.C. 280 (1873). See § 29-4 which abolishes curtesy.

Cited in Triangle Bank v. Eatmon, 143 N.C. App. 521, 547 S.E.2d 92 (2001).

§ 39-23.2. Insolvency.

(a) A debtor is insolvent if the sum of the debtor's debts is greater than all of the debtor's assets at a fair valuation.

(b) A debtor who is generally not paying the debtor's debts as they become due is presumed to be insolvent.

(c) A partnership is insolvent under subsection (a) of this section if the sum of the partnership's debts is greater than the aggregate, at a fair valuation, of all of the partnership's assets and the sum of the excess of the value of each general partner's nonpartnership assets over the partner's nonpartnership debts.

(d) Assets under this section do not include property that has been transferred, concealed, or removed with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors or that has been transferred in a manner making transfer voidable under this Article.

(e) Debts under this section do not include an obligation to the extent it is secured by a valid lien on property of the debtor not included as an asset. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) Subsection (a) is derived from the definition of "insolvent" in § 101(29)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code. The definition in subsection (a) and the correlated definition of partnership insolvency in subsection (c) contemplate a fair valuation of the debts as well as the assets of the debtor. As under the definition of the same term in § 2 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act exempt property is excluded from the computation of the value of the assets. See § 1(2) supra. For similar reasons interests in valid spendthrift trusts and interests in tenancies by the entireties that cannot be severed by a creditor of only one tenant are not included. See the Comment to § 1(2) supra. Since a valid lien also precludes an unsecured creditor from collecting the creditor's claim from the encumbered interest in a debtor's property, both the encumbered interest and the debt secured thereby are excluded from the computation of insolvency under this Act. See § 1(2) supra and subsection (e) of this section.

The requirement of § 550(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code that a transferee be "without knowledge of the voidability of the transfer" in order to be protected has been omitted as inappropriate. Knowledge of the facts rendering the transfer voidable would be inconsistent with the good faith that is required of a protected transferee. Knowledge of the voidability of a transfer would seem to involve a legal conclusion. Determination of the voidability of the transfer ought not to require the court to inquire into the legal sophistication of the transferee.

(2) Section 2(b) establishes a rebuttable presumption of insolvency from the fact of general nonpayment of debts as they become due. Such general nonpayment is a ground for the filing of an involuntary petition under § 303(h)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code. See also U.C.C. § 1-201(23), which declares a person to be "insolvent" who "has ceased to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business." The presumption imposes on the party against whom the presumption is directed the burden of proving that the nonexistence of insolvency as defined in § 2(a) is more probable than its existence. See Uniform Rules of Evidence (1974 Act), Rule 301(a). The 1974 Uniform Rule 301(a) conforms to the Final Draft of Federal Rule 301 as submitted to the United States Supreme Court by the Advisory Committee on Federal Rules of Evidence. "The so-called 'bursting bubble' theory, under which a presumption vanishes upon the introduction of evidence which would support a finding of the nonexistence of the presumed fact, even though not believed, is rejected as according presumptions too 'slight and evanescent' an effect." Advisory Committee's Note to Rule 301. See also 1 J.Weinstein & M.Berger, Evidence 301 [01] (1982).

The presumption is established in recognition of the difficulties typically imposed on a creditor in proving insolvency in the bankruptcy sense, as provided in subsection (a). See generally Levit, The Archaic Concept of Balance-Sheet Insolvency, 47 Am.Bankr.L.J. 215 (1973). Not only is the relevant information in the possession of a noncooperative debtor but the debtor's records are more often than not incomplete and inaccurate. As a practical matter, insolvency is most cogently evidenced by a general cessation of payment of debts, as has long been recognized by the laws of other countries and is now reflected in the Bankruptcy Code. See Honsberger, Failure to Pay One's Debts Generally as They Become Due: The Experience of France and Canada, 54 Am.Bankr.L.J. 153 (1980); J. MacLachlan, Bankruptcy 13, 63-64, 436 (1956). In determining whether a debtor is paying its debts generally as they become due, the court should look at more than the amount and due dates of the indebtedness. The court should also take into account such factors as the number of the debtor's debts, the proportion of those debts not being paid, the duration of the nonpayment, and the existence of bona fide disputes or other special circumstances alleged to constitute an explanation for the stoppage of payments. The court's determination may be affected by a consideration of the debtor's payment practices prior to the period of alleged nonpayment and the payment practices of the trade or industry in which the debtor is engaged. The case law that has developed under § 303(h)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code has not required a showing that a debtor has failed or refused to pay a majority in number and amount of his or her debts in order to prove general nonpayment of debts as they become due. See, e.g., Hill v. Cargill, Inc. (In re Hill), 8 B.R. 779, 3 C.B.C.2d 920 (Bk.D.Minn. 1981) (nonpayment of three largest debts held to constitute general nonpayment, although small debts were being paid); In re All Media Properties, Inc., 5 B.R. 126, 6 B.C.D. 586, 2 C.B.C.2d 449 (Bk.S.D.Tex. 1980) (missing significant number of payments or regularly missing payments significant in amount said to constitute general nonpayment; missing payments on more than 50% of aggregate of claims said not to be required to show general nonpayment; nonpayment for more than 30 days after billing held to establish nonpayment of a debt when it is due); In re Kreidler Import Corp., 4 B.R. 256, 6 B.C.D. 608, 2 C.B.C.2d 159 (Bk.D.Md. 1980) (nonpayment of one debt constituting 97% of debtor's total indebtedness held to constitute general non-payment). A presumption of insolvency does not arise from nonpayment of a debt as to which there is a genuine bona fide dispute, even though the debt is a substantial part of the debtor's indebtedness. Cf. 11 U.S.C. § 303(h)(1), as amended by § 426(b) of Public Law No. 98-882, the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984.

(3) Subsection (c) is derived from the definition of partnership insolvency in § 101(29)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code. The definition conforms generally to the definition of the same term in § 2(2) of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act.

(4) Subsection (d) follows the approach of the definition of "insolvency" in § 101(29) of the Bankruptcy Code by excluding from the computation of the value of the debtor's assets any value that can be realized only by avoiding a transfer of an interest formerly held by the debtor or by discovery or pursuit of property that has been fraudulently concealed or removed.

Subsection (e) is new. It makes clear the purpose not to render a person insolvent under this section by counting as a debt an obligation secured by property of the debtor that is not counted as an asset. See also Comments to §§ 1(2) and 2(a) supra.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

The drafters of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act identified confusion about the concept of insolvency as one of the three basic uncertainties in then-existing fraudulent conveyance law. See Prefatory Note to Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act; Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 875. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.2, in conjunction with the definitions of "asset" and "debt" (and the various definitions that are employed in connection with those terms), appears to eliminate this uncertainty. There seems to be little substantive change to North Carolina law, although uncertainty as to the meaning of North Carolina law makes this conclusion debatable.

North Carolina fraudulent conveyance cases have long determined solvency by contrasting a person's assets with his liabilities, and have rejected a test concerning whether the person is able to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business. Silver Valley Mining Co. v. North Carolina Smelting Co., 119 N.C. 417, 418-19, 25 S.E. 954, 954-55 (1896); Unaka and City National Bank of Johnson City, Tennessee v. Lewis, 201 N.C. 148, 153, 159 S.E. 312, 314 (1931). But see Sample v. Jackson, 223 N.C. 335, 339, 26 S.E.2d 876, 879 (1943) (dictum) (stating that the North Carolina test is ability to pay debts). Also cf. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 25-1-201(23) (UCC definition of "insolvent" is a person who "has ceased to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business.")

Under former North Carolina fraudulent conveyance law, "insolvency" may not have been an element of a fraudulent conveyance so much as solvency (the retention of property "fully sufficient" for the satisfaction of creditors) was a defense. See former N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-17; Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 882-85. But see Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 150, 148 S.E.2d 1, 4 (1966) (holding it was an attacking creditor's burden to demonstrate that transferor was insolvent). Whether a debtor had retained property "fully sufficient" to satisfy his creditors was a jury issue; the courts generally took a case-by-case approach and allowed juries to consider all relevant factors. Garland v. Arrowood, 177 N.C. 371, 373, 99 S.E. 100, 102 (1919). Cf. Williams v. Hughes, 136 N.C. 58, 48 S.E. 518 (1904) (property retained held as a matter of law not to be fully sufficient). Rules for determining whether retained property was "fully sufficient" did emerge: exempt property was not to be considered; contingent liabilities were to be valued at the amount of the debtor's probable ultimate liability. Williams v. Hughes, supra; Shuford v. Cook, 169 N.C. 52, 55, 85 S.E. 142, 144 (1915).

Subsection (b) creates a presumption that a person not generally paying his debts is insolvent. While there appear to be no North Carolina fraudulent conveyance cases that have recognized such a presumption, subsection (b) is consistent with North Carolina definitions of insolvency in some other contexts. See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 25-1-201(23) (UCC definition of insolvency); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-30-10(13) (definition of insolvency for purposes of laws dealing with insolvent insurance companies); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 53-1(3) (statute dealing with bank insolvency and including bank's inability to meet deposit liabilities within definition).

The definition of insolvency as it relates to partnerships (subsection (c)) appears to be without precedent in North Carolina fraudulent conveyance law, but follows from the concept of a partnership as an association of partners each of whom is liable for the partnership's debts. See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 59-45. Outside the context of fraudulent conveyance law, North Carolina has considered a partnership to be insolvent when the debts of the partnership have exceeded the assets of the partnership itself. Farmer v. Head, 175 N.C 273, 275-76, 95 S.E 567, 568 (1918).

No North Carolina cases have been located addressing the exclusion of assets that have been the subject of fraudulent transfers (subsection (d)) and the exclusion of debts to the extent they are secured (subsection (e)).

§ 39-23.3. Value.

(a) Value is given for a transfer or an obligation if, in exchange for the transfer or obligation, property is transferred or an antecedent debt is secured or satisfied, but value does not include an unperformed promise made otherwise than in the ordinary course of the promisor's business to furnish support to the debtor or another person.

(b) For the purposes of G.S. 39-23.4(a)(2) and G.S. 39-23.5, a person gives a reasonably equivalent value if the person acquires an interest of the debtor in an asset pursuant to a regularly conducted, noncollusive foreclosure sale or execution of a power of sale for the acquisition or disposition of the interest of the debtor upon default under a mortgage, deed of trust, or security agreement.

(c) A transfer is made for present value if the exchange between the debtor and the transferee is intended by them to be contemporaneous and is in fact substantially contemporaneous. (1997-291, s. 2; 1998-217, s. 6.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) This section defines "value" as used in various contexts in this Act, frequently with a qualifying adjective. The word appears in the following sections:

4(a)(2) ("reasonably equivalent value");
4(b)(8) ("value ... reasonably equivalent");
5(a) ("reasonably equivalent value");
5(b) ("present, reasonably equivalent value");
8(a) ("reasonably equivalent value");
8(b), (d), and (e) ("value");
8(f)(1) ("new value"); and
8(f)(3) ("present value").

(2) Section 3(a) is adapted from § 548(d)(2)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code. See also § 3(a) of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. The definition in Section 3 is not exclusive. "Value" is to be determined in light of the purpose of the Act to protect a debtor's estate from being depleted to the prejudice of the debtor's unsecured creditors. Consideration having no utility from a creditor's viewpoint does not satisfy the statutory definition. The definition does not specify all the kinds of consideration that do not constitute value for the purposes of this Act--e.g., love and affection. See, e.g., United States v. West, 299 F.Supp. 661, 666 (D.Del. 1969).

(3) Section 3(a) does not indicate what is "reasonably equivalent value" for a transfer or obligation. Under this Act, as under § 548(a)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, a transfer for security is ordinarily for a reasonably equivalent value notwithstanding a discrepancy between the value of the asset transferred and the debt secured, since the amount of the debt is the measure of the value of the interest in the asset that is transferred. See, e.g., Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Co. v. Holy Family Polish Nat'l Catholic Church, Carnegie, Pa., 341 Pa. 390, 19 A.2d 360 (1941). If, however, a transfer purports to secure more than the debt actually incurred or to be incurred, it may be found to be for less than a reasonably equivalent value. See e.g., In re Peoria Braumeister Co., 138 F.2d 520, 523 (7th Cir. 1943) (chattel mortgage securing a $3,000 note held to be fraudulent when the debt secured was only $2,500); Hartford Acc. & Indemnity Co. v. Jirasek, 254 Mich. 131, 140, 235 N.W. 836, 839 (1931) (quitclaim deed given as mortgage held to be fraudulent to the extent the value of the property transferred exceeded the indebtedness secured). If the debt is a fraudulent obligation under this Act, a transfer to secure it as well as the obligation would be vulnerable to attack as fraudulent. A transfer to satisfy or secure an antecedent debt owed an insider is also subject to avoidance under the conditions specified in Section 5(b).

(4) Section 3(a) of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act has been thought not to recognize that an unperformed promise could constitute fair consideration. See McLaughlin, Application of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, 46 Harv.L.Rev. 404, 414 (1933). Courts construing these provisions of the prior law nevertheless have held unperformed promises to constitute value in a variety of circumstances. See, e.g., Harper v. Lloyd's Factors, Inc., 214 F.2d 662 (2d Cir. 1954) (transfer of money for promise of factor to discount transferor's purchase-money notes given to fur dealer); Schlecht v. Schlecht, 168 Minn. 168, 176-77, 209 N.W. 883, 886-87 (1926) (transfer for promise to make repairs and improvements on transferor's homestead); Farmer's Exchange Bank v. Oneida Motor Truck Co., 202 Wis. 266, 232 N.W. 536 (1930) (transfer in consideration of assumption of certain of transferor's liabilities); see also Hummel v. Cernocky, 161 F.2d 685 (7th Cir. 1947) (transfer in consideration of cash, assumption of a mortgage, payment of certain debts, and agreement to pay other debts). Likewise a transfer in consideration of a negotiable note discountable at a commercial bank, or the purchase from an established, solvent institution of an insurance policy, annuity, or contract to provide care and accommodations clearly appears to be for value. On the other hand, a transfer for an unperformed promise by an individual to support a parent or other transferor has generally been held voidable as a fraud on creditors of the transferor. See, e.g., Springfield Ins. Co. v. Fry, 267 F.Supp. 693 (N.D.Okla. 1967); Sandler v. Parlapiano, 236 App.Div. 70, 258 N.Y.Supp. 88 (1st Dep't 1932); Warwick Municipal Employees Credit Union v. Higham, 106 R.E. 363, 259 A.2d 852 (1969); Hulsether v. Sanders, 54 S.D. 412, 223 N.W. 335 (1929); Cooper v. Cooper, 22 Tenn.App. 473, 477, 124 S.W.2d 264, 267 (1939); Note, Rights of Creditors in Property Conveyed in Consideration of Future Support, 45 Iowa L.Rev. 546, 550-62 (1960). This Act adopts the view taken in the cases cited in determining whether an unperformed promise is value.

(5) Subsection (b) rejects the rule of such cases as Durrett v. Washington Nat. Ins. Co., 621 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1980) (nonjudicial foreclosure of a mortgage avoided as a fraudulent transfer when the property of an insolvent mortgagor was sold for less than 70% of its fair value); and Abramson v. Lakewood Bank & Trust Co., 647 F.2d 547 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1164 (1982) (nonjudicial foreclosure held to be fraudulent transfer if made without fair consideration). Subsection (b) adopts the view taken in Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Madrid (In re Madrid), 21 B.R. 424 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982), aff'd on another ground, 725 F.2d 1197 (9th Cir. 1984), that the price bid at a public foreclosure sale determines the fair value of the property sold. Subsection (b) prescribes the effect of a sale meeting its requirements, whether the asset sold is personal or real property. The rule of this subsection applies to a foreclosure by sale of the interest of a vendee under an installment land contract in accordance with applicable law that requires or permits the foreclosure to be effected by a sale in the same manner as the foreclosure of a mortgage. See G.Osborne, G.Nelson, & D.Whitman, Real Estate Finance Law 83-84, 95-97 (1979). The premise of the subsection is that "a sale of the collateral by the secured party as the normal consequence of default . . . [is] the safest way of establishing the fair value of the collateral . . .." 2 G.Gilmore, Security Interests in Personal Property, 1227 (1965).

If a lien given an insider for a present consideration is not perfected as against a subsequent bona fide purchaser or is so perfected after a delay following an extension of credit secured by the lien, foreclosure of the lien may result in a transfer for an antecedent debt that is voidable under Section 5(b) infra. Subsection (b) does not apply to an action under Section 4(a)(1) to avoid a transfer or obligation because made or incurred with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor.

(6) Subsection (c) is an adaptation of § 547(c)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code. A transfer to an insider for an antecedent debt may be voidable under § 5(b) infra.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

Subsection (a) concerns itself with what constitutes "value." The term, qualified with adjectives (principally "reasonably equivalent value") appears throughout N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 39-23.4, -23.5 and -23.8. Two actions are stated to constitute the giving of "value": transfers of property and securing or satisfying prior debt.

Prior North Carolina law has dealt with what constitutes "full value" or "good consideration," terms that were employed in former N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 39-16 and -19. The inquiry has generally focused on the amount of consideration, however, rather than on its character. Two types of consideration that have been analyzed in prior law are prior indebtedness (so-called "antecedent debt") and unfulfilled ("executory") promises. As to antecedent debt, prior North Carolina law laid down the same rule as that set out in subsection (a): antecedent debt qualified as consideration. See Fowle v. McLean, 168 N.C. 537, 541, 84 S.E. 852, 854 (1915). See also Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 880-81.

Executory promises of support constituted consideration under prior North Carolina law, subject to a number of exceptions and limits. Services furnished to relatives were presumed to be gratuitous; the relationship of the parties could go far toward raising a presumption that a transfer involved fraudulent intent. See Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 881-82. Subsection (a) excludes from the definition of value unperformed promises to furnish support, subject only to an exception for a promise made in the ordinary course of the provisor's business. This blanket exclusion represents a change from prior North Carolina law. Subsection (a) does not expressly address unperformed promises other than to furnish support. But see Official Comment 4.

Subsection (b) rejects the so-called "Durrett" rule. See Durrett v. Washington National Ins. Co., 621 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1980) (dealing with the Bankruptcy Act provision analogous to Bankruptcy Code § 548(a)(2)); Official Comment 5. The Durrett rule has been rejected by the United States Supreme Court. BFP v. Resolution Trust Corp., 511 U.S. 531 (1994). There is no North Carolina law on this subject. However subsection (b) is consistent with the philosophy of North Carolina's unique Part 6 of Article 9 of the UCC (N.C. Gen. Stat. § 25-9-601 et seq.), which adopts a conclusive presumption that a sale conducted in a certain manner is commercially reasonable.

§ 39-23.4. Transfers fraudulent as to present and future creditors.

(a) A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation:

(1) With intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the debtor; or

(2) Without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor:

a. Was engaged or was about to engage in a business or a transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction; or

b. Intended to incur, or believed that the debtor would incur, debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they became due.

(b) In determining intent under subdivision (a)(1) of this section, consideration may be given, among other factors, to whether:

(1) The transfer or obligation was to an insider;

(2) The debtor retained possession or control of the property transferred after the transfer;

(3) The transfer or obligation was disclosed or concealed;

(4) Before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, the debtor had been sued or threatened with suit;

(5) The transfer was of substantially all the debtor's assets;

(6) The debtor absconded;

(7) The debtor removed or concealed assets;

(8) The value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred;

(9) The debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred;

(10) The transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred;

(11) The debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienor who transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor;

(12) The debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor reasonably should have believed that the debtor would incur debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they became due; and

(13) The debtor transferred the assets in the course of legitimate estate or tax planning. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) Section 4(a)(1) is derived from § 7 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. Factors appropriate for consideration in determining actual intent under paragraph (1) are specified in subsection (b).

(2) Section 4(a)(2) is derived from §§ 5 and 6 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act but substitutes "reasonably equivalent value" for "fair consideration." The transferee's good faith was an element of "fair consideration" as defined in § 3 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, and lack of fair consideration was one of the elements of a fraudulent transfer as defined in four sections of the Uniform Act. The transferee's good faith is irrelevant to a determination of the adequacy of the consideration under this Act, but lack of good faith may be a basis for withholding protection of a transferee or obligee under § 8 infra.

(3) Unlike the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act as originally promulgated, this Act does not prescribe different tests when a transfer is made for the purpose of security and when it is intended to be absolute. The premise of this Act is that when a transfer is for security only, the equity or value of the asset that exceeds the amount of the debt secured remains available to unsecured creditors and thus cannot be regarded as the subject of a fraudulent transfer merely because of the encumbrance resulting from an otherwise valid security transfer. Disproportion between the value of the asset securing the debt and the size of the debt secured does not, in the absence of circumstances indicating a purpose to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, constitute an impermissible hindrance to the enforcement of other creditors' rights against the debtor-transferor. Cf. U.C.C. § 9-311.

(4) Subparagraph (i) of § 4(a)(2) is an adaptation of § 5 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act but substitutes "unreasonably small [assets] in relation to the business or transaction" for "unreasonably small capital." The reference to "capital" in the Uniform Act is ambiguous in that it may refer to net worth or to the par value of stock or to the consideration received for stock issued. The special meanings of "capital" in corporation law have no relevance in the law of fraudulent transfers. The subparagraph focuses attention on whether the amount of all the assets retained by the debtor was inadequate, i.e., unreasonably small, in light of the needs of the business or transaction in which the debtor was engaged or about to engage.

(5) Subsection (b) is a nonexclusive catalogue of factors appropriate for consideration by the court in determining whether the debtor had an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud one or more creditors. Proof of the existence of any one or more of the factors enumerated in subsection (b) may be relevant evidence as to the debtor's actual intent but does not create a presumption that the debtor has made a fraudulent transfer or incurred a fraudulent obligation. The list of factors includes most of the badges of fraud that have been recognized by the courts in construing and applying the Statute of 13 Elizabeth and § 7 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. Proof of the presence of certain badges in combination establishes fraud conclusively—i.e., without regard to the actual intent of the parties--when they concur as provided in § 4(a)(2) or in § 5. The fact that a transfer has been made to a relative or to an affiliated corporation has not been regarded as a badge of fraud sufficient to warrant avoidance when unaccompanied by any other evidence of fraud. The courts have uniformly recognized, however, that a transfer to a closely related person warrants close scrutiny of the other circumstances, including the nature and extent of the consideration exchanged. See 1 G. Glenn, Fraudulent Conveyances and Preferences § 307 (Rev. ed. 1940). The second, third, fourth, and fifth factors listed are all adapted from the classic catalogue of badges of fraud provided by Lord Coke in Twyne's Case, 3 Coke 80b, 76 Eng.Rep. 809 (Star Chamber 1601). Lord Coke also included the use of a trust and the recitation in the instrument of transfer that it "was made honestly, truly, and bona fide," but the use of the trust is fraudulent only when accompanied by elements or badges specified in this Act, and recitals of "good faith" can no longer be regarded as significant evidence of a fraudulent intent.

(6) In considering the factors listed in § 4(b) a court should evaluate all the relevant circumstances involving a challenged transfer or obligation. Thus the court may appropriately take into account all indicia negativing as well as those suggesting fraud, as illustrated in the following reported cases:

(a) Whether the transfer or obligation was to an insider: Salomon v. Kaiser (In re Kaiser), 722 F.2d 1574, 1582-83 (2d Cir. 1983) (insolvent debtor's purchase of two residences in the name of his spouse and the creation of a dummy corporation for the purpose of concealing assets held to evidence fraudulent intent); Banner Construction Corp. v. Arnold, 128 So.2d 893 (Fla.Dist.App. 1961) (assignment by one corporation to another having identical directors and stockholders constituted a badge of fraud); Travelers Indemnity Co. v. Cormaney, 258 Iowa 237, 138 N.W.2d 50 (1965) (transfer between spouses said to be a circumstance that shed suspicion on the transfer and that with other circumstances warranted avoidance); Hatheway v. Hanson, 230 Iowa 386, 297 N.W. 824 (1941) (transfer from parent to child said to require a critical examination of surrounding circumstances, which, together with other indicia of fraud, warranted avoidance); Lumpkins v. McPhee, 59 N.M. 442, 286 P.2d 299 (1955) (transfer from daughter to mother said to be indicative of fraud but transfer held not to be fraudulent due to adequacy of consideration and delivery of possession by transferor).

(b) Whether the transferor retained possession or control of the property after the transfer: Harris v. Shaw, 224 Ark. 150, 272 S.W.2d 53 (1954) (retention of property by transferor said to be a badge of fraud and, together with other badges, to warrant avoidance of transfer); Stephens v. Reginstein, 89 Ala. 561, 8 So. 68 (1890) (transferor's retention of control and management of property and business after transfer held material in determining transfer to be fraudulent); Allen v. Massey, 84 U.S. (17 Wall.) 351 (1872) (joint possession of furniture by transferor and transferee considered in holding transfer to be fraudulent); Warner v. Norton, 61 U.S. (20 How.) 448 (1857) (surrender of possession by transferor deemed to negate allegations of fraud).

(c) Whether the transfer or obligation was concealed or disclosed: Walton v. First National Bank, 13 Colo. 265, 22 P. 440 (1889) (agreement between parties to conceal the transfer from the public said to be one of the strongest badges of fraud); Warner v. Norton, 61 U.S. (20 How.) 448 (1857) (although secrecy said to be a circumstance from which, when coupled with other badges, fraud may be inferred, transfer was held not to be fraudulent when made in good faith and transferor surrendered possession); W.T. Raleigh Co. v. Barnett, 253 Ala. 433, 44 So.2d 585 (1950) (failure to record a deed in itself said not to evidence fraud, and transfer held not to be fraudulent).

(d) Whether, before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, a creditor sued or threatened to sue the debtor: Harris v. Shaw, 224 Ark. 150, 272 S.W. 2d 53 (1954) (transfer held to be fraudulent when causally connected to pendency of litigation and accompanied by other badges of fraud); Pergrem v. Smith, 255 S.W.2d 42 (Ky.App. 1953) (transfer in anticipation of suit deemed to be a badge of fraud; transfer held fraudulent when accompanied by insolvency of transferor who was related to transferee); Bank of Sun Prairie v. Hovig, 218 F.Supp. 769 (W.D.Ark. 1963) (although threat or pendency of litigation said to be an indicator of fraud, transfer was held not to be fraudulent when adequate consideration and good faith were shown).

(e) Whether the transfer was of substantially all the debtor's assets: Walbrun v. Babbitt, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 577 (1872) (sale by insolvent retail shop owner of all of his inventory in a single transaction held to be fraudulent); Cole v. Mercantile Trust Co., 133 N.Y. 164, 30 N.E. 847 (1892) (transfer of all property before plaintiff could obtain a judgment held to be fraudulent); Lumpkins v. McPhee, 59 N.M. 442, 286 P.2d 299 (1955) (although transfer of all assets said to indicate fraud, transfer held not to be fraudulent because full consideration was paid and transferor surrendered possession).

(f) Whether the debtor had absconded: In re Thomas, 199 F. 214 (N.D.N.Y. 1912) (when debtor collected all of his money and property with the intent to abscond, fraudulent intent was held to be shown).

(g) Whether the debtor had removed or concealed assets: Bentley v. Young, 210 F. 202 (S.D.N.Y 1914), aff'd, 223 F. 536 (2d Cir. 1915) (debtor's removal of goods from store to conceal their whereabouts and to sell them held to render sale fraudulent); Cioli v. Kenourgios, 59 Cal.App. 690, 211 P. 838 (1922) (debtor's sale of all assets and shipment of proceeds out of the country held to be fraudulent notwithstanding adequacy of consideration).

(h) Whether the value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred: Toomay v. Graham, 151 S.W.2d 119 (Mo.App. 1941) (although mere inadequacy of consideration said not to be a badge of fraud, transfer held to be fraudulent when accompanied by badges of fraud); Texas Sand Co. v. Shield, 381 S.W.2d 48 (Tex. 1964) (inadequate consideration said to be an indicator of fraud, and transfer held to be fraudulent because of inadequate consideration, pendency of suit, family relationship of transferee, and fact that all nonexempt property was transferred); Weigel v. Wood, 355 Mo. 11, 194 S.W.2d 40 (1946) (although inadequate consideration said to be a badge of fraud, transfer held not to be fraudulent when inadequacy not gross and not accompanied by any other badge; fact that transfer was from father to son held not sufficient to establish fraud).

(i) Whether the debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was made or obligation was incurred: Harris v. Shaw, 224 Ark. 150, 272 S.W. 2d 53 (1954) (insolvency of transferor said to be a badge of fraud and transfer held fraudulent when accompanied by other badges of fraud); Bank of Sun Prairie v. Hovig, 218 F.Supp. 769 (W.D. Ark. 1963) (although the insolvency of the debtor said to be a badge of fraud, transfer held not fraudulent when debtor was shown to be solvent, adequate consideration was paid, and good faith was shown, despite the pendency of suit); Wareheim v. Bayliss, 149 Md. 103, 131 A. 27 (1925) (although insolvency of debtor acknowledged to be an indicator of fraud, transfer held not to be fraudulent when adequate consideration was paid and whether debtor was insolvent in fact was doubtful).

(j) Whether the transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred: Commerce Bank of Lebanon v. Halladale A Corp., 618 S.W. 2d 288, 292 (Mo.App. 1981) (when transferors incurred substantial debts near in time to the transfer, transfer was held to be fraudulent due to inadequate consideration, close family relationship, the debtor's retention of possession, and the fact that almost all the debtor's property was transferred).

(7) The effect of the two transfers described in § 4(b)(11), if not avoided, may be to permit a debtor and a lienor to deprive the debtor's unsecured creditors of access to the debtor's assets for the purpose of collecting their claims while the debtor, the debtor's affiliate or insider, and the lienor arrange for the beneficial use or disposition of the assets in accordance with their interests. The kind of disposition sought to be reached here is exemplified by that found in Northern Pacific Co. v. Boyd, 228 U.S. 482 (1913), the leading case in establishing the absolute priority doctrine in reorganization law. There the Court held that a reorganization whereby the secured creditors and the management-owners retained their economic interests in a railroad through a foreclosure that cut off claims of unsecured creditors against its assets was in effect a fraudulent disposition (id. at 502-05). See Frank, Some Realistic Reflections on Some Aspects of Corporate Reorganization, 19 Va. L.Rev. 541, 693 (1933). For cases in which an analogous injury to unsecured creditors was inflicted by a lienor and a debtor, see Jackson v. Star Sprinkler Corp. of Florida, 575 F.2d 1223, 1231-34 (8th Cir. 1978); Heath v. Helmick, 173 F.2d 157, 161-62 (9th Cir. 1949); Toner v. Nuss, 234 F.S. 457, 461-62 (E.D.Pa. 1964); and see In re Spotless Tavern Co., Inc., 4 F.Supp. 752, 753, 755 (D.Md. 1933).

(8) Nothing in § 4(b) is intended to affect the application of § 2-402(2), 9-205, 9-301, or 6-105 of the Uniform Commercial Code. Section 2-402(2) recognizes the generally prevailing rule that retention of possession of goods by a seller may be fraudulent but limits the application of the rule by negating any imputation of fraud from "retention of possession in good faith and current course of trade by a merchant-seller for a commercially reasonable time after a sale or identification." Section 9-205 explicitly negates any imputation of fraud from the grant of liberty by a secured creditor to a debtor to use, commingle, or dispose of personal property collateral or to account for its proceeds. The section recognizes that it does not relax prevailing requirements for delivery of possession by a pledgor. Moreover, the section does not mitigate the general requirement of § 9-301(1)(b) that a nonpossessory security interest in personal property must be accompanied by notice-filing to be effective against a levying creditor. Finally, like the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act this Act does not pre-empt the statutes governing bulk transfers, such as Article 6 of the Uniform Commercial Code. Compliance with the cited sections of the Uniform Commercial Code does not, however, insulate a transfer or obligation from avoidance. Thus a sale by an insolvent debtor for less than a reasonably equivalent value would be voidable under this Act notwithstanding compliance with the Uniform Commercial Code.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

This section and N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.5 are the primary provisions of the UFTA, as they define which transfers are voidable.

This section differs from the version promulgated by the NCCUSL in three respects. The General Assembly deleted the phrase "or reasonably should have believed" in subsubdivision (a)(2)b. and added subdivision (b)(12). Because the drafters believed that this change converted constructive intent from an element of a conveyance deemed fraudulent to a factor to be considered in determining intent, the phrase "actual intent" was changed to "intent" in subsubdivision (a)(2)b. and the introductory language of subsection (b). The General Assembly also added subdivision (b)(13).

The reference to "obligation incurred" in subsection (a) represents a change from prior North Carolina law, and reflects a recognition that a debtor can harm creditors by incurring a fraudulent debt as well as by making a fraudulent transfer.

Except for the change described in the preceding sentence, subdivision (a)(1) does not change fraudulent transfer law in North Carolina. Under prior law, once a creditor had shown actual fraud on the part of the debtor, the transfer was void whether the creditor's claim was in existence at the time of the transaction or arose subsequently. See generally Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 887. Subdivision (a)(1) is subject to an important limitation: under N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.8(a), a transfer or obligation is not voidable under subdivision (a)(1) against a person who took in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value. With that limitation, subdivision (a)(1) is consistent with prior North Carolina law. See former N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-19; Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 227, 81 S.E. 162, 164 (1914) (principle four).

Subdivision (a)(2) is intended to address transactions for less than "reasonably equivalent value" that leave a debtor undercapitalized (see Official Comment 4) and applies both to present and subsequent creditors. It should be contrasted with N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.5(a), which addresses transactions for less than "reasonably equivalent value" made when a debtor is or becomes "insolvent" but which applies only to creditors whose claims arose before the transaction.

Prior North Carolina law invalidated transactions for less than a "reasonably fair price" when the debtor failed "to retain property fully sufficient and available to pay his debts then existing." Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 227, 18 S.E. 162, 164 (1914) (principle two). The rule clearly applied to transactions occurring when a debtor was "insolvent" in a "balance sheet" sense. See North Carolina Comment to N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.2. Under prior law a subsequent creditor could use the fact that a conveyance left a business with "unreasonably small capital" as evidence of fraud, but the creditor nevertheless would have to prove fraudulent intent in order to void the conveyance. Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 888.

Subdivision (a)(2) refers to transactions causing a debtor to incur debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they become due. As noted, under prior law when a debtor engaged in a transaction for less than a "reasonably fair price" and failed "to retain property fully sufficient and available to pay his creditors then existing," the transaction generally was voidable only by a creditor whose claim was in existence as of the time of the transaction in question. See North Carolina Comment to N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.5. Subdivision (a)(2) broadens prior law since it can be invoked "whether the creditor's claim arose before or after" the transaction.

Subsection (b) is a non-exclusive list of "badges of fraud" that can be considered in establishing a debtor's fraudulent intent within the meaning of subdivision (a)(1). North Carolina law has long recognized "badges of fraud" in fraudulent conveyance litigation, see, e.g., Peebles v. Horton, 64 N.C. 374, 377 (1870), and decisions have identified several of the factors enumerated in subsection (b). Among these factors are close family relationship (Wurlitzer Dist. Corp. v. Schofield, 44 N.C. App. 520, 529, 261 S.E.2d 688, 694 (1980), Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 130, 252 S.E.2d 826, 833 (1979), Unaka & City Nat'l Bank v. Lewis, 201 N.C. 148, 156, 159 S.E. 312, 316-17 (1931), Peeler v. Peeler, 109 N.C. 628, 634, 14 S.E. 59, 62 (1891)); retention of possession (Piedmont Sav. Bank v. Levy, 138 N.C. 274, 50 S.E. 657 (1905)); secrecy (Reiger v. Davis, 67 N.C. 185, 189 (1872)); and pending litigation (Helms v. Green, 105 N.C. 251, 262, 11 S.E. 470, 474 (1890)). As noted above, subdivision (b)(12) incorporates language deleted from UFTA § 4(a), where it would have had a more automatic effect, rather than being a "factor" that "may" be considered, and subdivision (b)(13) is wholly new.

Under prior law certain combinations of "badges of fraud" could give rise to a rebuttable presumption of fraudulent intent. Howard, 50 N.C. L. Rev. at 891-893. According to Official Comment 5, however, proof of the existence of any one or more of the factors enumerated in subsection (b) may be relevant evidence as to the debtor's intent but does not create a presumption that the debtor has engaged in a fraudulent transaction.

CASE NOTES

Intent to Defraud. — Evidence was insufficient to establish that payments made by a corporation to its president were made with intent to defraud. Norman Owen Trucking, Inc. v. Morkoski, 131 N.C. App. 168, 506 S.E.2d 267 (1998).

Real Property Transfers Found Fraudulent. — Summary judgment was properly granted to a bank seeking to set aside real property transfers by a loan guarantor to her children and their spouses based on the following statutory factors: transferring the property to insiders; retaining control and income of the property after the transfers; making the transfers after a suit had been threatened or initiated; transferring almost all of the transferor's assets; and receiving less than reasonably equivalent value for deeded property. Triangle Bank v. Eatmon, 143 N.C. App. 521, 547 S.E.2d 92 (2001).

Voluntary Nature of Payments. — Evidence was insufficient to establish that payments made by a corporation to its president were voluntary or "not for value" where there was no evidence as to the value, or lack thereof, of services provided by the president to the corporation in return for the payments. Norman Owen Trucking, Inc. v. Morkoski, 131 N.C. App. 168, 506 S.E.2d 267 (1998).

§ 39-23.5. Transfers fraudulent as to present creditors.

(a) A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor was insolvent at that time or the debtor became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation.

(b) A transfer made by a debtor is voidable as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made if the transfer was made to an insider for an antecedent debt, the debtor was insolvent at that time, and the insider had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) Subsection (a) is derived from § 4 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. It adheres to the limitation of the protection of that section to a creditor who extended credit before the transfer or obligation described. As pointed out in Comment (2) accompanying § 4, this Act substitutes "reasonably equivalent value" for "fair consideration."

(2) Subsection (b) renders a preferential transfer—i.e., a transfer by an insolvent debtor for or on account of an antecedent debt--to an insider vulnerable as a fraudulent transfer when the insider had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent. This subsection adopts for general application the rule of such cases as Jackson Sound Studios, Inc. v. Travis, 473 F.2d 503 (5th Cir. 1973) (security transfer of corporation's equipment to corporate principal's mother perfected on eve of bankruptcy of corporation held to be fraudulent); In re Lamie Chemical Co., 296 F. 24 (4th Cir. 1924) (corporate preference to corporate officers and directors held voidable by receiver when corporation was insolvent or nearly so and directors had already voted for liquidation); Stuart v. Larson, 298 F. 223 (8th Cir. 1924), noted 38 Harv.L.Rev. 521 (1925) (corporate preference to director held voidable). See generally 2 G. Glenn, Fraudulent Conveyances and Preferences 386 (rev. ed. 1940). Subsection (b) overrules such cases as Epstein v. Goldstein, 107 F.2d 755, 757 (2d Cir. 1939) (transfer by insolvent husband to wife to secure his debt to her sustained against attack by husband's trustee); Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. v. Jirasek, 254 Mich. 131, 139, 235 N.W. 836, 389 (1931) (mortgage given by debtor to his brother to secure an antecedent debt owed the brother sustained as not fraudulent).

(3) Subsection (b) does not extend as far as § 8(a) of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act and § 548(b) of the Bankruptcy Code in rendering voidable a transfer or obligation incurred by an insolvent partnership to a partner, who is an insider of the partnership. The transfer to the partner is not vulnerable to avoidance under § 4(b) unless the transfer was for an antecedent debt and the partner had reasonable cause to believe that the partnership was insolvent. The cited provisions of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act and the Bankruptcy Act make any transfer by an insolvent partnership to a partner voidable. Avoidance of the partnership transfer without reference to the partner's state of mind and the nature of the consideration exchanged would be unduly harsh treatment of the creditors of the partner and unduly favorable to the creditors of the partnership.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

As in N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.4(a), subsection (a) here adds "obligation incurred" as potential subjects of fraudulent transfer law. In other respects subsection (a) corresponds to principle two of Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 227, 81 S.E. 162, 164 (1914), which invalidated conveyances for less than a "reasonably fair price" where the debtor "did not retain property fully sufficient and available to pay his debts then existing." Subsection (a) is narrower than prior law in one respect, however. Prior law gave standing to challenge a transaction only to creditors with claims in existence at the time of the transaction that remained unpaid, see Powell Bros. v. McMullan Lumber Co., 153 N.C. 52, 58, 68 S.E. 926, 928-29 (1910), but once the transaction was voided, subsequent creditors could participate in the redistribution of assets recovered. Subsection (a), however, states only that the defined category of transactions "is fraudulent as to a creditor whose claim arose before" the transaction.

The effect of subsection (b) is to create a cause of action for "insider preferences" roughly comparable to similar claims under § 547 of the United States Bankruptcy Code (11 U.S.C. § 547). Unlike 11 U.S.C. § 547, however, subsection (b) contains the requirement that the insider must have had "reasonable cause to believe" the debtor was insolvent. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.8(f) contains several defenses addressed specifically to subsection (b).

Subsection (b) has no counterpart under prior North Carolina law.

Voluntary Nature of Payments. — Evidence was insufficient to establish that payments made by a corporation to its president were voluntary or "not for value" where there was no evidence as to the value, or lack thereof, of services provided by the president to the corporation in return for the payments. Intent to defraud. — Evidence was insufficient to establish that payments made by a corporation to its president were made with intent to defraud. Norman Owen Trucking, Inc. v. Morkoski, 131 N.C. App. 168, 506 S.E.2d 267 (1998).

§ 39-23.6. When transfer is made or obligation is incurred.

For the purposes of this Article:

(1) A transfer is made:

a. With respect to an asset that is real property other than a fixture, but including the interest of a seller or purchaser under a contract for the sale of the asset, when the transfer is so far perfected that a good-faith purchaser of the asset from the debtor against whom applicable law permits the transfer to be perfected cannot acquire an interest in the asset that is superior to the interest of the transferee; and

b. With respect to an asset that is not real property or that is a fixture, when the transfer is so far perfected that a creditor on a simple contract cannot acquire a judicial lien otherwise than under this Article that is superior to the interest of the transferee.

(2) If applicable law permits the transfer to be perfected as provided in subdivision (1) of this section and the transfer is not so perfected before the commencement of an action for relief under this Article, the transfer is deemed made immediately before the commencement of the action.

(3) If applicable law does not permit the transfer to be perfected as provided in subdivision (1) of this section, the transfer is made when it becomes effective between the debtor and the transferee.

(4) A transfer is not made until the debtor has acquired rights in the asset transferred.

(5) An obligation is incurred:

a. If oral, when it becomes effective between the parties; or

b. If evidenced by a writing, when the writing executed by the obligor is delivered to or for the benefit of the obligee. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

(1) One of the uncertainties in the law governing the avoidance of fraudulent transfers and obligations is the difficulty of determining when the cause of action arises. Subsection (b) clarifies this point in time. For transfers of real estate Section 6(1) fixes the time as the date of perfection against a good faith purchaser from the transferor and for transfers of fixtures and assets constituting personalty, the time is fixed as the date of perfection against a judicial lien creditor not asserting rights under this Act. Perfection typically is effected by notice-filing, recordation, or delivery of unequivocal possession. See U.C.C. §§ 9-302, 9-304, and 9-305 (security interest in personal property perfected by notice-filing or delivery of possession to transferee); 4 American Law of Property § 17.10-17.12 (1952) (recordation of transfer or delivery of possession to grantee required for perfection against bona fide purchaser from grantor). The provision for postponing the time a transfer is made until its perfection is an adaptation of § 548(d)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code. When no steps are taken to perfect a transfer that applicable law permits to be perfected, the transfer is deemed by paragraph (2) to be perfected immediately before the filing of an action to avoid it; without such a provision to cover that eventuality, an unperfected transfer would arguably be immune to attack. Some transfers--e.g., an assignment of a bank account, creation of a security interest in money, or execution of a marital or premarital agreement for the disposition of property owned by the parties to the agreement--may not be amenable to perfection as against a bona fide purchaser or judicial lien creditor. When a transfer is not perfectible as provided in paragraph (11), the transfer occurs for the purpose of this Act when the transferor effectively parts with an interest in the asset as provided in § 1(12) supra.

(2) Paragraph (4) requires the transferor to have rights in the asset transferred before the transfer is made for the purpose of this section. This provision makes clear that its purpose may not be circumvented by notice-filing or recordation of a document evidencing an interest in an asset to be acquired in the future. Cf. Bankruptcy Code § 547(e); U.C.C. § 9-203(1)(c).)

(3) Paragraph (5) is new. It is intended to resolve uncertainty arising from Rubin v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., 661 F.2d 979, 989-91, 997 (2d Cir. 1981), insofar as that case holds that an obligation of guaranty may be deemed to be incurred when advances covered by the guaranty are made rather than when the guaranty first became effective between the parties. Compare Rosenberg, Intercorporate Guaranties and the Law of Fraudulent Conveyances: Lender Beware, 125 U.Pa.L.Rev. 235, 256-57 (1976).

An obligation may be avoided as fraudulent under this Act if it is incurred under the circumstances specified in § 4(a) or § 5(a). The debtor may receive reasonably equivalent value in exchange for an obligation incurred even though the benefit to the debtor is indirect. See Rubin v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., 661 F.2d at 991-92; Williams v. Twin City Co., 251 F.2d 678, 681 (9th Cir. 1958); Rosenberg, supra at 243-46.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENTARY

Subdivision (1) provides a general rule that is consistent with the rule found in bankruptcy law, see 11 U.S.C. §§ 548(d), 547(e)(1), and with the insolvency law North Carolina applies to insurance companies, see N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-30-140(b).

Subdivision (4), providing that a transfer does not become effective until the debtor has rights in the collateral, mirrors the comparable provision in Article 9 of the UCC, N.C. Gen. Stat. § 25-9-203(1)(c).

§ 39-23.7. Remedies of creditors.

(a) In an action for relief against a transfer or obligation under this Article, a creditor, subject to the limitations in G.S. 39-23.8, may obtain:

(1) Avoidance of the transfer or obligation to the extent necessary to satisfy the creditor's claim;

(2) An attachment or other provisional remedy against the asset transferred or other property of the transferee in accordance with the procedure prescribed by Article 35 of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes;

(3) Subject to applicable principles of equity and in accordance with applicable rules of civil procedure,

a. An injunction against further disposition by the debtor or a transferee, or both, of the asset transferred or of other property;

b. Appointment of a receiver to take charge of the asset transferred or of other property of the transferee; or

c. Any other relief the circumstances may require.

(b) If a creditor has obtained a judgment on a claim against the debtor, the creditor, if the court so orders, may levy execution on the asset transferred or its proceeds. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) This section is derived from §§ 9 and 10 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. Section 9 of that Act specified the remedies of creditors whose claims have matured, and § 10 enumerated the remedies available to creditors whose claims have not matured. A creditor holding an unmatured claim may be denied the right to receive payment for the proceeds of a sale on execution until his claim has matured, but the proceeds may be deposited in court or in an interest-bearing account pending the maturity of the creditor's claim. The remedies specified in this section are not exclusive.

(2) The availability of an attachment or other provisional remedy has been restricted by amendments of statutes and rules of procedure to reflect views of the Supreme Court expressed in Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp. of Bay View, 395 U.S. 337 (1969), and its progeny. This judicial development and the procedural changes that followed in its wake do not preclude resort to attachment by a creditor in seeking avoidance of a fraudulent transfer or obligation. See, e.g., Britton v. Howard Sav. Bank, 727 F.2d 315, 317-20 (3d Cir. 1984); Computer Sciences Corp. v. Sci-Tek Inc., 367 A.2d 658, 661 (Del. Super. 1976); Great Lakes Carbon Corp. v. Fontana, 54 A.D.2d 548, 387 N.Y.S. 2d 115 (1st Dep't 1976). Section 7(a)(2) continues the authorization for the use of attachment contained in § 9(b) of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, or of a similar provisional remedy, when the state's procedure provides therefor, subject to the constraints imposed by the due process clauses of the United States and state constitutions.

(3) Subsections (a) and (b) of § 10 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act authorized the court, in an action on a fraudulent transfer or obligation, to restrain the defendant from disposing of his property, to appoint a receiver to take charge of his property, or to make any order the circumstances may require. Section 10, however, applied only to a creditor whose claim was unmatured. There is no reason to restrict the availability of these remedies to such a creditor, and the courts have not so restricted them. See, e.g., Lipskey v. Voloshen, 155 Md. 139, 143-45, 141 Atl. 402, 404-05 (1928) (judgment creditor granted injunction against disposition of property by transferee, but appointment of receiver denied for lack of sufficient showing of need for such relief); Matthews v. Schusheim, 36 Misc. 2d 918, 922-23, 235 N.Y.S.2d 973, 976-77, 991-92 (Sup.Ct. 1962) (injunction and appointment of receiver granted to holder of claims for fraud, breach of contract, and alimony arrearages; whether creditor's claim was mature said to be immaterial); Oliphant v. Moore, 155 Tenn. 359, 362-63, 293 S.W. 541, 542 (1927) (tort creditor granted injunction restraining alleged tortfeasor's disposition of property).

(4) As under the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, a creditor is not required to obtain a judgment against the debtor-transferor or to have a matured claim in order to proceed under subsection (a). See § 1(3) and (4) supra; American Surety Co. v. Conner, 251 N.Y. 1, 166 N.E. 783, 65 A.L.R. 244 (1929); 1 G. Glenn, Fraudulent Conveyances and Preferences 129 (Rev.ed. 1940).

(5) The provision in subsection (b) for a creditor to levy execution on a fraudulently transferred asset continues the availability of a remedy provided in § 9(b) of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. See, e.g., Doland v. Burns Lbr. Co., 156 Minn. 238, 194 N.W. 636 (1923); Montana Ass'n of Credit Management v. Hergert, 181 Mont. 442, 449, 453, 593 P.2d 1059, 1063, 1065 (1979); Corbett v. Hunter, 292 Pa.Super. 123, 128, 436 A.2d 1036, 1038 (1981); see also American Surety Co. v. Conner, 251 N.Y. 1, 6, 166 N.E. 783, 784, 65 A.L.R. 244, 247 (1929) ("In such circumstances he [the creditor] might find it necessary to indemnify the sheriff and, when the seizure was erroneous, assumed the risk of error"); McLaughlin, Application of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, 46 Harv.L.Rev. 404, 441-42 (1933).

(6) The remedies specified in § 7, like those enumerated in §§ 9 and 10 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, are cumulative. Lind v. O. N. Johnson Co., 204 Minn. 30, 40, 282 N.W. 661, 667, 119 A.L.R. 940 (1939) (Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act held not to impair or limit availability of the "old practice" of obtaining judgment and execution returned unsatisfied before proceeding in equity to set aside a transfer); Conemaugh Iron Works Co. v. Delano Coal Co., Inc., 298 Pa. 182, 186, 148 A. 94, 95 (1929) (Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act held to give an "additional optional remedy" and not to "deprive a creditor of the right, as formerly, to work out his remedy at law"); 1 G. Glenn, Fraudulent Conveyances and Preferences 120, 130, 150 (Rev. ed. 1940).

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

The remedies provided in N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.7 are cumulative and are not exclusive. Subdivision (a)(1)'s remedy of avoiding the fraudulent transfer is consistent with prior North Carolina fraudulent conveyance law, which was derived from the Statute of 13 Elizabeth.

Attachment and other pre-judgment remedies or relief under subdivisions (a)(2) and (a)(3) are subject to applicable due process protections. They also are subject to the substantive and procedural requirements separately provided for those remedies under applicable law. See, e.g., N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 1-440.1, et seq.; 1A-1, Rule 65; 1-485, et seq.; and 1-501, et seq.

Any request for pre-judgment or post-judgment relief against a transferee under subsections (a)(3) or (b), or against an asset in the hands of a transferee, necessarily requires due process as to the transferee. For example, such a transferee has a right to notice and an opportunity to appear and assert the defenses and protections available under § 39-23.8. This is consistent with prior North Carolina law, which also required that the transferee be given notice of a fraudulent conveyance action. See, e.g., Dawson Bank v. Harris, 84 N.C. 206, 212 (1881).

§ 39-23.8. Defenses, liability, and protection of transferee.

(a) A transfer or obligation is not voidable under G.S. 39-23.4(a)(1) against a person who took in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value or against any subsequent transferee or obligee.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this section, to the extent a transfer is voidable in an action by a creditor under G.S. 39-23.7(a)(1), the creditor may recover judgment for the value of the asset transferred, as adjusted under subsection (c) of this section, or the amount necessary to satisfy the creditor's claim, whichever is less. The judgment may be entered against:

(1) The first transferee of the asset or the person for whose benefit the transfer was made; or

(2) Any subsequent transferee other than a good-faith transferee who took for value or from any subsequent transferee.

(c) If the judgment under subsection (b) of this section is based upon the value of the asset transferred, the judgment shall be for an amount equal to the value of the asset at the time of the transfer, subject to adjustment as the equities may require.

(d) Notwithstanding voidability of a transfer or an obligation under this Article, a good-faith transferee or obligee is entitled, to the extent of the value given the debtor for the transfer or obligation, to:

(1) A lien on or a right to retain any interest in the asset transferred;

(2) Enforcement of any obligation incurred; or

(3) A reduction in the amount of the liability on the judgment.

(e) A transfer is not voidable under G.S. 39-23.4(a)(2) or G.S. 39-23.5 if the transfer results from:

(1) Termination of a lease upon default by the debtor when the termination is pursuant to the lease and applicable law; or

(2) Enforcement of a security interest in compliance with Article 9 of Chapter 25 of the General Statutes, the Uniform Commercial Code.

(f) A transfer is not voidable under G.S. 39-23.5(b):

(1) To the extent the insider gave new value to or for the benefit of the debtor after the transfer was made unless the new value was secured by a valid lien;

(2) If made in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the insider; or

(3) If made pursuant to a good-faith effort to rehabilitate the debtor, and the transfer secured present value given for that purpose as well as an antecedent debt of the debtor. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) Subsection (a) states the rule that applies when the transferee establishes a complete defense to the action for avoidance based on Section 4(a)(1). The subsection is an adaptation of the exception stated in § 9 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. The person who invokes this defense carries the burden of establishing good faith and the reasonable equivalence of the consideration exchanged. Chorost v. Grand Rapids Factory Showrooms, Inc., 77 F. Supp. 276, 280 (D.N.J. 1948), aff'd, 172 F.2d 327, 329 (3d Cir. 1949).

(2) Subsection (b) is derived from § 550(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. The value of the asset transferred is limited to the value of the levyable interest on the transferor, exclusive of any interest encumbered by a valid lien. See § 1(2) supra.

(3) Subsection (c) is new. The measure of the recovery of a defrauded creditor against a fraudulent transferee is usually limited to the value of the asset transferred at the time of the transfer. See, e.g., United States v. Fernon, 640 F.2d 609, 611 (5th Cir. 1981); Hamilton Nat'l Bank of Boston v. Halstead, 134 N.Y. 520, 31 N.E. 900 (1892); cf. Buffum v. Peter Barceloux Co., 289 U.S. 227 (1932) (transferee's objection to trial court's award of highest value of asset between the date of the transfer and the date of the decree of avoidance rejected because an award measured by value as of time of the transfer plus interest from that date would have been larger). The premise of § 8(c) is that changes in value of the asset transferred that occur after the transfer should ordinarily not affect the amount of the creditor's recovery. Circumstances may require a departure from that measure of the recovery, however, as the cases decided under the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act and other laws derived from the Statute of 13 Elizabeth illustrate. Thus, if the value of the asset at the time of levy and sale to enforce the judgment of the creditor has been enhanced by improvements of the asset transferred or discharge of liens on the property, a good faith transferee should be reimbursed for the outlay for such a purpose to the extent the sale proceeds were increased thereby. See Bankruptcy Code § 550(d); Janson v. Schier, 375 A.2d 1159, 1160 (N.H. 1977); Anno., 8 A.L.R. 527 (1920). If the value of the asset has been diminished by severance and disposition of timber or minerals or fixtures, the transferee should be liable for the amount of the resulting reduction. See Damazo v. Wahby, 269 Md. 252, 257, 305 A.2d 138, 142 (1973). If the transferee has collected rents, harvested crops, or derived other income from the use or occupancy of the asset after the transfer, the liability of the transferee should be limited in any event to the net income after deduction of the expense incurred in earning the income. Anno., 60 A.L.R.2d 593 (1958). On the other hand, adjustment for the equities does not warrant an award to the creditor of consequential damages alleged to accrue from mismanagement of the asset after the transfer.

(4) Subsection (d) is an adaptation of § 548(c) of the Bankruptcy Code. An insider who receives property or an obligation from an insolvent debtor as security for or in satisfaction of an antecedent debt of the transferor or obligor is not a good faith transferee or obligee if the insider has reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent at the time the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.

(5) Subsection (e)(1) rejects the rule adopted in Darby v. Atkinson (In re Farris), 415 F.Supp. 33, 39-41 (W.D.Okla. 1976), that termination of a lease on default in accordance with its terms and applicable law may constitute a fraudulent transfer. Subsection (e)(2) protects a transferee who acquires a debtor's interest in an asset as a result of the enforcement of a secured creditor's rights pursuant to and in compliance with the provisions of Part 5 of Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code. Cf. Calaiaro v. Pittsburgh Nat'l Bank (In re Ewing), 33 B.R. 288, 9 C.B.C.2d 526, CCH B.L.R. 69,460 (Bk.W.D.Pa. 1983) (sale of pledged stock held subject to avoidance as fraudulent transfer in § 548 of the Bankruptcy Code), rev'd, 36 B.R. 476 (W.D.Pa. 1984) (transfer held not voidable because deemed to have occurred more than one year before bankruptcy petition filed). Although a secured creditor may enforce rights in collateral without a sale under § 9-502 or § 9-505 of the Code, the creditor must proceed in good faith (U.C.C. § 9-103) and in a "commercially reasonable" manner. The "commercially reasonable" constraint is explicit in U.C.C. § 9-502(2) and is implicit in § 9-505. See 2 G. Gilmore, Security Interests in Personal Property 1224-27 (1965).

(6) Subsection (f) provides additional defenses against the avoidance of a preferential transfer to an insider under § 5(b).

Paragraph (1) is adapted from § 547(c)(4) of the Bankruptcy Code, which permits a preferred creditor to set off the amount of new value subsequently advanced against the recovery of a voidable preference by a trustee in bankruptcy to the debtor without security. The new value may consist not only of money, goods, or services delivered on unsecured credit but also of the release of a valid lien. See, e.g., In re Ira Haupt & Co., 424 F.2d 722, 724 (2d Cir. 1970); Baranow v. Gibraltor Factors Corp. (In re Hygrade Envelope Co.), 393 F.2d 60, 65-67 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 837 (1968); In re John Morrow & Co., 134 F.686, 688 (S.D.Ohio 1901). It does not include an obligation substituted for a prior obligation. If the insider receiving the preference thereafter extends new credit to the debtor but also takes security from the debtor, the injury to the other creditors resulting from the preference remains undiminished by the new credit. On the other hand, if a lien taken to secure the new credit is itself voidable by a judicial lien creditor of the debtor, the new value received by the debtor may appropriately be treated as unsecured and applied to reduce the liability of the insider for the preferential transfer.

Paragraph (2) is derived from § 546(c)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, which excepts certain payments made in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs from avoidance by the trustee in bankruptcy as preferential transfers. Whether a transfer was in the "ordinary course" requires a consideration of the pattern of payments or secured transactions engaged in by the debtor and the insider prior to the transfer challenged under § 5(b). See Tait & Williams, Bankruptcy Preference Laws: The Scope of Section 547(c)(2), 99 Banking L.J. 55, 63-66 (1982). The defense provided by paragraph (2) is available, irrespective of whether the debtor or the insider or both are engaged in business, but the prior conduct or practice of both the debtor and the insider-transferee is relevant.

Paragraph (3) is new and reflects a policy judgment that an insider who has previously extended credit to a debtor should not be deterred from extending further credit to the debtor in a good faith effort to save the debtor from a forced liquidation in bankruptcy or otherwise. A similar rationale has sustained the taking of security from an insolvent debtor for an advance to enable the debtor to stave off bankruptcy and extricate itself from financial stringency. Blackman v. Bechtel, 80 F.2d 505, 508-09 (8th Cir. 1935); Olive v. Tyler (In re Chelan Land Co.), 257 F.497, 5 A.L.R. 561 (9th Cir. 1919); In re Robin Bros. Bakeries, Inc., 22 F.S. 662, 663-64 (N.D.Ill. 1937); see Dean v. Davis, 242 U.S. 438, 444 (1917). The amount of the present value given, the size of the antecedent debt secured, and the likelihood of success for the rehabilitative effort are relevant considerations in determining whether the transfer was in good faith.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

Subsection (a) is consistent with former fraudulent conveyance law in North Carolina. See, e.g., former N. C. Gen. Stat. § 39-19; Aman v. Walker, 165 N.C. 224, 81 S.E.2d 162 (1914) (principle four). A transferee has the burden of establishing good faith and the reasonable equivalence of the consideration exchanged. Subsection (b) restricts a complaining creditor to relief equal to the lesser of the amount of his claim or the value of the property transferred, and in this respect is comparable to section 550(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 550(a). Unlike former N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-15, which provided only for avoidance of a conveyance in its entirety, subsection (b) establishes limits on a transferee's liability.

Subsection (c) is significant if the value of an asset has changed while in the hands of a transferee. As a matter of equity, when a transferee has enhanced the asset's value through improvements, the transferee should be entitled to retain the value of that increase despite avoidance of the transfer. Similarly, when a transferee has decreased the value (for example, by mining, harvesting timber or removing pre-existing improvements or fixtures), the transferee should be liable for the reduction. Subsection (c) allows a court, through application of equitable principles, to allocate post-transfer changes in value among the competing parties, which was not an issue specifically addressed under prior North Carolina statute or case law.

Subsection (d) provides that, when a transfer is avoided, a good faith transferee who gave less than reasonably equivalent value does not forfeit the value of the consideration given. It is an adaptation of section 548(c) of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 548(c), and preserves for a transferee specific rights in the property to the extent of actual value given. North Carolina's former fraudulent conveyance statutes did not provide similar protections for a good faith transferee, nor had the North Carolina courts addressed this issue.

Subsection (f) allows insiders certain additional defenses for transfers otherwise avoidable under N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.5(b), which effectively balances that section's refusal to allow an insider's antecedent debt to qualify as reasonably equivalent value. Subsection (f) is derived from section 547(c) of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 547(c). The foundation of each of these defenses to "preferential" payment of insider debts — new value, ordinary course of business or financial affairs, and contemporaneous provision of value given in good faith to rehabilitate — is that encouraging normalized dealings with a financially distressed debtor may help that debtor avoid insolvency, receivership or bankruptcy, which is in the best interests of all creditors.

§ 39-23.9. Extinguishment of cause of action.

A cause of action with respect to a fraudulent or voidable transfer or obligation under this Article is extinguished unless action is brought:

(1) Under G.S. 39-23.4(a)(1), within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred or, if later, within one year after the transfer or obligation was or could reasonably have been discovered by the claimant;

(2) Under G.S. 39-23.4(a)(2) or G.S. 39-23.5(a), within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred; or

(3) Under G.S. 39-23.5(b), within one year after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

(1) This section is new. Its purpose is to make clear that lapse of the statutory periods prescribed by the section bars the right and not merely the remedy. See Restatement of Conflict of Laws 2d § 143 Comments (b) and (c) (1971). The section rejects the rule applied in United States v. Gleneagles Inv. Co., 565 F.S. 556, 583 (M.D.Pa. 1983) (state statute of limitations held not to apply to action by United States based on Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act).

(2) Statutes of limitations applicable to the avoidance of fraudulent transfers and obligations vary widely from state to state and are frequently subject to uncertainties in their application. See Hesson, The Statute of Limitations in Actions to Set Aside Fraudulent Conveyances and in Actions Against Directors by Creditors of Corporations, 32 Cornell L.Q. 222 (1946); Annos., 76 A.L.R. 864 (1932), 128 A.L.R. 1289 (1940), 133 A.L.R. 1311 (1941), 14 A.L.R.2d 598 (1950), and 100 A.L.R.2d 1094 (1965). Together with § 6, this section should mitigate the uncertainty and diversity that have characterized the decisions applying statutes of limitations to actions to fraudulent transfers and obligations. The periods prescribed apply, whether the action under this Act is brought by the creditor defrauded or by a purchaser at a sale on execution levied pursuant to § 7(b) and whether the action is brought against the original transferee or subsequent transferee. The prescription of statutory periods of limitation does not preclude the barring of an avoidance action for laches. See § 10 and the accompanying Comment infra.

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

The UFTA's limitations provisions make some change to the limitations period previously prescribed under North Carolina law. Under prior law, the limitations period applicable to fraudulent conveyances was three years and the limitations period began to run as of the time when the fraud was known or should have been discovered by the aggrieved party. Cowart v. Whitley, 39 N.C. App. 662, 664, 251 S.E.2d 627, 629 (1979).

The UFTA provides for three limitations periods. As to transfers made with actual intent to defraud, there is a four year statute that accrues upon the date of transfer, but with a proviso that an aggrieved party shall have a minimum limitations period of one year from the date the transfer was or reasonably could have been discovered. As to claims based on a transfer in which the debtor does not receive reasonably equivalent value, the limitations period is four years from the date of transfer. The limitations period for a transfer to an insider in payment of an antecedent debt is one year.

The introductory language of this section, which speaks in terms of a cause of action being "extinguished," is intended to indicate that lapse of the statutory period bars the right as well as the remedy. Thus, the discovery rule of N.C. Gen. Stat. § 1-52(9) would not apply to claims within subsections (b) or (c), even if such claims were made under circumstances such that N.C. Gen. Stat. § 1-52(9) would otherwise apply.

The defense of laches is available in appropriate cases. See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-23.10.

§ 39-23.10. Supplementary provisions.

Unless displaced by the provisions of this Article, the principles of law and equity, including the law merchant and the law relating to principal and agent, estoppel, laches, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, coercion, mistake, insolvency, or other validating or invalidating cause, supplement its provisions. (1997-291, s. 2.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section is derived from § 11 of the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act and § 1-103 of the Uniform Commercial Code. The section adds a reference to "laches" in recognition of the particular appropriateness of the application of this equitable doctrine to an untimely action to avoid a fraudulent transfer. See Louis Dreyfus Corp. v. Butler, 496 F.2? 806, 808 (6th Cir. 1974) (action to avoid transfers to debtor's wife when debtor was engaged in speculative business held to be barred by laches or applicable statutes of limitations); Cooch v. Grier, 30 Del.Ch. 255, 265-66, 59 A.2d 282, 287-88 (1948) (action under the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act held barred by laches when the creditor was chargeable with inexcusable delay and the defendant was prejudiced by the delay).

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

This section is derived in part from section 1-103 of the Uniform Commercial Code. See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 25-1-103.

According to the Official Comment to this section, the defense of laches (which does not appear in UCC § 1-103) has been specifically added to the UFTA "in recognition of the particular appropriateness of the application of this equitable doctrine to an untimely action to avoid a fraudulent transfer."

§ 39-23.11. Uniformity of application and construction.

This act shall be applied and construed to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to the subject of this Article among states enacting it. (1997-291, s. 2.)

NORTH CAROLINA COMMENT

A uniformity provision such as this appears in over two dozen uniform acts adopted in North Carolina. See, e.g., N.C. Gen. Stat. § 25-1-102(2)(c) (Uniform Commercial Code). The North Carolina courts have occasionally cited such a provision in connection with their construction of a uniform act. North Carolina Reinsurance Facility v. North Carolina Ins. Guaranty Ass'n., 67 N.C. App. 359, 372, 313 S.E.2d 253, 262 (1984) (applying N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-155.17).

Voluntary Organizations and Associations.

§ 39-24. Authority to acquire and hold real estate.

Voluntary organizations and associations of individuals organized for charitable, fraternal, religious, social or patriotic purposes, when organized for the purposes which are not prohibited by law, are hereby authorized and empowered to acquire real estate and to hold the same in their common or corporate names and may sue and be sued in their common or corporate names concerning real estate so held: Provided, that voluntary organizations and associations of individuals, within the meaning of this Article, shall not include associations, partnerships or copartnerships which are organized to engage in any business, trade, or profession. CASE NOTES

Controlling Effect of § 1-69.1. — This section was enacted in 1939. The amendment to § 1-69.1, which added the requirement of an allegation of § 66-68 recordation before suit may be brought by an unincorporated association in its common name, was enacted effective 1 October 1975. In the face of any irreconcilable conflict between the provisions of these two statutes, § 1-69.1, being the later enactment, will control or be regarded as a qualification of the earlier statute. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

Requirements of § 1-69.1 are mandatory and failure to satisfy them is not exonerated by this section. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

§ 39-25. Title vested; conveyance; probate.

Where real estate has been or may be hereafter conveyed to such organizations or associations in their common or corporate name the said title shall vest in said organizations, and may be conveyed by said organization in its common name, when such conveyance is authorized by resolution of the body duly constituted and held, by a deed signed by its chairman or president, and its secretary or treasurer, or such officer as is the custodian of its common seal with its official seal affixed, the said conveyance to be proven and probated in the same manner as provided by law for deeds by corporations, and conveyances thus made by such organizations and associations shall convey good and fee simple title to said land. CASE NOTES

Unincorporated, Unregistered Association May Hold Property in Its Common Name. — Under the wording of this section, unincorporated, unregistered association may hold real property in its common name; however, if the association wishes to bring suit concerning this property, it must be registered in accordance with § 66-68. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

Requirement That Unincorporated Association Allege Registration. — While it is true that § 1-69.1 requires unincorporated association to allege its registration for purposes of bringing suit in its collective name, there is no concomitant requirement attached to its right to hold property under this section. Sale of Building Lots in North Carolina.

Article 5A.

Control Corners in Real Estate Developments.

§ 39-32.1. Requirement of permanent markers as "control corners."

Whenever any person, firm or corporation shall hereafter divide any parcel of real estate into lots and lay off streets through such real estate development and sell or offer for sale any lot or lots in such real estate development, it shall be the duty of such person, firm or corporation to cause one or more corners of such development to be designated as "control corner" and shall cause two or more street center lines or offset lines within or on the street right-of-way lines to be permanently monumented at intersecting center lines or offset lines, points of curvature or such other control points, which monuments shall also be designated as control corners and to affix or place at such control corner or corners permanent markers which shall be of such material and affixed to the earth in such a manner as to insure as great a degree of permanence as is reasonably practical. (1947, c. 816, s. 1; 1959, c. 1159.)

Local Modification. — City of Charlotte: 2001-187, s. 1; Mecklenburg: 2001-187, s.2.

§ 39-32.2. Control corners fixed at time of recording plat or prior to sale.

Such control corner or corners, as described in G.S. 39-32.1, and such permanent marker or markers, as described in G.S. 39-32.1, must be designated and affixed at the time of recording the plat of said land or prior to the first sale of any lot or lots constituting a part of the real estate development which said person, firm or corporation has caused to be laid off in lots with designated streets. (1947, c. 816, s. 2.)

§ 39-32.3. Recordation of plat showing control corners.

Upon designating a control corner and affixing a permanent marker, said person, firm or corporation shall cause to be filed in the office of the register of deeds of the county in which the real estate development is located a map or plat showing the location of the control corner or corners and permanent marker or markers with adequate and sufficient description to enable a surveyor to locate such control corner or marker. No map or plat of a real estate subdivision or development made after July 1, 1947, shall be certified for recording pursuant to G.S 47-30.2 unless the location of control corners is shown thereon. (1947, c. 816, s. 3; 1997-309, s. 1.)

§ 39-32.4. Description of land by reference to control corner; use of control corner to fix distances and boundaries prima facie evidence of correct method.

Any lot or lots sold or otherwise transferred at the time of or subsequent to the establishment of a control corner may be described in any conveyance so as to include a reference to the location of said lot or lots which are being conveyed with respect to the control corner. Thereafter the use of the control corner in ascertaining distances so as to establish boundary lines of lots within or originally within such real estate development may be admissible as evidence in any court and shall be prima facie evidence of the correct method of determining the boundaries of any lot or lots within any such real estate development. (1947, c. 816, s. 4.)

Article 6.

Power of Appointment.

§ 39-33. Method of release or limitation of power.

A release or limitation of a power of appointment with respect to real or personal property exercisable by deed or will or otherwise may be effected, if such power may be released or limited under the laws of this State, by the execution by the holder of such power of an instrument in writing stating that the power is released or limited to the extent set forth therein, and the delivery of such instrument to any person who might be adversely affected if such power were exercised or to the fiduciary or one of the fiduciaries, if any, having possession or control of the property over which the power is exercisable. (1943, c. 665, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

No Release or Estoppel Where Persons Adversely Affected Do Not Join in or Receive Deeds. — Where none of the deeds executed by the donee of a power is joined in by or executed to any person who would be adversely affected by the exercise of the power, there is no release or estoppel. Weston v. Hasty, 264 N.C. 432, 142 S.E.2d 23 (1965).

§ 39-34. Method prescribed in § 39-33 not exclusive.

The method of release prescribed in G.S. 39-33 is not exclusive, and this Article shall not invalidate or be construed to invalidate any instrument or contract of release or limitation of a power not executed and delivered in the manner provided in G.S. 39-33 or as invalidating any other act of release or limitation of a power, whether such instrument, contract or act has been heretofore or may be hereafter executed, delivered or done. § 39-39. Risk of loss.

Any contract hereafter made in this State for the purchase and sale of realty shall be interpreted as including an agreement that the parties shall have the following rights and duties, unless the contract expressly provides otherwise:

(1) If, when neither the legal title nor the possession of the subject matter of the contract has been transferred, all or a material part thereof is destroyed without fault of the purchaser, the vendor cannot enforce the contract, and the purchaser is entitled to recover any portion of the price that he has paid;

(2) If, when either the legal title or the possession of the subject matter of the contract has been transferred, all or any part thereof is destroyed without fault of the vendor, the purchaser is not thereby relieved from a duty to pay the price, nor is he entitled to recover any portion thereof that he has paid. CASE NOTES

Risk of Loss of Property Subject to Executory Contract. — The vendee in an executory contract for the sale of land holds an equitable interest therein. Absent inability of the vendor to convey, or express stipulation to the contrary, the risk of loss of property subject to such a contract falls on the vendee, who is treated as the equitable owner. In re Taylor, 60 N.C. App. 134, 298 S.E.2d 163 (1982).

Risk of Loss Not Shifted to High Bidder Prior to Closing. — Under this Act the making of the high bid in a foreclosure sale does not operate to extinguish the seller's interests and shift all risks to the purchaser. Sprouse v. North River Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 311, 344 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 284, 348 S.E.2d 344 (1986).

Nothing in this section shifts the risk of loss prior to closing to the high bidder. In fact, the high bidder cannot compel relinquishment of the premises until the price has been paid in full, and the mortgagor remains subject to personal liability on the note until then. Sprouse v. North River Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 311, 344 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 284, 348 S.E.2d 344 (1986).

§ 39-44. Definition.

§ 39-46. Title vested; conveyance; probate.

Where real estate has been or may be hereafter conveyed to a business trust in its trust name or in the names of its trustees in their capacity as trustees of such business trust, the said title shall vest in said business trust, and the said real estate and interests therein may be conveyed, encumbered or otherwise disposed of by said business trust in its trust name by an instrument signed by at least one of its trustees, its president, a vice-president or other duly authorized officer, and attested or countersigned by its secretary, assistant secretary or such other officer as is the custodian of its common seal, not acting in dual capacity, with its official seal affixed, the said conveyance to be proven and probated in the same manner as provided by law for conveyances by corporations. Any conveyance, encumbrance or other disposition thus made by any such business trust shall convey good and sufficient title to said real estate and interests therein in accordance with the provisions of said conveyance; provided, however, that with respect to any such conveyance, encumbrance or other disposition effected after June 28, 1977, there must be recorded in the county where the land lies a memorandum of the written instrument or declaration of trust referred to in G.S. 39-44. As a minimum such memorandum shall set forth the name, date and place of filing, if any, of such written instrument or declaration of trust, and the place where the written instrument or declaration of trust, and all amendments thereto, is kept and may be examined upon reasonable notice, which place need not be a public office. (1977, c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 39-47. Prior deeds validated.

All deeds, leases, mortgages, deeds of trust or other conveyances heretofore executed in conformity with this Article and which are proper in all other respects are declared to be sufficient to pass title to real estate held by such business trusts in accordance with the provisions of such instruments. (1977, c. 768, s. 1.)

§ 39-50. Death, illness, or conviction of certain crimes not a material fact.

crime for which registration is required by Article 27A of Chapter 14 of the General Statutes occupies, occupied, or resides near the property; provided, however, that no seller may knowingly make a false statement regarding any such fact. (1989, c. 592, s. 1; 1998-212, s. 17.16A(a).)

General.

§ 40A-1. Exclusive provisions.

It is the intent of the General Assembly that the procedures provided by this Chapter shall be the exclusive condemnation procedures to be used in this State by all private condemnors and all local public condemnors. All other provisions in laws, charters, or local acts authorizing the use of other procedures by municipal or county governments or agencies or political subdivisions thereof, or by corporations, associations or other persons are hereby repealed effective January 1, 1982. Provided, that any condemnation proceeding initiated prior to January 1, 1982, may be lawfully completed pursuant to the provisions previously existing.

This chapter shall not repeal any provision of a local act enlarging or limiting the purposes for which property may be condemned. Notwithstanding the language of G.S. 40A-3(b), this Chapter also shall not repeal any provision of a local act creating any substantive or procedural requirement or limitation on the authority of a local public condemnor to exercise the power of eminent domain outside of its boundaries. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Power of Eminent Domain Is Attribute of Sovereignty. — The power of eminent domain is one of the attributes of a sovereign state. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Hagins, 258 N.C. 220, 128 S.E.2d 391 (1962).

Which Exists Independently of Constitutional Provisions. — The right to take private property for public use exists independently of constitutional provisions. In fact, such provisions are limitations on the State's power to exercise the right. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Hagins, 258 N.C. 220, 128 S.E.2d 391 (1962).

And Is Exclusively in Control of Legislature. — The method of taking land for a public use is within the exclusive control of the legislature, limited by organic law, and the courts cannot help the injured landowner, where the statute has been strictly followed, until the question of compensation is reached. Durham v. Rigsbee, 141 N.C. 128, 53 S.E. 531 (1906).

The right of eminent domain is possessed by the government, and may be exercised by the legislature or under its authority. It is peculiarly fit to be wielded by the legislature, as it is a power founded on necessity. Raleigh & G.R.R. v. Davis, 19 N.C. 451 (1837).

Unless Properly Delegated. — The right to exercise the power of eminent domain belongs to every independent government exercising sovereign power, as a necessary incident to its sovereignty, and this power, unless otherwise provided in the organic law, rests solely in the State unless by legislative action the power is delegated, the purposes for which it may be exercised enumerated, and the procedure for such exercise prescribed. Mount Olive v. Cowan, 235 N.C. 259, 69 S.E.2d 525 (1952).

Reason for Eminent Domain. — The right of eminent domain is granted because the public interest requires that private property shall be taken for public use under the circumstances and in the manner prescribed by law. Raleigh, C. & S.R.R. v. Mecklenburg Mfg. Co., 166 N.C. 168, 82 S.E. 5 (1914).

Public necessity alone justifies governmental taking of private property. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Batts, 265 N.C. 346, 144 S.E.2d 126 (1965).

The power of eminent domain cannot be implied or inferred from vague or doubtful language. Commissioners of Beaufort County v. Bonner, 153 N.C. 66, 68 S.E. 970 (1910).

If the statute is silent on the subject it is to be presumed that the legislature intended that the necessary property should be obtained by contract. Commissioners of Beaufort County v. Bonner, 153 N.C. 66, 68 S.E. 970 (1910).

Statutes Giving Power Must Be Strictly Construed. — Statutes which authorize the exercise of the power of eminent domain must be strictly construed. Durham & N.R.R. v. Richmond & D.R.R., 106 N.C. 16, 10 S.E. 1041 (1890); Caroline & N.W.R.R. v. Pennearden Lumber & Mfg. Co., 132 N.C. 644, 44 S.E. 358 (1903); Board of Educ. v. Forrest, 193 N.C. 519, 137 S.E. 431 (1927).

Strict Construction of Authority to Condemn Land for Schools. — The statutory authority given the county board of education to condemn land for school purposes will be strictly construed as to the extent or limit of the power given. Board of Educ. v. Forrest, 193 N.C. 519, 137 S.E. 431 (1927).

Chapter Is Applicable to Private Landowners. — Even though private landowners are not specifically mentioned in § 40A-3, they are bound by the provisions of this Chapter. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

The right of eminent domain can be exercised only in the mode pointed out in the statute conferring it. Allen v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 102 N.C. 381, 9 S.E. 4 (1889).

Applicability of Rules of Civil Procedure to Private Condemnation Proceedings. — Section 40A-12, together with § 1-393, gives trial courts clear authority to apply the Rules of Civil Procedure in private condemnation proceedings, at least to the extent that those rules do not directly conflict with procedures specifically mandated by this Chapter. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62 (1986).

Applicability of Rule 60, Rules of Civil Procedure. — Rule 60, of the Rules of Civil Procedure, applies to proceedings under Chapter 40A in order to provide relief from judgments or orders when necessary to promote the interests of justice. City of Durham v. Woo, 129 N.C. App. 183, 497 S.E.2d 457 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 496, 518 S.E.2d 380 (1998).

Conversion of Private Condemnation Proceedings into Quiet Title Action. — Trial court did not err by applying § 1A-1, Rule 15(b) in such a way as to convert condemnation proceedings brought by private condemnors, with the consent of the parties, into an action to quiet title. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62 (1986).

Necessity to Allege and Prove Compliance with Procedural Requirements. — When a city undertakes to exercise the power of eminent domain which has been granted to it by the legislature, it is necessary that it both allege and prove compliance with statutory procedural requirements. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 8 N.C. App. 649, 175 S.E.2d 348 (1970).

The provisions of the general railroad act prevail over provisions in the charter of a railroad company, unless the charter specifically designates and repeals these provisions of the general act. Durham & N.R.R. v. Richmond & D.R.R., 106 N.C. 16, 10 S.E. 1041 (1890).

Municipal Annexation Proceedings Enjoined by Condemnor-County. — When a county initiates condemnation of property for a sanitary landfill, and the property is being considered for voluntary annexation into a municipality, the county may proceed with the condemnation action. The county is entitled to an injunction enjoining the annexation proceeding, and the property owners and the municipality may raise the proposed annexation in the answer to the condemnation complaint, for appropriate consideration by the court. Yandle v. Mecklenburg County, 85 N.C. App. 382, 355 S.E.2d 216, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 91 (1987).

§ 40A-2. Definitions.

As used in this Chapter the following words and phrases have the meanings indicated unless the context clearly requires another meaning:

(1) "Condemnation" means the procedure prescribed by law for exercising the power of eminent domain.

(2) "Condemnor" means those listed in G.S. 40A-3.

(3) "Eminent domain" means the power to divest right, title or interest from the owner of property and vest it in the possessor of the power against the will of the owner upon the payment of just compensation for the right, title or interest divested.

(4) "Judge" means a resident judge of the superior court in the district where the cause is pending, or special judge residing in said district, or a judge of the superior court assigned to hold the courts of said district or an emergency or special judge holding court in the county where the cause is pending.

(5) "Owner" includes the plural when appropriate and means any person having an interest or estate in the property.

(6) "Person" includes the plural when appropriate and means a natural person, and any legal entity capable of owning or having interest in property.

(7) "Property" means any right, title, or interest in land, including leases and options to buy or sell. "Property" also includes rights of access, rights-of-way, easements, water rights, air rights, and any other privilege or appurtenance in or to the possession, use, and enjoyment of land. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Meaning of "Eminent Domain". — The words "eminent domain" mean the power of the sovereign or some agency authorized by it to take private property for public use. VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963).

Eminent Domain Not Intended Absent Provision for Compensation. — Where a statute makes no provision for compensation, it is to be presumed that the legislature did not intend that the power of eminent domain should be exercised. Commissioners of Beaufort County v. Bonner, 153 N.C. 66, 68 S.E. 970 (1910).

Impairment of Property Rights Unconstitutional Unless Compensation Provided. — A statutory amendment to a former statute which destroyed and sensibly impaired vested property rights acquired under the former statute or which attempted to transfer them either to the public or any other, except under the principles of eminent domain and upon compensation duly made, was unconstitutional and invalid. Watts v. Lenoir & Blowing Rock Turnpike Co., 181 N.C. 129, 106 S.E. 497 (1921).

Definition of "property" is broad enough to include profits à prendre, requiring just compensation to the owner of that interest when the right to enter upon lands is lost through condemnation. In re Lee, 85 N.C. App. 302, 354 S.E.2d 759, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 513, 358 S.E.2d 520 (1987).

Diversion of Water as a "Taking". — Diversion of the natural flow and drainage of streams and surface waters incident to the construction of a highway, resulting in the periodic flooding of the lands of a proprietor, is a "taking" of property for which just compensation must be paid. Braswell v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 250 N.C. 508, 108 S.E.2d 912 (1959).

The term "other persons" as used in the cartway statute, does include counties. Davis v. Forsyth County, 117 N.C. App. 725, 453 S.E.2d 231 (1995).

Month-to-Month Tenant as Owner. — A tenant having month-to-month tenancy based upon periodic rental payments without a written document is considered to be an "owner" as defined by this section, and has standing to challenge a condemnation proceeding itself as arbitrary, capricious, and an abuse of discretion. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. v. Calco Enters., 132 N.C. App. 237, 511 S.E.2d 671 (1999).

Digging a ditch across private land to drain a public road amounts to a taking of private property for a public use. State v. New, 130 N.C. 731, 41 S.E. 1033 (1902).

Statute giving power to overseers of roads to cut poles on adjacent land was an instance of the exercise on the part of the sovereign of the right to take private property for the use of the public upon making compensation. Collins v. Creecy, 53 N.C. 333 (1861).

Where a landowner has granted a right-of-way over his land, he must look to his contract for compensation, as it cannot be awarded to him in condemnation proceedings, provided the contract is valid, and all its conditions have been complied with by the grantee. Feldman v. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., 9 N.C. App. 162, 175 S.E.2d 713 (1970).

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Chapter Is Applicable to Private Landowners. — Even though private landowners are not specifically mentioned in this section, they are bound by the provisions of this Chapter. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

Subdivision ordinance as applied by defendant constituted an exaction requiring the court to determine whether the exaction amounted to an unconstitutional taking; therefore, summary judgment for defendant was inappropriate as to that issue. Franklin Rd. Properties v. City of Raleigh, 94 N.C. App. 731, 381 S.E.2d 487 (1989).

Implied Promise to Pay for Property Taken. — Whenever the government in the exercise of its governmental rights takes property, the ownership of which it concedes to be in an individual, it impliedly promises to pay therefor. Lloyd v. Venable, 168 N.C. 531, 84 S.E. 855 (1915).

Remedy for Abuse. — If, after acquiring land under condemnation for a public use, a company should devote it to private purposes, that is a remedy by quo warranto and otherwise. Wadsworth Land Co. v. Piedmont Traction Co., 162 N.C. 314, 78 S.E. 297 (1913).

Applied in City of Burlington v. Isley Place Condominium Ass'n, 105 N.C. App. 713, 414 S.E.2d 385 (1992).

City of Durham, 121 N.C. App. 716, 468 S.E.2d 254 (1996).

II. PUBLIC USE.

Taking of Private Property Must Be for Public Use. — In the exercise of the sovereign power of eminent domain, private property can be taken only for a public use and upon the payment of just compensation. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Batts, 265 N.C. 346, 144 S.E.2d 126 (1965).

Meaning of "Public Use". — "Public use," as applied in the exercise of the power of eminent domain, is not capable of a precise definition applicable to all situations. The term is elastic, and keeps pace with changing conditions, since the progressive demands of society and changing concepts of governmental duties and functions are constantly bringing new subjects forward as being for "public use." State Hwy. Comm'n v. Batts, 265 N.C. 346, 144 S.E.2d 126 (1965).

The statutory phrase "the public use or benefit" is incapable of a precise definition applicable to all situations. Rather, because of the progressive demands of an ever-changing society and the perpetually fluid concept of governmental duty and function, the phrase is elastic and keeps pace with the changing times. Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co. v. McLeod, 321 N.C. 426, 364 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

Test of Public Use or Benefit. — On judicial determination of whether a condemnor's intended use is an action for "the public use or benefit" under this section, courts in this and other states have employed essentially two approaches to this problem. The first approach — the public use test — asks whether the public has a right to a definite use of the condemned property. The second approach — the public benefit test — asks whether some benefit accrues to the public as a result of the desired condemnation. Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co. v. McLeod, 321 N.C. 426, 364 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

Question of Law. — While the delegation of the power of eminent domain is for the legislature, the determination of whether a condemnor's intended use of the land is for "the public use or benefit" is a question of law for the courts. Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co. v. McLeod, 321 N.C. 426, 364 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

A taking can be for public use or benefit even when there is also a substantial private use, so long as the private use in question is incidental to the paramount public use. Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co. v. McLeod, 321 N.C. 426, 364 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

The provision of telephone service, irrespective of the number of customers affected, is an action for "the public use or benefit." Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co. v. McLeod, 321 N.C. 426, 364 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

Transport of Natural Gas is a Public Purpose. — Property taken for the transport of natural gas between states and for its distribution within this state is a public purpose. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. v. Calco Enters., 132 N.C. App. 237, 511 S.E.2d 671 (1999).

Term "public purposes" is employed in the same sense in the law of taxation and of eminent domain. Thus, if the General Assembly may authorize a State agency to expend public money for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a hospital facility to the leased to and ultimately conveyed to a private agency, it may also authorize the acquisition of a site for such facility by exercise of the power of eminent domain. Foster v. North Carolina Medical Care Comm'n, 283 N.C. 110, 195 S.E.2d 517 (1973).

The use which will justify the taking of private property under the exercise of the right of eminent domain is the use by or for the government, the general public, or some portion thereof as such, and not the use by or for particular individuals or for the benefit of particular estates. The use may be limited to the inhabitants of a small locality, but the benefit must be in common. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Batts, 265 N.C. 346, 144 S.E.2d 126 (1965).

Scenic Value of Road May Be Considered. — The scenic value of a road and its necessity as a part of the system of scenic highways for the public may be considered in determining whether taking over the road is for a public or private purpose. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Batts, 265 N.C. 346, 144 S.E.2d 126 (1965).

Use of the words "commercial railway" in a petition did not indicate that the land was to be used for private purposes, for the company was engaging in commerce when it carried articles of merchandise for the public. Wadsworth Land Co. v. Piedmont Traction Co., 162 N.C. 314, 78 S.E. 297 (1913).

III. PRIVATE CONDEMNORS.

A. In General.

Right to Exercise Eminent Domain — Railroads. — Railroads are quasi-public corporations, created to serve primarily the public good and convenience, and as such they exercise public franchise rights, including that of eminent domain. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 240 N.C. 495, 82 S.E.2d 771 (1954).

Same — Public Service Corporations Generally. — A public service corporation has no power to condemn land by reason of its being a riparian proprietor, but only under authority given to it by a valid statute to do so. Carolina-Tennessee Power Co. v. Hiawassee River Power Co., 175 N.C. 668, 96 S.E. 99 (1918), appeal dismissed, 252 U.S. 341, 40 S. Ct. 330, 64 L. Ed. 601 (1920).

Same — Public Service Corporations Generating Electricity. — Where a corporation is authorized by its charter to generate and sell electricity and to build dams and hydroelectric plants necessary to the generation of such hydroelectric power, and is therein given power of eminent domain to acquire the necessary rights-of-way and lands for its dams and the ponding of water, such corporation is a public service corporation and has the power of eminent domain, and it cannot be successfully contended that its taking of lands for ponding water necessary for one of its dams is a taking of private lands for a private use, nor does the fact that such public service corporation also engages in private enterprises not connected with its public service alter this result. Whiting Mfg. Co. v. Carolina Aluminum Co., 207 N.C. 52, 175 S.E. 698 (1934).

A corporation furnishing electricity for public use may condemn lands of a private owner necessary for its transmission lines, but it is unlawful for a power company to enter upon and take the lands of the owner for such purpose without complying with the statutory procedure. Crisp v. Nantahala Power & Light Co., 201 N.C. 46, 158 S.E. 845 (1931).

Condemnation Rights Not Impaired by Charter Rights of Private Nature. — The right of a corporation to condemn lands for a public use is not affected or impaired because in its charter it may be given rights of a more private nature to which the right of condemnation may not attach. Mountain Retreat Ass'n v. Mount Mitchell Dev. Co., 183 N.C. 43, 110 S.E. 524 (1922).

Where a corporation is authorized to operate a street railway, it may exercise the right of eminent domain in respect to this business given to it by its charter and by law, notwithstanding it is also authorized to conduct business of a private nature. Wadsworth Land Co. v. Piedmont Traction Co., 162 N.C. 314, 78 S.E. 297 (1913).

Power Not Exhausted by Single Exercise. — The power of eminent domain conferred on electric public service corporations is not necessarily exhausted by a single exercise of the power, but, within the limits established by the general law or special charter, a subsequent or further exercise of the power may be permissible. Yadkin River Power Co. v. Wissler, 160 N.C. 269, 76 S.E. 267 (1912).

Purchase of Additional Rights as Needed to Serve Public. — If the property owned by a corporation having the right of eminent domain is inadequate for its corporate purposes, it may purchase such additional rights as it may need to serve the public. Such purchase may be with the consent of the owner or by condemnation, a purchase without the owner's consent being at the value of the property taken. VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963).

The language "pipelines originating in North Carolina" in former § 40-2 held not to impose a limitation on § 62-190. Colonial Pipeline Co. v. Neill, 296 N.C. 503, 251 S.E.2d 457 (1979).

Condemnation by Railroad for Union Depot. — Former § 40-4 conferred upon any railroad company the right to condemn land for the purpose of getting to a union depot required by the order of the Utilities Commission to be built. State ex rel. Corp. Comm'n v. Southern Ry., 185 N.C. 435, 117 S.E. 563 (1923).

Former § 40-4 conferred on a railroad company the incidental right to make such changes in its line and route as are necessary to accomplish the purpose designed and to make the depot available and accessible to the traveling public as contemplated by statute. Dewey v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 142 N.C. 392, 55 S.E. 292 (1906).

Where the Utilities Commission, acting under former § 40-4, selected a site after due inquiry, the railroads would not be enjoined, at the instance of citizens and property owners, from erecting the depot, either on the ground that the city was being sidetracked or that property would be damaged by the proposed change. Dewey v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 142 N.C. 392, 55 S.E. 292 (1906).

Installation of water and sewer lines solely for the benefit of one individual's manufacturing plant involved a private use, despite petitioner's argument that the plant would benefit the public by employing 30 people and thus contribute to the public welfare; and dismissal of petitioner's condemnation proceeding would be affirmed. City of Statesville v. Roth, 77 N.C. App. 803, 336 S.E.2d 142 (1985).

The power of condemnation granted under former § 40-8, relating to taking material from adjacent lands, is not confined to a right-of-way, delimited by surface boundaries, but may be extended to the cutting of trees or removing of obstructions outside of these boundaries when required for the reasonable preservation and protection of their lines and other property. Yadkin River Power Co. v. Wissler, 160 N.C. 269, 76 S.E. 267 (1912).

The legislature may by eminent domain authorize the consolidation of railroads and, in effect, condemn the shares of dissenting stockholders. Spencer v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 137 N.C. 107, 49 S.E. 96 (1904).

B. Railroad Rights-of-Way.

Width of Right-of-Way. — If the charter prescribes no maximum or minimum width of the right-of-way, then subsection (a) of former § 40-29 (substantially the same as the second unnumbered paragraph of subsection (a) of this section) applies, and the law presumes the width therein specified, subject to the right of the owner to recover compensation by compliance with § 1-51. Griffith v. Southern Ry., 191 N.C. 84, 131 S.E. 413 (1926).

A right-of-way of specified width must be located and constructed in order to be exclusive. Goldsboro Lumber Co. v. Hines Bros. Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 254, 35 S.E. 458 (1900).

A railroad company may occupy its right-of-way to its full extent whenever the proper management and business necessities of the road, in its own judgment, may require it, though the owner of the land can use and occupy a part of the right-of-way not used by the railroad in a manner not inconsistent with its full enjoyment of the easement. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Bunting, 168 N.C. 579, 84 S.E. 1009 (1915); Tighe v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 176 N.C. 239, 97 S.E. 164 (1918).

A railroad company may use and occupy a right-of-way acquired by it under condemnation proceedings when, in its own judgment, the proper management and business necessities of the road may require it. Virginia & C.S.R.R. v. McLean, 158 N.C. 498, 74 S.E. 461 (1912).

Easement Acquired over Portion Not Occupied. — A railroad corporation acquires by condemnation an easement over that portion of its right-of-way not actually occupied by its roadbed, tracks, drains and side ditches. Griffith v. Southern Ry., 191 N.C. 84, 131 S.E. 413 (1926).

Owner's Right to Use Land Covered by Right-of-Way. — To the extent that land covered by a right-of-way is not presently required for the purpose of the road, the owner may continue to occupy and use it in a manner not inconsistent with the full and proper enjoyment of the easement. Raleigh & Augusta Air Line R.R. v. Sturgeon, 120 N.C. 225, 26 S.E. 779 (1897); Goldsboro Lumber Co. v. Hines Bros. Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 254, 35 S.E. 458 (1900); Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Olive, 142 N.C. 257, 55 S.E. 263 (1906); Earnhardt v. Southern R.R., 157 N.C. 358, 72 S.E. 1062 (1911); Virginia & C.S.R.R. v. McLean, 158 N.C. 498, 74 S.E. 461 (1912); Coit v. Owenby-Wofford Co., 166 N.C. 136, 81 S.E. 1067 (1914).

To the extent that the right-of-way is not presently required for the purpose of the road, it may be occupied and used by the original owner in any manner not inconsistent with the easement acquired. Goldsboro Lumber Co. v. Hines Bros. Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 254, 35 S.E. 458 (1900); Virginia & C.S.R.R. v. McLean, 158 N.C. 498, 74 S.E. 461 (1912).

The grant of a right-of-way of a specified width does not preclude the grantor from such use of his land himself or by others with his permission which is not in conflict therewith. Goldsboro Lumber Co. v. Hines Bros. Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 254, 35 S.E. 458 (1900).

Cultivation of Land by Owner. — While land included in the right-of-way of a railroad company, not necessary for the purposes of the company, may be cultivated by the servient owner, the crop must not be of such inflammable or combustible nature, when matured or maturing, as to endanger the safety of the company's passengers or cause injury to adjoining lands in case of ignition of such crops by sparks from the company's engines; in such a case, the company would have the right to enter and remove such crops. Raleigh & Augusta Air Line R.R. v. Sturgeon, 120 N.C. 225, 26 S.E. 779 (1897).

Unless the land is needed for some use, the occupation and cultivation by the owner of the servient tenement will be disturbed only when it becomes necessary for the company to enter in order to remove something which endangers the safety of its passengers, or which might, if undisturbed, subject the owner to liability for injury to adjacent lands or property. Ward v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 109 N.C. 358, 13 S.E. 926 (1891); Ward v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 113 N.C. 566, 18 S.E. 211 (1893); Blue v. Aberdeen & W.E.R.R., 117 N.C. 644, 23 S.E. 275 (1895).

Duty of Company to Clear Right-of-Way. — A railroad company is not negligent in failing to cut down bushes or weeds on the right-of-way beyond the portion over which it is exercising actual control for corporate purposes, but is required to keep the right-of-way clear of such growth to the outside of the side ditches on either side of the track. Ward v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 109 N.C. 358, 13 S.E. 926 (1891).

Where a railroad company permitted dry grass or leaves or other combustible rubbish to remain near its track and the same took fire from sparks emitted from one of its locomotives which had no spark arrester, and the fire was thereby communicated to the plaintiff's adjoining land, destroying timber, etc., it was held that the injury resulted from the negligence of the defendant company. Aycock v. Raleigh & Augusta Air Line R.R., 89 N.C. 321 (1883).

Only Easement Rights Held Acquired. — Only an easement in lands passes from the owner to a railroad company under condemnation proceedings divesting all the rights of owners who are parties to the proceedings in such easement during the corporate existence of the company, but allowing them to use and occupy the right-of-way in any manner not inconsistent with the easement acquired. Phillips v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 130 N.C. 513, 41 S.E. 1022, rev'd on other grounds on rehearing, 131 N.C. 225, 42 S.E. 587 (1902); Virginia & C.S.R.R. v. McLean, 158 N.C. 498, 74 S.E. 461 (1912).

IV. PUBLIC CONDEMNORS.

Public Recreational Facility Need Not Be Designed Before Land Is Acquired. — Neither subdivision (b)(3) of this section, which vests municipalities with the power of eminent domain to establish, enlarge or improve parks, playgrounds and other recreational facilities, nor § 160A-353, of similar import, nor any other statute contains any requirement that the city design a public facility authorized by resolution before the land for the facility is acquired. City of Charlotte v. Rousso, 82 N.C. App. 588, 346 S.E.2d 693 (1986).

Local Zoning Laws. — While municipalities or counties may exercise the power of eminent domain for the construction, enlarging or improving of those buildings listed in subdivision (b)(6), the power of eminent domain does not include locating a particular building in violation of another jurisdiction's zoning laws, by virtue of the fact that through §§ 153A-347 and 160A-392 the Legislature has made zoning regulations with regard to buildings specifically applicable to political subdivisions. The same zoning restrictions do not apply, however, to the construction, establishment, enlargement, improvement, maintenance, ownership or operation of a public enterprise unless the Legislature has clearly manifested a contrary intent. Davidson County v. City of High Point, 85 N.C. App. 26, 354 S.E.2d 280, modified and aff'd, 321 N.C. 252, 362 S.E.2d 553 (1987).

A municipal corporation can only exercise the right of eminent domain when authorized to do so by its charter or by general law, being a creature of the Legislature. Mount Olive v. Cowan, 235 N.C. 259, 69 S.E.2d 525 (1952).

Condemnation by Municipalities for Operation of Water and Sewer Systems. — The right of eminent domain has been conferred upon municipalities operating water and sewer systems. If such corporation is unable to agree with a landowner for the purchase of land it needs for such purpose, it may acquire the land, or an easement therein, by following the procedure set forth. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

The opening and closing of streets is a governmental function. Bessemer Imp. Co. v. City of Greensboro, 247 N.C. 549, 101 S.E.2d 336 (1958).

Exercise of Discretion in Widening Streets of Town. — Where it appeared that the governing authorities of a town took lands to widen a street intersecting with other streets so as to lessen the danger to traffic thereon, and that doing so was a reasonable exercise of discretion, finding that such course was unnecessary was not binding on the Supreme Court, the question being, primarily, whether the administrative authorities of the town so grossly and manifestly abused the exercise of their discretionary powers as to render their action ineffectual. Lee v. Town of Waynesville, 184 N.C. 565, 115 S.E. 51 (1922).

Acquisition of Storm Sewer Easement by Payment of Permanent Damages. — Where plaintiff landowners demanded permanent damages in their action against a municipality for trespass based upon the construction by the municipality of a storm sewer line over their lands, and defendant municipality prayed for an easement for the purpose of maintaining such drainage system, under the verdict and judgment awarding permanent damages the municipality, upon payment of the damages awarded, acquired a permanent easement to maintain its storm sewer line so long as it was kept in proper repair. McLean v. Town of Mooresville, 237 N.C. 498, 75 S.E.2d 327 (1953).

Municipal Airports. — The provisions of this Chapter now control cities' eminent domain actions with respect to airports. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

Improvements Held No Bar to Condemnation. — The governing authorities of a town are not estopped to condemn land for the widening or improvement of its streets by reason of an owner having put extensive improvements on his land a long time prior to the time it was condemned for that purpose, the power of condemnation, in cases of such character, being a continuing one to be exercised when and to the extent that the public good may require it. Lee v. Town of Waynesville, 184 N.C. 565, 115 S.E. 51 (1922).

Condemnation proceedings for a school site must be considered as instituted under former § 40-2 (similar to this section) pursuant to authority conferred by former § 115-125 (see now § 115C-517). Topping v. State Bd. of Educ., 249 N.C. 291, 106 S.E.2d 502 (1959).

It was not error to find that plaintiff was authorized to acquire land for parks, recreational programs and facilities through exercise of power of eminent domain. Town of Chapel Hill v. Burchette, 100 N.C. App. 157, 394 S.E.2d 698 (1990).

V. CONDEMNATION OF BURIAL GROUNDS OR DWELLINGS.

To Whom Limitation Applicable. — Limitation in former § 40-10 as to condemnation of the owner's dwelling, burial grounds, etc., was only upon such corporations as were defined and named in the former article, when exercising the power of eminent domain granted in such article in connection with the construction of the works or projects enumerated therein, and pursuant to the authority granted thereby.

Mount Olive v. Cowan, 235 N.C. 259, 69 S.E.2d 525 (1952).

Housing Project Not Covered. — Prohibition against condemnation of burial grounds, dwelling houses, etc., without the consent of the owner is not applicable to proceeding to condemn lands for housing project. In re Housing Auth., 233 N.C. 649, 65 S.E.2d 761 (1951).

Nor Was Former Park Commission. — Former North Carolina National Park Commission created by Public Acts 1927, c. 48, was an agency of the State created by statute, vested with the power of eminent domain, and was not subject to the limitations provided for corporations by former §§ 40-8 and 40-11. Yarbrough v. North Carolina Park Comm'n, 196 N.C. 284, 145 S.E. 563 (1928).

Power of Municipality to Acquire Dwellings by Condemnation. — The governing body of a municipality, for the purpose of erecting an elevated water storage tank as an addition to its water system, has the power, in the exercise of a sound discretion, to acquire dwelling-house properties either within or outside the city by condemnation. City of Raleigh v. Edwards, 235 N.C. 671, 71 S.E.2d 396 (1952), commented on in, 31 N.C.L. Rev. 125 (1952). See also Mount Olive v. Cowan, 235 N.C. 259, 69 S.E.2d 525 (1952).

Absent Charter Restrictions to the Contrary. — Where a city, under its charter, is given the same power to condemn lands of private owners for municipal purposes that is given to railroads and other public utilities, it is bound by the restrictions placed on them by this section. Selma v. Nobles, 183 N.C. 322, 111 S.E. 543 (1922).

This section does not apply to tenant houses, but only to the dwellings of the owner of the lands, which are preserved to him for sentimental reasons, and which could not exist where such owner is a corporation renting dwellings to its tenants. Raleigh, C. & S.R.R. v. Mecklenburg Mfg. Co., 166 N.C. 168, 82 S.E. 5 (1914).

Use by Owner Subsequent to Acquisition of Right-of-Way Not Protected. — When a provision in a charter of a railroad company or a deed granting it a right-of-way prohibited it from entering upon the yard, garden, burial ground, etc., of the defendants, but no portion of the right-of-way was so used at the date of its acquisition, the right of the company would not be interfered with by the fact that it has since been appropriated to such use. Dargan v. Carolina Cent. R.R., 131 N.C. 623, 42 S.E. 979 (1902); Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Olive, 142 N.C. 257, 55 S.E. 263 (1906).

Maintenance of Nuisance as Violation of Prohibition. — The creation and maintenance of a nuisance which sensibly impairs the value of lands of private owners is a "taking" within the principle of eminent domain and condemnation proceedings thereunder, and falls within the exception as to dwellings. Selma v. Nobles, 183 N.C. 322, 111 S.E. 543 (1922).

House standing on the right-of-way does not become the property of the condemnor. Shields v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 129 N.C. 1, 39 S.E. 582 (1901); Raleigh, C. & S.R.R. v. Mecklenburg Mfg. Co., 166 N.C. 168, 82 S.E. 5 (1914).

No Discretion as to Statutory Exceptions. — The principle arising under the general power to condemn, leaving the matter largely within the discretion of the governing authorities seeking condemnation, does not apply to the statutory exceptions. Selma v. Nobles, 183 N.C. 322, 111 S.E. 543 (1922).

VI. JUDICIAL REVIEW.

What Is Public Use as Question for Court. — In any proceeding for condemnation under the sovereign power of eminent domain, what is a public use is a judicial question for ultimate decision by the court as a matter of law, reviewable upon appeal. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Batts, 265 N.C. 346, 144 S.E.2d 126 (1965).

To determine whether an exaction amounts to an unconstitutional taking, the court shall: (1) identify the condition imposed; (2) identify the regulation which caused the condition to be imposed; (3) determine whether the regulation substantially advances a legitimate state interest. If the regulation substantially advances a legitimate state interest, the court shall then determine (4) whether the condition imposed advances that interest; and (5) whether the condition imposed is proportionally related to the impact of the development. Franklin Rd. Properties v. City of Raleigh, 94 N.C. App. 731, 381 S.E.2d 487 (1989), citing Batch v. Town of Chapel Hill, 92 N.C. App. 601, 376 S.E.2d 22 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 326 N.C. 1, 387 S.E.2d 655, cert. denied, 496 U.S. 931, 110 S. Ct. 2631, 110 L. Ed. 2d 651 (1990).

Discretion of Condemnors as to Extent and Limit of Rights to Be Acquired. — The extent and limit of the rights to be acquired are primarily and very largely referred to the companies or grantees of the power, and only become an issuable question, usually determinable by the court, on allegation of fact tending to show bad faith on the part of the companies or an oppressive or manifest abuse of their discretion. Yadkin River Power Co. v. Wissler, 160 N.C. 269, 76 S.E. 267 (1912).

In determining what property is necessary for a public housing site, a broad discretion is vested by statute in housing authority commissioners, to whom the power of eminent domain is delegated. Housing Auth. v. Wooten, 257 N.C. 358, 126 S.E.2d 101 (1962); Philbrook v. Chapel Hill Housing Auth., 269 N.C. 598, 153 S.E.2d 153 (1967).

Condemnors' Discretion Not Subject to Review Absent Abuse. — Where the general power to condemn exists, the right of selection as to route, quantity, etc., is left largely to the discretion of the company or corporation, and does not become the subject of judicial inquiry except on allegations of fact tending to show bad faith on the part of the company or corporation or an oppressive and manifest abuse of the discretion conferred upon them by the law. Selma v. Nobles, 183 N.C. 322, 111 S.E. 543 (1922); Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Where an agency has the power of condemnation, the choice of route is primarily in its discretion and will not be reviewed on the ground that another route may have been more appropriately chosen, unless it appears that there has been an abuse of discretion. Duke Power Co. v. Ribet, 25 N.C. App. 87, 212 S.E.2d 182 (1975).

The exercise of discretion by the condemnor will not be interfered with on the ground that the condemnor acted unreasonably and without justification when there is neither allegation nor evidence that the condemnor acted either arbitrarily or capriciously or in a manner constituting an abuse of discretion in the selection of the route to condemn. Duke Power Co. v. Ribet, 25 N.C. App. 87, 212 S.E.2d 182 (1975).

Existence of Less Intrusive Means not Abuse of Discretion. — Gas pipeline company did not abuse its discretion by not using the less intrusive means of seeking variance from local zoning ordinances. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. v. Calco Enters., 132 N.C. App. 237, 511 S.E.2d 671 (1999).

§ 40A-4. No prior purchase offer necessary.

The power to acquire property by condemnation shall not depend on any prior effort to acquire the same property by gift or purchase, nor shall the power to negotiate for the gift or purchase of property be impaired by initiation of condemnation proceedings. A potential condemnor who seeks to acquire property by gift or purchase shall give the owner written notice of the provisions of G.S. 40A-6. (1981, c. 919, s. 1; 1997-270, s. 4.)

Legal Periodicals. — For a comment on the acquisition, abandonment, and preservation of rail corridors in North Carolina, see 75 N.C.L. Rev. 1989 (1997).

§ 40A-5. Condemnation of property owned by other condemnors.

(a) A condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(a), (b) or (c) shall not possess the power of eminent domain with respect to property owned by the State of North Carolina or a State-owned railroad as defined in G.S. 124-11 unless the State consents to the taking. The State's consent shall be given by the Council of State, or by the Secretary of Administration if the Council of State delegates this authority to the Secretary. In a condemnation proceeding against State property consented to by the State, the only issue shall be the compensation to be paid for the property.

(b) Unless otherwise provided by statute a condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(a), (b) or (c) may condemn the property of a private condemnor if such property is not in actual public use or not necessary to the operation of the business of the owner. Unless otherwise provided by statute a condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(b) or (c) may condemn the property of a condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(b) or (c) if the property proposed to be taken is not being used or held for future use for any governmental or proprietary purpose. (1981, c. 919, s. 1; 2000-146, s. 9.)

Local Modification. — Cabarrus: 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 937, s. 1; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 700, s. 1.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2000-146, s. 9, effective December 1, 2000, in subsection (a), inserted "or a State-owned railroad as defined in G.S. 124-11" and substituted "authority to the Secretary" for "authority to him."

CASE NOTES

Condemnation by Municipality of Land Owned by Railroad Company. — A municipal corporation had the power, under its charter and the general powers of eminent domain conferred upon it by statute, to condemn for necessary street purposes a strip of land owned by a railroad company, when such property was not being used by the railroad company and was neither necessary nor essential to the operation of its business. City of Goldsboro v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 246 N.C. 101, 97 S.E.2d 486 (1957), decided under prior law.

Acquisition of Land of One Railroad by Another. — Land acquired by one railroad company under a legislative grant of the right of eminent domain, and unnecessary for the exercise of its franchise or the discharge of its duties, is liable to be taken under the law of eminent domain for the use of another railroad company. North Carolina & R. & D.R.R. v. Carolina Cent. Ry., 83 N.C. 489 (1880), decided under prior law.

§ 40A-6. Reimbursement of owner for taxes paid on condemned property.

(a) An owner whose property is totally taken in fee simple by a condemnor exercising the power of eminent domain, under this Chapter or any other statute, shall be entitled to reimbursement from the condemnor of the pro rata portion of real property taxes paid by the owner that are allocable to a period subsequent to vesting of title in the condemnor, or the effective date of possession of the real property, whichever is earlier.

(b) An owner who meets the following conditions is entitled to reimbursement from the condemnor for all deferred taxes paid by the owner pursuant to G.S. 105-277.4(c) as a result of the condemnation:

(1) The owner is a natural person whose property is taken in fee simple by a condemnor exercising the power of eminent domain under this Chapter or any other statute.

(2) The owner also owns agricultural land, horticultural land, or forestland that is contiguous to the condemned property and that is in active production.

The definitions in G.S. 105-277.2 apply in this subsection. (1975, c. 439, s. 1; 1981, c. 919, s. 1; 1997-270, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to probation of the tax liability of the owner of condemned land, see also § 136-121.1.

§ 40A-7. Acquisition of whole parcel or building.

(a) When the proposed project requires condemnation of only a portion of a parcel of land leaving a remainder of such shape, size or condition that it is of little value, a condemnor may acquire the entire parcel by purchase or condemnation. If the remainder is to be condemned the petition filed under the provisions of G.S. 40A-20 or the complaint filed under the provisions of G.S. 40A-41 shall include:

(1) A determination by the condemnor that a partial taking of the land would substantially destroy the economic value or utility of the remainder; or

(2) A determination by the condemnor that an economy in the expenditure of public funds will be promoted by taking the entire parcel; or

(3) A determination by the condemnor that the interest of the public will be best served by acquiring the entire parcel.

(b) Residues acquired under this section may be sold or disposed of in any manner provided for the disposition of property, or may be exchanged for other property needed by the condemnor.

(c) When the proposed project requires condemnation of a portion of a building or other structure, the condemnor may acquire the entire building or structure by purchase or condemnation, together with the right to enter upon the surrounding land for the purpose of removing the building or structure. If the entire building is to be condemned the petition filed under the provisions of G.S. 40A-20, or the complaint filed under the provisions of G.S. 40A-41 shall include a determination by the condemnor either:

(1) That an economy in the expenditure of public funds will be promoted by acquiring the entire building or structure; or

(2) That it is not feasible to cut off a portion of the building or structure without destroying the whole; or

(3) That the convenience, safety, or improvement of the project will be promoted by acquiring the entire building or structure. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to compel the condemnor to condemn the underlying fee of the portion of any building or structure that lies outside the project. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Procedure for Condemning Excess Property. — The condemnor may condemn property in excess of that needed for an otherwise valid public purpose, as envisioned under this section, provided that it identifies the land to be condemned, demonstrates that the unneeded remainder of property is "of little value"; the condemnor has carried its burden of proof, the condemning authority must then affirmatively demonstrate the proposed condemnation is authorized by subsection (a)(1), (2), or (3). Piedmont Triad Regional Water Auth. v. Sumner Hills, Inc., 353 N.C. 343, 543 S.E.2d 844 (2001).

Applicability of Section. — This section applies only to cases involving partial takings. Town of Hillsborough v. Crabtree, 143 N.C. App. 707, 547 S.E.2d 139 (2001), cert. denied, 354 N.C. 75, — S.E.2d — (2001).

"Little Value" Not Shown. — Condemnor's failure on appeal to contradict the court's finding regarding the value of land it sought to condemn in excess of that needed for an otherwise valid public purpose supported the trial court's conclusion of law that the 97-acre remainder was "not of such shape, size or condition as to render it of little value." Piedmont Triad Regional Water Auth. v. Sumner Hills, Inc., 353 N.C. 343, 543 S.E.2d 844 (2001).

Appellate review is appropriate to protect the due process rights of landowners affected by a condemnor who seeks to condemn property in excess of what is needed for an otherwise valid public purpose; de novo review of whether the condemnor has satisfied the "of little value" requirement, as well as the condemnor's burden of proof under subsection (a)(1), (2), or (3), best ensures uniform and constitutional application of this section. Piedmont Triad Regional Water Auth. v. Sumner Hills, Inc., 353 N.C. 343, 543 S.E.2d 844 (2001).

§ 40A-8. Costs.

(a) In any action under the provisions of Article 2 or Article 3 of this Chapter, the court in its discretion may award to the owner a sum to reimburse the owner for charges he has paid for appraisers, engineers and plats, provided such appraisers or engineers testify as witnesses, and such plats are received into evidence as exhibits by order of the court.

(b) If a condemnor institutes a proceeding to acquire by condemnation any property and (i) if the final judgment in a resulting action is that the condemnor is not authorized to condemn the property, or (ii) if the condemnor abandons the action, the court with jurisdiction over the action shall after making appropriate findings of fact award each owner of the property sought to be condemned a sum that, in the opinion of the court based upon its findings of fact, will reimburse the owner for: his reasonable costs; disbursements; expenses (including reasonable attorney, appraisal, and engineering fees); and, any loss suffered by the owner because he was unable to transfer title to the property from the date of the filing of the complaint under G.S. 40A-41.

(c) If an action is brought against a condemnor under the provisions of G.S. 40A-20 or 40A-51 seeking compensation for the taking of any interest in property by the condemnor and judgment is for the owner the court shall award to the owner as a part of the judgment after appropriate finding of fact a sum that, in the opinion of the court based upon its finding of fact, will reimburse the owner as set out in subsection (b). (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

An award of counsel fees to the landowner is not authorized when judgment awards title to the condemnor and compensation to the landowner in a proceeding instituted by the condemnor. Housing Auth. v. Farabee, 284 N.C. 242, 200 S.E.2d 12 (1973), decided under prior law.

Award of Attorneys' Fees in Inverse Condemnation Proceeding. — It is consistent with this section to award attorneys' fees when a landowner's counterclaim is the impetus behind the condemnor's concession that it took land not described in the complaint and declaration of taking, and when a verdict demonstrates that the jury awarded compensation for that taking. City of Raleigh v. Hollingsworth, 96 N.C. App. 260, 385 S.E.2d 513 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 363, 389 S.E.2d 816 (1990).

Inference as to Award of Attorney's Fees Improper. — Provision by the legislature for the payment of reasonable attorneys' fees when the power of eminent domain was exercised by urban redevelopment commissions under § 160A-500 et seq. could not be used by the courts to infer a similar intention in condemnation proceedings instituted by housing authorities under other statutes containing no language definitely indicating such legislative intent. Housing Auth. v. Farabee, 284 N.C. 242, 200 S.E.2d 12 (1973), decided under prior law.

Plaintiff Could Not Proceed in One Action with Petition for Certiorari and Complaint for Costs, Damages, etc. — Plaintiff's petition for writ of certiorari to review town's decision denying plaintiff's subdivision permit application was improperly joined with her complaint against the town in which she alleged constitutional violations and sought damages, costs, and attorneys' fees pursuant to this section. Batch v. Town of Chapel Hill, 326 N.C. 1, 387 S.E.2d 655, cert. denied, 496 U.S. 931, 110 S. Ct. 2631, 110 L. Ed. 2d 651 (1990).

Failure to Make Findings of Fact. — Case remanded for failure of trial court to make findings of fact as required by this section in support of an award of attorney's fees. Concrete Mach. Co. v. City of Hickory, 134 N.C. App. 91, 517 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

Assessment of Costs Upheld. — Where although city filed a Declaration of Taking, it did not include property held to have been inversely condemned, the court's assessment of costs under this section was proper. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Cited in Yates v. Jamison, 782 F.2d 1182 (4th Cir. 1986); Finch v. City of Durham, 325 N.C. 352, 384 S.E.2d 8 (1989).

§ 40A-9. Removal of structures on condemned land; lien.

At the request of the owner the condemnor shall allow the owner of property acquired by condemnation to remove any timber, building, permanent improvement, or fixture wholly or partially located on or affixed to the property unless such removal would be inconsistent with the purpose for which condemnation is made, and shall specify a reasonable time within which it may be removed. If the report of the commissioners deducted the value of any such property to be removed from the award of compensation and allowed the cost of removal as an element of damages and the owner fails to remove it within the time allowed, the condemnor may remove it and the cost of the removal and storage of the property shall be chargeable against the owner and a lien upon any remainder of the property not acquired by the condemnor to be recovered or foreclosed in the manner provided by law for recovery of debt or foreclosure of mortgages. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

Applied in Scotland County v. Johnson, 131 N.C. App. 765, 509 S.E.2d 213 (1998).

§ 40A-10. Sale or other disposition of land condemned.

When any property condemned by the condemnor is no longer needed for the purpose for which it was condemned, it may be used for any other public purpose or may be sold or disposed of in the manner prescribed by law for the sale and disposition of surplus property. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-11. Right of entry prior to condemnation.

Any condemnor without having filed a petition or complaint, depositing any sum or taking any other action provided for in this Chapter, is authorized to enter upon any lands, but not structures, to make surveys, borings, examinations, and appraisals as may be necessary or expedient in carrying out and performing its rights or duties under this Chapter. The condemnor shall give 30 days' notice in writing to the owner at his last known address and the party in possession of the land of the intended entry authorized by this section.

Entry under this section shall not be deemed a trespass or taking within the meaning of this Chapter, however, the condemnor shall make reimbursement for any damage resulting from such activities, and the owner is entitled to bring an action to recover for the damage. If the owner recovers damages of twenty-five percent (25%) over the amount offered by the condemnor for reimbursement for its activities the court, in its discretion, may award reasonable attorney fees to the owner. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Constitutionality. — Statutes authorizing bodies having the power of eminent domain to enter onto land for purposes of conducting preliminary surveys and the like, containing no provision for compensation to the landowner for such use of the land, are not violative of constitutional provisions against the taking of private property for public purposes without prior payment of just compensation. Duke Power Co. v. Herndon, 26 N.C. App. 724, 217 S.E.2d 82 (1975).

Nature of Right of Entry. — The right of entry granted a railroad company under this section is only for the purpose of marking out the route and designating the building sites desired, to the end that the parties may come to an intelligent agreement as to the price, and without the consent of the owner the company cannot enter by virtue of this section for the purpose of building its road. State v. Wells, 142 N.C. 590, 55 S.E. 210 (1906).

Entry Prior to Condemnation Not a "Taking." — An entry for the purpose of laying out the proposed route for an easement does not constitute a "taking." Duke Power Co. v. Herndon, 26 N.C. App. 724, 217 S.E.2d 82 (1975).

The mere threat to take a right-of-way under the power of eminent domain and an isolated act in going upon the land to make a preliminary survey are insufficient to constitute a "taking." Penn v. Carolina Va. Coastal Corp., 231 N.C. 481, 57 S.E.2d 817 (1950).

Railroad Company Not a Trespasser. — A railroad company having the right of eminent domain, entering upon and occupying lands for building its tracks, is not a trespasser. Abernathy v. South & W.R.R., 150 N.C. 97, 63 S.E. 180 (1908).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

As to former § 40-3, see opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James R. Taylor, Executive Director, Statesville Housing Authority, 40 N.C.A.G. 314 (1969).

§ 40A-12. Additional rules.

Where the procedure for conducting an action under this Chapter is not expressly provided for in this Chapter or by the statutes governing civil procedure, or where the civil procedure statutes are inapplicable, the judge before whom such proceeding may be pending shall have the power to make all the necessary orders and rules of procedure necessary to carry into effect the object and intent of this Chapter. The practice in each case shall conform as near as may be to the practice in other civil actions. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applicability of Rules of Civil Procedure to Private Condemnation Proceedings. — This section, together with § 1-393, gives trial courts clear authority to apply the Rules of Civil Procedure, § 1A-1, in private condemnation proceedings, at least to the extent that those rules do not directly conflict with procedures specifically mandated by this Chapter. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 715, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

Applicability of Rule 60, Rules of Civil Procedure. — Rule 60, of the Rules of Civil Procedure, applies to proceedings under Chapter 40A in order to provide relief from judgments or orders when necessary to promote the interests of justice. City of Durham v. Woo, 129 N.C. App. 183, 497 S.E.2d 457 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 496, 518 S.E.2d 380 (1998).

Conversion of Private Condemnation Proceeding into Quiet Title Action. — Trial court did not err by applying § 1A-1, Rule 15(b) in such a way as to convert condemnation proceeding brought by private condemnors, with the consent of the parties, into an action to quiet title. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 715, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

Power of Court to Make Rules of Procedure. — The legislature, recognizing the difficulty of doing more than outlining the mode of practice so as to safeguard the rights of the parties, has conferred upon the court the power to make rules of procedure when they are not expressly provided by statute. Abernathy v. South & W.R.R., 150 N.C. 97, 63 S.E. 180 (1908), decided under prior law.

§ 40A-13. Costs and appeal.

In addition to any reimbursement provided for in G.S. 40A-8 the condemnor shall pay all court costs taxed by the court. Either party shall have a right of appeal to the appellate division for errors of law committed in any proceedings provided for in this Chapter in the same manner as in any other civil actions and it shall not be necessary that an appeal bond be posted. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to provision that petitioner pay costs in certain condemnation proceedings, see § 6-22(3).

CASE NOTES

Taxing of Costs Where Owner Not Entitled to Recovery. — In an action to recover damages for the taking of land for use as a sidewalk by defendant municipality, where the jury found plaintiff was entitled to recover nothing, the court could properly tax the costs against the defendant. Jervis v. Mars Hill, 214 N.C. 323, 199 S.E. 96 (1938), decided under prior law.

Under former law, when it was decided by the superior court that defendant owner's benefit equalled the damages, the plaintiff corporation would pay the costs; however, if the defendant appealed and the decision of the lower court was affirmed, then the cost of the appeal would fall upon the defendant. Madison County R.R. v. Gahagan, 161 N.C. 190, 76 S.E. 696 (1912), decided under prior law.

Article 2.

Condemnation Proceedings by Private Condemnors.

§ 40A-19. Proceedings by private condemnors.

Any private condemnor enumerated in G.S. 40A-3(a), possessing by law the right of eminent domain in this State shall have the right to acquire property required for the purposes of its incorporation or for the purposes specified in this Chapter in the manner and by the special proceedings herein prescribed. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 13; Code, ss. 1943, 2009; 1885, c. 168; 1893, c. 63; 1899, c. 64; 1901, cc. 6, 41, s. 2; 1903, c. 159, s. 16; c. 562; Rev., s. 2579; C.S., s. 1715; 1951, c. 59, s. 1; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Statutes prescribing the procedure to condemn lands should be strictly construed. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 8 N.C. App. 376, 174 S.E.2d 839 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

One cannot condemn that which he owns. VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963).

Condemnation under the power of eminent domain is a proceeding in rem against the property. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Hagins, 258 N.C. 220, 128 S.E.2d 391 (1962).

Only when the parties cannot agree may condemnation proceedings be instituted. Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 257 N.C. 717, 127 S.E.2d 539 (1962).

Statutory method of condemning a right-of-way can be exercised when the parties are unable to agree upon the terms of acquisition. Allen v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 102 N.C. 381, 9 S.E. 4 (1889).

Before the right of eminent domain accrues to the condemnor, there must exist an inability to agree for the purchase price. This has been held to be a preliminary jurisdictional fact. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Matthis, 2 N.C. App. 233, 163 S.E.2d 35 (1968).

And Condemnor Must First Make a Bona Fide Effort to Purchase. — Before the agency seeking to acquire can ask the court to condemn, it must make a bona fide effort to purchase by private negotiation. VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963).

Unless Minors Are Interested in Land Sought to Be Acquired. — It is not required of a quasi public service corporation authorized to condemn land that it first endeavor to agree with the owners when it is made to appear that infants have an interest therein, and otherwise that a title to the lands could not be acquired in such way. Western Carolina Power Co. v. Moses, 191 N.C. 744, 133 S.E. 5 (1926).

Procedure Applicable Only to Acquisition of Right, etc., to Specific Land. — Provisions for commissioners, appraisal, viewing the premises, etc., are applicable only to instances where the condemnor acquires title and right to possession of specific land. Eller v. Board of Educ., 242 N.C. 584, 89 S.E.2d 144 (1955).

Procedure Not Applicable to Trespasses. — Provisions with regard to procedure by private condemnors only apply to the mode of acquiring title to real estate and getting a right-of-way, and have no application to trespasses committed outside of the right-of-way in building the road; for such trespasses, the corporations are liable in a civil action. Bridgers v. Dill, 97 N.C. 222, 1 S.E. 767 (1887).

Applicability of Procedure to Railroads. — The method of proceeding prescribed for the condemnation of land by railroad corporations is applicable to all railroads, whether formed under the general law or special act of incorporation. Allen v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 102 N.C. 381, 9 S.E. 4 (1889).

Condemnation by Department of Transportation. — The procedure prescribed by former § 40-11, et seq. was applicable to condemnation proceedings instituted by the Board (now Department) of Transportation prior to July 1, 1960, while the procedure presently applicable to condemnation proceedings by the Board (now Department) of Transportation is prescribed by § 136-103 et seq. City of Kings Mountain v. Goforth, 283 N.C. 316, 196 S.E.2d 231 (1973). As to condemnation by the former State Highway Commission and former Board (now Department) of Transportation, see also Yancey v. North Carolina State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 222 N.C. 106, 22 S.E.2d 256 (1942); State v. Alston, 272 N.C. 278, 158 S.E.2d 52 (1967); State v. Pritchard, 227 N.C. 168, 41 S.E.2d 287 (1947); State v. Lashley, 21 N.C. App. 83, 203 S.E.2d 71 (1974), cert. denied, Cox v. Cox, 92 N.C. App. 702, 376 S.E.2d 13 (1989); Hamlin v. Hamlin, 302 N.C. 478, 276 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

As to procedure for condemnation by county board of education, see Board of Educ. v. Forrest, 193 N.C. 519, 137 S.E. 431 (1927).

As to acquisition of property by redevelopment commission, see Redevelopment Comm'n v. Abeyounis, 1 N.C. App. 270, 161 S.E.2d 191 (1968); Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Applicability of Rules Governing Civil Actions. — As a proceeding to condemn land under statutory power is a special proceeding, the requirement of § 1-393 that "except as otherwise provided" special proceedings shall be governed by the same rules laid down for civil actions is applicable thereto. Nantahala Power & Light Co. v. Whiting Mfg. Co., 209 N.C. 560, 184 S.E. 48 (1936).

Applicability of Rules of Civil Procedure to Private Condemnation Proceedings. — This section, together with § 1-393, gives trial courts clear authority to apply the Rules of Civil Procedure, § 1A-1, in private condemnation proceedings, at least to the extent that those rules do not directly conflict with procedures specifically mandated by this Chapter. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 715, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

Conversion of Private Condemnation Proceeding into Quiet Title Action. — Trial court did not err by applying § 1A-1, Rule 15(b) in such a way as to convert condemnation proceeding brought by private condemnors with the consent of the parties, into an action to quiet title. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 715, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

Payment Prerequisite to Right of Entry. — If the parties cannot agree, the company may proceed to condemn the land; it does not acquire the right to enter for the purpose of constructing the road until the amount of the appraisement has been paid into court. State v. Wells, 142 N.C. 590, 55 S.E. 210 (1906).

A condemnor acquires no right to possession in a condemnation proceeding until it pays into court the value of the subject property, as determined by appraisers. City of Kings Mountain v. Goforth, 283 N.C. 316, 196 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

And to Acquisition of Title. — A condemnor acquires no title to the property until it obtains a final judgment and pays to the landowner the amount of compensation fixed by such judgment. City of Kings Mountain v. Goforth, 283 N.C. 316, 196 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

Use of Property by Owner Until Payment. — Absent unusual circumstances, the landowner may continue to use his property from the commencement of a condemnation proceeding until the payment into court by the condemnor of the value of the property as determined by commissioners, to the same extent and in the same manner as he had been using it prior to commencement of the condemnation proceeding. City of Kings Mountain v. Goforth, 283 N.C. 316, 196 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

Each owner is entitled to defend upon the ground that his property does not qualify for the purpose intended, or that its selection was the result of arbitrary or capricious conduct on the part of the taking agency. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Hagins, 258 N.C. 220, 128 S.E.2d 391 (1962).

A landowner may not maintain a proceeding unless there has been a taking under the power of eminent domain. Hughes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 275 N.C. 121, 165 S.E.2d 321 (1969).

Statutory remedy held the only one open to one whose land was appropriated as a right-of-way. McIntire v. Western N.C.R.R., 67 N.C. 278 (1872); Allen v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 102 N.C. 381, 9 S.E. 4 (1889).

Election to Sue for Damages. — Where a railroad or other public service corporation has made the entry, appropriated the right-of-way, constructed its road and is operating the same, and neither party has seen fit to resort to the statutory method, the owner of the land has the right at his election to sue for permanent damages, and on payment of the same the easement will pass to the defendant. Mason v. Durham County, 175 N.C. 638, 96 S.E. 110 (1918).

Cited in VEPCO v. Tillett, 80 N.C. App. 383, 343 S.E.2d 188 (1986); Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co. v. McLeod, 321 N.C. 426, 364 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

§ 40A-20. Petition filed; contents.

For the purpose of acquiring property a condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(a), or the owner of the property sought to be condemned, may present a petition to the clerk of the superior court of any county in which the real estate described in the petition is situated, praying for the appointment of commissioners of appraisal. The petition shall be signed and verified. If filed by the condemnor, it must contain a description of the property which the condemnor seeks to acquire; and it must state that the condemnor is duly incorporated, and that it is its intention in good faith to conduct and carry on the public business authorized by its charter, stating in detail the nature of its public business, and the specific use of the property; and that the property described in the petition is required for the purpose of conducting the proposed business. The petition, if filed by the condemnor, must also contain a statement as to whether the owner will be permitted to remove all or a specified portion of any buildings, structures, permanent improvements, or fixtures situated on or affixed to the land. The petition, whether filed by the condemnor or the owner, must also state the names and places of residence of all other owners, so far as the same can by reasonable diligence be ascertained, or those who claim to be owners of the property. If any such persons are infants, their ages, as near as may be known, must be stated; and if any such persons are incompetents, inebriates or are unknown, that fact must be stated, together with any other allegations and statements of liens or encumbrances on the property which the condemnor or the owner may see fit to make.

Nothing in this section shall in any manner affect an owner's common-law right to bring an action in tort for damage to his property. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 14; Code, s. 1944; 1893, c. 396; Rev., s. 2580; 1907, c. 783, s. 3; C.S., s. 1716; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Contents of Petition.

I. IN GENERAL.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Perfunctory Proceeding Not Intended. — A perfunctory proceeding leading automatically to the granting of the petition is not contemplated by the law; the landowner may deny any of the allegations in the petition, and is entitled to a hearing before commissioners are appointed to appraise the damages he will sustain if his property is taken. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

"Taking" Prerequisite to Proceeding by Owner. — The owner's right to have the land appraised must necessarily be predicated upon a taking of the property by the corporation possessing the right of eminent domain. And "taking" under the power of eminent domain may be defined as entering upon private property for more than a momentary period, and, under warrant or color of legal authority, devoting it to a public use, or otherwise informally appropriating or injuriously affecting it in such a way as substantially to oust the owner and deprive him of all beneficial enjoyment thereof. Penn v. Carolina Va. Coastal Corp., 231 N.C. 481, 57 S.E.2d 817 (1950).

Owner may not maintain a proceeding for the assessment of damages until there has been a taking of his property under the power of eminent domain; hence, demurrer to a petition was properly sustained when its allegations amounted to no more than that respondent had threatened to take an easement and had made preliminary surveys incidental thereto, since in such instance the petition failed to allege a taking of the property. Penn v. Carolina Va. Coastal Corp., 231 N.C. 481, 57 S.E.2d 817 (1950).

Recovery of Compensation Where Taking Not for Private Purpose. — Where there was no evidence upon the record showing that the taking over of a road was for a private purpose sufficient to raise an issue of fact, the plaintiff was remitted to his rights for the recovery of just compensation. Reed v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 209 N.C. 648, 184 S.E. 513 (1936).

Recovery of Consideration Agreed On. — Where the State Highway Commission (now Department of Transportation) failed to pay consideration for a right-of-way easement executed by landowners in accordance with an agreement, the landowners could bring an action at law in the superior court to recover such consideration; a special condemnation proceeding was not proper. Sale v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 242 N.C. 612, 89 S.E.2d 290 (1955).

Setting Aside of Fraudulent Deed. — Where a deed for a right-of-way was obtained from a landowner by fraud on the part of a railroad company, the superior court had jurisdiction to set aside the conveyance, but could not go further in the same action and ascertain and enforce payment of damages suffered by the grantor by reason of the appropriation of his land as a right-of-way by the company, although such appropriation was made by the company under the deed in question. Allen v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 102 N.C. 381, 9 S.E. 4 (1889).

Fact that cotenant granted a right-of-way to railroad would not prevent another owner from instituting proceedings for the assessment of damages sustained by him, nor would such facts prevent the cotenant who had made such grant from becoming a party to the proceedings and having his rights adjusted thereunder, upon a claim that the company had forfeited its right under the grant by failure to comply with the conditions thereof, even though such forfeiture did not occur until after the petition was filed by the cotenant. Hill v. Glendon & Gulf Mining & Mfg. Co., 113 N.C. 259, 18 S.E. 171 (1893).

Proceedings Involving Telegraph Companies. — Inasmuch as former § 56-7 set forth all the necessary statements for the petition of the telegraph company, and former § 56-8 provided for its service, only so much of the railroad law as directed proceedings after the petition was before the court was made applicable to telegraph companies. Phillips v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 130 N.C. 513, 41 S.E. 1022, rev'd on other grounds on rehearing, 131 N.C. 225, 42 S.E. 587 (1902).

Joinder — Of Interested Parties Generally. — The petition, whether filed by an owner or by the company, should state the names of all persons interested, and all of them should be in court before the commissioners are appointed. Hill v. Glendon & Gulf Mining & Mfg. Co., 113 N.C. 259, 18 S.E. 171 (1893).

In an action by the owner of an interest in lands against the State Highway Commission (now Department of Transportation) to recover compensation for the taking of a portion of the land, the joinder, as a respondent, of the owner of the other interest in the land did not result in a misjoinder of parties and causes, since the action was to enforce a single right to recover compensation, and the joinder of all parties having an interest in the land was required. Tyson v. State Hwy. Comm'n, 249 N.C. 732, 107 S.E.2d 630 (1959).

Same — Of Owners of Several Tracts. — Where it is sought to condemn several tracts of land belonging to different owners, all the owners may be joined in one proceeding in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary. Such a course is convenient, and can injure no one if damages are separately assessed to each owner. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Hagins, 258 N.C. 220, 128 S.E.2d 391 (1962).

Trial of Intervenor's Claim Not Required Prior to Intervention. — The court is not required to try and determine the validity of a claim of ownership advanced by an omitted claimant before it permits him to intervene in the proceeding for the purpose of asserting his claim. City of Raleigh v. Edwards, 234 N.C. 528, 67 S.E.2d 669 (1951).

Clerk Held to Have Jurisdiction. — Where the charter of a railroad company provided that it might condemn land by a proceeding commenced before a court of record having common-law jurisdiction, it was held that the clerk of a superior court had jurisdiction of such proceeding. Durham & N.R.R. v. Richmond & D.R.R., 106 N.C. 16, 10 S.E. 1041 (1890).

Waiver of Right to Require Proceeding before Clerk. — Where a city was sued for damages for running its water-supply pipe on the plaintiff's lands, and it was made to appear that the pipeline was upon the State's highway over the plaintiff's land, the plaintiff, as the servient owner, could maintain his action; the denial of his title or right by the defendant was a waiver of its right that the plaintiff should have proceeded before the clerk under this section, so that the plaintiff could maintain his action of trespass in the superior court. Rouse v. Kinston, 188 N.C. 1, 123 S.E. 482 (1924).

Waiver of Preliminary Hearing. — Where it was stipulated by the parties in condemnation proceedings that a hearing before commissioners appointed by the clerk should be waived, and judgment was rendered determining the amount of damages, and on appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment as to the compensation allowed and remanded the cause for error in the exclusion of another element of compensation to which defendants were entitled, on the subsequent trial to determine the amount recoverable on such other element of compensation the parties were bound by the stipulation waiving a preliminary hearing by commissioners, and plaintiff's exception to the trial of the issue without such preliminary hearing would not be sustained. State ex rel. Myers v. Wilmington-Wrightsville Beach Causeway Co., 205 N.C. 508, 171 S.E. 859 (1933).

Clerk's Findings of Facts Not Final. — The finding of the facts of the clerk upon preliminary allegations in condemnation proceedings are not final and may be appealed from. Johnson City S.R.R. v. South & W.R.R., 148 N.C. 59, 61 S.E. 683 (1908).

Necessity of Taking Is Legislative Question. — As a general rule, once the public purpose is established, the necessity or expediency of the taking is a legislative, and not a judicial question. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 36 N.C. App. 662, 245 S.E.2d 390, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 548, 248 S.E.2d 726 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 912, 99 S. Ct. 1224, 59 L. Ed. 2d 460 (1979).

Judicial Inquiry into Allegations of Bad Faith. — Upon specific allegations tending to show bad faith, malice, wantonness, or oppressive and manifest abuse of discretion by the condemnor, the issue raised becomes the subject of judicial inquiry as a question of fact to be determined by the judge. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 36 N.C. App. 662, 245 S.E.2d 390, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 548, 248 S.E.2d 726 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 912, 99 S. Ct. 1224, 59 L. Ed. 2d 460 (1979).

II. CONTENTS OF PETITION.

Section stating the requisites of the petition must be strictly complied with, especially by a private corporation as distinguished from a public one or municipality. Johnson City S.R.R. v. South & W.R.R., 148 N.C. 59, 61 S.E. 683 (1908). See Durham & N.R.R. v. Richmond & D.R.R., 106 N.C. 16, 10 S.E. 1041 (1890).

Affirmative Showing of Compliance with Statute. — In order for a redevelopment commission to establish a right to acquire property by condemnation, the petition must affirmatively show that the statutory provisions have been complied with. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 8 N.C. App. 376, 174 S.E.2d 839, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

Sufficiency of Petition. — A petition to condemn land for urban renewal is sufficient under the Rules of Civil Procedure to state a claim for relief where it gives notice of the nature and basis of the petitioners' claim and the type of case brought, and alleges generally the occurrence or performance of the conditions precedent. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

The petition must state in detail the nature of the public business and the specific use to which the land will be put. These allegations are jurisdictional in character. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Abeyounis, 1 N.C. App. 270, 161 S.E.2d 191 (1968); State Hwy. Comm'n v. Matthis, 2 N.C. App. 233, 163 S.E.2d 35 (1968).

Controversy as to what land condemnor is seeking to condemn has no place in condemnation proceedings. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Creasman, 262 N.C. 390, 137 S.E.2d 497 (1964).

Petition to Contain Accurate Description of Property Sought. — Ordinarily, condemnation proceedings are instituted by the condemnor by petition containing an accurate description of the property which it seeks to condemn, thereby placing the landowner on the defendant's side of the indexes and cross-indexes of the public records and furnishing accessible means by which the property may be identified. Hughes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 275 N.C. 121, 165 S.E.2d 321 (1969).

And Not Merely a Description of the Entire Tract. — A description of the property sought to be acquired, and not merely a description of the entire tract over which the right-of-way, privilege, or easement is to run, is necessary. City of Gastonia v. Glenn, 218 N.C. 510, 11 S.E.2d 459 (1940).

When the condemnor seeks to follow the procedure permitted by statute, his petition must contain a description of the property actually in litigation, and not merely a description of the entire tract. The property must "first be located." Hughes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 275 N.C. 121, 165 S.E.2d 321 (1969).

With Reference to Uncontroverted Monuments. — It is for the condemnor to determine what land it seeks to condemn and to describe it in its petition by reference to uncontroverted monuments. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Creasman, 262 N.C. 390, 137 S.E.2d 497 (1964); Duke Power Co. v. Herndon, 26 N.C. App. 724, 217 S.E.2d 82 (1975).

The condemnor must "first locate the property." Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Creasman, 262 N.C. 390, 137 S.E.2d 497 (1964).

So That Owner Knows Exact Limits. — The statutory procedure for the award of just compensation to the owner of private property appropriated to public use presupposes that the owner shall know with certainty the exact limits of the appropriation made. Cannon v. City of Wilmington, 242 N.C. 711, 89 S.E.2d 595

(1955), cert. denied, 352 U.S. 842, 77 S. Ct. 66, 1 L. Ed. 2d 58 (1956).

Filing of Map and Profile Required. — The filing of a proper profile is a condition precedent before an order of condemnation shall be granted to a railroad. Kinston & C.R.R. v. Stroud, 132 N.C. 413, 43 S.E. 913 (1903).

It is deemed necessary, so that the landowner may know what land is intended to be appropriated and can have his grievances adjusted, to require the filing of maps, profiles, etc. Durham & N.R.R. v. Richmond & D.R.R., 106 N.C. 16, 10 S.E. 1041 (1890).

Failure to file a map and profile may be cured by amendment. Holly Shelter R.R. v. Newton, 133 N.C. 132, 133 N.C. 136, 45 S.E. 549, 45 S.E. 549 (1903); State v. Wells, 142 N.C. 590, 55 S.E. 210 (1906).

Only Property Described May Be Acquired. — Ordinarily, absent an amendment, the only property a condemnor may acquire is that described in the petition. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Creasman, 262 N.C. 390, 137 S.E.2d 497 (1964).

Remedy for Failure of Agency to Define Extent of Claim. — Where the State Highway Commission (now Department of Transportation) claimed a right-of-way over land, the landowner was entitled as a matter of right to require that the Commission (now Department) define with particularity the location and extent of its claim and if it refused or failed to do so, the landowner could invoke the remedy of mandamus. Cannon v. City of Wilmington, 242 N.C. 711, 89 S.E.2d 595 (1955).

Allegation of Damages. — In a special proceeding to assess compensation for land taken from an educational institution for highway purposes, it was not required that petitioners allege with particularity the various respects in which the property was adversely affected by the new highway, and since evidence in support of all elements of damage recoverable is competent under the general allegation of damage, petitioners were not prejudiced by an order striking from the petition allegations relating thereto. Gallimore v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 241 N.C. 350, 85 S.E.2d 392 (1955).

As to statement of inability to acquire title required by former § 40-12, see Hill v. Glendon & Gulf Mining & Mfg. Co., 113 N.C. 259, 18 S.E. 171 (1893); Durham v. Rigsbee, 141 N.C. 128, 53 S.E. 531 (1906); Johnson City S.R.R. v. South & W.R.R., 148 N.C. 59, 61 S.E. 683 (1908); Western Carolina Power Co. v. Moses, 191 N.C. 744, 133 S.E. 5 (1926); Red Springs City Bd. of Educ. v. McMillan, 250 N.C. 485, 108 S.E.2d 895 (1959); VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963); State Hwy. Comm'n v. Phillips, 267 N.C. 369, 148 S.E.2d 282 (1966).

§ 40A-21. Notice of proceedings.

Notice of all proceedings brought hereunder shall be filed with the clerk of superior court of each county in which any part of the land is located in the form and manner provided by G.S. 1-116, and the clerk shall index and cross-index this notice as required by G.S. 1-117. In the record of lis pendens and in the judgment docket required by G.S. 7A-109 the clerk shall always index the name of the condemnor as the plaintiff and the name of the property owner as the defendant irrespective of whether the condemning party is the plaintiff or defendant. The filing of such notice shall be constructive notice of the proceeding to any person who subsequently acquires any interest in or lien upon said property, and the condemnor shall take all property condemned under this Article free of the claims of any such person. (1969, c. 864; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-22. Service.

A summons as in other cases of special proceedings, together with a copy of the petition, must be served on all persons whose estates or interests are to be affected by the proceedings, at least 10 days prior to the hearing of the same by the court. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 14; Code, s. 1944; Rev., s. 2581; C.S., s. 1717; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to summons in special proceedings, see §§ 1-394, 1-395.

CASE NOTES

Issuance of Summons. — A condemnation proceeding is a special proceeding and a summons should issue as in all other cases. Carolina & N.W.R.R. v. Pennearden Lumber & Mfg. Co., 132 N.C. 644, 44 S.E. 358 (1903), decided under prior law.

Applied in VEPCO v. Tillett, 73 N.C. App. 512, 327 S.E.2d 2 (1985).

§ 40A-23. Service where parties unknown.

If the person on whom service of summons and petition is to be made is unknown, or his residence is unknown and cannot by reasonable diligence be ascertained, then service may be made by publishing a notice, stating the time and place within which such person must appear and plead, the object thereof, with a description of the land to be affected by the proceedings, in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(9)c. In such cases the State Treasurer shall be served as custodian of the Escheat Fund and may become a party to the action. (Code, s. 1944, subsec. 5; Rev., s. 2582; C.S., s. 1718; 1971, c. 1093, s. 18; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The reference in this section to § 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(9)c was made prior to extensive rewording of the material formerly located in § 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(9). As to service by publication on a party that cannot otherwise be served, see now § 1A-1, Rule 4(j1). As to manner of service to exercise jurisdiction in rem or quasi-in-rem, see now § 1A-1, Rule 4(k).

CASE NOTES

When service by publication inadequate. — Service by publication is not an adequate substitute for actual notice, when giving actual notice to identified parties is neither impossible, impractical, nor unreasonable. United States v. Chatham, 323 F.2d 95 (4th Cir. 1963), decided under prior law.

When condemnation plaintiffs take the easy course, they should not be heard to say that the proceedings had upon published notice addressed to unknown persons foreclosed the rights of interested parties who were readily identifiable and easily served, particularly when the condemnation plaintiff knew, or should have known, that the unidentified persons had a substantial interest in the litigation. United States v. Chatham, 323 F.2d 95 (4th Cir. 1963), decided under prior law.

§ 40A-24. Orders served as in special proceedings in absence of other provisions.

In all cases not herein otherwise provided for, service of orders, notices, and other papers in the special proceedings authorized by this Chapter may be made as in other special proceedings. (Code, s. 1944, subsec. 7; Rev., s. 2583; C.S., s. 1719; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to special proceedings generally, see § 1-393 et seq.

§ 40A-25. Answer to petition; hearing; commissioners appointed.

On presenting such petition to the clerk of superior court, with proof of service of a copy thereof, and of the summons, all or any of the persons whose estates or interests are to be affected by the proceedings may answer such petition and show cause against granting the prayer of the same. The clerk shall hear the proofs and allegations of the parties, and if no sufficient cause is shown against granting the prayer of the petition, shall make an order for the appointment of three commissioners and shall fix the time and place for the first meeting of the commissioners. Each commissioner shall be a resident of the county wherein the property being condemned lies who has no right, title, or interest in or to the property condemned, is not related within the third degree to the owner or to the spouse of the owner, is not an officer, employee or agent of the condemnor, and is disinterested in the rights of the parties in every way. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 15; Code, s. 1945; Rev., s. 2584; C.S., s. 1720; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Strict Construction. — Statutes prescribing the procedure to condemn lands should be strictly construed. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 8 N.C. App. 376, 174 S.E.2d 839, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

Legislative Intent with Regard to Parties. — Tenant having month-to-month tenancy based upon periodic rental payments without a written document is a person having an estate or interest affected by condemnation proceedings; if the legislature had intended to give a diminished status to month-to-month tenancies, it could have expressly done so. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. v. Calco Enters., 132 N.C. App. 237, 511 S.E.2d 671 (1999).

The clerk is to hold the hearing on the challenge only after notice to the parties. Collins v. North Carolina State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 237 N.C. 277, 74 S.E.2d 709 (1953); City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

The statutory procedure is designed to provide to the landowner a fair determination of his damages; it would be converted into a farce if it were construed to permit the clerk to appoint commissioners, the commissioners to meet and determine the damages and report the same to the clerk, and the clerk 20 days later to enter a final judgment, all with no notice whatever to the landowner, other than the original summons in the proceedings, and all before the time for filing his answer, as extended by the clerk, expired. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Effect of Notice of Hearing. — If the landowner is given notice of the hearing before the clerk, this would, no doubt, be sufficient to charge him with notice of an order entered by the clerk, at such hearing, appointed commissioners and fixing the time and place for their first meeting. In turn, this would charge him with notice of actions of the commissioners at such first meeting, including the adjournment of such meeting to another time and place. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Notice of Motions. — All motions made before the clerk, other than those grantable as a matter of course or those specifically provided for by law, require notice to the parties affected thereby. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Advisability of Street Widening Project in Discretion of Aldermen. — The advisability of widening a street is a matter committed by law to the sound discretion of the aldermen, with which neither the defendants nor the courts can interfere; it is a political and administrative measure of which the defendants are not even entitled to notice or to be heard. Durham v. Rigsbee, 141 N.C. 128, 53 S.E. 531 (1906).

Railroad as Judge of Necessity of Land for Right-of-Way. — A railroad company is entitled to so much of the right-of-way as may be necessary for the purpose of the company; hence, the denial by a person in the possession of a portion of the right-of-way that the portion in controversy was necessary for the purposes of the company did not raise an issue of fact to be determined by a jury, as the company was the judge of the necessity and extent of such use. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Olive, 142 N.C. 257, 55 S.E. 263 (1906).

When Extent of Rights to Be Acquired Are an Issuable Question. — The extent and limit of the rights to be acquired are primarily and very largely referred to the companies or grantees of the power, and only becomes an issuable question, usually determinable by the court, on allegation of fact tending to show bad faith on the part of the companies or an oppressive or manifest abuse of their discretion. Yadkin River Power Co. v. Wissler, 160 N.C. 269, 76 S.E. 267 (1912), distinguishing, Carolina Cent. R.R. v. Love, 81 N.C. 434 (1879).

Clerk Without Authority to Appoint Commissioners Until Determination of Controverted Facts. — In a special proceeding to condemn land for urban renewal, the clerk of superior court does not have authority to issue an order appointing commissioners of appraisal where respondents deny the allegations of the petition; the record must show that after a proper hearing the controverted facts had been determined in favor of petitioner, the clerk's finding that commissioners should be appointed not being a sufficient finding of the controverted facts. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 8 N.C. App. 376, 174 S.E.2d 839 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Procedure Where Issuable Matters Are Raised Before Clerk. — Where issuable matters are raised before the clerk he should pass upon these matters presented in the record, and have the land assessed through commissioners, as the statute directs, allowing the parties, by exceptions, to raise any question of law or fact issuable or otherwise to be considered on appeal to the superior court from his award of damages, as provided by law. Selma v. Nobles, 183 N.C. 322, 111 S.E. 543 (1922).

When respondents in a special proceeding to condemn land for urban renewal deny the allegations of the petition, the clerk of superior court has the duty, after notice, to hear the parties and pass upon the disputed matters presented on the record; if the allegations of the petition are found to be true, the clerk must then appoint commissioners to appraise the property and assess damages for the taking. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 8 N.C. App. 376, 174 S.E.2d 839 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Procedure Where Only Issue of Just Compensation Is Raised. — Where the answer does not deny the right of the city to acquire the desired easements by condemnation and raises no issue save that of just compensation, the only matter to be determined by the clerk at the initial hearing is the selection and appointment of the commissioners and the fixing of the time and place for their first meeting. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

As to protection of rights of parties by interlocutory injunction, see Selma v. Nobles, 183 N.C. 322, 111 S.E. 543 (1922).

Pretrial Conference. — In a condemnation proceeding, the trial court should conduct a pretrial conference where the record shows that the parties have different concepts of what phase of the matter they are going to try. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 8 N.C. App. 376, 174 S.E.2d 839 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

If corporate charter is on its face inoperative and void, a court will so declare it in any proceedings to condemn lands by virtue of the right of eminent domain claimed thereunder. Kinston & C.R.R. v. Stroud, 132 N.C. 413, 43 S.E. 913 (1903); Holly Shelter R.R. v. Newton, 133 N.C. 132, 133 N.C. 136, 45 S.E. 549, 45 S.E. 549 (1903).

Collateral Attack by Landowner Not Upheld. — The court would not sustain a collateral attack and deny the right of condemnation upon a suggestion that the petitioner might exceed its chartered right in the use of the property acquired by condemnation. Wadsworth Land Co. v. Piedmont Traction Co., 162 N.C. 314, 78 S.E. 297 (1913).

Order appointing commissioners to assess damages is interlocutory, and no appeal will be entertained until after final judgment upon the report of the commissioners. American Union Tel. Co. v. Wilmington, C. & A.R.R., 83 N.C. 420 (1880); Commissioners of Davie County v. Cook, 86 N.C. 18 (1882); Norfolk & S.R.R. v. Warren, 92 N.C. 620 (1885); Hendrick v. Carolina Cent. R.R., 98 N.C. 431, 4 S.E. 184 (1887), distinguishing Click v. Western N.C.R.R., 98 N.C. 390, 4 S.E. 183 (1887).

Appeal from Ruling of Clerk. — It is only after the clerk of superior court confirms or fails to confirm the report of the commissioners that either party aggrieved by the ruling of the clerk may appeal; such appeal carries the entire record up for review by the trial judge upon the questions of fact. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

Finding of Facts by Court Conclusive. — In condemnation proceedings, when it is proper for the lower court to find the facts, its findings upon competent supporting evidence are conclusive. Johnson City S.R.R. v. South & W.R.R., 148 N.C. 59, 61 S.E. 683 (1908).

Cited in Hancock v. Tenery, 131 N.C. App. 149, 505 S.E.2d 315 (1998).

§ 40A-26. Powers and duties of commissioners.

The commissioners, before entering upon the discharge of their duties, shall take and subscribe an oath that they will fairly and impartially appraise the property in the petition. Any one of them may issue subpoenas, administer oaths to witnesses, and any two of them may adjourn the proceedings before them from time to time, in their discretion. Whenever they meet, except by the appointment of the clerk or pursuant to adjournment, they shall cause 10 days' notice of such meeting to be given to the parties who are affected by their proceedings, or their attorney or agent. They shall view the premises described in the petition, hear the proofs and allegations of the parties, and reduce the testimony, if any is taken by them, to writing. After the testimony is closed in each case, and without any unnecessary delay, and before proceeding to the examination of any other claim, a majority of the commissioners being present and acting, shall ascertain and determine the compensation which ought justly to be made by the condemnor to the owners of the property appraised by them. The commissioners shall determine the compensation to be awarded in accordance with the principles established by Article 4 of this Chapter. They shall report the same to the clerk within 10 days. (1871-2, c. 138, ss. 16-18; Code, s. 1946; 1891, c. 160; Rev., s. 2585; C.S., s. 1721; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Determination of Commissioners Not an Interference with Right to Jury Trial. — It seems to have been settled in Raleigh & G.R.R. v. Davis, 19 N.C. 451 (1837), that the Constitution guarantees the right to trial by jury in controversies respecting property only in cases where, under the common law, the demand that the facts should be so found could not have been refused, and that in fixing the quantum of compensation to the landowner for a right-of-way condemned to the use of a railroad, commissioners do not invade the province that, under the ancient law, belonged peculiarly and exclusively to the jury. Chowan & S.R.R. v. Parker, 105 N.C. 246, 11 S.E. 328 (1890). As to provision for jury trial on appeal, see § 40A-29.

Availability of Method to Landowner. — The method prescribed for arriving at compensation for condemnation of land is open to the landowner as well. Hughes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 275 N.C. 121, 165 S.E.2d 321 (1969).

Allegation of Compliance with Statutory Requirements. — In order to invoke the power of eminent domain, a redevelopment commission must affirmatively allege compliance with the statutory requirements. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

The law contemplates notice to the landowner of the meeting of the commissioners at which they are to "hear" his proofs and allegations. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

The commissioners are required to give the parties or their attorneys notice of the meeting at which the report is adopted and ordered filed. Collins v. North Carolina State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 237 N.C. 277, 74 S.E.2d 709 (1953).

The statutory procedure is designed to provide to the landowner a fair determination of his damages. It would be converted into a farce if it were construed to permit the clerk to appoint commissioners, the commissioners to meet and determine the damages and report the same to the clerk, and the clerk 20 days later to enter a final judgment, all with no notice whatever to the landowner, other than the original summons in the proceedings, and all before the time for filing his answer, as extended by the clerk, expired. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

If the landowner is given notice of the hearing before the clerk, this would, no doubt, be sufficient to charge him with notice of an order entered by the clerk, at such hearing, appointing commissioners and fixing the time and place for their first meeting. In turn, this would charge him with notice of actions of the commissioners at such first meeting, including the adjournment of such meeting to another time and place. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Statutory procedure for condemnation does not contemplate that commissioners pass upon issues of fact prerequisite to an adjudication as to whether a landowner is entitled to recover for an alleged appropriation by use of an easement of flight. City of Charlotte v. Spratt, 263 N.C. 656, 140 S.E.2d 341 (1965).

Report Held to Fail to Show Hearing. — A commissioners' report that simply stated that the commissioners met on a certain day in the office of the clerk and subsequently visited the premises of the defendant, and after taking into full consideration the quality and quantity of the land involved, and all inconveniences likely to result to defendant from the condemnation of the rights-of-way, asserted the damages at zero, did not purport to show any hearing by the commissioners of the proofs and allegations of the parties, as required both by law and by the order of the clerk. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Appeal from Ruling of Clerk. — It is only after the clerk of superior court confirms or fails to confirm the report of the commissioners that either party aggrieved by the ruling of the clerk may appeal; such appeal carries the entire record up for review by the trial judge upon the questions of fact. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

Passing of Cause for Flooding with Conveyance of Property. — The right to flood lands in derogation of plaintiff's easement of access does not arise merely upon the erection of the structure causing the flooding, but upon the institution of proceedings looking to the award of due compensation; and until such proceedings are instituted by one side or the other, the flooding constitutes a mere invasion of rights which pass with a conveyance of the property to which they are attached. Empie v. United States, 131 F.2d 481 (4th Cir. 1942).

Damages caused by diversion of water were not covered by statute providing for equipment of a right-of-way by railroad companies. Ward v. Albemarle & Raleigh R.R., 112 N.C. 168, 16 S.E. 921 (1893).

Cited in Hancock v. Tenery, 131 N.C. App. 149, 505 S.E.2d 315 (1998).

II. COMPENSATION.

Meaning of "Compensation which Ought Justly To Be Made". — It seems to be the general rule in this jurisdiction that "the compensation which ought justly to be made" is such compensation after special benefits peculiar to the land are set off against damages. Stamey v. Burnsville, 189 N.C. 39, 126 S.E. 103 (1925).

Compensation to Be Paid to Individual Who Owns Property at Time of Taking. — Compensation for property taken in the exercise of the power of eminent domain is due to the owner at the time of the taking, and not to the owner at an earlier or later date. Empie v. United States, 131 F.2d 481 (4th Cir. 1942).

Nonowner Not Entitled to Compensation. — If plaintiff does not own the land upon which the defendant has constructed its road and imposed a burden, he has nothing to be "taken," and therefore nothing for which he is entitled to compensation. Abernathy v. South & W.R.R., 150 N.C. 97, 63 S.E. 180 (1908).

The owner is entitled to compensation for actual and direct damages which he may sustain by being deprived of his property. Raleigh, C. & S.R.R. v. Mecklenburg Mfg. Co., 166 N.C. 168, 82 S.E. 5 (1914), dismissed, 169 N.C. 156, 85 S.E. 390 (1915).

Only Actual and Direct Damage Considered. — In estimating damages of any kind to lands taken by a railroad company, it is only proper to consider actual damages, not those remote or speculative or dependent upon a future possible use of the property. Madison County R. R. v. Gahagan, 161 N.C. 190, 76 S.E. 696 (1912).

Damage to Adjoining Lands Included. — The landowner will be entitled to have included in his assessment damages for injuries to lands adjoining those upon which the railroad is constructed. Hendrick v. Carolina Cent. R.R., 101 N.C. 617, 8 S.E. 236 (1888).

Damages are limited to those which embrace the actual value of the property taken and the direct physical injuries to the remaining property. Raleigh, C. & S.R.R. v. Mecklenburg Mfg. Co., 166 N.C. 168, 82 S.E. 5 (1914), dismissed, 169 N.C. 156, 85 S.E. 390 (1915).

The owner of land, a part of which is taken under the right of eminent domain, may recover as compensation not only the value of the land taken, but also the damages thereby caused, if any, to the remaining land. Western Carolina Power Co. v. Hayes, 193 N.C. 104, 136 S.E. 353 (1927).

Measure of Damages. — In condemnation proceedings the measure of damages is not the difference between the value of the owner's property before and after the taking, but the fair value of the land taken reduced by any special benefits received. Stamey v. Burnsville, 189 N.C. 39, 126 S.E. 103 (1925).

Basis of Damage Calculation. — Damages are not assessed upon the idea of a proposed actual dominion, occupation and perception of the profits of the whole right-of-way by the corporation; rather, the calculation is based on the principle that possession and exclusive control will be asserted only over so much of the condemned territory as may be necessary for corporate purposes, such as additional tracks, ditches and houses to be used for stations and section hands. Blue v. Aberdeen & W.E.R.R., 117 N.C. 644, 23 S.E. 275 (1895).

There are two elements of damages legally cognizable in condemnation actions: (1) compensation for the value of property taken, and (2) compensation for any delay in paying for the property once it is taken. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 306 N.C. 263, 293 S.E.2d 149 (1982), decided under former § 40-17.

Inclusion of Market Value in Damage Estimate. — In awarding damages to the owner of lands for an easement therein acquired for railroad purposes, there should, as a general rule, be included the market value of the land actually covered by the right-of-way, subject to modification under special circumstances, as where there is a mineral deposit with the use of which the easement does not interfere. Virginia & C.S.R.R. v. McLean, 158 N.C. 498, 74 S.E. 461 (1912).

Criteria in Estimating Fair Market Value. — In estimating the fair market value of property acquired by eminent domain, all of the capabilities of the property and all of the uses to which it may be applied or for which it is adapted which affect its value in the market are to be considered, and not merely the condition it is in at the time and the use to which it is then applied by the owner. City of Statesville v. Bowles, 6 N.C. App. 124, 169 S.E.2d 467 (1969), aff'd, 278 N.C. 497, 180 S.E.2d 111 (1971).

Matters such as the accessibility of the property, its slope and elevation, and the costs that will be involved for necessary grading and filling are often important factors to be considered in arriving at an opinion as to its value. City of Statesville v. Bowles, 6 N.C. App. 124, 169 S.E.2d 467 (1969), aff'd, 278 N.C. 497, 180 S.E.2d 111 (1971).

The use of property in combination with other property may be considered as a basis for awarding damages if the possibility of combination is so reasonably sufficient and the use so reasonably probable as to affect the market value. City of Statesville v. Bowles, 6 N.C. App. 124, 169 S.E.2d 467 (1969), aff'd, 278 N.C. 497, 180 S.E.2d 111 (1971).

Compensation for Additional Burdens. — When a railroad company puts additional burdens upon a right-of-way which it has acquired by condemnation, not properly embraced in the general purpose for which it was obtained, the owner is entitled to compensation for them. Virginia & C.S.R.R. v. McLean, 158 N.C. 498, 74 S.E. 461 (1912).

Such as a Telegraph Line. — Telegraph line along a railroad and on the right-of-way of the railroad is an additional burden upon the land, for which the landowner is entitled to just compensation. Phillips v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 130 N.C. 513, 41 S.E. 1022, 89 Am. St. R. 868, rev'd on other grounds on rehearing, 131 N.C. 225, 42 S.E. 587 (1902); Hodges v. Western Union Tel. Co., 133 N.C. 225, 45 S.E. 572 (1903); Query v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 178 N.C. 639, 101 S.E. 390, 8 A.L.R. 1290 (1919).

Or electric wires placed along street. See Brown v. Asheville Elec. Light Co., 138 N.C. 533, 51 S.E. 62, 60 L.R.A. 631, 107 Am. St. R. 554 (1905).

Or Sewer and Water Lines. — Where a city proposes to lay sewer and water lines in the right-of-way of a State highway, the owner of the fee in this land is entitled to just compensation for an additional burden beyond that of the original easement for the highway. The laying of a water main or sewer line in the right-of-way of a highway is an additional burden upon the owner of the fee. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

But Not Street Railway. — The use of streets for a street railway is one of the ordinary purposes for which streets and highways may be used, and does not impose an additional burden or servitude so as to entitle the abutting property owner to further compensation. Hester v. Durham Traction Co., 138 N.C. 288, 50 S.E. 711, 1 L.R.A. (n.s.) 981 (1905).

Value Determined as of Date of Taking. — For the purpose of determining the sum to be paid as compensation for land taken under the right of eminent domain, the value of the land taken should be ascertained as of the date of the taking. The land is taken within the meaning of this principle when the proceeding is begun. Western Carolina Power Co. v. Hayes, 193 N.C. 104, 136 S.E. 353 (1927); Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 306 N.C. 263, 293 S.E.2d 149 (1982), decided under former § 41-17.

Later Changes in Value Are Not Considered. — No change in the value of the land after the date of commencement of the proceeding, whether caused by the use for which it is to be condemned or not, can be considered in determining the amount which the owners shall receive and the petitioner shall pay as just compensation. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 306 N.C. 263, 293 S.E.2d 149 (1982), decided under former § 40-17.

Legislature has the power to allow municipal corporations to have general benefits assessed as offsets against damages in an action to acquire land for a public purpose, but the power or authority must be given either by special charter or general state act. Stamey v. Burnsville, 189 N.C. 39, 126 S.E. 103 (1925).

General benefits are those which arise from fulfillment of the public object which justified the taking. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Mode, 2 N.C. App. 464, 163 S.E.2d 429 (1968).

Special benefits are those which arise from the peculiar relation of the land in question to the public improvement. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Mode, 2 N.C. App. 464, 163 S.E.2d 429 (1968).

In determining the compensation to be paid, account must be taking of benefits to the owner's property from the construction of the proposed improvement. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

What Pecuniary Advantages Deducted from Damages. — The owner of lands through which a railroad has acquired a right-of-way by condemnation is entitled to recover therefor the damages done to the remainder of the tract or portions of the land used by him as one tract, deducting from the estimate the pecuniary benefits or advantages which are special and peculiar to the tract in question, but not those which are shared by him in common with other owners of lands of like kind in the same vicinity. Virginia & C.S.R.R. v. McLean, 158 N.C. 498, 74 S.E. 461 (1912). See also, Freedle v. North Carolina R.R., 49 N.C. 89 (1856); Southport, W. & D.R.R. v. Owners of Platt Land, 133 N.C. 266, 45 S.E. 589 (1903).

As to Compensation for Land Containing Stone or Mineral Deposits, see State Hwy. Comm'n v. Mode, 2 N.C. App. 464, 163 S.E.2d 429 (1968).

Admissibility of Evidence Showing Value. — In a proceeding to condemn land for a right-of-way, evidence to show the value of the land by its location and surroundings is admissible, but a tax list is not admissible for that purpose. Suffolk & C. Ry. v. West End Land & Imp. Co., 137 N.C. 330, 49 S.E. 350 (1904).

Expert Appraisers To Give Reasons for Opinion of Value. — It is proper and in fact desirable that expert real estate appraisers give the reasons upon which they base their opinion as to the fair market value of property immediately before and immediately after a taking for a sanitary sewer line easement. City of Statesville v. Bowles, 6 N.C. App. 124, 169 S.E.2d 467 (1969), aff'd, 278 N.C. 497, 180 S.E.2d 111 (1971).

Finding of commissioners that land taken for railroad purposes received no special benefit is conclusive. Southport, W. & D.R.R. v. Owners of Platt Land, 133 N.C. 266, 45 S.E. 589 (1903).

§ 40A-27. Form of commissioners' report.

When the commissioners shall have assessed the compensation, they shall forthwith make and subscribe a written report of their proceedings, in substance as follows:

To the Clerk of the Superior Court of _____:

We, _____, commissioners appointed by the court to assess the damages that have been and will be sustained by _____, the owner of certain property lying in the county of _____, which _____ the condemnor proposes to condemn for its use, do hereby certify that we met on _____ (or the day to which we were regularly adjourned), and, having first been duly sworn, we visited the premises of the owner, and after taking into full consideration the quality and quantity of the property aforesaid, and all other inconveniences likely to result to the owner, we have estimated and do assess the compensation aforesaid at the sum of $ _____.

Given under our hands, the _____ day of _____, A.D. _____.

(R.C., c. 61, s. 17; 1874-5, c. 83; Code, s. 1700; Rev., s. 2586; C.S., s. 1722; 1981, c. 919, s. 1; 1999-456, s. 59.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-456, s. 59, effective January 1, 2000, amended the form to change the line for date entry from "19" to a blank line.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Report of the commissioners is not invalid because it does not contain a description of the land, as that can be ascertained by reference to the location of the roadbed and right-of-way. Hanes v. North Carolina R.R., 109 N.C. 490, 13 S.E. 896 (1891).

But the easement should be described in the report of the commissioners as fully and correctly as it would be in a grant, as the easement is conveyed to the petitioner by the report when confirmed. Suffolk & C.Ry. v. West End Land & Imp. Co., 137 N.C. 330, 49 S.E. 350 (1904).

Seal Not Required. — While it was formerly provided that the report of the commissioners should be under seal, this provision was not mandatory, but directory only, and omission of the seal was not a fatal defect. Hanes v. North Carolina R.R., 109 N.C. 490, 13 S.E. 896 (1891).

Report Not Set Aside for Failure to State Particulars of Benefits. — The report of the commissioners would not be set aside for failure to show in what the benefits assessed consist, where no objection was made when the report was submitted. Wilmington & W.R.R. v. Smith, 99 N.C. 131, 5 S.E. 237 (1888).

§ 40A-28. Exceptions to report; hearing; when title vests; appeal; restitution.

(a) Upon the filing of the report, the clerk shall forthwith mail copies to the parties. Within 20 days after the filing of the report any party to the proceedings may file exceptions thereto. The clerk, after notice to the parties, shall hear any exceptions so filed and may thereafter direct a new appraisal, modify or confirm the report, or make such other orders as the clerk may deem right and proper.

(b) If no exceptions are filed to the report, and if the clerk's final judgment rendered upon the petition and proceedings shall be in favor of the condemnor, and upon the deposit by the condemnor of the sum adjudged, together with all costs allowed, into the office of the clerk of superior court, then, in that event, all owners who have been made parties to the proceedings shall be divested of the property or interest therein to the extent set forth in the proceedings. A copy of the judgment, certified under the seal of the court, shall be registered in the county or counties where the land is situated, and the original judgment, or a certified copy thereof, or a certified copy of the registered judgment, may be given in evidence in all actions and proceedings as deeds for property are now allowed in evidence.

(c) Any party to the proceedings may file exceptions to the clerk's final determination on any exceptions to the report and may appeal to the judge of superior court having jurisdiction. Notice of appeal shall be filed within 10 days of the clerk's final determination. Upon appeal the clerk shall transfer the proceedings to the civil issue docket of the superior court. A judge in session shall hear and determine all matters in controversy and, subject to G.S. 40A-29 regarding trial by jury, shall determine any issues of compensation to be awarded in accordance with the provisions of Article 4 of this Chapter.

(d) Notwithstanding the filing of exceptions by any party to any orders or final determination of the clerk or the filing of a notice of appeal to the superior court, the condemnor may, at the time of the filing of the report of commissioners, deposit with the clerk of superior court in the proceedings the sum appraised by the commissioners and, in that event, the condemnor may enter, take possession of, and hold said property in the manner and to the extent sought to be acquired by the proceedings until final judgment is rendered on any appeal.

(e) If, on appeal, the judge shall refuse to condemn the property, then the money deposited with the clerk of court in the proceedings, or so much thereof as shall be adjudged, shall be refunded to the condemnor and the condemnor shall have no right to the property and shall surrender possession of the same, on demand, to the owner. The judge shall have full power and authority to make such orders, judgments and decrees as may be necessary to carry into effect the final judgment rendered in such proceedings, including compensation in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 40A-8.

(f) If the amount adjudged to be paid the owner of any property condemned under this Article shall not be paid within 60 days after final judgment in the proceedings, the right under the judgment to take the property shall ipso facto cease and determine, but the claimant under the judgment shall still remain liable for all amounts adjudged against said claimant except the compensation awarded for the taking of the property.

(g) The provisions of this section shall not preclude any injunctive relief otherwise available to the owner or the condemnor. (Code, s. 1946; 1893, c. 148; Rev., s. 2587; 1915, c. 207; C.S., s. 1723; 1951, c. 59, s. 2; 1955, c. 29, s. 1; 1969, c. 44, s. 47; 1971, c. 528, s. 37; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. IN GENERAL.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Strict Construction. — The exercise of the power of eminent domain is in derogation of common right, and all laws conferring such power must be strictly construed. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 2 N.C. App. 341, 163 S.E.2d 118 (1968).

Power of Acquiring Fee Not Restricted. — The legislature did not intend, by referring to the procedure to be used in acquiring by condemnation, to restrict the power of acquiring in fee when necessary; the reference was merely for procedural purposes. Town of Morganton v. Hutton & Bourbonnais Co., 251 N.C. 531, 112 S.E.2d 111 (1960).

Estoppel to Contest Right to Condemn. — All questions, except the question of just compensation, were rendered moot by a stipulation which agreed that a city's payment; should be treated as if it were the amount of damages assessed by commissioners and paid into the office of the clerk of the superior court, and in the face of the stipulation that upon payment of the stipulated sum the city would acquire title, defendants were estopped to contest the city's right to condemn. City of Kings Mountain v. Cline, 281 N.C. 269, 188 S.E.2d 284 (1972).

Temporary and Permanent Possession by Condemnor Distinguished. — Temporary possession, pendente lite, subject to removal by final adverse judgment, is quite different from a final judicial determination that the condemnor is entitled as a matter of right to permanent possession. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 2 N.C. App. 341, 163 S.E.2d 118 (1968).

Grant by Charter of Power to Enter before Condemnation. — The legislature may by charter empower a railroad company to enter land and construct a road before instituting condemnation proceedings. Compensation must be provided to warrant the taking, but it need not precede the taking, and the owner is confined to the special remedy given him by the statute under which his property is seized. State v. Lyle, 100 N.C. 497, 6 S.E. 379 (1888); Watauga & Y.R.R. v. Ferguson, 169 N.C. 70, 85 S.E. 156 (1915); State v. Jones, 170 N.C. 753, 87 S.E. 235 (1915).

When the legislature intended to confer the right to enter before the assessment is made or the damage paid, it has so declared in express terms in the charter. State v. Jones, 139 N.C. 613, 52 S.E. 240 (1905).

Requirement of Payment before Entry. — Formerly the landowner had no right to a jury trial in fixing compensation upon condemnation of the right-of-way, nor was the compensation required to be paid before entry; now the company is required to pay into court the sum assessed before entry. Holly Shelter R.R. v. Newton, 133 N.C. 132, 133 N.C. 136, 45 S.E. 549, 45 S.E. 549 (1903); State v. Jones, 139 N.C. 613, 52 S.E. 240 (1905).

Provisions Granting Temporary Possession and Use Not Applicable to Cartway Proceedings. — Provision giving the court authority to give possession and use of land to the condemnor pending appeal is not applicable to proceedings to establish a Cartway brought under § 136-68 et seq. Lowe v. Rhodes, 9 N.C. App. 111, 175 S.E.2d 721 (1970).

Payment of Damages into Court Pendente Lite Does Not Vest Title in Condemnor. — In proceedings to condemn land for a school site, the payment into court by the county board of education of the amount of damages assessed by the commissioners and the taking of possession by it under order of the clerk, while the cause remained pending for trial on exceptions directed both to petitioner's right to condemn and to the adequacy of the damages awarded by the commissioners, did not vest title in the board. Topping v. State Bd. of Educ., 249 N.C. 291, 106 S.E.2d 502 (1959).

The title of the landowner is not divested until final confirmation and payment in full of the amount appraised. Nantahala Power & Light Co. v. Whiting Mfg. Co., 209 N.C. 560, 184 S.E. 48 (1936).

While the value of lands taken in condemnation proceedings is fixed as of the date the petition is filed, title to the land does not pass until the award, as assessed by the commissioners, is paid into court after confirmation of the commissioners' report. Bemis Hardwood Lumber Co. v. Graham County, 214 N.C. 167, 198 S.E. 843 (1938).

The title of the landowner is not divested unless and until the condemnor obtains a final judgment in his favor and pays to the landowner the amount of the damages fixed by such final judgment. Topping v. State Bd. of Educ., 249 N.C. 291, 106 S.E.2d 502 (1959); North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n v. York Indus. Center, Inc., 263 N.C. 230, 139 S.E.2d 253 (1964); Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 2 N.C. App. 341, 163 S.E.2d 118 (1968); City of Kings Mountain v. Goforth, 283 N.C. 316, 196 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

Injunction to Restrain Entry Refused. — Where a railroad company seeking to condemn land for its right-of-way gave ample bond to cover any damages resulting from its wrongful entry upon the land, an injunction would not issue to restrain such company from entering upon the land before the appraisal of damages and the payment thereof into court. Wellington & P.R.R. v. Cashie & C.R.R. & Lumber Co., 116 N.C. 924, 20 S.E. 964 (1895); Holly Shelter R.R. v. Newton, 133 N.C. 132, 133 N.C. 136, 45 S.E. 549, 45 S.E. 549 (1903).

Date of Valuation Not Dependent on Whether Deposit Made. — The only thing which turns on the making of the deposit is the right of possession. The date for valuing the condemned property is not dependent on whether the condemnor makes the deposit. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 306 N.C. 263, 293 S.E.2d 149 (1982), decided under former § 40-19.

Deposit of the amount of the award by the condemnor is discretionary. The condemnor has a right or election to pay the award; it does not require it to do so. Greensboro-High Point Airport Auth. v. Irvin, 306 N.C. 263, 293 S.E.2d 149 (1982), decided under former § 40-19.

Judge has the discretionary power to allow withdrawal of a deposit in a condemnation proceeding without prejudice to the withdrawing party to continue further litigation. It is incumbent upon petitioner, if aggrieved by this order, to object and except thereto. Public Serv. Co. v. Lovin, 9 N.C. App. 709, 177 S.E.2d 448 (1970).

Condemnor May Not Take Voluntary Nonsuit after Obtaining Temporary Possession. — A condemnor may not, as a matter of right, take a voluntary nonsuit, over the landowner's objection, after obtaining temporary possession by payment of the amount of damages assessed by the commissioners, because the landowner may, if he elects to do so, assert his claim for damages on account of the condemnor's possession pendente lite. Topping v. State Bd. of Educ., 249 N.C. 291, 106 S.E.2d 502 (1959).

Nor After a Decree Has Been Made. — In proceedings by one railroad company to condemn a right-of-way upon which another has lawfully constructed its roadbed, the plaintiff may not, as a matter of right, submit to a judgment of nonsuit after a decree has been made, for rights which the defendant is entitled to have settled by the action have attached. Johnson City S.R.R. v. South & W.R.R., 148 N.C. 59, 61 S.E. 683 (1908).

Former Provision as to Registration Superseded. — Provision that a copy of the judgment in eminent domain proceedings be registered in the county where the land lies was superseded by § 47-27. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Bowman, 228 N.C. 319, 45 S.E.2d 531 (1947).

Pretrial Conference. — In a condemnation proceeding, the trial court should conduct a pretrial conference where the record shows that the parties have different concepts of what phase of the matter they were going to try. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 8 N.C. App. 376, 174 S.E.2d 839 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 177 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Judgment Should Fix Boundaries. — In an action for damages for the location of a railroad, the judgment should definitely fix the land over which the road is located and the width of the right-of-way. Beal v. Durham & C.R.R., 136 N.C. 298, 48 S.E. 674 (1904).

Property Involved in Voluntary Sale as Guide to Value. — Whether property involved in a voluntary sale is sufficiently similar in nature, location, and condition to the property appropriated by condemnation to admit evidence of its sale and the price paid therefor as a guide to the value of the condemned property is a question to be determined by the trial judge, in the exercise of his sound discretion. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Denny Roll & Panel Co., 273 N.C. 368, 159 S.E.2d 861 (1968).

Accrual of Interest. — Damages given in condemnation proceedings fall directly under § 24-5, giving interest only from the rendition of the judgment; hence, a judgment allowing interest from the date of condemnation would be erroneous. Durham v. Davis, 171 N.C. 305, 88 S.E. 433 (1916).

The judgment in an action must correspond with the verdict, and where, in condemnation proceedings tried in the superior court on appeal, the jury have in their verdict ascertained the damages to the owner of the land, the verdict will be presumed to include the element of interest, nothing else appearing; hence, it was reversible error for the trial judge to allow interest from the time the damages were determined upon by the appraisers and render judgment accordingly. Red Springs City Bd. of Educ. v. McMillan, 250 N.C. 485, 108 S.E.2d 895 (1959).

Respondents, in an action to take land under eminent domain, are entitled to interest from the date the petitioner acquires the right to possession and not from the date the proceedings were instituted. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Briggs, 268 N.C. 158, 150 S.E.2d 16 (1966).

Extent of Right Acquired with Railroad Easement. — A railroad company, by condemnation proceedings, acquires an easement upon the land condemned, with the right to actual possession of, so much only thereof as is necessary for the operation of its road and to protect it against contingent damages. Phillips v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 130 N.C. 513, 41 S.E. 1022 (1902).

A house situated on the right-of-way of a railroad at the time of condemnation proceedings does not become the absolute property of the company. Shields v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 129 N.C. 1, 39 S.E. 582 (1901).

Liability for Costs Where Proceedings Not Carried Through. — In the event, for any reason, that condemnation proceedings are not carried through, all the costs of the proceeding, except the appraised value of the land, shall be paid by the petitioners. Nantahala Power & Light Co. v. Whiting Mfg. Co., 209 N.C. 560, 184 S.E. 48 (1936).

Cessation of Right to Property Where Appraised Value Not Timely Paid. — After final judgment fixing petitioner's right to condemn, if the appraised value of the land is not paid within one year (now 60 days) the petitioner's right to take the property shall end, and the petitioner or claimant shall not be liable for the consideration, i.e., the value of the land. Nantahala Power & Light Co. v. Whiting Mfg. Co., 209 N.C. 560, 184 S.E. 48 (1936).

For construction of reference to counsel fees under former § 40-19, see North Carolina R.R. v. Goodwin, 110 N.C. 175, 14 S.E. 687 (1892); Durham v. Davis, 171 N.C. 305, 88 S.E. 433 (1916); Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Creasman, 262 N.C. 390, 137 S.E.2d 497 (1964); City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

II. EXCEPTIONS AND APPEALS.

General Exceptions to Order Appointing Commissioners. — Upon proper denial of the matters alleged in the petition, exceptions to the clerk's order appointing commissioners in condemnation proceedings may be of general character, and, upon appeal, will present any question appearing upon the record. Johnson City S.R.R. v. South & W.R.R., 148 N.C. 59, 61 S.E. 683 (1908).

Filing Exceptions to Commissioner's Report as Prerequisite to Filing of Appeal. — The respondents failed to make any exceptions to the Commissioner's report. They also failed to file exceptions to the clerk's final judgment. Therefore, respondents' appeal was properly dismissed. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Crowder, 89 N.C. App. 578, 366 S.E.2d 499 (1988).

Filing exceptions to a commissioner's report that establishes a statutory cartway and determines the compensation to be paid to the affected property owners is a prerequisite to appeal. Hancock v. Tenery, 131 N.C. App. 149, 505 S.E.2d 315 (1998).

Existence of Case or Controversy. — A case or controversy existed with respect to challenges by a nonprofit corporation and its political action committee to statutes that criminalize certain election activities, despite the State's claim that it did not interpret the statutes to reach the corporation's or committee's activities, since the statutes applied by their terms, thereby presenting a credible threat of prosecution and chilling the corporation's exercise of its free speech rights. North Carolina Right to Life, Inc. v. Bartlett, 168 F.3d 705 (4th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1153, 120 S. Ct. 1156, 145 L. Ed. 2d 1069 (2000).

The landowner has the right to file exceptions to the report of the commissioners within 20 days after the report is filed. He is entitled to be heard upon his exceptions. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Filing of Exceptions Nunc Pro Tunc. — The judge has the discretionary power to allow exceptions to be filed nunc pro tunc. Gatling v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 245 N.C. 66, 95 S.E.2d 131 (1956).

Requirement of Timely Exceptions to Preserve Right to Appeal. — Absent insufficient notice of proceedings before the clerk, an appealing party must file timely exceptions to the commissioners' report to preserve their right to appeal. City of Raleigh v. Martin, 59 N.C. App. 627, 297 S.E.2d 916 (1982), decided under former § 40-19.

Former § 40-20 (now § 40A-29), which guaranteed the right to have a jury determine the amount of damages, did not override the requirement of former § 40-19 (now this section), that exceptions be filed within 20 days of the commissioners' report. City of Raleigh v. Martin, 59 N.C. App. 627, 297 S.E.2d 916 (1982), decided under former § 40-19.

Exceptions Held Timely. — In the absence of notice of the meeting of commissioners, the filing of exceptions by the landowner on the twenty-first day after the filing of the report was held timely. Gatling v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 245 N.C. 66, 95 S.E.2d 131 (1956).

Clerk to Make Determination on Exceptions Only after Notice. — The clerk is to make his determination on the exceptions only after notice and an opportunity to be heard thereon is given the parties. Collins v. North Carolina State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 237 N.C. 277, 74 S.E.2d 709 (1953).

Appeal from Ruling of Clerk. — It is only after the clerk of superior court confirms or fails to confirm the report of the commissioners that either party aggrieved by the ruling of the clerk may appeal; such appeal carries the entire record up for review by the trial judge upon the questions of fact. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

No appeal lies to the judge at chamber. Cape Fear & N.R.R. v. Stewart, 132 N.C. 248, 43 S.E. 638 (1903).

Power of Court on Erroneous Transfer from Clerk. — Where a proceeding to condemn property for urban renewal was erroneously transferred from the clerk to the superior court before the clerk acted on the exceptions to the commissioners' report, the judge of superior court had full power to consider and determine all matters in controversy as if the cause was originally before him. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1970).

De Novo Trial on Appeal to Court. — On appeal to the superior court by both parties in proceedings to condemn land, the trial is de novo; and where the defendant has substantially recovered damages for the taking of his land, the costs are taxable against the plaintiff, though the recovery is in a smaller sum than the amount theretofore awarded by the appraisers or viewers. Durham v. Davis, 171 N.C. 305, 88 S.E. 433 (1916).

The issue as to amount of compensation is for determination de novo by jury trial in the superior court. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Smith, 272 N.C. 250, 158 S.E.2d 65 (1967); Redevelopment Comm'n v. Denny Roll & Panel Co., 273 N.C. 368, 159 S.E.2d 861 (1968).

Scope of Review on Appeal. — The appeal from a judgment by the clerk of the superior court in condemnation proceedings takes the entire record up for review upon questions of fact to be tried by the court. Johnson City S.R.R. v. South & W.R.R., 148 N.C. 59, 61 S.E. 683 (1908).

Stay of Entry Pending Appeal within Discretion of Trial Court. — Trial court in an eminent domain proceeding did not err in refusing to stay petitioner's entry upon the land pending appeal, where petitioner had deposited with the clerk the full amount of compensation awarded by the commissioners; though the trial court was empowered to stay petitioner's entry upon the land, it was not required to do so; it lies in the sound discretion of the trial court to determine whether a temporary restraining order should be granted. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Merritt, 41 N.C. App. 438, 255 S.E.2d 225 (1979), decided under former § 40-19.

The judge has authority to set aside the report and direct a new appraisement by the same commissioners or others appointed in their stead, on the ground that the damage assessed was excessive. Hanes v. North Carolina R.R., 109 N.C. 490, 13 S.E. 896 (1891).

Interlocutory Nature of Order Remanding Proceedings to Clerk. — An order of the superior court in condemnation proceedings remanding the cause to the clerk, that he may hear the same, is interlocutory, and no appeal lies therefrom. Cape Fear & Y.V. Ry. v. King, 125 N.C. 454, 34 S.E. 541 (1899); Holly Shelter R.R. v. Newton, 133 N.C. 132, 133 N.C. 136, 45 S.E. 549, 45 S.E. 549 (1903).

Denial of Vacation of Confirmation May Not Be Affirmed on Ground Additional Appraisals Will Not Give Recovery. — The court may not affirm the clerk's denial of a motion to vacate the judgment of confirmation on the ground that there is no reasonable probability that any additional appraisals, hearings, or trials would result in any recovery on the part of the defendant. Under the statutes, that is not for the court below or for the Supreme Court to determine, but can be determined only by commissioners who are appointed after notice and hearing contemplated. City of Randleman v. Hinshaw, 267 N.C. 136, 147 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Recordari Held Properly Denied. — The landowner must file exceptions to the final report of the commissioners within 20 days after the report is filed, with right to appeal to the superior court; hence, when landowner filed no exceptions and did not appeal from the order of confirmation by the clerk, recordari to the superior court was properly denied when the application therefor merely alleged merit without specifying facts supporting this conclusion and failed to negate laches, and the application was not made to the next succeeding term of the superior court. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Capehart, 268 N.C. 114, 150 S.E.2d 62 (1966).

§ 40A-29. Provision for jury trial on appeal.

In any proceedings under this Article by a condemnor to acquire property, any party to the proceedings shall be entitled on appeal to superior court to have the amount of compensation determined by a jury unless trial by jury has been waived by all parties. A jury shall determine the compensation to be awarded in accordance with the provisions of Article 4 of this Chapter. (1893, c. 148; Rev., s. 2588; C.S., s. 1724; 1957, c. 582; 1971, c. 528, s. 38; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Strict Construction. — The exercise of the power of eminent domain is in derogation of common right, and all laws conferring such power must be strictly construed. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Abeyounis, 1 N.C. App. 270, 161 S.E.2d 191 (1968).

A landowner is not entitled at the hearing before the clerk to a jury trial. Holly Shelter R.R. v. Newton, 133 N.C. 132, 133 N.C. 136, 45 S.E. 549, 45 S.E. 549 (1903); Kaperonis v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 260 N.C. 587, 133 S.E.2d 464 (1963).

Entitlement to Jury Trial on Appeal. — While prior to 1893, if the parties did not demand trial by jury before the appointment of the commissioners they were deemed to have waived it, and it would not be thereafter granted, now the right of trial by jury upon an appeal from the report of the commissioners is specifically granted. Chowan & S.R.R. v. Parker, 105 N.C. 246, 11 S.E. 328 (1890); Holly Shelter R.R. v. Newton, 133 N.C. 132, 133 N.C. 136, 45 S.E. 549, 45 S.E. 549 (1903); Durham v. Rigsbee, 141 N.C. 128, 53 S.E. 531 (1906).

Right of Owner to Jury Trial in Proceedings Instituted by Town. — In condemnation proceedings instituted by a town for the taking of lands for a public municipal purpose, the owner is entitled to a trial by jury in the superior court to determine his damages when he has duly preserved such right by his exceptions and proper procedure, and when the trial judge has exercised his discretion in setting aside the amount theretofore awarded by the viewers, the cause continues in the court for the jury trial given him by statute; and an order directing the appointment of other commissioners by the clerk to go upon the land and assess the damages is erroneous. Ayden v. Lancaster, 195 N.C. 297, 142 S.E. 18 (1928).

Requirement of Timely Exceptions to Preserve Right to Appeal. — Former § 40-20 (now this section), which guaranteed the right to have a jury determine the amount of damages, did not override the requirement of former § 40-19 (now § 40A-28), that exceptions be filed within 20 days of the commissioners' report. City of Raleigh v. Martin, 59 N.C. App. 627, 297 S.E.2d 916 (1982), decided under former § 40-20.

Appeal Preserved Despite Absence of Specific Municipal Charter Provision Therefor. — Where a municipal charter provided for condemning lands of private owners for cemetery purposes in the manner prescribed for condemnation thereof for street or other purposes, without specific provisions for appeal, former § 40-20 (now this section) nevertheless preserved the right of appeal, and the charter provisions would not be declared unconstitutional for failure to specially provide therefor. Long v. Rockingham, 187 N.C. 199, 121 S.E. 461 (1924).

Right to Jury Trial Limited. — There is a limitation on the right to demand trial by jury, and the idea that any such right is given in respect to the questions of the fact to be decided preliminary to the question of damages is clearly excluded. Madison County R.R. v. Gahagan, 161 N.C. 190, 76 S.E. 696 (1912).

The only question for determination by the jury is the issue of just compensation. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Abeyounis, 1 N.C. App. 270, 161 S.E.2d 191 (1968).

The amount of compensation is for determination de novo by jury trial in the superior court. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Smith, 272 N.C. 250, 158 S.E.2d 65 (1967); Redevelopment Comm'n v. Denny Roll & Panel Co., 273 N.C. 368, 159 S.E.2d 861 (1968).

When either party to a condemnation proceeding appeals to the superior court in term and demands that the damage be determined by a jury, the trial must proceed in the superior court, insofar as the question of damages is concerned, as though no commissioners of appraisal had ever been appointed. In re Proceedings by City of Greensboro, 21 N.C. App. 124, 203 S.E.2d 325 (1974).

And Judgment Is Entered Upon the Jury's Verdict. — Upon appeal from the award of the appraisers in condemnation proceedings, the trial in the superior court is de novo, and must proceed, insofar as the question of damages is concerned, as though no commissioners of appraisal had ever been appointed; hence, the court properly enters judgment upon the verdict of the jury, regardless of whether it is greater or smaller than the award of the commissioners and regardless of which party took the appeal. Proctor v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 230 N.C. 687, 55 S.E.2d 479 (1949).

The superior court at term is vested with authority to enter judgment for the landowner for the amount of damages fixed by the verdict of the jury, regardless of whether the same be greater or smaller than the sum originally awarded by the commissioners of appraisal, and regardless of whether the landowner or the condemnor took the appeal. In re Proceedings by City of Greensboro, 21 N.C. App. 124, 203 S.E.2d 325 (1974).

Property Involved in Voluntary Sale as Guide to Value. — Whether property involved in a voluntary sale is sufficiently similar in nature, location, and condition to the property appropriated by condemnation to admit evidence of its sale and the price paid therefor as a guide to the value of the condemned property is a question to be determined by the trial judge in the exercise of his sound discretion. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Denny Roll & Panel Co., 273 N.C. 368, 159 S.E.2d 861 (1968).

§ 40A-30. Title of infants, incompetents, inebriates, and trustees without power of sale, acquired.

In case any property required by a condemnor shall be vested in any trustee not authorized to sell, release and convey the same, or in any infant, incompetent, or inebriate, the superior court shall have power, by a special proceeding, on petition, to authorize and empower such trustee or the general guardian or committee of such infant, incompetent or inebriate, to sell and convey the same to such condemnor, on such terms as may be just. In case any infant, incompetent or inebriate has no general guardian or committee, the court may appoint a special guardian or committee for the purpose of making a sale, release or conveyance, and may require security from the general or special guardian or committee as the court may deem proper. Before any conveyance or release authorized by this section shall be executed, the terms on which it is to be executed shall be reported to the court on oath. If the court is satisfied that the terms are just to the owner of the property, the court shall confirm the report and direct the proper conveyance or release to be executed, which shall have the same effect as if executed by an owner of the property having legal power to sell and convey the same. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 28; Code, s. 1956; Rev., s. 2590; C.S., s. 1726; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to requirement that judge approve special proceeding where petitioner is infant, see § 1-402. As to sales of ward's estate by guardian, see § 35A-1301 et seq. As to sale of land required for public use on cotenant's petition, see § 46-27.

§ 40A-31. Rights of claimants of fund determined.

If there are adverse and conflicting claimants to the money, or any part of it, to be paid as compensation for the property taken, the clerk or the judge on appeal may direct the money to be paid into the court by the condemnor, and may determine who is entitled to the same and direct to whom the same shall be paid, and may order a reference to ascertain the facts on which such determination and order are to be made. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 19; Code, s. 1947; Rev., s. 2591; C.S., s. 1727; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Purpose of Section. — Purpose of former § 40-23 (similar to this section) is to prevent a corporation, having the right of eminent domain, from being indefinitely postponed in acquiring title and going on with its work or from being subjected to a succession of suits for compensation, and under its provisions, the company acquires the right-of-way and the court distributes the compensation. See Abernathy v. South & W.R.R., 150 N.C. 97, 63 S.E. 180 (1908).

The phrase "adverse and conflicting claimants" does not include the condemnor. VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963).

Who May Be "Adverse and Conflicting Claimants". — The phrase "adverse and conflicting claimants" is limited to those who assert adverse titles to the property and hence a conflict in interest as to the party entitled to the sum awarded, or those who are in agreement as to their respective titles but are in disagreement as to the value of their respective estates and hence the proportion of the award to which each is entitled. VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963).

No Mandatory Provision as to Manner of Determining Interests. — Former § 40-23 (similar to this section) contained no mandatory provision as to when or in what manner the respective interests were to be determined. Barnes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 257 N.C. 507, 126 S.E.2d 732 (1962).

Separation of Trial of Collateral Issues. — Ordinarily, the trial of collateral issues, involving a determination of what the respective claimants own, should be separate from the trial to determine the gross amount required to be paid. Barnes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 257 N.C. 507, 126 S.E.2d 732 (1962).

Preservation of Right to Except to Order of Compulsory Reference. — The provision of former § 40-23 (similar to this section) that the court "may in its discretion order a reference to ascertain the facts on which such determination and order are to be made" did not deprive any claimant of his right to except to an order of compulsory reference and preserve his right to a jury trial as to controverted issues of fact. Barnes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 257 N.C. 507, 126 S.E.2d 732 (1962).

And of Right to Jury Trial on Controverted Issues of Fact. — The provision of former § 40-23 (similar to this section) that the court "may determine who is entitled to the same and direct to whom the same shall be paid" contemplated a situation where such determination may be made as a matter of law, and it did not deprive any claimant of his right to a jury trial as to controverted issues of fact. Barnes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 257 N.C. 507, 126 S.E.2d 732 (1962).

Cited in VEPCO v. Tillett, 73 N.C. App. 512, 327 S.E.2d 2 (1985).

§ 40A-32. Attorney for unknown parties appointed; pleadings amended; new commissioners appointed.

(a) The clerk or the judge on appeal shall appoint some competent attorney to appear for and protect the rights of any party in interest who is unknown or whose residence is unknown, and who has not appeared in the proceedings by an attorney or agent, and shall make an allowance to said attorney for his services which shall be taxed in the bill of costs. In such cases the State Treasurer as custodian of the Escheat Fund shall be notified of the appointment of such an attorney.

(b) The clerk or the judge on appeal shall have power at any time to amend any defect or informality in any of the special proceedings authorized by this Chapter as may be necessary, or to cause new parties to be added, and to direct such further notices to be given to any party in interest as it deems proper; and also to appoint other commissioners in place of any who shall die, refuse or neglect to serve or be incapable of serving. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 20; Code, s. 1948; Rev., s. 2592; C.S., s. 1728; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

As to provision in former § 40-19 for counsel fees for attorneys appointed for unknown parties, see North Carolina R.R. v. Goodwin, 110 N.C. 175, 14 S.E. 687 (1892); Durham v. Davis, 171 N.C. 305, 88 S.E. 433 (1916); Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Creasman, 262 N.C. 390, 137 S.E.2d 497 (1964); City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972), decided under similar former provisions.

§ 40A-33. Change of ownership pending proceedings.

When any proceedings under this Article shall have been commenced, no change of ownership by voluntary conveyance or transfer of the property shall in any manner affect such proceedings, but the same may be carried on and perfected as if no such conveyance or transfer had been made or attempted to be made. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 22; Code, s. 1950; Rev., s. 2594; C.S., s. 1730; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Condemnation proceedings are considered a lis pendens. Hughes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 2 N.C. App. 1, 162 S.E.2d 661 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 121, 165 S.E.2d 321 (1969).

The right to convey land is not affected by the mere filing of condemnation proceedings, nor by appraisement without confirmation and payment, as all rights would pass to the grantee. Nantahala Power & Light Co. v. Whiting Mfg. Co., 209 N.C. 560, 184 S.E. 48 (1936), citing Liverman v. Roanoke & T.R.R., 109 N.C. 52, 13 S.E. 734 (1891) and Beal v. Durham & C.R.R., 136 N.C. 298, 48 S.E. 674 (1904).

As Title Is Not Divested Until Payment. — Since the title of the person who owned the land immediately prior to the commencement of the proceedings is not divested until compensation is paid, he can sell. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n v. York Indus. Center, Inc., 263 N.C. 230, 139 S.E.2d 253 (1964).

The person who owns when the award is confirmed is the person to be compensated. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n v. York Indus. Center, Inc., 263 N.C. 230, 139 S.E.2d 253 (1964); City of Kings Mountain v. Goforth, 283 N.C. 316, 196 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

Subsequent Purchaser Not Barred From Recovery. — An owner of land who acquired title subsequent to the location by a railroad company was not barred of his remedy for compensation where the road was not finished more than two years before he began his action. Hendrick v. Carolina Cent. R.R., 101 N.C. 617, 8 S.E. 236 (1888); Beattie v. Carolina Cent. R.R., 108 N.C. 425, 12 S.E. 913 (1891).

The purchaser of land subsequent to the location thereon of a railroad may recover permanent damages for the easement taken. Phillips v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 130 N.C. 513, 41 S.E. 1022, rev'd on other grounds on rehearing, 131 N.C. 225, 42 S.E. 587 (1902); Beal v. Durham & C.R.R., 136 N.C. 298, 48 S.E. 674 (1904).

Right to Compensation for Damages Passes with Conveyance. — Until a purchase or condemnation, the corporation's occupation is without title, and the conveyance of the land will pass to the vendee the right to compensation for damages. Liverman v. Roanoke & T.R.R., 109 N.C. 52, 13 S.E. 734 (1891).

But Action for Unlawful Entry Is Personal. — The damages incident to the act of an unlawful entry upon land by a railway corporation are personal to the owner of the land, and do not pass by his subsequent conveyance of the premises. Liverman v. Roanoke & T.R.R., 109 N.C. 52, 13 S.E. 734 (1891).

The purchaser at the mortgage sale, while not entitled to the damages incident to the act of entry, might recover compensation for the land appropriated to the use of the company. Liverman v. Roanoke & T.R.R., 109 N.C. 52, 13 S.E. 734 (1891).

§ 40A-34. Defective title; how cured.

If at any time after an attempt to acquire title under this Article has commenced it shall be found that the title thereby attempted to be acquired is defective, the condemnor may commence new proceedings to acquire or perfect such title in the same manner as if no previous attempt had been commenced. At any stage in the new proceedings the court may authorize the condemnor, if in possession, to continue in possession, and if not in possession, to take possession and use the property during the pendency and until the final conclusion of the new proceedings. If the condemnor pays into court a sum determined by the court to be adequate compensation for the property, the court, in its discretion, may stay all actions or proceedings against the condemnor for its possession. In every such case the party interested in the property may conduct the proceedings to a conclusion if the condemnor delays or omits to prosecute the same. (1871-2, c. 138, s. 23; Code, s. 1951; Rev., s. 2595; C.S., s. 1731; 1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§§ 40A-35 through 40A-39: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 3.

Condemnation by Public Condemnors.

§ 40A-40. Notice of action.

(a) Not less than 30 days prior to the filing of a complaint under the provisions of G.S. 40A-41, a public condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(b) or (c) shall provide notice to each owner (whose name and address can be ascertained by reasonable diligence) of its intent to institute an action to condemn property. (The notice shall be sent to each owner by certified mail, return receipt requested. The providing of notice shall be complete upon deposit of the notice enclosed in a postpaid, properly addressed wrapper in a post office or official depository under the exclusive care and custody of the United States Postal Service. Notice by publication is not required. Notice to an owner whose name and/or address cannot be ascertained by reasonable diligence is not required in any manner.)

The notice shall contain a general description of the property to be taken and of the amount estimated by the condemnor to be just compensation for the property to be condemned. The notice shall also state the purpose for which the property is being condemned and the date condemnor intends to file the complaint.

(b) In the case of a condemnation action to be commenced pursuant to G.S. 40A-42(a), the notice required by subsection (a) of this section shall substantially comply with the following requirements:

(1) The notice shall be printed in at least 12 point bold legible type.
(2) The words "Notice of condemnation" or similar words shall conspicuously appear on the notice.
(3) The notice shall include the information required by subsection (a) of this section.
(4) The notice shall contain a plain language summary of the owner's rights, including:
a. The right to commence an action for injunctive relief.
b. The right to answer the complaint after it has been filed.
(5) The notice shall include a statement advising the owner to consult with an attorney regarding the owner's rights.

An owner is entitled to no relief because of any defect or inaccuracy in the notice unless the owner was actually prejudiced by the defect or inaccuracy, and the owner is otherwise entitled to relief under Rules 55(d) or 60(b) of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure or other applicable law. CASE NOTES

Long as Original Purpose Remains, No Fatal Inconsistency with Regard to Additional Uses. — Presuit notice of condemnation was sufficiently specific, where it stated the purpose of expanding and improving an existing landfill, even though the county's subsequent complaint stated additional uses, since the original purpose remained valid, and the county was not required to state with specificity the "uses" for which the property was taken. § 40A-41. Institution of action and deposit.

A public condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(b) or (c) shall institute a civil action to condemn property by filing in the superior court of any county in which the land is located a complaint containing a declaration of taking declaring that property therein is thereby taken for the use of the condemnor.

The complaint shall contain or have attached thereto the following:

(1) A statement of the authority under which and the public use for which the property is taken;
(2) A description of the entire tract or tracts of land affected by the taking sufficient for the identification thereof;
(3) A statement of the property taken and a description of the area taken sufficient for the identification thereof;
(4) The names and addresses of those persons who the condemnor is informed and believes may be or, claim to be, owners of the property so far as the same can by reasonable diligence be ascertained, and if any such persons are infants, incompetents, inebriates or under any other disability, or their whereabouts or names unknown, it must be so stated;
(5) A statement of the sum of money estimated by the condemnor to be just compensation for the taking; and
(6) A statement as to whether the owner will be permitted to remove all or a specified portion of any timber, buildings, structures, permanent improvements, or fixtures situated on or affixed to the property.

(7) A statement as to such liens or other encumbrances as the condemnor is informed and believes are encumbrances upon the property and can by reasonable diligence be ascertained.

(8) A prayer that there be a determination of just compensation in accordance with the provisions of this Article.

The filing of the complaint shall be accompanied by the deposit to the use of the owner of the sum of money estimated by the condemnor to be just compensation for the taking. Upon the filing of the complaint and the deposit of said sum, summons shall be issued to each owner of the property. The summons, together with a copy of the complaint and notice of the deposit shall be served upon the person named therein in the manner provided for the service of process under the provisions of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4. The condemnor may amend the complaint and may increase the amount of its deposit with the court at any time while the proceeding is pending, and the owner shall have the same rights of withdrawal of this additional amount as set forth in G.S. 40A-44 of this Chapter. (a)(1) [Standard Provision]. — When a local public condemnor is acquiring property by condemnation for a purpose set out in G.S. 40A-3(b)(1), (4) or (7), or when a city is acquiring property for a purpose set out in G.S. 160A-311(1), (2), (3), (4), (6), or (7), or when a county is acquiring property for a purpose set out in G.S. 153A-274(1), (2) or (3), or when a local board of education or any combination of local boards of education is acquiring property for any purpose set forth in G.S. 115C-517, or when a condemnor is acquiring property by condemnation as authorized by G.S. 40A-3(c)(8), (9), (10), (12), or (13), title to the property and the right to immediate possession shall vest pursuant to this subsection. Unless an action for injunctive relief has been initiated, title to the property specified in the complaint, together with the right to immediate possession thereof, shall vest in the condemnor upon the filing of the complaint and the making of the deposit in accordance with G.S. 40A-41.

(2) [Modified Provision for Certain Localities]. — When a local public condemnor is acquiring property by condemnation for a purpose set out in G.S. 40A-3(b1)(1), (4), (7), (10), or (11), or when a city is acquiring property for a purpose set out in G.S. 160A-311(1), (2), (3), (4), (6), or (7), or when a county is acquiring property for a purpose set out in G.S. 153A-274(1), (2) or (3), or when a local board of education or any combination of local boards of education is acquiring property for any purpose set forth in G.S. 115C-517, or when a condemnor is acquiring property by condemnation as authorized by G.S. 40A-3(c)(8), (9), (10), (12), or (13), title to the property and the right to immediate possession shall vest pursuant to this subsection. Unless an action for injunctive relief has been initiated, title to the property specified in the complaint, together with the right to immediate possession thereof, shall vest in the condemnor upon the filing of the complaint and the making of the deposit in accordance with G.S. 40A-41.

This subdivision applies only to Caroline Beach, Carteret County, Dare County, and the Towns of Atlantic Beach, Emerald Isle, Holden Beach, Indian Beach, Kill Devil Hills, Kitty Hawk, Kure Beach, Nags Head, North Topsail Beach, Pine Knoll Shores, Surf City, Topsail Beach, and Wrightsville Beach.

Unless an action for injunctive relief has been initiated, title to the property specified in the complaint, together with the right to immediate possession thereof, shall vest in the condemnor:

(1) Upon the filing of an answer by the owner who requests only that there be a determination of just compensation and who does not challenge the authority of the condemnor to condemn the property; or

(2) Upon the failure of the owner to file an answer within the 120-day time period established by G.S. 40A-46; or

(3) Upon the disbursement of the deposit in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 40A-44.

(c) If the property is owned by a private condemnor, the vesting of title in the condemnor and the right to immediate possession of the property shall not become effective until the superior court has rendered final judgment (after any appeals) that the property is not in actual public use or is not necessary to the operation of the business of the owner, as set forth in G.S. 40A-5(b).

(d) If the answer raises any issues other than the issue of compensation, the issues so raised shall be determined under the provisions of G.S. 40A-47.

(e) The judge shall enter such orders in the cause as may be required to place the condemnor in possession.

(f) The provisions of this section shall not preclude or otherwise affect any remedy of injunction available to the owner or the condemnor. (1981, c. 919, s. 1; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 871, s. 1; 1998-212, s. 9.10; 2001-36, ss. 2, 3; 2001-239, s. 1; 2001-478, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Subsection (a) does not grant landowner a statutory right to bring an action for injunctive relief to bar condemnation proceeding and to prevent the title and the right to immediate possession of the property from vesting in defendant when under § 40A-45 landowner has an adequate remedy of law. Tradewinds Campground, Inc. v. Town of Atlantic Beach, 90 N.C. App. 601, 369 S.E.2d 365, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 180, 373 S.E.2d 126 (1988).

Title of Defendants Holding Property as Tenants by Entirety Need Not Be Divested Simultaneously in Condemnation Proceeding. — Where plaintiff acquired title to defendants' interest in certain property owned by them as tenants by the entirety, and even though plaintiff argued such title on separate dates, this Chapter contains no requirement that title to condemned property be divested simultaneously. Town of Chapel Hill v. Burchette, 100 N.C. App. 157, 394 S.E.2d 698 (1990).

Effect of Answer Which Did Not Contest Plaintiff's Power to Condemn. — Where, in condemnation proceeding original answer of defendant property owner contested only amount of compensation due and did not contest power of plaintiff to condemn property, title to defendant's interest vested in plaintiff at that time, and plaintiff's filing of amended complaint did not void defendant's original answer. Town of Chapel Hill v. Burchette, 100 N.C. App. 157, 394 S.E.2d 698 (1990).

Effect of Failure to File Action for Injunctive Relief. — Title to condemned property vested and the county had the right to take immediate possession when they filed the complaint and deposited the estimated just compensation, since the landowners did not file an action for injunctive relief before the condemnation complaint was filed. Scotland County v. Johnson, 131 N.C. App. 765, 509 S.E.2d 213 (1998).

"Reasonable Diligence". — In an inverse condemnation suit where plaintiff's advertisement sign was torn down by defendant city, plaintiff's allegation in the complaint that defendant city failed to exercise reasonable diligence to discover plaintiff's interest and that plaintiff's sign was prominently constructed upon the property creates an issue of fact as to whether defendant city exercised reasonable diligence. Schloss Outdoor Adv. Co. v. City of Charlotte, 50 N.C. App. 150, 272 S.E.2d 920 (1980), decided under prior law.

§ 40A-43. Memorandum of action.

The condemnor, at the time of the filing of the complaint containing the declaration of taking and deposit of estimated compensation, shall record a memorandum of action with the register of deeds in all counties in which the land involved is located and said memorandum shall be recorded among the land records of said county. Upon the amending of any complaint affecting the property taken, the condemnor shall record a supplemental memorandum of action. The memorandum of action shall contain:

(1) The names of those persons who the condemnor is informed and believes to be or claim to be owners of the property and who are parties to said action;
(2) A description of the entire tract or tracts affected by said taking sufficient for the identification thereof;
(3) A statement of the property taken for public use;
(4) The date of institution of said action, the county in which said action is pending, and such other reference thereto as may be necessary for the identification of said action. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-44. Disbursement of deposit.

Where there is no dispute as to title the person named in the complaint may apply to the court for disbursement of the money deposited in the court, or any part thereof, as full compensation, or as a credit against just compensation without prejudice to further proceedings in the cause to determine just compensation. Upon such application, the judge shall order that the money deposited be paid forthwith to the person entitled thereto in accordance with the application. Subject to the provisions of G.S. 40A-68 the judge shall have power to make such orders with respect to encumbrances, liens, rents, taxes, assessments, insurance and other charges, if any, as shall be just and equitable.

No notice to the condemnor of the hearing upon the application for disbursement of deposit shall be necessary. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-45. Answer, reply and plat.

(a) Any person whose property has been taken by the condemnor by the filing of a complaint containing a declaration of taking, may within the time set forth in G.S. 40A-46 file an answer to the complaint. No answer shall be filed to the declaration of taking and notice of deposit. Said answer shall contain the following:

(1) Such admissions or denials of the allegations of the complaint as are appropriate;

(2) The names and addresses of the persons filing said answer, together with a statement as to their interest in the property taken;

(3) Such affirmative defenses or matters as are pertinent to the action; and

(4) A request that there be a determination of just compensation.

(b) A copy of the answer shall be served on the condemnor provided that failure to serve the answer shall not deprive the answer of its validity. The affirmative allegations of said answer shall be deemed denied. The condemnor may, however, file a reply within 30 days from receipt of a copy of this answer.

(c) The condemnor, within 90 days from the receipt of the answer shall file in the cause a plat of the property taken and such additional area as may be necessary to properly determine the compensation, and a copy thereof shall be mailed to the parties or their attorney; provided, however, the condemnor shall not be required to file a map or plat in less than six months from the date of the filing of the complaint. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section 40A-42(a) does not grant landowner a statutory right to bring an action for injunctive relief to bar condemnation proceeding and to prevent the title and the right to immediate possession of the property from vesting in defendant when under this section landowner has an adequate remedy of law. Tradewinds Campground, Inc. v. Town of Atlantic Beach, 90 N.C. App. 601, 369 S.E.2d 365, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 180, 373 S.E.2d 126 (1988).

Property Owners Not Entitled to Injunctive Relief. — As subdivision (a)(3) of this section gave owners an opportunity to raise in court the issue of pending voluntary annexation proceeding, they had an adequate remedy at law and were not entitled to injunctive relief granted by the trial court, enjoining county from proceeding with condemnation proceeding. Yandle v. Mecklenburg County, 85 N.C. App. 382, 355 S.E.2d 216, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 91 (1987).

§ 40A-46. Time for filing answer; failure to answer.

Any person named in and served with a complaint containing a declaration of taking shall have 120 days from the date of service thereof to file answer. Failure to answer within said time shall constitute an admission that the amount deposited is just compensation and shall be a waiver of any further proceeding to determine just compensation; in such event the judge shall enter final judgment in the amount deposited and order disbursement of the money deposited to the owner. Provided, however, at any time prior to the entry of the final judgment the judge may, for good cause shown and after notice to the condemnor extend the time for filing answer for 30 days. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-47. Determination of issues other than damages.

The judge, upon motion and 10 days' notice by either the condemnor or the owner, shall, either in or out of session, hear and determine any and all issues raised by the pleadings other than the issue of compensation, including, but not limited to, the condemnor's authority to take, questions of necessary and proper parties, title to the land, interest taken, and area taken. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

A municipality is solely liable for the damages that inevitably or necessarily flow from the construction of an improvement in keeping with the design of the condemnor, and contract provisions which require that work be accomplished upon public property or upon private property for which the city holds an easement do not alter the city's liability for such damages. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Damages to land outside city's easements which inevitably or necessarily flow from the construction of the outfall result in an appropriation of land for public use. Such damages are embraced within the just compensation to which defendant landowners are entitled. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Review of Condemnation Decision. — This section authorized the trial court to conduct a de novo review of the condemnation decision of a city redevelopment commission. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Agapion, 129 N.C. App. 346, 499 S.E.2d 474 (1998).

Denial of Jury Trial on Issue of Ownership Upheld. — In special proceedings for condemnation of land for an airport, trial judge did not err in denying motion for a jury trial on the issue of ownership of the property, as the issue of ownership was not triable by a jury of right, and moreover, appellant did not demand a trial by jury in writing within the prescribed time. Raleigh-Durham Airport Auth. v. Howard, 88 N.C. App. 207, 363 S.E.2d 184 (1987), cert. denied, 322 N.C. 113, 367 S.E.2d 916 (1988).

§ 40A-48. Appointment of commissioners.

(a) A request to the clerk for the appointment of commissioners to determine compensation for the taking may be made in the answer of the owner, or may be made by motion of either the owner or the condemnor within 60 days after the filing of the answer. After the determination of other issues as provided by G.S. 40A-47, the clerk shall appoint three competent, disinterested persons residing in the county to serve as commissioners. The commissioners shall be sworn and shall go upon the land to appraise the compensation for the property taken and report their findings to the court within a time certain. Each commissioner shall be a person who has no right, title, or interest in or to the property being condemned, is not related within the third degree to the owner or to the spouse of the owner, is not an officer, employee, or agent of the condemnor, and is disinterested in the rights of the parties in every way.

(b) The commissioners shall have the power to inspect the property, hold hearings, swear witnesses, and take evidence as they may, in their discretion, deem necessary, and shall file with the court a report of their determination of the damages sustained.

(c) The report of commissioners shall be in writing and in a form substantially as follows:

TO THE SUPERIOR COURT OF _____ COUNTY

We, _____ and _____ Commissioners appointed by the Court to assess the compensation to be awarded to _____, the owner of property interest in certain land lying in _____ County, North Carolina, which has been taken by the _____ (condemnor), for public purposes, do hereby certify that we convened, and, having first been duly sworn, visited the premises, and took such evidence as was presented to us, and after taking into full consideration the quality and quantity of the land and all other facts which reasonably affect its fair market value at the time of the taking, we have determined the fair market value of the property taken to be the sum of $_____ and the compensation for the damage to the remainder of the land of the owner by reason of the taking to be the sum of $_____ (if applicable). GIVEN under our hands, this the _____ day of _____, _____.

_____. (SEAL)
_____ (SEAL)
_____ (SEAL)

(d) A copy of the report shall at the time of filing be mailed certified or registered mail by the clerk to each of the parties or to their counsel of record. Within 30 days after the mailing of the report, either the condemnor or the owner, may except thereto and demand a trial de novo by a jury as to the issue of compensation. Upon the receipt of such demand the action shall be placed on the civil issue docket of the superior court for trial de novo by a jury as to the issue of compensation, provided, that upon agreement of both parties trial by jury may be waived and the issue determined by the judge. The report of commissioners shall not be competent as evidence upon the trial of the issue of compensation in the superior court, nor shall evidence of the deposit by the condemnor into the court be competent upon the trial of the issue of compensation. If no exception to the report of commissioners is filed within the time prescribed, final judgment shall be entered by the judge upon a determination and finding by him that the report of commissioners plus interest computed in accordance with G.S. 40A-53 of this Chapter, awards to the property owners just compensation. In the event that the judge is of the opinion and, in his discretion, determines that the award does not provide just compensation, he shall set aside the award and order the case placed on the civil issue docket for determination of the issue of compensation by a jury. (1981, c. 919, s. 1; 1999, c. 456, s. 59.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-456, s. 59, effective January 1, 2000, amended the form in subsection (c) to change the line for date entry from "19" to a blank line.

CASE NOTES

§ 40A-49. No request for commissioners.

After the determination of other issues as provided by G.S. 40A-47, if no request has been made for the appointment of commissioners within the time permitted by G.S. 40A-48(a), the cause shall be transferred to the civil issue docket for trial as to the issue of just compensation. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-50. Parties, orders; continuances.

The judge shall appoint an attorney to appear for and protect the rights of any party or parties in interest who are unknown, or whose residence is unknown and who has not appeared in the proceeding by an attorney or agent. The State Treasurer as custodian of the Escheat Fund shall be notified of the appointment of such an attorney. The judge shall appoint guardians ad litem for such parties as are infants, incompetents, or other parties who may be under a disability, and without general guardian, and the judge shall have the authority to make such additional parties as are necessary to the complete determination of the proceeding.

Upon his own motion, or upon motion of any of the parties the judge may, in his discretion, continue the cause until the project is completed or until such earlier time as, in the opinion of the judge, the effect of condemnation upon said property may be determined. The motion may be heard at a hearing pursuant to G.S. 40A-47 or upon the coming on of the cause for trial, and shall be granted upon a proper showing that the effect of condemnation upon the subject property cannot presently be determined. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-51. Remedy where no declaration of taking filed; recording memorandum of action.

(a) If property has been taken by an act or omission of a condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(b) or (c) and no complaint containing a declaration of taking has been filed the owner of the property, may initiate an action to seek compensation for the taking. The action may be initiated within 24 months of the date of the taking of the affected property or the completion of the project involving the taking, whichever shall occur later. The complaint shall be filed in the superior court and shall contain the following: the names and places of residence of all persons who are, or claim to be, owners of the property, so far as the same can by reasonable diligence be ascertained; if any persons are under a legal disability, it must be so stated; a statement as to any encumbrances on the property; the particular facts which constitute the taking together with the dates that they allegedly occurred, and; a description of the property taken. Upon the filing of said complaint summons shall issue and together with a copy of the complaint be served on the condemnor. The allegations of said complaint shall be deemed denied; however, the condemnor within 60 days of service summons and complaint may file answer thereto. If the taking is admitted by the condemnor, it shall, at the time of filing the answer, deposit with the court the estimated amount of compensation for the taking. Notice of the deposit shall be given to the owner. The owner may apply for disbursement of the deposit and disbursement shall be made in accordance with the applicable provisions of G.S. 40A-44. If a taking is admitted, the condemnor shall, within 90 days of the filing of the answer to the complaint, file a map or plat of the property taken. The procedure hereinbefore set out in this Article and in Article 4 shall be followed for the purpose of determining all matters raised by the pleadings and the determination of just compensation.

(b) The owner at the time of filing of the complaint shall record a memorandum of action with the register of deeds in all counties in which the property involved is located. The memorandum is to be recorded among the land records of the county. The memorandum of action shall contain:

(1) The names of those persons who the owner is informed and believes to be or claim to be owners of the property;

(2) A description of the entire tract or tracts affected by the alleged taking sufficient for the identification thereof;

(3) A statement of the property allegedly taken; and

(4) The date on which owner alleges the taking occurred, the date on which said action was instituted, the county in which it was instituted, and such other reference thereto as may be necessary for the identification of said action.

(c) Nothing in this section shall in any manner affect an owner's common-law right to bring an action in tort for damage to his property. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

An inverse condemnation remedy is now provided in this jurisdiction by this section. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Inverse condemnation is simply a device to force a governmental body to exercise its power of condemnation, even though it may have no desire to do so. It allows a property owner to obtain compensation for a taking in fact, even though no formal exercise of the taking power has occurred. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

What Constitutes a "Project" Under this Section. — Although defendant designated the entire widening of the road as a "project," where there was evidence that individual sections were also referred to as "projects," because the road was widened in sections by different contractors, and there were beginning and ending points to the widening of each section, these individual sections met the definition of "projects" for purposes of subsection (a). McAdoo v. City of Greensboro, 91 N.C. App. 570, 372 S.E.2d 742 (1988).

Where plaintiffs sued for inverse condemnation by city whose road widening project was composed of many separate projects performed by more than one contractor, the plaintiffs had 24 months from the completion of the individual section of road encroaching upon their property which for purposes of subsection (a) was the "project" involving the taking. McAdoo v. City of Greensboro, 91 N.C. App. 570, 372 S.E.2d 742 (1988).

Applicability of Subsection (c). — Although subsection (c) provides that "nothing in this action shall in any manner affect an owner's common-law right to bring an action in tort for damage to his property," it was not relevant in an inverse condemnation case, since an owner has no common-law right to bring a trespass action against a city. McAdoo v. City of Greensboro, 91 N.C. App. 570, 372 S.E.2d 742 (1988).

Defendants' assertion of a counterclaim in condemnation action by city, alleging that property not included therein had been taken, properly placed the inverse condemnation issue before the court. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Remedy for Municipal Airport Overflight. — Private landowners no longer have any private common-law actions for damages in trespass or nuisance in municipal airport overflight cases; their sole remedy is inverse condemnation. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

This section provided the sole procedure by which plaintiffs could bring an inverse condemnation action involving a taking occurring as a result of the construction and operation of an airport runway. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

No simple test exists for determining when a taking occurs by aircraft overflights; rather, a particularized judgment of the facts of the individual case is necessary. Thus the date requirement of this section does not impose any stringent standard of specificity. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

Plaintiffs' allegation of a very general taking by aircraft overflights "within the past two years" failed to allege with reasonable specificity when the alleged appropriation or taking occurred; however, rather than dismissing the complaint altogether, the court should have required plaintiffs to come forward in accordance with defendant's motion for a more definite statement and plead the facts which they possessed, so that the court could then rule on their timeliness and sufficiency. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

The statutory time begins to run on completion of the project or the taking, whichever is later. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

The individual section of widened roadway, which constituted the taking by inverse condemnation of plaintiff's property, was not completed until the maintenance period was completed; the statutory period runs from the completion of the "project," which does not necessarily mean it runs from the completion of construction. McAdoo v. City of Greensboro, 91 N.C. App. 570, 372 S.E.2d 742 (1988).

Cause of Action Time Barred. — Billboard owner's cause of action based on an alleged regulatory taking accomplished by enactment of zoning ordinance arose on April 15, 1985, the date the zoning ordinance at issue was enacted and not April 15, 1992, the end of the amortization period when the signs were required to be removed; plaintiff who did not file suit until May 11, 1992, over seven years after the enactment of the zoning ordinance at issue, was barred. Naegele Outdoor Adv., Inc. v. City of Winston-Salem, 340 N.C. 349, 457 S.E.2d 874 (1995).

Limitation Period for Taking Occurring Prior to Enactment of Chapter. — Where plaintiffs' action involving a taking incident to construction of an airport runway accrued in June 1979, and over two years later, in July 1981, new Chapter 40A was enacted, the period between such enactment and the cutoff date under the new limitation, five months and three weeks (July 10, 1981 to January 1, 1982) was not itself so unreasonably short as to deny plaintiffs due process of law, particularly in light of the fact that plaintiffs lived in an area where large numbers of inverse condemnation actions were filed within the statutory period. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

A municipality is solely liable for the damages that inevitably or necessarily flow from the construction of an improvement in keeping with the design of the condemnor, and contract provisions which require that work be accomplished upon public property or upon private property for which the city holds an easement do not alter the city's liability for such damages. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Damages to land outside city's easements which inevitably or necessarily flow from the construction of the outfall result in an appropriation of land for public use. Such damages are embraced within the just compensation to which defendant landowners are entitled. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Migration of Cases from City Landfill. — Because this section, the inverse condemnation provision, provides a landowner's only remedy for alleged damage in the nature of a "taking," the court granted summary judgment as to multi-family apartment complex developer's state, common-law claims for nuisance, trespass, and negligence based on migration of methane gases from city landfill. Ashley Park Charlotte Assocs. v. City of Charlotte, 827 F. Supp. 1223 (W.D.N.C. 1993).

Strict Liability Action Was Not Precluded. — Developer's strict liability claim based on migration of methane gases from city landfill based on the North Carolina Oil Pollution and Hazardous Substances Control Act of 1978 was not preempted by this section. Ashley Park Charlotte Assocs. v. City of Charlotte, 827 F. Supp. 1223 (W.D.N.C. 1993).

Assessment of Costs. — Where although city filed a Declaration of Taking, it did not include property held to have been inversely condemned, the court's assessment of costs under § 40A-8 was proper. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Negligence Claim Based on Inadequate Storm Drainage Pipe. — Inverse condemnation statute, § 40A-51, did not apply to preempt property owner's negligence claim for damage to her property allegedly caused by the municipality's failure to adequately maintain a storm drainage pipe running under her property, as § 40A-51(c) specifically stated that nothing under the statutory section would affect a property owner's common-law right to bring an action in tort for damage to property. Howell v. City of Lumberton, 144 N.C. App. 695, 548 S.E.2d 835 (2001).

Applied in City of Raleigh v. Hollingsworth, 96 N.C. App. 260, 385 S.E.2d 513 (1989).

§ 40A-52. Measure of compensation.

The commissioners, jury or judge shall determine the issue of compensation in accordance with the provisions of Article 4 of this Chapter. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-53. Interest as a part of just compensation.

To the amount awarded as compensation by the commissioners or a jury or judge, the judge shall add interest at the rate of six percent (6%) per annum on said amount from the date of taking to the date of judgment. Interest shall not be allowed from the date of deposit on so much thereof as shall have been paid into court as provided in this Article. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Date of Taking Defined. — Date of taking is interpreted to mean the date that the condemnor obtains the right of possession of the property involved. Dare County Bd. of Educ. v. Sakaria, 127 N.C. App. 585, 492 S.E.2d 369 (1997).

Date of Taking Term of Art. — The term "date of taking" had acquired legal significance as a term or art for purposes of computation of interest at the time Chapter 40A was enacted and there is no apparent legislative intent to deviate from this accepted common law meaning. Dare County Bd. of Educ. v. Sakaria, 127 N.C. App. 585, 492 S.E.2d 369 (1997).

Trial court erred in awarding 14% interest from the time of entry of judgment until its satisfaction, even though § 24-5(b) might be construed as allowing interest at the legal rate until judgment is satisfied, because this section specifically provides for interest in eminent domain actions during this period at the rate of 6% per annum. Concrete Mach. Co. v. City of Hickory, 134 N.C. App. 91, 517 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

§ 40A-54. Final judgments.

Final judgments entered in actions instituted under the provisions of this Article shall contain a description of the land affected, together with a description of the property acquired by the condemnor and a copy of said judgment shall be certified to the register of deeds in each county in which the land or any part thereof lies and be recorded among the land records of said county. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Recording the Judgment. — In case involving the public taking of land outside easement for sewer lines, court ordered compliance with recordation requirements of this section. Concrete Mach. Co. v. City of Hickory, 134 N.C. App. 91, 517 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

§ 40A-55. Payment of compensation.

If there are adverse and conflicting claimants to the deposit made into the court by the condemnor or the additional amount determined as just compensation, on which the judgment is entered in said action, the judge may direct the full amount determined to be paid into said court by the condemnor and may retain said cause for determination of who is entitled to said moneys. The judge may by further order in the cause direct to whom the same shall be paid and may in its discretion order a reference to ascertain the facts on which such determination and order are to be made. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Denial of Jury Trial on Issue of Ownership Upheld. — In special proceedings for condemnation of land for an airport, trial judge did not err in denying motion for a jury trial on the issue of ownership of the property, as the issue of ownership was not triable by a jury of right, and moreover, appellant did not demand a trial by jury in writing within the prescribed time. Raleigh-Durham Airport Auth. v. Howard, 88 N.C. App. 207, 363 S.E.2d 184 (1987), cert. denied, 322 N.C. 113, 367 S.E.2d 916 (1988).

Cited in In re Lee, 85 N.C. App. 302, 354 S.E.2d 759 (1987).

§ 40A-56. Refund of deposit.

In the event the amount of the final judgment is less than the amount deposited by the condemnor pursuant to the provisions of this Article, the condemnor shall be entitled to recover the excess of the amount of the deposit over the amount of the final judgment and court costs incident thereto. In the event there are not sufficient funds on deposit to cover said excess, the condemnor shall be entitled to a judgment for said sum against the person or persons having received said deposit. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§§ 40A-57 through 40A-61: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 4.

Just Compensation.

§ 40A-62. Application.

The principles set down in this Article shall govern the determination of compensation to be awarded to the owner by the condemnor for the taking of his property. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Right of Eminent Domain Subject to Provision for Reasonable Compensation. — The right to exercise the power of eminent domain is always subject to the principle that there must be definite and adequate provision made for reasonable compensation to the owner of the property proposed to be taken. Town of Mount Olive v. Cowan, 235 N.C. 259, 69 S.E.2d 525 (1952).

The qualification of the right of eminent domain, that compensation should be made for private property taken for public use, is founded on justice and a due regard for basic property rights, and is applied in North Carolina. Bennett v. Winston-Salem Southbound R.R., 170 N.C. 389, 87 S.E. 133 (1915). See also, Johnston v. Rankin, 70 N.C. 550 (1874); Phillips v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 130 N.C. 513, 41 S.E. 1022, rev'd on other grounds on rehearing, 131 N.C. 225, 42 S.E. 587 (1902).

Duty of Condemnor to Pay Just Compensation. — When the right of condemnation is exercised, a duty is imposed on the condemnor to pay just compensation for the property taken. VEPCO v. King, 259 N.C. 219, 130 S.E.2d 318 (1963).

Right of Owner to Full and Ample Compensation. — A citizen must surrender his private property in obedience to the necessities of a growing and progressive state, but in doing so he is entitled to be paid full, fair and ample compensation, to be reduced only by such benefits as are special and peculiar to his land. He has the right to have and enjoy the general benefits which are common to him and to his neighbors, without being required to pay therefor merely because it so happens that the use of his land is necessary for the needs of the public. Stamey v. Burnsville, 189 N.C. 39, 126 S.E. 103 (1925).

Noncompensable Business Losses of Lessee. — Where an entire leasehold estate is taken in the exercise of the power of eminent domain, the lessee is not entitled to recover compensation for the incidental loss attributable to the costs of removing his stock of merchandise, fixtures and other personal property, the interruption or loss of business, or the loss of customers or good will, incident to the necessity of moving to a new location, since such losses are not property and are noncompensable. Williams v. State Hwy. Comm'n, 252 N.C. 141, 113 S.E.2d 263 (1960); Zourzoukis v. State Hwy. Comm'n, 252 N.C. 149, 113 S.E.2d 269 (1960).

Real Property Valuations for Ad Valorem Purposes Admissible. — Evidence of real property valuations made by the county for ad valorem tax purposes are admissible against the county, in an eminent domain proceeding, as an admission of a party opponent. Craven County v. Hall, 87 N.C. App. 256, 360 S.E.2d 479 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 471, 364 S.E.2d 919 (1988).

Cited in Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

§ 40A-63. In general.

The determination of the amount of compensation shall reflect the value of the property immediately prior to the filing of the petition under G.S. 40A-20 or the complaint under G.S. 40A-41 and except as provided in the following sections shall not reflect an increase or decrease due to the condemnation. The day of the filing of a petition or complaint shall be the date of valuation of the interest taken. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Measure of Damages. — The measure of damages or just compensation to be paid to the landowner is the difference in the fair market value of the land immediately before the taking and the fair market value immediately after the taking of the easement. Duke Power Co. v. Ribet, 25 N.C. App. 87, 212 S.E.2d 182 (1975).

Valuation of Land as of Date of Taking. — For the purpose of determining the sum to be paid as compensation for land taken under the right of eminent domain, the value of the land taken should be ascertained as of the date of the taking, which is when the proceeding is begun. City of Kings Mountain v. Goforth, 283 N.C. 316, 196 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

In determining the fair market value of property taken in condemnation, it is generally regarded as competent to show the value of the property within a reasonable time before and/or after the taking as bearing upon its value at the time of the appropriation. Craven County v. Hall, 87 N.C. App. 256, 360 S.E.2d 479 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 471, 364 S.E.2d 919 (1988).

Price of Reconveyed Property. — Section 136-19, when read consistently with this section and § 40A-65, as well as with the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Const., dictates that the State not profit from overreaching seizures by eminent domain; therefore, Department of Transportation (DOT) was required to reconvey property acquired by eminent domain but unused by the DOT to the assigns of the original owner at the original purchase price, plus interest at the legal rate compounded annually. Ferrell v. DOT, 104 N.C. App. 42, 407 S.E.2d 601 (1991), aff'd, 334 N.C. 650, 435 S.E.2d 309 (1993).

Corporation damaging adjacent property while constructing a railroad is liable in damages just as a private individual would be. Staton v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 111 N.C. 278, 16 S.E. 181 (1892).

Right to Cut Trees Cannot Be Taken without Compensation. — Where the right to cut trees was not acquired when right-of-way was condemned, and was not paid for in the first proceeding, the right could not in a subsequent proceeding be taken without compensation. Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 257 N.C. 717, 127 S.E.2d 539 (1962).

Compensation for the right to cut trees should be made in a lump sum under the established rule for measuring damages in condemnation proceedings. Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 257 N.C. 717, 127 S.E.2d 539 (1962).

Owner Held Entitled to Com- pensatory Damages. — Landowner was entitled to compensatory damages for the cutting of crossties on land not included in the right-of-way, and the negligent filling of ditches instead of building bridges over them in constructing the roads necessary to remove the timber, and for breaking down fences. Waters v. Greenleaf-Johnson Lumber Co., 115 N.C. 648, 20 S.E. 718 (1894).

§ 40A-64. Compensation for taking.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b), the measure of compensation for a taking of property is its fair market value.

(b) If there is a taking of less than the entire tract, the measure of compensation is the greater of either (i) the amount by which the fair market value of the entire tract immediately before the taking exceeds the fair market value of the remainder immediately after the taking; or (ii) the fair market value of the property taken.

(c) If the owner is to be allowed to remove any timber, building or other permanent improvement, or fixtures from the property, the value thereof shall not be included in the compensation award, but the cost of removal shall be considered as an element to be compensated. (1981, c. 919, s. 1; 2001-487, s. 17.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2001-487, s. 17, effective December 16, 2001, substituted "improvement, or fixtures" for "improvement of fixtures" in subsection (c).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under similar former provisions.

Landowner's Son Competent to Give Opinion of Land Value. — The son of a landowner who had exhibited a great deal of familiarity with the property, as well as neighboring properties, and was familiar with the value of these properties was competent to give an opinion as to the land value. Craven County v. Hall, 87 N.C. App. 256, 360 S.E.2d 479 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 471, 364 S.E.2d 919 (1988).

The sales prices of voluntary sales of property similar in nature, location, and condition to the land being condemned is admissible as evidence of the value of that land if the other sales are not too remote in time. Whether the properties are sufficiently similar to admit such evidence is a question to be determined by the trial judge in his sound discretion, usually after a hearing on the issue conducted out of the presence of the jury. City of Winston-Salem v. Cooper, 315 N.C. 702, 340 S.E.2d 366 (1986).

Evidence of Comparable Sales of Farmland. — Where farmland is condemned as an easement, it is not error to exclude evidence of comparable sales nearby if there is a large difference in the size of the tracts, despite little difference in zoning and water availability. Duke Power Co. v. Smith, 54 N.C. App. 214, 282 S.E.2d 564 (1981).

Evidence Sufficient for Jury Question. — Where defendant landowner's evidence consisted of the before and after values of the tract that sewer line easement affected, there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury. Guilford County v. Kane, 114 N.C. App. 243, 441 S.E.2d 556 (1994).

Instruction as to Sentimental Value. — In an action in eminent domain, the judge properly advised the jury foreman the sentimental value should not be considered in determining the value of just compensation. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Merritt, 50 N.C. App. 269, 273 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 220, 276 S.E.2d 914 (1981), decided under former Chapter 40.

Agreement to Furnish Fire Protection as Compensation. — A municipality has the authority to compensate landowners for a water and sewer line easement across a tract of land located outside the municipal limits by an agreement to furnish fire protection for any buildings located on such tract, and such agreement does not constitute a waiver of the municipality's governmental immunity with respect to torts committed in the maintenance or operation of its fire department. Valevais v. City of New Bern, 10 N.C. App. 215, 178 S.E.2d 109 (1970).

When a town sought to have property valued free of any claims which it could assert, the town could not, after the value had been fixed, claim any part of the award. Town of Hertford v. Harris, 263 N.C. 776, 140 S.E.2d 420 (1965).

Measure of compensation to one who loses right to remove sand and gravel from the property of another, when that right has never been exercised and the sand and gravel remain in the ground untouched, is the fair market value of the sand and gravel in place. In re Lee, 85 N.C. App. 302, 354 S.E.2d 759, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 513, 358 S.E.2d 520 (1987).

Where petitioner which had the contractual right to remove sand and gravel from property which was condemned, failed to show by credible and convincing evidence the value of its interest in the condemned land, petitioner was entitled to nominal damages only. In re Lee, 85 N.C. App. 302, 354 S.E.2d 759, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 513, 358 S.E.2d 520 (1987).

Testimony Regarding the Separate Valuation for Timber. — The court refused to adopt the "unit rule" of valuation and held that testimony regarding the separate valuation for timber found on condemned property was properly admitted into evidence; "preventing an appraiser witness from disclosing [information regarding enhancing compenents] seems to be at odds with the practice of real estate appraisal, and prevents an accurate reflection for the jury of the fair market value of the condemned property." City of Hillsborough v. Hughes, 140 N.C. App. 714, 538 S.E.2d 586 (2000).

Effect of Condemnation on Lost Rental Value. — Testimony by owner of rental property that the value of property remaining after taking would be diminished was permissible, and instruction that testimony was competent only on the question of impact on fair market value, and not lowered or lost rents, was adequate. City of Fayetteville v. M.M. Fowler, Inc., 122 N.C. App. 478, 470 S.E.2d 343 (1996).

This Section Compared with § 136-112(1). — Section 136-112(1) violates the equal protection rights of the property owners who have part of a tract of land condemned for highway purposes because they are denied the just compensation received by other property owners also subjected to condemnation proceedings. A property owner will receive just compensation if the taking is imposed under this section, even though the same property owner is not entitled to compensation which is just if the imposed taking is under § 136-112(1). A property owner receiving compensation under § 136-112(2) is not subjected to an offset for general benefits while a property owner under § 136-112(1) is. DOT v. Rowe, 138 N.C. App. 329, 531 S.E.2d 836 (2000).

§ 40A-65. Effect of condemnation procedure on value.

(a) The value of the property taken, or of the entire tract if there is a partial taking, does not include an increase or decrease in value before the date of valuation that is caused by (i) the proposed improvement or project for which the property is taken; (ii) the reasonable likelihood that the property would be acquired for that improvement or project; or (iii) the condemnation proceeding in which the property is taken.

(b) If before completion the project is expanded or changed to require the taking of additional property, the fair market value of the additional property does not include a decrease in value before the date of valuation caused by any of the factors described in subsection (a), but does include an increase in value before the date on which it became reasonably likely that the expansion or change of the project would occur, if the increase is caused by any of the factors described in subsection (a).

(c) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b), a decrease in value before the date of valuation which is caused by physical deterioration of the property within the reasonable control of the property owner, and by his unjustified neglect, may be considered in determining value. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Price of Reconveyed Property. — Section 136-19, when read consistently with § 40A-63 and this section, as well as with the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Const., dictates that the State not profit from overreaching seizures by eminent domain; therefore, Department of Transportation (DOT) was required to reconvey property acquired by eminent domain but unused by the DOT to the assigns of the original owner at the original purchase price, plus interest at the legal rate compounded annually. Ferrell v. DOT, 104 N.C. App. 42, 407 S.E.2d 601 (1991), aff'd, 334 N.C. 650, 435 S.E.2d 309 (1993).

Evidence of Highest and Best Use as If Not Under "Cloud of Condemnation" Was Proper. — In a condemnation action by an airport authority, the testimony of the condemnee's expert witness as to the property's highest and best use as if it had not been under a "cloud of condemnation" was proper. Since a property owner cannot capitalize on any increase in the property's value due to the reasonable likelihood that it will be acquired, the condemnor likewise cannot take advantage of any resulting decrease in the property due to the threat of condemnation. Raleigh-Durham Airport Auth. v. King, 75 N.C. App. 57, 330 S.E.2d 622 (1985).

Quoted in City of Durham v. Woo, 129 N.C. App. 183, 497 S.E.2d 457 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 496, 518 S.E.2d 380 (1998).

§ 40A-66. Compensation to reflect project as planned.

(a) If there is a taking of less than the entire tract, the value of the remainder on the valuation date shall reflect increases or decreases in value caused by the proposed project including any work to be performed under an agreement between the parties.

(b) The value of the remainder, as of the date of valuation, shall reflect the time the damage or benefit caused by the proposed improvement or project will be actually realized. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-67. Entire tract.

For the purpose of determining compensation under this Article, all contiguous tracts of land that are in the same ownership and are being used as an integrated economic unit shall be treated as if the combined tracts constitute a single tract. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Inchoate Dower Interest Sufficient. — A person's inchoate dower interest in his spouse's real property is interest sufficient to constitute an interest and estate in land for purposes of unity of ownership under this section. City of Winston-Salem v. Yarbrough, 117 N.C. App. 340, 451 S.E.2d 358 (1994), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 110, — S.E.2d — (1995), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 260, 456 S.E.2d 519 (1995).

Land Used as Integrated Economic Unit. — Defendants' tracts of land, which defendants were holding for future development, were "being used as an integrated economic unit," as required under this section. City of Winston-Salem v. Yarbrough, 117 N.C. App. 340, 451 S.E.2d 358 (1994), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 110, — S.E.2d — (1995), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 260, 456 S.E.2d 519 (1995).

No Unity of Use Found. — The trial court erred in finding that commercially-dedicated tracts C and D were part of the area affected by the taking where the four tracts (A, B, C, D) were separated by strips of land deeded to a city for streets and where the defendants' use and enjoyment of tracts C and D were not related to their use of tracts A and B, nor related to or affected by the area taken. Normally, lands will not be considered to constitute a single tract for the purpose of determining severance damages and benefits unless there is unity of use. DOT v. Rowe, 138 N.C. App. 329, 531 S.E.2d 836 (2000).

A partially-completed office park still meets the unity of use requirement. DOT v. Nelson Co., 127 N.C. App. 365, 489 S.E.2d 449 (1997).

§ 40A-68. Acquisition of property subject to lien.

Notwithstanding the provisions of an agreement, if any, relating to a lien encumbering the property:

(1) If there is a partial taking, the lienholder may share in the amount of compensation awarded only to the extent determined by the commissioners or by the jury or by the judge to be necessary to prevent an impairment of his security, and the lien shall continue upon the part of the property not taken as security for the unpaid portion of the indebtedness until it is paid; and

(2) Neither the condemnor nor owner is liable to the lienholder for any penalty for prepayment of the debt secured by the lien, and the amount awarded by the judgment to the lienholder shall not include any penalty therefor. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

§ 40A-69. Property subject to life tenancy.

If the property taken is subject to a life tenancy, the commissioners, the jury, or the judge may include in the judgment a requirement that:

(1) The award be apportioned and distributed on the basis of the respective values of the interests of the life tenant and remainderman;
(2) The compensation be used to purchase comparable property to be held subject to the life tenancy;
(3) The compensation be held in trust and administered subject to the terms of the instrument that created the life tenancy; or
(4) Any other equitable arrangement be carried out. (1981, c. 919, s. 1.)

Article 5.

Return of Condemned Property.

§ 40A-70. Return of condemned property.

Whenever a public condemnor listed in G.S. 40A-3(b) or (c) acquires real property by condemnation and thereafter determines that the property is not needed for the purpose for which it was condemned, and the public condemnor still owns the property, the public condemnor may reconvey the property to the original owner upon payment to the public condemnor of the full price paid to the owner when the property was taken by eminent domain, the cost of any improvements, together with interest at the legal rate to the date when the decision was made to offer the return of the property. Unless the public condemnor acquired the entire lot, block, or tract of land belonging to the original owner, the original owner must own the remainder of the original lot, block, or tract of land from which the property was acquired to purchase the property pursuant to this section. The public condemnor shall specify a date by which the property must be reconveyed and the payment made, which may not be less than 30 days after written notification to the original owner that the public condemnor has decided to offer the return of the property. (1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 980, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases under this section were decided prior to the enactment of § 41-6.3, which abolished the rule in Shelley's case.

History and purpose of this section. See Walter v. Trollinger, 192 N.C. 744, 135 S.E. 871 (1926).

Estates Tail Converted. — The section converted by one stroke of the legislative pen estates tail into fee simple. Hodges v. Lipscomb, 128 N.C. 57, 38 S.E. 281 (1901).

Form of Acquisition Not Changed. — The act of 1784, which subsequently converted the estate tail into a fee simple, did not change the original form of the acquisition, which still continued to be by purchase. Ballard v. Griffin, 4 N.C. 237 (1815).

The word "children" is ordinarily a word of purchase. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

"Heirs of their bodies" is equivalent to the words "heirs general." Revis v. Murphy, 172 N.C. 579, 90 S.E. 573 (1916); Cohoon v. Upton, 174 N.C. 88, 93 S.E. 446 (1917).

When the term "heirs of the body" is used in its technical sense, it imports a class of persons to take indefinitely in succession, from generation to generation. Ray v. Ray, 270 N.C. 715, 155 S.E.2d 185 (1967).

Remainder Dependent upon Estate Tail. — The section will bar a remainder dependent upon an estate tail, in possession of tenant in tail, at the time of passing the section. Lane v. Davis, 2 N.C. 362 (1796).

Confirmation of Alienation in Fee. — This section converted no estates tail into estates in fee, but such whereof there was a person seized and possessed, and confirmed only such alienations in fee as had been made by tenants in tail in possession since the year 1777. Wells v. Newbolt, 1 N.C. 450 (1802).

II. RULE IN SHELLEY'S CASE.

Statement of Rule. — A good definition of the rule in Shelley's case, and the most general, is as follows: "That when the ancestor by any gift or conveyance taketh an estate of freehold, and in the same gift or conveyance an estate is limited either mediately or immediately to his heirs, in fee or in tail, the word 'heirs' is a word of limitation of the estate and not a word of purchase." Nichols v. Gladden, 117 N.C. 497, 23 S.E. 459 (1895). See also the statement of the rule in Smith v. Proctor, 139 N.C. 314, 51 S.E. 889, 2 L.R.A. (n.s.) 172 (1905); Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

The rule in Shelley's case says, in substance, that if an estate of freehold be limited to A, with remainder to his heirs, general or special, the remainder, although importing an independent gift to the heirs, as original takers, shall confer the inheritance on A, the ancestor. Ray v. Ray, 270 N.C. 715, 155 S.E.2d 185 (1967).

Force of Rule in North Carolina. — The common-law doctrine known as the rule in Shelley's case is in force in this State. Nichols v. Gladden, 117 N.C. 497, 23 S.E. 459 (1895) (decided under prior law).

Rule has never been abolished in North Carolina, and this section does not affect that principle of law. Dawson v. Quinnerly, 118 N.C. 188, 24 S.E. 483 (1896); Hammer v. Brantley, 244 N.C. 71, 92 S.E.2d 424 (1956).

Nature and Operation of Rule. — The rule in Shelley's case is a rule of law and not of construction, and, no matter what the intention of the grantor or testator may have been, if an estate is granted or given to one for life and after his death to his heirs or "heirs of his body," and no other words are superadded which to a certainty show that other persons than the heirs general of the first taker are meant, the rule applies and the whole estate vests in the first taker. Nichols v. Gladden, 117 N.C. 497, 23 S.E. 459 (1895).

Where the conveyance is to the first taker for life and then by whatever language employed to his bodily heirs or heirs of his body, the rule in Shelley's case applies and the first taker acquires a fee. Whitson v. Barnett, 237 N.C. 483, 75 S.E.2d 391 (1953).

When a devise is to a named person for life with remainder after his death to "his heirs" or "his bodily heirs" or the "heirs of his body," nothing else appearing, the devisee becomes seized of a fee simple estate upon the death of the testator subject to any prior life estate created by the will. Hammer v. Brantley, 244 N.C. 71, 92 S.E.2d 424 (1956).

The rule in Shelley's case operates as a rule of property without regard to the intent of the grantor or devisor. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

Rule in Shelley's case applies to personalty as well as to realty. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

Whenever applicable, the rule in Shelley's case applies to both real and personal property in this jurisdiction. Ray v. Ray, 270 N.C. 715, 155 S.E.2d 185 (1967).

Limitation within Rule Passes a Fee Simple. — A limitation coming within the rule in Shelley's case, recognized as existent in this State, operates as a rule of property, passing when applicable a fee simple, both in deeds and wills, regardless of a contrary intent on the part of the testator or grantor appearing in the instrument. Wallace v. Wallace, 181 N.C. 158, 106 S.E. 501 (1921).

Difference between Words of Purchase and Words of Limitation. — In considering the applicability of the rule in Shelley's case, it is important to draw and constantly keep in mind the difference between words of purchase and words of limitation. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

When the rule in Shelley's case says that the words "heirs" or the "heirs of the body" of A are words of limitation and not words of purchase, it simply means that "heirs" or the "heirs of the body" refer to and are read in connection with the estate given to A, extending or modifying that estate, and are not taken as describing a group to whom an estate will first attach. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

"Heirs" or "Heirs of the Body". — The words "heirs" or "heirs of the body" must be taken in their technical sense, or carry the estate to the entire line of heirs to hold as inheritors under our canons of descent; but should these words be used as only designating certain persons, or confining the inheritance to a restricted class of heirs, the rule does not apply, and the ancestor or the first taker acquires only a life estate according to the meaning of the express words of the instrument. Wallace v. Wallace, 181 N.C. 158, 106 S.E. 501 (1921).

The rule in Shelley's case applies whenever judicial exposition determines that heirs are described, though informally, under a term correctly descriptive of other objects, but stands excluded whenever it determines that other objects are described, though informally, under the term heirs. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

III. APPLICATION AND ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Deed Sufficient Formerly to Convey Fee Tail. — A deed, which was sufficient under the old law to confer a fee tail, is sufficient under this section, where a contrary intent may not be gathered from the instrument construed as a whole, to convey an estate in fee simple, but such a deed must be distinguished from a conveyance in which the words "bodily heirs" are used as descriptio personarum, which merely conveys to them an estate in remainder and as purchasers from the grantor. Harrington v. Grimes, 163 N.C. 76, 79 S.E. 301 (1913). See Whitfield v. Garriss, 134 N.C. 24, 45 S.E. 904 (1903); Jones v. Ragsdale, 141 N.C. 200, 53 S.E. 842 (1906); Sessoms v. Sessoms, 144 N.C. 121, 56 S.E. 687 (1907); Perrett v. Bird, 152 N.C. 220, 67 S.E. 507 (1910). See also Acker v. Pridgon, 158 N.C. 337, 74 S.E. 335 (1912); Puckett v. Morgan, 158 N.C. 344, 74 S.E. 15 (1912).

Conveyance to One and Heirs of the Body. — A conveyance of land to A and "her heirs by the body of R (her husband) and assigns forever" was a fee tail at common law, but under this section it is converted into a fee simple absolute, unaffected by the fact that there were children of the marriage living at the time of the execution of the conveyance; and in this case, construing the instrument as a whole, it evidences the intent of the grantor that it should be so interpreted. Revis v. Murphy, 172 N.C. 579, 90 S.E. 573 (1916); Whitley v. Arenson, 219 N.C. 121, 12 S.E.2d 906 (1941).

If testatrix intended to use the term in its strict technical sense, a devise to one and his "bodily heirs" would violate the rule against perpetuities, or might create a fee tail, and in either case a fee simple would vest in the first taker. Elledge v. Parrish, 224 N.C. 397, 30 S.E.2d 314 (1944).

An estate to H during his life, with remainder to the testator's son "and his bodily heirs," vests a life estate in the land in H, with an estate tail in remainder to the son, which, under our statute, is converted into a fee simple. And upon the falling in of the life estate, the son can convey a good fee simple title. Howard v. Edwards, 185 N.C. 604, 116 S.E. 1 (1923), distinguishing Leathers v. Gray, 101 N.C. 162, 7 S.E. 657 (1888) and Chamblee v. Broughton, 120 N.C. 170, 27 S.E. 111 (1897).

A devise to A for life and at her death to the heirs of her body presents a classic case for application of the rule in Shelley's case. Ray v. Ray, 270 N.C. 715, 155 S.E.2d 185 (1967).

By a devise to A for life and at her death to the heirs of her body, the rule in Shelley's case, and the doctrine of merger, give A an estate tail which this section converts into a fee simple. Ray v. Ray, 270 N.C. 715, 155 S.E.2d 185 (1967).

Where a testatrix devised and bequeathed all her property to her daughter during her lifetime and at her death to the "heirs of her body, if any," with further provision that if the daughter should die before testatrix without heirs of the body, the property should go to named collateral kin, the daughter took a fee tail under the rule in Shelley's case, which was converted into a fee simple by this section. Ray v. Ray, 270 N.C. 715, 155 S.E.2d 185 (1967).

Child Adopted by Unmarried Daughter. — Where will provided for remainder interest to an unmarried daughter "to have and to hold the same to her and the heirs of her body," any child adopted by her would satisfy the conditions of the will and could inherit as a bodily heir. Russell v. Russell, 101 N.C. App. 284, 399 S.E.2d 415, cert. denied, 328 N.C. 577, 403 S.E.2d 514 (1991).

Deed to Daughter, "Her Children or Heirs". — Grantors executed a deed to their daughter and "her children or heirs." At the time of the execution of the deed the daughter had no children. It was held that the deed conveyed an estate tail to the daughter, which estate is converted into a fee simple by this section, and the daughter had power to dispose of the property by will. Davis v. Brown, 241 N.C. 116, 84 S.E.2d 334 (1954).

Conveyance to One and His Children. — Where a conveyance is made to A and his children, and A has children at the time the deed is executed, A and his children take as tenants in common, but if A has no children at the time the deed is executed, A takes an estate tail which is converted into a fee by this section. Davis v. Brown, 241 N.C. 116, 84 S.E.2d 334 (1954).

When the devise is to one for life and after his death to his children or issue, the rule in Shelley's case has no application, unless it manifestly appears that such words are used in the sense of heirs generally. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

Devise to Go on Devisees' Deaths to Their "Children & So On". — Where testatrix stated she "wanted" the land in question to go to her brother and at his death to his three sons and his named grandson, with further provision that at their deaths testatrix "wanted" the land to go to their "children & so on", the brother took a life estate with remainder to his children and the named grandson in fee under the rule in Shelley's case, since it is apparent that testatrix used the word "children" in the sense of an indefinite line of succession and created an estate tail converted into a fee by this section. Wilson v. Spain, 260 N.C. 482, 133 S.E.2d 189 (1963).

Devise to One and Lawful Heirs of His Body. — A devise to S and the lawful heirs of his body forever confers an estate in fee tail, converted into a fee simple under the section. Sessoms v. Sessoms, 144 N.C. 121, 56 S.E. 687 (1907). See Wool v. Fleetwood, 136 N.C. 460, 48 S.E. 785 (1904).

Devise to testator's wife for her natural life and at her death to testator's daughter and "her bodily heirs" vested a life estate in the land to the wife, with an estate tail in remainder to the daughter, whose interest was converted under this section into a defeasible fee simple, and, even though the wife conveyed her present life estate interest to her daughter, the daughter's interest could only be defeated in the event that she died without having children. Russell v. Russell, 101 N.C. App. 284, 399 S.E.2d 415, discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 577, 403 S.E.2d 514 (1991).

Where Words "Bodily Heirs" Not Used in Technical Sense. — If it appears by correct construction that the words "bodily heirs" are not used in the technical sense as conveying the estate to the entire line of heirs of the first taker, as inheritors under the canons of descent, but as words designating certain persons, the rule in Shelley's case does not apply. Whitson v. Barnett, 237 N.C. 483, 75 S.E.2d 391 (1953).

Where the conveyance was made "to Roy Whitson and bodily heirs, and their heirs and assigns," Roy Whitson being the father of four children, it was held that the words "bodily heirs" were intended to mean children and not heir general in the technical sense. The words were interpreted to mean "to Roy Whitson and children, and their heirs and assigns." Whitson v. Barnett, 237 N.C. 483, 75 S.E.2d 391 (1953).

Effect of § 41-6. — Where a deed is executed to "M and the heirs of her body by her husband S begotten, or upon failure thereafter her death to the nearest heirs of S," and at the date of the execution of the deed M has children living, the deed conveys a fee tail special to M which is converted to a fee simple by this section, defeasible upon her dying without surviving children by S, and her children do not take as tenants in common with her, § 41-6, providing that a limitation to the heirs of a living person shall be construed to be the children of such person, being applicable only when there is no precedent estate conveyed to the living person, and the condition as to the failure of heirs referring to the death of M without surviving children and not to the birth of issue, there being issue born at the date of the execution of the deed, and the ulterior limitation is not barred by the birth of such issue. Paul v. Paul, 199 N.C. 522, 154 S.E. 825 (1930), distinguishing Sharpe v. Brown, 177 N.C. 294, 98 S.E. 825 (1919). See Bank of Pilot Mountain v. Snow, 221 N.C. 14, 18 S.E.2d 711 (1942).

A deed to a married woman and her heirs by her present husband, with granting clause, habendum and warranty to "parties of the second part, their heirs and assigns," is held to convey to the married woman a fee tail special, which is converted into a fee simple absolute by this section. Whitley v. Arenson, 219 N.C. 121, 12 S.E.2d 906 (1941).

A deed to a widow and the heirs of her body by her late husband creates an estate tail which is converted by this section into a fee simple absolute in the widow, and her children by her deceased husband take no interest in the land; § 41-6 is not applicable, since it applies only when no preceding estate is conveyed to the "ancestor" of the "heirs." Bank of Pilot Mountain v. Snow, 221 N.C. 14, 18 S.E.2d 711 (1942).

A deed to grantor's wife "and to her heirs" by grantor, conveys a fee tail special, converted by this section into a fee simple absolute. Pittman v. Stanley, 231 N.C. 327, 56 S.E.2d 657 (1949).

A devise to testator's wife, "to her and her heirs by me," vests in the wife a fee tail special, converted by this section into a fee simple, and her estate is not affected or limited to a life estate with remainder in fee to the heirs of testator by subsequent provision in the item that testator's wife should have exclusive and sole use of the property and "should she have living heirs by me, then all my estate ... shall belong to her and her heirs in fee simple," in the absence of a reverter or limitation over in the event the wife should not have children born to her marriage with testator. Sharpe v. Isley, 219 N.C. 753, 14 S.E.2d 814 (1941).

Life Estate with Limitation over to Bodily Heirs. — A devise of lands for life, followed by a separate paragraph, to the "bodily heirs" of the devisees named after their death, creates an estate in fee tail, which is enlarged into a fee simple under this section. Keziah v. Medlin, 173 N.C. 237, 91 S.E. 836 (1917).

Where a husband conveys his lands to his wife for life and to her bodily heirs begotten by him, the estate conveyed is an estate tail special under the rule in Shelley's case, converted into a fee simple absolute by this section. Morehead v. Montague, 200 N.C. 497, 157 S.E. 793 (1931).

Conveyance to Husband and Wife for Life Then to Heirs of the Body of Wife. — A deed conveyed to husband and wife a life estate and expressed grantor's intent to convey only a lifetime right to said grantees, with provision that said grantees should have and hold said tract of land during their natural lives and then to the heirs of the body of the feme grantee. It was held that the husband took only a life estate, and the conveyance being to the wife and then to heirs of her body, the rule in Shelley's case applied, and the estate in fee tail conveyed to the wife was converted by this section into a fee simple absolute. Edgerton v. Harrison, 230 N.C. 158, 52 S.E.2d 357 (1949).

Devise "to Have and to Hold for the Heirs of Their Bodies". — A devise of lands to the wife of the testator for life, and at her death or remarriage to their two children, by name, to have and to hold during their natural lives for the heirs of their bodies, constitutes an estate tail, converted by this section into a fee simple. Washburn v. Biggerstaff, 195 N.C. 624, 143 S.E. 210 (1928).

Remainder to "Male Heirs, They to Share and Share Alike". — The will in question devised certain lands to testator's son for life "and then to be divided equally among his male heirs, they to share and share alike" and it was held that even if it be conceded that the words "male heirs" should be construed "heirs" under the provisions of this section, the addition of the words "share and share alike" prevents the application of the rule in Shelley's case, and upon the death of the son, his sole male heir takes the fee in the property by purchase under the will. Cheshire v. Drewry, 213 N.C. 450, 197 S.E. 1 (1938).

Devise to Grandchildren for Their Lives, Then "to Their Bodily Heirs". — The rule in Shelley's case does not apply to a devise to testator's grandchildren during the term of their natural lives, then "to their bodily heirs, or issue surviving them," with limitation over of the share of any grandchild who should die without issue to his next of kin, since it is apparent that the word "heirs" was not used in its technical sense, and the grandchildren take only a life estate. Williams v. Johnson, 228 N.C. 732, 47 S.E.2d 24 (1948).

The use of the word "children" following the life estate does not create a fee simple estate or fee tail estate which would be converted by this section into a fee simple estate where a will devises real estate to the three daughters of testator, naming them, "during the time of their natural lives" and provides that "the share of each one of my said daughters shall upon her death go to her children and their heirs absolutely," for the word "children" is a word of purchase. Moore v. Baker, 224 N.C. 133, 29 S.E.2d 452 (1944).

"Lawful Heirs". — Where a devise is to one for life and then to his "lawful heirs," the word "lawful," qualifying the word "heirs," does not have the effect of preventing the latter word from operating as one of limitation and of restricting the meaning of the words "lawful heirs" to that of "children," who will take not by descent from their parent, but by purchase from the devisor. Wool v. Fleetwood, 136 N.C. 460, 48 S.E. 785 (1904).

"Heirs, if Any". — A conveyance to one for "his lifetime, and at his death to his heirs, if any," invokes the application of the rule in Shelley's case and vests a fee in the first taker. The use of the phrase "if any" does not prevent the application of the rule, since there is no limitation over. Glover v. Glover, 224 N.C. 152, 29 S.E.2d 350 (1944).

"Heirs or Heiresses of Her Body". — A devise to P, "during her natural life, and after her death to the begotten heirs or heiresses of her body," vested in P an absolute estate in fee simple. Leathers v. Gray, 101 N.C. 162, 7 S.E. 657 (1888).

"Or Other Lineal Descendants". — The superadded words "or other lineal descendants ... to have and to hold the same to them and their heirs, executors and administrators absolutely" do not demonstrate that testator contemplated an indefinite succession from generation to generation. Wright v. Vaden, 266 N.C. 299, 146 S.E.2d 31 (1966).

Devise "for Life Only". — A devise of lands to the testator's named children "for life only and then to their body heirs," falls within the rule in Shelley's case, notwithstanding the use of the words "for life only," and carries to the remainderman a fee tail under the old law, converted by our statute into a fee simple title. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Dortch, 186 N.C. 510, 120 S.E. 60 (1923), citing Harrington v. Grimes, 163 N.C. 76, 79 S.E. 301 (1913).

Reverter upon Death without Surviving Heirs. — The interpretation that a deed for life and then to "the surviving heirs of her body" conveys the fee simple title, under this section, does not apply when the grantor uses the additional words, "but should she die without leaving such heir or heirs, then the same is to revert back to her nearest of kin according to law," for then the intent is manifest that the conveyance is of a defeasible fee depending upon whether the first taker died without leaving children surviving her. Smith v. Parke, 176 N.C. 406, 97 S.E. 209 (1918).

A devise to testator's daughter and her bodily heirs, and if she dies without bodily heirs, then in trust for the heirs of testator's sisters, is held to create a fee simple estate in the daughter, defeasible upon her dying without children or issue, it being apparent that the words "bodily heirs" used in the devise meant children or issue, as otherwise the limitation over to the heirs of testator's sisters would be meaningless. Murdock v. Deal, 208 N.C. 754, 182 S.E. 466 (1935).

Where land is devised to a person for life at her death to vest in the testator's children during their natural lives and at their death to vest in their lawful heirs, and should they leave no lawful heirs, then to the testator's lawful heirs, such children take a fee simple absolute on the death of the life tenant. Wool v. Fleetwood, 136 N.C. 460, 48 S.E. 785 (1904).

Where a testator devises realty to a grandson, and upon the grandson's death without children, then the realty to descend to other grandchildren, such devise vests a fee simple estate in the first devisee, defeasible only on condition that he die without leaving heirs of his body. Whitefield v. Garriss, 134 N.C. 24, 45 S.E. 904 (1903).

When Defeasible Estate Becomes Absolute. — A conveyance to a granddaughter and the heirs of her own body passed an estate in fee tail, which by this section was converted into a fee simple, defeasible under the terms of the deed if no child was born to her, but which became absolute upon the birth of a child. Sharpe v. Brown, 177 N.C. 294, 98 S.E. 825 (1919). See Paul v. Paul, 199 N.C. 522, 154 S.E. 825 (1930).

An estate in remainder to the testator's son "and to his children or issue, but in case he should die childless and without issue, then ... to my heirs in equal degree in fee simple," there being no child or children of the son until long after the testator's death, was held to create an estate tail at common law, which was converted into a fee simple by this section, defeasible upon the testator's son dying without issue, and as there was an ultimate limitation over to persons coming within its terms, the testator's son and his child or issue could not convey a fee simple title. Ziegler v. Love, 185 N.C. 40, 115 S.E. 887 (1923).

§ 41-2. Survivorship in joint tenancy defined; proviso as to partnership.

Except as otherwise provided herein, in all estates, real or personal, held in joint tenancy, the part or share of any tenant dying shall not descend or go to the surviving tenant, but shall descend or be vested in the heirs, executors, or administrators, respectively, of the tenant so dying, in the same manner as estates held by tenancy in common: Provided, that estates held in joint tenancy for the purpose of carrying on and promoting trade and commerce, or any useful work or manufacture, established and pursued with a view of profit to the parties therein concerned, are vested in the surviving partner, in order to enable him to settle and adjust the partnership business, or pay off the debts which may have been contracted in pursuit of the joint business; but as soon as the same is effected, the survivor shall account with, and pay, and deliver to the heirs, executors and administrators respectively of such deceased partner all such part, share, and sums of money as he may be entitled to by virtue of the original agreement, if any, or according to his share or part in the joint concern, in the same manner as partnership stock is usually settled between joint merchants and the representatives of their deceased partners. Nothing in this section prevents the creation of a joint tenancy with right of survivorship in real or personal property if the instrument creating the joint tenancy expressly provides for a right of survivorship, and no other document shall be necessary to establish said right of survivorship. Upon conveyance to a third party by less than all of three or more joint tenants holding property in joint tenancy with right of survivorship, a tenancy in common is created among the third party and the remaining joint tenants, who remain joint tenants with right of survivorship as between themselves. Upon conveyance to a third party by one of two joint tenants holding property in joint tenancy with right of survivorship, a tenancy in common is created between the third party and the remaining joint tenant. A conveyance of any interest in real property by a party to himself and one or more other parties, as joint tenants with right of survivorship, creates in the parties that interest, if the instrument of conveyance expressly provides for a joint tenancy with right of survivorship. The act became effective January 1, 1991.

Session Laws 1991, c. 606, which amended this section, in section 2 provides: "A conveyance of any interest in real property occurring between January 1, 1991, and the effective date of this act [October 1, 1991] by a party to himself and one or more other parties that expressly provides for a joint tenancy with a right of survivorship shall have created such an interest."

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Survivorship Only Abolished as Incident of Joint Tenancy. — This section abolished survivorship only where it follows as a legal incident to an existing joint tenancy. Vettori v. Fay, 262 N.C. 481, 137 S.E.2d 810 (1964).

Right of survivorship has been statutorily abolished where it follows as legal incident to an existing joint tenancy. In re Estate of Heffner, 99 N.C. App. 327, 392 S.E.2d 770 (1990), decided under law in effect prior to § 53-146.1.

"Estate" in Most General Sense Includes Choses in Action. — "Estate" is derived from status, and in its most general sense means position or standing in respect to the things and concerns of this world. In this sense it includes choses in action. Pippin v. Ellison, 34 N.C. 61 (1851); Webb v. Bowler, 50 N.C. 362 (1858); Hurdle v. Outlaw, 55 N.C. 75 (1854).

But it is also used in a much more restricted sense, and is then put in opposition to a chose in action, or mere right, to signify something which one has in possession, or a vested remainder, or reversion without dispute or adverse possession. Taylor v. Dawson, 56 N.C. 86 (1856). See Bond v. Hilton, 51 N.C. 180 (1858).

Section Applies Only to Estates of Inheritance. — The act of 1784, converting joint tenancies into estates in common, applies only to estates of inheritance. Blair v. Osborne, 84 N.C. 417 (1881); Powell v. Morisey, 84 N.C. 421 (1881).

If the purpose had been to include all estates in joint tenancy, that purpose would have been better served by abolishing the "jus accrescendi" in a few direct words to that effect, instead of resorting to words applicable only to estates of inheritance held in joint tenancy in real estate, and absolute estates held in joint tenancy in personalty. Powell v. Allen, 75 N.C. 450 (1876).

This section which abolished the right of survivorship in joint tenancies in estates of inheritance, does not apply to a joint tenancy in a life estate where no estate of inheritance is involved. Dew v. Shockley, 36 N.C. App. 87, 243 S.E.2d 177, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1978).

Concurrent Life Estates Not Affected. — Concurrent life estates still stand untouched by this section, and the old feudal presumption in favor of joint tenancies with survivorship remains. Dew v. Shockley, 36 N.C. App. 87, 243 S.E.2d 177, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1978).

Joint Estates for Life and Estates by Entirety Not Affected. — Joint tenancies are not abolished by the section. It abolishes the right of survivorship in joint tenancies in fee, but does not affect joint estates for life or estates by entirety. Vass v. Freeman, 56 N.C. 221 (1857); Powell v. Allen, 75 N.C. 450 (1876); Blair v. Osborne, 84 N.C. 417 (1881); Powell v. Morisey, 84 N.C. 421 (1881); Burton v. Cahill, 192 N.C. 505, 135 S.E. 332 (1926).

In Powell v. Allen, 75 N.C. 450 (1876), in construing the act of 1784, now this section, Chief Justice Pearson says: "It is obvious that these words cannot be made to apply to joint tenants for life." Burton v. Cahill, 192 N.C. 505, 135 S.E. 332 (1926).

Legatees May Hold as Joint Tenants. — Legatees may still hold by a joint tenancy in North Carolina, though the incident of survivorship was abolished by the act of 1784, now this section. Vass v. Freeman, 56 N.C. 221 (1857).

When Remaindermen Take as Tenants in Common. — A deed of gift, executed by W.B. to his son J.B., "during his natural life only, and then to return to the male children of the said J.B., lawfully begotten of his body, for the want of such to return to the male children of my other sons W and B, their proper use, benefit and behoof of him, them and every of them, and to their heirs and assigns forever," vested a life estate in J.B., with remainder in fee to his sons as tenants in common under the section. Brown v. Ward, 103 N.C. 173, 9 S.E. 300 (1889).

Survivorship May Be Provided for by Contract. — This section abolishes survivorship, where the joint tenancy would otherwise have been created by the law, but does not operate to prohibit persons from entering into written contracts as to land, or verbal agreements as to personalty, such as to make the future rights of the parties depend upon the fact of survivorship. Taylor v. Smith, 116 N.C. 531, 21 S.E. 202 (1895); Jones v. Waldroup, 217 N.C. 178, 7 S.E.2d 366 (1940); Bunting v. Cobb, 234 N.C. 132, 66 S.E.2d 661 (1951); Wilson County v. Wooten, 251 N.C. 667, 111 S.E.2d 875 (1960).

This section does not operate to prohibit persons from entering into written contracts as to lands so as to make future rights of the parties depend upon survivorship. Vettori v. Fay, 262 N.C. 481, 137 S.E.2d 810 (1964).

Parties who wish to create a right of survivorship applicable to joint bank accounts must comply with requirements of § 41-2.1(a). In re Estate of Heffner, 99 N.C. App. 327, 392 S.E.2d 770 (1990), decided under law in effect prior to § 53-146.1.

Survivorship in Personalty Must Be Pursuant to Contract. — Since the abolition of survivorship in joint tenancy, the right of survivorship in personalty, if such right exists, must be pursuant to contract and not by operation of law or statutory provision. Wilson v. Ervin, 227 N.C. 396, 42 S.E.2d 468 (1947); Bowling v. Bowling, 243 N.C. 515, 91 S.E.2d 176 (1956).

A verbal agreement between two parties owning a note, payable to them jointly, that upon the death of either without issue it shall belong to the survivor is valid. Taylor v. Smith, 116 N.C. 531, 21 S.E. 202 (1895).

Instrument Held Ineffective to Provide for Survivorship. — While this section may not preclude tenants in common from providing for survivorship by adequate contract inter sese, an instrument executed by them which merely expresses a general intent that the survivor should take the fee, without any words of conveyance, is ineffective. The execution by the administrator of the deceased tenant in common of a deed to the surviving tenant, made under the supposed authority of the contract, is without effect. Pope v. Burgess, 230 N.C. 323, 53 S.E.2d 159 (1949).

Applied in Powell v. Malone, 22 F. Supp. 300 (M.D.N.C. 1938).

Stated in O'Brien v. Reece, 45 N.C. App. 610, 263 S.E.2d 817 (1980).

II. ESTATES OF HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Section Inapplicable to Conveyances to Husband and Wife. — The act of 1784, now this section, abolishing survivorship in joint tenancies, does not apply to conveyances to husband and wife, for the reason assigned in Motley v. Whitemore, 19 N.C. 537 (1837), that "being in law but one person they have each the whole estate as one person; and on the death of either of them the whole estate continues in the survivor." Long v. Barnes, 87 N.C. 329 (1882); Smith v. Gordon, 204 N.C. 695, 169 S.E. 634 (1933).

In construing this statute, the Supreme Court held that it had no application to an estate granted to husband and wife, on the ground that it is not an estate in joint tenancy, but an entirety estate. Motley v. Whitemore, 19 N.C. 537 (1837); Gray v. Bailey, 117 N.C. 439, 23 S.E. 318 (1895); Woolard v. Smith, 244 N.C. 489, 94 S.E.2d 466 (1956).

Survivorship in Joint Bank Accounts. — Where agreements of husband and wife relating to savings accounts provide that the accounts are held by them as joint tenants with right of survivorship, and not as tenants in common, the right of survivorship exists pursuant to the contracts, and upon the death of the husband the widow is entitled to take the whole. Bowling v. Bowling, 243 N.C. 515, 91 S.E.2d 176 (1956).

Estate by Entireties Not Abolished. — It has been held in several well considered decisions of the Supreme Court that our Constitution and the later statutes relative to the property and rights of married women have not thus far destroyed or altered the nature of this estate by entireties, a conveyance to a husband and wife. Bruce v. Sugg, 109 N.C. 202, 13 S.E. 790 (1891); Ray v. Long, 132 N.C. 891, 44 S.E. 652 (1903); West v. Aberdeen & R.R., 140 N.C. 620, 53 S.E. 477 (1906); Bynum v. Wicker, 141 N.C. 95, 53 S.E. 478 (1906); Jones v. W.A. Smith & Co., 149 N.C. 318, 62 S.E. 1092 (1908); McKinnon, Currie & Co. v. Caulk, 167 N.C. 411, 83 S.E. 559 (1914). See also Martin v. Lewis, 187 N.C. 473, 122 S.E. 180 (1924).

The right of survivorship applies to estates in land conveyed jointly to husband and wife, and title vests in the heirs of the one surviving the other. Murchison v. Fogleman, 165 N.C. 397, 81 S.E. 627 (1914).

A conveyance to a husband and wife, as such, creates an estate of entirety, and does not make them joint tenants or tenants in common. Neither can alien without the consent of the other, and the survivor takes the whole. Needham v. Branson, 27 N.C. 426 (1845); Todd v. Zachary, 45 N.C. 286 (1853); Woodford v. Higly, 60 N.C. 234 (1864); Long v. Barnes, 87 N.C. 329 (1882).

Where the husband and wife purchase property, each furnishing a portion of the purchase money, an estate in entirety and not a joint estate is created which they hold per tout et non per my. Ray v. Long, 132 N.C. 891, 44 S.E. 652 (1903).

III. JOINT TENANCY IN PARTNERSHIP PROPERTY.

Joint Tenancy of Partnership in Land. — This section provides that land jointly purchased for partnership purposes shall, upon the death of one partner, survive to the others for the purpose of paying the partnership debts. Real estate held and used for partnership purposes is subject to partnership debts to the exclusion of the heir or widow of the deceased. When the partnership debts are satisfied, if there is any remainder, such share as would have fallen to the deceased partner, shall be delivered over to the heirs, executors, administrators or assigns. Stroud v. Stroud, 61 N.C. 525 (1868).

Upon Settlement Partnership Land Descends as Real Estate. — When land is purchased in fee by partnership funds and for partnership purposes, and one partner dies, upon the settlement of the partnership debts his share of the land descends to his heir as real estate. Summey v. Patton, 60 N.C. 601 (1864).

When lands are purchased by a partnership with partnership funds, upon the death of one of the partners, in the absence of any agreement in the articles of partnership to the contrary, his share therein descends to his heir at law as real estate, if the personal property of the partnership is sufficient to pay all the partnership debts and demands. Sherrod v. Mayo, 156 N.C. 144, 72 S.E. 216 (1911).

Heir May Recover from Surviving Partner. — The heir at law to whom a deceased partner had conveyed by deed his share of lands purchased with partnership funds is entitled to the lands against the rights of the surviving partner, in an action by the latter for possession for the purpose of winding up the partnership affairs, when it appears that the partnership personalty is sufficient for the purpose of paying the partnership debts and satisfying any claim the surviving partner may have, and there is no provision in the articles of the partnership agreement of a contrary purpose. Sherrod v. Mayo, 156 N.C. 144, 72 S.E. 216 (1911).

Immaterial Whether Claim Is by Deed or Inheritance. — When the rule applies that lands purchased by partnership funds descend to the heir at law, it is immaterial whether the heir of the deceased partner claims his interest by deed from him or by inheritance. Sherrod v. Mayo, 156 N.C. 144, 72 S.E. 216 (1911).

Section 59-74 is to be read in connection with this section respecting the settlement of partnership affairs by surviving partners. Coppersmith v. Upton, 228 N.C. 545, 46 S.E.2d 565 (1948).

The fact that the surviving partner instituting action on a partnership asset has not filed a bond as required by § 59-74, is not ground for nonsuit, since the requirement of a bond is for the protection of the estate of the deceased partner, and the objection is not available to one who is merely a debtor of the partnership. This conclusion is consonant with § 59-75, which provides that upon failure of the surviving partner to file bond, the clerk of the superior court shall appoint a collector of the partnership upon application of any person interested in the estate of the deceased partner. Coppersmith v. Upton, 228 N.C. 545, 46 S.E.2d 565 (1948).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effect on Common Law Application to Joint Bank Accounts. — See opinion of the Attorney General to Mr. W.C. York, Department of Insurance, 41 N.C.A.G. 352 (1971).

§ 41-2.1. Right of survivorship in bank deposits created by written agreement.

(a) A deposit account may be established with a banking institution in the names of two or more persons, payable to either or the survivor or survivors, with incidents as provided by subsection (b) of this section, when both or all parties have signed a written agreement, either on the signature card or by separate instrument, expressly providing for the right of survivorship.

(b) A deposit account established under subsection (a) of this section shall have the following incidents:

(1) Either party to the agreement may add to or draw upon any part or all of the deposit account, and any withdrawal by or upon the order of either party shall be a complete discharge of the banking institution with respect to the sum withdrawn.

(2) During the lifetime of both or all the parties, the deposit account shall be subject to their respective debts to the extent that each has contributed to the unwithdrawn account. In the event their respective contributions are not determined, the unwithdrawn fund shall be deemed owned by both or all equally.

(3) Upon the death of either or any party to the agreement, the survivor, or survivors, become the sole owner, or owners, of the entire unwithdrawn deposit, subject to the following claims listed below in subdivisions a. through e. upon that portion of the unwithdrawn deposit which would belong to the deceased had the unwithdrawn deposit been divided equally between both or among all the joint tenants at the time of the death of the deceased:
   a. The allowance of the year's allowance to the surviving spouse of the deceased;
   b. The funeral expenses of the deceased;
   c. The cost of administering the estate of the deceased;
   d. The claims of the creditors of the deceased; and
   e. Governmental rights.

(4) Upon the death of one of the joint tenants provided herein the banking institution in which said joint deposit is held shall pay to the legal representative of the deceased, or to the clerk of the superior court if the amount is less than two thousand dollars ($2,000), the portion of the unwithdrawn deposit made subject to the claims and expenses as provided in subdivision (3) above, and may pay the remainder to the surviving joint tenant or joint tenants. Said legal representative shall hold the portion of said unwithdrawn deposit paid to him and not use the same for the payment of the claims and expenses as provided in subdivision (3) above unless and until all other personal assets of the estate have been exhausted, and shall then use so much thereof as may be necessary to pay said claims and expenses. Any part of said unwithdrawn deposit not used for the payment of said claims and expenses shall, upon the settlement of the estate, be paid to the surviving joint tenant or tenants.

(c) This section shall be subject to the provisions of law applicable to transfers in fraud of creditors.

(d) This section shall not be deemed exclusive; deposit accounts not conforming to this section, and other property jointly owned, shall be governed by other applicable provisions of the law.

(e) As used in this section:

(1) "Banking institution" includes commercial banks, industrial banks, building and loan associations, savings and loan associations, and credit unions.

(2) "Deposit account" includes both time and demand deposits in commercial banks and industrial banks, installment shares, optional shares and fully paid share certificates in building and loan associations and savings and loan associations, and deposits and shares in credit unions.

(3) "Unwithdrawn deposit" shall be the amount in the deposit account held by the banking institution at the time of the death of the joint tenant; provided, however, that the banking institution shall not be held responsible for any amount properly paid out of said account prior to notice of such death.

(f) This section does not repeal or modify any provisions of the law relating to estate or inheritance taxes.

(g) A deposit account under subsection (a) of this section may be established by a written agreement in substantially the following form:

"We, the undersigned, hereby agree that all sums deposited at any time, including sums deposited prior to this date, in the _____ (name of institution) in the joint account of the undersigned, shall be held by us as co-owners with the right of survivorship, regardless of whose funds are deposited in said account and regardless of who deposits the funds in said account. Either or any of us shall have the right to draw upon said account, without limit, and in case of the death of either or any of us the survivor or survivors shall be the sole owner or owners of the entire account. This agreement is governed by the provisions of § 41-2.1 of the General Statutes of North Carolina.

CASE NOTES

Rights of Creditors. — The legislature has not enacted any statute with respect to the rights of creditors against property held by virtue of a contract creating a joint tenancy with right of survivorship, except as to the right of survivorship in bank deposits created by a written agreement by husband and wife as provided by this section. Wilson County v. Wooten, 251 N.C. 667, 111 S.E.2d 875 (1960).

Effect of Deposit into Joint Account. — A deposit by one spouse into an account in the names of both, standing alone, does not constitute a gift to the other; the depositor is still deemed to be the owner of the funds. Myers v. Myers, 68 N.C. App. 177, 314 S.E.2d 809 (1984).

For a deposit by one spouse to constitute a gift to the other, there must be donative intent coupled with loss of dominion over the property; the donor must divest himself of all right and title to, and control of, the gift. Myers v. Myers, 68 N.C. App. 177, 314 S.E.2d 809 (1984).

Wife Held Entitled to Funds in Joint Bank Account. — Notwithstanding the terms of an antenuptial contract and the terms of decedent-husband's will in keeping with the contract, the wife is also entitled to the funds on deposit in a joint bank account, the contract for which was entered into after the marriage. Harden v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 28 N.C. App. 75, 220 S.E.2d 136 (1975).

Listing Survivorship Accounts on 90-Day Inventory Held Not to Make Accounts Part of Estate for Purpose of Right to Dissent. — Where executrix listed one-half of funds in survivorship accounts on 90-day inventory to comply with subdivisions (b)(3) and (4) of this section, listing accounts for this purpose on 90-day inventory did not make funds a part of net estate for purposes of determining right to dissent under former § 30-1. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Joint Bank Accounts with Survivorship Created Under Subsection (a) of This Section. — Because right of survivorship has been statutorily abolished where it follows as legal incident to existing joint tenancy, parties who wish to create right of survivorship applicable to joint bank accounts must comply with requirements of subsection (a) of this section. In re Estate of Heffner, 99 N.C. App. 327, 392 S.E.2d 770 (1990), decided under law in effect prior to § 53-146.1.

Account Established Under Subsection (a) Not Part of Net Estate. — Funds held by testator-spouse in joint tenancy with right of survivorship with third party established pursuant to subsection (a) of this section do not become part of testator-spouse's net estate for purposes of dissent statute. In re Estate of Francis, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

The signature card constitutes the contract between the depositor of money, and the bank in which it is deposited, and it controls the terms and disposition of the account. Threatte v. Threatte, 59 N.C. App. 292, 296 S.E.2d 521 (1982); Myers v. Myers, 68 N.C. App. 177, 314 S.E.2d 809 (1984).

Or Signed Certificate Would Be Sufficient. — Either a properly executed signature card or a certificate signed by both parties and expressly providing for a right of survivorship would be sufficient to create a joint account with right of survivorship. Threatte v. Threatte, 59 N.C. App. 292, 296 S.E.2d 521 (1982).

Written agreement not signed by party asserting rights as a survivor is not sufficient to satisfy statutory requirements of subsection (a) of this section. In re Estate of Heffner, 99 N.C. App. 327, 392 S.E.2d 770 (1990), decided under law in effect prior to § 53-146.1.

Plain language of this section clearly requires that both parties sign a written agreement. In re Estate of Heffner, 99 N.C. App. 327, 392 S.E.2d 770 (1990), decided under law in effect prior to § 53-146.1.

A certificate of deposit did not itself constitute compliance with subsection (a) of this section since the certificate did not contain the signatures of the depositors and thus did not amount to a signed writing as contemplated by the statute. The provision of the certificate, "Payable to said depositor, or, if more than one, to either or any of said depositors or the survivors or survivor," absent any other evidence, was not dispositive as to the ownership of funds. The use of the conjunction "or" in the certificate did not establish the right of survivorship but merely created an agency for the one other than the depositor to withdraw funds, such agency terminating at depositor's death. O'Brien v. Reece, 45 N.C. App. 610, 263 S.E.2d 817 (1980).

Nor Did Signature Card Signed by Depositors. — A signature card signed by depositors did not comply with this section where the card did not expressly provide for the right of survivorship in the certificate of deposit in that there was no indication in the space provided on the signature card that gave effect to the survivorship provision. O'Brien v. Reece, 45 N.C. App. 610, 263 S.E.2d 817 (1980).

Where signature cards for savings and loan association accounts designated both parties "as joint tenants with right of survivorship" and instructed the savings and loan association "to act pursuant to any one or more of the joint tenants' signatures, shown below, in any manner in connection with this account and, ... to pay, without any liability for such payment, to any one or the survivor or survivors at any time," the withdrawal clause indicating that withdrawals were to be made only by the deceased party would be disregarded and the contractual terms allowing both parties the right to act in any manner regarding the account controlled. McLain v. Wilson, 91 N.C. App. 275, 371 S.E.2d 151 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 328, 377 S.E.2d 749 (1989).

Survivorship Account Not Created. — Where the materials of the parties showed without contradiction that though plaintiff and codepositor intended to establish a joint savings account with the right of survivorship, codepositor died before signing the agreement, the statutory terms for creating a survivorship account were not complied with, and plaintiff's action seeking the release of funds held in the savings account, titled in his name and that of the decedent, had no basis. Powell v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 98 N.C. App. 227, 390 S.E.2d 461 (1990).

No Trust Created. — Where deceased opened a savings account and on the application form wrote, "Payable to Rose Z. Weaver, as survivor only," there was no trust created with right of survivorship, since there was no evidence of a transfer or assignment of a present beneficial interest but only the expression of a desire that plaintiff own the account at the death of the depositor. Kyle v. Groce, 50 N.C. App. 204, 272 S.E.2d 609 (1980).

Change of Joint Account. — Where plaintiff and his former wife executed a joint account agreement with right of survivorship pursuant to this section, the joint account could be changed only by the signatures of all the parties to the joint account agreement or by one party's withdrawing the complete account and opening a new account. This section does not permit only one of the joint tenants of the account in question to change it from the original agreement executed by both parties to the detriment of the other. Benfield v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 44 N.C. App. 371, 261 S.E.2d 150 (1979).

Abstention by Bankruptcy Court. — In a bankruptcy action concerning the issue of rights of ownership in a joint bank account with rights of survivorship, the bankruptcy court refused to rule on the issue since it was clearly one of state law requiring state expertise and, thus, the issue was one of unsettled North Carolina law on which a court of that state should have made a ruling. Kimrey v. Dorsett, 10 Bankr. 466 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1981).

Liability for Wrongful Conversion. — This section and the signature card serve only to discharge the bank from liability to its depositors; they do not release one depositor to a joint account from liability to another for a withdrawal which constitutes wrongful conversion. Myers v. Myers, 68 N.C. App. 177, 314 S.E.2d 809 (1984).

Co-defendants of step-daughter who transferred funds that were located in her joint bank accounts which she shared with her step-father, the decedent, were not entitled to summary judgment pursuant to this section on the plaintiff's conversion claims where the defendant/step-daughter knew that the money was not hers and that "[s]aid transfers were made without [his]knowledge or consent." Hutchins v. Dowell, 138 N.C. App. 673, 531 S.E.2d 900 (2000).

Action against Spouse for Conversion. — When one spouse deposits funds into a joint account with the other, the other is designated the depositor's agent, with authority to withdraw the funds. The depositing spouse, as principal, thus may bring an action in conversion against the withdrawing spouse to recover funds which that spouse has converted as agent. Myers v. Myers, 68 N.C. App. 177, 314 S.E.2d 809 (1984).

§ 41-2.2. Joint ownership of corporate stock and investment securities.

(a) In addition to other forms of ownership, shares of corporate stock or investment securities may be owned by any parties as joint tenants with rights of survivorship, and not as tenants in common, in the manner provided in this section.

(b)(1) A joint tenancy in shares of corporate stock or investment securities as provided by this section shall exist when such shares or securities indicate that they are owned with the right of survivorship, or otherwise clearly indicate an intention that upon the death of either party the interest of the decedent shall pass to the surviving party.

(2) Such a joint tenancy may also exist when a broker or custodian holds the shares or securities for the joint tenants and by book entry or otherwise indicates (i) that the shares or securities are owned with the right of survivorship, or (ii) otherwise clearly indicates that upon the death of either party, the interest of the decedent shall pass to the surviving party. Money in the hands of such broker or custodian derived from the sale of, or held for the purpose of, such shares or securities shall be treated in the same manner as such shares or securities.

(c) Upon the death of a joint tenant his interest shall pass to the surviving joint tenant. The interest of the deceased joint tenant, even though it has passed to the surviving joint tenant, remains liable for the debts of the decedent in the same manner as the personal property included in his estate, and recovery thereof shall be made from the surviving joint tenant when the decedent's estate is insufficient to satisfy such debts.

(d) This section does not repeal or modify any provisions of the law relating to estate or inheritance taxes. (1967, c. 864, s. 1; 1969, c. 1115, s. 2; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 891, s. 2; 1998-69, s. 12; 1999-337, s. 10.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 891, which amended this section, provided in s. 3: "Nothing in this act shall be construed to affect the validity of instruments that provide for a right of survivorship executed prior to the effective date of this act." The act became effective January 1, 1991.

Session Laws 1999-337, s. 46, provides: "This act does not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by this act before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor does it affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal."

§ 41-2.5. Tenancy by the entirety in mobile homes.

(a) When a husband and wife become co-owners of a mobile home, in the absence of anything to the contrary appearing in the instrument of title, they become tenants by the entirety with all the incidents of an estate by the entirety in real property, including the right of survivorship in the case of death of either.

(b) For the purpose of this section it shall be immaterial whether the property at any particular time shall be classified for any purpose as either real or personal. The provisions of subsection (a) shall not limit or prohibit any other type of ownership otherwise authorized by law.

(c) For purposes of this section "mobile home" means a portable manufactured housing unit designed for transportation on its own chassis and placement on a temporary or semipermanent foundation having a measurement of over 32 feet in length and over eight feet in width. As used in this Article, "mobile home" also means a double-wide mobile home which is two or more portable manufactured housing units designed for transportation on their own chassis, which connect on site for placement on a temporary or semipermanent foundation having a measurement of over 32 feet in length and over eight feet in width.

(d) This section does not repeal or modify any provisions of the law relating to estate or inheritance taxes. (1981, c. 507, s. 1; 1999-337, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-337, s. 46, provides: "This act does not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by this act before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor does it affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal."

CASE NOTES

Security interest in a mobile home which was moveable, tangible property, was governed by Article 9 of the U.C.C. subsection (a) of this section, which provides that when a husband and wife become co-owners of a mobile home, in the absence of anything to the contrary appearing in the instrument of title, they become tenants by the entirety with all the incidents of an estate by the entirety in real property, does not dictate a contrary result. Joyce v. Cloverbrook Homes, Inc., 81 N.C. App. 270, 344 S.E.2d 58, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 42 (1986).

§ 41-4. Limitations on failure of issue.

Every contingent limitation in any deed or will, made to depend upon the dying of any person without heir or heirs of the body, or without issue or issues of the body, or without children, or offspring, or descendant, or other relative, shall be held and interpreted a limitation to take effect when such person dies not having such heir, or issue, or child, or offspring, or descendant, or other relative (as the case may be) living at the time of his death, or born to him within 10 lunar months thereafter, unless the intention of such limitation be otherwise, and expressly and plainly declared in the face of the deed or will creating it: Provided, that the rule of construction contained in this section shall not extend to any deed or will made and executed before the fifteenth of January, 1828. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases under this section were decided prior to the enactment of § 41-6.3, which abolished the rule in Shelley's case.

Purpose of Section. — This section was enacted for the primary purpose of making contingent limitations good by fixing a definite time when the estate of the first taker shall become absolute, and also to establish a rule of interpretation by which the estate of the first taker shall be affected with the contingency till the time of his death unless a contrary intent appears on the face of the instrument. Sain v. Baker, 128 N.C. 256, 38 S.E. 858 (1901); Harrell v. Hagan, 147 N.C. 111, 60 S.E. 909 (1908); Kirkman v. Smith, 174 N.C. 603, 94 S.E. 423 (1917); Bell v. Kessler, 175 N.C. 525, 95 S.E. 881 (1918).

The primary purpose of the enactment of this section was not to abrogate the rule which favors the early vesting of estates but it has been given that effect under certain circumstances in the North Carolina decisions. Cabarrus Bank & Trust Co. v. Finlayson, 286 F.2d 251 (4th Cir. 1961).

This section was enacted in 1827 to meet the rule then generally prevailing in this country that a gift over on "death without issue" in a deed or will meant an indefinite failure of issue and hence was void for remoteness. Cabarrus Bank & Trust Co. v. Finlayson, 286 F.2d 251 (4th Cir. 1961).

The purpose of this section is to save gifts over upon the contingency of someone's dying without issue if the contingency occurs after the death of the testator or after some estate or period subsequent to his death. White v. Alexander, 290 N.C. 75, 224 S.E.2d 617 (1976).

The purpose of this section is to sustain the contingent interest created by the testator and ensure that the interest will pass in possession when and if the contingency occurs, even if the occurrence is after the death of the testator. Therefore, when the contingency is fulfilled the limitation is deemed to take effect. Hollowell v. Hollowell, 107 N.C. App. 166, 420 S.E.2d 827, aff'd, 333 N.C. 706, 430 S.E.2d 235 (1993).

Section Is Obligatory. — The rule laid down by this section is obligatory on the courts, and must be observed in all cases except, as provided by the statute, when a contrary intent is "expressly and plainly declared in the face of the deed or will." Patterson v. McCormick, 177 N.C. 448, 99 S.E. 401 (1919).

Inapplicable to Wills Executed before January 15, 1828. — See Rice v. Satterwhite, 21 N.C. 69 (1835); Brown v. Brown, 25 N.C. 134 (1842); Gibson v. Gibson, 49 N.C. 425 (1857); Patterson v. McCormick, 177 N.C. 448, 99 S.E. 401 (1919).

Does Not Interfere with Rule in Shelley's Case. — The section does not interfere with the application of the principle laid down in Shelley's case in determining the nature and extent of the precedent estate. This is declared in Sanderlin v. Deford, 47 N.C. 74 (1854), in construing a will executed in 1838. King v. Utley, 85 N.C. 59 (1881).

Doctrine of Shifting Uses and Executory Devises Unaffected. — This section is a rule of construction upholding the second and contingent estate upon the death of the first taker without heirs, etc., and does not change the application of the doctrine of shifting uses and executory devises in determining the nature and extent of the precedent estate. Sessoms v. Sessoms, 144 N.C. 121, 56 S.E. 687 (1907).

Common-Law Rule Superseded. — Where there was a devise of lands for life, then to J and C equally, and in case "they or either of them die without issue," then to the heirs of certain others and the survivor of J and C equally, it was held that the common-law doctrine that a limitation contingent upon death and failure of issue is void for remoteness gives place to the new rule of construction enacted by this section, made applicable since January 15, 1828, without restriction as to immediate estates, and a contrary intent not being expressly and plainly declared in the face of the instrument, the death without issue referred to the death of J and C; and it appearing that J died without issue after the death of the first taker, and C survived, with issue, the absolute fee simple title to the lands was in C and the other ulterior remaindermen. Patterson v. McCormick, 177 N.C. 448, 99 S.E. 401 (1919).

Rule When Will Is Ambiguous. — Where there is ambiguity in a will as to whether the vesting of an estate devised for life with contingent limitation over shall be at the death of the testatrix or that of the first taker, under the principle that the law favors the early vesting of estates, the former will be taken; and where it clearly appears from the terms of the will and surrounding circumstances that that was the intent of the testatrix, it will not be affected by the section, by which a contingent limitation depending upon the dying of a person without heir, etc., is to vest at the death of such person. Westfeldt v. Reynolds, 191 N.C. 802, 133 S.E. 168 (1926); Moore v. Hunter, 46 N.C. App. 449, 265 S.E.2d 884 (1980).

Provisions of Section Prevail over Rule of Stare Decisis. — A vested interest in lands cannot be established under the doctrine of stare decisis in direct conflict with the expressions of a statutory change of the rule to the contrary, where the decisions relied upon are upon a construction of a written instrument made or executed before the statutory enactment and excepted by it from its provisions, and the subsequent decisions of affirmance of the old rule of construction are either conflicting among themselves or upon prior executed instruments excepted by the statute, or without express reference thereto; and this section, changing the rule of construction as to the vesting of an interest contingent upon a death with issue, cannot be affected by the rule laid down in Hilliard v. Kearney, 45 N.C. 221 (1853), and subsequent decisions on the subject. Patterson v. McCormick, 177 N.C. 448, 99 S.E. 401 (1919).

The law favors early indefeasible or absolute vesting of estates. As a corollary of this rule, such a construction is to be put upon conditional expressions, which render a testamentary gift defeasible, as to confine their operation to as early a period as the words of the will allow, so that it may become an absolute interest as soon as the language of the testator will permit. Elmore v. Austin, 232 N.C. 13, 59 S.E.2d 205 (1950); Moore v. Hunter, 46 N.C. App. 449, 265 S.E.2d 884 (1980).

Contingent Remaindermen Take Transmissible Estate. — Where there is a contingent executory devise to named persons in the event the first taker should die without issue, the persons who are to take the contingent limitation over are certain and only the event upon which they are to take is uncertain, and the contingent remaindermen take a transmissible estate which is not dependent upon their surviving the first taker, and upon the death of the contingent remaindermen prior to the death of the first taker without children then surviving, the estate goes to the heirs, next of kin, and successors of interest of the contingent remaindermen. Seawell v. Cheshire, 241 N.C. 629, 86 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

A contingent remainder dependent upon the death of a certain donee without issue means, under the terms of this section, without issue living at the time of death. Lee v. Oates, 171 N.C. 717, 88 S.E. 889 (1916).

The words that the gift over "shall be ... a limitation to take effect when such person dies not having such heir or issue, or child ... living at the time of his death, or born to him within ten lunar months thereafter" mean simply that the interest will be sustained and will pass in possession when and if the contingency, e.g., dying without issue, occurs, even if this event takes place after the death of the testator or grantor or after some intervening estate or period following his death. White v. Alexander, 290 N.C. 75, 224 S.E.2d 617 (1976).

The words, that the gift over "shall be ... a limitation to take effect when such person dies not having such heir or issue, or child ... living at the time of his death, or born to him within ten lunar months thereafter," do not mean that a determination of those persons who take the interest must necessarily wait until the event occurs. At what point in time those persons are determined remains a question of the testator's intent. White v. Alexander, 290 N.C. 75, 224 S.E.2d 617 (1976).

This section does not operate to postpone vesting of the reversion until the death of the life tenant without children because a reversion is not an estate created by limitation in a deed or will but is an estate created by operation of law. Atkins v. Burden, 31 N.C. App. 660, 230 S.E.2d 594 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 710, 232 S.E.2d 202 (1977).

Roll Must Be Called as of Death of First Taker. — To determine the effectiveness of a limitation over, the roll must be called as of the date of the death of the first taker. Turpin v. Jarrett, 226 N.C. 135, 37 S.E.2d 124 (1946).

Where a will set up a trust with provision that the income therefrom be divided among named beneficiaries for life and the corpus proportionately to their issue upon their deaths, with further provision that if a beneficiary should die without issue, his share of the corpus should become a part of, and be distributed in accordance with, the residuary clause, it was held that the person entitled to each share of the corpus was contingent upon whether each of the life beneficiaries died with or without issue surviving, and therefore the will set up a contingent and not a vested limitation, and the roll must be called as to each share of the corpus as of the death of its life beneficiary. Van Winkle v. Berger, 228 N.C. 473, 46 S.E.2d 305 (1948).

Where a contingent limitation over is made to depend upon the death of the first taker without children or issue, the limitation takes effect when the first taker dies without issue or children living at the time of his death. Williamson v. Cox, 218 N.C. 177, 10 S.E.2d 662 (1940).

Dying without heirs or issue, upon which a limitation over takes effect, is referable to the death of the first taker of the fee without issue living at the time of his death, and not to the death of any other person or to any intermediate period. House v. House, 231 N.C. 218, 56 S.E.2d 695 (1949). See Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Waddell, 234 N.C. 34, 65 S.E.2d 317 (1951); Seawell v. Cheshire, 241 N.C. 629, 86 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

Not as of Death of Testator. — A devise of land to L with limitation that if she "shall die leaving issue surviving her, then to such issue and their heirs forever," but if she "die without issue surviving her, then the property to return to my eldest daughter," the vesting of the estate in remainder depends upon the contingency of the death of L without leaving "issue" surviving her, and not upon the death of the testatrix. Rees v. Williams, 164 N.C. 128, 80 S.E. 247 (1913), petition for rehearing dismissed, 165 N.C. 201, 81 S.E. 286 (1914).

Unless a contrary intent appears from the will, the event by which the estate must be determined will be referred not to the death of the devisor, but the holder of the particular estate itself, and the determinable quality of such an estate, or interest, will continue to affect it till the event occurs by which same is to be determined, or the estate becomes absolute. Patterson v. McCormick, 177 N.C. 448, 99 S.E. 401 (1919). See Williams v. Lewis, 100 N.C. 142, 5 S.E. 435 (1888); Harrell v. Hagan, 147 N.C. 111, 60 S.E. 909, 125 Am. St. R. 539 (1908).

Rule in Hilliard v. Kearney Changed. — Under the rule at common law a limitation contingent upon death without issue was void for remoteness because it referred to an indefinite failure of issue; and in order to give effect to the testator's intention the courts began to look for some intermediate time, such as the termination of the life estate, or some other designated period, and held that the phrase "dying without issue" was to be referred to this intermediate period. Hilliard v. Kearney, 45 N.C. 221 (1853). This principle was entirely changed by the act of 1827, which is now this section. American Yarn & Processing Co. v. Dewstoe, 192 N.C. 121, 133 S.E. 407 (1926). See Richlands Supply Co. v. Banks, 205 N.C. 343, 171 S.E. 358 (1933); Brock v. Franck, 194 N.C. 346, 139 S.E. 696 (1927); Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 32 N.C. App. 338, 232 S.E.2d 223; 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977); Phillips v. Penland, 196 N.C. 425, 147 S.E. 731 (1929); Hussey v. Burgwyn, 51 N.C. 385 (1859); Robertson v. Pickerell, 77 N.C. 302 (1877); Simon v. Mock, 75 N.C. App. 564, 331 S.E.2d 300 (1985); Tew v. Hinson, 215 N.C. 456, 2 S.E.2d 376 (1939); Phillips v. Penland, 196 N.C. 425, 147 S.E. 731 (1929); Hammond v. Williams, 215 N.C. 657, 3 S.E.2d 437 (1939); McKinnie Bros. Co. v. Wester, 188 N.C. 514, 125 S.E. 1 (1924); Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Section Applies Notwithstanding Intervening Life Estate. — On devise of an estate to M for life, then to G and K, and if they should die without bodily heirs, then over, the creation and existence of the life estate, without more, does not, of itself, affect the statutory rule of construction as to estates in remainder, and the contingency affecting such estates will continue to affect the same till the death of the first takers in remainder. Kirkman v. Smith, 175 N.C. 579, 96 S.E. 51 (1918). The section has been construed by the Supreme Court at least 26 times, and in every case in which it has come before the court for construction it has uniformly been held that "dying without heirs or issue," upon which a limitation over takes effect, is referable to the death of the first taker of the fee, without issue living at the time of his death, and not to the death of any other person or to any intermediate period. Patterson v. McCormick, 177 N.C. 448, 99 S.E. 401 (1919). See Cowand v. Meyers, 99 N.C. 198, 6 S.E. 82 (1888); Dunning v. Burden, 114 N.C. 33, 18 S.E. 969 (1894); Kornegay v. Morris, 122 N.C. 199, 29 S.E. 875, reheard, 123 N.C. 128, 31 S.E. 375 (1898), petition to rehear dismissed, 124 N.C. 424, 32 S.E. 733 (1899); Harrell v. Hagan, 147 N.C. 111, 60 S.E. 909 (1908); Dawson v. Ennett, 151 N.C. 543, 66 S.E. 566 (1909); Perrett v. Bird, 152 N.C. 220, 67 S.E. 507 (1910); Elkins v. Seigler, 154 N.C. 374, 70 S.E. 636 (1911); Vinson v. Wise, 159 N.C. 653, 75 S.E. 732 (1912); Hobgood v. Hobgood, 169 N.C. 485, 86 S.E. 189 (1915); Whichard v. Craft, 175 N.C. 128, 95 S.E. 94 (1918).

First Taker Has Base and Qualified Fee. — O devised his lands to certain of his children, S, D, and J. By item 3 of the will a certain tract was devised to D and "the lawful heirs of his body lawfully begotten;" by item 9 it was provided that in case of death of either of the children, his portion should revert to the surviving one, with further contingent limitations. It was held that these items should be construed together, and that the estate devised to D was not in fee simple, but a base and qualified fee, defeasible on the death of D without leaving living lineal descendants. Perrett v. Bird, 152 N.C. 220, 67 S.E. 507 (1910).

First Taker Dying Without Issue Cannot Devise Property. — When a testator devises land to his son with a limitation over to his daughters, provided the son dies without heirs, the son, dying without children, cannot by will give his wife a life estate with the remainder to a third party. Sain v. Baker, 128 N.C. 256, 38 S.E. 858 (1901); Seawell v. Cheshire, 241 N.C. 629, 86 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

Instances of Fee Simple Defeasible. — A devise to testator's four sons, but if any one of them should "fail to become a father of a living child by lawful wedlock" his share should revert to the estate, was held to devise a fee simple to each son, defeasible upon his death without having a living child born in wedlock, but which becomes a fee simple absolute as to each son upon the birth of him of a living child in wedlock. Buffaloe v. Blalock, 232 N.C. 105, 59 S.E.2d 625 (1950).

By residuary clause, testator devised the remainder of his estate to his four sons, his sole heirs at law, each to take a defeasible fee to become absolute as to each upon the birth of a living child in wedlock. It was held that testator intended to dispose of all the residue of his estate in the residuary clause, including any reversion, and therefore if the fee of any one of the sons should be defeated, the reversion would go to the estate and pass under the residuary clause to the other sons or their heirs, who would not take as purchasers under the will but by descent from the devisees, and therefore deed executed by the four sons conveys the fee simple absolute, since the deed of each would estop him or his heirs from claiming any reversionary interest if such interest should thereafter arise. Buffaloe v. Blalock, 232 N.C. 105, 59 S.E.2d 625 (1950).

Testator devised a life estate to his wife with provisions that at her death his lands should be divided among his living children, with particular description as to the share each should take, with further provision that one daughter (who had living children at the time the will was executed) should take a life estate in her share with remainder to her children, and that his other named daughter and three named sons should have their share in fee simple forever "And if either one of my daughters shall die without issue, their share of the lands shall be equally divided among" the three named sons. It was held that the words "shall die without issue" refer to the death of the devisees of the fee and not to the death of the life tenant, and the daughters took a defeasible fee so that upon the death of one of them without issue her surviving, her share became vested in the three named sons. House v. House, 231 N.C. 218, 56 S.E.2d 695 (1949).

Where a will provided that some of the beneficiaries shall each receive a percentage of the income from the trust estate for 20 years, then, as to all of these, the trust shall terminate and each shall receive a like percentage of the corpus of the trust absolutely, but should any of them die before the termination of the trust, the interest and corpus shall go to their respective surviving issue, but if any die without issue surviving, "their respective shares shall be added to the residue of (the) estate," each of the beneficiaries, at the death of testator, had a vested interest, subject to the 20-year trust, in his or her respective share in fee, defeasible upon dying without issue before the termination of the trust. Little v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 252 N.C. 229, 113 S.E.2d 689 (1960).

Where testatrix bequeathed property to her daughter or to the children of testatrix's son if the daughter should die childless, the daughter took only a defeasible title which terminated upon her death without children. Cabarrus Bank & Trust Co. v. Finlayson, 286 F.2d 251 (4th Cir. 1961).

Instance of Fee Simple Determinable. — Testator devised lands to his daughter with further provision that the gift should become absolute if she improved the land by erecting a dwelling or if she should die leaving issue, but that if she should fail to improve the lot or should die without living issue, then the lands should be disposed of as directed in a subsequent item. It was held that the devise created a fee simple determinable, and under the rule of construction requiring that the fee simple absolute should vest as soon as the language of the testator permits, the ambiguous provisions for defeasance must be read so as to require both of the specified contingencies to occur before the fee should be defeated, and therefore upon the erection of a dwelling house upon the property of the daughter her fee became absolute. Elmore v. Austin, 232 N.C. 13, 59 S.E.2d 205 (1950).

Estate Created Direct to Second Taker. — When by the operation of § 41-1 a fee tail is converted into a fee simple, with a limitation of a fee upon the death of the first taker without heirs, a separate estate is created direct from the testator to the second taker upon the happening of the contingency, under the doctrine of shifting uses and by way of executory devise, and is not a qualification of the estate of the first taker, or too remote since the enactment of this section. Sessoms v. Sessoms, 144 N.C. 121, 56 S.E. 687 (1907).

A devise of lands to B in fee, "provided he has a child or children; but if he has no child, then to him for life," with limitation over to the testator's heirs at law, carries to the devisee a fee simple estate, defeasible upon his death without having had a child, the contingent event by which the estate is determined referring to the death of the devisee and holder of the prior estate unless a contrary intent clearly appears from the will itself; and upon the death of B and the nonhappening of the contingency named, the inheritance passes directly from the testator to the ultimate devisees. Burden v. Lipsitz, 166 N.C. 523, 82 S.E. 863 (1914).

An estate to M and her bodily heirs, without further limitation, is converted into a fee simple under § 41-1, but such an estate followed by the words "if no heirs, said lands shall go back to my estate," will go over to the heirs of the grantor at the death of M, upon the nonhappening of the event, as a shifting use under the statute of uses, § 41-7, whereunder a fee may be limited after a fee, by deed, and under the provisions of this section that every contingent limitation in a deed or will made to depend upon the dying of any person without heir or heirs of the body, or issue, shall be held to be a limitation to take effect when such person dies not having such heir, or issue, or child living at the time of his death. Willis v. Mutual Loan & Trust Co., 183 N.C. 267, 111 S.E. 163 (1922).

An estate to testator's daughter N for life, and to the lawful heirs of her body, creates an estate tail converted by our statute into a fee simple; and a further limitation "and if she should die leaving no heirs, then the lands to return to the G family," gives N a fee defeasible upon her death without issue, children, etc., under this section, and on her death, leaving children surviving, they take an unconditional fee, and can make an absolute conveyance thereof. Vinson v. Gardner, 185 N.C. 193, 116 S.E. 412 (1923).

Where a father devised the land in question to plaintiff "to be hers and to her heirs, if any, and if no heirs, to be equally divided with my other children," and at the time plaintiff executed deed to defendant, which was refused by him, plaintiff was married, but had been abandoned by her husband, and had no children, it was held that the plaintiff's deed did not convey the indefeasible fee to the land free and clear of the claims of all persons, whether the limitation over be regarded as a limitation over on failure of issue, or as not coming within the rule in Shelley's case. Hudson v. Hudson, 208 N.C. 338, 180 S.E. 597 (1935).

Applied in Conrad v. Goss, 227 N.C. 470, 42 S.E.2d 609 (1947); Lide v. Mears, 231 N.C. 111, 56 S.E.2d 404 (1949); Blanchard v. Ward, 244 N.C. 142, 92 S.E.2d 776 (1956).

§ 41-5. Unborn infant may take by deed or writing.

An infant unborn, but in esse, shall be deemed a person capable of taking by deed or other writing any estate whatever in the same manner as if he were born. (R.C., c. 43, s. 4; Code, s. 1328; Rev., s. 1582; C.S., s. 1738.)

CASE NOTES

Unborn Infant Takes from Time of Conception. — This section gives the same capacity to an unborn infant to take property as such infant has under the law governing its right to take by inheritance or devise, which is from the time of conception. Mackie v. Mackie, 230 N.C. 152, 52 S.E.2d 352 (1949).

When Child Presumed In Esse. — For the purpose of capacity to take under a deed, it will be presumed in the absence of contrary evidence that a child is in esse 280 days prior to its birth. Mackie v. Mackie, 230 N.C. 152, 52 S.E.2d 352 (1949).

Grant Directly to Children of Living Person. — A grant of land directly to the children of a living person conveys the title only to those who are alive at the time of the execution of the deed, including a child then en ventre sa mere. Powell v. Powell, 168 N.C. 561, 84 S.E. 860 (1915).

Under a deed to a woman "and her children" a child en ventre sa mere at the date of the conveyance will take, but children born more than a year thereafter will not. Heath v. Heath, 114 N.C. 547, 19 S.E. 155 (1894).

Child Takes as Tenant in Common. — By virtue of this section a child if en ventre sa mere at the time the deed is executed takes as tenant in common with the living children. Campbell v. Everhart, 139 N.C. 503, 52 S.E. 201 (1905).

Life Estate to Parent with Limitation Over. — Where there is a reservation of a life estate in the parent or another, with limitation over to the children, all the children who are alive at the termination of the first estate, whether born before or after the execution of the deed, take thereunder. Powell v. Powell, 168 N.C. 561, 84 S.E. 860 (1915).

Remainder after Freehold to Children Not In Esse. — Where there is a deed to lands to an unmarried grantee for life, with remainder to his children, not then in esse, the life estate of the first taker is sufficient to uphold the estate of his children, though not in esse at the time, by way of contingent remainder till they are born, and thereafter as owners of a vested remainder. Johnson Bros. v. Lee, 187 N.C. 753, 122 S.E. 839 (1924).

§ 41-6. "Heirs" construed to be "children" in certain limitations.

A limitation by deed, will, or other writing, to the heirs of a living person, shall be construed to be to the children of such person, unless a contrary intention appear by the deed or will. (R.C., c. 43, s. 5; Code, s. 1329; Rev., s. 1583; C.S., s. 1739.)

CASE NOTES

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — The cases under this section were decided prior to the enactment of § 41-6.3, which abolished the rule in Shelley's case.

Purpose of Section. — It seems that the main object of this section is to convert a contingent into a vested remainder under certain circumstances. It seems also to have been the purpose of the act to sustain a direct conveyance to the heirs of a living person. As there can be no heirs during the life of the ancestor, such a conveyance at common law would have been void unless there was something in the deed which indicated that by "the heirs" was meant the children of the person named. This section provides that in such a case the word "heirs" shall be construed to mean "children" and the limitation therefore would be good. By this construction of the section it does not affect the rule in Shelley's case. Starnes v. Hill, 112 N.C. 1, 16 S.E. 1011 (1893); Hartman v. Flynn, 189 N.C. 452, 127 S.E. 517 (1925).

"Limitation" Explained. — The word limitation has two different senses: the original sense, namely, that of a member of a sentence, expressing the limits or bounds to the quantity of an estate; and the derivative sense, namely, that of an entire sentence, creating and actually or constructively marking out the quantity of an estate. In this statute, the word is manifestly used in its derivative or secondary sense. Campbell v. Everhart, 139 N.C. 503, 52 S.E. 201 (1905). See Starnes v. Hill, 112 N.C. 1, 16 S.E. 1011 (1893).

The rule in Shelley's case is not abrogated by this section. Starnes v. Hill, 112 N.C. 1, 16 S.E. 1011 (1893).

Common-Law Rule Changed. — While as a general common-law rule, subject to some exceptions, a conveyance of an estate for life in lands to another, with remainder to the heirs of the grantor, could not divest the grantor of the fee, under the rule that nemo est haeres viventis, this does not prevail under the provisions of this section. Thompson v. Batts, 168 N.C. 333, 84 S.E. 347 (1915).

Section Applies Only When No Precedent Estate to Said Living Person. — The Code of 1883, s. 1329, now this section, providing that a limitation to the heirs of a living person shall be construed to be the children of such person, applies only when there is no precedent estate conveyed to said living person. Jones v. Ragsdale, 141 N.C. 200, 53 S.E. 842 (1906); Whitley v. Arenson, 219 N.C. 121, 12 S.E.2d 906 (1941).

If it were not true that this section applies only when there is no precedent estate conveyed to said living person, it would not only repeal the rule in Shelley's case, but would pervert every conveyance to "A and his heirs" into something entirely different from what those words have always been understood to mean. Marsh v. Griffin, 136 N.C. 333, 48 S.E. 735 (1904).

Conveyance to Living Person and Limitation to Heirs. — This section applies only when there is no precedent estate conveyed to said living person, nor is this section applicable where there is a conveyance to a living person, with a limitation to his heirs. Bank of Pilot Mt. v. Snow, 221 N.C. 14, 18 S.E.2d 711 (1942).

Conveyance Must Be to Heirs of Living Person. — This section applies only when the conveyance is to the heirs of a living person. Scott v. Jackson, 257 N.C. 658, 127 S.E.2d 234 (1962), commented on in 41 N.C.L. Rev. 317 (1963).

This section does not apply when the limitation is to a living person and his heirs. Whitley v. Arenson, 219 N.C. 121, 12 S.E.2d 906 (1941).

Applied in Sprinkle v. City of Reidsville, 235 N.C. 140, 69 S.E.2d 179 (1952); Clarke v. Clarke, 253 N.C. 156, 116 S.E.2d 449 (1960).

II. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Devise to "Heirs of His Children". — A testator devised a lot to trustees for 20 years from the date of his death and provided that at the end of said period the estate should "be equally divided between the heirs of my children, per stirpes." By virtue of this section, the word "heirs" as used in this item of the will, must be construed to mean the "children" of the son and daughter of the testator. Lide v. Mears, 231 N.C. 111, 56 S.E.2d 404 (1949).

By his will, the testator devised a lot to trustees for 20 years from the date of his death, and at the expiration of such term to the "heirs of his children, to be equally divided between them, per stirpes." The testator left surviving two children, a son and a daughter, both of whom had children living at the date of testator's death. The son and daughter are now living. Under this section the word "heirs," as used in the will, must be construed to mean "children." Lide v. Wells, 190 N.C. 37, 128 S.E. 477 (1925).

"Lawful Heirs of Her Body". — Where a testator, by separate devises, gave to each of his three daughters, who were his only heirs at law, a certain tract of his land, with provision in each item "to her and the lawful heirs of her body in fee simple forever, and if she should die without a lawful heir of her body, then the property to go to the other surviving heirs," by the expression, "lawful heirs of her body," in the connection used, the testator intended "child" of his daughters. Kornegay v. Cunningham, 174 N.C. 209, 93 S.E. 754 (1917).

Remainder to Living Heirs of Grantor. — Grantor conveyed the land in question to her son after the reservation of a life estate, and by habendum stipulated that the grantee should have an estate for the term of his natural life and at his death to his issue surviving, with further provision that should he die without issue "then to the living heirs of" the grantor. It was held that the other children of grantor have a remainder contingent upon the death of the grantee without issue, which interest cannot be defeated by a conveyance executed by the grantee with the joinder of the grantor. Ellis v. Barnes, 231 N.C. 543, 57 S.E.2d 772 (1950).

Section Validates Conveyance Directly to Heirs of Living Person. — By virtue of the section a deed conveying land directly to the "heirs" of a living person passes whatever title the grantor had to the children of such person. Campbell v. Everhart, 139 N.C. 503, 52 S.E. 201 (1905).

A deed to "the heirs" of A, he being still alive, although void at common law, is good under this section, and is construed to be a limitation to the children of A, and includes after-born children. Graves v. Barrett, 126 N.C. 267, 35 S.E. 539 (1900).

A devise to the "heirs" of a person will be construed to be to his "children" in the absence of a contrary intention expressed in the instrument. Moseley v. Knott, 212 N.C. 651, 194 S.E. 100 (1937).

An estate granted to D for life and then to the heirs of S, who was then alive, is operative as to the conveyance of the remainder under Revival, s. 1583, now this section, which construes the word "heirs" to mean children, in such instances. Condor v. Secrest, 149 N.C. 201, 62 S.E. 921 (1908).

Child Born during Life of Life Tenant. — A devise was of lands to the widow of the testator for life, then to the heirs of his son J, and it appeared that the son was living at the time and had living children at the death of the testator and one born thereafter, during the continuance of the life estate. It was held that the devise, being to the heirs of a living person, conveyed such interest to the children of the person designated, and being, in terms, to a class, it included all who were members of the class and filled the description at the time the particular estate terminated, and therefore the child born after the death of the testator, but during the lifetime of the tenant for life, took his share with the other children of J. Cooley v. Lee, 170 N.C. 18, 86 S.E. 720 (1915).

Limitation to Heirs of One with Conditional Limitation Over. — Where an estate was devised to A "and the heirs of his body, but if he die without heirs living at the time of his death, then to the heirs of B," "heirs" was construed to mean children. Smith v. Brisson, 90 N.C. 284 (1884).

Limitation over Provided First Taker Dies Without Heirs. — Where a testator devises land to his son with a limitation over to his daughters, provided the son dies without heirs, the word "heirs" is construed to mean "children." Sain v. Baker, 128 N.C. 256, 38 S.E. 858 (1901).

Where a devise of lands is limited over should the first taker die without heirs, evidencing that the intent of the testator made the contingency to depend upon the first taker's dying without issue, this section has no application. Massengill v. Abell, 192 N.C. 240, 134 S.E. 641 (1926).

Reverter to Heirs upon Nonhappening of Contingency. — A conveyance of land in contemplation of marriage, to M, "to descend to the heirs of the body of the said M in fee simple, the issue of such marriage, and on failure of issue to revert to the heirs of" the grantor, the "reverter" to his heirs under this section meant to his children after the death of his wife and the nonhappening of the stated contingency. Thompson v. Batts, 168 N.C. 333, 84 S.E. 347 (1915).

"Lawfully Begotten Heirs of the Body". — It was held that "the lawfully begotten heirs of her body" in a will referred most obviously to the children of the devisee for life, of whom there were only two, and was construed to mean "the children of such person" since contrary intention did not appear from the will. Lockman v. Hobbs, 98 N.C. 541, 4 S.E. 627 (1887).

When Children Illegitimate. — Where a bequest is immediate — not dependent upon a preceding limited estate — to the heirs of a living person, and the children of such person are illegitimate, they have the right to take under the section which declares that a limitation to the "heirs" shall be construed to be the "children" of such person, unless a contrary intention appears. Howell v. Tyler, 91 N.C. 207 (1884).

§ 41-6.1. Meaning of "next of kin."

A limitation by deed, will, or other writing, to the "next of kin" of any person shall be construed to be to those persons who would take under the law of intestate succession, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument. (1967, c. 948.)

CASE NOTES

At the time of death of testatrix who died May 22, 1962, "next of kin" and, by implication, "nearest relatives" still retained their very narrow technical common-law meaning. Rawls v. Rideout, 74 N.C. App. 368, 328 S.E.2d 783 (1985).

Construction with § 28A-4-1. — For purposes of § 28A-4-1, "next of kin" refers to the class of blood relatives of the decedent, thus the court erred in determining that the term was synonymous with "heirs," as used in this section. In re Estate of Bryant, 116 N.C. App. 329, 447 S.E.2d 468 (1994).

§ 41-6.2. Doctrine of worthier title abolished.

(a) The law of this State does not include: (i) the common-law rule of worthier title that a grantor or testator cannot convey or devise an interest to his own heirs, or (ii) a presumption or rule of interpretation that a grantor or testator does not intend, by a grant, devise or bequest to his own heirs or next of kin, to transfer an interest to them. The meaning of a grant, devise or bequest of a legal or equitable interest to a grantor's or testator's own heirs or next of kin, however designated, shall be determined by the general rules applicable to the interpretation of grants or wills.

(b) Subdivision (a)(i) of this section shall apply to all revocable trusts in existence as of February 26, 1979 and to all instruments, including revocable trusts, becoming effective after February 26, 1979, and subdivision (a)(ii) of this section shall apply to all instruments in existence as of February 26, 1979 and to all instruments becoming effective after February 26, 1979. If the application of this section to any instrument is held invalid, its application to other instruments to which it may validly be applied shall not be affected thereby. (1979, c. 88, s. 1.)

§ 41-6.3. Rule in Shelley's case abolished.

The rule of property known as the rule in Shelley's case is abolished. (1987, c. 706, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1987, c. 706, s. 2 made this section effective October 1, 1987, and applicable to transfers of property that take effect on or after that date.

§ 41-7. Possession transferred to use in certain conveyances.

By deed of bargain and sale, or by deeds of lease and release, or by covenant to stand seized to use, or deed operating by way of covenant to stand seized to use, or otherwise, by any manner or means whatsoever it be, the possession of the bargainor, releasor, or covenanter shall be deemed to be transferred to the bargainee, releasee, or person entitled to the use, for the estate or interest which such person shall have in the use, as perfectly as if the bargainee, releasee or person entitled to the use had been enfeoffed at common law with livery of seizin of the land intended to be conveyed by such deed or covenant. (27 Hen. VIII, c. 10; R.C., c. 43, s. 6; Code, s. 1330; Rev., s. 1584; C.S., s. 1740.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Trusts.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

History of Section. — It is conceded, on all hands, that the Statute of Uses, 27 Hen. VIII, c. 10, was in force and in use, in this State, up to the passage of the Revised Statutes (1836). Indeed, all of the conveyances of land adopted and used in this State are based on, and take effect by, the operation of that statute. In the Rev. Stat., c. 43, s. 4, and the Rev. Code, c. 43, s. 6, the words used in 27 Hen. VIII, c. 10, i.e., "When one person or persons stand, or be seized, or at any time thereafter shall happen to be seized of land, etc., to the use of any other person, persons, or body politic, by reason of any bargain, sale, feoffment, etc., or otherwise, by any manner or means whatsoever it be, the persons, etc., having the use, shall have the legal estate, etc.," are omitted and the provision is simply "By deed of bargain and sale, lease and release and covenant to stand seized, the possession shall be transferred to the bargainee, releasee, covenantee, etc." Substantially in this form the section is carried through all the various codes up to this one. The tendency, while no material change has been made, has been to make the section all inclusive by extending its application to every possible case involving the principle. Wilder v. Ireland, 53 N.C. 85 (1860).

Possession Transferred. — The statute of uses, substituted for 27 Hen. VIII, now this section, provides that the possession of the bargainor shall be transferred to the bargainee as perfectly as if the bargainee "had been enfeoffed at common law with the livery of seizin of the land intended to be conveyed, etc." Kirby v. Boyette, 118 N.C. 244, 24 S.E. 18 (1896).

Same Footing with Feoffments at Common Law. — Deeds of bargain and sale, and covenants to stand seized to uses, are put on the same footing with feoffments at common law, with respect to seizin, the declaration of uses thereon, and the consideration. Ivey v. Granberry, 66 N.C. 223 (1872); Love v. Harbin, 87 N.C. 249 (1882).

A use may be limited on a use. Rowland v. Rowland, 93 N.C. 214 (1885).

Necessity of Consideration. — A deed of bargain and sale is governed in this State by the same principles which were applied to it in England. It must have a pecuniary, or other valuable, consideration. Blount v. Blount, 4 N.C. 389 (1816); Brocket v. Foscue, 8 N.C. 64 (1820); Bruce v. Faucett, 49 N.C. 391 (1857).

If no consideration, either good or valuable, appears on the face of the instrument, or can be proved aliunde, the instrument will be void. Springs v. Hanks, 27 N.C. 30 (1844); Jackson v. Hampton, 30 N.C. 457 (1848); Bruce v. Faucett, 49 N.C. 391 (1857).

Resulting Use at Common Law. — At common law, where there was no consideration, the use would result to the feoffor, unless the declaration of the use or trust was contemporaneous with the transmutation of the legal title. Pittman v. Pittman, 107 N.C. 159, 12 S.E. 61 (1890).

Love and Affection as Consideration. — Though in form a deed is one of bargain and sale, yet if the only consideration is that of love and affection, it will operate as a covenant to stand seized. Slade v. Smith, 2 N.C. 326 (1796); Hatch v. Thompson, 14 N.C. 411 (1832); Cobb v. Hines, 44 N.C. 343 (1853); Bruce v. Faucett, 49 N.C. 391 (1857).

Where Legal and Equitable Title in Same Person. — Where one who has an equitable title acquires the legal title so that the same becomes united in the same person, the former is merged in the latter, and numerous decisions elsewhere are to the same effect. Peacock v. Stott, 101 N.C. 149, 7 S.E. 885 (1888), petition to rehear dismissed, 104 N.C. 154, 10 S.E. 456 (1889); Odom v. Morgan, 177 N.C. 367, 99 S.E. 195 (1919).

Exceptions to Rule That Beneficial Use Is Converted into Legal Ownership. — Where one person is seized to the use of another, the statute carries the legal estate to the person having the use. But three classes of cases are made exceptions to its operation, i.e.: (1) Where a use is limited on a use, (2) where a trustee is not seized but only possessed of a chattel interest, and (3) where the purposes of the trust make it necessary for the legal estate and the use to remain separate, as in the case of land conveyed for the separate use and maintenance of a married woman. Wilder v. Ireland, 53 N.C. 85 (1860); Kirby v. Boyette, 118 N.C. 244, 24 S.E. 18 (1896).

An estate of freehold to commence in futuro can be conveyed by a deed of bargain and sale operating under this section, or by executory devise; therefore, an estate to H for life and at her death to her children in fee, reserving a life estate to the grantor, is good. Savage v. Lee, 90 N.C. 320 (1884).

Covenant to Stand Seized on Death of Grantor. — Where there was a conveyance of real property upon the consideration of love and affection, reserving a life estate to the donor, it was held by the court that the conveyance was good; that it was a conveyance to stand seized to the use of the vendee on the death of the donor. Davenport v. Wynne, 28 N.C. 128 (1845). To the same effect in Hodges v. Spicer, 79 N.C. 223 (1878).

There cannot be the least doubt but that a covenant to stand seized to the use of another, after his own life, is good to pass the estate intended; for the law raises in the grantor an estate for life in the meantime to support the future estate. This has been decided in a vast number of instances. There is no point better established by the authorities. Sasser v. Blyth, 2 N.C. 340 (1796), overruling Ward v. Ward, 1 N.C. 59 (1793); Savage v. Lee, 90 N.C. 320 (1884).

Life Estate to Woman with Limitation Over to Children. — Where one devised, in 1828, to a trustee, to the use and benefit of a woman, for her life, remainder to the use of all her children, it was held that the legal estate in the remainder, by force of the statute, passed to the children she had at the time of the devise, subject to the participation of such as she might thereafter have. Wilder v. Ireland, 53 N.C. 85 (1860).

Future Contingent Use. — It is settled that a future contingent use to one unknown, or not in esse, cannot be raised by a deed of bargain and sale. It is also settled that a use cannot be raised by a general power of appointment given to the taker of the first estate in the use; and the case is much stronger where the power of appointment is given to a stranger. Smith v. Smith, 46 N.C. 135 (1853); Bruce v. Faucett, 49 N.C. 391 (1857).

Shifting or Springing Use. — Whenever the event happens when a shifting or springing use is to take effect, the statute of uses vests the legal seizin and ownership in the person entitled by virtue of the use. Lee v. Oates, 171 N.C. 717, 88 S.E. 889 (1916).

Fee Simple Limited after a Fee Simple. — A fee simple may be limited after a fee simple either by a deed or will by operation of the statute of uses; if by deed, it is a conditional limitation; if by will, it is an executory devise. Smith v. Brisson, 90 N.C. 284 (1884). See Rowland v. Rowland, 93 N.C. 214 (1885).

Applied in Craven County v. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 237 N.C. 502, 75 S.E.2d 620 (1953).

Cited in Honeycutt v. Citizens Nat'l Bank, 242 N.C. 734, 89 S.E.2d 598 (1955).

II. TRUSTS.

This section merges the legal and equitable titles in the beneficiary of a passive trust, but as to active trusts, the legal title vests and remains in the trustee for the purpose of the trust. Fisher v. Fisher, 218 N.C. 42, 9 S.E.2d 493 (1940). See Security Nat'l Bank v. Sternberger, 207 N.C. 811, 178 S.E. 595 (1935).

Where the use is executed by the statute, the trustee takes no estate or interest, both the legal and equitable estates vesting in the cestui que trust; but where the use is not executed, the legal title passes to the trustee. Lee v. Oates, 171 N.C. 717, 88 S.E. 889 (1916).

As to the wife's life estate, so long as her husband lived, it was necessary that the trust for her separate use and maintenance should continue, as it was then active; but when her husband died, and the disability of coverture was removed, and there was no longer any necessity for a trustee to protect her interest, and as the trust then became passive, the statute executed the use and united the legal and equitable estates in her. Lee v. Oates, 171 N.C. 717, 88 S.E. 889 (1916). See Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 154, 45 S.E. 541 (1903); Cameron v. Hicks, 141 N.C. 21, 53 S.E. 728 (1906); Springs v. Hopkins, 171 N.C. 486, 88 S.E. 774 (1916).

The Statute of Uses, 27 Henry VIII, preserved in this State by this section, merges the legal and equitable titles in the beneficiary of a passive trust. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Taylor, 255 N.C. 122, 120 S.E.2d 588 (1961).

Where conveyance of wife's property to trustee for her sole use and benefit during her life and, after her death, for the benefit of her husband was ineffective to create any estate or trust in favor of the husband because of noncompliance with a former version of § 52-12, a passive trust for the wife for her natural life was created and it was executed by the statute. Pilkington v. West, 246 N.C. 575, 99 S.E.2d 798 (1957).

In a passive trust the legal and equitable titles are merged in the beneficiary by virtue of the statute of uses. Poindexter v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 258 N.C. 371, 128 S.E.2d 867 (1963).

Rule Does Not Apply to Resulting Trust. — Where the plaintiff cited no North Carolina authority to support the argument that the statute of uses would be operative, and since the general rule is that the statute of uses applies only to express passive trusts and not to resulting or constructive trusts which arise by operation of law, under North Carolina law a resulting trust would not be executed. Greer v. United States, 448 F.2d 937 (4th Cir. 1971).

Or to Active Trusts. — While this section converts the beneficial use into the legal ownership and unites the legal and equitable estates in the beneficiary, this rule applies only to passive or simple trusts and not to active trusts. Patrick v. Beatty, 202 N.C. 454, 163 S.E. 572 (1932); Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638 (1936), citing Lee v. Oates, 171 N.C. 717, 88 S.E. 889 (1916).

This section merges the legal and equitable titles in the beneficiary of a passive trust, but the rule established by the statute does not apply to active trusts. Finch v. Honeycutt, 246 N.C. 91, 97 S.E.2d 478 (1957).

If the trust is active the legal and equitable titles do not merge. Poindexter v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 258 N.C. 371, 128 S.E.2d 867 (1963).

An active trust is one where there is a special duty to be performed by the trustee in respect to the estate, such as collecting the rents and profits, or selling the estate, or the execution of some particular purpose. Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638 (1936), citing Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 154, 45 S.E. 541 (1903); Finch v. Honeycutt, 246 N.C. 91, 97 S.E.2d 478 (1957).

Where there is any control to be exercised by the trustee or any duty to be performed by him in relation to the trust property or in regard to the beneficiaries, the trust is an active trust, and the legal and equitable titles do not merge in the beneficiaries. Finch v. Honeycutt, 246 N.C. 91, 97 S.E.2d 478 (1957).

Where a deed purports to convey land in trust, but prescribes no duties of any kind to be performed by the trustee, he is made a depositary only of title, and by operation of this section the legal, as well as the equitable, estate in the land passed to and became vested solely in the beneficiary. Pippin v. Barker, 233 N.C. 549, 64 S.E.2d 830 (1951).

Trust for "Sole and Separate Use" of Married Woman. — The words "for the sole and separate use," or equivalent language, qualifying the estate of a trustee for a married woman, must be construed as manifesting the intent on the part of the grantor to limit her right of alienation to the mode and manner expressly provided in the instrument by which the estate is created. Kirby v. Boyette, 118 N.C. 244, 24 S.E. 18 (1896).

Passive Trust for Husband and Wife. — Where a husband purchases realty and has the deed made to a trustee of a passive trust for the benefit of himself and wife, nothing else appearing, the instrument creates an estate by entirety. Akin v. First Nat'l Bank, 227 N.C. 453, 42 S.E.2d 518 (1947).

§ 41-8. Collateral warranties abolished; warranties by life tenants deemed covenants.

All collateral warranties are abolished; and all warranties made by any tenant for life of lands, tenements or hereditaments, the same descending or coming to any person in reversion or remainder, shall be void; and all such warranties, as aforesaid, shall be deemed covenants only, and bind the covenanter in like manner as other obligations. (4 Anne, c. 16, s. 21; 1852, c. 16; R.C., c. 43, s. 10; Code, s. 1334; Rev., s. 1587; C.S., s. 1741.)

CASE NOTES

For history and discussion of section, see Southerland v. Stout, 68 N.C. 446 (1873); Smith v. Ingram, 130 N.C. 100, 40 S.E. 984 (1902), petition to rehear dismissed, 132 N.C. 959, 44 S.E. 643 (1903).

Remainder Not Defeated by Warranty. — A warranty in a deed of a life tenant cannot defeat the remainder of the heirs by way of rebutter. Moore v. Parker, 34 N.C. 123 (1851); Starnes v. Hill, 112 N.C. 1, 16 S.E. 1011 (1893).

Where land is devised to a person for life, and at her death to her children, the children are not estopped by a deed with covenant of warranty executed by the life tenant. Hauser v. Craft, 134 N.C. 319, 46 S.E. 756 (1904).

Under this section a warranty in a deed of a life tenant does not bar or rebut the claim of heirs who can connect themselves with the outstanding remainder. This is so because such heirs take by purchase, i.e., as remaindermen, and not by descent, i.e., as heirs. Sprinkle v. City of Reidsville, 235 N.C. 140, 69 S.E.2d 179 (1952).

Warranty by Tenant by Curtesy. — Where a tenant by the curtesy sells land belonging to his wife, by deed of bargain and sale, in fee, with general warranty, the right of the heir of the wife to the land is not rebutted by the warranty. Johnson v. Bradley, 31 N.C. 362 (1849).

Warranty to Grantee but Not to Assigns. — Where a deed contains a warranty to the grantee, but not to his assigns, such assignees can neither maintain an action on such covenant nor defend under it against the grantor. Smith v. Ingram, 130 N.C. 100, 40 S.E. 984 (1902), petition to rehear dismissed, 132 N.C. 959, 44 S.E. 643 (1903).

Heir Rebutted by Ancestor's Warranty. — Where in an action to recover lands the plaintiff claims by paper title to his ancestor, without claim of possession, and it appears that his ancestor has conveyed the land to a stranger with full covenants and warranty of title prior to his having acquired it, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to establish his title, and he cannot recover, for his ancestor's deed to the stranger, with covenant and warranty, destroys his right of action by rebutter, and passes the title to the grantee by estoppel. Olds v. Richmond Cedar Works, 173 N.C. 161, 91 S.E. 846 (1917).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 180, s. 2, provided that this section was repealed, except as to wills or deeds executed prior to October 1, 1979.

§ 41-10. Titles quieted.

An action may be brought by any person against another who claims an estate or interest in real property adverse to him for the purpose of determining such adverse claims; and by any man or woman against his or her wife or husband or alleged wife or husband who have not lived together as man and wife within the two years preceding, and who at the death of such plaintiff might have or claim to have an interest in his or her estate, and a decree for the plaintiff shall debar all claims of the defendant in the property of the plaintiff then owned or afterwards acquired: Provided, that no such relief shall be granted against such husband or wife or alleged wife or husband, except in case the summons in said action is personally served on such defendant.

If the defendant in such action disclaim in his answer any interest or estate in the property, or suffer judgment to be taken against him without answer, the plaintiff cannot recover costs. In any case in which judgment has been or shall be docketed, whether such judgment is in favor of or against the person bringing such action, or is claimed by him, or affects real estate claimed by him, or whether such judgment is in favor of or against the person against whom such action may be brought, or is claimed by him, or affects real estate claimed by him, the lien of said judgment shall be such claim of an estate or interest in real estate as is contemplated by this section. I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

As to the history and purpose of this section, see McLean v. Shaw, 125 N.C. 491, 34 S.E. 634 (1899); Rumbo v. Gay Mfg. Co., 129 N.C. 9, 39 S.E. 581 (1901); Campbell v. Cronly, 150 N.C. 457, 64 S.E. 213 (1909); Plotkin v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 188 N.C. 711, 125 S.E. 541 (1924).

This section is highly remedial. Plotkin v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 188 N.C. 711, 125 S.E. 541 (1924).

This is a remedial statute which has been liberally construed; it is more comprehensive than the old suit in equity to remove a cloud from title. Jacobi Hdwe. Co. v. Jones Cotton Co., 188 N.C. 442, 124 S.E. 756 (1924); Maynard v. Holder, 216 N.C. 524, 5 S.E.2d 535 (1939).

This statute is remedial in nature, designed to provide a means for determining all adverse claims to land, including those formerly encompassed within the equitable proceedings to remove clouds on title. Boyd v. Watts, 73 N.C. App. 566, 327 S.E.2d 46 (1985), rev'd in part, 316 N.C. 622, 342 S.E.2d 840 (1986).

This section is liberally construed. York v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968).

Liberally Construed to Execute Legislative Intent. — This section and the amendatory acts thereto, being remedial in nature, should have a liberal construction in order to execute fully the legislative intention and will. Stocks v. Stocks, 179 N.C. 285, 102 S.E. 306 (1920).

And to advance the remedy and permit the courts to bring the parties to an issue. Asheville Land Co. v. Lange, 150 N.C. 26, 63 S.E. 164 (1908); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Miller, 243 N.C. 1, 89 S.E.2d 765 (1955); Heath v. Turner, 309 N.C. 483, 308 S.E.2d 244 (1983).

The beneficial purpose of this section is to free the land of the cloud resting upon it and make its title clear and indisputable, so that it may enter the channels of commerce and trade unfettered and without the handicap of suspicion. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971); Heath v. Turner, 309 N.C. 483, 308 S.E.2d 244 (1983).

Requirements for Prima Facie Case. — In order to establish a prima facie case for removing a cloud on title, a plaintiff must meet two requirements: (1) plaintiff must own the land in controversy, or have some estate or interest in it; and (2) defendant must assert some claim in the land which is adverse to plaintiff's title, estate or interest. Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Wetherington, 127 N.C. App. 457, 490 S.E.2d 593 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 574, 498 S.E.2d 380 (1998).

The section deprives the defendant of no right, but affords him every opportunity of defending the validity of his title; but in the interest of peace and the settlement of controversies, it allows his adversary to put to the test of early judicial investigation, and does not compel plaintiff to wait on the defendant's pleasure as to the time when the inquiry shall be made, and thus give defendant an unfair advantage over him. Carolina-Tennessee Power Co. v. Hiawassee River Power Co., 175 N.C. 668, 96 S.E. 99 (1918), appeal dismissed, 252 U.S. 341, 40 S. Ct. 330, 64 L. Ed. 601 (1920).

The fact that the plaintiff brings his action under this section deprives the defendant of no right. He has the right to defend the validity of his alleged title on every relevant ground available in any type of action involving recovery or possession of real property. Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953).

The distinction between a suit to remove a cloud upon title and an action to quiet title under this section is clear. In the old equity action, to remove a cloud upon title to real property, the proceeding was an equitable one and was intended to remove a particular instrument or documentary evidence of title or encumbrance against the title, which was hanging over or threatening a plaintiff's rights therein. In a suit to quiet title to real property under this section, the proceeding is designed and intended to provide a means for determining all adverse claims, equitable or otherwise. It is not limited to a particular instrument, bit of evidence, or encumbrance but is aimed at silencing all adverse claims, documentary or otherwise. Any action that could have been brought under the old equitable proceeding to remove a cloud upon title may now be brought under the provisions of this section. York v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968).

The General Assembly did not include personal property under the provisions of this section. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

A bill to quiet title or to remove a cloud on title to personal property may be maintained in equity, in the absence of statutory authorization, where, by reason of exceptional circumstances, there is no adequate remedy at law. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

Even though there is no statute in North Carolina authorizing suits to quiet title to personalty, the Supreme Court adheres to the general rule that such suits may be maintained in equity where, due to exceptional circumstances, there is no adequate remedy at law. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

Since North Carolina has no statute regarding suits in equity to remove cloud or quiet title to personalty, the Supreme Court applies to such suits the same principles which obtained prior to enactment of this section when title to land was involved. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

In order to remove a cloud from a title, it is not necessary to allege and prove that the plaintiff had an estate in or title to the lands in controversy. It is only required that the plaintiff or plaintiffs have such an interest in the lands as to make the claim of the defendants adverse to him or them. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

Burden on Plaintiffs. — In an action to quiet title under this section plaintiffs bear the burden of proving valid title in themselves which may be accomplished by either (1) reliance on the Real Property Marketable Title Act, or (2) utilization of traditional methods of proving title. Chappell v. Donnelly, 113 N.C. App. 626, 439 S.E.2d 802 (1994).

Title Not Necessarily Put in Issue. — By suit to remove a cloud from title, a plaintiff does not necessarily put his title in issue. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

For requirements in equity suits to remove cloud and quiet title to realty prior to enactment of this section, see Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

If title becomes involved in a processioning proceeding under §§ 38-1 to 38-4, the proceeding becomes in effect an action to quiet title under this section. Roberts v. Sawyer, 229 N.C. 279, 49 S.E.2d 468 (1948); Bumgarner v. Corpening, 246 N.C. 40, 97 S.E.2d 427 (1957).

Where the only issue to be tried is the location of a dividing line, it is a processioning proceeding under Chapter 38. However, where title to the land is put in issue the clerk has no authority to pass on any question involved. He must transfer the proceeding to the regular session of superior court where it becomes in effect an action to quiet title pursuant to this section. Cobb v. Spurlin, 73 N.C. App. 560, 327 S.E.2d 244 (1985).

A declaratory action is an appropriate remedy to perform the function of the customary action to quiet title. York v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968).

Restraining Sale Under Execution. — Under this section the sheriff's sale of land by execution under a judgment may now be restrained by suit in equity when it will cast an additional cloud upon the title of the owner of the lands. Mizell v. Bazemore, 194 N.C. 324, 139 S.E. 453 (1927).

No statute of limitations runs against plaintiff bringing action for removal of a cloud upon title. Such an action is a continuing right, which exists as long as there is occasion for its exercise. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

But Theory of Relief May Determine Applicability of Limitations. — There is no express statute of limitations governing actions to quiet title under this section. It thus is necessary to refer to plaintiffs' underlying theory of relief to determine which statute, if any, applies. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

When Quiet Title Actions Are Treated as Ejectment Actions. — Actions to remove a cloud upon title are in essence ejectment actions and are properly reviewed as such where defendants are in actual possession and plaintiffs seek to recover possession. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

Action Held Not One for Ejectment. — Where plaintiffs made no specific allegation that defendants were in actual possession at the time of the filing of their action, and did not seek specifically to recover possession in their demand for relief, but merely prayed for rents and profits and removal of certain deeds as a cloud upon their title, plaintiffs' action was not in essence one for ejectment controlled by §§ 1-38 and 1-40; rather, plaintiffs' action was one to remove a cloud upon title which was not barred by any statute of limitations. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

II. NATURE AND SCOPE OF REMEDY.

A. Purpose.

This section was designed and intended to afford a remedy wherever one owns or has an estate or interest in real property, whether he is in or out of possession, and another wrongfully sets up a claim to an estate or interest therein which purports to affect adversely the estate or interest of the true owner and which is reasonably calculated to burden and embarrass such owner in the full and proper enjoyment of his proprietary rights, including the right to dispose of the same at its fair market value. And it should and does extend to such adverse and wrongful claims, whether in writing or parol, whenever a claim by parol, if established, could create an interest or estate in the property, as in case of a parol trust or a lease not required to be in writing. And suit should be allowed, too, when existent records or written instruments reasonably present such a claim, the statute preventing all hardship in such cases by its provision that if the holder does not insist on the same in his answer or does not answer at all, the plaintiff shall pay the costs. Satterwhite v. Gallagher, 173 N.C. 525, 92 S.E. 369 (1917); Carolina-Tennessee Power Co. v. Hiawassee River Power Co., 175 N.C. 668, 96 S.E. 99 (1918), appeal dismissed, 252 U.S. 341, 40 S. Ct. 330, 64 L. Ed. 601 (1920).

This section was designed to avoid some of the limitations imposed upon the remedies formerly embraced by a bill of peace or bill quia timet, and to establish an easy method of quieting titles of land against adverse claims.

Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

To Leave Lands Unfettered. — The beneficial purpose of this section is to free the land of the cloud resting upon it and make its title clear and indisputable, so that it may enter the channels of commerce and trade unfettered and without the handicap of suspicion, instead of remaining idle and unremunerative. Christman v. Hilliard, 167 N.C. 4, 82 S.E. 949 (1914); Carolina-Tennessee Power Co. v. Hiawassee River Power Co., 175 N.C. 668, 96 S.E. 99 (1918), appeal dismissed, 252 U.S. 341, 40 S. Ct. 330, 64 L. Ed. 601 (1920); Plotkin v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 188 N.C. 711, 125 S.E. 541 (1924).

To Broaden the Equitable Remedy. — This section, giving the owner of lands the right to remove a cloud upon his title, is much broader in its scope and purpose than the equitable remedy theretofore allowed and administered in this State, and includes not only the right to remove an apparent lien under a docketed judgment, but also the potential claim of a wife to her inchoate right of dower in her husband's lands. Southern State Bank v. Sumner, 187 N.C. 762, 122 S.E. 848 (1924).

The statute has been said to be an extension of the remedy in equity theretofore existing for the removal of clouds on title, and is intended to afford an easy and expeditious mode of determining all conflicting claims to land, whether derived from a common source or from different and independent sources. It is highly remedial and beneficial in its nature, and should therefore be construed liberally. It is also a statute of repose, and for that reason is entitled to favorable consideration. Christman v. Hilliard, 167 N.C. 4, 82 S.E. 949 (1914); Carolina-Tennessee Power Co. v. Hiawassee River Power Co., 175 N.C. 668, 96 S.E. 99 (1918), appeal dismissed, 252 U.S. 341, 40 S. Ct. 330, 64 L. Ed. 601 (1920); East Carolina Lumber Co. v. Pamlico County, 242 N.C. 728, 89 S.E.2d 381 (1955).

The General Assembly of 1893 enacted the statute now codified as this section to avoid some of the limitations imposed upon the remedies formerly sought by a bill of peace or a bill quia timet, and to establish an easy method of quieting titles to land against adverse claims. Wells v. Clayton, 236 N.C. 102, 72 S.E.2d 16 (1952).

B. Interest Necessary to Bring Action.

Suit may be instituted by any person against any other person claiming an interest adverse to his title. Rutherford v. Ray, 147 N.C. 253, 61 S.E. 57 (1908).

An action must be based upon plaintiffs' ownership of some title, estate, or interest in real property, and defendants' assertion of some claim adverse to plaintiffs' title, estate, or interest, which adverse claim must be presently determinable. Vandiford v. Vandiford, 241 N.C. 42, 84 S.E.2d 278 (1954).

Plaintiff Need Not Prove Estate in or Title to Land. — The contention that a plaintiff in an action brought under this section must allege and prove that at the commencement of the action and at its trial he had an estate in or title to the land, cannot be sustained. It is only required that he have such an interest in the land that the claim of the defendant is adverse to him. Plotkin v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 188 N.C. 711, 125 S.E. 541 (1924). But see Johnston v. Kramer Bros. & Co., 203 F. 733 (D.C.N.C. 1913); Etheridge v. Wescott, 244 N.C. 637, 94 S.E.2d 846 (1956).

Failure to Prove Prescriptive Easement. — There was inadequate evidence to take the issue of a prescriptive easement to the jury because the defendants had the burden of proving the elements necessary for a prescriptive easement and failed to meet that burden. Nichols v. Wilson, 16 N.C. App. 286, 448 S.E.2d 119, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 519, 452 S.E.2d 814 (1994).

The statutory action to quiet title to realty consists of two essential elements. The first is that the plaintiff must own the land in controversy, or have some estate or interest in it; and the second is that the defendant must assert some claim to such land adverse to the plaintiff's title, estate or interest. Wells v. Clayton, 236 N.C. 102, 72 S.E.2d 16 (1952).

Remedy Given Whether in or out of Possession. — This section affords the remedy whenever one owns or has an estate or interest in real property, whether he is in or out of possession, and another sets up a claim to an estate or interest therein which purports to affect adversely the estate or interest of the true owner and which is reasonably calculated to burden and embarrass such owner in the full enjoyment or disposition of his property at a fair market value; the statute affords a remedy by disclaimer when the party does not in fact claim the "adverse interest" which is alleged to be a cloud on the title of the true owner. Satterwhite v. Gallagher, 173 N.C. 525, 92 S.E. 369 (1917); Vick v. Winslow, 209 N.C. 540, 183 S.E. 750 (1935). See Daniels v. Baxter, 120 N.C. 14, 26 S.E. 635 (1897).

The authorities to the effect that only one in possession may maintain an action to remove a cloud from title, were decisions rendered prior to the act of 1893, c. 6, Revisal, s. 1589. Since that statute, it is held that the action is maintainable, though plaintiff is not in the present possession or control of the property. Daniels v. Baxter, 120 N.C. 14, 26 S.E. 635 (1897); Campbell v. Cronly, 150 N.C. 457, 64 S.E. 213 (1909); Speas v. Woodhouse, 162 N.C. 66, 77 S.E. 1000 (1913).

Under this section, the plaintiff is not required to show that he is either in or out of possession. Nor is the plaintiff required to show that the defendant is an occupant or any more than a claimant of the land in controversy. Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953).

Action Is Maintainable Though Plaintiff Might Have Maintained Ejectment. — This section is broad enough to cover an action to quiet the title to real property though the person sued may be wrongfully in possession and the plaintiff might have maintained ejectment. The complaint would not be demurrable merely for the reason that the allegations might be sufficient to support a possessory action. Pressly v. Walker, 238 N.C. 732, 78 S.E.2d 920 (1953).

Adverse Claimant to Execution Debtor. — If real estate levied upon should be claimed by one other than the execution debtor, then nothing can more quickly bring up for trial the plaintiff's prayer to have the cloud removed from his title than to allow the execution sale to take place. If the purchaser should delay to commence suit for recovery of possession, then the claimant can commence proceedings under the section. McLean v. Shaw, 125 N.C. 491, 34 S.E. 634 (1899).

Judgment Lien. — In McLean v. Shaw, 125 N.C. 491, 34 S.E. 634 (1899), it was held that it was not in contemplation of the act that a judgment lien should be included in the terms "estate" and "interest," as they are used in this section. This case was decided at September term, 1899. The legislature, at its session in 1903, by chapter 763, amended Laws 1893, c. 6, s. 1, by adding thereto the last sentence of the present section. "Estate" and "interest" now expressly embrace a judgment lien. Crockett v. Bray, 151 N.C. 615, 66 S.E. 666 (1909).

Correction of Life Estate into Fee Simple. — Defendants have a right, in order to avoid multiplicity of suits, to ask for the correction of a life estate deed, under which they claim, into a fee simple deed, by way of counterclaim, not merely as a matter of defense, but to remove a cloud upon the title, under this section. McLamb v. McPhail, 126 N.C. 218, 35 S.E. 426 (1900).

When Land Conveyed Pendente Lite. — Where the owner of lands in possession thereof or entitled thereto brings his action claiming as such owner to remove as a cloud upon his title the lien of one claiming under his mortgage, and pendente lite conveys the land to another with full warranty deed, he may continue to prosecute his suit against the mortgagee as to the title, being a real party in interest under § 1-57, without claim of the right to the possession, under the provisions of this section; and where issue has been joined, he may, if successful, recover his costs. Plotkin v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 188 N.C. 711, 125 S.E. 541 (1924).

Nonpayment of Taxes. — In a suit to remove a cloud on the title to lands, the suggestion that plaintiff's ancestors have not, for many years, paid the tax on the land, is immaterial, because to do so does not, under any statute in force in this State, work a forfeiture of title, otherwise than by a sale conducted in conformity with the law. Johnston v. Kramer Bros. & Co., 203 F. 733 (D.C.N.C. 1913).

C. What Constitutes Cloud.

Includes Any Adverse Interest. — The language of this section is broad and liberal, showing the purpose of the General Assembly to permit any person to bring an action against another who claims an interest or estate in real property adverse to him. Plotkin v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 188 N.C. 711, 125 S.E. 541 (1924).

Action Lies to Prevent Creation of Cloud. — An action will lie, not only to remove an existing cloud on title, but also to prevent one from being created, and where the object is merely preventive an injunction is the proper remedy to restrain the doing of the wrongful act. Carolina-Tennessee Power Co. v. Hiawassee River Power Co., 175 N.C. 668, 96 S.E. 99 (1918), appeal dismissed, 252 U.S. 341, 40 S. Ct. 330, 64 L. Ed. 601 (1920).

Defendant Need Only Be Claimant. — Under Laws 1893, c. 6, now this section, a plaintiff may maintain an action to remove a cloud from his title without showing that the defendant is an occupant or any more than a claimant of the land in controversy. Duncan v. Hall, 117 N.C. 443, 23 S.E. 362 (1895).

Adverse Claim Must Be Presently Determinable. — This section applies only to the extent the alleged adverse claims are presently determinable. Vandiford v. Vandiford, 241 N.C. 42, 84 S.E.2d 278 (1954).

Apparent Invalidity of Defendant's Title. — The plaintiff is not required to have possession as a condition precedent to his right of action, nor will the apparent invalidity of defendant's title deprive him of the statutory remedy. Daniels v. Baxter, 120 N.C. 14, 26 S.E. 635 (1897); Rumbo v. Gay Mfg. Co., 129 N.C. 9, 39 S.E. 581 (1901); Beck v. Meroney, 135 N.C. 532, 47 S.E. 613 (1904); Campbell v. Cronly, 150 N.C. 457, 64 S.E. 213 (1909); Carolina-Tennessee Power Co. v. Hiawassee River Power Co., 175 N.C. 668, 96 S.E. 99 (1918), appeal dismissed, 252 U.S. 341, 40 S. Ct. 330, 64 L. Ed. 601 (1920).

Obscure Contingent Limitations. — This section enlarges the power of the courts to entertain suits to quiet titles, where the conditions were formerly such that a possessory action could not be brought; and the section is liberally construed, so that the court can acquire jurisdiction to clear up obscure contingent limitations which are imposed upon titles. Campbell v. Cronly, 150 N.C. 457, 64 S.E. 213 (1909).

Will of Living Person. — A paper-writing, in form a will, executed by a person now living, is without legal significance either as a transfer of title or as a cloud thereon, until death of the testator and probate of the instrument. Vandiford v. Vandiford, 241 N.C. 42, 84 S.E.2d 278 (1954).

Invalid Judgment as Cloud. — A judgment, if invalid, would be such a cloud on the title, or such a direct menace to it, as to fall within the provisions of this section. Stocks v. Stocks, 179 N.C. 285, 102 S.E. 306 (1920).

An action to quiet title or to remove a cloud from title is equitable in its nature, and may now be maintained to remove from the title a cloud created by the apparent lien of an invalid judgment docketed in the county where the land lies. Holden v. Totten, 224 N.C. 547, 31 S.E.2d 635 (1944).

In an action to remove a cloud from plaintiff's title, caused by a docket judgment alleged to be invalid, a demurrer to the complaint, as not stating a cause of action, was properly overruled, this section being sufficiently broad to entitle plaintiff to maintain an independent action. Exum v. Carolina R.R., 222 N.C. 222, 22 S.E.2d 424 (1942).

Judgment Obtained by Fraud. — A complaint alleged, in effect, that the plaintiff had her dower laid off in the lands of her deceased husband, in which the defendant, her son, was properly represented, and thereafter the son, without the service of summons upon her, instituted an independent proceeding to annul the judgment, and falsely represented to her that the action had been withdrawn, and that she should not further consider it, and in consequence, and through his false representation, obtained a judgment in his favor, destroying her dower right. The complaint was held sufficient for the plaintiff to maintain an independent action to set aside the former judgment upon the issue of fraud, and also under this section to remove the former judgment as a cloud upon her title. Stocks v. Stocks, 179 N.C. 285, 102 S.E. 306 (1920).

Tax Deed. — Where a judgment entered in favor of the county in an action against the owner of land for taxes has been set aside upon motion after notice to the parties, the owner, in an action to remove cloud upon title, is entitled to judgment cancelling the tax deed. Galer v. Auburn-Asheville Co., 204 N.C. 683, 169 S.E. 642 (1933).

Foreclosure of Mortgage Given by Tenant in Common Prior to Partition. — The purchaser of land from one tenant in common, after the land had been allotted to the tenant in a special proceeding for partition, may maintain a suit to restrain foreclosure of a mortgage executed by the other tenant in common prior to partition, when the mortgagee advertises and seeks to sell a one-half interest in the entire tract, since such foreclosure would constitute a cloud on the purchaser's title. Rostan v. Huggins, 216 N.C. 386, 5 S.E.2d 162, 126 A.L.R. 410 (1939).

Contract Without Married Woman's Privy Examination. — A contract to convey the lands of a married woman, signed by her and her husband, but without her privy examination, when recorded is a cloud upon her title to the lands and subject to her suit to remove the same, within the intent and meaning of this section, though she is and remains in possession of the land. Satterwhite v. Gallagher, 173 N.C. 525, 92 S.E. 369 (1917).

Usurious charge of interest on notes did not affect the validity of the mortgage or deed of trust securing them under § 24-2, and a suit brought to remove a cloud upon title to the lands under this section to the extent of the usurious charge of interest on the notes could not be maintained. Briggs v. Industrial Bank, 197 N.C. 120, 147 S.E. 815 (1929).

Proof Required of Plaintiff. — In a suit to remove a cloud upon the plaintiff's title under this section, the defendant claimed under a sale by foreclosure of a mortgage which the plaintiff attacked for fraud. It was held that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff to show the fraud by the preponderance of the evidence, and not by clear, strong and cogent proof as required in the information or correction of a conveyance of land. Ricks v. Brooks, 179 N.C. 204, 102 S.E. 207 (1920).

III. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

A. In General.

When Suit Treated as Action of Ejectment. — A suit instituted to determine conflicting claims to real property, under Laws 1893, c. 6, now this section, may be properly treated as an action of ejectment, when the complaint alleges ownership in the plaintiff and possession in the defendant. Hines v. Moye, 125 N.C. 8, 34 S.E. 103 (1899); Baldwin v. Hinton, 243 N.C. 113, 90 S.E.2d 316 (1955); Hayes v. Ricard, 244 N.C. 313, 93 S.E.2d 540 (1956).

Plaintiff Has Burden of Establishing Title. — In an action to quiet title, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to establish his title. He may do so by traditional methods or by reliance on the Real Property Marketable Title Act, Chapter 47B. Heath v. Turner, 309 N.C. 483, 308 S.E.2d 244 (1983).

The plaintiff is not bound to show as an independent proposition the invalidity and wrongfulness of the adverse claim. These matters are inseparably interwoven in the two essential elements of the action. The claim of the defendant is necessarily invalid and wrongful if it is adverse to the title, estate or interest of the true owner. Wells v. Clayton, 236 N.C. 102, 72 S.E.2d 16 (1952).

The plaintiff is not required to allege or show the specific circumstances giving rise to the defendant's adverse claim, unless it is essential for the plaintiff to overcome such claim in order to establish his own title, estate or interest. Hence, it is ordinarily sufficient for the plaintiff to allege and show in general terms that the defendant is asserting some claim adverse to him. Wells v. Clayton, 236 N.C. 102, 72 S.E.2d 16 (1952).

When Court Will Hear and Determine Without Action. — The courts will hear and determine a controversy submitted without action in suits brought by and against the parties in interest, wherein a vendee has refused to accept the title on the ground of its being doubtful, either in the exercise of their equitable jurisdiction, treating the controversy as a bill for specific performance, or under the provisions of this section, for the purpose of removing clouds upon obscure titles. Campbell v. Cronly, 150 N.C. 457, 64 S.E. 213 (1909).

When Adverse Claim Invalid. — Under Laws 1893, c. 6, now this section, where, in an action to determine conflicting claims to real property, plaintiff being in possession, the court finds the claim of defendant to be invalid, the action should not be dismissed, but the court should enter its decree removing the cloud upon the title. Rumbo v. Gay Mfg. Co., 129 N.C. 9, 39 S.E. 581 (1901).

Complaint Upheld. — Plaintiffs' complaint, which alleged that noncompliance with legal formalities voided two deeds, but did not allege fraud, despite failure to state specific facts underlying these allegations, nevertheless, under the liberal theory of notice pleading, was minimally sufficient to state a claim for relief under this section. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

No defense bond is required in an action to quiet title under this section. Roberts v. Sawyer, 229 N.C. 279, 49 S.E.2d 468 (1948).

A judgment binds parties and privies only. Hines v. Moye, 125 N.C. 8, 34 S.E. 103 (1899).

Default Judgment against Non-Responding Defendants Cannot Automatically Extend to Answering Defendants. — A default final judgment against the non-responding defendants/property buyers did not adjudicate any rights, i.e. quiet title under this provision, between plaintiffs/conveyors of property and answering defendants/alleged innocent bona fide purchasers for value nor did it result in any admissions on behalf of defendant-appellants, bar any of their defenses or claims, or prejudice their rights. Little v. Barson Fin. Servs. Corp., 138 N.C. App. 700, 531 S.E.2d 889 (2000).

Costs. — Where the defendant disclaims title to lands in a suit to remove a cloud thereon, the plaintiff is chargeable with the costs under the express provisions of this section. Clemmons v. Jackson, 183 N.C. 382, 111 S.E. 609 (1922).

In an action for trespass and for damages, the plaintiff, after trial of issues as to trespass, etc., may not abandon these contentions upon the trial, and have the court consider the action as an equitable one to remove a cloud upon the title, and so avoid the payment of the full amount of the costs incident to the litigated issues. Clemmons v. Jackson, 183 N.C. 382, 111 S.E. 609 (1922).

B. Pleadings.

Sufficiency of Bill of Complaint. — Where a bill asserts that the complainant is the owner of certain designated lands, sets forth the chain of title, and alleges that the defendant claims an adverse interest in the said lands, which claim renders sale impossible and otherwise casts a cloud over complainant's title, it sufficiently states a cause of action to quiet title under this section. North Carolina Mining Co. v. Westfeldt, 151 F. 290 (W.D.N.C. 1907), rev'd on other grounds, 166 F. 706 (4th Cir. 1909).

A complaint, which alleged that defendant city claimed, without legal right thereto, a right-of-way on and over plaintiff's land, and that such claim was a cloud on his title, was sufficient to state a cause of action within the purview of this section. Cannon v. Wilmington, 242 N.C. 711, 89 S.E.2d 595 (1955), cert. denied, 352 U.S. 842, 77 S. Ct. 66, 1 L. Ed. 2d 58 (1956).

In an action to remove a cloud on title, a complaint alleging that defendants claimed under a receiver's deed and that the trustee in a prior deed of trust executed by the debtor was not a party to the receivership proceedings, is demurrable, since the mere fact that the trustee in the deed of trust was not a party does not in itself render the receiver's deed ineffectual. East Carolina Lumber Co. v. Pamlico County, 250 N.C. 681, 110 S.E.2d 278 (1959).

A complaint alleging that plaintiffs are the owners of a described tract of land by record title and that the State claims an interest therein by virtue of a specified registered deed, that plaintiffs have a superior title, and that the State's claim constituted a cloud on plaintiff's title is sufficient to state a cause of action to quiet title, and such action may be maintained against the State under the provisions of § 41-10.1. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966).

A complaint meets the minimum requirements of this section where it alleges that the plaintiffs own the described land and that the defendant claims an interest therein adverse to them. York v. Newman, 2 N.C. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968).

A cause of action to remove a cloud from title is made out when the plaintiff introduces evidence that he has an interest in a described tract of land and the defendant is asserting, or attempting to assert, an unjust claim thereto. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

Unnecessary to Allege Possession. — This section removed the necessity for alleging that the defendant was in possession. The plaintiff may now set out his claim of title, and if defendant disclaims any adverse claim, the plaintiff pays the cost, and the title as between them is settled. Asheville Land Co. v. Lange, 150 N.C. 26, 63 S.E. 164 (1908).

When Occupation Is Alleged. — But where the plaintiff alleges an occupation as the cause of action, not only must the allegation and proof correspond, but the testimony offered to show possession is open to objection and exception on the ground of competency. Duncan v. Hall, 117 N.C. 443, 23 S.E. 362 (1895).

Plaintiff's failure to show fee simple title to all the lands claimed is not fatal to its case. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

Admission. — Where the defendants, by answer, admitted that the plaintiff owned an interest in the described lands, but asserted they also had an interest therein, this admission gave the plaintiff standing in court to challenge the defendants' claim as a cloud upon its title. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

Answer Sufficient to Raise Issue. — Where the complaint in a suit to remove a cloud upon plaintiff's title to land alleges that the plaintiff is the owner of the locus in quo, and asks for a reformation of his deed to the lands to show that by mutual mistake the name of the grantee therein was that of a private business enterprise he was conducting, and that accordingly the defendants claimed an interest therein, an allegation in the answer in reply that the defendant had no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether the plaintiff was conducting a business in the name of the grantee in the deed is sufficient to raise the issue, and a judgment in plaintiff's favor upon the pleadings is reversible error. Brinson v. Morris, 192 N.C. 214, 134 S.E. 453 (1926).

Issue as to Delivery of Deed. — Delivery of a deed is essential to its validity, and where the pleadings and evidence raise the question of delivery under this section the court's refusal to submit an issue thereon entitles appellant to a new trial. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 206 N.C. 483, 174 S.E. 304 (1934).

Pleadings Sufficient for Determination of Damages as in Condemnation. — Where, in addition, to the fact that general relief was prayed, the parties specifically asked that their rights be determined, and defendant, relying upon the right of eminent domain, asserted its right to flood lands in which plaintiffs owned mineral interests in derogation of plaintiffs' right of access, it was held that the damages resulting to plaintiffs from such floodings must be ascertained as in a suit for condemnation. Duke Power Co. v. Toms, 118 F.2d 443 (4th Cir. 1941).

The burden rests upon the defendant to establish a title which he has set up to defeat the complainant's claim of ownership. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

When the defendants alleged their title had its origin in a certain grant, from which they and their predecessors derived title, they thereby assumed the burden of locating the calls of the grant on the ground, and of showing that the grant covered at least a part of the lands described in the complaint. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

Where the defendants claim by record title, and not by adverse possession, and allege their record title had its genesis in a certain grant, the state of the pleadings casts upon them the burden of tracing their title to that grant. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

C. Jurisdiction of Courts.

Advisory Jurisdiction of Courts. — The advisory jurisdiction of courts of equity does not extend to the mere construction of a will to ascertain the rights thereunder of devisees or legatees. And such jurisdiction is not sustained under this section, when the suit is not brought by the plaintiff against some person claiming an adverse estate or interest. Heptinstall v. Newsome, 146 N.C. 503, 60 S.E. 416 (1908).

Concurrent Jurisdiction of State and Federal Courts. — The remedy given by statutes of this character may be enforced in the federal court when the parties are inhabitants of different states. Johnston v. Kramer Bros. & Co., 203 F. 733 (E.D.N.C. 1913).

Where there is an action pending in the State courts to try the title to lands under this section, the State courts have thereby acquired jurisdiction over the property, and the federal courts will not entertain a suit in equity on the same facts and for the same relief. Westfeldt v. North Carolina Mining Co., 166 F. 706 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 214 U.S. 516, 29 S. Ct. 697, 53 L. Ed. 1064, appeal dismissed, 215 U.S. 586, 30 S. Ct. 404, 54 L. Ed. 339 (1909).

This section does not enlarge the jurisdiction of federal courts of equity, as it merely regulates procedure and does not create any substantive right. And, even if it could be considered as creating an equitable right, it would not authorize the trial by a federal court of equity of what is in essence an action of ejectment, for the reason that in such action the defendant is entitled under the federal Constitution to a trial by jury. Wood v. Phillips, 50 F.2d 714 (4th Cir. 1931).

In an action under this section, while it is true that a federal court of equity lacks jurisdiction of a suit brought against a number of defendants claiming severally different portions of the land in dispute, that ground may oust the court's jurisdiction only in respect to those defendants who raise the objection, and, where title and possession in the complainant is sufficiently alleged, it is error to dismiss the suit as to those defendants who have made no defense, but submitted themselves and their interests to the jurisdiction of the court. New Jersey & N.C. Land & Lumber Co. v. Gardner-Lacy Lumber Co., 178 F. 772 (4th Cir. 1910).

Removal of Action to Federal Court. — Action to quiet title to real property in which plaintiff, the record owner, alleged that defendant had placed an IRS tax lien on the property, and that defendant's IRS tax lien was acting as a cloud on plaintiff's title and preventing plaintiff from selling or alienating the property was properly removed to federal district court, as the essential focus of plaintiff's action was the validity, priority, and extinguishment of the IRS tax lien. Wilkinson v. United States, 724 F. Supp. 1200 (W.D.N.C. 1989).

§ 41-10.1. Trying title to land where State claims interest.

Whenever the State of North Carolina or any agency or department thereof asserts a claim of title to land which has not been taken by condemnation and any individual, firm or corporation likewise asserts a claim of title to the said land, such individual, firm or corporation may bring an action in the superior court of the county in which the land lies against the State or such agency or department thereof for the purpose of determining such adverse claims. Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to lands which have been condemned or taken for use as roads or for public buildings. (1957, c. 514.)

CASE NOTES

Betterments claim is not a claim of title to land. It is, instead, a claim demanding payment for permanent improvements to the land over and above the value of the use and occupation of the land. State v. Taylor, 322 N.C. 433, 368 S.E.2d 601 (1988).

State Did Not Consent to Be Sued for Betterments. — Construing this section strictly, a claim for betterments is not a claim of title to land. The State therefore has not consented to be sued for betterments and is entitled to the full protection of its sovereign immunity. State v. Taylor, 322 N.C. 433, 368 S.E.2d 601 (1988).

"Claim of Title to Land" Cannot Be Broadened to Include Claim for Betterments. — Sovereign immunity is a common-law doctrine to which the existing exceptions or waivers have been mandated by the legislature, and statutes which waive the benefits of the doctrine of sovereign immunity are to be strictly construed. Thus, the phrase "claim of title to land" contained in this section cannot be broadened to include a claim for betterments under § 1-340. The betterments statute does not, by its terms, create a right against the State. State v. Taylor, 322 N.C. 433, 368 S.E.2d 601 (1988).

Suit May Be Brought to Determine Extent of Easement Granted by State. — A controversy between an individual and the State as to the extent of an easement granted to the individual by the State may be made the basis of a suit against the State in the superior court under § 1-253, since such suit involves title to realty within the purview of this section. Shingleton v. State, 260 N.C. 451, 133 S.E.2d 183 (1963).

Sufficiency of Complaint. — A complaint alleging that plaintiffs are the owners of a described tract of land by record title and that the State claims an interest therein by virtue of a specified registered deed, that plaintiffs have a superior title, and that the State's claim constituted a cloud on plaintiff's title is sufficient to state a cause of action to quiet title, and such action may be maintained against the State under the provisions of this section. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966).

When the title to the property is no longer in question, plaintiffs may not sue the State for any further damages. Mattox v. State, 21 N.C. App. 677, 205 S.E.2d 364 (1974).

Where the defendant city was already in possession of the disputed property at the time of plaintiff's action, the action was in the nature of ejectment and merely an action to try title. Costner v. City of Greensboro, 37 N.C. App. 563, 246 S.E.2d 552 (1978).

Applied in East Carolina Lumber Co. v. Pamlico County, 250 N.C. 681, 110 S.E.2d 278 (1959); Roten v. State, 8 N.C. App. 643, 175 S.E.2d 384 (1970).

§ 41-11. Sale, lease or mortgage in case of remainders.

In all cases where there is a vested interest in real estate, and a contingent remainder over to persons who are not in being, or when the contingency has not yet happened which will determine who the remaindermen are, there may be a sale, lease or mortgage of the property by a special proceeding in the superior court, which proceeding shall be conducted in the manner pointed out in this section. Said proceeding may be commenced by summons by any person having a vested interest in the land, and all persons in esse who are interested in said land shall be made parties defendant and served with summons in the way and manner now provided by law for the service of summons in other special proceedings, as provided by Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, and service of summons upon nonresidents, or persons whose names and residences are unknown, shall be by publication as now required by law or such service in lieu of publication as now provided by law. In cases where the remainder will or may go to minors, or persons under other disabilities, or to persons not in being, or whose names and residences are not known, or who may in any contingency become interested in said land, but because of such contingency cannot be ascertained, the clerk of the superior court shall, after due inquiry of persons who are in no way interested in or connected with such proceeding, designate and appoint some discreet person as guardian ad litem, to represent such remainderman, upon whom summons shall be served as provided by law for other guardians ad litem, and it shall be the duty of such guardian ad litem to defend such actions, and when counsel is needed to represent him, to make this known to the clerk, who shall by an order give instructions as to the employment of counsel and the payment of fees.

The court shall, if the interest of all parties require or would be materially enhanced by it, order a sale of such property or any part thereof for reinvestment, either in purchasing or in improving real estate, less expense allowed by the court for the proceeding and sale, and such newly acquired or improved real estate shall be held upon the same contingencies and in like manner as was the property ordered to be sold. The court may authorize the loaning of such money subject to its approval until such time when it can be reinvested in real estate. And after the sale of such property in all proceedings hereunder, where there is a life estate, in lieu of said interest or investment of proceeds to which the life tenant would be entitled to, or to the use of, the court may in its discretion order the value of said life tenant's share during the probable life of such life tenant, to be ascertained as now provided by law, and paid out of the proceeds of such sale absolutely, and the remainder of such proceeds be reinvested as herein provided. Any person or persons owning a life estate in lands which are unproductive and from which the income is insufficient to pay the taxes on and reasonable upkeep of said lands shall be entitled to maintain an action, without the joinder of any of the remaindermen or reversioners as parties plaintiff, for the sale of said property for the purpose of obtaining funds for improving other nonproductive and unimproved real estate so as to make the same profit-bearing, all to be done under order of the court, or reinvestment of the funds under the provisions of this section, but in every such action when the rights of minors or other persons not sui juris are involved, a competent and disinterested attorney shall be appointed by the court to file answer and represent their interests. The provisions of the preceding sentence, being remedial, shall apply to cases where any title in such lands shall have been acquired before, as well as after, its passage — March 7, 1927.

The clerk of the superior court is authorized to make all orders for the sale, lease or mortgage of property under this section, and for the reinvestment or securing and handling of the proceeds of such sales, but no sale under this section shall be held or mortgage given until the same has been approved by the resident judge of the district, or the judge holding the courts of the district at the time said order of sale is made. The approval by the resident judge of the district may be made by him either during a session of court or at chambers. All orders of approval under said statute by judges resident in the district heretofore made either during a session of court or at chambers are hereby ratified and validated.

The court may authorize the temporary reinvestment, pending final investment in real estate, of funds derived from such sale in any direct obligation of the United States of America or any indirect obligation guaranteed both as to principal and interest or bonds of the State of North Carolina issued since the year 1972; but in the event of such reinvestment, the commissioners, trustees or other officers appointed by the court to hold such funds shall hold the bonds in their possession and shall pay to the life tenant and owner of the vested interest in the lands sold only the interest accruing on the bonds, and the principal of the bonds shall be held subject to final reinvestment and to such expense only as is provided in this section. Temporary reinvestments, as aforesaid, in any direct obligation of the United States of America or any indirect obligation guaranteed both as to principal and interest or State bonds heretofore made with the approval of the court of all or a part of the funds derived from such sales are ratified and declared valid.

The court shall, if the interest of the parties require it and would be materially enhanced by it, order such property mortgaged for such term and on such condition as to the court seems proper and to the best interest of the interested parties. The proceeds derived from the mortgage shall be used for the purpose of adding improvements to the property or to remove existing liens on the property as the court may direct, but for no other purpose. The mortgagees shall not be held responsible for determining the validity of the liens, debts and expenses where the court directs such liens, debts and expenses to be paid. In all cases of mortgages under this section the court shall authorize and direct the guardian representing the interest of minors and the guardian ad litem representing the interest of those persons unknown or not in being to join in the mortgage for the purpose of conveying the interest of such person or persons. In all cases of mortgages under this section the owner of the vested interest or his or her legal representative shall within six months from the date of the mortgage file with the court an itemized statement showing how the money derived from the said mortgage has been expended, and shall exhibit to the court receipts for said money. Said report shall be audited in the same manner as provided for the auditing of guardian's accounts. The owner of the vested interest or his or her legal representative shall collect the rents and income from the property mortgaged and apply the proceeds first to taxes and discharge of interest on the mortgage and the annual curtailment as provided thereby, or if said person uses or occupies said premises he or she shall pay the said taxes, interest and curtailments and said party shall enter into a bond to be approved by the court for the faithful performance of the duties hereby imposed, and such person shall annually file with the court a report and receipts showing that taxes, interest and the curtailment as provided by the mortgage have been paid.

The mortgagee shall not be held responsible for the application of the funds secured or derived from the mortgage. The word "mortgage" whenever used herein shall be construed to include deeds in trust. (1903, c. 99; 1905, c. 548;

IV. Illustrative Cases.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality and Validity. — Revisal, s. 1590, now this section, providing for the sale of contingent remainders, is constitutional and valid. Smith v. Miller, 151 N.C. 620, 66 S.E. 671 (1909), petition for rehearing dismissed, 152 N.C. 314, 67 S.E. 746 (1910).

This section does not interfere with the essential rights of ownership, but, operating in addition to those already possessed, is constitutional and valid. Pendleton v. Williams, 175 N.C. 248, 95 S.E. 500 (1918).

Retroactive Effect. — Chapter 99, Laws 1903, Rev., s. 1590, now this section, is valid, even when allowed to reach back and affect estates already created by will, though only so far as it is permitted to apply to interests not yet vested. Anderson v. Wilkins, 142 N.C. 154, 55 S.E. 272 (1906). See Springs v. Scott, 132 N.C. 548, 44 S.E. 116 (1903).

The decision in Springs v. Scott was approved in Hodges v. Lipscomb, 133 N.C. 199, 45 S.E. 556 (1903), a case in which it appeared that the will was made prior to the passage of Laws 1903, c. 99. It was there held that the act of 1903 operated retrospectively, so as to apply to contingent interest created by a will which had already taken effect by the death of the testator. Anderson v. Wilkins, 142 N.C. 154, 55 S.E. 272 (1906).

Purpose of Section. — To prevent any possible doubt of the existence of the power of the court, upon the application of all the parties in interest, the trustee representing contingent remaindermen, and to provide for its exercise and protect the interest of all parties in remainder, whether in esse or not, the act of 1903, now this section, was passed. McAfee v. Green, 143 N.C. 411, 55 S.E. 828 (1906).

The purpose of this section is not to obtain predictive declarations of future rights of the parties, inter se, but rather to promote the interest of all the parties by allowing the sale of desirable land free from restrictions imposed by the presence of uncertainties as to whom the land will ultimately belong. Crumpton v. Crumpton, 290 N.C. 651, 227 S.E.2d 587 (1976).

The remedial purpose of this section may be served where there are contingent remainders over to persons not in being, or the contingency has not happened which will determine who the ultimate remaindermen are, but to achieve the desired result the provisions of the statute must be observed. Barnes v. Dortch, 245 N.C. 369, 95 S.E.2d 872 (1957).

Section Does Not Destroy Interest of Remote Contingent Remaindermen. — It was not the purpose of this section to destroy the interest of the remote contingent remaindermen, but to enable the present owners to sell the property and make a good title to the same, and to require that the proceeds be held as a fund, subject to the claims of persons who may ultimately be entitled thereto, and safeguard their rights in all respects. Poole v. Thompson, 183 N.C. 588, 112 S.E. 323 (1922). See Lancaster v. Lancaster, 209 N.C. 673, 184 S.E. 527 (1936).

It will be noted that this section does not, either in its terms or purpose, profess or undertake to destroy the interest of the contingent remaindermen in the property, but only contemplates and provides for a change of investment, and, subject to the right to use a reasonable portion of the amount for the improvement of the remainder, when properly safeguarded, it impresses upon the fund the same contingencies and limitations as were imposed upon the original property. Dawson v. Wood, 177 N.C. 158, 98 S.E. 459 (1919).

When Section Applicable. — This section (before the 1927 amendment) and § 41-12 apply only to a sale of property in which there are or have been contingent interests. Waddell v. United Cigar Stores, 195 N.C. 434, 142 S.E. 585 (1928).

The 1927 amendment, where the land is unproductive, etc., extends the right of action to include life estates where there are vested remaindermen and reversioners without their joinder. The section theretofore had reference only to contingent remainders. Stepp v. Stepp, 200 N.C. 237, 156 S.E. 804, 76 A.L.R. 536 (1931).

A sale under this section can be ordered only in a "special proceeding," which must be instituted before the clerk of the superior court, and the section has no application to an action for waste under § 1-533. Parrish v. Parrish, 247 N.C. 584, 101 S.E.2d 480 (1958).

Strict Compliance Required. — In order that a valid conveyance of the land in fee simple be made pursuant to this section, it is essential that the provisions of the statute be strictly complied with. Blades v. Spitzer, 252 N.C. 207, 113 S.E.2d 315 (1960).

Applied to Charitable and Other Trusts. — Courts, in the exercise of general equitable jurisdiction, may, in proper instances, decree a sale of estate in remainder and affected by contingent interests, for reinvestment, or a portion thereof, when it is shown that it is necessary for the preservation of the estate and the protection of its owners; and this principle is not infrequently applied in the proper administration of charitable and other trusts, notwithstanding limitations in instruments creating them that apparently impose restrictions on the powers of the trustee in this respect, when it is properly established that the sale is required by the necessities of the case and the successful carrying out of the dominant purposes of the trust. Middleton v. Rigsbee, 179 N.C. 437, 102 S.E. 780 (1920).

The sale of an estate in remainder affected under the terms of a will with certain ultimate and contingent interests in trust will not be affected by a clause in the will requiring that the principal of the trust fund shall not be used or diminished during the period of 30 years, with a certain exception, the limitation applying only to the administration of the trust estate, and not preventing the court from ordering a sale when required by the necessities of the estate for its preservation. Middleton v. Rigsbee, 179 N.C. 437, 102 S.E. 780 (1920).

Section Does Not Limit Power of Court over Trusts. — This section, authorizing those who have a vested interest in land with contingent remainders over to persons not in being to petition for and procure the sale of the land for reinvestment, does not limit the power of the court to supervise the administration of trust estates and to enter such orders and decrees in respect thereto as circumstances may require, so that the interest of contingent remaindermen and other beneficial owners may be sold to preserve the trust estate from destruction. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Rasberry, 226 N.C. 586, 39 S.E.2d 601 (1946).

Power of Court Independent of Section. — The court, without regard to the Act of 1903, now this section, has the power to order the sale of real estate limited to a tenant for life, with remainder to children or issue, and upon failure thereof, over to persons, all or some of whom are not in esse, when one of the class being first in remainder after the expiration of the life estate is in esse and a party to the proceeding to represent the class, and upon decree passed, and sale and title made pursuant thereto, the purchaser acquires a perfect title as against all persons in esse or in posse. Springs v. Scott, 132 N.C. 548, 44 S.E. 116 (1903).

While the courts of this State do not have inherent power to decree a sale and pass title to the purchaser of lands, with remainder limited upon a contingency that would prevent the ascertainment of the ultimate takers, or any of them, till the death of the life tenant, this power is now conferred by the express terms of our statute in all cases where there is a vested interest in real estate, with a contingent interest over to persons not in being, or when the contingency has not happened which shall determine who the remaindermen are, under the procedure therein laid down. Dawson v. Wood, 177 N.C. 158, 98 S.E. 459 (1919).

Decree May Be Binding on Persons Not in Esse. — A lease authorized by the decree of a court of chancery may be binding upon beneficiaries not in esse, when their interests are the same as those of persons in being who are subjected by due process to the jurisdiction of the court. Waddell v. United Cigar Stores, 195 N.C. 434, 142 S.E. 585 (1928), wherein a lease of trust property was held valid over the objection that it might extend beyond the term of the trust.

Status of Remainders. — Contingent remainders are no longer considered mere possibilities which cannot be transferred, but a remainderman whose estate is contingent may convey it. 2 N.C.L. Rev. 126; Beacon v. Amos, 161 N.C. 357, 77 S.E. 407 (1913).

II. ACTION IN SUPERIOR COURT FOR SALE.

General Requirements for Sale. — Lands devised for life with contingent limitations over may be sold for reinvestment under the provisions of this section, under the court's order, subject to its future approval of the sale, when it is made to appear that the best interest of all parties so requires, and those living and in present interest are represented in person, and unborn children by guardian ad litem. McLean v. Caldwell, 178 N.C. 424, 100 S.E. 888 (1919).

Jurisdiction Cannot Be Conferred by Consent. — Jurisdiction of the superior court of an action by owner of a vested estate against contingent remaindermen to sell land cannot be conferred by consent, and this section, authorizing such an action, must be strictly complied with. Watson v. United States, 34 F. Supp. 777 (M.D.N.C. 1940).

Jurisdiction on Appeal from Proceedings Improperly Brought before Clerk. — Lands subject to contingent limitations may be sold by order of the judge of the superior court in term (now during a session of court), on appeal in proceedings in partition improperly brought before the clerk, by retaining jurisdiction for the purpose of settling the controversy. Ryder v. Oates, 173 N.C. 569, 92 S.E. 508 (1917).

Where an action is wrongfully brought before the clerk of the superior court and is taken to the superior court by appeal, the superior court having original jurisdiction, it will be retained for hearing. Springs v. Scott, 132 N.C. 548, 44 S.E. 116 (1903).

Authority of Clerk. — It was not contemplated by this section that the rights of parties should be entrusted to the clerks of the superior court in ordinary special proceedings without approval or confirmation by a judge of the superior court. Ray v. Poole, 187 N.C. 749, 123 S.E. 5 (1924).

Proceedings Brought under § 46-3. — A tenant for life may not, directly or indirectly, affect the title of those in remainder, whether having a vested or contingent interest in the lands, by joining them in their proceedings for a division or sale for that purpose, brought before the clerk of the court under the provisions of § 46-3, and these proceedings so brought cannot be validated by derivative jurisdiction in the superior court, on appeal, under the provisions of this section, it being required that the proceedings be originally brought in the latter jurisdiction, with certain requirements for the protection of contingent remaindermen, which must be strictly followed; and, though under §§ 46-23, 46-24 a sale is provided when the land is affected with a contingent interest in remainder, not presently determinable, the proceedings are therein required to be brought upon petition of such remaindermen, and not upon that of the life tenants. Ray v. Poole, 187 N.C. 749, 123 S.E. 5 (1924).

Life Tenant May Not Have Partition under § 46-24. — A tenant for life in lands may not by adversary proceedings against the remaindermen compel the sale of lands for partition of the proceeds under § 46-24, but upon a proper showing the sale for reinvestment may be ordered in equitable proceedings under the provisions of this section. Smith v. Suitt, 199 N.C. 5, 153 S.E. 602 (1930).

Who May Institute Suit. — Proceedings to have lands sold that are subject to a life estate, with limitation over, upon contingencies which will prevent the ascertainment of the remaindermen during the life of the first taker, etc., may be instituted by any person having a present vested interest in the lands. Dawson v. Wood, 177 N.C. 158, 98 S.E. 459 (1919).

The life beneficiary of a trust estate has a vested equitable estate therein so as to entitle her to institute proceedings for the sale of lands of the estate for reinvestment, and the trustees are proper parties to the proceeding. Blades v. Spitzer, 252 N.C. 207, 113 S.E.2d 315 (1960).

Plaintiff Must Have Vested Interest. — In a proceeding under this section to sell real property in which there is a contingent interest, plaintiff must be a person having a vested interest in the property to be sold, and the sale must be passed upon by the judgment of the superior court. The contingent interest alone cannot be sold. Butler v. Winston, 223 N.C. 421, 27 S.E.2d 124 (1943).

Where one who had no vested estate in land brought action in the superior court against contingent remaindermen to sell land, the court lacked jurisdiction of the action, and hence the judgment ordering sale of the land was void and could be collaterally attacked. Watson v. United States, 34 F. Supp. 777 (M.D.N.C. 1940). See Barnes v. Dortch, 245 N.C. 369, 95 S.E.2d 872 (1957).

Necessary Parties. — Where timber growing upon lands was devised to testator's daughter for her life, and at her death to such of her children and grandchildren then living as she might have appointed in her will, or, upon her failure to exercise the power of appointment, to her children and grandchildren then living, objection to proceedings brought by the devisee and her children and grandchildren then living on the ground that no one having a vested interest in the land had been made a party could not be sustained. Midyette v. Lycoming Timber & Lumber Co., 185 N.C. 423, 117 S.E. 386 (1923). See Thompson v. Humphrey, 179 N.C. 44, 101 S.E. 738 (1919).

In proceedings under this section certain contingent interests in land held in trust were sold and reinvested in other lands in accordance with the terms of the trust in the original deed conveying them. The title acquired under the original deed in trust by the trustee had become passive in him, and it was held that as, under the statute of uses, the legal and equitable title had merged in the same person, neither the trustee nor his heirs were necessary parties to the owner's action against a purchaser to enforce his contract of purchase, and especially so when all vested and contingent interests were represented by some of the parties to the suit. Lee v. Oates, 171 N.C. 717, 88 S.E. 889 (1916).

Construing the statute, as amended, in Hodges v. Lipscomb, 133 N.C. 199, 45 S.E. 556 (1903), the court held that it was only necessary to make parties defendant those of the contingent remaindermen who, on the happening of the contingency, would presently have an estate in the property at the time of action commenced, and as to others more remotely interested they could have their interest represented and protected by the guardian ad litem as the statute provides. Dawson v. Wood, 177 N.C. 158, 98 S.E. 459 (1919).

A special proceeding under this section to authorize the sale for reinvestment of certain land in which there are contingent interests must be brought by a person having a vested interest in the land and those, who on the happening of the contingency would presently have an estate in the property at the time the proceeding is commenced, made parties and served with summons. Barnes v. Dortch, 245 N.C. 369, 95 S.E.2d 872 (1957).

Effect of Omission of Persons Having Contingent Interests. — An order of sale and judgment of confirmation will not be vacated on the ground that certain contingent remaindermen were not made parties to the proceedings to sell, where the interest of the contingent remaindermen has, since the sale, been extinguished by failure of the contingency. Beam v. Gilkey, 225 N.C. 520, 35 S.E.2d 641 (1945).

Setting Aside Sale for Failure to Serve Summons on Infant. — Where in proceedings to sell lands affected with contingent interests the provisions of this section have been observed, and the clerk has appointed a guardian ad litem for contingent interests and for infant parties, the failure to serve summons on a minor is to be regarded as an irregularity that will not render the sale void and a nullity. However, on a proper showing, the sale may be set aside as to all the parties except an innocent purchaser without notice of the irregularity; and on appeal to the Supreme Court, when this fact is not apparent, the case will be remanded for its ascertainment. Welch v. Welch, 194 N.C. 633, 140 S.E. 436 (1927).

Where Guardian Appointed after Sale. — In a proceeding under this section to sell all the contingent interest in certain lands of minors and unborn children, where petitioners were represented by a guardian, judgment of sale signed on the day before the guardian's appointment was void. Butler v. Winston, 223 N.C. 421, 27 S.E.2d 124 (1943).

When Action Abates. — An action against a contingent remainderman to sell the lands under this section abates upon the death of the remainderman prior to the termination of the life estate, when his limitation over is made to depend upon his surviving the life tenant. Redden v. Toms, 211 N.C. 312, 190 S.E. 490 (1937).

Estoppel by Judgment. — Where an executor under a will with power to sell the lands of his testate and reinvest the proceeds, etc., has died, and all persons in present and contingent interest have been made parties to an action wherein the court has substituted another as trustee, upon like trusts in every respect, and the decree was not appealed from, all the privies and parties are estopped as to all issuable matters therein, and may not deny the power of the substituted trustee to make sale of the lands as fully as the executor under the will was therein authorized to make. Hayden v. Hayden, 178 N.C. 259, 100 S.E. 515 (1919).

Preliminary Judgment for Payment of Betterments. — Where a preliminary judgment in proceedings to sell lands with contingent interests provides for the payment of betterments to the life tenant, and in this respect the judgment is not excepted to or appealed from, it is conclusive upon the parties as an estoppel. Pendleton v. Williams, 175 N.C. 248, 95 S.E. 500 (1918).

Judgment under Former Law Does Not Work Estoppel. — A former action determined before the enactment on the subject by the legislature, holding that contingent remainders in lands, etc., cannot be sold unless all persons who may by any possibility be interested unite in the decree, cannot estop the parties to proceedings thereafter brought under the provisions of this section. Pendleton v. Williams, 175 N.C. 248, 95 S.E. 500 (1918).

Irregularities in Judgment against Person Having no Interest. — Irregularity of entering a consent judgment against testator's minor grandson without investigation and approval of the court may be disregarded where the minor had no interest. Beam v. Gilkey, 225 N.C. 520, 35 S.E.2d 641 (1945).

III. SALE AND REINVESTMENT.

Section Contemplates Reinvestment. — This section contemplates that the proceeds of the sale, less expenses and perhaps the present worth of the life tenant's share, will be reinvested, either in purchasing or in improving real estate. Crumpton v. Crumpton, 290 N.C. 651, 227 S.E.2d 587 (1976).

Public or Private Sale Permissible. — The sale of estates affected with contingent interests, under the provisions of this section, may, in the sound discretion of the trial judge and subject to his approval, be made either at public auction or by private negotiation, as the best interests of the parties may require. Middleton v. Rigsbee, 179 N.C. 437, 102 S.E. 780 (1920). See McAfee v. Green, 143 N.C. 411, 55 S.E. 828 (1906).

Where the sale of land affected with remote contingent interests not ascertainable at the time, comes within the provisions of this section, the court having jurisdiction may order the property disposed of either at a public or private sale, when it is shown that, as to the one or the other, the best interests of the parties will be promoted, subject always to the approval of the court. Poole v. Thompson, 183 N.C. 588, 112 S.E. 323 (1922).

Where the provisions of this section have been observed in the sale of lands affected with contingent interests, the commissioner appointed to make the sale may effect the same by private negotiations, subject to the approval of the court, when it is properly made to appear that the best interests of the parties so require. Midyette v. Lycoming Timber & Lumber Co., 185 N.C. 423, 117 S.E. 386 (1923).

The court has the power to order the private sale of lands affected with contingent interests under the provisions of this section under a proper finding that it would be to the best interests of all concerned, without submitting this issue to the jury, and where the proceedings are properly had and all parties are before the court, the objection is untenable that the sale was made under the decision of the court, and the parties had not agreed thereto. DeLaney v. Clark, 196 N.C. 282, 145 S.E. 398 (1928). See Ryder v. Oates, 173 N.C. 569, 92 S.E. 508 (1917).

Bond Required. — Where the court decrees a sale of trust property for reinvestment, the trustees should be required to give bond, or other legal provision should be made, to assure the safety of the funds arising from the sale, notwithstanding that the will provides that the trustees should not be required to give bond in administering the trust, since in acting under the decree of the court the trustees act as commissioners of the court and not necessarily as trustees under the will. Blades v. Spitzer, 252 N.C. 207, 113 S.E.2d 315 (1960).

Decree Must Provide for Reinvestment. — Where real estate is sold under order of the court, the decree must provide for investment of the fund in such way as the court may deem best for the protection of all persons who have or may have remote or contingent interests. Springs v. Scott, 132 N.C. 548, 44 S.E. 116 (1903).

Discretion of Court and Clerk in Reinvestment. — Before the 1923 amendment, which inserted the first sentence of the third paragraph of this section, it was held that the preservation of the proceeds of the sale of lands, under this section, was referred to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and no error was found to an order requiring the funds to be paid into the office of the clerk of the superior court, to be loaned out by him or otherwise invested as required by law until the happening of the contingency, except that it should be so modified as to require that interest on these loans be allowed the owners of the particular estate, it appearing that they were given the usufruct of the land. Pendleton v. Williams, 175 N.C. 248, 95 S.E. 500 (1918).

Time of Reinvestment. — In Laws 1905, c. 548, the reinvestment in realty was required to be within two years, but such requirement was removed by the later Laws 1907, cc. 956 and 980, leaving the matter of reinvestment somewhat in the discretion of the court, but with clear intimation that the fund should be reinvested in realty when an advantageous opportunity should be offered. Dawson v. Wood, 177 N.C. 158, 98 S.E. 459 (1919).

Effect of Omitting Bond Required by § 1-407. — In all cases where property affected with unascertainable contingent remainders is ordered sold under the provisions of this section, it is now required by § 1-407 that a bond be given to assure the safety of the funds arising from the sale; but where this is omitted from a judgment otherwise regular, it will not affect the title conveyed, though the decree should be modified in that respect by proper steps taken in the superior court. Poole v. Thompson, 183 N.C. 588, 112 S.E. 323 (1922).

Where an order has been made for the sale of timber growing upon lands affected with contingent interests, the court should also require its commissioner appointed for the sale to give bond for the preservation and proper application of the proceeds of sale, etc., under § 1-407; but this provision does not affect the title of the purchaser, who is not required to see to the application of the funds, and the proper order in this respect may be supplied by amendment or supplementary decree. Midyette v. Lycoming Timber & Lumber Co., 185 N.C. 423, 117 S.E. 386 (1923).

Purchaser's Liability Ends When Money Paid into Court. — A purchaser of devised lands affected with a life estate and contingent limitation over, sold for reinvestment under the provisions of this section, is not ordinarily charged with the duty of looking after the proper disposition of the purchase money, and upon paying it into court, under its order, he is quit of further obligation concerning it. McLean v. Caldwell, 178 N.C. 424, 100 S.E. 888 (1919).

Where the purchaser at a sale of lands for reinvestment pays his money into the court or to the person authorized by order of court to receive it, ordinarily he is not required to see to the proper application of the fund, its safety being taken care of by the court in its final decree. DeLaney v. Clark, 196 N.C. 282, 145 S.E. 398 (1928).

Purchaser Takes Fee Simple Title. — A purchaser at a sale of land with contingent interests allowed under the provisions of this section acquires a fee simple title, upon payment of purchase price to the court or person authorized to receive it, without being required to see to the application of the funds, and on such payment made is quit of all obligations concerning it. Pendleton v. Williams, 175 N.C. 248, 95 S.E. 500 (1918).

Commissioner Held Without Authority to Insert Restrictions in Deed. — Where a commissioner was authorized by the court to sell part of the lands of an estate for reinvestment under the provisions of this section, and there were no restrictions in regard to the use of the property of the estate, and in the commissioner's report and recommendation of the offer to purchase, no authority to restrict the use of the property was asked, and none granted in the order of the court, it was held that the commissioner was without authority to insert restrictions in the deed to the purchaser, his authority being limited under the order of the court to the sale of the property and the distribution of the proceeds of sale. Southern Real Estate Loan & Trust Co. v. Atlantic Ref. Co., 208 N.C. 501, 181 S.E. 633 (1935).

IV. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Where lands are affected with a contingent interest in remainder, not determinable during the life of the tenant for life, the holder of the vested interest and those in immediate remainder may proceed to have the lands sold under the provisions of this section, and have those remotely interested represented by guardian ad litem for the protection of their interests; and where it is made to appear that the interest of all parties requires, or will be materially enhanced by it, the court may order a sale of the property, or any part thereof, for reinvestment, either in purchasing or improving real estate, etc., or invested temporarily to be held under the same contingencies in like manner as the property ordered to be sold. Poole v. Thompson, 183 N.C. 588, 112 S.E. 323 (1922).

Complaints Held Good on Demurrer. — A testator devised his improved and unimproved lands, in the corporate limits of a town, to his daughter for life with remainder to her children living at her death, with ulterior limitations over to trustees on certain contingencies, and the life tenant brought proceedings for sale and reinvestment of the proceeds under the provisions of this section, having made parties of the persons interested in accordance with the statute, and alleged that by the sale the income would be largely increased, that the sale of the contemplated part to a purchaser she had secured for a certain price would enable her to make improvements on the land then without income, to make houses on other parts of the land more profitable for rental purposes, etc., that the property as it stood was rapidly depreciating, and that there were no available funds, otherwise, to meet the necessary and insistent demands. It was held that a demurrer was bad, and properly overruled. Middleton v. Rigsbee, 179 N.C. 437, 102 S.E. 780 (1920).

Where the complaint of a life tenant alleges that the land is unproductive and income therefrom is insufficient to pay the taxes and reasonable upkeep, and prays that the land be sold in accordance with this section, the demurrer of the vested remaindermen is improperly sustained, the complaint alleging at least one good cause for action. Stepp v. Stepp, 200 N.C. 237, 156 S.E. 804 (1931).

Suit Regarding Management of Trust Estate. — In a suit regarding the management of a trust estate where the trustee and the testator's wife and children are parties and the one living grandchild is made a party defendant and is represented by a guardian ad litem, who also represents as a class the other grandchildren not in esse, all parties having an interest in the estate are properly represented, and the judgment of the court is binding as to all interests. Spencer v. McCleneghan, 202 N.C. 662, 163 S.E. 753 (1932).

Where the grantors in a deed have erroneously assumed that they had title to the lands which they conveyed in fee, but which were affected by future contingent interest not at present ascertainable, and thereafter bring action to make title under the provisions of this section, and in these proceedings have protected the interest of the remote remaindermen by the appointment for them of a guardian ad litem, and have fully set forth the facts and circumstances of the former sale, and bring in the proceeds and submit them to the jurisdiction and orders of the court, the final judgment authorizing and confirming the sale, being had in conformity with the provisions of the statute, perfects the title, and same will inure to the benefit of the covenantee in the former deed, and for a breach of this covenant only nominal damages are recoverable. Myer v. Thompson, 183 N.C. 543, 112 S.E. 328 (1922).

Testator devised land to his five brothers and sisters and a nephew "for their lives and then to their children." The life tenants partitioned the land into equal shares, and the lot partitioned to a surviving brother, aged 75 without children, was conveyed by the children of the four deceased life tenants and the other surviving life tenant and her children to the wife of the surviving brother. The petitioners who purchased the lot from the surviving brother and his wife were not entitled to sell it by virtue of a proceeding under this section where the heirs of the testator living at the time of the proceeding were not made parties, since upon the death of the brother without issue the land would revert to the heirs of the testator living at that time. Barnes v. Dortch, 245 N.C. 369, 95 S.E.2d 872 (1957).

A will devised a life estate to daughter with remainder to her children but she renounced her life estate and it was adjudicated that the renunciation of the life estate accelerated the vesting of title in members of the class in esse at the time. It was held that the acceleration of the estate of the remaindermen did not change the date when the final roll call will be made to ascertain members of the class, and although members of the class in esse are not required to account for rents and profits pending the birth of other members of the class, after-born children must be let in, and the fee simple title to the land cannot be conveyed prior to the death of the life tenant except for reinvestment pursuant to judicial decree. Neill v. Bach, 231 N.C. 391, 57 S.E.2d 385 (1950).

A devise of an estate in trust with provision that the income therefrom should be paid to a designated beneficiary for life and, upon her death, the corpus should be divided among her children, with further provision that the child or children of any deceased child of the life tenant should take such child's share, requires that the remaindermen be ascertained upon the falling in of the life estate, who then take under the will and not as heirs of the life tenant, so that this section is applicable. Blades v. Spitzer, 252 N.C. 207, 113 S.E.2d 315 (1960).

Foreclosure of Tax Lien. — Where land held by a life tenant with contingent limitation over, the persons entitled to the remainder not being determinable until the death of the life tenant, was mortgaged by the life tenant and the mortgage was foreclosed upon default, it was held that in an action to foreclose the lien for taxes against the land under former § 105-414, in which the purchaser at the foreclosure sale, the life tenant and the known contingent remaindermen were made parties, and the minor contingent remaindermen, the unknown contingent remaindermen and those not in esse were represented by guardian ad litem under this section, and the provisions of both statutes were fully and accurately followed, the purchaser at the commissioner's sale acquired the fee simple title. Rodman v. Norman, 221 N.C. 320, 20 S.E.2d 294 (1942).

Sale of Growing Timber. — The timber growing upon lands devised to the testator's named daughter for her sole and separate use during her life only, and at her death to such of her children and grandchildren then living as she may have appointed in her will, and upon her failure to have done so, to her children and grandchildren then living, during the life of the daughter, was affected by the contingencies contemplated by this section. Midyette v. Lycoming Timber & Lumber Co., 185 N.C. 423, 117 S.E. 386 (1923).

Order of Sale Held Invalid. — The proceeding in which an order for the sale of a lot was made was not instituted and was not conducted in accordance with this section. The power of sale was not exercised by virtue of the statute. The proceeding was brought before the clerk, and not in term. The minors were not represented by guardian ad litem appointed by the judge, but by a next friend appointed by the clerk. The order of sale was signed, not during the term (now session) of the superior court in Haywood County, but by the judge holding the courts of the twentieth district (which includes Haywood County), at Sylva, in Jackson County, in said district. The order of sale could not, therefore, be held valid. Lide v. Wells, 190 N.C. 37, 128 S.E. 477 (1925).

Effect of Invalid Decree for Sale and Reinvestment. — In an action brought under the provisions of this section, to sell certain lands devised to E for life with a contingent remainder to her children, it appeared that to further a scheme to erect a hotel on one of the lots, the court had decreed the sale of certain other of the lands and had appointed a commissioner to act in furtherance of its object. The lands were sold and the proceeds applied to the building of the hotel, but the funds being only sufficient to erect the skeleton work of the hotel, other of the lands were decreed by the court to be sold, and their proceeds to be likewise applied; these would not be sufficient for the purpose, and when erected the hotel would not be a desirable investment, especially in the unfurnished condition in which it then would be left. It was held: (1) That the decree for the further sale and reinvestment was void, not meeting the statutory requirement that the interests involved should be properly safeguarded; (2) that the court was without authority to order an investment or reinvestment of funds not then available, but depending upon the outcome of future sales of the land, and of this, notice was implied to third persons; (3) that the purchasers at the sale of the land derived to a clear title thereto; (4) that the commissioner came under no personal liability to the contractor or materialmen of the hotel building; (5) that endorsers of a note made to procure money for building the hotel had no claim on the hotel lot; (6) that the commissioner should sell the hotel lot and report to the court, and that the proceeds be held for the benefit of the devisees to the extent of the value of the lots and the costs of improvements thereon free from the claims of materialmen, etc. Smith v. Miller, 151 N.C. 620, 66 S.E. 671, petition for rehearing dismissed, 152 N.C. 314, 67 S.E. 746 (1910).

Mortgage for Permanent Improvements Held Improper. — The locus in quo was devised to testator's daughter for life with limitation over to the daughter's children. The daughter and her husband expended large sums in making permanent improvements upon the property, and instituted this proceeding against their children, in esse or which might thereafter be born, seeking to have a mortgage in the sum of $20,900 placed on the property to refinance an existing mortgage on the property in the sum of $10,000, and also unsecured notes executed by the life tenant representing a part of the moneys used in making said improvements. It was held that since the remaindermen were in no way liable for any sums expended by the life tenant in making permanent improvements, the finding by the court that the execution of the mortgage to refinance the indebtedness would materially enhance the interest of the remaindermen was erroneous, and judgment directing the execution of the mortgage to refinance the indebtedness should be reversed. Hall v. Hall, 219 N.C. 805, 15 S.E.2d 273 (1941).

§ 41-11.1. Sale, lease or mortgage of property held by a "class," where membership may be increased by persons not in esse.

(a) Wherever there is a gift, devise, bequest, transfer or conveyance of a vested estate or interest in real or personal property, or both, to persons described as a class, and at the effective date thereof, one or more members of the class are in esse, and there is a possibility in law that the membership of the class may later be increased by one or more members not then in esse, a special proceeding may be instituted in the superior court for the sale, lease or mortgage of such real or personal property, or both, as provided in this section.

(b) All petitions filed under this section wherein an order is sought for the sale, lease or mortgage of real property, or of both real and personal property, shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which all or any part of the real property is situated. If the order sought is for sale, lease or mortgage of personal property, the petition may be filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which any or all of such personal estate is situated.

(c) All members of the class in esse shall be parties to the proceeding, and where any of such members are under legal disability, their duly appointed general guardians or their guardians ad litem shall be made parties. The clerk of the superior court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the interests of the possible members of the class not in esse, and such guardian ad litem shall be a party to the proceeding.

(d) Upon a finding by the clerk of the superior court that the interests of all members of the class, both those in esse and those not in esse, would be materially promoted by a sale, lease or mortgage of any such property, he shall enter an order that the sale, lease or mortgage be made, and shall appoint a trustee to make such sale, lease or mortgage, in such manner and on such terms as the clerk may find to be most advantageous to the interests of the members of the class, both those in esse and those not in esse; but no sale, lease or mortgage shall be made, or shall be valid, until approved and confirmed by the resident judge of the district, or the judge holding the courts of the district. As a condition precedent to receiving the proceeds of the sale, lease or mortgage, the trustee shall be bonded in the same manner as a guardian for minors.

(e) In the event of a sale of any such property, the proceeds of sale shall be owned in the identical manner as the property was owned immediately prior to the sale; provided,

(1) The trustee appointed by the clerk as provided above may hold, manage, invest and reinvest said proceeds for the benefit of all members of the class, both those in esse and those not in esse, until the occurrence of the event which will finally determine the identity of all members of the class; all such investments and reinvestments shall be made in accordance with the laws of North Carolina relating to the investment of funds held by guardians or minors; and all the provisions of G.S. 36-4, relating to the reduction in bonds of guardians or trustees upon investment in certain registered securities and the deposit of the securities with the clerk of the superior court, shall be applicable to the trustee appointed hereunder;

(2) The clerk by appropriate order, in lieu of holding, managing, investing and reinvesting the proceeds of sale, may pay or authorize the trustee to pay the entire amount of such proceeds to the living members of the class as they may be then constituted or to their duly appointed guardians, or to pay the ratable portion or portions of such proceeds to one or more of such living members or to their guardians; provided that, where the class would be closed by the death of the mother or mothers of the members of the class, said mother or mothers are living and have attained the age of 55, and upon the further condition that there be first filed with the clerk a bond conditioned upon the payment of the lawful share of any member of the class not then in esse, but who may thereafter come into being or otherwise become a member of the class, to such member or his guardian whenever he becomes a living member of the class. Such bond shall be payable to the State to the use of the additional members of the class and shall be either a cash bond or a premium bond executed by a surety company authorized to transact business in North Carolina. The penalty of such bond shall not be less than one and one fourth the amount of the proceeds of sale. Any bond filed hereunder shall be acknowledged before and approved by the clerk of the superior court.

(f) In the event the proceeds of sale shall be paid over to a trustee and invested by him as authorized above, the entire income actually received by the trustee from such investment shall be paid by said trustee periodically, and not less often than annually, in equal shares to the living members of the class as they shall be constituted at the time of each such payment, or to the duly appointed guardians of any such living members under legal disability.

(g) In the event the court orders a lease of the property, the proceeds from the lease shall be first used to defray the expenses, if any, of the upkeep and maintenance of the property, and the discharge of taxes, liens, charges and encumbrances thereon, and any remaining proceeds shall be paid over by the trustee in their entirety, not less often than annually, in equal shares to the living members of the class as they shall be constituted at the time of each such payment or to the duly appointed guardians of any such members under legal disability.

(h) Payments of income to the living members of the class as aforesaid shall constitute a full and final acquittance and disposition of the income so paid, it being the intent of this section that only the living members of the class (as they may be constituted at the time of each respective income payment) shall be entitled to the income which is the subject of the respective payment, and that possible members of the class not in esse shall not share in, or become entitled to the benefit of any income payment made prior to the time that such members are born and become living members of the class.

(i) In the event that there has been a sale of any of the property, and the proceeds of sale are being held, managed, invested and reinvested by a trustee as provided above, any member of the class who is of legal age and who is not otherwise under legal disability may sell, assign and transfer his entire right, title and interest (both as to principal and income) in the funds or investments so held by the trustee. Upon receiving written notice of such sale, assignment or transfer, the trustee shall recognize the purchaser, assignee and transferee as the lawful successor in all respects whatsoever to the right, title and interest (both as to principal and income) of the seller, assignor and transferor; but no such sale, transfer or assignment shall divest the trustee of his legal title in, or possession of, said funds or investments or (except as provided above) affect his administration of the trusts for which he was appointed.

(j) The court shall order a mortgage of the property only for one or more of the following purposes:

(1) To provide funds for the costs and expenses of court incurred in carrying out any of the provisions of this section;

(2) To provide funds for the necessary upkeep and maintenance of the property;

(3) To make reasonable improvements to the property;

(4) To pay off taxes, other existing liens, charges and encumbrances on the property.

(k) The mortgagee shall not be held responsible for the application of the funds secured or derived from the mortgage. As used in this section, references to mortgages shall also apply to deeds of trust executed for loan security purposes.

(l) Every trustee appointed pursuant to the provisions of this section shall file with the clerk of the superior court an inventory and annual accounts in the same manner as is now provided by law with respect to guardians.

(m) The superior court shall allow commissions to the trustee for his time and trouble in the effectuation of a sale, lease or mortgage, and in the investment and management of the proceeds, in the same manner and under the same rules and restrictions as allowances are made to executors, administrators, and collectors.

(n) Provided, however, this section shall not be applicable where the instrument creating the gift, devise, bequest, transfer or conveyance specifically directs, by means of the creation of a trust or otherwise, the manner in which the property shall be used or disposed of, or contains specific limitations, conditions or restrictions as to the use, form, investment, leasing, mortgage, or other disposition of the property.

(o) And provided further, this section shall not alter or affect in any way laws or legal principles heretofore, now, or hereafter existing relating to the determination of the nature, extent or vesting of estates or property interests, and of the persons entitled thereto. But where, under the laws and legal principles existing without regard to this section, a gift, devise, bequest, transfer or conveyance has the legal effect of being made to all members of a class, some of whom are in esse and some of whom are in posse, the procedures authorized hereby may be utilized for the purpose of promoting the best interests of all members of the class, and this section shall be liberally construed to effectuate this intent. The remedies and procedures herein specified shall not be exclusive, but shall be cumulative, in addition to, and without prejudice to, all other remedies and procedures, if any, which now exist or hereafter may exist either by virtue of statute, or by virtue of the inherent powers of any court of competent jurisdiction, or otherwise.

(p) The provisions of this section shall apply to gifts, devises, bequests, transfers, and conveyances made both before and after April 5, 1949. (1949, c. 811, s. 1; 1971, c. 641, s. 1; 1997-456, s. 27.)

§ 41-12. Sales or mortgages of contingent remainders validated.

In all cases where property has been conveyed by deed, or devised by will, upon contingent remainder, executory devise, or other limitations, where a judgment of a superior court has been rendered authorizing the sale or mortgaging, including execution of deeds of trust, of such property discharged of such contingent remainder, executory devise, or other limitations in actions or special proceedings where all persons in being who would have taken such property if the contingency had then happened were parties, such judgment shall be valid and binding upon the parties thereto and upon all other persons not then in being or whose estates had not been vested: Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to impair or destroy any vested right or estate. CASE NOTES

Constitutionality and Validity. — This section is a valid exercise of legislative power. Anderson v. Wilkins, 142 N.C. 154, 55 S.E. 272 (1906).

This section, rendering valid judgments authorizing the sale of lands wherein there are contingent remainders, is constitutional and valid. Bullock v. Planters Cotton-Seed Oil Co., 165 N.C. 63, 80 S.E. 972 (1914).

So long as the interest remains contingent only, the legislature may act, for a bare expectancy or any estate depending for its existence on the happening of an uncertain event is within its control, not being a vested right which is protected by constitutional guaranties. Anderson v. Wilkins, 142 N.C. 154, 55 S.E. 272 (1906).

Partition Sale Not Authorized. — This section does not authorize or validate a partition sale at the instance of a life tenant against vested remaindermen, who are not infrequently children. Ray v. Poole, 187 N.C. 749, 123 S.E. 5 (1924).

Application. — A testator devised certain lands to his wife during her widowhood or life, which, at her death, were to be equally divided between the children or "their heirs." The lands were sold in partition in 1904, during the lifetime of the widow, and the children were made parties. One of these children died in 1906, before the death of her mother (1909) and her children, the grandchildren of the testator, brought suit to recover their interests in the land devised, claiming they had a vested interest therein in 1904, and not being parties to the proceedings, were not estopped by the judgment in partition. It was held that the plaintiffs had a contingent interest in the lands at the time of the sale, and were precluded from claiming the lands under the Validating Act of 1905 (Revisal, s. 1591, now this section). Bullock v. Planters Cotton-Seed Oil Co., 165 N.C. 63, 80 S.E. 972 (1914).

§ 41-13. Freeholders in petition for special taxes defined.

In all cases where a petition by a specific number of freeholders is required as a condition precedent to ordering an election to provide for the assessment or levy of taxes upon realty, all residents of legal age owning realty for life or longer term, irrespective of sex, shall be deemed freeholders within the meaning of such requirement. (1915, c. 22; C.S., s. 1746.)

CASE NOTES

Former Law. — "Freeholders," used in Laws 1911, c. 135, s. 1, amending Revisal, s. 4115, as to who are required to sign the petition for the laying off special school districts and levying a tax therein, did not include females. Gill v. Board of Comm'rs, 160 N.C. 176, 76 S.E. 203 (1912).

Women Now Included. — In ascertaining the necessary number of resident freeholders for a petition in a proposed new school district, women freeholders must be counted, under the provisions of this section. Chitty v. Parker, 172 N.C. 126, 90 S.E. 17 (1916).

§ 41-14: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 2.

Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities.

Editor's Note. — Permission to include the Official Comments was granted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and The American Law Institute. It is believed that the Official Comments will prove of value to the practitioner in understanding and applying the text of this Chapter.

§ 41-15. Statutory rule against perpetuities.

(a) A nonvested property interest is invalid unless:

(1) When the interest is created, it is certain to vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then alive; or

(2) The interest either vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation.

(b) A general power of appointment not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent is invalid unless:

(1) When the power is created, the condition precedent is certain to be satisfied or become impossible to satisfy no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then alive; or

(2) The condition precedent either is satisfied or becomes impossible to satisfy within 90 years after its creation.

(c) A nongeneral power of appointment or a general testamentary power of appointment is invalid unless:

(1) When the power is created, it is certain to be irrevocably exercised or otherwise to terminate no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then alive; or

(2) The power is irrevocably exercised or otherwise terminates within 90 years after its creation.

(d) In determining whether a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment is valid under subdivision (a)(1), (b)(1), or (c)(1) of this section, the possibility that a child will be born to an individual after the individual's death is disregarded.

(e) If, in measuring a period from the creation of a trust or other property arrangement, language in a governing instrument:

(1) Seeks to disallow the vesting or termination of any interest or trust beyond,

(2) Seeks to postpone the vesting or termination of any interest or trust until, or

(3) Seeks to operate in effect in any similar fashion upon, the later of (i) the expiration of a period of time not exceeding 21 years after the death of the survivor of specified lives in being at the creation of the trust or other property arrangement or (ii) the expiration of a period of time that exceeds or might exceed 21 years after the death of the survivor of lives in being at the creation of the trust or other property arrangement, that language is inoperative to the extent it produces a period of time that exceeds 21 years after the death of the survivor of the specified lives. (1995, c. 190, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Common-Law Rule Against Perpetuities Superseded. As provided in Section 9, this Act supersedes the common-law Rule Against Perpetuities (Common-law Rule) in jurisdictions previously adhering to it (or repeals any statutory version or variation thereof previously in effect in the jurisdiction). The Common-law Rule (or the statutory version or variation thereof) is replaced by the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (Statutory Rule) set forth in this section and by the other provisions in this Act.

Subsidiary Doctrines Continue in Force Except to the Extent the Provisions of Act Conflict with Them. The courts in interpreting the Common-law Rule developed several subsidiary doctrines. In accordance with the general principle of statutory construction that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be construed narrowly, a subsidiary doctrine is superseded by this Act only to the extent the provisions of the Act conflict with it. A listing and discussion of such subsidiary doctrines, such as the constructional preference for validity, the all-or-nothing rule for class gifts, and the doctrine of infectious invalidity, appears later, in Part G of this Comment.

Application. Unless excluded by Section 4, the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (Statutory Rule) applies to nonvested property interests and to powers of appointment over property or property interests that are nongeneral powers, general testamentary powers, or general powers not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent.

The Statutory Rule does not apply to vested property interests (e.g., X's interest in Example (23) of this Comment) or to presently exercisable general powers of appointment (e.g., G's power in Example (19) of this Comment; G's power in Example (1) in the Comment to Section 2; A's power in Example (2) in the Comment to Section 2; X's power in Example (3) in the Comment to Section 2; A's noncumulative power of withdrawal in Example (4) in the Comment to Section 2).

A. GENERAL PURPOSE

Section 1 sets forth the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (Statutory Rule). As explained above, the Statutory Rule supersedes the Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities (Common-law Rule) or any statutory version or variation thereof.

The Common-law Rule's Validating and Invalidating Sides. The Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities is a rule of initial validity or invalidity. At common law, a nonvested property interest is either valid or invalid as of its creation. Like most rules of property law, the Common-law Rule has both a validating and an invalidating side. Both sides are derived from John Chipman Gray's formulation of the Common-law Rule:

> No [nonvested property] interest is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than 21 years after some life in being at the creation of the interest.

J. Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities § 201 (4th ed. 1942). From this formulation, the validating and invalidating sides of the Common-law Rule are derived as follows:

> Validating Side of the Common-law Rule. A nonvested property interest is valid when it is created (initially valid) if it is then certain to vest or terminate (fail to vest) — one or the other — no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then alive.
>
> Invalidating Side of the Common-law Rule. A nonvested property interest is invalid when it is created (initially invalid) if there is no such certainty.

Notice that the invalidating side focuses on a lack of certainty, which means that invalidity under the Common-law Rule is not dependent on actual post-creation events but only on possible post-creation events. Actual post-creation events are irrelevant, even those that are known at the time of the lawsuit. It is generally recognized that the invalidating side of the Common-law Rule is harsh because it can invalidate interests on the ground of possible post-creation events that are extremely unlikely to happen and that in actuality almost never do happen, if ever.

The Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities. The essential difference between the Common-law Rule and its statutory replacement is that the Statutory Rule preserves the Common-law Rule's overall policy of preventing property from being tied up in unreasonably long or even perpetual family trusts or other property arrangements, while eliminating the harsh potential of the Common-law Rule. The Statutory Rule achieves this result by codifying (in slightly revised form) the validating side of the Common-law Rule and modifying the invalidating side by adopting a wait-and-see element. Under the Statutory Rule, interests that would have been initially valid at common law continue to be initially valid, but interests that would have been initially invalid at common law are invalid only if they do not actually vest or terminate within the permissible vesting period set forth in Section 1(a)(2). Thus, the Uniform Act recasts the validating and invalidating sides of the Rule Against Perpetuities as follows:

> Validating Side of the Statutory Rule: A nonvested property interest is initially valid if, when it is created, it is then certain to vest or terminate (fail to vest) — one or the other — no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then alive. The validity of a nonvested property interest that is not initially valid is in abeyance. Such an interest is valid if it vests within the permissible vesting period after its creation.
> Invalidating Side of the Statutory Rule: A nonvested property interest that is not initially valid becomes invalid (and subject to reformation under Section 3) if it neither vests nor terminates within the permissible vesting period after its creation.

As indicated, this modification of the invalidating side of the Common-law Rule is generally known as the wait-and-see method of perpetuity reform. The wait-and-see method of perpetuity reform was approved by the American Law Institute as part of the Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) §§ 1.1-1.6 (1983). For a discussion of the various methods of perpetuity reform, including the wait-and-see method and the Restatement (Second)'s version of wait-and-see, see Waggoner, Perpetuity Reform, 81 Mich.L.Rev. 1718 (1983).

B. SECTION 1(a)(1): NONVESTED PROPERTY INTERESTS THAT ARE INITIALLY VALID

Nonvested Property Interest. Section 1(a) sets forth the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities with respect to nonvested property interests. A nonvested property interest (also called a contingent property interest) is a future interest in property that is subject to an unsatisfied condition precedent. In the case of a class gift, the interests of all the unborn members of the class are nonvested because they are subject to the unsatisfied condition precedent of being born. At common law, the interests of all potential class members must be valid or the class gift is invalid. As pointed out in more detail later in this Comment, this so-called all-or-nothing rule with respect to class gifts is not superseded by this Act, and so remains in effect under the Statutory Rule. Consequently, all class gifts that are subject to open are to be regarded as nonvested property interests for the purposes of this Act.

Section 1(a)(1) Codifies the Validating Side of the Common-law Rule. The validating side of the Common-law Rule is codified in Section 1(a)(1) (and, with respect to powers of appointment, in Sections 1(b)(1) and 1(c)(1)).

A nonvested property interest that satisfies the requirement of Section 1(a)(1) is initially valid. That is, it is valid as of the time of its creation. There is no need to subject such an interest to the waiting period set forth in Section 1(a)(2), nor would it be desirable to do so.

For a nonvested property interest to be valid as of the time of its creation under Section 1(a)(1), there must then be a certainty that the interest will either vest or terminate — an interest terminates when vesting becomes impossible — no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then alive. To satisfy this requirement, it must be established that there is no possible chain of events that might arise after the interest was created that would allow the interest to vest or terminate after the expiration of the 21-year period following the death of an individual in being at the creation of the interest. Consequently, initial validity under Section 1(a)(1) can be established only if there is an individual for whom there is a causal connection between the individual's death and the interest's vesting or terminating no later than 21 years thereafter. The individual described in subsection (a)(1) (and subsections (b)(1) and (c)(1) as well) is often referred to as the "validating life," the term used throughout the Comments to this Act.

Determining Whether There is a Validating Life. The process for determining whether a validating life exists is to postulate the death of each individual connected in some way to the transaction, and ask the question: Is there with respect to this individual an invalidating chain of possible events? If one individual can be found for whom the answer is No, that individual can serve as the validating life. As to that individual there will be the requisite causal connection between his or her death and the questioned interest's vesting or terminating no later than 21 years thereafter.

In searching for a validating life, only individuals who are connected in some way to the transaction need to be considered, for they are the only ones who have a chance of supplying the requisite causal connection. Such individuals vary from situation to situation, but typically include the beneficiaries of the disposition, including the taker or takers of the nonvested property interest, and individuals related to them by blood or adoption, especially in the ascending and descending lines. There is no point in even considering the life of an individual unconnected to the transaction — an individual from the world at large who happens to be in being at the creation of the interest. No such individual can be a validating life because there will be an invalidating chain of possible events as to every unconnected individual who might be proposed: Any such individual can immediately die after the creation of the nonvested property interest without causing any acceleration of the interest's vesting or termination. (The life expectancy of any unconnected individual, or even the probability that one of a number of new-born babies will live a long life, is irrelevant.)

Example (1) — Parent of Devisees as the Validating Life. G devised property "to A for life, remainder to A's children who attain 21." G was survived by his son (A), by his daughter (B), by A's wife (W), and by A's two children (X and Y).

The nonvested property interest in favor of A's children who reach 21 satisfies Section 1(a)(1)'s requirement, and the interest is initially valid. When the interest was created (at G's death), the interest was then certain to vest or terminate no later than 21 years after A's death.

The process by which A is determined to be the validating life is one of testing various candidates to see if any of them have the requisite causal connection. As noted above, no one from the world at large can have the requisite causal connection, and so such individuals are disregarded. Once the inquiry is narrowed to the appropriate candidates, the first possible validating life that comes to mind is A, who does in fact fulfill the requirement: Since A's death cuts off the possibility of any more children being born to him, it is impossible, no matter when A dies, for any of A's children to be alive and under the age of 21 beyond 21 years after A's death. (See the discussion of subsection (d), below.)

A is therefore the validating life for the nonvested property interest in favor of A's children who attain 21. None of the other individuals who is connected to this transaction could serve as the validating life because an invalidating chain of possible post-creation events exists as to each one of them. The other individuals who might be considered include W, X, Y, and B. In the case of W, an invalidating chain of events is that she might predecease A, A might remarry and have a child by his new wife, and such child might be alive and under the age of 21 beyond the 21-year period following W's death. With respect to X and Y, an invalidating chain of events is that they might predecease A, A might later have another child, and that child might be alive and under 21 beyond the 21-year period following the death of the survivor of X and Y. As to B, she suffers from the same invalidating chain of events as exists with respect to X and Y. The fact that none of these other individuals can serve as the validating life is of no consequence, however, because only one such individual is required for the validity of a nonvested interest to be established, and that individual is A.

The Rule of Subsection (d). The rule established in subsection (d) plays a significant role in the search for a validating life. Subsection (d) declares that the possibility that a child will be born to an individual after the individual's death is to be disregarded. It is important to note that this rule applies only for the purposes of determining the validity of an interest (or power of appointment) under paragraph (1) of subsection (a), (b), or (c). The rule of subsection (d) does not apply, for example, to questions such as whether or not a child who is born to an individual after the individual's death qualifies as a taker of a beneficial interest — as a member of a class or otherwise. Neither subsection (d), nor any other provision of this Act, supersedes the widely accepted common-law principle, sometimes codified, that a child in gestation (a child sometimes described as a child en ventre sa mere) who is later born alive is regarded as alive at the commencement of gestation.

The limited purpose of subsection (d) is to solve a perpetuity problem caused by advances in medical science. The problem is illustrated by a case such as Example (1), above — "to A for life, remainder to A's children who reach 21." When the Common-law Rule was developing, the possibility was recognized, strictly speaking, that one or more of A's children might reach 21 more than 21 years after A's death. The possibility existed because A's wife (who might not be a life in being) might be pregnant when A died. If she was, and if the child was born viable a few months after A's death, the child could not reach his or her 21st birthday within 21 years after A's death. The device then invented to validate the interest of A's children was to "extend" the allowable perpetuity period by tacking on a period of gestation, if needed. As a result, the common-law perpetuity period was comprised of three components: (1) a life in being (2) plus 21 years (3) plus a period of gestation, when needed. Today, thanks to sperm banks, frozen embryos, and even the possibility of artificially maintaining the body functions of deceased pregnant women long enough to develop the fetus to viability (see Detroit Free Press, July 31, 1986, at 5A; Ann Arbor News, Oct. 30, 1978, at C5 (AP story); N.Y. Times, Dec. 6, 1977, at 30; N.Y. Times, Dec. 2, 1977, at B16) — advances in medical science unanticipated when the Common-law Rule was in its developmental stages — having a pregnant wife at death is no longer the only way of having children after death. These medical developments, and undoubtedly others to come, make the mere addition of a period of gestation inadequate as a device to confer initial validity under Section 1(a)(1) on the interest of A's children in the above example. The rule of subsection (d), however, does insure the initial validity of the children's interest. Disregarding the possibility that children of A will be born after his death allows A to be the validating life. None of his children, under this assumption, can reach 21 more than 21 years after his death.

Note that subsection (d) subsumes not only the case of children conceived after death, but also the more conventional case of children in gestation at death. With subsection (d) in place, the third component of the common-law perpetuity period is unnecessary and has been jettisoned. The perpetuity period recognized in paragraph (1) of subsections (a), (b), and (c) has only two components: (1) a life in being (2) plus 21 years.

As to the legal status of conceived-after-death children, that question has not yet been resolved. For example, if in Example (1) it in fact turns out that A does leave sperm on deposit at a sperm bank and if in fact A's wife does become pregnant as a result of artificial insemination, the child or children produced thereby might not be included at all in the class gift. Cf. Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) Introductory Note to Ch. 26 at pp. 2-3 (Tent. Draft No. 9, 1986). Without trying to predict how that matter will be settled in the future, the best way to handle the problem from the perpetuity perspective is subsection (d)'s rule requiring the possibility of post-death children to be disregarded.

Recipients as Their Own Validating Lives. It is well established at common law that, in appropriate cases, the recipient of an interest can be his or her own validating life. See, e.g., Rand v. Bank of California, 236 Or. 619, 388 P.2d 437 (1964). Given the right circumstances, this principle can validate interests that are contingent on the recipient's reaching an age in excess of 21, or are contingent on the recipient's surviving a particular point in time that is or might turn out to be in excess of 21 years after the interest was created or after the death of a person in being at the date of creation.

Example (2) — Devisees as Their Own Validating Lives. G devised real property "to A's children who attain 25." A predeceased G. At G's death, A had three living children, all of whom were under 25.

The nonvested property interest in favor of A's children who attain 25 is validated by Section 1(a)(1). Under subsection (d), the possibility that A will have a child born to him after his death (and since A predeceased G, after G's death) must be disregarded. Consequently, even if A's wife survived G, and even if she was pregnant at G's death or even if A had deposited sperm in a sperm bank prior to his death, it must be assumed that all of A's children are in being at G's death. A's children are, therefore, their own validating lives. (Note that subsection (d) requires that in determining whether an individual is a validating life, the possibility that a child will be born to "an" individual after the individual's death must be disregarded. The validating life and the individual whose having a post-death child is disregarded need not be the same individual.) Each one of A's children, all of whom under subsection (d) are regarded as alive at G's death, will either reach the age of 25 or fail to do so within his or her own lifetime. To say this another way, it is certain to be known no later than at the time of the death of each child whether or not that child survived to the required age.

Validating Life Can Be Survivor of Group. In appropriate cases, the validating life need not be individualized at first. Rather the validating life can initially (i.e., when the interest was created) be the unidentified survivor of a group of individuals. It is common in such cases to say that the members of the group are the validating lives, but the true meaning of the statement is that the validating life is the member of the group who turns out to live the longest. As the court said in Skatterwood v. Edge, 1 Salk. 229, 91 Eng. Rep. 203 (K.B. 1697), "for let the lives be never so many, there must be a survivor, and so it is but the length of that life; for Twisden used to say, the candles were all lighted at once."

Example (3) — Case of Validating Life Being the Survivor of a Group. G devised real property "to such of my grandchildren as attain 21." Some of G's children are living at G's death.

The nonvested property interest in favor of G's grandchildren who attain 21 is valid under Section 1(a)(1). The validating life is that one of G's children who turns out to live the longest. Since under subsection (d), it must be assumed that none of G's children will have post-death children, it is regarded as impossible for any of G's grandchildren to be alive and under 21 beyond the 21-year period following the death of G's last surviving child.

Example (4) — Sperm Bank Case. G devised property in trust, directing the income to be paid to G's children for the life of the survivor, then to G's grandchildren for the life of the survivor, and on the death of G's last surviving grandchild, to pay the corpus to G's great-grandchildren then living. G's children all predeceased him, but several grandchildren were living at G's death. One of G's predeceased children (his son, A) had deposited sperm in a sperm bank. A's widow was living at G's death.

The nonvested property interest in favor of G's great-grandchildren is valid under Section 1(a)(1). The validating life is the last surviving grandchild among the grandchildren living at G's death. Under subsection (d), the possibility that A will have a child conceived after G's death must be disregarded. Note that subsection (d) requires that in determining whether an individual is a validating life, the possibility that a child will be born to "an" individual after the individual's death is disregarded. The validating life and the individual whose having a post-death child is disregarded need not be the same individual. Thus in this example, by disregarding the possibility that A will have a conceived-after-death child, G's last surviving grandchild becomes the validating life because G's last surviving grandchild is deemed to have been alive at G's death, when the great-grandchildren's interests were created.

Example (5) — Child in Gestation Case. G devised property in trust, to pay the income equally among G's living children; on the death of G's last surviving child, to accumulate the income for 21 years; on the 21st anniversary of the death of G's last surviving child, to pay the corpus and accumulated income to G's then-living descendants, per stirpes; if none, to X Charity. At G's death his child (A) was 6 years old, and G's wife (W) was pregnant. After G's death, W gave birth to their second child (B).

The nonvested property interests in favor of G's descendants and in favor of X Charity are valid under Section 1(a)(1). The validating life is A. Under subsection (d), the possibility that a child will be born to an individual after the individual's death must be disregarded for the purposes of determining validity under Section 1(a)(1). Consequently, the possibility that a child will be born to G after his death must be disregarded; and the possibility that a child will be born to any of G's descendants after their deaths must also be disregarded. Note, however, that the rule of subsection (d) does not apply to the question of the entitlement of an after-born child to take a beneficial interest in the trust. The common-law rule (sometimes codified) that a child in gestation is treated as alive, if the child is subsequently born viable, applies to this question. Thus, subsection (d) does not prevent B from being an income beneficiary under G's trust, nor does it prevent a descendant in gestation on the 21st anniversary of the death of G's last surviving child from being a member of the class of G's "then-living descendants," as long as such descendant has no then-living ancestor who takes instead.

Different Validating Lives Can and in Some Cases Must Be Used. Dispositions of property sometimes create more than one nonvested property interest. In such cases, the validity of each interest is treated individually. A validating life that validates one interest might or might not validate the other interests. Since it is not necessary that the same validating life be used for all interests created by a disposition, the search for a validating life for each of the other interests must be undertaken separately.

Perpetuity Saving Clauses and Similar Provisions. Knowledgeable lawyers almost routinely insert perpetuity saving clauses into instruments they draft. Saving clauses contain two components, the first of which is the perpetuity-period component. This component typically requires the trust or other arrangement to terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of a group of individuals designated therein by name or class. (The lives of corporations, animals, or sequoia trees cannot be used.) The second component of saving clauses is the gift-over component. This component expressly creates a gift over that is guaranteed to vest at the termination of the period set forth in the perpetuity-period component, but only if the trust or other arrangement has not terminated earlier in accordance with its other terms.

It is important to note that regardless of what group of individuals is designated in the perpetuity-period component of a saving clause, the surviving member of the group is not necessarily the individual who would be the validating life for the nonvested property interest or power of appointment in the absence of the saving clause. Without the saving clause, one or more interests or powers may in fact fail to satisfy the requirement of paragraph (1) of subsections (a), (b), or (c) for initial validity. By being designated in the saving clause, however, the survivor of the group becomes the validating life for all interests and powers in the trust or other arrangement: The saving clause confers on the last surviving member of the designated group the requisite causal connection between his or her death and the impossibility of any interest or power in the trust or other arrangement remaining in existence beyond the 21-year period following such individual's death.

Example (6) — Valid Saving Clause Case. A testamentary trust directs income to be paid to the testator's children for the life of the survivor, then to the testator's grandchildren for the life of the survivor, corpus on the death of the testator's last living grandchild to such of the testator's descendants as the last living grandchild shall by will appoint; in default of appointment, to the testator's then-living descendants, per stirpes. A saving clause in the will terminates the trust, if it has not previously terminated, 21 years after the death of the testator's last surviving descendant who was living at the testator's death. The testator was survived by children. In the absence of the saving clause, the nongeneral power of appointment in the last living grandchild and the nonvested property interest in the gift-in-default clause in favor of the testator's descendants fail the test of Sections 1(a)(1) and 1(c)(1) for initial validity. That is, were it not for the saving clause, there is no validating life. However, the surviving member of the designated group becomes the validating life, so that the saving clause does confer initial validity on the nongeneral power of appointment and on the nonvested property interest under Sections 1(a)(1) and 1(c)(1).

If the governing instrument designates a group of individuals that would cause it to be impracticable to determine the death of the survivor, the common-law courts have developed the doctrine that the validity of the nonvested property interest or power of appointment is determined as if the provision in the governing instrument did not exist. See cases cited in Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) (1983), Reporter's Note No. 3 at p. 45. See also Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 1.3(1) Comment a (1983); Restatement of Property § 374 and Comment l (1944); 6 American Law of Property § 24.13 (A. Casner ed. 1952); 5A R. Powell, The Law of Real Property Para. 766[5] (1985); L. Simes & A. Smith, The Law of Future Interests § 1223 (2d ed. 1956). If, for example, the designated group in Example (6) were the residents of X City (or the members of Y Country Club) living at the time of the testator's death, the saving clause would not validate the power of appointment or the nonvested property interest. Instead, the validity of the power of appointment and the nonvested property interest would be determined as if the provision in the governing instrument did not exist. Since without the saving clause the power of appointment and the nonvested property interest would fail to satisfy the requirements of Sections 1(a)(1) and 1(c)(1) for initial validity, their validity would be governed by Sections 1(a)(2) and 1(c)(2).

The application of the above common-law doctrine, which is not superseded by this Act and so remains in full force, is not limited to saving clauses. It also applies to trusts or other arrangements where the period thereof is directly linked to the life of the survivor of a designated group of individuals. An example is a trust to pay the income to the grantor's descendants from time to time living, per stirpes, for the period of the life of the survivor of a designated group of individuals living when the nonvested property interest or power of appointment in question was created, plus the 21-year period following the survivor's death; at the end of the 21-year period, the corpus is to be divided among the grantor's then-living descendants, per stirpes, and if none, to the XYZ Charity. If the group of individuals so designated is such that it would be impracticable to determine the death of the survivor, the validity of the disposition is determined as if the provision in the governing instrument did not exist. The term of the trust is therefore governed by the 90- year permissible vesting period of paragraph (2) of subsections (a), (b), or (c) of the Statutory Rule.

C. SECTION 1(a)(2): WAIT-AND-SEE — NONVESTED PROPERTY INTERESTS WHOSE VALIDITY IS INITIALLY IN ABEYANCE

Unlike the Common-Law Rule, the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities does not automatically invalidate nonvested property interests for which there is no validating life. A nonvested property interest that does not meet the requirements for validity under Section 1(a)(1) might still be valid under the wait-and-see provisions of Section 1(a)(2). Such an interest is invalid under Section 1(a)(2) only if in actuality it does not vest (or terminate) during the permissible vesting period. Such an interest becomes invalid, in other words, only if it is still in existence and nonvested when the permissible vesting period expires.

1. The 90-Year Permissible Vesting Period

Since a wait-and-see rule against perpetuities, unlike the Common-law Rule, makes validity or invalidity turn on actual post-creation events, it requires that an actual period of time be measured off during which the contingencies attached to an interest are allowed to work themselves out to a final resolution. The Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities establishes a permissible vesting period of 90 years. Nonvested property interests that have neither vested nor terminated at the expiration of the 90-year permissible vesting period become invalid.

As explained in the Prefatory Note, the permissible vesting period of 90 years is not an arbitrarily selected period of time. On the contrary, the 90-year period represents a reasonable approximation of — a proxy for — the period of time that would, on average, be produced through the use of an actual set of measuring lives identified by statute and then adding the traditional 21-year tack-on period after the death of the survivor.

2. Technical Violations of the Common-Law Rule

One of the harsh aspects of the invalidating side of the Common-Law Rule, against which the adoption of the wait-and-see element in Section 1(a)(2) is designed to relieve, is that nonvested property interests at common law are invalid even though the invalidating chain of possible events almost certainly will not happen. In such cases, the violation of the Common-law Rule could be said to be merely technical. Nevertheless, at common law, the nonvested property interest is invalid.

Cases of technical violation fall generally into discrete categories, identified and named by Professor Leach in Perpetuities in a Nutshell, 51 Harv.L.Rev. 638 (1938), as the fertile octogenarian, the administrative contingency, and the unborn widow. The following three examples illustrate how Section 1(a)(2) affects these categories.

Example (7) — Fertile Octogenarian Case. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the net income therefrom "to A for life, then to A's children for the life of the survivor, and upon the death of A's last surviving child to pay the corpus of the trust to A's grandchildren." G was survived by A (a female who had passed menopause) and by A's two adult children (X and Y).

The remainder interest in favor of G's grandchildren would be invalid at common law, and consequently is not validated by Section 1(a)(1). There is no validating life because, under the common law's conclusive presumption of lifetime fertility, which is not superseded by this Act (see Part H, below), A might have a third child (Z), conceived and born after G's death, who will have a child conceived and born more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of A, X, and Y.

Under Section 1(a)(2), however, the remote possibility of the occurrence of this chain of events does not invalidate the grandchildren's interest. The interest becomes invalid only if it remains in existence and nonvested 90 years after G's death. The chance that the grandchildren's remainder interest will become invalid under Section 1(a)(2) is negligible.

Example (8) — Administrative Contingency Case. G devised property "to such of my grandchildren, born before or after my death, as may be living upon final distribution of my estate." G was survived by children and grandchildren.

The remainder interest in favor of A's grandchildren would be invalid at common law, and consequently is not validated by Section 1(a)(1). The final distribution of G's estate might not occur within 21 years of G's death, and after G's death grandchildren might be conceived and born who might survive or fail to survive the final distribution of G's estate more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of G's children and grandchildren who were living at G's death.

Under Section 1(a)(2), however, the remote possibility of the occurrence of this chain of events does not invalidate the grandchildren's remainder interest. The interest becomes invalid only if it remains in existence and nonvested 90 years after G's death. Since it is almost certain that the final distribution of G's estate will occur well within this 90-year period, the chance that the grandchildren's interest will be invalid is negligible.

Example (9) — Unborn Widow Case. G devised property in trust, the income to be paid "to my son A for life, then to A's spouse for her life, and upon the death of the survivor of A and his spouse, the corpus to be delivered to A's then living descendants." G was survived by A, by A's wife (W), and by their adult children (X and Y).

Unless the interest in favor of A's "spouse" is construed to refer only to W, rather than to whoever is A's spouse when he dies, if anyone, the remainder interest in favor of A's descendants would be invalid at common law, and consequently is not validated by Section 1(a)(1). There is no validating life because A's spouse might not be W; A's spouse might be someone who was conceived and born after G's death; she might outlive the death of the survivor of A, W, X, and Y by more than 21 years; and descendants of A might be born or die before the death of A's spouse but after the 21-year period following the death of the survivor of A, W, X, and Y.

Under Section 1(a)(2), however, the remote possibility of the occurrence of this chain of events does not invalidate the descendants' remainder interest. The interest becomes invalid only if it remains in existence and nonvested 90 years after G's death. The chance that the descendants' remainder interest will become invalid under the Statutory Rule is small.

Age Contingencies in Excess of 21. Another category of technical violation of the Common-Law Rule arises in cases of age contingencies in excess of 21 where the takers cannot be their own validating lives (unlike Example (2), above). The violation of the Common-law Rule falls into the technical category because the insertion of a saving clause would in almost all cases allow the disposition to be carried out as written. In effect, the Statutory Rule operates like the perpetuity-period component of a saving clause.

Example (10) — Age Contingency in Excess of 21 Case. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, then to A's children; the corpus of the trust is to be equally divided among A's children who reach the age of 30." G was survived by A, by A's spouse (H), and by A's two children (X and Y), both of whom were under the age of 30 when G died.

The remainder interest in favor of A's children who reach 30 is a class gift. At common law, the interests of all potential class members must be valid or the class gift is totally invalid. Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, 35 Eng. Rep. 979 (Ch. 1817). This Act does not supersede the all-or-nothing rule for class gifts (see Part G, below), and so the all-or-nothing rule continues to apply under this Act. Although X and Y will either reach 30 or die under 30 within their own lifetimes, there is at G's death the possibility that A will have an afterborn child (Z) who will reach 30 or die under 30 more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of A, H, X, and Y. The class gift would be invalid at common law and consequently is not validated by Section 1(a)(1).

Under Section 1(a)(2), however, the possibility of the occurrence of this chain of events does not invalidate the children's remainder interest. The interest becomes invalid only if an interest of a class member remains nonvested 90 years after G's death.

Although unlikely, suppose that at A's death Z's age is such that he could be alive and under the age of 30 at the expiration of the allowable waiting period. Suppose further that at A's death X or Y or both is over the age of 30. The court, upon the petition of an interested person, must under Section 3 reform G's disposition. See Example (3) in the Comment to Section 3.

D. SECTIONS 1(b)(1) AND 1(c)(1): POWERS OF APPOINTMENT THAT ARE INITIALLY VALID

Powers of Appointment. Sections 1(b) and 1(c) set forth the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities with respect to powers of appointment. A power of appointment is the authority, other than as an incident of the beneficial ownership of property, to designate recipients of beneficial interests in or powers of appointment over property. Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 11.1 (1986). The property or property interest subject to a power of appointment is called the "appointive property."

The various persons connected to a power of appointment are identified by a special terminology. The "donor" is the person who created the power of appointment. The "donee" is the person who holds the power of appointment, i.e., the powerholder. The "objects" are the persons to whom an appointment can be made. The "appointees" are the persons to whom an appointment has been made. The "takers in default" are the persons whose property interests are subject to being defeated by the exercise of the power of appointment and who take the property to the extent the power is not effectively exercised. Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 11.2 (1986).

A power of appointment is "general" if it is exercisable in favor of the donee of the power, the donee's creditors, the donee's estate, or the creditors of the donee's estate. A power of appointment that is not general is a "nongeneral" power of appointment. Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 11.4 (1986).

A power of appointment is "presently exercisable" if, at the time in question, the donee can by an exercise of the power create an interest in or a power of appointment over the appointive property. Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 11.5 (1986). A power of appointment is "testamentary" if the donee can exercise it only in the donee's will. Restatement of Property § 321 (1940). A power of appointment is "not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent" if the only impediment to its present exercisability is a condition precedent, i.e., the occurrence of some uncertain event. Since a power of appointment terminates on the donee's death, a deferral of a power's present exercisability until a future time (even a time certain) imposes a condition precedent that the donee be alive at that future time.

A power of appointment is a "fiduciary" power if it is held by a fiduciary and is exercisable by the fiduciary in a fiduciary capacity. A power of appointment that is exercisable in an individual capacity is a "nonfiduciary" power. As used in this Act, the term "power of appointment" refers to "fiduciary" and to "nonfiduciary" powers, unless the context indicates otherwise.

Although Gray's formulation of the Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities does not speak directly of powers of appointment, the Common-law Rule is applicable to powers of appointment (other than presently exercisable general powers of appointment). The principle of subsections (b)(1) and (c)(1) is that a power of appointment that satisfies the Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities is valid under the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, and consequently it can be validly exercised, without being subjected to a waiting period during which the power's validity is in abeyance.

Two different tests for validity are employed at common law, depending on what type of power is at issue. In the case of a nongeneral power (whether or not presently exercisable) and in the case of a general testamentary power, the power is initially valid if, when the power was created, it is certain that the latest possible time that the power can be exercised is no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then in being. In the case of a general power not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent, the power is initially valid if it is then certain that the condition precedent to its exercise will either be satisfied or become impossible to satisfy no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then in being. Subsections (b)(1) and (c)(1) codify these rules. Under either test, initial validity depends on the existence of a validating life. The procedure for determining whether a validating life exists is essentially the same procedure explained in Part B, above, pertaining to nonvested property interests.

Example (11) — Initially Valid General Testamentary Power Case. G devised property "to A for life, remainder to such persons, including A's estate or the creditors of A's estate, as A shall by will appoint." G was survived by his daughter (A).

A's power, which is a general testamentary power, is valid as of its creation under Section 1(c)(1). The test is whether or not the power can be exercised beyond 21 years after the death of an individual in being when the power was created (G's death). Since A's power cannot be exercised after A's death, the validating life is A, who was in being at G's death.

Example (12) — Initially Valid Nongeneral Power Case. G devised property "to A for life, remainder to such of A's descendants as A shall appoint." G was survived by his daughter (A).

A's power, which is a nongeneral power, is valid as of its creation under Section 1(c)(1). The validating life is A; the analysis leading to validity is the same as applied in Example (11), above.

Example (13) — Case of Initially Valid General Power Not Presently Exercisable Because of a Condition Precedent. G devised property "to A for life, then to A's first born child for life, then to such persons, including A's first born child or such child's estate or creditors, as A's first born child shall appoint." G was survived by his daughter (A), who was then childless.

The power in A's first born child, which is a general power not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent, is valid as of its creation under Section 1(b)(1). The power is subject to a condition precedent — that A have a child — but this is a contingency that under subsection (d) is deemed certain to be resolved one way or the other within A's lifetime. A is therefore the validating life: The power cannot remain subject to the condition precedent after A's death. Note that the latest possible time that the power can be exercised is at the death of A's first born child, which might occur beyond 21 years after the death of A (and anyone else who was alive when G died). Consequently, if the power conferred on A's first born child had been a nongeneral power or a general testamentary power, the power could not be validated by Section

1(c)(1); instead, the power's validity would be governed by Section 1(c)(2).

E. SECTIONS 1(b)(2) AND 1(c)(2): WAIT-AND-SEE — POWERS OF APPOINTMENT WHOSE VALIDITY IS INITIALLY IN ABEYANCE

Under the Common-law Rule, a general power not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent is invalid as of the time of its creation if the condition might neither be satisfied nor become impossible to satisfy within a life in being plus 21 years. A nongeneral power (whether or not presently exercisable) or a general testamentary power is invalid as of the time of its creation if it might not terminate (by irrevocable exercise or otherwise) within a life in being plus 21 years.

Sections 1(b)(2) and 1(c)(2), by adopting the wait-and-see method of perpetuity reform, shift the ground of invalidity from possible to actual post-creation events. Under these subsections, a power of appointment that would have violated the Common-law Rule, and therefore fails the subsection (b)(1) or (c)(1) tests for initial validity, is nevertheless not invalid as of the time of its creation. Instead, its validity is in abeyance. A general power not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent is invalid only if in actuality the condition neither is satisfied nor becomes impossible to satisfy within the 90-year permissible vesting period. A nongeneral power or a general testamentary power is invalid only if in actuality it does not terminate (by irrevocable exercise or otherwise) within the 90-year permissible period.

Example (14) — General Testamentary Power Case. G devised property "to A for life, then to A's first born child for life, then to such persons, including the estate or the creditors of the estate of A's first born child, as A's first born child shall by will appoint; in default of appointment, to G's grandchildren in equal shares." G was survived by his daughter (A), who was then childless, and by his son (B), who had two children (X and Y).

Since the general testamentary power conferred on A's first born child fails the test of Section 1(c)(1) for initial validity, its validity is governed by Section 1(c)(2). If A has a child, such child's death must occur within 90 years of G's death for any provision in the child's will purporting to exercise the power to be valid.

Example (15) — Nongeneral Power Case. G devised property "to A for life, then to A's first born child for life, then to such of G's grandchildren as A's first born child shall appoint; in default of appointment, to the children of G's late nephew, Q." G was survived by his daughter (A), who was then childless, by his son (B), who had two children (X and Y), and by Q's two children (R and S).

Since the nongeneral power conferred on A's first born child fails the test of Section 1(c)(1) for initial validity, its validity is governed by Section 1(c)(2). If A has a child, such child must exercise the power within 90 years after G's death or the power becomes invalid.

Example (16) — General Power Not Presently Exercisable Because of a Condition Precedent. G devised property "to A for life, then to A's first born child for life, then to such persons, including A's first born child or such child's estate or creditors, as A's first born child shall appoint after reaching the age of 25; in default of appointment, to G's grandchildren." G was survived by his daughter (A), who was then childless, and by his son (B), who had two children (X and Y).

The power conferred on A's first born child is a general power not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent. Since the power fails the test of Section 1(b)(1) for initial validity, its validity is governed by Section 1(b)(2). If A has a child, such child must reach the age of 25 (or die under 25) within 90 years after G's death or the power is invalid.

Fiduciary Powers. Purely administrative fiduciary powers are excluded from the Statutory Rule under Sections 4(2) and (3), but the only distributive fiduciary power that is excluded is the power described in Section 4(4). Otherwise, distributive fiduciary powers are subject to the Statutory Rule. Such powers are usually nongeneral powers.

Example (17) — Trustee's Discretionary Powers Over Income and Corpus. G devised property in trust, the terms of which were that the trustee was authorized to accumulate the income or pay it or a portion of it out to A during A's lifetime; after A's death, the trustee was authorized to accumulate the income or to distribute it in equal or unequal shares among A's children until the death of the survivor; and on the death of A's last surviving child to pay the corpus and accumulated income (if any) to B. The trustee was also granted the discretionary power to invade the corpus on behalf of the permissible recipient or recipients of the income.

The trustee's nongeneral powers to invade corpus and to accumulate or spray income among A's children are not excluded by Section 4(4), nor are they initially valid under Section 1(c)(1). Their validity is, therefore, governed by Section 1(c)(2). Both powers become invalid thereunder, and hence no longer exercisable, 90 years after G's death.

It is doubtful that the powers will become invalid, because the trust will probably terminate by its own terms earlier than the expiration of the permissible 90-year period. But if the powers do become invalid, and hence no longer exercisable, they become invalid as of the time the permissible 90-year period expires. Any exercises of either power that took place before the expiration of the permissible 90-year period are not invalidated retroactively. In addition, if the powers do become invalid, a court in an appropriate proceeding must reform the instrument in accordance with the provisions of Section 3.

F. THE VALIDITY OF THE DONEE'S EXERCISE OF A VALID POWER

The fact that a power of appointment is valid, either because it (i) was not subject to the Statutory Rule to begin with, (ii) is initially valid under Sections 1(b)(1) or 1(c)(1), or (iii) becomes valid under Sections 1(b)(2) or 1(c)(2), means merely that the power can be validly exercised. It does not mean that any exercise that the donee decides to make is valid. The validity of the interests or powers created by the exercise of a valid power is a separate matter, governed by the provisions of this Act. A key factor in deciding the validity of such appointed interests or appointed powers is determining when they were created for purposes of this Act. Under Section 2, as explained in the Comment thereto, the time of creation is when the power was exercised if it was a presently exercisable general power; and if it was a nongeneral power or a general testamentary power, the time of creation is when the power was created. This is the rule generally accepted at common law (see Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 1.2, Comment d (1983); Restatement of Property § 392 (1944)), and it is the rule adopted under this Act (except for purposes of Section 5 only, as explained in the Comment to Section 5).

Example (18) — Exercise of a Nongeneral Power of Appointment. G was the life income beneficiary of a trust and the donee of a nongeneral power of appointment over the succeeding remainder interest, exercisable in favor of M's descendants (except G). The trust was created by the will of G's mother, M, who predeceased him. G exercised his power by his will, directing the income to be paid after his death to his brother B's children for the life of the survivor, and upon the death of B's last surviving child, to pay the corpus of the trust to B's grandchildren. B predeceased M; B was survived by his two children, X and Y, who also survived M and G.

G's power and his appointment are valid. The power and the appointed interests were created at M's death when the power was created, not on G's death when it was exercised. See Section 2. G's power passes Section 1(c)(1)'s test for initial validity: G himself is the validating life. G's appointment also passes Section 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity: Since B was dead at M's death, the validating life is the survivor of B's children, X and Y.

Suppose that G's power was exercisable only in favor of G's own descendants, and that G appointed the identical interests in favor of his own children and grandchildren. Suppose further that at M's death, G had two children, X and Y, and that a third child, Z, was born later. X, Y, and Z survived G. In this case, the remainder interest in favor of G's grandchildren would not pass Section 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity. Its validity would be governed by Section 1(a)(2), under which it would be valid if G's last surviving child died within 90 years after M's death.

If G's power were a general testamentary power of appointment, rather than a nongeneral power, the solution would be the same. The period of the Statutory Rule with respect to interests created by the exercise of a general testamentary power starts to run when the power was created (at M's death, in this example), not when the power was exercised (at G's death).

Example (19) — Exercise of a Presently Exercisable General Power of Appointment. G was the life income beneficiary of a trust and the donee of a presently exercisable general power of appointment over the succeeding remainder interest. G exercised the power by deed, directing the trustee after his death to pay the income to G's children in equal shares for the life of the survivor, and upon the death of his last surviving child to pay the corpus of the trust to his grandchildren.

The validity of G's power is not in question: A presently exercisable general power of appointment is not subject to the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities. G's appointment, however, is subject to the Statutory Rule. If G reserved a power to revoke his appointment, the remainder interest in favor of G's grandchildren passes Section 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity. Under Section 2, the appointed remainder interest was created at G's death. The validating life for his grandchildren's remainder interest is G's last surviving child. If G's appointment were irrevocable, however, the grandchildren's remainder interest fails the test of Section 1(a)(1) for initial validity. Under Section 2, the appointed remainder interest was created upon delivery of the deed exercising G's power (or when the exercise otherwise became effective). Since the validity of the grandchildren's remainder interest is governed by Section 1(a)(2), the remainder interest becomes invalid, and the disposition becomes subject to reformation under Section 3, if G's last surviving child lives beyond 90 years after the effective date of G's appointment.

Example (20) — Exercises of Successively

Created Nongeneral Powers of Appointment. G devised property to A for life, remainder to such of A's descendants as A shall appoint. At his death, A exercised his nongeneral power by appointing to his child B for life, remainder to such of B's descendants as B shall appoint. At his death, B exercised his nongeneral power by appointing to his child C for life, remainder to C's children. A and B were living at G's death. Thereafter, C was born. A later died, survived by B and C. B then died survived by C.

A's nongeneral power passes Section 1(c)(1)'s test for initial validity. A is the validating life. B's nongeneral power, created by A's appointment, also passes Sections 1(c)(1)'s test for initial validity. Since under Section 2 the appointed interests and powers are created at G's death, and since B was then alive, B is the validating life for his nongeneral power. (If B had been born after G's death, however, his power would have failed Section 1(c)(1)'s test for initial validity; its validity would be governed by Section 1(c)(2), and would turn on whether or not it was exercised by B within 90 years after G's death.)

Although B's power is valid, his exercise may be partly invalid. The remainder interest in favor of C's children fails the test of Section 1(a)(1) for initial validity. The period of the Statutory Rule begins to run at G's death, under Section 2. (Since B's power was a nongeneral power, B's appointment under the common-law relation back doctrine of powers of appointment is treated as having been made by A. If B's appointment related back no further than that, of course, it would have been validated by Section 1(a)(1) because C was alive at A's death. However, A's power was also a nongeneral power, so relation back goes another step. A's appointment — which now includes B's appointment — is treated as having been made by G.) Since C was not alive at G's death, he cannot be the validating life. And, since C might have more children more than 21 years after the deaths of A and B and any other individual who was alive at G's death, the remainder interest in favor of his children is not initially validated by Section 1(a)(1). Instead, its validity is governed by Section 1(a)(2), and turns on whether or not C dies within 90 years after G's death.

Note that if either A's power or B's power (or both) had been a general testamentary power rather than a nongeneral power, the above solution would not change. However, if either A's power or B's power (or both) had been a presently exercisable general power, B's appointment would have passed Sections 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity. (If A had the presently exercisable general power, the appointed interests and power would be created at A's death, not G's; and if the presently exercisable general power were held by B, the appointed interests and power would be created at B's death.)

Common-Law "Second-look" Doctrine. As indicated above, both at common law and under this Act (except for purposes of Section 5 only, as explained in the Comment to Section 5), appointed interests and powers established by the exercise of a general testamentary power or a nongeneral power are created when the power was created, not when the power was exercised. In applying this principle, the common law recognizes a so-called doctrine of second look, under which the facts existing on the date of the exercise are taken into account in determining the validity of appointed interests and appointed powers. E.g., Warren's Estate, 320 Pa. 112, 182 A. 396 (1930); In re Estate of Bird, 225 Cal.App.2d 196, 37 Cal.Rptr. 288 (1964). The common-law's second-look doctrine in effect constitutes a limited wait-and-see doctrine, and is therefore subsumed under but not totally superseded by this Act. The following example, which is a variation of Example (18) above, illustrates how the second-look doctrine operates at common law and how the situation would be analyzed under this Act.

Example (21) — Second-look Case. G was the life income beneficiary of a trust and the donee of a nongeneral power of appointment over the succeeding remainder interest, exercisable in favor of G's descendants. The trust was created by the will of his mother, M, who predeceased him. G exercised his power by his will, directing the income to be paid after his death to his children for the life of the survivor, and upon the death of his last surviving child, to pay the corpus of the trust to his grandchildren. At M's death, G had two children, X and Y. No further children were born to G, and at his death X and Y were still living.

The common-law solution of this example is as follows: G's appointment is valid under the Common-law Rule. Although the period of the Rule begins to run at M's death, the facts existing at G's death can be taken into account. This second look at the facts discloses that G had no additional children. Thus the possibility of additional children, which existed at M's death when the period of the Rule began to run, is disregarded. The survivor of X and Y, therefore, becomes the validating life for the remainder interest in favor of G's grandchildren, and G's appointment is valid. The common-law's second-look doctrine would not, however, save G's appointment if he actually had one or more children after M's death and if at least one of these after-born children survived G.

Under this Act, if no additional children are born to G after M's death, the common-law second-look doctrine can be invoked as of G's death to declare G's appointment then to be valid under Section 1(a)(1); no further waiting is necessary. However, if additional children are born to G and one or more of them survives G, Section 1(a)(2) applies and the validity of G's appointment depends on G's last surviving child dying within 90 years after M's death.

G. SECTION 1(e): EFFECT OF CERTAIN "LATER-OF" TYPE LANGUAGE; COORDINATION OF GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER TAX REGULATIONS WITH UNIFORM ACT

Effect of Certain "Later-of" Type Language. Section 1(e) was added to the Uniform Act in 1990. It primarily applies to a non-traditional type of "later-of" clause (described below). Use of that type of clause might have produced unintended consequences, which are now rectified by the addition of Section 1(e).

In general, perpetuity saving or termination clauses can be used in either of two ways. The predominant use of such clauses is as an override clause. That is, the clause is not an integral part of the dispositive terms of the trust, but operates independently of the dispositive terms; the clause provides that all interests must vest no later than at a specified time in the future, and sometimes also provides that the trust must then terminate, but only if any interest has not previously vested or if the trust has not previously terminated. The other use of such a clause is as an integral part of the dispositive terms of the trust; that is, the clause is the provision that directly regulates the duration of the trust. Traditional perpetuity saving or termination clauses do not use a "later-of" approach; they mark off the maximum time of vesting or termination only by reference to a 21-year period following the death of the survivor of specified lives in being at the creation of the trust.

Section 1(e) applies to a non-traditional clause called a "later-of" (or "longer-of") clause. Such a clause might provide that the maximum time of vesting or termination of any interest or trust must occur no later than the later of (A) 21 years after the death of the survivor of specified lives in being at the creation of the trust or (B) 90 years after the creation of the trust.

Under the Uniform Act as originally promulgated, this type of "later-of" clause would not achieve a "later-of" result. If used as an override clause in conjunction with a trust whose terms were, by themselves, valid under the Common-law Rule, the "later-of" clause did no harm. The trust would be valid under the Common-law Rule as codified in Section 1(a)(1) because the clause itself would neither postpone the vesting of any interest nor extend the duration of the trust. But, if used either (1) as an override clause in conjunction with a trust whose terms were not valid under the Common-law Rule or (2) as the provision that directly regulated the duration of the trust, the "later-of" clause would not cure the perpetuity violation in case (1) and would create a perpetuity violation in case (2). In neither case would the clause qualify the trust for validity at common law under Section 1(a)(1) because the clause would not guarantee that all interests will be certain to vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of an individual then alive. In any given case, 90 years can turn out to be longer than the period produced by the specified-lives-in-being-plus-21-years language.

Because the clause would fail to qualify the trust for validity under the Common-law Rule of Section 1(a)(1), the nonvested interests in the trust would be subject to the wait-and-see element of Section 1(a)(2) and vulnerable to a reformation suit under Section 3. Under Section 1(a)(2), an interest that is not valid at common law is invalid unless it actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation. Section 1(a)(2) does not grant such nonvested interests a permissible vesting period of either 90 years or a period of 21 years after the death of the survivor of specified lives in being. Section 1(a)(2) only grants such interests a period of 90 years in which to vest.

The operation of Section 1(a), as outlined above, is also supported by perpetuity policy. If Section 1(a) allowed a "later-of" clause to achieve a "later-of" result, it would authorize an improper use of the 90-year permissible vesting period of Section 1(a)(2). The 90-year period of Section 1(a)(2) is designed to approximate the period that, on average, would be produced by using actual lives in being plus 21 years. Because in any given case the period actually produced by lives in being plus 21 years can be shorter or longer than 90 years, an attempt to utilize a 90-year period in a "later-of" clause improperly seeks to turn the 90-year average into a minimum.

By substantial analogous authority, the specified-lives-in-being-plus-21-years prong of the "later-of" clause under discussion is not sustained by the separability doctrine (described in Part H of the Comment to Section 1). See, e.g., Restatement of Property § 376 Comments e and f and illustration 3 (1944); Easton v. Hall, 323 Ill. 397, 154 N.E. 216 (1926); Thorne v. Continental Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 305 Ill. App. 222, 27 N.E.2d 302 (1940). The inapplicability of the separability doctrine is also supported by perpetuity policy, as described in the text above.

Set against this background, the addition of Section 1(e) is quite beneficial. Section 1(e) limits the effect of this type of "later-of" language to 21 years after the death of the survivor of the specified lives, in effect transforming the clause into a traditional perpetuity saving/termination clause. By doing so, Section 1(e) grants initial validity to the trust under the Common-law Rule as codified in Section 1(a)(1) and precludes a reformation suit under Section 3.

Note that Section 1(e) covers variations of the "later-of" clause described above, such as a clause that postpones vesting until the later of (A) 20 years after the death of the survivor of specified lives in being or (B) 89 years. Section 1(e) does not, however, apply to all dispositions that incorporate a "later-of" approach. To come under Section 1(e), the specified-lives prong must include a tack-on period of up to 21 years. Without a tack-on period, a "later-of" disposition, unless valid at common law, comes under Section 1(a)(2) and is given 90 years in which to vest. An example would be a disposition that creates an interest that is to vest upon "the later of the death of my widow or 30 years after my death."

Coordination of the Federal Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax with the Uniform Statutory Rule. In 1990, the Treasury Department announced a decision to coordinate the tax regulations under the "grandfathering" provisions of the federal generation-skipping transfer tax with the Uniform Act. Letter from Michael J. Graetz, Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Treasury (Tax Policy), to Lawrence J. Bugge, President, National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (Nov. 16, 1990) (hereinafter Treasury Letter).

Section 1433(b)(2) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 generally exempts ("grandfathers") trusts from the federal generation-skipping transfer tax that were irrevocable on September 25, 1985. This section adds, however, that the exemption shall apply "only to the extent that such transfer is not made out of corpus added to the trust after September 25, 1985." The provisions of Section 1433(b)(2) were first implemented by Temp. Treas. Reg. § 26.2601-1, promulgated by T.D. 8187 on March 14, 1988. Insofar as the Uniform Act is concerned, a key feature of that temporary regulation is the concept that the statutory reference to "corpus added to the trust after September 25, 1985" not only covers actual post-9/25/85 transfers of new property or corpus to a grandfathered trust but "constructive" additions as well. Under the temporary regulation as first promulgated, a "constructive" addition occurs if, after 9/25/85, the donee of a nongeneral power of appointment exercises that power "in a manner that may postpone or suspend the vesting, absolute ownership or power of alienation of an interest in property for a period, measured from the date of creation of the trust, extending beyond any life in being at the date of creation of the trust plus a period of 21 years. If a power is exercised by creating another power it will be deemed to be exercised to whatever extent the second power may be exercised." Temp. Treas. Reg. § 26.2601- 1(b)(1)(v)(B)(2) (1988).

Because the Uniform Act was promulgated in 1986 and applies only prospectively, any "grandfathered" trust would have become irrevocable prior to the enactment of the Uniform Act in any state. Nevertheless, the second sentence of Section 5(a) extends the wait-and-see approach to post-effective-date exercises of nongeneral powers even if the power itself was created prior to the effective date of the Uniform Act in any state. Consequently, a post-effective-date exercise of a nongeneral power of appointment created in a "grandfathered" trust could come under the provisions of the Uniform Act.

The literal wording, then, of Temp. Treas. Reg. § 26.2601-1(b)(1)(v)(B)(2) (1988), as first promulgated, could have jeopardized the grandfathered status of an exempt trust if (1) the trust created a nongeneral power of appointment, (2) the donee exercised that nongeneral power, and (3) the Uniform Act is the perpetuity law applicable to the donee's exercise. This possibility arose not only because the donee's exercise itself might come under the 90-year permissible vesting period of Section 1(a)(2) if it otherwise violated the Common-law Rule and hence was not validated under Section 1(a)(1). The possibility also arose in a less obvious way if the donee's exercise created another nongeneral power. The last sentence of the temporary regulation states that "if a power is exercised by creating another power it will be deemed to be exercised to whatever extent the second power may be exercised."

In late March 1990, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (NCCUSL) filed a formal request with the Treasury Department asking that measures be taken to coordinate the regulation with the Uniform Act. By the Treasury Letter referred to above, the Treasury Department responded by stating that it "will amend the temporary regulations to accommodate the 90-year period under USRAP as originally promulgated [in 1986] or as amended [in 1990 by the addition of subsection (e)]." This should effectively remove the possibility of loss of grandfathered status under the Uniform Act merely because the donee of a nongeneral power created in a grandfathered trust inadvertently exercises that power in violation of the Common-law Rule or merely because the donee exercises that power by creating a second nongeneral power that might, in the future, be inadvertently exercised in violation of the Common-law Rule.

The Treasury Letter states, however, that any effort by the donee of a nongeneral power in a grandfathered trust to obtain a "later-of" specified-lives-in-being-plus-21-years or 90-years approach will be treated as a constructive addition, unless that effort is nullified by state law. As explained above, the Uniform Act, as originally promulgated in 1986 or as amended in 1990 by the addition of Section 1(e), nullifies any direct effort to obtain a "later-of" approach by the use of a "later-of" clause.

The Treasury Letter states that an indirect effort to obtain a "later-of" approach would also be treated as a constructive addition that would bring grandfathered status to an end, unless the attempt to obtain the later-of approach is nullified by state law. The Treasury Letter indicates that an indirect effort to obtain a "later-of" approach could arise if the donee of a nongeneral power successfully attempts to prolong the duration of a grandfathered trust by switching from a specified-lives-in-being-plus-21-years perpetuity period to a 90-year perpetuity period, or vice versa. Donees of nongeneral powers in grandfathered trusts would therefore be well advised to resist any temptation to wait until it becomes clear or reasonably predictable which perpetuity period will be longer and then make a switch to the longer period if the governing instrument creating the power utilized the shorter period. No such attempted switch and no constructive addition will occur if in each instance a traditional specified-lives-in-being-plus-21-years perpetuity saving clause is used.

Any such attempted switch is likely in any event to be nullified by state law and, if so, the attempted switch will not be treated as a constructive addition. For example, suppose that the original grandfathered trust contained a standard perpetuity saving clause declaring that all interests in the trust must vest no later than 21 years after the death of the survivor of specified lives in being. In exercising a nongeneral power created in that trust, any indirect effort by the donee to obtain a "later-of" approach by adopting a 90-year perpetuity saving clause will likely be nullified by Section 1(e). If that exercise occurs at a time when it has become clear or reasonably predictable that the 90-year period will prove longer, the donee's exercise would constitute language in a governing instrument that seeks to operate in effect to postpone the vesting of any interest until the later of the specified-lives-in-being-plus-21-years period or 90 years. Under Section 1(e), "that language is inoperative to the extent it produces a period of time that exceeds 21 years after the death of the survivor of the specified lives."

Quite apart from Section 1(e), the relation-back doctrine generally recognized in the exercise of nongeneral powers stands as a doctrine that could potentially be invoked to nullify an attempted switch from one perpetuity period to the other perpetuity period. Under that doctrine, interests created by the exercise of a nongeneral power are considered created by the donor of that power. See, e.g., Restatement (Second) of Property, Donative Transfers § 11.1 comment b (1986). As such, the maximum vesting period applicable to interests created by the exercise of a nongeneral power would apparently be covered by the perpetuity saving clause in the document that created the power, notwithstanding any different period the donee purports to adopt.

H. SUBSIDIARY COMMON-LAW DOCTRINES: WHETHER SUPERSEDED BY THIS ACT

As noted at the beginning of this Comment, the courts in interpreting the Common-law Rule developed several subsidiary doctrines. This Act does not supersede those subsidiary doctrines except to the extent the provisions of this Act conflict with them. As explained below, most of these common-law doctrines remain in full force or in force in modified form.

Constructional Preference for Validity. Professor Gray in his treatise on the Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities declared that a will or deed is to be construed without regard to the Rule, and then the Rule is to be "remorselessly" applied to the provisions so construed. J. Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities § 629 (4th ed. 1942). Some courts may still adhere to this proposition. Colorado Nat'l Bank v. McCabe, 143 Colo. 21, 353 P.2d 385 (1960). Most courts, it is believed, would today be inclined to adopt the proposition put by the Restatement of Property § 375 (1944), which is that where an instrument is ambiguous — that is, where it is fairly susceptible to two or more constructions, one of which causes a Rule violation and the other of which does not — the construction that does not result in a Rule violation should be adopted. Cases supporting this view include Southern Bank & Trust Co. v. Brown, 271 S.C. 260, 246 S.E.2d 598 (1978); Davis v. Rossi, 326 Mo. 911, 34 S.W.2d 8 (1930); Watson v. Goldthwaite, 184 N.E.2d 340, 343 (Mass. 1962); Walker v. Bogle, 244 Ga. 439, 260 S.E.2d 338 (1979); Drach v. Ely, 703 P.2d 746 (Kan. 1985).

The constructional preference for validity is not superseded by this Act, but its role is likely to be different. The situation is likely to be that one of the constructions to which the ambiguous instrument is fairly susceptible would result in validity under Section 1(a)(1), 1(b)(1), or 1(c)(1), but the other construction does not necessarily result in invalidity; rather it results in the interest's validity being governed by Section 1(a)(2), 1(b)(2), or 1(c)(2). Nevertheless, even though the result of adopting the other construction is not as harsh as it is at common law, it is expected that the courts will incline toward the construction that validates the disposition under Section 1(a)(1), 1(b)(1), or 1(c)(1).

Conclusive Presumption of Lifetime Fertility. At common law, all individuals — regardless of age, sex, or physical condition — are conclusively presumed to be able to have children throughout their entire lifetimes. This principle is not superseded by this Act, and in view of new advances in medical science that allow women to become pregnant after menopause by way of test-tube fertilization (see Sauer, Paulson & Lobo, A Preliminary Report on Oocyte Donation Extending Reproductive Potential to Women Over 40, 323 N.Eng.J.Med. 1157 (1990)) and the widely accepted rule of construction that adopted children are presumptively included in class gifts, the conclusive presumption of lifetime fertility is not unrealistic. Since even elderly individuals probably cannot be excluded from adopting children based on their ages alone, the possibility of having children by adoption is seldom extinct. See, generally, Waggoner In re Lattouf's Will and the Presumption of Lifetime Fertility in Perpetuity Law, 20 San Diego L.Rev. 763 (1983). Under this Act, the main force of this principle is felt in Example (7), above, where it prevents a nonvested property interest from passing the test for initial validity under Section 1(a)(1).

Act Supersedes Doctrine of Infectious Invalidity. At common law, the invalidity of an interest can, under the doctrine of infectious invalidity, be held to invalidate one or more otherwise valid interests created by the disposition or even invalidate the entire disposition. The question turns on whether the general dispositive scheme of the transferor will be better carried out by eliminating only the invalid interest or by eliminating other interests as well. This is a question that is answered on a case-by-case basis. Several items are relevant to the question, including who takes the stricken interests in place of those the transferor designated to take.

The doctrine of infectious invalidity is superseded by this Act by Section 3, under which courts, upon the petition of an interested person, are required to reform the disposition to approximate as closely as possible the transferor's manifested plan of distribution when an invalidity under the Statutory Rule occurs.

Separability. The common law's separability doctrine is that when an interest is expressly subject to alternative contingencies, the situation is treated as if two interests were created in the same person or class. Each interest is judged separately; the invalidity of one of the interests does not necessarily cause the other one to be invalid. This common-law principle was established in Longhead v. Phelps, 2 Wm.Bl. 704, 96 Eng. Rep. 414 (K.B. 1770), and is followed in this country. L. Simes & A. Smith, The Law of Future Interests § 1257 (2d ed. 1956); 6 American Law of Property § 24.54 (A. Casner ed. 1952); Restatement of Property § 376 (1944). Under this doctrine, if property is devised "to B if X-event or Y-event happens," B in effect has two interests, one contingent on X-event happening and the other contingent on Y-event happening. If the interest contingent on X-event but not the one contingent on Y-event is invalid, the consequence of separating B's interest into two is that only one of them, the one contingent on X-event, is invalid. B still has a valid interest — the one contingent on the occurrence of Y-event.

The separability principle is not superseded by this Act. As illustrated in the following example, its invocation will usually result in one of the interests being initially validated by Section 1(a)(1) and the validity of the other interests being governed by Section 1(a)(2).

Example (22) — Separability Case. G devised real property "to A for life, then to A's children who survive A and reach 25, but if none of A's children survives A or if none of A's children who survives A reaches 25, then to B." G was survived by his brother (B), by his daughter (A), by A's husband (H), and by A's two minor children (X and Y).

The remainder interest in favor of A's children who reach 25 fails the test of Section 1(a)(1) for initial validity. Its validity is, therefore, governed by Section 1(a)(2) and depends on each of A's children doing any one of the following things within 90 years after G's death: predeceasing A, surviving A and failing to reach 25, or surviving A and reaching 25.

Under the separability doctrine, B has two interests. One of them is contingent on none of A's children surviving A. That interest passes Section 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity; the validating life is A. B's other interest, which is contingent on none of A's surviving children reaching 25, fails Section 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity. Its validity is governed by Section 1(a)(2) and depends on each of A's surviving children either reaching 25 or dying under 25 within 90 years after G's death.

Suppose that after G's death, A has a third child (Z). A subsequently dies, survived by her husband (H) and by X, Y, and Z. This, of course, causes B's interest that was contingent on none of A's children surviving A to terminate. If X, Y, and Z had all reached the age of 25 by the time of A's death, their interest would vest at A's death, and that would end the matter. If one or two, but not all three of them, had reached the age of 25 at A's death, B's other interest — the one that was contingent on none of A's surviving children reaching 25 — would also terminate. As for the children's interest, if the after- born child Z's age was such at A's death that Z could not be alive and under the age of 25 at the expiration of the allowable waiting period, the class gift in favor of the children would be valid under Section 1(a)(2), because none of those then under 25 could fail either to reach 25 or die under 25 after the expiration of the allowable 90-year waiting period. If, however, Z's age at A's death was such that Z could be alive and under the age of 25 at the expiration of the 90-year permissible vesting period, the circumstances requisite to reformation under Section 3(2) would arise, and the court would be justified in reforming G's disposition by reducing the age contingency with respect to Z to the age he would reach on the date when the permissible vesting period is due to expire. See Example (3) in the Comment to Section 3. So reformed, the class gift in favor of A's children could not become invalid under Section 1(a)(2), and the children of A who had already reached 25 by the time of A's death could receive their shares immediately.

The "All-or-Nothing" Rule with Respect to Class Gifts; the Specific Sum and Sub-Class Doctrines. The common law applies an "all-or-nothing" rule with respect to class gifts, under which a class gift stands or falls as a whole. The all-or-nothing rule, usually attributed to Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, 35 Eng. Rep. 979 (Ch. 1817), is commonly stated as follows: If the interest of any potential class member might vest too remotely, the entire class gift violates the Rule. Although this Act does not supersede the basic idea of the much-maligned "all-or-nothing" rule, the evils sometimes attributed to it are substantially if not entirely eliminated by the wait-and-see feature of the Statutory Rule and by the availability of reformation under Section 3, especially in the circumstances described in Sections 3(2) and (3). For illustrations of the application of the all-or-nothing rule under this Act, see Examples (3), (4), and (6) in the Comment to Section 3.

The common law also recognizes a doctrine called the specific-sum doctrine, which is derived from Storrs v. Benbow, 3 De G.M. & G. 390, 43 Eng. Rep. 153 (Ch. 1853), and states: If a specified sum of money is to be paid to each member of a class, the interest of each class member is entitled to separate treatment and is valid or invalid under the Rule on its own. The common law also recognizes a doctrine called the sub-class doctrine, which is derived from Cattlin v. Brown, 11 Hare 372, 68 Eng. Rep. 1318 (Ch. 1853), and states: If the ultimate takers are not described as a single class but rather as a group of subclasses, and if the share to which each separate subclass is entitled will finally be determined within the period of the Rule, the gifts to the different subclasses are separable for the purpose of the Rule. American Security & Trust Co. v. Cramer, 175 F.Supp. 367 (D.D.C. 1959); Restatement of Property § 389 (1944). The specific-sum and sub-class doctrines are not superseded by this Act. The operation of the specific-sum doctrine under this Act is illustrated in the following example.

Example (23) — Specific-Sum Case. G bequeathed "$10,000 to each child of A, born before or after my death, who attains 25." G was survived by A and by A's two children (X and Y). X but not Y had already reached 25 at G's death. After G's death a third child (Z) was born to A.

If the phrase "born before or after my death" had been omitted, the class would close as of G's death under the common-law's rule of construction known as the rule of convenience: The after-born child, Z, would not be entitled to a $10,000 bequest, and the interests of both X and Y would be valid upon their creation at G's death. X's interest would be valid because it was initially vested; neither the Common-law Rule nor the Statutory Rule applies to interests that are vested upon their creation. Although the interest of Y was not vested upon its creation, it would be initially valid under Section 1(a)(1) because Y would be his own validating life; Y will either reach 25 or die under 25 within his own lifetime.

The inclusion of the phrase "before or after my death," however, would probably be construed to mean that G intended after-born children to receive a $10,000 bequest. See Earle Estate, 369 Pa. 52, 85 A.2d 90 (1951). Assuming that this construction were adopted, the specific-sum doctrine allows the interest of each child of A to be treated separately from the others for purposes of the Statutory Rule. For the reasons cited above, the interests of X and Y are initially valid under Section 1(a)(1). The nonvested interest of Z, however, fails Section 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity; there is no validating life because Z, who was not alive when the interest was created, could reach 25 or die under 25 more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of A, X, and Y. Under Section 1(a)(2), the validity of Z's interest depends on Z's reaching (or failing to reach) 25 within 90 years after G's death.

The operation of the sub-class doctrine under this Act is illustrated in the following example.

Example (24) — Sub-Class Case. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, then in equal shares to A's children for their respective lives; on the death of each child, the proportionate share of corpus of the one so dying shall go to the children of such child." G was survived by A and by A's two children (X and Y). After G's death, another child (Z) was born to A. A now has died, survived by X, Y, and Z.

Under the sub-class doctrine, each remainder interest in favor of the children of a child of A is treated separately from the others. This allows the remainder interest in favor of X's children and the remainder interest in favor of Y's children to be validated under Section 1(a)(1). X is the validating life for the one, and Y is the validating life for the other.

The remainder interest in favor of the children of Z fails Section 1(a)(1)'s test for initial validity; there is no validating life because Z, who was not alive when the interest was created, could have children more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of A, X, and Y. Under Section 1(a)(2), the validity of the remainder interest in favor of Z's children depends on Z's dying within 90 years after G's death.

Note why both of the requirements of the sub-class rule are met. The ultimate takers are described as a group of sub-classes rather than as a single class: "children of the child so dying," as opposed to "grandchildren." The share to which each separate sub-class is entitled is certain to be finally determined within a life in being plus 21 years: As of A's death, who is a life in being, it is certain to be known how many children he had surviving him; since in fact there were three, we know that each sub-class will ultimately be entitled to one-third of the corpus, neither more nor less. The possible failure of the one-third share of Z's children does not increase to one-half the share going to X's and Y's children; they still are entitled to only one-third shares. Indeed, should it turn out that X has children but Y does not, this would not increase the one-third share to which X's children are entitled.

Example (25) — General Testamentary Powers — Sub-Class Case. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay income "to A for life, then in equal shares to A's children for their respective lives; on the death of each child, the proportionate share of corpus of the one so dying shall go to such persons as the one so dying shall by will appoint; in default of appointment, to G's grandchildren in equal shares." G was survived by A and by A's two children (X and Y). After G's death, another child (Z) was born to A.

The general testamentary powers conferred on each of A's children are entitled to separate treatment under the principles of the sub-class doctrine. See above. Consequently, the powers conferred on X and Y, A's children who were living at G's death, are initially valid under Section 1(c)(1). But the general testamentary power conferred on Z, A's child who was born after G's death, fails the test of Section 1(c)(1) for initial validity. The validity of Z's power is governed by Section 1(c)(2). Z's death must occur within 90 years after G's death if any provision in Z's will purporting to exercise his power is to be valid.

Duration of Indestructible Trusts — Termination of Trusts by Beneficiaries. The widely accepted view in American law is that the beneficiaries of a trust other than a charitable trust can compel its premature termination if all beneficiaries consent and if such termination is not expressly restrained or impliedly restrained by the existence of a "material purpose" of the settlor in establishing the trust. Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 337 (1959); IV A. Scott, The Law of Trusts § 337 (3d ed. 1967). A trust that cannot be terminated by its beneficiaries is called an indestructible trust.

It is generally accepted that the duration of the indestructibility of a trust, other than a charitable trust, is limited to the applicable perpetuity period. See Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 62, Comment o (1959); Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 2.1 and Legislative Note and Reporter's Note (1983); I A. Scott, The Law of Trusts § 62.10(2) (3d ed. 1967); J. Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities § 121 (4th ed. 1942); L. Simes & A. Smith, The Law of Future Interests §§ 1391-93 (2d ed. 1956).

Nothing in this Act supersedes this principle. One modification, however, is necessary: As to trusts that contain a nonvested property interest or power of appointment whose validity is governed by the wait-and-see element adopted in Section 1(a)(2), 1(b)(2), or 1(c)(2), the courts can be expected to determine that the applicable perpetuity period is 90 years.

§ 41-16. When nonvested property interest or power of appointment created.

(a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section and in G.S. 41-19(a), the time for creation of a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment is determined under general principles of property law.

(b) For purposes of this Article, if there is a person who alone can exercise a power created by a governing instrument to become the unqualified beneficial owner of (i) a nonvested property interest or (ii) a property interest subject to a power of appointment described in G.S. 41-15(b) or (c), the nonvested property interest or power of appointment is created when the power to become the unqualified beneficial owner terminates.

(c) For purposes of this Article, a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment arising from a transfer of property to a previously funded trust or other existing property arrangement is created when the nonvested property interest or power of appointment in the original contribution was created. (1995, c. 190, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Subsection (a): General Principles of Property Law; When Nonvested Property Interests and Powers of Appointment are Created. Under Section 1, the period of time allowed by the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities is marked off from the time of creation of the nonvested property interest or power of appointment in question. Section 5, with certain exceptions, provides that the Act applies only to nonvested property interests and powers of appointment created on or after the effective date of the Act.

Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), and in the second sentence of Section 5(a) for purposes of that section only, the time of creation of nonvested property interests and powers of appointment is determined under general principles of property law.

Since a will becomes effective as a dispositive instrument upon the decedent's death, not upon the execution of the will, general principles of property law determine that the time when a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment created by will is created is at the decedent's death.

With respect to a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment created by inter vivos transfer, the time when the interest or power is created is the date the transfer becomes effective for purposes of property law generally, normally the date of delivery of the deed.

With respect to a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment created by the testamentary or inter vivos exercise of a power of appointment, general principles of property law adopt the "relation back" doctrine. Under that doctrine, the appointed interests or powers are created when the power was created not when it was exercised, if the exercised power was a nongeneral power or a general testamentary power. If the exercised power was a general power presently exercisable, the relation back doctrine is not followed; the time of creation of the appointed property interests or appointed powers is regarded as the time when the power was irrevocably exercised, not when the power was created.

Subsection (b): Postponement, for Purposes of this Act, of the Time when a Nonvested Property Interest or a Power of Appointment is Created in Certain Cases. The reason that the significant date for purposes of this Act is the date of creation is that the unilateral control of the interest (or the interest subject to the power) by one person is then relinquished. In certain cases, all beneficial rights in a property interest (including an interest subject to a power of appointment) remain under the unilateral control of one person even after the delivery of the deed or even after the decedent's death. In such cases, under this subsection, the interest or power is created, for purposes of this Act, when no person, acting alone, has a power presently exercisable to become the unqualified beneficial owner of the property interest (or the property interest subject to the power of appointment).

Example (1) — Revocable Inter-Vivos Trust Case. G conveyed property to a trustee, directing the trustee to pay the net income therefrom to himself (G) for life, then to G's son A for his life, then to A's children for the life of the survivor of A's children who are living at G's death, and upon the death of such last surviving child, the corpus of the trust is to be distributed among A's then-living descendants, per stirpes. G retained the power to revoke the trust.

Because of G's reservation of the power to revoke the trust, the creation for purposes of this Act of the nonvested property interests in this case occurs at G's death, not when the trust was established. This is in accordance with common law, for purposes of the Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities. Cook v. Horn, 214 Ga. 289, 104 S.E.2d 461 (1958).

The rationale that justifies the postponement of the time of creation in such cases is as follows. A person, such as G in the above example, who alone can exercise a power to become the unqualified beneficial owner of a nonvested property interest is in effect the owner of that property interest. Thus, any nonvested property interest subject to such a power is not created for purposes of this Act until the power terminates (by release, expiration at the death of the donee, or otherwise). Similarly, as noted above, any property interest or power of appointment created in an appointee by the irrevocable exercise of such a power is created at the time of the donee's irrevocable exercise.

For the date of creation to be postponed under subsection (b), the power need not be a power to revoke, and it need not be held by the settlor or transferor. A presently exercisable power held by any person acting alone to make himself the unqualified beneficial owner of the nonvested property interest or the property interest subject to a power of appointment is sufficient. If such a power exists, the time when the interest or power is created, for purposes of this Act, is postponed until the termination of the power (by irrevocable exercise, release, contract to exercise or not to exercise, expiration at the death of the donee, or otherwise). An example of such a power that might not be held by the settlor or transferor is a power, held by any person who can act alone, fully to invade the corpus of a trust.

An important consequence of the idea that a power need not be held by the settlor for the time of creation to be postponed under this section is that it makes postponement possible even in cases of testamentary transfers.

Example (2) — Testamentary Trust Case. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, remainder to such persons (including A, his creditors, his estate, and the creditors of his estate) as A shall appoint; in default of appointment, the property to remain in trust to pay the income to A's children for the life of the survivor, and upon the death of A's last surviving child, to pay the corpus to A's grandchildren." A survived G.

If A exercises his presently exercisable general power, any nonvested property interest or power of appointment created by A's appointment is created for purposes of this Act when the power is exercised. If A does not exercise the power, the nonvested property interests in G's gift-in-default clause are created when A's power terminates (at A's death). In either case, the postponement is justified because the transaction is the equivalent of G's having devised the full remainder interest (following A's income interest) to A and of A's having in turn transferred that interest in accordance with his exercise of the power or, in the event the power is not exercised, devised that interest at his death in accordance with G's gift-in-default clause. Note, however, that if G had conferred on A a nongeneral power or a general testamentary power, A's power of appointment, any nonvested property interest or power of appointment created by A's appointment, if any, and the nonvested property interests in G's gift-in-default clause would be created at G's death.

Unqualified Beneficial Owner of the Nonvested Property Interest or the Property Interest Subject to a Power of Appointment. For the date of creation to be postponed under subsection (b), the presently exercisable power must be one that entitles the donee of the power to become the unqualified beneficial owner of the nonvested property interest (or the property interest subject to a nongeneral power of appointment, a general testamentary power of appointment, or a general power of appointment not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent). This requirement was met in Example (2), above, because A could by appointing the remainder interest to himself become the unqualified beneficial owner of all the nonvested property interests in G's gift-in-default clause. In Example (2) it is not revealed whether A, if he exercised the power in his own favor, also had the right as sole beneficiary of the trust to compel the termination of the trust and possess himself as unqualified beneficial owner of the property that was the subject of the trust. Having the power to compel termination of the trust is not necessary. If, for example, the trust in Example (2) was a spendthrift trust or contained any other feature that under the relevant local law (see Claflin v. Claflin, 149 Mass. 19, 20 N.E. 454 (1889); Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 337 (1959)) would prevent A as sole beneficiary from compelling termination of the trust, A's presently exercisable general power over the remainder interest would still postpone the time of creation of the nonvested property interests in G's gift-in-default clause because the power enables A to become the unqualified beneficial owner of such interests.

Furthermore, it is not necessary that the donee of the power have the power to become the unqualified beneficial owner of all beneficial rights in the trust. In Example (2), the property interests in G's gift-in-default clause are not created for purposes of this Act until A's power expires (or on A's appointment, until the power's exercise) even if someone other than A was the income beneficiary of the trust.

Presently Exercisable Power. For the date of creation to be postponed under subsection (b), the power must be presently exercisable. A testamentary power does not qualify. A power not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent does not qualify. If the condition precedent later becomes satisfied, however, so that the power becomes presently exercisable, the interests or powers subject thereto are not created, for purposes of this Act, until the termination of the power. The common-law decision of Fitzpatrick v. Mercantile Safe Deposit Co., 220 Md. 534, 155 A.2d 702 (1959), appears to be in accord with this proposition.

Example (3) — General Power in Unborn Child Case. G devised property "to A for life, then to A's first-born child for life, then to such persons, including A's first-born child or such child's estate or creditors, as A's first-born child shall appoint." There was a further provision that in default of appointment, the trust would continue for the benefit of G's descendants. G was survived by his daughter (A), who was then childless. After G's death, A had a child, X. A then died, survived by X. As of G's death, the power of appointment in favor of A's first-born child and the property interests in G's gift-in-default clause would be regarded as having been created at G's death because the power in A's first-born child was then a general power not presently exercisable because of a condition precedent. At X's birth, X's general power became presently exercisable and excluded from the Statutory Rule. X's power also qualifies as a power exercisable by one person alone to become the unqualified beneficial owner of the property interests in G's gift-in-default clause. Consequently, the nonvested property interests in G's gift-in-default clause are not created, for purposes of this Act, until the termination of X's power. If X exercises his presently exercisable general power, before or after A's death, the appointed interests or powers are created, for purposes of this Act, as of X's exercise of the power.

Partial Powers. For the date of creation to be postponed under subsection (b), the person must have a presently exercisable power to become the unqualified beneficial owner of the full nonvested property interest or the property interest subject to a power of appointment described in Section 1(b) or 1(c). If, for example, the subject of the transfer was an undivided interest such as a one-third tenancy in common, the power qualifies even though it relates only to the undivided one-third interest in the tenancy in common; it need not relate to the whole property. A power to become the unqualified beneficial owner of only part of the nonvested property interest or the property interest subject to a power of appointment, however, does not postpone the time of creation of the interests or powers subject thereto, unless the power is actually exercised.

Example (4) — "5 and 5" Power Case. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, remainder to such persons (including A, his creditors, his estate, and the creditors of his estate) as A shall by will appoint;" in default of appointment, the governing instrument provided for the property to continue in trust. A was given a noncumulative power to withdraw the greater of $5,000 or 5% of the corpus of the trust annually. A survived G. A never exercised his noncumulative power of withdrawal.

G's death marks the time of creation of: A's testamentary power of appointment; any nonvested property interest or power of appointment created in G's gift-in-default clause; and any appointed interest or power created by a testamentary exercise of A's power of appointment over the remainder interest. A's general power of appointment over the remainder interest does not postpone the time of creation because it is not a presently exercisable power. A's noncumulative power to withdraw a portion of the trust each year does not postpone the time of creation as to all or the portion of the trust with respect to which A allowed his power to lapse each year because A's power is a power over only part of any nonvested property interest or property interest subject to a power of appointment in G's gift-in-default clause and over only part of any appointed interest or power created by a testamentary exercise of A's general power of appointment over the remainder interest. The same conclusion has been reached at common law. See Ryan v. Ward, 192 Md. 342, 64 A.2d 258 (1949).

If, however, in any year A exercised his noncumulative power of withdrawal in a way that created a nonvested property interest (or power of appointment) in the withdrawn amount (for example, if A directed the trustee to transfer the amount withdrawn directly into a trust created by A), the appointed interests (or powers) would be created when the power was exercised, not when G died.

Incapacity of the Donee of the Power. The fact that the donee of a power lacks the capacity to exercise it, by reason of minority, mental incompetency, or any other reason, does not prevent the power held by such person from postponing the time of creation under subsection (b), unless the governing instrument extinguishes the power (or prevents it from coming into existence) for that reason.

Joint Powers — Community Property; Marital Property. For the date of creation to be postponed under subsection (b), the power must be exercisable by one person alone. A joint power does not qualify, except that, if the bracketed sentence of subsection (b) is enacted, a joint power over community property or over marital property under the Uniform Marital Property Act held by individuals married to each other is, for purposes of this Act, treated as a power exercisable by one person acting alone. See Restatement (Second) of Property (Donative Transfers) § 1.2, Comment b and illustrations 5, 6, and 7 (1983), for the rationale supporting the enactment of the bracketed sentence and examples illustrating its principle.

Subsection (c): No Staggered Periods. For purposes of this Act, subsection (c) in effect treats a transfer of property to a previously funded trust or other existing property arrangement as having been made when the nonvested property interest or power of appointment in the original contribution was created. The purpose of subsection (c) is to avoid the administrative difficulties that would otherwise result where subsequent transfers are made to an existing irrevocable trust. Without subsection (c), the allowable period under the Statutory Rule would be marked off in such cases from different times with respect to different portions of the same trust.

Example (5) — Series of Transfers Case. In Year One, G created an irrevocable inter vivos trust, funding it with $20,000 cash. In Year Five, when the value of the investments in which the original $20,000 contribution was placed had risen to a value of $30,000, G added $10,000 cash to the trust. G died in Year Ten. G's will poured the residuary of his estate into the trust. G's residuary estate consisted of Blackacre (worth $20,000) and securities (worth $80,000). At G's death, the value of the investments in which the original $20,000 contribution and the subsequent $10,000 contribution were placed had risen to a value of $50,000.

Were it not for subsection (c), the permissible vesting period under the Statutory Rule would be marked off from three different times: Year One, Year Five, and Year Ten. The effect of subsection (c) is that the permissible vesting period under the Statutory Rule starts running only once — in Year One — with respect to the entire trust. This result is defensible not only to prevent the administrative difficulties inherent in recognizing staggered periods. It also is defensible because if G's inter vivos trust had contained a perpetuity saving clause, the perpetuity-period component of the clause would be geared to the time when the original contribution to the trust was made; this clause would cover the subsequent contributions as well. Since the major justification for the adoption by this Act of the wait-and-see method of perpetuity reform is that it amounts to a statutory insertion of a saving clause (see the Prefatory Note), subsection (c) is consistent with the theory of this Act.

§ 41-17. Reformation.

Upon the petition of an interested person, a court shall reform a disposition in the manner that most closely approximates the transferor's manifested plan of distribution and is within the 90 years allowed by G.S. 41-15(a)(2), 41-15(b)(2), or 41-15(c)(2) if:

(1) A nonvested property interest or a power of appointment becomes invalid under G.S. 41-15;

(2) A class gift is not invalid under G.S. 41-15, but might become invalid under G.S. 41-15, and the time has arrived when the share of any class is to take effect in possession or enjoyment; or

(3) A nonvested property interest that is not validated by G.S. 41-15(a)(1) can vest but not within 90 years after its creation. (1995, c. 190, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENT

Reformation. This section requires a court, upon the petition of an interested person, to reform a disposition whose validity is governed by the wait-and-see element of Section 1(a)(2),

1(b)(2), or 1(c)(2) so that the reformed disposition is within the limits of the 90-year period allowed by those subsections, in the manner deemed by the court most closely to approximate the transferor's manifested plan of distribution, in three circumstances: First, when (after the application of the Statutory Rule) a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment becomes invalid under the Statutory Rule; second, when a class gift has not but still might become invalid under the Statutory Rule and the time has arrived when the share of one or more class members is to take effect in possession or enjoyment; and third, when a nonvested property interest can vest, but cannot do so within the allowable 90-year period under the Statutory Rule.

It is anticipated that the circumstances requisite to reformation will seldom arise, and consequently that this section will be applied infrequently. If, however, one of the three circumstances arises, the court in reforming is authorized to alter existing interests or powers and to create new interests or powers by implication or construction based on the transferor's manifested plan of distribution as a whole. In reforming, the court is urged not to invalidate any vested interest retroactively (the doctrine of infectious invalidity having been superseded by this Act, as indicated in the Comment to Section 1). The court is also urged not to reduce an age contingency in excess of 21 unless it is absolutely necessary, and if it is deemed necessary to reduce such an age contingency, not to reduce it automatically to 21 but rather to reduce it no lower than absolutely necessary. See Example (3), below; Waggoner, Perpetuity Reform, 81 Mich.L.Rev. 1718, 1755-1759 (1983); Langbein & Waggoner, Reformation of Wills on the Ground of Mistake: Change of Direction in American Law?, 130 U.Pa.L.Rev. 521, 546-49 (1982).

Judicial Sale of Land Affected by Future Interests. Although this section — except for cases that fall under subsections (2) or (3) — defers the time when a court is directed to reform a disposition until the expiration of the 90-year permissible vesting period, this section is not to be understood as preventing an earlier application of other remedies. In particular, in the case of interests in land not in trust, the principle, codified in many states, is widely recognized that there is judicial authority, under specified circumstances, to order a sale of land in which there are future interests. See 1 American Law of Property §§ 4.98-.99 (A. Casner ed. 1952); L. Simes & A. Smith, The Law of Future Interests §§ 1941-1946 (2d ed. 1956); see also Restatement of Property § 179 at pp. 485-95 (1936); L. Simes & C. Taylor, Improvement of Conveyancing by Legislation 235-38 (1960). Nothing in Section 3 of this Act should be taken as precluding this type of remedy, if appropriate, before the expiration of the 90-year permissible vesting period.

Duration of the Indestructibility of Trusts — Termination of Trusts by Beneficiaries. As noted in Part G of the Comment to Section 1, it is generally accepted that a trust cannot remain indestructible beyond the period of the rule against perpetuities. Under this Act, the period of the rule against perpetuities applicable to a trust whose validity is governed by the wait-and-see element of Section 1(a)(2), 1(b)(2), or 1(c)(2) is 90 years. The result of any reformation under Section 3 is that all nonvested property interests in the trust will vest in interest (or terminate) no later than the 90th anniversary of their creation. In the case of trusts containing a nonvested property interest or a power of appointment whose validity is governed by Section 1(a)(2), 1(b)(2), or 1(c)(2), courts can therefore be expected to adopt the rule that no purpose of the settlor, expressed in or implied from the governing instrument, can prevent the beneficiaries of a trust other than a charitable trust from compelling its termination after 90 years after every nonvested property interest and power of appointment in the trust was created.

Subsection (1): Invalid Property Interest or Power of Appointment. Subsection (1) is illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1) — Multiple Generation Trust. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, then to A's children for the life of the survivor, then to A's grandchildren for the life of the survivor, and on the death of A's last surviving grandchild, the corpus of the trust is to be divided among A's then living descendants per stirpes; if none, to" a specified charity. G was survived by his child (A) and by A's two minor children (X and Y). After G's death, another child (Z) was born to A. Subsequently, A died, survived by his children (X, Y, and Z) and by three grandchildren (M, N, and O).

There are four interests subject to the Statutory Rule in this example: (1) the income interest in favor of A's children, (2) the income interest in favor of A's grandchildren, (3) the remainder interest in the corpus in favor of A's descendants who survive the death of A's last surviving grandchild, and (4) the alternative remainder interest in the corpus in favor of the specified charity. The first interest is initially valid under Section 1(a)(1); A is the validating life for that interest. There is no validating life for the other three interests, and so their validity is governed by Section 1(a)(2).

If, as is likely, A and A's children all die before the 90th anniversary of G's death, the income interest in favor of A's grandchildren is valid under Section 1(a)(2).

If, as is also likely, some of A's grandchildren are alive on the 90th anniversary of G's death, the alternative remainder interests in the corpus of the trust then become invalid under Section 1(a)(2), giving rise to Section 3(1)'s prerequisite to reformation. A court would be justified in reforming G's disposition by closing the class in favor of A's descendants as of the 90th anniversary of G's death (precluding new entrants thereafter), by moving back the condition of survivorship on the class so that the remainder interest is in favor of G's descendants who survive the 90th anniversary of G's death (rather than in favor of those who survive the death of A's last surviving grandchild), and by redefining the class so that its makeup is formed as if A's last surviving grandchild died on the 90th anniversary of G's death.

Example (2) — Sub-Class Case. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, then in equal shares to A's children for their respective lives; on the death of each child the proportionate share of corpus of the one so dying shall go to the descendants of such child surviving at such child's death, per stirpes." G was survived by A and by A's two children (X and Y). After G's death, another child (Z) was born to A. Subsequently, A died, survived by X, Y, and Z.

Under the sub-class doctrine, each remainder interest in favor of the descendants of a child of A is treated separately from the others. Consequently, the remainder interest in favor of X's descendants and the remainder interest in favor of Y's descendants are valid under Section 1(a)(1): X is the validating life for the one, and Y is the validating life for the other.

The remainder interest in favor of the descendants of Z is not validated by Section 1(a)(1) because Z, who was not alive when the interest was created, could have descendants more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of A, X, and Y. Instead, the validity of the remainder interest in favor of Z's descendants is governed by Section 1(a)(2), under which its validity depends on Z's dying within 90 years after G's death.

Although unlikely, suppose that Z is still living 90 years after G's death. The remainder interest in favor of Z's descendants will then become invalid under the Statutory Rule, giving rise to subsection (1)'s prerequisite to reformation. In such circumstances, a court would be justified in reforming the remainder interest in favor of Z's descendants by making it indefeasibly vested as of the 90th anniversary of G's death. To do this, the court would reform the disposition by eliminating the condition of survivorship of Z and closing the class to new entrants after the 90th anniversary of G's death.

Subsection (2): Class Gifts Not Yet Invalid. Subsection (2), which, upon the petition of an interested person, requires reformation in certain cases where a class gift has not but still might become invalid under the Statutory Rule, is illustrated by the following examples.

Example (3) — Age Contingency in Excess of 21. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, then to A's children; the corpus of the trust is to be equally divided among A's children who reach the age of 30." G was survived by A, by A's spouse (H), and by A's two children (X and Y), both of whom were under the age of 30 when G died.

Since the remainder interest in favor of A's children who reach 30 is a class gift, at common law (Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, 35 Eng. Rep. 979 (Ch. 1817)) and under this Act (see Part G of the Comment to Section 1) the interests of all potential class members must be valid or the class gift is totally invalid. Although X and Y will either reach 30 or die under 30 within their own lifetimes, there is at G's death the possibility that A will have an afterborn child (Z) who will reach 30 or die under 30 more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of A, H, X, and Y. There is no validating life, and the class gift is therefore not validated by Section 1(a)(1).

Under Section 1(a)(2), the children's remainder interest becomes invalid only if an interest of a class member neither vests nor terminates within 90 years after G's death. If in fact there is an afterborn child (Z), and if upon A's death, Z has at least reached an age such that he cannot be alive and under the age of 30 on the 90th anniversary of G's death, the class gift is valid. (Note that at Z's birth it would have been known whether or not Z could be alive and under the age of 30 on the 90th anniversary of G's death; nevertheless, even if it was then certain that Z could not be alive and under the age of 30 on the 90th anniversary of G's death, the class gift could not then have been declared valid because, A being alive, it was then possible for one or more additional children to have later been born to or adopted by A.)

Although unlikely, suppose that at A's death (prior to the expiration of the 90-year period), Z's age was such that he could be alive and under the age of 30 on the 90th anniversary of G's death. Suppose further that at A's death X and Y were over the age of 30. Z's interest and hence the class gift as a whole is not yet invalid under the Statutory Rule because Z might die under the age of 30 within the remaining part of the 90-year period following G's death; but the class gift might become invalid because Z might be alive and under the age of 30, 90 years after G's death. Consequently, the prerequisites to reformation set forth in subsection (2) are satisfied, and a court would be justified in reforming G's disposition to provide that Z's interest is contingent on reaching the age he can reach if he lives to the 90th anniversary of G's death. This would render Z's interest valid so far as the Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities is concerned, and allow the class gift as a whole to be declared valid. X and Y would thus be entitled immediately to their one-third shares each. If Z's interest later vested, Z would receive the remaining one-third share. If Z failed to reach the required age under the reformed disposition, the remaining one-third share would be divided equally between X and Y or their successors in interest.

Example (4) — Case Where Subsection (2) Applies, Not Involving an Age Contingency in Excess of 21. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to pay the income "to A for life, then to A's children; the corpus of the trust is to be equally divided among A's children who graduate from an accredited medical school or law school." G was survived by A, by A's spouse (H), and by A's two minor children (X and Y).

As in Example (3), the remainder interest in favor of A's children is a class gift, and the common-law principle is not superseded by this Act by which the interests of all potential class members must be valid or the class gift is totally invalid. Although X and Y will either graduate from an accredited medical or law school, or fail to do so, within their own lifetimes, there is at G's death the possibility that A will have an after-born child (Z), who will graduate from an accredited medical or law school (or die without having done either) more than 21 years after the death of the survivor of A, H, X, and Y. The class gift would not be valid under the Common-law Rule and is, therefore, not validated by Section 1(a)(1).

Under Section 1(a)(2), the children's remainder interest becomes invalid only if an interest of a class member neither vests nor terminates within 90 years after G's death.

Suppose in fact that there is an afterborn child (Z), and that at A's death Z was a freshman in college. Suppose further that at A's death X had graduated from an accredited law school and that Y had graduated from an accredited medical school. Z's interest and hence the class gift as a whole is not yet invalid under Section 1(a)(2) because the 90-year period following G's death has not yet expired; but the class gift might become invalid because Z might be alive but not a graduate of an accredited medical or law school 90 years after G's death. Consequently, the prerequisites to reformation set forth in Section 3(2) are satisfied, and a court would be justified in reforming G's disposition to provide that Z's interest is contingent on graduating from an accredited medical or law school within 90 years after G's death. This would render Z's interest valid so far as the Section 1(a)(2) is concerned and allow the class gift as a whole to be declared valid. X and Y would thus be entitled immediately to their one-third shares each. If Z's interest later vested, Z would receive the remaining one-third share. If Z failed to graduate from an accredited medical or law school within the allowed time under the disposition as so reformed, the remaining one-third share would be divided equally between X and Y or their successors in interest.

Subsection (3): Interests that Can Vest But Not Within the 90-Year Permissible Vesting Period. In exceedingly rare cases, an interest might be created that can vest, but not within the 90-year permissible vesting period of the Statutory Rule. This may be the situation when the interest was created (See Example (5)), or it may become the situation at some time thereafter (see Example (6)). Whenever the situation occurs, the court, upon the petition of an interested person, is required by subsection (3) to reform the disposition within the limits of the 90-year permissible vesting period.

Example (5) — Case of an Interest, as of its Creation, being Impossible to Vest Within the 90-Year Period. G devised property in trust, directing the trustee to divide the income, per stirpes, among G's descendants from time to time living, for 100 years. At the end of the 100-year period following G's death, the trustee is to distribute the corpus and accumulated income to G's then-living descendants, per stirpes; if none, to the XYZ Charity.

The nonvested property interest in favor of G's descendants who are living 100 years after G's death can vest, but not within the 90-year period of Section 1(a)(2). The interest would violate the Common-law Rule, and hence is not validated by Section 1(a)(1), because there is no validating life. In these circumstances, a court is required by Section 3(3) to reform G's disposition within the limits of the 90-year period. An appropriate result would be for the court to lower the period following G's death from a 100-year period to a 90-year period.

Note that the circumstance that triggers the direction to reform the disposition under this subsection is that the nonvested property interest still can vest, but cannot vest within the 90-year period of Section 1(a)(2). It is not necessary that the interest be certain to become invalid under that subsection. For the interest to be certain to become invalid under Section 1(a)(2), it would have to be certain that it can neither vest nor terminate within the 90-year period. In this example, the interest of G's descendants might terminate within the period (by all of G's descendants dying within 90 years of G's death). If this were to happen, the interest of XYZ Charity would be valid because it would have vested within the allowable period. However, it was thought desirable to require reformation without waiting to see if this would happen: The only way that G's descendants, who are G's primary set of beneficiaries, would have a chance to take the property is to reform the disposition within the limits of the 90-year period on the ground that their interest cannot vest within the allowable period and subsection (3) so provides.

Example (6) — Case of an Interest after its Creation Becoming Impossible to Vest Within the 90-Year Period. G devised property in trust, with the income to be paid to A. The corpus of the trust was to be divided among A's children who reach 30, each child's share to be paid on the child's 30th birthday; if none reaches 30, to the XYZ Charity. G was survived by A and by A's two children (X and Y). Neither X nor Y had reached 30 at G's death. The class gift in favor of A's children who reach 30 would violate the Common-law Rule Against Perpetuities and, thus, is not validated by Section 1(a)(1). Its validity is therefore governed by Section 1(a)(2).

Suppose that after G's death, and during A's lifetime, X and Y die and a third child (Z) is born to or adopted by A. At A's death, Z is living but her age is such that she cannot reach 30 within the remaining part of the 90-year period following G's death. As of A's death, it has become the situation that Z's interest cannot vest within the allowable period. The circumstances requisite to reformation under subsection (3) have arisen. An appropriate result would be for the court to lower the age contingency to the age Z can reach 90 years after G's death.
